Consumer prices hold during June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices remained frozen in June for the second straight month, the best showing on inflation in 13 years, as energy costs and airline fares dropped sharply while food prices held steady.

The Labor Department said today that its Consumer Price Index was flat in June, as it was in May.

The last time prices showed no increase for two straight months was in 1986, when for three consecutive months the CPI actually fell.

June's performance was even better than economists had been expecting. They had been forecasting a slight rise of 0.1 percent.

The good news on consumer prices, which followed Wednesday's report that prices at the wholesale level actually fell 0.1 percent, was certain to calm fears about inflation that had been generated when prices at the retail and wholesale level spiked in April. The rise was caused by a sharp runup in prices for gasoline and other energy products.

The big jump in prices in April put the Federal Reserve on alert that inflationary pressures could be building and prompted the Fed on June 30 to nudge up interest rates for the first time in two years.

With inflation pressures now moderating, some economists believe Fed policy-makers will not increase rates when they meet again next month.

Homes to become businesses

On Saturday, ordinary households and businesses across Hereford will transform into a thrifty shopper's paradise in preparation for the city-wide garage sale.

Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce executive vice president Sid Shaw expects 100 to 150 participants on the selling end of the deal.

Shaw said earlier this week the garage sale participants did about $40,000 in business last year.

"That's phenomenal, isn't it?"

Shaw said. He expects a similar financial turnout for this year's sale, and likely an even-larger profit.

In an attempt to draw more business at the garage sale, bargain-hunters can register at the chamber to win $250 Hereford Bucks.

"Our purpose is to have everyone in Hereford participate in a one-day event that will bring people from out of town to spend their money," said Shaw.

To publicize Saturday's event, representatives have traveled to Nazareth, Bovinia, Canyon, Amarillo, Dimmit and many other towns to place ads in the local newspapers and to tack up poster.

"We've also used The Brand and service spots on the radio," said Shaw.

In another development, the chamber announced that residents who have items left over from their sales may give them to local charities.

Accepting donations will be:

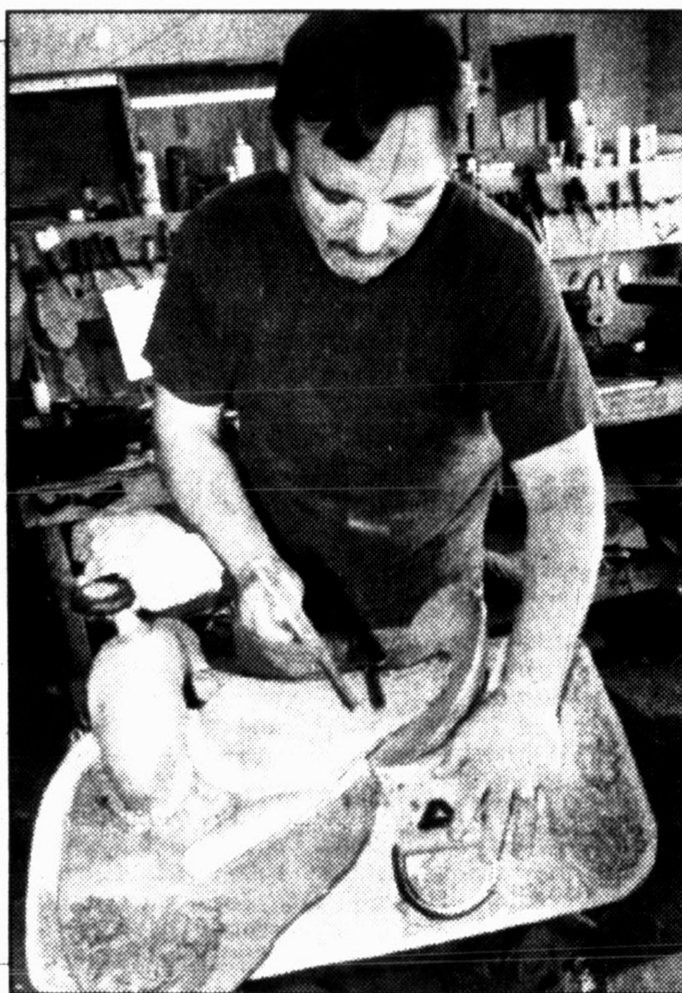

- Senior Citizens Center will accept donations between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Wednesday-Friday at the thrift center on East Park Avenue. For other arrangements, call Connie at 364-5681;
- Domestic Violence Center will pick up small items, but larger items need to be delivered. Donors are asked to call Linda Coronado at 363-6727;

- Red Cross needs only school clothes this year. Donations will be accepted between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday-Friday at 224 S. Main. For more information, call Deanna at 364-3761; and

- Good Shepherd is accepting only household items. Donations may be delivered 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 1:30-3 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday at 625 U.S. Hwy. 60 East. For more information, call Eloise McDouglas at 364-2208.

SADDLIN' UP

Dallas Tiekling still makes saddles the old-fashioned way -- by hand -- at his shop on East Park Avenue

Tieking keeps old craft alive

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

For centuries, skilled craftsmen have made their living by cutting, shaping and working leather into functional items needed in everyday life.

One of the products of these craftsmen is the saddle.

But like almost everything else used in work and play, the industrial age has taken over this once-personalized craft and only a handful of skilled craftsmen pursue the trade.

One of these craftsmen, Dallas Tiekling, builds his saddles in a shop at the corner of Park and Avenue E.

Tiekling started working on saddles in the early 1980s when he married his wife, Ellen Lewis, a fourth-generation saddle maker.

The Tiekings work together to fashion custom leather goods, specializing in saddles and custom tack.

"My wife does purses and tooling on the saddles," Tiekling said. "I'd rather make a better saddle than to learn how to do all the fancy tool

Congress moves toward raising own pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers are moving toward granting themselves a cost-of-living pay raise exceeding $4,600 at a time when the economy, budget surpluses and congressional popularity are all surging.

To avoid accusations of being sneaky, leaders of both parties planned a House debate and vote on the issue today as the chamber considers a bill financing the Treasury Department for the coming fiscal year. By law, legislators get automatic annual cost-of-living increases unless Congress votes against it, and the Treasury measure is the traditional vehicle for doing so.

"Everybody's agreed it's not right to keep asking members to fall behind the cost of living," said Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., a senior Democrat and supporter of the increase.

Most representatives and senators have earned $136,700 annually since January 1998. Leaders get more, with House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., earning $175,400, the same as Vice President Al Gore.

The 3.4 percent increase would take effect in January.

The Senate approved its version of the Treasury bill on July 1 without language preventing the increase or any debate on the subject.

