WASTE MANAGEMENT

Feedyard operators get news

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer Controlling and making good use of animal waste from the numerous area feeding operations drew feedyard managers, haulers and producers Wednesday to the Hereford Community Center for an animal waste management workshop.

Speakers addressed concerns ranging from changing laws and permitting rules to the effects of soil and air quality when animal waste is used as a soil additive.

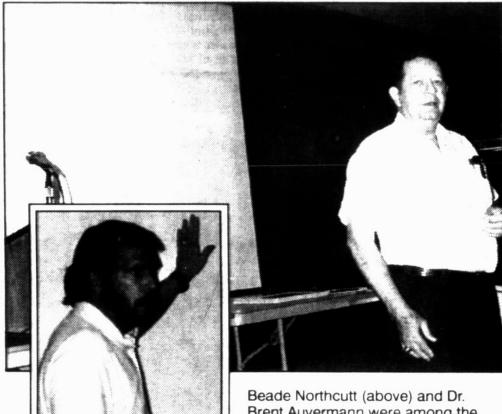

Disposal and profitable use of animal waste concerns feeding operators, agricultural producers and consumers who purchase goods grown on manure treated land.

Dr. Brent Auvermann, Texas Agricultural Extension Service engineering specialist, presented suited applications for waste and explained how it can be used vithout damaging the environment.

"Manure is almost ideally suited for use on cotton," Auvermann said. "When applied in appropriate amounts, nutrient buildup can be Auvermann deals especially with decreasing waste contaminates that cause excess dust and odor.

"Feedvards could virtually eliminate bad odors with steps as simple as providing plenty of slope to pens, preventing ponding by removing buildups under fence lines, and by scraping only the manure and not Environmental Protection Agency.

"We've been trying to get this approved for more than 20 years," Wise said. "Now TNRCC can make changes without the EPA getting involved. Feeders can now operate with only a state permit, which is more rigorous than federal guide-

Wise explained any CAFO (confined animal feeding operation), currently holding a federally authorized permit will need to submit an application for an individual permit or get a Texas Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (TPDES) by Sept. 25, 1999.

The new rules also change the expiration date of all TNRCC authorizations to July 27, 2004. TNRCC permits are required for any facility with 1,000 head of animals or more on the premises.

This means 1,000 slaughter cattle; 700 mature dairy cows; 2,500 swine, over 55 pounds or 10,000 weighing less than 55 pounds; 500 horses; 10,000 sheep; 55,000 turkeys; or 100,000 laying hens or broilers.

Air pollution prevention plans have long been a part of the TNRCC permitting requirements, but now only sections of the plan are required.

Wise briefly discussed the 1/2 mile buffer zone needed between new operations and occupied residents or ground water systems and the 1/4 mile zone between existing operations and other structures.

Getting past the rules, Beade Northcut, an engineer with Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board discussed its role in helping develop soil and water conservation

Other information included the improvements made in feeding techniques that produces less waste and equal amounts of product.

This fact alone makes for less waste buildup and fewer disposal concerns.

"In the last 60 years the concerns have changed," said Dr. Wayne Green, TAES animal nutritionist. "Sixty years ago, barnyard manure was in high demand, at a high price, but little was to be had. Now there are abundant supplies, but the price is low and we worry about getting rid of it. In another 60 years our problems will probably be different.'

DALLAS AP former Texas Lottery chief is trying to determine whether Republican presidential frontrunner and Texas Gov. George W. Bush received special treatment to gain a spot in the National Guard during the Vietnam War, court records indicate.

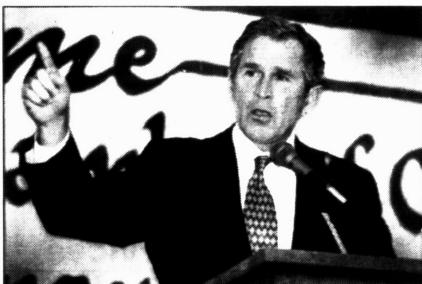

Attorneys for former lottery director Lawrence Littwin say they want to question Bush under oath about allegations that former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes helped him get into the state's Air National Guard in 1968.

