Boosters cautioning merchants

An out-of-town company has been soliciting advertising for sports schedules that have not been endorsed by the Hereford Independent School District or the Whiteface Booster Club, according to booster club president Mike Power.

Power said the booster club's only sanctioned fund-raiser is the one it conducts for advertisements sold for the football programs.

"All other solicitations are from outside sources and should be considered money not kept in Hereford," Power stated.

Local firms generally have generated the funding for the Whiteface schedules and calendars. These firms are confirmed by the athletic department and the booster club.

Local merchants are at their own risk in purchasing advertising with an outside company.

The future is now

Firm builds with eye on environment

The future of construction is now. And, Tom Clarke and Corky Paetzold of Hereford have a stake in it.

Clarke is president and Paetzold is vice president of Panhandle Enercon, a franchise of El Paso-based Enercon. The parent company has been manufacturing structural interior panels (SIP) for about 18 years.

The local company, which began its operations in Hereford in March, already has built one home and has another under construction, Clarke said.

"All of our architectural, engineering and technical assistance is available from El Paso," he said. "There are two architects down there working with us."

Although Clarke said he anticipates the company will have 15 employees by next summer, he and Paetzold are doing most of the work in the factory just off U.S. Highway 385 South, the construction work is being handled through subcontracts.

"We have four carpenters, two electricians and two plumbers working on our projects," Clarke said.

"We are going to move slowly, even though I think our business will grow rapidly," Clarke said. "We have plenty of jobs" scheduled.

"I don't want to have more than three or four jobs going at one time that I'm responsible for. If anyone else wants to do that, it's OK because we can crank out panels as fast as they need them," he said.

Clarke should know the building requirements in the Panhandle, which is subject to weather extremes, because he is a Hereford native.

After graduating from Hereford

High School in 1978, he earned a degree in microbiology from Texas Tech University. From Lubbock, he moved to Norman, Okla., where he earned a degree as a clinical dietitian from the University of Oklahoma and attended graduate school at the OU Health Sciences Center, earning a master's degree in public health administration and policy.

He worked for about 10 years for the state of Oklahoma in public health before he and his wife, Lee Ann, moved back to Hereford when she took a position as pharmacist at Homeland.

It wasn't such a stretch for a former public health administrator to move into the construction field because Clarke grew up around the building trade.

"My dad (James T. Clarke) had a construction and plumbing company for years," Clarke said.

"Things kinda worked out," Clarke said about his move into the construction industry.

Clarke is enthusiastic about the future of this type of construction.

He said today's homes are built using methods developed in the 1830s, and which he said is inefficient, both economically and ecologically.

Under the Panhandle Enercon process, the customer can either choose an Enercon or provide a plan.

A panel system is devised to fit the plans and the panels are manufactured to the plan's specifications in the plant.

After the panels, which are made of plywood and laminated polystyrene foam, manufactured, they are transported to the building site and erected.

HISD bus drivers go back to school

School's out!

Well, at least it is for the students. But bus drivers - new and old alike - are returning to the classrooms and behind the wheel for school bus driver training.

Beginning Saturday, van drivers will begin acquiring their minimum of 20 hours driving time, as well as classroom, video, and emergency training.

On July 17, new bus drivers will begin similar training.

"New drivers have to have at least a minimum of 20 hours training," said David Morris, director of transportation services for Hereford Independent School District, "and every three years they have to come in for a refresher course."

This year, Morris expects to train six or seven new drivers for the district and a total of about 80 drivers for other districts in Region XVI.

Morris said coaches are expected to go through the same training as other drivers even though they only drive for their

Learning is made fun

Special to The Brand Summer

It's a traditional time for students and teachers to take time away from the classroom and enjoy a vacation while participating in the usual seasonal activities, family vacations, swimming, outdoor cook-outs, visiting with friends, sports and other outdoor activities.

However, this isn't the "usual" summer for 240 Hereford Independent School District elementary students and their 22 teachers because they have elected to give up six weeks of their vacation to spend additional time in the classroom.

These students are enrolled in the districtwide elementary summer session being held on the West Central campus with instruction from teachers representing every elementary school in Hereford.

"This is a learning session," summer school Principal Richard Saucedo said, "but with a twist ... these kids are having fun with the new learning processes their teachers have learned and shared."

"We concentrate on teaching the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) objectives, reading, math and writing, and work hard at it, but the kids and teachers are having fun," Saucedo said.

Smaller than normal classes make it easier for the teachers to interact with all students in a one-on-one situation and this in itself promotes a stronger learning environment, he

Once the panels are transported to the building site, the house can be erected in four-five days.

Although the initial construction cost is roughly equivalent to the cost of building a standard frame residence, Clarke said there are other factors to be considered.

For example, he said the cost for building a Panhandle Enercon residence will remain relatively constant, and the homeowner should be able to realize savings of between 50 percent and 60 percent in utility costs over a 25-year period.

For example, if the outside is 100 degrees, the interior of an Enercon will remain about 80 degrees even with the air conditioner turned off, he said.

"And, the size of the heating and cooling unit (in an Enercon home) is half that of a standard home," he said.

Although Clarke contends the company officials plan to follow a plan of slow, but steady growth, he's confident.

After all, he's see the future of construction.

GOP to propose 10% tax cut

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News in brief

WASHINGTON — Income tax rates would be cut across the board by 10 percent over the next decade as the centerpiece of a House Republican tax plan released today and expected to be opposed by President Clinton.

Rep. Bill Archer, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said the income tax cut will be the mainstay of a multipart tax relief package estimated at $850 billion using federal surplus money that the panel will vote on next week.

Republicans pushed the 10 percent plan earlier this year and then backed away as Democrats claimed it would primarily benefit the rich. But Archer, R-Texas, wanted income tax cuts that would touch every taxpayer regardless of income, part of the GOP campaign to remind voters that it is the party of lower taxes and smaller government.

"Republicans are determined to protect taxpayers, who ultimately get stuck with the bills," Archer said in a statement. "If we don't cut taxes now and the money stays in Washington, the politicians will surely spend it."