Supporters and opponents of the raise predicted the House would approve it. Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., chief author of the House's Treasury measure, agreed and said if that occurred, it would be "an extraordinary event" for the increase to be blocked when House-Senate bargain-ers craft a compromise Treasury bill.

For much of the 1990s, with huge federal deficits and an unpopular Congress, proposed pay raises often generated intense public opposition and became fodder for radio talk shows. Before last year, Congress had voted to block itself from getting a raise every year since 1993.

But this year's consideration comes as the country's economy is prospering, a three-decade string of budget deficits has melted into surpluses, and Congress' approval rating is at a healthy 56 percent, according to a poll by the Pew Research Center.

The federal surplus "takes away the argument some of us used in the past saying we shouldn't have any adjustment to our salaries until we take care of the deficit," said Kolbe.

Even so, Rep. Bob Franks, R-N.J., said he would oppose the increase, citing the uncertainty of long-term surplus projections.

"Until we have more accurate evidence of the long-term nature of this surplus, I think it's important for Congress to say we can live with a $136,700 income," he said.

Another critic is Pete Sepp, spokesman for the conservative National Taxpayers' Union.

"This is the last thing Congress should be considering right now, especially since taxpayers haven't yet received a single penny of tax reduction this year, nor any assurances spending will be held in check," Sepp said.

"This whole thing is a house of cards. At some point, you're going to have to sit down and talk reality, instead of farce and politics."

Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich.

Tax cut bill hits the floor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats couldn't stop Republicans from sending an $864 billion tax bill to the House floor, but they did take every opportunity to press their claims that the tax cut threatens Social Security and Medicare.

Through 11 hours of House Ways and Means Committee debate Wednesday, Democrats repeatedly forced votes on amendments intended to divert some of the money for tax cuts into the two huge retirement programs or into paying down public debt.

And the Democrats also accused the GOP of drafting a huge tax cut designed to appeal to their political base, contending it has no chance of becoming law because President Clinton is promising a veto.

"This whole thing is a house of cards," said Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich. "At some point, you're going to have to sit down and talk reality, instead of farce and politics."

But after fighting off the Democratic amendments, the GOP majority on the Ways and Means Committee cleared the bill on a 23-13 vote. It moves next to the full House, possibly as early as next week, and a competing $792 billion Senate version is also in the works.

The House bill would cut income taxes by 10 percent across the board, reduce capital gains taxes, eventually abolish estate and alternative minimum taxes and give people new breaks for education and long-term health care.

Republicans insisted that the $2.9 trillion in projected budget surpluses over 10 years would easily provide enough money for the tax cuts and to ensure Medicare and Social Security are ready for the baby boom generation.

"We have plenty of money to do everything we want to do if we do it smart," said Rep. Jim McCrery,

News in brief

LULAC celebrates 70 years

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A former president of the League of United Latin American Citizens says the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic civil rights group is losing its edge.

Ruben Bonilla, a Corpus Christi attorney, noted Wednesday that the last time LULAC had a convention in Corpus Christi, in 1987, all seven of the announced Democratic presidential hopefuls came calling, as did Republican Jack Kemp.

Wednesday, there were none.

Bonilla criticized Gov. George W. Bush, the frontrunner for the Republican presidential nomination, for missing the convention. Bush was campaigning Wednesday in Maryland and Virginia and the nation's capital.

"George W. Bush, as far as I'm concerned, snubbed the convention," Bonilla said. "It would have taken three hours of his time to fly in and appear at this convention and fly out. Instead, he's making sandwiches with a New York deli owner and flying into the Denver airport and speaking a few words of Spanish, which is a gratuitous insult."

Texan faces murder charges

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Prosecutors who waited more than 11/2 years for a Texan to be extradited from Mexico on a first-degree murder charge likely will wait several more months for his trial to start.

Jose Luis Del Toro, who is accused of shooting Sheila Bellush and slitting her throat while she was home with her 2-year-old quadruplets, likely will not stand trial until 2000, a defense attorney said.

"My guess is it will not be tried this year," said Elliott Metcalfe, head public defender for the 12th Judicial Circuit. His office was appointed to handle Del Toro's case.

Del Toro, a U.S. citizen who lived in Texas before he became a fugitive, waived his initial court appearance on Wednesday, submitted a written plea and was ordered held without bond.

"The bond will remain at zero. The public defender will be appointed. Nothing further," Sarasota County Judge Judy Goldman said in the brief hearing.

Assistant State Attorney Charlie Roberts declined to say whether he would seek a plea agreement with Del Toro or ask for his assistance in implicating Mrs. Bellush's ex-husband, saying, "Our goal right now is to prosecute him for first-degree murder."

Daniel Rocha, already convicted of first-degree murder in the case, has said the ex-husband, San Antonio businessman Allen Blackthorne, arranged the crime. Blackthorne has denied any involvement.

Residents put murders behind them

WEIMAR, Texas (AP) — Police Chief Bill Livingston told several hundred people at a special service on the high school football field that it was a difficult day for him.

Wednesday was the first full day since the capture of Angel Maturino Resendez, also known as Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, who turned himself in Tuesday morning at an El Paso border crossing after a six-week manhunt.

Three Weimar residents, including a minister and his wife, are among the nine people the 39-year-old rail-hopping drifter is accused of killing. All the murders, six of them in Texas, occurred near railroad tracks.

"For the past month I've been focused on trying to find this individual," said the police chief of this town 85 miles west of Houston. "Today a lot of feelings came to the surface that I had been suppressing or subduing for a long time, and as many of you know, it's tough."

Several hundred people gathered at the school stadium Wednesday night to pray for the strength to carry on and to give thanks for the healing they say has already begun.

Show and tell road trip

Heading for Lufkin — The Bootleg Volunteer Fire Department was honored this week when the Texas Forestry Service decided to use Bootleg's fire engine to depict the best of the best equipment provided by the service for various volunteer fire departments in Texas. The truck known as "Bodacious" will be taken to Lufkin to the Fire Control Headquarters, so the new A&M chancellor can review the work being done by the Forestry Service on behalf of rural residents. Les Rogers, a driver for Texas Forestry Service, said Bodacious is one of the best examples of equipment coming from the Federal Excess Property program. He also wanted to recognize the outstanding work done by the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department, which also uses some of the Forestry Service programs to acquire equipment.

Hormone research provides answers

Chemical brain research could prevent obesity, eating disorders

Scientists have moved closer to discovering how an appetite-stimulating hormone works in the brain, which may help them develop drugs to fight obesity and eating disorders.

Researchers knew the melanin-concentrating hormone is one of many compounds that control how much someone eats. They also knew MCH needs a place to attach itself in the brain, called a receptor.

Until now, they had not located it. But according to a report in today's issue of the journal Nature, two groups working separately have identified the receptor.