Bush, facing questions from political rivals about his service in the reserves, GOV. GEORGE W. BUSH proved his application have continued to deny allegations that favoritism played a part for at least 55 deaths since July 19. Hardest hit have been Missouri and Illinois, each with 18 deaths.

Temperatures were in the 90s from the Plains to the East Coast again Wednesday, with the heat index — a measure of temperature and humidity — hitting triple digits in many areas.

"Whew," said Antoine Dean, wiping beads of sweat from his brow as he worked at his food cart in downtown St. Louis. "Most days people want the snow cones, but today they're taking the big cups.'

New Jersey Gov. Christie Whitman said she is issuing a drought warning so that water can be transferred from wetter areas to drier ones.

In Bismarck, N.D., temperatures reached 100 degrees for the first time in eight years. The nation's high Wednesday was 111 in Pierre. S.D. Little Rock, Ark., had the highest heat index at 118 degrees.

A series of showers helped cool some parts of Missouri but much of the state topped 90 degrees for the 14th straight day.

In St. Lou's, two men in their 80s were found dead Wednesday in their homes with air conditioners turned off and the windows closed.

"We see these same things over and over again. Air conditioning wasn't a part of their lives while they were growing up, and a lot of them feel they don't need it now," said Jacqualine Hutchinson, spokeswoman for Operation Weather Survival, which provides education and relief during extreme heat.

Senate rejects Dem cut

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican leaders are steering their $792 billion tax cut bill through the Senate, shunting aside a much smaller Democratic alternative and ignoring a promise from President Clinton that he will never let it become law.

Backers of the 10-year plan were confident, despite misgivings among several Republicans about its size, of winning passage by the end of the week and moving quickly to work out differences with a similar House-passed bill.

Americans "are rightful heirs to the wealth they're creating," Senate Finance Committee Chairman William Roth, R-Del., the bill's chief author, said in opening the debate Wednesday. "After paying for the government programs for which Congress has planned and budgeted, the change must now be returned to the taxpayer." At issue was what to do with a budget surplus estimated to total $1 trillion over the next decade, or nearly $3 trillion if the revenues from Social Security are included. Republicans insisted that their tax

The White House and most Democrats said a tax cut should come only after the Social Security and Medicare issues are dealt with, and that it should be kept modest under $300 billion — so funds would be available to strengthen education and defense programs.

The administration, in a statement, said Clinton would veto the GOP plan because it "leaves virtually none of these surpluses available" for saving Social Security and Medicare and addressing national

HISD clarifies changes

The Hereford Independent School District Board of Trustees adopted several significant changes in the Discipline Management Plan and Student Code of Conduct for the 1999-2000 school year.

After Tuesday's board meeting the district office presented a clarification of changes.

A change brought about by the recent action of the Texas Legislature mandates expulsion for students in certain situations, including bringing weapons to school. Policy prohibits students from the carrying of weapons, including any size pocket knife, on school property at any time. Violation could result in disciplinary action.

In severe cases, as mandated by law, students will be expelled. The code states, "A student must be expelled for any of the following offenses that occur on school property or while attending school sponsored or school related activity on or off school property." Bringing to school a firearm, as defined by federal law includes: any weapon, including a starter gun, frame, receiver or muffler, that will or is designed to or that may readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive; any destructive device, such as explosives, incendiary, or poison gas bomb or grenade.

Using, exhibiting, or possessing a gun, illegal knife with a blade of more than 5 1/2 inches; hand instruments designed to cut or stab by a throwing action, such as a dagger, dirk, stiletto, poniard; Bowie knife, spear or sword; a club or prohibited weapon, may result in disciplinary action.

Students in athletic or other extracurricular events will be held accountable for guidelines set forth in the "Extracurricular Standards of Behavior for Athletics" supplement. This is in addition to following guidelines in the "Discipline Management Plan and Student Code of Conduct.

Questions about these or other code of conduct policies may be directed to the school campus.

Autopsy results anticipated

EMORY, Texas (AP) — Was the death more than two months ago of a black man, who was tied to a tree and set afire, a hate crime?

The NAACP argues that it was.

The results of an autopsy were scheduled for release today in the death of H.W. Walker of Greenville, who disappeared in early May and whose decomposed body was found June 2 in a remote section of Rains County, about 50 miles east of Dallas.