Cutting the rates 10 percent over 10 years would cost the government about $400 billion in revenue. It would eventually reduce the two rates paid by most taxpayers from 15 percent and 28 percent to 13.5 percent and 25.2 percent, respectively.

U.N. reports new possible mass killing site in Kosovo

LJUBENIC, Yugoslavia — NATO peacekeepers have closed off a mountainous region where villagers say Serb security forces killed as many as 350 people in what may be the largest massacre site yet discovered in Kosovo.

Villagers say most of the victims were people who fled into the snow-covered mountains to escape their Serb attackers. But bones scattered on the ground in this tiny village showed some never made it to the mountains.

The killers shot some of the victims and hurled others off cliffs into streams below, villagers told reporters. They claimed hundreds were killed in the mountains just west of Ljubenic.

"They divided the women and children from the men and told them to go to Albania," said one villager Sadik Janurati. "After that, they executed two men from the village in front of us and after a while they started to shoot us, using all different kinds of weapons."

German peacekeepers late last month found graves believed to contain 119 people in Celine and another nearby Kosovo village, the worst massacre reported to date. The alleged massacres took place near the western city of Pec in the sector now patrolled by Italians.

athletic programs. Morris, as a certified driver trainer, offers drivers from other districts the minimum, but local drivers program is "really in depth."

Driving school buses isn't for everyone. Morris said that before any new driver is hired or trained they discuss the challenges of driving a bus loaded with rambunctious kids as compared to driving an empty bus.

During these sessions, Morris and possible drivers discuss general safety measures for bus riders and the district policy regarding misbehaving riders.

"All the drivers are forewarned about driving with a busload of kids," he said. "It is a challenge."

Morris said each driver understands the safety issues of children remaining properly seated, general respect for other riders and keeping noise at an acceptable level, so as not to distract the driver.

Drivers are informed about the district policy which allows for one written referral for bad behavior on the buses; five days suspension for a second offense; and semester suspension for the third offense.

Morris said some parents have tried to use this as a reason for not sending students to school, but even if the students are not allowed on buses, the parents are responsible for making sure the students arrive at school.

Not only do bus drivers have to go through driving and emergency training, but they also have their driving records checked through the Texas Department of Public Safety. There is also a criminal background check.

Morris said drivers are expected to abide by laws of the road and if they get a ticket while driving an HISD bus, the driver pays the ticket and receives a verbal and written reprimand.

Subsequent events could result in a driver's dismissal.

HISD officials do this to ensure the safety of the bus riding students as much as possible. Morris reports the last accident involving an HISD bus was two years ago. No one was seriously injured. That is the only accident in at least 10 years involving a district bus.

Morris said his department transports approximately 1,500 students each day from grades K-12.

HISD purchased five new buses last year and all the buses are radio equipped to be able to report any emergency or mechanical failure which arises.

said.

Beyond that, Saucedo said many teachers brought new teaching elements to the classroom after attending workshops throughout the past year, including "Spiral (problem solving) Math" and an innovative reading program which utilizes song and other tools to present the daily lessons.

He explains that it takes only 20 to 25 minutes per day utilizing these special teaching methods to get the message across because the students learn quicker when they are interested, and their attention is held longer when teachers make use of objects with which the student can easily identify.

Team teaching is also used, involving as many as three classes and their teachers. In this program a math lesson is quickly learned when teacher Diane Stokes takes the lead in presenting a lesson to fourth graders and writes the answers or responses from students on an overhead projector which allows all student to immediately see the results of their work.

Other teachers in the classroom move silently among the students stopping occasionally to make sure each one knows and understands the lesson which Stokes may summarize by utilizing something as simple as a clock to give students visual identification of the lesson.

Saucedo explains that the lessons learned in this "Spiral Math" session involve more than what has become the normal classroom procedure.

"Many people think back to their days in school when you worked for maybe a week on addition, then followed that with another week of subtraction," Saucedo said. "With this system, we work on both items at the same time."

"It really seems to work and the two lessons help explain each other in the minds of the kids. You would be surprised at how much the kids learn in these 20 to 25 minute periods of instruction," he said.

In a class of second-grade students, teacher Caroline Gilley and assistant Ada Condarco read to their young charges while the students follow closely in their own books, not unlike the situation in regular classrooms.

But this duo also utilizes learning tools, including gloves for the right hand of each child with the words "Who" did "What," "Where," "When" and "Why" written on the various fingers. The students place these on their hands and sing in unison a special song which includes all of the words and allows the students to raise the appropriate finger as each word comes from their mouths during the singing session. By looking for each of these words in the stories they read, the student can more quickly summarize and understand the meaning of the literary piece.

All of this, coupled with a short day of only 3 1/2 hours, "gives the students a better chance to learn," Saucedo said, "and that's what education is all about."

FIRST LOVE

(Maggie Vasquez)

Sometimes it burns like the hottest fire.
Sometimes it's all you can desire.
Sometimes it feels like you're flying high.
Sometimes it feels like
you want to die.
Sometimes it feels like you can't get enough - that's when you know it's your first love.

VANITY FAIR

(Jerry Ratliff)

Don't be too sure
You're looking at what you see.
If you're busy looking at yourself,
I'll be busy looking at me.
Vanity has its just reward
This reward is its own curse.
I can change in a moment's notice
The time it took to write this verse.

Don't get hung up on life
And rave and rant and cuss
All life ever was or is
Is just who is driving the bus.

Don't get hung up on age
While searching for this fountain.
The rope you use to hang yourself
Can be used to climb a mountain.

Reflections in the mirror,
Another place to start
The subtle smile from within
From the eyes, the mouth, the heart
From the inside out it happens
If we will just let go.

Step out of yourself for a moment
And let this power flow.
The man who knows says nothing;
The man who knows nothing will speak
Of why they are so strong
And why we are so weak.

I listen to these people talk,
Of how they are so tall,
Then I remember something ancient:
Pride does go before the fall.
So let the mind go,
Let the river flow,
This moment is not the same
As it was a moment ago.
Be spectator or player,
Allow your heart to care,
Visit the carnival of dreams,
But stay away from the Vanity Fair.