"I would call it an exciting discovery because it opens a new hope for the treatment of food-consumption disorders," said Olivier Civelli, head of one of the groups, at the University of California at Irvine.

The other group is at SmithKline Beecham Pharmaceuticals in England. It has already started the search for compounds to block MCH from binding to the receptor. Scientists hope that would curb a person's appetite.

Even if a drug is found, it will be at least a decade before it reaches the market.

The body produces several compounds in the brain that control appetite, and scientists don't know how big a role MCH plays.

"I don't think we would argue that it's more important than the others," said Shelagh Wilson, SmithKline's associate director of vascular biology. "Yes, it may be one small part, but it may be the one small part that actually tips the balance and works for an obese patient."

The connection was identified by trial-and-error: matching all of the compounds produced by the brain to a previously identified receptor whose purpose was unclear.

The study also suggests that MCH may play a role in other forms of behavior, said Gary Schwartz, a Johns Hopkins University professor who was not involved in the research.

The receptor to which MCH hitches appears in many regions of the brain, not just those controlling appetite. So MCH could also affect movement, grooming and other activities, he said.

Federal judge chastizes prison bureau director

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has chastized the director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons for transferring a Houston drug dealer to a minimum-security prison camp, from which he escaped last month.

In an angry letter to Kathleen Hawk Sawyer, U.S. District Judge David Hittner wrote it was "highly inappropriate" to place Miguel Rocha in a minimum-security facility.

Rocha, 50, was sentenced by Hittner in 1990 to 21 years, 11 months for importing cocaine and for conspiracy to distribute it.

Rocha walked away from the camp in Oakdale, La., on June 8, and remains a fugitive.

"I think this should be of significant concern to the public that a person is sentenced to in excess of 20 years in a federal penitentiary for major drug crimes and he is permitted to just walk away," Hittner said Wednesday.

"It's also a concern for judges who sentence these individuals, and it should be of some concern to Congress, as federal prison sentences are to be without parole.

"For a major drug offender to be assigned to a facility reserved for individuals convicted on business-oriented, non-drug-related crimes is quite disturbing."

Sawyer responded Wednesday that Roche's transfer from a regular prison was appropriate because he had no history of escape or violence and was nearing the end of his sentence.

Prison policy permits inmates within 10 years of their release date to be placed in minimum-security facilities.

Rocha was incarcerated in October 1990 and, with time off for good behavior, was to be released July 25, 2008.

He initially was assigned to a "more secure" facility, but was transferred to the camp in February. The camp has no fences, a Bureau of Prisons spokeswoman said.

Flea powder differs for cats and dogs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cats can become extremely sick and even die if their owners treat them with flea products intended for dogs only, said veterinarian E. Kathryn Meyer.

"It is critical for owners to be aware of the severe consequences of using flea products incorrectly — particularly when cats are involved — because cats can be very sensitive to certain chemicals," said Meyer, who coordinates the U.S. Pharmacopeia Veterinary Practitioners' Reporting Program.

While flea products often are packaged similarly, the active ingredients can vary greatly, especially among popular "spot-on" products in which a small amount of liquid is applied directly to the animal's skin.

A common chemical in such products is permethrin, which can be toxic to cats. In products made for dogs, permethrin is usually concentrated at levels of 45 percent to 65 percent. Flea sprays intended for cats contain much lower — and safer — concentrations, often about 2 percent.

Cadettes take part in workshop

Girl Scout Cadette Troop 283 recently participated in a workshop to earn part of the requirements for the Girl Scout Challenge Pin. This pin is one of the steps required to earn the Cadette Silver Award.

The girls received a facial and participated in a makeup session with Deann Harris, a Mary Kay consultant. They learned the importance and essential steps of a regular cleansing routine, the use of sunscreen, and how to create a natural, healthy look using makeup. They also experimented with hair and nail fashions.

Following this session, the scouts had a pizza lunch during which they completed worksheets about their values, goals, relationships and career choices. Then they visited the Deaf Smith County Library to research specific information about a variety of careers.

Finally, the girls created two games about Girl Scouting which they will teach to younger Girl Scouts in a workshop this fall.

Participating were Cassie Daniel, Danelle Haws, Stephanie Henson, Heather Lee, Jennifer Lee, Jami Lyons and Clarissa Zamora.

Any girl, age 5 to 17 years old, is encouraged to join the Hereford Girl Scout program during the fall registration on August 28 in Dameron Park located at Main Street and Park Avenue, or contact Marie Carra at 364-2248.

Basic workforce skills that can help land a job and carve out a career will be the thrust of South Plains College's third annual Camp for Young Entrepreneurs, scheduled July 20-21 at the college.

The camp is open to high school sophomores, juniors, seniors and students who have just graduated from high school. A grant from the Texas Rural Communities will cover all costs, fees, room and board for the camper, who will stay in college dorms.

Completing a job application and resume, interviewing skills, dressing for success, teamwork, communication skills, a personality assessment and pointers on common and social business etiquette will be emphasized.

The camp is being presented by SPC, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Wes-Tex Resource Conservation and Development Area, Northwest Texas Small Business Development Center, South Plains Tech Prep, Texas Rural Communities and Small Business Administration.

For more information, contact the SPC Continuing and Distance Education Office at 806-894-9611, ext. 2341.

Nearly 100 bluegrass music enthusiasts from 15 different states and one foreign country will learn more about the uniquely American musical genre July 18-23 at Camp Bluegrass 99, a week-long bluegrass workshop at South Plains College in Levelland.

Registration will remain open through the first day of camp.

Campers range in age from 10 to their 70s.

Beginning, intermediate and advanced classes are scheduled on banjo, mandolin, bass, fiddle, guitar and vocals, along with jam sessions, instrumental, vocal and band workshops, special classes on the history of bluegrass music, music theory for pickers, styles of solo and ensemble singing, and a student showcase concert.

Check-in is scheduled for 3 p.m. and orientation at 7 p.m. July 18 in the lobby of the Marvin Baker Center.

Deaf Smith County trap shooters earn firsts in Lubbock competition

Drew Denison and Harrison Hoffman each shot perfect scores to help them earn the first place two-man senior trap team during the District II Trap and Skeet Shoot in Lubbock on July 9.

Denison shot 94 out of a possible 100 to finish as the first place senior individual. Hoffman scored 89 to take a third place senior finish which he won in a shoot-off.

Deaf Smith County shooters also took the first place two-man junior team award with performances by Steven Reinart and Brian Turpen. Turpen scored 60 of a possible 75 while Reinart scored 59.