A 16-year-old white male from Lone Oak has been in custody in connection with the murder since the day after the discovery, but authorities have refused to comment on the circumstances surrounding the death. NAACP officials in Greenville and Dallas conducted their own investigation and approached federal officials with the

The good news is that since fugitive Ira Einhorn did not respond to the court papers he signed for in France and did not put on a defense in the civil wrongful death suit, he cannot appeal the award.

The bad news is that there is little hope the family of Helen "Holly" Maddux of Tyler will be able to collect the James R. Beasley, the Philadelphia attorney who represented the family for free, said the point was to prevent Einhorn from profiting from any book or movie deals about the high-profile case.

The permanent exhibit honors the life's work of Victor and Joe Stanzel, whose childhood dreams of flying turned into a hobby and later a successful toy business.

Orioles pluck Rangers

BALTIMORE (AP) - Scott Erickson ended the Texas Rangers' nine-game winning streak and, in the process, effectively terminated rumors that he might be dealt away before the July 31 trade dead-

Erickson won his sixth straight decision and Charles Johnson drove in four runs Wednesday night as the Ori-oles defeated the Rangers 8-

Erickson (7-8) allowed four runs and six hits in six innings, striking out four and walking three. After opening the season 1-8, the right-hander has won his last four starts and is 6-0 in 10 starts since June 4.

Todd Zeile and Ruben Mateo both homered and drove in two runs for the Rangers, who lost for only the second time in 13 games since the All-Star break.

"We didn't expect to win the rest of them," Texas man-ager Johnny Oates said. "The idea now is to just keep grinding them out."

Doug Johns pitched two innings and Mike Timlin got three outs for his 12th save in 20 chances.

After Texas scored three runs in the sixth to make it 4-4, the Orioles took the lead for good with two runs in their half. Cal Ripken singled and took second on a sacrifice before Brady Anderson was given a two-out intentional walk. Bordick then foiled the strategy by lining a single to left, chasing starter John Burkett (3-5).

"You put the chips out there and they fall where they may," Oates said. "You win sometimes and lose sometimes. There's a team over there trying to counter every move."

B.J. Surhoff followed with an RBI single off Mike Munoz. Johnson's one-out double made it 8-4 in the seventh, and Mateo hit a two-run homer in the eighth.

"Six runs should be enough to win a ball game, but I wasn't able to hold them down when I needed to," said Burkett, who fell to 0-5 lifetime against Baltimore. Although the Orioles have won 12 of 15, they're still eight games under .500 and a longshot to reach the playoffs. Erickson was once rumored to be on the trading block, but his recent run has solidified his position in the starting rotation.

Not that he was worried about leaving, anyway.

Batch, fans will miss Sanders

Lions quarterback expresses feelings toward former teammate, who retires as second leading rusher in NFL History

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) -Nobody is likely to miss Barry Sanders more than Detroit Lions quarterback Charlie Batch. The reason why is somewhat surprising.

"I was a fan of his," Batch said. "For the six years I've been in Michigan, I have enjoyed watching him."

Batch, who won his job as a rookie last season, is just one of millions of NFL fans who are coming to grips with Sanders' retirement from football, a shocking decision that prevents him from be-coming the NFL's career rushing leader this season.

When the Lions reported to training camp today at Saginaw Valley State, the dazzling one-man highlight film was somewhere in England.

In a statement released Wednesday, the game's most explosive running back said he was leaving because, "My desire to exit the game is greater than my desire to remain in it.'

The news stunned the Lions, who left the door open for him to return.

That doesn't appear likely, however.

Ten years is a lot of football," the 31-year-old Sanders said at Gatwick Airport after arriving on a flight from Detroit to London. "I'm just really not feeling like playing. It's not the same game. ... As I've gotten older, the game has changed in my mind.

"I'm thinking about doing other things," he added. "It's still fun, but not as fun. It just felt like it was time."

Asked if he might change his mind, he shook his head.

"I don't think that's going to happen," he said.

Sanders becomes the fourth superstar to retire since January, joining John Elway, Wayne Gretzky and Michael Jordan. Unlike those three, Sanders leaves while at the top of his game, much the same as Jim Brown, who retired from the NFL in 1966 at age 30.