Books let ranchers talk

Thanks to Hollywood, Zane Grey and Louis L'Amour, people around the world know about the American cowboy.

Nothing is more synonymous with the American West than the cowboy, herding cattle out on the lone-prairie and sleeping under the stars.

But the world's image of the American cowboy and the cattle rancher is largely myth. Few industries have undergone such dramatic changes in the past century has the cattle rancher.

Popular Western novelist Elmer Kelton and photographer Kathleen Jo Ryan have teamed up to present vivid portrayal of life on modern Texas cattle ranches as they prepare to enter the 21st century.

Kelton, who is a native of Crane and author of 36 novels, is no stranger to the Texas cattle ranch. His father, the late R.W. "Buck" Kelton, worked for nearly 40 years for the McElroy Ranch Co.

Ryan, a resident of Seattle, Wash., is a well-known photographer and producer of several books and videos. Her work has been exhibited in the Pro Rodeo Hall of Fame, the American Quarter Horse Museum, Rochester Museum and Science Center, and the Russell Senate Building Rotunda.

The project was initiated by Al Micallef, owner of the CF Ranch in Alpine. Micallef wanted to present a look at cattle ranching through the eyes of the ranchers. He put together what he would call "his team" - Kelton, Ryan and actor-rancher Tommy

"Texas Cattle Barons: Their Families, Land and Legacy," Essays by Elmer Kelton, photography by Kathleen Jo Ryan; Ten Speed Press, Berkeley, Calif., 1999. Hardcover, 208 pages; $49.95; ISBN 1-58008-100-2

"Deep in the Heart of Texas: Texas Ranchers in Their Own Words," photographed and produced by Kathleen Jo Ryan. Ten Speed Press, Berkeley, Calif., 1999. Softcover, 160 pages; $24.95; ISBN 1-58008-101-0

Lee Jones - and selected the 13 ranches to be featured in the books.

Micallef wanted the books to provide a forum for ranchers, to let them tell about their industry.

"Our industry has done a terrible job in marketing. We are the victims of very bad information, but we haven't worked aggressively to change that perception," Micallef said.

The ranchers use plain, simple language to tell about the hard work and discipline required to survive in today's era of big business and changing markets.

One of the biggest changes for ranchers is the uncertainty their children will follow them into the business. But even though ranchers cannot assume their children also will go into ranching, they remain hopeful about the future.

Modern ranches, like other businesses, have found the computer is essential. Ranchers must store a variety of data, from feed inventories to beef prices in Asia.

"You can't live in the past and build a future," Rob Brown of the R.A. Brown Ranch in Throckmorton said in his assessment of the industry.

The ranchers see their role as food producer, land steward and protector of a threatened way of life. And, in telling their stories, they discuss the challenge of operating their vast cattle enterprises, coping with drought and other natural disasters, dealing with a variety of regulatory agencies, and adjusting to changing food trends.

"Ranching is an art, not a science. You have to ranch conservatively in West Texas. This is a real strong country, but a very unpredictable country," said Jim Moon of Moon Ranch near Van Horn.

For anyone who is interested in the American West and the people in ranching, they will find these books to be essential to their libraries.

"Texas Cattle Barons" features 150 color photographs in its 208 pages, while the companion book, "Deep in the Heart of Texas," has more than 100 black-and-white photographs in its 160 pages.

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

EDITORIAL

After tobacco, what's next?

The cigarette industry took another punch on the chin recently when Miami jurors found five of the nation's largest cigarette makers guilty of producing what nine class-action plaintiffs claim is a defective product that causes emphysema, lung cancer and other illnesses.

Jurors heard eight months of testimony and were exposed to thousands of documents from decades of tobacco litigation. They will meet again in the next phase of the trial to determine damages in which as many as 500,000 Florida smokers and their heirs are represented.

Where will the litigation end? No one is sure. But it seems likely that lawyers, armed with the strength and sheer numbers class-action lawsuits offer, won't quit until tobacco firms declare bankruptcy.

And despite the hypocrisy of accepting millions of dollars in tax revenues from the sale of tobacco products, Texas joined other states in feeding while the feeding was good — reaping $15 billion from tobacco companies before a $206 billion national settlement reached with the industry in November prevented states from suing to recoup the costs of treating sick smokers.

But the national settlement did not preclude lawsuits by individuals, such as this most-recent Florida case. And, now it appears that anyone who claims to have been adversely affected by cigarette smoke, either directly or indirectly, can find a class-action lawsuit to latch on to.

We don't advocate smoking as lifestyle choice; we don't deny that tobacco is addictive and likely to be harmful to a person's health; we don't defend the unethical tactics used by tobacco companies to breed whole new generations of dependent smokers.

However, we also believe the widespread litigious attacks on the tobacco industry threaten free enterprise as we know it, especially since this industry operates under the same legal constraints as many smaller industries and businesses.

Should industrial America be held accountable for the products it dispenses?

Sure. Manufacturers should bear responsibility for how well their products are made — to the extent of the promises, guarantees and warnings made in marketing the product.

Addicted or not, it seems ludicrous to presume that America's smokers didn't have a clue about the potential risk they were taking when they took their first puff on a cigarette.

The tobacco industry has already been held accountable in the nation's courts for its earlier trespasses. The industry has been stripped of much of its right to advertise its products, which we believe is an infringement of free trade and a constitutional right to market a legal product.

Consumers, still purchase tobacco products at a record pace today despite intense public awareness about the health risks associated with them. The federal government continues to subsidize the industry and state governments harvest the excise on their sale.

Go figure.

And, when the day of reckoning ends for big tobacco, which venue will hungry trial lawyers pick for their next feeding frenzy?

How long will it be before litigators represent millions of overweight American plaintiffs who conveniently claim they or their heirs had no responsibility in becoming one of the world's largest class of obese citizens.

During more than 30 years in the newspaper business, I've come across my share of bizarre characters.

And, I'm talking about the people who worked for the newspapers, not the people we covered.

In the early '70s, the Texarkana Gazette, my hometown paper, managed to put together a real collection of oddballs. There are still a lot of readers who think that group had some of the best journalists who ever worked at the newspaper, but they also included some of the most eccentric.