The sub-junior team of Cody Matsler and Randall Berryman took second place two-man team. Berryman scored 37 out of a possible 50 and Matsler hit 23. In a shoot-off, Berryman finished as third place sub-junior.

Other Deaf Smith County 4-H youth who competed as two-man senior teams and their scores were Daniel Carnahan-78 and Andrew Carnahan-49; Mark Harrell-71 and Tyler Martin-80; and Josh Stubbs-55 and Stephanie Reinart-73.

Registration and round fees for each shooter in the two-day Lubbock event were paid by K.O. "Pete" Peterson of Lubbock.

The District I Trap Shoot will be hosted by the Deaf Smith County 4-H Shooting Sports Team at Hereford Gun Club beginning at 8 a.m. Saturday.

The public is welcome to come out and observe the shooters any time during the day. A concession operated by parents of the shooters will feature homemade hamburgers and ice cream.

Avoid 'crowd'; visit Bahamas

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My 50-year-old sweetie and I are at last going on a long-awaited trip to Hawaii. The problem? He has invited his ex-wife, his grown son, his brother and a friend to join us. My sweetie wants me to bunk with his ex-wife to save money. This is hardly the romantic vacation I had envisioned.

Tell me, Ann, am I nuts, or is he? The plane leaves in two months. Please tell me what to do. I am — Aghast in New York

Dear Aghast: If you agree to this, YOU are nuts. Tell him "no deal," and stick to it. P.S. I suggest you let them have their trip to Hawaii and go to the Bahamas instead. It's closer and less "crowded."

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the woman who wondered if her 4-year-old grandson would be harmed if he visited his father in prison.

I am currently incarcerated in Massachusetts. I've been here for five months. My son's mother, "Clarisse," refuses to bring him to see me. I understand that a 4-year-old child is very impressionable, but that boy means the world to me. He is being lied to about my whereabouts and deprived of a father's love. Clarisse is not being spiteful. She is just concerned about the boy's well-being.

She is a wonderful parent, as I was before I was sent to prison.

Ann, I am angry about Clarisse's refusal to bring my son to see me and would appreciate your opinion. — Locked Down in Massachusetts

Dear Mass.: It depends on the setting. Would your son be visiting you in a family-type room, or would you be separated by a metal mesh screen? The screen can be frustrating and even frightening. Also, frequent visits can give the impression that jail is a normal place to be, and this could be harmful.

I do not approve of lying to the boy about your whereabouts. He should be told that Daddy did something that was against the law, and he was sent away for it. The ugly truth is always better than the best-dressed lie. I hope you can convince Clarisse of this.

Dear Ann Landers: This is in response to "Second Banana in Oklahoma," who was dating a man who took care of his sick, elderly mother. Although he treated "Second Banana" very well, he seemed to put his mother's welfare first.

When I married my husband, he told me up front that his parents came first. They both had cancer and wanted to die at home. "Paul" moved out of our home and into his parents' place, worked full time and took care of them. He would come to our home and spend the weekends with me. For three years, he did their daily cleaning, shopping and laundry, dispensed their medications, bathed them, dressed them and took them to their doctor appointments. I helped him as much as I could.

Paul always told me that I would be first in his life after his commitment to his parents was finished. I am happy to say he has kept his word. We have been together for 21 years, and I would not change a thing. Men who make this kind of commitment to their parents are very special people. We should all be so lucky to have a child who will see to it that we die with dignity in our own home.

Please tell "Second Banana" to hang in there if she really loves this man. There IS light at the end of the tunnel. — Grateful in Raleigh, N.C.

Dear Raleigh: Paul does indeed sound like a wonderful man, but please don't pin all the medals on him — save one for yourself. You were pretty special to agree to let Paul move into his parents' home and settle for the weekends. I hope you two will make up for the time lost and have many healthy, happy years together. You both deserve it.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. Looking Back

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, July 15, the 196th day of 1999. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 15, 1971, President Nixon announced he would visit the People's Republic of China to seek a normalization of relations.

On this date:

In 1606, the Dutch painter Rembrandt was born in Leiden, Netherlands.

In 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

In 1916, the Boeing Co., originally known as Pacific Aero Products, was founded in Seattle.

In 1918, the Second Battle of the Marne began during World War I.

In 1948, President Truman was nominated for another term of office at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

In 1964, Senator Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona was nominated for president at the Republican National Convention in San Francisco.

In 1979, President Carter delivered his "malaise" speech in which he lamented what he called a "crisis of confidence" in America.

In 1985, a gaunt-looking Rock Hudson appeared at a news conference with actress Doris Day to promote her cable television program. It was later revealed Hudson was suffering from AIDS.

In 1992, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton claimed the Democratic presidential nomination at the party's convention in New York.

In 1997, fashion designer Gianni Versace was shot dead outside his Miami home; the suspected gunman, alleged serial killer Andrew Phillip Cunanan was found dead eight days later.

Ten years ago: Leaders of the seven major industrial democracies, meeting in Paris, voiced support for democracy behind the Iron Curtain and condemned repression in China.

Five years ago: Microsoft Corp. reached a settlement with the Justice Department, promising to end practices it used to corner the market for personal computer software programs.

One year ago: Three days of ceremonies to bury Russia's last czar and his family, who were killed by the Bolsheviks, began in the city of Yekaterinburg. The Congress-sional Budget Office estimated federal surpluses of $1.55 trillion over the next decade.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Philip Carey is 74. Actor Alex Karras is 64. Actor Ken Kercheval is 64. Sen. George V. Voinovich (R-Ohio) is 63. Actor Patrick Wayne is 60. Actor Jan-Michael Vincent is 55. Rhythm-and-blues singer Millie Jackson is 55. Rock singer-musician Peter Lewis (Moby Grape) is 54. Singer Linda Ronstadt is 53. Actor Terry O'Quinn is 47. Rock musician Joe Satriani is 43. Model Kim Alexis is 39. Actor Willie Aames is 39. Actor-director Forest Whitaker is 38. Actress Lolita Davidovich is 38. Actress Brigitte Nielsen is 36. Rock musician Phillip Fisher (Fishbone) is 32. Actor-comedian Eddie Griffin is 31. Actor Stan Kirsch ("Highlander") is 31. Actor Scott Foley ("Felicity") is 27. Actor Brian Austin Green is 26. Rhythm-and-blues singer Kia Thornton (Divine) is 18.

Thought for Today: "Love is not enough. It must be the foundation, the cornerstone — but not the complete structure. It is much too pliable, too yielding." — Bette Davis, American actress (1908-1989).

Dierker returns to manage Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Dierker's goals will be simple at first.

On the day he returns as manager of the Houston Astros, all he wants is to drive himself to the Astrodome and to be on time.