Why now, especially since he's only 1,458 yards shy of breaking Walter Payton's NFL career rushing record of 16,726 yards?

Sanders has never thought much of such records.

Payton, who suffers from a rare liver disease and is awaiting a transplant, said he understood Sanders' decision.

"It is not about money," Payton said. "It is not about statistics. It is about the romance kindled by playing the game the way it was supposed to be played."

Sanders, who planned to spend about two weeks in Europe, said he was leaving football before he became "old and gray and can't run" and got "kicked out."

Lions general manager Chuck Schmidt said Sanders would be welcome back any time.

"He's on the 'Reserve: Did Not Report' list, not the 'Reserve: Retired' list," Schmidt said. That means Sanders can be activated any time this season until Dec. 5. If he joins the team before then, he can play in the playoffs.

Still, Schmidt said he intends to talk with Sanders' agents about repaying $7.3

million of the unearned signing bonus on the $36 million contract extension Sanders signed two years ago.

Sanders retired without speaking to Detroit coach Bobby Ross or anyone else on the team. Yet he said he leaves "on good terms with everyone in the organization." "I don't feel Barry left because of me," Ross said. "I don't feel that way at all."

That was the popular wisdom, however, especially after Sanders' father, William, of Wichita, Kan., said a few weeks ago that his son was tired of the Lions.

During Sanders' 10 sea-sons in Detroit, the Lions had a 78-82 regular-season record and made the playoffs five times, winning one playoff game. Recently, they've had two 5-11 seasons sandwiched around a 9-7 record in 1997 that earned a wildcard spot.

'Blair Witch Project' offers reality check

LOS ANGELES (AP) -"The Blair Witch Project" is turning out to be a spellbinder that has some moviegoers asking for a reality check. The film's mock-documentary technique follows three young filmmakers who vanish in the woods near Burkittsville, Md., as they track a 200-year-old legendary witch. It's scary stuff for some - and apparently real-

"One guy wrote us to say he went driving around Burkittsville and he felt this strange presence had surrounded him," said filmmaker Eduardo Sanchez, who created "Blair Witch" with Daniel Myrick. "Then he was afraid to get out of his car."

It's no accident. Believability in "The Blair Witch Project" is central to its success, with the film's Web site, blairwitch.com, helping to embroider the tale. The site has a timeline of events that begins with the witch's rumored origin, and ends with details of the search for the missing film crew. It never explicitly states the story is fiction, which it is.

And there's more.

On cable television's Sci-Fi Channel, an "Unsolved Mysteries"-style promotion provides interviews with family and friends of the film's missing characters. A traveling museum making the rounds at theaters exhibits "Blair Witch" lore. And a novel, purportedly written by a private detective who searched for the film crew, includes excerpts from one of their jour-

"The advertising is like a companion piece to this film. We never lied to anyone, but we tried to make it scarier by creating an element of truth in the story."

> Amorette Jones, Artisan Entertainment

"The advertising is like a companion piece to this film," said Amorette Jones, a marketing director at Artisan Entertainment. "We never lied to anyone, but we tried to make it scarier by creating an element of truth in the story." The marketing scheme has resulted in days of sold-out ticket sales at the 31 locations showing "Blair Witch." The film earned $2 million last weekend — only slightly less than the total for "Muppets from Space," which was showing at more than 2,200 locations.

Such breakout success has Sanchez and Myrick wondering just how much the film's legend will spread when "The Blair Witch Project' goes into wide release on Friday.

Already, a fan has written the filmmakers to criticize a purported tale of an 1886 search party that was found murdered after its members apparently fell prey to the forest-dwelling witch.

"That letter started out, 'It's all a lie. It's a big hoax," said Myrick, 35. "And I thought, Well, this guy figured it out." Then he went on to say, You had it wrong. Here's the real way they were found."

Some believers have organized search parties to look for the fictional documentary crew, who vanished in 1994. Still others have ventured into the Maryland woods with hopes of being spooked by the witch, the filmmakers said.

"You hate for them to waste their time," Myrick said. "But at the same time you're really excited."

Sanchez, 30, added: "Everybody is getting something out of it on a lot of different levels."