One of the stranger characters was Sam, a copy editor who always referred to himself as "Copy Desk." I guess it was the newspaper equivalent of calling a judge "the court."

Rain or shine, hot or cold, ol' Sam always wore the same gray sweater to work. The sweater, which had provided food for moths, had no buttons, so Sam used paperclips to hold it together.

He fell for Big Mildred, an enormous woman who pasted up pages in the composing room. The feeling wasn't mutual; Big Mildred detested Sam, even shuddered when he came into the composing room to check his pages.

One evening, Sam looked over her shoulder as she pasted up one of his pages. "Mildred, if I'd met you 20 years ago, we'd own this place," he said.

She didn't say a word, just whirled around and cut his tie in two.

A few weeks later, Sam was fired. He had a room on the second floor of an old hotel a couple of blocks from the newspaper and he started getting up early to watch women going to work in the downtown offices.

Unfortunately for Sam, he didn't put on any clothes while watching the women walking to work. One morning a group of women walking to the bank happened to look up at the second floor of the hotel and saw Sam — nude — watching them.

Sam was fired.

I never saw him again, but when I took a job with the Corpus Christi Caller-Times I heard Sam had worked there after getting fired in Texarkana.

If Sam continued to watch women walking to work, he kept his clothes on because he managed to hold onto his job at the Caller-Times for several months.

Sam's downfall at the Caller-Times was because he thought a copy editor should not have to write obituaries.

After getting off work one night, the late John Anderson, then managing editor of the paper, found the tires on his car had been slashed. He reported it to the police and called a garage to get his tires replaced.

A few days later, John found the new tires also had been slashed.

Now, he was getting worried and wondered if someone was stalking him. Again, he reported it to the police who suggested someone monitor the parking lot to see who was slashing his tires.

Nothing happened for a couple of nights, then while John and a reporter were watching from the editorial page editor's office, Sam walked up to John's car and slashed all four tires.

John was stunned. Because he'd always gotten along with Sam, he couldn't understand why the copy editor had slashed the tires.

So, he asked Sam.

"He said, 'Because you made me do obits. I'm a copy editor, not a copy boy,'" John told me.

After losing his job with the Caller-Times, Sam apparently decided not to try to get another newspaper job. I was told he went to work selling seashells at a Corpus Christi souvenir shop.

But he apparently never got over being a copy editor because, as I heard it, he bought a copy of the Caller-Times every day and read it closely, marking every typo with a red pen and showing the errors to anyone who came in the shop.

When good fortune smiles

Mauri Montgomery

Hello, Hereford.

Robert Scott and Justin McNeely are lucky to be alive. They know that better than anyone else.

The dangerous trade they are employed in is usually very unforgiving of freak accidents or mistakes. Tragedy is more often the outcome.

Both are experienced employees of Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative. Scott, who is a journeyman lineman, and McNeely, an equipment operator, were in the process of replacing a broken, yet still-charged, electric utility pole when strong winds blew the pole and its charged lines onto the boom of a nearby company truck. The truck was energized, and both DSEC employees were caught in the electrical discharge created with the outage of the 7,200-volt line.

Neither man was burned in the accident. Thankfully, they will be OK — a blessing which is attributable to a large slice of good fortune and the rigid safety measures and training the company emphasizes and practices daily.

Every week that touched the energized truck that hot and muggy Friday morning was burned. And the company later had to replace four of the six tires on the boom truck — one was completely blown out.

The risk is always there

Anyone who has spent very much time around electric line work knows the risk is always there, humming through the miles of tightly stranded aluminum wire that confines the beast and carries its immense power to homes and businesses.

I understand how lucky they were because there was a time when I was one of the biggest accidents waiting to happen at DSEC.

During the summers and Christmas holidays between my junior year at high school and my freshman year in college, I was employed as part-timer at the rural electric cooperative.

For me, it was an opportunity to earn what I considered to be lavish wages, as well as a chance to learn more about the company my father worked for.

For the real employees, it was another joyful opportunity to baby-sit one of the bosses' sons.

At any rate, I knew I had found my place after my first week as the heavy crew's newest grunt.

I loved every minute of it, and even to this day I wouldn't trade anything for the experiences I had while working on the heavy crew.

Some of those sun-baked faces I knew so well on the various crews are still out there, perhaps more-deeply creased by years of weather extremes, but still as animated with a boundless sense of humor as they ever were. Other workers have retired or have gone on to pursue new careers. Others are remembered — immortalized not only as the real characters they were, but also in some measure by the true and straight power lines they sweated to build, and which are still standing tall today.

Tough work, tough men

The work was hard, and the men were hard. They had to be.

But they were all craftsmen in their own right.

They went about the work of building long or short stretches of new power line with mechanized precision.

Much like an operating room, every man had a job. If he was good at it, he knew how and when to get his job done, and without slowing the steady progress of the crew.

God help you, if you (and I often was) were the one holding up the assembly line.

The day's dance often began in the middle of no where, between thick stands of six-foot tall and tasseling corn fields that held cooling breezes at bay and swarming mosquitoes intimately close.

Holes were dug to a precise depth; poles were framed with cross arms, cross arm braces, copper ground wire and insulators — hardware was tightened until it groaned against the creosote-soaked timber, forcing the wounded wood to bleed the black preservative that could blister the hide off a rhino.

The poles were then planted, canted for straight horizon, and tamped until they stood at attention under a relentless summer sun. And then a platoon of linemen would begin scaling the poles to lay up the power line.

The experienced journeymen made the climb look effortless. The apprentice linemen struggled and cursed, fighting the natural fear of "burning a pole" — a painful, splinter-

VIEWPOINTS

What will archeologists learn?

Dianna F. Dandridge

Archeologists busily dig up old bones, pottery, bits and pieces of cultures long gone. They endure the blistering heat of deserts and scale jagged peaks for the elusive look into past people's lives.

In some distant future, archeologists will dig up all we've left behind and try to determine exactly how we lived.