Dierker will return as manager of the Astros tonight for the first time since June 13, when he suffered a grand mal seizure that required brain surgery to remove a cluster of blood vessels.

The Astros play host to Detroit tonight through Saturday. Looking fit and relaxed, Dierker showed up at the Astrodome on Wednesday for an optional team workout. His hair is beginning to grow back, and he feels normal except for occasional forgetfulness about time.

"The strangest thing is that time seems to have no meaning. I find myself out of touch with time," Dierker said. "It's been a month since this happened and it seems like two weeks."

Bothering Dierker more is the fact that he's prohibited from driving for another five months.

"Not being able to drive is driving me up the wall," Dierker said. "Every day I have the urge to get in the truck and drive somewhere. My wife has a busy life and she's going to get tired having to drive me everywhere."

Fans have been asked to wear brightly colored Hawaiian shirts — Dierker's favorite attire — to welcome him back. Dierker met the media Wednesday wearing a lei.

"I'll be delighted tomorrow, but I haven't been antsy to get back," Dierker said. "I don't feel anything but normal. I'd say at no point did I worry about my recovery. I had confidence that I would recover."

The Astros begin the second half of the season with a long injury list that includes two stars, third baseman Ken Caminiti and left fielder Moises Alou.

"I'd rather have Alou back than myself and I'd rather have Camy back than myself," Dierker said. "But what we've gotten from the outfielders and third basemen we have wasn't so bad."

Dierker's No. 49 jersey came down from the dugout, where it has hung in his honor since his collapse in the eighth inning of a game against the San Diego on June 13.

He plans no changes in his managing style. "Nothing has affected my intellect," Dierker said. "I feel the same and my philosophy is the same. I know what I want to do."

Dierker checked out of Methodist Hospital on June 23 and has been recuperating at home. He has managed a few visits to the Astrodome and a few rounds of golf while convalescing.

"I don't have the energy for a stressful workout and I don't have permission to do it, so that doesn't matter," Dierker said. "I was able to play golf a few times and I was able to do that in the heat of the day so I feel pretty good about my condition."

The Astros went 13-14 under interim manager Matt Galante.

Dierker's collapse visibly shook his players and hushed the home crowd, which was never officially told what happened. He was treated on the field and ushered out of the stadium in an ambulance.

The Astros, behind starting pitcher Shane Reynolds, were leading 4-1 in the game, which was suspended and will resume when the Padres return to Houston on July 23.

Dierker's condition was diagnosed as arteriovenous malformation. Dr. Rob Parrish, who performed the surgery, said the mass was about the size of a "really big jalapeno." Parrish forecast a full recovery.

In addition to Dierker, first base coach Jose Cruz left the team May 10 with an irregular heart beat and hitting coach Tom McCraw left May 16 to begin treatment for prostate cancer. Cruz has rejoined the team. McCraw is still undergoing treatment in California.

Nguyen, McGarity impressing 'Boys

IRVING (AP) — When he awakes each morning, Dat Nguyen takes a moment to make sure he's still not dreaming. Wanye McGarity says he gets chills every time he sees a Dallas Cowboys segment on the evening news.

After spending their lives trying to convince people they belonged on football fields, the pair of Cowboys draft picks are now doing all they can to convince themselves that they really have made it this far.

"I look at the TV sometimes and say, 'Dang, I'm on that team!'" McGarity said. "All of a sudden, I'm in the same huddle as the guys I watched as a kid. It's kind of shocking."

McGarity, a 5-foot-8, 190-pound receiver from Texas, certainly isn't the only one shocked that he and Nguyen, a 5-foot-11, 231-pound linebacker from Texas A&M, have made it to the NFL's doorstep.

Virtually no one expected professional careers from the undersized duo, who have overcome everything from rebuilt knees (McGarity) to refugee camps (Nguyen).

"They weren't the prototypes of what everybody wants a player to look like," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "But there's no substitute for a guy who knows how to make plays, and both Dat and Wayne have proven that they can do that."

McGarity led the Big 12 in receiving last year, setting Loughorn single-season records for receptions (58) and receiving yards (1,087).

But McGarity almost didn't make it to his senior year. He considered giving up football after his third reconstructive knee operation, each of which were season-ending.

McGarity first hurt his knee as a junior running back at a San Antonio high school. He went down again in his first full-squad practice as a college freshman. Then it happened in the fourth game of

"Wayne McGarity's story is one of the most meaningful things that ever happened to me as a college coach," said Texas coach Mack Brown, whose own knee problems as a player helped him persuade McGarity to undergo one more round of pain and rehabilitation.

Nguyen's journey began in a refugee camp in Arkansas. The son of Vietnamese immigrants, Nguyen's first love was soccer. But he gave that sport up to play football in the Gulf Coast town of Rockport, Texas.

COWBOYS

Although he was a dominant high school player, he faced many critics who didn't think he could keep it up at the college level.

Nguyen proved early on that he could, and by the end of his career had made a school-record 517 tackles and won the Lombardi Award as the nation's top college line-man.

What truly made Nguyen stand out was his knack for making the biggest plays in the biggest games. In arguably the most important game of his career, Nguyen made 17 tackles in A&M's upset victory over Kansas State in the 1998 Big 12 championship game.

Similarly, McGarity's breakout game came when he caught a late touchdown pass to help Texas shock Nebraska for the 1996 Big 12 title.

Neither performance made NFL scouts come knocking down their doors, but Nguyen and McGarity didn't mind the lack of attention.

"I can't help it if I'm not a big, prototype linebacker, and Wane can't help it if he's a small receiver," Nguyen said.

"We just go out there and do our best, and if it's not good enough, then it's not good enough."

The Cowboys thought their efforts were more than enough. They took Nguyen in the third round and McGarity in the fourth.

"Both Dat and Wanye are small by physical standards, but they have big hearts," Dallas coach Chan Gailey said. "We don't see it as a negative. They've proven they can produce in games, and we expect that to continue."

Although McGarity and Nguyen play on different sides of the ball and attended archival colleges, they've been friends since making a recruiting visit to A&M the same weekend in 1994.

The pair, who stand shoulder-high to most of their teammates, have been almost inseparable in the Cowboys locker room. Veterans often have tried to split them up by bringing up their college rivalry.

"A lot of the guys always have to turn everything into a Texas-Texas A&M thing," McGarity said. "But Dat and I never mention it to each other, because we've got too many other things to talk about."

Some of their discussions deal with having to prove themselves — again.

Both will go into training camp in a few weeks needing to perform well to make the team.