As they spoke at a Beverly Hills restaurant, a waitress volunteered she'd been duped by the "Blair Witch" tale, and admitted she'd spent an hour arguing with a friend who told her the film isn't true.

"So, it's real, right?" she asked the pair.

Myrick glanced at Sanchez and said: "We're not telling you one way or the other."

Campaign to correct claim on Bush's site

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. George W. Bush's presidential campaign said Wednesday it will correct a claim on his website that says Texas is the first state to abolish social promotion, the practice of moving students up before they're academically ready.

"That is an error. We are changing the statement on the web page," said Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes after being asked about the claim. "It should not state

"He hit on all the right issues like education and the economy," said Kathryn Diaz Garcia, a Houston attorney. "I'm glad he showed the respect to show up."

Wooing a constituency that could have a big role in picking the next president in 2000 and mocking Bush's slogan of "compassionate conservatism, Gore said Americans shouldn't have to settle for "crumbs of compassion."

At the annual conference of La Raza, the nation's largest Hispanic advocacy group, Gore was warmly applauded by many in the crowd of 2,300.

The vacationing Bush did not attend and that snub upset some activists who warned that the governor should not take the Hispanic vote for granted. Bush drew strong support from Texas Hispanics in his reelection as governor, getting about half of their vote.

of the social problems in Texas and took a glancing swipe at the Republican presidential candidate's description of his beliefs as "compassionate conservatism."

"I want to do things the right way," he said. "Not letting people fend for themselves or hope for crumbs of compassion.' That was in English, but Gore sprinkled phrases and sentences in Spanish throughout his address.

"I'm certainly not satisfied when over 10 percent of all uninsured children in America live in the state of Texas," he said, then used a phrase that became a refrain: "Nuestras familias merecen lo mejor (Our families deserve the best)." The speech was labeled "official business" as opposed to a campaign address, and was paid for with public money. Gore tailored the administration's argument against the Republican tax-cut plan to fit his audience, saying that the tax cuts proposed in Washington would endanger Medicare, upon which elderly and disabled Hispanics are disproportionately He also focused on education issues, among the most critical for the 31 million Hispanics making up America's fastest growing minority group. Just 62 percent of Hispanic adults age 25-29 completed high school compared with 87 percent of blacks and 93 percent of whites, according to federal figures. "How can we expect to break down the barriers of opportunity if the Hispanic dropout rate remains an unacceptable 75 percent higher than that for blacks and whites?" Gore asked.

The time for quick fixes has passed. Its time for a renewed commitment to our public schools." "I am not satisfied when even one Latino is left out of our prosperity," he said.

In introducing Gore, Energy Secretary Bill Richardson, the highest ranking Hispanic in the Clinton administration, called next year's elections "The most important year in the history of Latino political development."

■ PETA ad linking beef consumption with impotence

HOUSTON (AP) Cattlemen got mad when talk show host Oprah Winfrey tried to link beef consumption to "mad cow disease."

Now, there's an ad campaign that claims eating beef can make you impo-

The ad, which is displayed primarily on the walls of men's rooms, shows an attractive woman in a stars-and-stripes swimsuit, an inviting smile and a string of link sausages.

"Eating meat can cause impotence," says the advertisement by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

The animal rights organization is known for its imaginative and sometimes confrontational tactics. In this case, the message is: Eat your vegetables, and let cows, pigs and chickens

"Vegetarians are not only generally slimmer and more sexually attractive than meat-eaters, they are also better lovers," said Bruce Friedrich, a PETA spokesman in Norfolk, Va.

Friedrich said erectile difficulties arise from impaired blood circulation. Arteries become narrowed by accumulations of fatty deposits, he noted.

PETA's solution? Try vegetables instead of

The group cites popular diet books by Dr. Dean Ornish, who contends that switching to a vegetarian diet can unclog arteries, even after a lifetime of bad eating habits.

"Choose a veggie burger in the kitchen for a (name of a well-known chain hamburger product) in the bed-room," Friedrich said.

The ads are pure bull, says Lisa Williams of Austin, a spokeswoman for the Texas Beef Council.

"It's just another publicity stunt by a radical animal rights group to confuse and mislead the American public," she said Wednesday.