Granted, it will probably be easier because we've left untold records and accounts of our daily activities.

But in some far distant time, some really weird archeologist is going to locate some items that will all trace back to me. Those items are of course the vast number of old and decrepit vehicles I have — for what ever reason — walked away from.

Fact-happy-futuristic archeologists, encouraged by long paper trails of repair bills and payments, will ultimately lead them to the rusting bodies of all the Buick sedans, Oldsmobile Cutlasses, Ford station wagons and Plymouth minivans I've left in my wake.

It's not that I particularly enjoy the idea of littering the countryside with tons of rolling junk, it's just there comes a time when I can no longer force them to roll again.

The first car I ever owned — a 1963 Chevy Impala — began an unprecedented tradition of roadside boat anchors. I paid $150 for it and drove the car from August 1975 through March 1980 and put more than 100,000 miles on it. Even then I seemed to travel a long ways and never really go anywhere.

The only reason I ever sold the car was because a mechanic told me a complete brake job would cost more than I paid for the car.

I told the buyer it needed brakes, and she insisted her husband would take care of it. Less than two weeks later, a DPS officer called and asked about my wrecked car.

I told him I had sold the car, but apparently the buyer had never transferred the title. So it went down as the first of many to be left on the roadside.

The next car left where it quit was a 1968 Rambler. The man I bought it from guaranteed it through my last payment.

I made my final payment on Friday after I got my paycheck. On Saturday, I shifted from first to second gear, started to pass a little old lady and suddenly blue smoke came out from under the fender wells. A terrible clanking noise followed and then nothing.

When the smoke cleared, oil was pouring from the engine. I had thrown a rod and it went completely through the oil pan.

Several years passed between the Rambler and the Ford station wagon, but I'm sure enough repair bills will be located to keep the archeologists on the scent.

I'm convinced the station wagon died due to my former husband's wonderful mechanical aptitude. You know the bumper sticker that reads "I'm mechanically inclined. I screw up everything." It was made for him. After he got under the hood the first time, the old car never ran properly again. It was left somewhere between Waco and Marlin.

In the years since my marriage, I have left a brown Buick Century and a red Oldsmobile Cutlass by the wayside. They've been left with the keys in the ignition and the titles in the glove box. Good luck to anyone who thinks to drive away with them.

The latest car to add to this collection is my 1989 Plymouth minivan. I really liked the van, but in the last six months I've probably spent more than $1,000 doing more than just general repairs.

First came the front end, then a new radiator, a fuel pump, a starter, an alternator, all new hoses, a heater coil, electric window motors and under the dash rewiring.

Most of these cars, with the exception of the Chevy Impala, were found for me by well-intentioned friends. The cars I've driven and been pleased with have always been located by me.

This isn't to say I'm an expert on cars because I'm not. I just know sometimes when I first drove one of these foundlings I would get a bad impression, and just because of the situation, I would purchase it anyway. When I find a car, it either strikes me as right or not.

All this metallic roadkill will undoubtedly lead future archeologist to believe my sole purpose in life was to see how many go-mobiles I could leave. Actually, I just want to find one that goes.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS What others say

The (Portland) Oregonian, on Medicare:

The growing economy has provided President Clinton with an opportunity to do something to help the elderly, and the naysayers are already picking the proposal apart.

In a revised budget that projects much-larger-than-expected revenue surpluses, Clinton has proposed adding prescription drug coverage to Medicare. The proposed benefit is admittedly modest — $1,000 a year — and requires a $24 monthly premium payment.

But he had scarcely cleared his throat before the critics launched into all the things they think are wrong with the idea. It's enough to make you gag.

Coverage for medicine is a long-sought-after benefit for the elderly. Earlier this year, U.S. Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., outlined a more modest plan he was working on with Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine. Theirs would begin with prescription coverage for the most vulnerable seniors, those who must choose between food and medicine.

At least they're proposing solutions, not simply whining...

The critics should stop carping and come up with some proposals of their own.

Budget surpluses, projections, guesswork

Walter R. Mears
Associated Press

Watching all those forecasts of future budget surpluses roll onward and upward, the congressman called it amazing.

"It seems as if every month there is a new projection, and I have a feeling if we wait long enough, it will be a zillion dollar surplus," said Rep. Vito Fossella of New York's Staten Island.

He is a Republican, and like his party's leaders, he doesn't want to wait to cut taxes. He told the House "a big chunk of this so-called surplus" should be used for tax cuts.

House GOP leaders want cuts of about $850 billion over the next 10 years. The House Ways and Means Committee will start drafting a tax cut bill next week.

But President Clinton has other plans, for increased spending on education, the environment, new retirement tax breaks, prescription drug benefits under Medicare and other programs. He has a more limited, targeted tax cut plan; and while he said he'd consider other proposals, Democrats are saying he'd veto the kind of tax cuts the Republicans want.

Clinton and the Republicans agree that Social Security revenues, which account for 95 percent of the surplus anticipated in the next budget year, should be off-limits, not to be tapped by borrowing for general government spending as has been the pattern in the past.

The Social Security surplus is estimated at $1.9 trillion over the next decade, and both sides say that should be locked away, reducing the national debt.

That narrows the field for the certain debate over how to use the rest of the surpluses, projected at about $1 trillion over the next 10 years.

Projections are the key to all of this. Nobody doubts that there are going to be surpluses, but the detailed estimates stretching out for the next 15 years can only be educated guesswork.

The numbers assume uninterrupted economic growth over the next decade, and political decisions that shrink federal spending, to stay within limits set by a 1997 budget agreement between Congress and the White House.

Early that year, the projection for 1999 was of a $117 billion budget deficit. Revenues went up unexpectedly, Clinton and Congress made their budget deal, and the estimate was cut to $52 billion. The latest estimate is of a $120 billion surplus when this budget year ends on Sept. 30. But all of that surplus is in Social Security revenues. The budget Congress shapes with appropriations each year will still be $4 billion in deficit.

For 2000, the Congressional Budget Office projects a $14 billion surplus, but that comes with a caveat. It happens only if Congress enforces — and Clinton signs — cuts in domestic programs to abide by the 1997 caps.