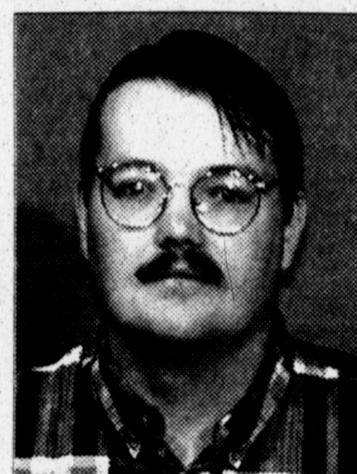

McGarity is among a group of players fighting to make the team as a backup behind Michael Irvin and Raghieb Ismail. Gailey likes to use as many as five receivers at a time, so he should get plenty of chances.

Nguyen is on the lower end of the depth chart at linebacker, but he's almost a lock to make the roster. His best chance for playing time this fall will likely be on special teams.

But considering both players' history, it will probably take a lot more adversity to dilute their enthusiasm.

"I still can't believe I'm here," Nguyen said. "Every time I wake up it's like a dream. It's just a matter of making it last."

We are pleased to welcome to our sales staff ...

CNN's Moos reports what will never be news

Frazier Moore
The Associated Press

Where are the comedienne on TV today? What women make you laugh with their go-for-broke commitment, as Lucille Ball or Carol Burnett once did? For nearly 20 years, CNN, of all places, has been the home of one of television's funniest females. On this almost-all-news channel, she's the journalist dispensing comic relief.

"I think I'm the humorist of the network," says Jeanne Moos, "but that's certainly not an official title." No, her official title is national news correspondent. Life's tiny, indomitable details are her beat.

Only Jeanne Moos (sounds like genie, rhymes with close) could have done justice to the three-legged pantyhose called Apair-N-Aspare, in a piece that included boisterous public feedback and her own unabashed product test.

A 1,750-pound walrus blubbering about muscle spasms? Moos reported on walrus massage therapy.

Catching hot dogs fired from a shoulder-mounted wiener launcher? There was Moos with glove raised at the Phillies' Veterans Stadium. It was, she said, "a moment to relish."

She gave viewers an Easter-time tour of the plant that makes Marshmallow Peeps, where the wax eyes for this baby-chick-shaped confection were applied "under the ever-watchful eye of — we kid you not — Candy."

And after posing a question no one had ever asked before — how is every timepiece advertisement the same? — Moos enlightened her flock: Every clock and watch is set at 10 minutes after 10, so that the hands, with their V-shape, describe a smile.

Refreshingly goofy yet shrewdly observed, a Moos essay wrings every bit of humor and existential truth from its topic, and at a breakneck pace. The visuals are densely packed, while Moos' stream-of-consciousness narrative (a piece on traffic cones invokes the Coneheads and even Yankee pitcher David Cone) is delivered in a voice not unlike a brass band warming up.

Moos never mocks her subject or glazes it with irony. Instead, she is in it up to her ankles — sometimes literally, as when she reported on the high-pressure career of racehorses.

"I wonder if you've considered meditation," Moos asked a steed with stomach ulcers when she stopped by its stall. "St. John's Wort? Aromatherapy?" Then she took a whiff and quipped, "This one NEEDS aromatherapy!"

Her thrice-weekly reports, each of which gets multiple airings in between the timely, serious stuff, are designed to inform and, no matter how familiar you might be with the Moos oeuvre, to catch you off-guard.

Off-guard, even for the CNN anchors: Back on camera after a Moos feature, what can they say?

"I find it funny to watch the anchors coming out of one of my pieces," Moos confides.

"This morning we did one on ear-waxing for men. You know, guys with hairy ears — a cosmetic thing. It's fun to watch the anchors and how they handle it."

She has offered a visitor one of the bright orange chairs in her blue-walled office at CNN's New York bureau. The color scheme brings to mind a 1950s Howard Johnson's restaurant. Or could this be an office at Comedy Central?

All in all, it's a bit hard to imagine Moos reporting on the Beijing student uprising or interviewing former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev — especially after seeing her destroy a Furby doll. But she did.

After graduation from Syracuse University and a brief stint as correspondent for an upstate New York station, Moos joined CNN in its infancy. Then she spent a dozen years juggling regular reporting chores and what she calls "sort of weird stuff."

"It was dicey," she admits. "I would do really serious stories one day, and the next day do a screwball thing. Some of the people at the network had a problem with it. But I always argued, 'Life is tragic one minute and funny the next!'"

Then covering the United Nations during the Gulf War "put me over the edge," she says. "I really don't like hard news. I love to watch it, but I can't kind of stand to do it."

Better she should contemplate the little things the news upstages, things like hard-to-open milk cartons or those network-identification "bugs" infesting your TV screen. (For that story, Moos deployed a fly swatter.)

Then, sometimes, the subject gets a little racier. "I got in a cage with a naked man in a SoHo gallery who was acting like a dog," she notes.

"Dog Man was famous in Russia as a performance artist, and anyone could get in the cage and he would sort of attack you. I think the producers felt I shouldn't have gotten in a cage with a naked dog man. But I like to be a little subversive."

It was a funny report and Moos emerged unmailed. So what's the big woof?

"Not just CNN but everybody did O.J. Simpson for more than a year," Moos reasons. "I don't think it's so far out, what I do."

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 • Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 • Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 • Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Minister bids to put Ten Commandments in public schools

ALTOONA, Pa. (AP) — Students filing into Altoona's schools are greeted with stern words of welcome, written in red on glass doors: "Metal detector in use" and "You are subject to search."

This 9,400-student district spends about $300,000 a year on security. It has its own security force and volunteers patrolling the halls. In this post-Columbine High summer, the schools are being wired for cameras.

All of which prompted the Rev. Gary Dull, a local minister, to offer a solution even more in vogue today than those airport-style safety precautions: Why not simply post the Ten Commandments?

"Since the Supreme Court took prayer and Bible reading out of schools in 1962, we've had a complete downgrading of morals," said Dull, the pastor of a Baptist church and a radio show host. "Every school district is worried about guns and drugs. Before 1962, the big issue was gum and paper wads."

With the recent spate of school shootings that included the horrific slayings at Columbine High in Littleton, Colo., members of the clergy, elected officials and lawmakers nationwide are pushing the Bible as a solution to school violence.

The House of Representatives recently passed a bill allowing the posting of the Ten Commandments in schools and state-owned or administered facilities.

In Adams County, Ohio, a group of ministers paid to place tablets outside four high schools.

Saddles

Tieking says between the two of them they can make just about anything out of leather, except custom boots.

Boots are too easy to make one little mistake and then the customer doesn't want them, he said. Tieking does boot repair, and even says more money can be made in boot repair, but it has to be in volume trade.

Each saddle made by Lewis Saddles is one of a kind and is labeled and signed.