Beef can actually enhance men's sexual po-tency, Ms. Williams said, "because it is powerpacked with important nutrients like zinc, iron and protein, which you need to make it through your day.

"Zinc is an important nutrient for sexual function, and beef is one of the best sources of zinc in your diet."

Ornish is a "radical vegetarian" whose diets are very extreme," she said.

"It's a diet that 99 percent of Americans can't follow and don't want to follow," she said.

Ms. Williams doubts the ads will have the intended

The group is placing the ads around the country, mostly in men's rooms, Friedrich said.

The group of Texas cattlemen sued Ms. Winfrey, claiming she had libeled beef. A jury at Amarillo ruled against the cattlemen although one of them still has an appeal pending.

Economic growth slows

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. economic growth slowed abruptly to 2.3 percent during the second quarter as consumers curtailed exuberant spending that had been the major force behind the recent economic boom.

The Commerce Departthe nation's total output of goods and services, grew by 44 billion from April through June to an inflation-adjusted $7.8 trillion.

The second-quarter sloweconomy had surprised many analysts by growing at a bigger-than-expected 4.3 percent annual rate during the first three months of 1999. Many analysts had expected the moderation to be a bit more gradual.

New restraint by consumers, whose purchases account for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity and whose spending proclivity has weather two years of global economic crisis, was largely responsible for putting on the brakes.

Consumer spending grew by 4 percent from April through June, compared with a torrid 6.7 percent during the first three months of ment reported today that 1999. It was the slowest the gross domestic product, spending increase since the fourth quarter of 1997.

An inflation gauge tied to the GDP showed consumer prices rose more quickly during the spring, at an annual rate of 2.1 percent, compared down came after the to 1.2 percent in the first quarter.

> In a separate report today, the Labor Department said its Employment Cost Index, considered the best measure of changes in wages and benefit costs, rose 1.1 percent in the second quarter. The bigger-than-expected jump followed a record low 0.4 percent increase during the first three months of 1999.

The lowest unemployment helped the United States rate in 29 years has raised fears that employers scrambling for workers will have to raise wages, and therefore prices.

The number of Americans filing initial claims for unemployment benefits fell last week to the lowest level in two years, the Labor Department also reported, indicating the labor market continues to tighten. Jobless claims fell 40,000 to 275,000, lowering a four-week moving average of claims to 300,000.

Concerned that economic growth is too rapid and might spark inflation, the Federal Reserve in June raised interest rates by a quarter of a point. Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan in his midyear report to Congress this week said the nation's central bankers have not ruled out another rate increase this year.

During the lingering international financial crisis, overseas markets for American products have dwindled and a flood of imports from troubled countries trying to unload their own goods here at discount prices has helped keep inflation in check.

There has been some recent improvement in the trade picture as foreign economies have begun to re-cover. The record U.S. trade deficit shaved just 0.75 percent off total economic growth in the second quarter, compared to a 2.23 percent offset in the first quarter.

Investment by American businesses picked up from April through June, growing by 10.8 percent, compared to 8.5 percent in the first three months of the year.

Rising mortgage rates dampened the housing market, with spending on new homes and apartments growing by 5.1 percent.

Flag's gone, but flap's still around flag is gone, but the flap is likely far from over.

The Arkansas state flag was lowered from atop City Hall in downtown New York City on Wednesday afternoon. It's presence had vaised questions about racial insensitivity, the limits of power and the line between politics and city business.

The flap was unfurled Tuesday when Rudolph Mayor Giuliani traveled to Little Rock, Ark., to play up potential rival Hillary Rodham Clinton's vulnerability as a carpetbagger and to collect some campaign cash; neither has officially announced their J.S. Senate candidacy.

Giuliani said he was so noved by the hospitality of a private hotel that was flying New York City's flag that he promised the Arkansas banner would be flown at City Hall. So up it went.

Critics, including former Mayor Ed Koch, called it an abuse of power. Others said he move was insulting to

City Council Speaker Peter Vallone, a Democrat, ordered the flag immediately taken down, citing a law he Giuliani's move also generated criticism from the White House. Spokesman Joe Lockhart called the mayor's southern trip "a little goofy."

Giuliani responded: "What's the White House doing commenting on this unless they are running somebody's campaign from the White House?"