Those limits squeeze spending options even more tightly in 2001 and 2002, when they expire. The assumption that they will hold is a shaky one at best, particularly with defense spending headed up and a commitment already made to put more money into road building.

Beyond that, the surplus projections assume that Congress will hold spending increases within the rate of inflation through 2009.

That would require a decade of federal spending discipline never seen before.

There are other variables. Wars and disasters cost money that can't be foreseen. The emergency appropriation Congress just passed lowers projected surpluses by $40 billion over the next 11 years, according to the Congressional Budget Office. And there certainly will be more emergency appropriations — a designation that exempts them from the spending limits — during the next 10 years.

Everything adds up to substantial surpluses well into the new century, with less certainty about how much, for all the projections that spell out totals long in advance.

There is one political certainty. Clinton and most of the members of Congress debating what to do with the money will be long out of office before the projections come due and prove right or wrong.

The Euro: New Opportunity In the Old World?

To the tourist, Europe has always seemed rather quaint: lots of little countries with distinct cultures upholding ancient customs. To international businesses, Europe has always been exasperating: lots of little countries with big tariffs, protected markets and competing currencies.

Over a weekend in January, the impossible happened: Europe changed forever. The crazy quilt of countries became a colossus — one market of nearly 300 million people with one currency, the euro. The 11 countries that use the euro even have a new nickname: Euroland. Somehow, they overcame nationalistic backbiting, lowered their debt, wrestled inflation to the mat and formed the world's most powerful new currency. In the next few years, they will phase out their national currencies completely.

What does this mean to you, the individual investor? That depends on your point of view. Pessimists see the euro as a threat. Commodities like oil could suddenly be traded in euros, thus putting pressure on the U.S. dollar. Even more dire, the doomsayers think, is the possibility that foreign investors will abandon their traditional safe haven of U.S. bonds — with which they have financed U.S. debt — in favor of new euro-based investments.

Two forces should keep these possibilities in check. One, if the euro becomes too strong, European exports will become too expensive. Two, the U.S. dollar reflects a strong economy, low inflation and a stable government — all attractive qualities in the eyes of foreign investors seeking security.

Before worrying too much about the downside to the introduction of the euro, savvy investors will look for the opportunities the euro provides. For example, the euro brings more global financial stability to the market since there are now fewer currencies open to attack by speculators and hedge funds. Also, the business of moving money from country to country has suddenly become much more streamlined. Gone are the currency fluctuations that made doing business in Europe so difficult. Gone are the tariffs designed to protect domestic markets but that raised costs when, for instance, auto parts made in Italy were trucked to a factory in Germany.

Who benefits first from the new streamlined Europe? International companies that already have a presence on the continent will feel an almost immediate impact. For them, the cost of doing business across so many borders has suddenly dropped. That means more profits and a better return to shareholders.

The improved financial flow brought about by the introduction of the euro will continue to have positive reverberations for years to come. That means Europe is becoming an exciting new world of opportunity for investors.

inflicting slide down a 30-foot pole that came when a sharpened climbing gaff wasn't driven into the pole with a solid bite.

In my view, the lineman's job was, and still is, the most-grueling bird's-eye work performed at the utility.

Part of the grunt's job, at least then, was to shoulder the lineman's rather blunt frustration with the world, his fears and the exhaustion that comes from climbing and re-climbing poles; and leaning full-length against the security of a safety strap and planted gaffs while putting up or tying in electric line and transformers.

And despite the linemen and other heavy crew members' best effort in doing not only their jobs, but also babysitting the boss' son — watching him around heavy machinery and especially around the beast they tamed every day — there were still a couple of times when they were distracted long enough to let me get myself into a sticky wicket.

I was replacing a broken guy wire once (a cable that often anchors the tailend of a line), and the crew chief told me to drop what I was doing and then to look up.

The twisted and coiled wire I had been wrestling with for 10 minutes was bouncing back and forth like a ping pong ball between the two very live terminals of an electrical transformer.

I wouldn't have received anywhere near the 7,200 volts Scott and McNeely were hit with, but the moment served as reminder to me and the alert equipment operator that I held great potential as an accident waiting to happen.

Good fortune and a good babysitter watched out for me on that and other occasions at DSEC. The proof of that good fortune is that I, like Scott and McNeely, am still here to talk about it.

WTAMU offers expertise

Area companies can obtain specialized training for workers

Special to The Brand

CANYON -- Area companies wishing to obtain advanced, specialized business training for groups of employees now can turn to West Texas A&M University, saving on costly out-of-town travel while tapping the expertise of doctoral-level faculty.

The Office of Business Resources (OBR) at the university's T. Boone Pickens College of Business will open its doors in mid-August when renovations to Room 101 in the Classroom Center are complete. However, the program for which the office has been designed was launched in June when 15 computer programmers and engineers from Mason & Hanger Corp.'s Pantex Plant completed the OBR's first offering on campus, a three-day programming course.

"The purpose of the Office of Business Resources is to provide an option for businesses that wish to outsource portions of their current training programs. The OBR will provide them with special expertise in certain areas of training that they do not otherwise have available," Dr. John College, dean of the Pickens College of Business, said. "We are not offering generic packages. This program is aimed at providing specific needs that fit individual corporate environments, and we bid to provide those services."

"We're developing a state-of-the-art corporate training room with computer capabilities and multiple site link capabilities to facilitate training. We really expect this thing to take off," he said.

Training is available in all areas of business, from management and finance to computer information systems and accounting. Dr. Terri Giddens, associate professor of computer information systems, handled the inaugural training session for the group from Pantex, which spent three days learning the intricacies of a Microsoft program called C++.

"C++ is a programming language that is very specialized," Giddens said. "The feedback was really good. We're obviously pleased to be able to do these sessions because it gives us a chance to be more on the edge of what's occurring in industry."

Giddens said it has long been common for area businesses to send their employees as far away as San Francisco to get the training they need. By utilizing WTAMU's faculty, the OBR can eliminate much of that travel, she said.