"Factories have a different philosophy on making saddles," he said. "They work for the numbers, not necessarily for a quality product that will last. All of our saddles come with a lifetime warranty."

The difference is we're making something somebody wants, the way they want it," he said.

Tieking makes his own saddle trees, the foundation on which the rest of the saddle is built, out of pine. When the tree is the right size and shape, it's coated with fiberglass to give it strength.

"A lot of people have a misperception about the fiberglass and worry about the tree breaking and cutting the horse. It's not like that at all," Tieking said. "The pine and the fiberglass make a strong, lightweight tree and even if it does break, it's not going to cut up the horse."

However, he doesn't worry about the saddle trees breaking. In more than 10 years, he's only had to repair one of his saddle trees.

He buys his leather from a tannery in Tennessee and cuts each part of the saddle from a specific part of the cowhide.

Tieking says the most tedious and time-consuming part of making the saddle is hand sewing the cantle. He uses an awl and punches out holes, then must push two threaded needles through either side.

"A lot of factory made saddles are just top stitched, then glued in place. It doesn't last as long," he said.

With factories producing saddles much cheaper than the custom pieces, most custom saddlemakers don't stay in the business long.

"They start up and then they're gone," said Tieking. "Lewis Saddles is a recognized name. It's been around for a long time."

Adorning the walls of his shop are pictures of numerous saddles made by him and his predecessors. The Lewis name rides proudly on rodeo trophy saddles won by famous ropers, specialty saddles for actors and musicians, like Merle Haggard.

Tieking knows the days of making a living by crafting saddles is on the way out, even for well-established names, and has prepared for it by learning about computers.

Someday his craft will be a hobby and his computers his work. For that day, he has prepared with web page that depicts his craft and his hobby.

He can be reached at http://www.lewis-saddles.com. Until then, he can be found making the saddles for the working cowboy or the fancy dude — just the way they want them.

Tax cut

R-La.

One major change approved by the panel was a proposed tax deduction for insurance costs paid by some senior citizens to cover prescription drugs. It was the GOP's first official reaction to Clinton's popular proposal to add a drug benefit to Medicare.

But the Republican plan is contingent upon a passage later this year of an overall reform of Medicare, including a direct drug subsidy for the poor.

Democrats said the measure was simply political cover for Republicans who fear being outflanked on Medicare as they push their huge tax cut. They attempted to shave roughly $270 billion off the tax cut for a more direct Medicare prescription drug benefit, but that was defeated on a party-line 23-11 vote as important for its political symbolism as anything else.

"Before we give tax breaks to the richest 10 percent of Americans, we should be willing ... to give senior citizens help with some of these bills," said Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif.

In Baltimore on Wednesday, Clinton said the House GOP tax bill "could wreck our economy" and would consume almost all of the non-Social Security surplus over the next decade.

"It would require, as our economy grows, real cuts in education, defense, the environment, research, technology — the kinds of things we have invested more in," Clinton said.

On two other symbolic party-line votes, Ways and Means Republicans turned back a Democratic effort to delay the entire tax cut until a long-term solution to Social Security is in place and an amendment to use 50 percent of the money to pay down public debt.

Moderate Republicans on the committee were able to divert some money intended to cut capital gains taxes for corporations into two programs supported by Democrats. Both moves were opposed by Archer.

Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., won approval of an amendment that would gradually raise the per capita cap on low-income housing tax credits from $1.25 to $1.75 at a cost of $3.8 billion over 10 years. A similar provision is expected in a Senate GOP tax measure.

Rep. Amo Houghton, R-N.Y., amended the bill to extend welfare-to-work tax credits for six months longer than the measure originally intended, at a cost of $277 million over 10 years.

Pay raise

Hastert and House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., have discussed the pay boost, as have other House leaders, to make sure neither side will use the proposal as a partisan issue against the other.

Hastert spokesman John Feehery said the speaker supports the increase.

"All federal employees are getting a COLA," he said, using the shorthand for a cost-of-living adjustment.

Gephardt offered the same justification.

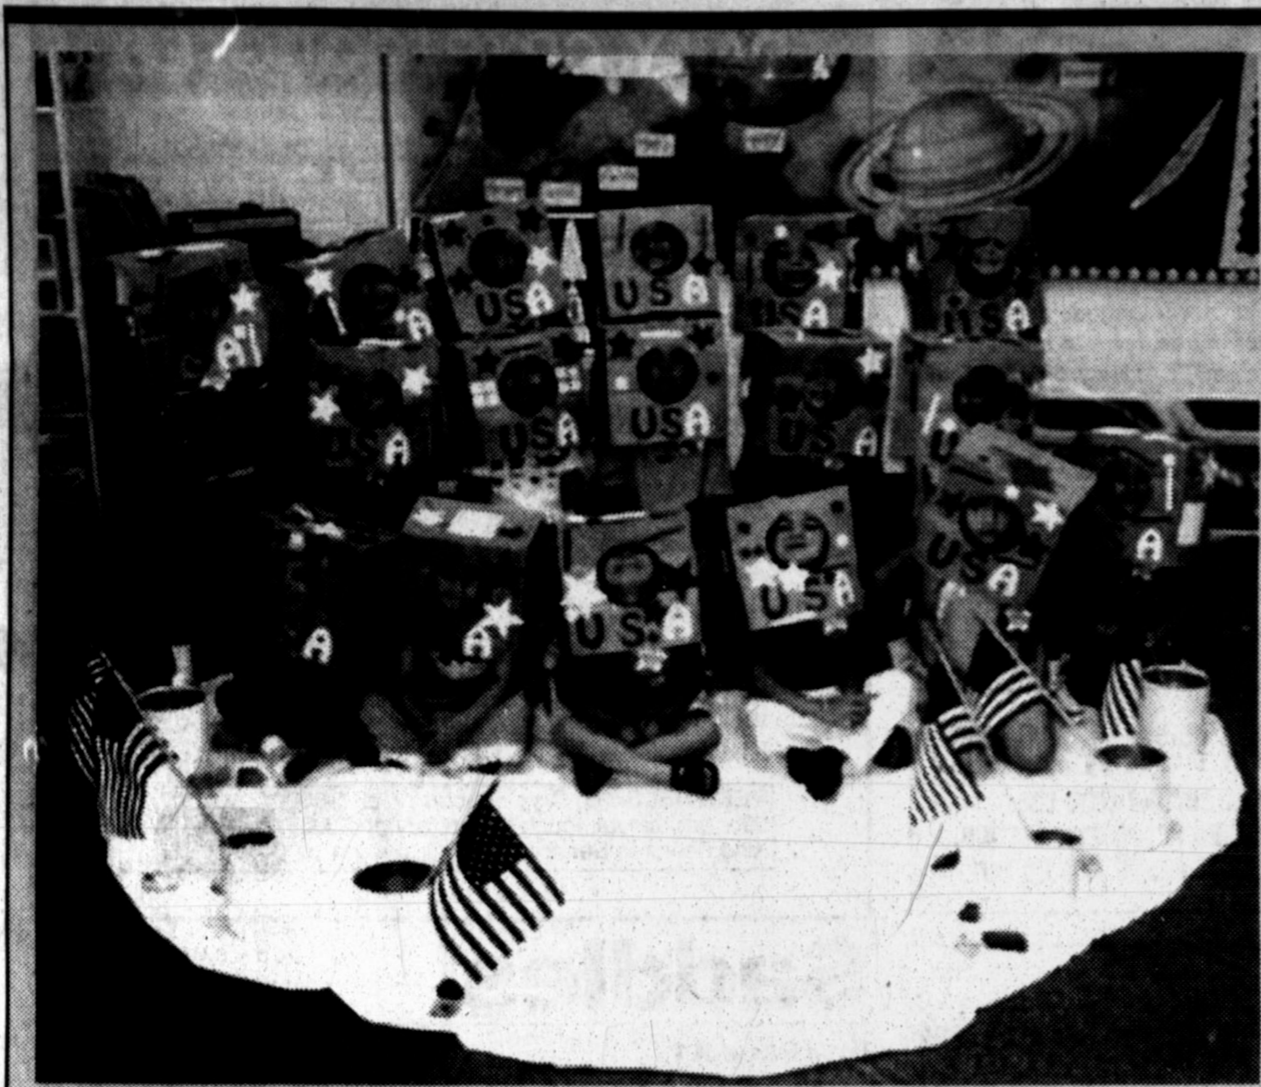

"It's the way we treat government workers, and I think we ought to do this," he said in a brief interview.

Lawmakers on both sides of the issue said the proposed increase has not been contentious this year. "About none, aside from a few media people trying to stir it up," Kolbe said when asked how much controversy the proposal has created.

A 1989 law established the current mechanism for lawmakers' annual automatic increase, reducing the number of politically sensitive votes they must take on the subject.

It also created a formula making the size of their increases slightly smaller than the boosts that federal employees receive. President Clinton has proposed a 4.4 percent increase for government workers next year, while lawmakers would get 3.4 percent, or $4,648.

CAMPAIGN 2000

Bush has profitable day

GOV. GEORGE W. BUSH

Collects about $900,000

BALTIMORE (AP) — Texas Gov. George W. Bush spent a profitable day in the Baltimore-Washington area, collecting about $900,000 for his presidential campaign and picking up the endorsement of a rival who abandoned his own presidential bid.

Bush wound up his trip to Virginia and Maryland on Wednesday evening with a $1,000-per-person fund-raiser in heavily Democratic Baltimore that Maryland finance chairman Richard Hug said raised more than $500,000.

"For a Republican in Maryland, this is unbelievable," he said.

Earlier at a luncheon in Washington's northern Virginia suburbs, the GOP front-runner collected about $400,000.

Bush got an enthusiastic reception from the Baltimore crowd that included many of the state's top Republicans. Perhaps the loudest applause came when, in an obvious slap at President Clinton, he promised if he is elected president, he will uphold the laws of the country and "the integrity and honor of the office, so help me God."

A few hours earlier, at the nearby Baltimore Convention Center, Clinton mocked Bush for calling himself a compassionate conservative.

"It sounds so good. And near as I can tell, here's what it means: It means, 'I like you. I do,'" Clinton said to uproarious laughter from Democrats attending a meeting of the Democratic Leadership Conference.

Bush responded that he is "proud to be a compassionate conservative."

Bush began his day at a fund-raiser in McLean, Va., just outside Washington. From there, he went to Washington for a news conference where Rep. John Kasich of Ohio abandoned his presidential bid and gave his endorsement to Bush.

Kasich continued on to Baltimore, accompanying Bush on a visit to a poor inner city neighborhood and then to the fund-raiser, where he introduced the Texas governor.

At a neighborhood center for children in a mostly black area a few blocks from Baltimore's glittering Inner Harbor, Bush visited a computer lab, speaking individually to each of the children before answering questions from a group of mostly pre-teen youngsters.

The children served up some softball questions: What were his hobbies? Where did he go to college and what kind of grades did he get? "Mediocre grades," he said.

Senate moves on patient bill of rights legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans kept their promise to produce alternatives to a slew of defeated Democratic proposals on patients' rights, moving closer to passing their version of the politically popular legislation.

But Democrats remained largely unsatisfied Wednesday following two days of voting on amendments.

Republicans stayed the course and refused on a 52-48 vote to extend new rules for health maintenance organizations to some 161 million people with private insurance regulated by the states. The result is that many of the new Senate provisions would apply only to the 48 million people covered by federally regulated insurance plans.

"The point ... is that the states have acted. They've acted without any mandate or prod from Washington and they've acted in a way to tailor their laws to their marketplace," said Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine. "One size does not fit all."

Democrats disagreed. "On every single amendment the people lose and the HMOs win," complained Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif.

ommendations that federal law be changed to allow the government to finance a certain type of human embryo research, but the White House says it doesn't want to go that far.

Instead, the White House is opting for a more conservative approach advocated by the National Institutes of Health — and in so doing, perhaps can avoid a fight with Congress.

The issue is over experiments with embryonic stem cells, the "master cells" that in early embryos generate all the other tissues of the body. Stem cells are causing huge excitement in the scientific community because researchers believe they can learn how to use the cells to make body parts or to find new therapies for Alzheimer's and other devastating diseases.

U.S. launches new bid for Mideast parley

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton today is launching a new U.S. drive for Mideast peacemaking, looking to Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak for a formula to reopen negotiations with the Palestinians and to affirm he will give up West Bank land to them.

Clinton is holding to the idea that Israel's security depends on land-for-peace accords with all the Arabs. And from Barak the president hopes to hear that the stalled agreement to yield an additional 13.1 percent of the territory will be implemented soon.

The president and his advisers are openly exuberant that Barak is apt to tell them what he is prepared to concede to the Palestinians and Syria and what will remain for hard bargaining.

Iran hard-liners show off their strength

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — After six days of social unrest, pro-democracy protesters surrendered the streets to hard-liners who came out in force to support the Islamic republic.

Tehran television, controlled by hard-liners, said at least a million people attended the rally Wednesday, sending an uncompromising signal that they would not give in to student-led demands for democratic reforms. Witnesses estimated 100,000 people participated.

The rally followed six days of student-led protests against hard-line clerics that drew up to 25,000 people — the largest such public display of anger since the 1979 Islamic revolution.