"If the companies in our area can get the training they need locally, they're better off," Giddens said. "We're offering something that Amarillo has not previously had -- high-level business training. We want companies in our area to look to us for their high-level training because it's something we can definitely provide."

If a business is looking for a specific training that the WTAMU faculty is unable to provide, Cooley said OBR would not hesitate to bring in a speaker or expert from outside the area.

For more information about the OBR and the programs that are available, contact Cooley at 651-2530 or jcooley@mail.wtamu.edu.

Grad student to be intern for Combest

Special to The Brand

CANYON -- A graduate student at West Texas A&M University student will leave her Texas roots behind this fall to spend a semester in the bustling nation's capitol, attending congressional committee meetings, conduct research in the Library of Congress and corresponding with constituents in Texas' 19th Congressional District.

Julie Hancock, a graduate student in agriculture from Denver City, will serve as an intern with U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, starting Aug. 31.

"I think this experience will give me a better understanding of how government actually works," Hancock said. "Since the 2000 election season is getting closer, I think I'll get to see a lot of interesting events that most citizens do not have a chance to see."

The 19th District Public Policy Internship Program is sponsored by Combest's office, WTAMU and Texas Tech University. Each semester, one student from each school is selected to participate.

Hancock said she chose to apply for the internship because of her interest and studies in agriculture. Combest is chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

"Knowing Mr. Combest is chairman of the agriculture committee piqued my interest," Hancock said.

Combest, a 1969 WTAMU graduate, said the internship provides students the opportunity to further their understanding of public policy.

AC schedules 'Boot Camp'

Special to The Brand

AMARILLO -- The deadline is July 20 for Amarillo College's "Badger Boot Camp."

The camp for incoming first-year students will be 9:30 a.m.-2 p.m. Aug. 3 at the college.

College officials also invite students and their parents to enlist in this special training session. For a fee of $10, students will receive a T-shirt, a college planner and lunch. Parents may have lunch for $5. Registration is limited to 150 students, and overnight lodging is available for out-of-town students and their parents at the Amarillo technical Center.

This is the first year parents are participating in orientation activities at AC.

"Orientation is for all new students; however, it is especially helpful for first-generation college students and their parents," said Renea Bell, director of Enrollment Management. "We hope to help the whole family understand the efforts of the college students and, ultimately, into their success."

"When parents know what is expected of their sons and daughters at Amarillo College, they may become even more supportive. They will have a better idea of the study hours required for college courses compared to high school ones and as such they can help the student adjust work hours, expectations within the family, such as babysitting siblings, and that type of thing."

Besides informational sessions, students will participate in games, tours and a scavenger hunt. Optional advising and registration will be available for students who have completed testing requirements.

AC Student Services and the Student Training and Retraining Program are sponsoring the event.

For more information, call 371-5303.

WTAMU receives ed grant

Special to The Brand

CANYON -- West Texas A&M University has received an $800,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education to prepare low-income and first-generation undergraduate students for doctoral studies.

The Ronald E. McNair Postbaccalaureate Achievement Program (McNair) will be funded at WTAMU through approximately $200,000 in federal money each of the next four years. Designed to prepare students for graduate studies and beyond, McNair is for students from disadvantaged backgrounds who have demonstrated strong academic potential.

Through this program, at least 10 economically disadvantaged WTAMU undergraduates will receive $2,400 stipends annually to conduct summer research under the guidance of faculty mentors, who will help them prepare for doctoral studies through involvement in research and other scholarly activities. Approximately 10 more students will receive program assistance such as tutoring, counseling, financial aid advising and exposure to graduate-related studies aimed at preparing them for the following round of research stipends.

For more information about the McNair program, contact Mike Cook, director of Student Support Services, at 806-651-2352.

Keeping Active

Baseball/Football players keeping in shape with baseball and other activities before gridiron season

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

Summer is usually a time of fun when someone is a teenager.

A time to hang out with friends, make some extra money while working a part-time job, play sports and just having fun.

This sounds so familiar to many of us since we all experienced this in the past.

But like every summer, it goes fast and then it's back to school.

What a bummer.

A few young men in Hereford are experiencing the same things like many of us older folks have experienced.

These young men play baseball for the Hereford Braves and have part time jobs to make money, too. Of course, baseball is not the job.

They play from the beginning of summer to the end of July, with hardly any rest.

Then there's a meager two-week break before they put on helmets and pads and prepare for the fall football season.

Looks like they do not get any rest. But it usually helps once two-a-day football practices starts.

Maybe it hurts them by wearing them down.

Question is how much does it help or hurt?

"I don't think it hurts," said Hereford football player L.J. Vallejo, who plays third base for the Braves. "We all go lift, run play hoops. We just stay active."

Vallejo, along with Eddie Lacey, Andrew Ramirez, Ramiro Zambrano, J.P. Holman, Kyle Artho and George Castillo, keep in shape with football as they play baseball in the summer.

These are two contrasting sports - football and baseball. One game is slow paced. Another is physical, fast and has a history of producing many injuries.

"If anything, the endurance and strength will be a weakness once football starts," Vallejo said. "In baseball, you don't run as much."

It's something that concerns many, especially when the risk of injury is possible.

One Brave catcher and Whiteface defensive back is not at all worried.

"It's all in your mind," said Braves catcher Ramiro Zambrano. "You just got to go work out, go lift, run, go to baseball practice and just go through it."

It is, of course, easier said than done.

The Braves have a tournament scheduled for the weekend of July 25 and 26 and ends their summer baseball season.

Then they have two weeks before they start football two-a-days in early August.

"I think two weeks rest will be alright," said Braves pitcher Eddie Lacey. "We'll probably be a little rusty, but I don't think it will matter much with our scrimmages and practices."

They also must contend with extreme heat and high temperatures, which can reach over 120 degrees with football pads and helmets.

"The first few days will be pretty rough for us in two-a-days," Zambrano said. "You just get your running in the summer in and get some laps."

All this will not matter for the Braves/Whitefaces once football season starts. But at least they had a good summer.

Soccer on a roll, like it or not

As I was passing North Lee Street on my way to the Hereford Brand on Friday, three children, two of them girls, were playing soccer in their front yard with an old, beaten volleyball.

YURI SOTO

The girls were wearing volleyball knee guards in place of shin guards.

The smallest of the two girls was playing the goalie. Guarding her goal with all of her little might.

At this time in the year, could you imagine how many girls ages 5 to 18 are doing the same thing right at that moment? Well, it could be millions. And we have players like Mia Hamm and Tisha Venturini to thank for that.

Hamm and Venturini are just part of the boom in the nation's boom of women's soccer popularity. The popularity will reach its climax today when the U.S. Women's Soccer team takes the field against China in the final of the 1999 Women's World Cup Championship.

That popularity has even produced many firsts in America. It was the first time since Pope John Paul II prayed there that Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., was filled to capacity back in June for the U.S. 3-0 victory against Denmark.

Not even New York Giants and New York Jets games ever fill in the 75,000-seat facility.

It will also mark another attendance record in women's sports. A crowd of 90,000 at the historic Rose Bowl will mark the largest crowd for a women's sports event.

And the media coverage has been very well focused. As focused as the O.J. Simpson trial in 1994.

It all comes down to it, "women's sports are here to stay." Soccer especially.

Mexico, who suffered a first-round elimination in the World Cup, used players who play collegiately in the U.S. They were granted permission to play since their mothers are born in Mexico.

Things changed from the days were girls could not play sports nearly 21 years ago.

Of course, Title IX was established and the rest is women sports history.

Soccer maybe the most popular sport among young women today, and millions of girls playing in parks and front yards imitating their heroes like Mia Hamm and Tisha Venturini will be watching them today.

Today is a great day to be a soccer fan and a fan of women's sports.

"Women's soccer is here to stay." Hereford will soon catch up with the rest of the world and have women's soccer, whether some like it or not.

Sele, Rangers oust Padres, 7-2

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Aaron Sele overcame his mistakes while Woody Williams didn't, which made all the difference for the Texas Rangers.

Sele won for the first time in four starts and Ivan Rodriguez, Ruben Mateo and Royce Clayton homered as the AL West-leading Rangers beat the San Diego Padres 7-2 Friday night.

All three homers came off Woody Williams (4-7), who has allowed seven in his last two starts. Williams gave up four at Colorado in the first game of a doubleheader last Saturday as the Padres' 14-game winning streak ended.

Sele, meanwhile, escaped bases-loaded jams in the second and fourth innings, which allowed him to take a shutout into the seventh.

The Padres loaded the bases with none out in the second and failed to score, as rookie Ben Davis struck out and Damian Jackson hit a comebacker to start a 1-2-3 double play.

"The most important out was the catcher, Davis, because now you've got the chance to get the double play," Sele said. "Then you have to try to pitch to get one of those and I was fortunate enough to do that."

Sele (8-6) got Jackson to hit into his first double play of the year.

"You've got a very speedy guy and you've got to get him to hit the perfect ball, because he doesn't hit into too many double plays," manager Johnny Oates.

Two innings later, the Padres loaded the bases with two outs and Williams grounded weakly to third base.

Rodriguez, voted the AL's starting catcher for Tuesday night's All-Star game, hit a solo shot with one out in the first inning, his 15th. Mateo, who came off the disabled list earlier in the day, homered

Dougherty maintains lead at Senior Open

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Rain softened the course and led to improved scores Friday in the U.S. Senior Open.

But no one improved enough to catch Ed Dougherty, who came in with a 3-under-par 69 and opened a three-stroke lead midway through the event.

Dougherty, who led by two strokes Thursday, stood at 7-under-par 137 heading into the final two rounds of a tournament that has drawn massive crowds at the Des Moines Golf and Country Club.

Steady Dave Eichelberger was alone in second at 140 after a 69 that included just one bogey. Leonard Thompson, Gil Morgan and Bob Duval were next at 141. Thompson and Duval shot 68s, the best rounds of the day, and Morgan had a 71.

Dougherty won only once on the PGA Tour and has yet to win as a senior. So why is he playing so well now?

"I'm just playing golf," he said. "If I had the answers, I would have done it 25 years ago, I'll tell you that. I just tried to relax and enjoy the day." Dougherty's second straight solid round came on a day spiced by a hole-in-one and Arnold Palmer wondering aloud about his golfing future after missing the cut in the Senior Open for the first time since 1991.

Palmer shot an 84 after opening with an 81. The 84 included a two-stroke penalty for an improper putting stance and gave him his worst score ever in the Senior Open.

"This is terrible, the last two days," Palmer said. "I don't know that I will play much more competition like this. I may play a few tournaments, a Masters or something like that. But unless I start hitting it a lot better in Latrobe, I am not going to take it anywhere."

Rain overnight slowed the treacherous, rolling greens that proved so troublesome on Thursday, when only 11 golfers broke par.

"These conditions were much easier than yesterday," said Thompson, who improved five strokes. "Yesterday, it was like somebody had an ax over your head and at any minute they could lop you right off."

Unlike Thursday, when he bogeyed three of the first eight holes, Dougherty got off to a fast start Friday with two straight birdies and felt he made only one major mistake.

That happened on No. 9, a par-5, when he tried to get aggressive and put himself in position for a birdie. Instead, he missed the green with a wedge and bogeyed the hole.

"I sort of got off my game plan," Dougherty said. "That is what a golf pro told me years ago. He says you make pars, birdies just happen. When you try to make birdies, bogeys come. On the back nine, I went back to my game plan."

Morgan had a chance to draw even closer with putts of 15 and 12 feet for birdie on the last two holes, but he missed both.

"I had a couple of opportunities," Morgan said. "If I could have made a couple of putts, it would be really exciting."

with a 72, which left him six strokes back at 143. J.C. Snead, Bruce Summerhays, Joe Inman, Tom Wargo, Jose Maria Canizares and Joe Inman also were at 143.

Despite his mediocre play, Palmer was far and away the top draw with the crowds, which have reached proportions never before seen for a Senior Open.

The crowd count of 38,400 Friday brought the total for the week, including practice rounds, to 154,400.

"This championship is one that has had a great deal of support from the community, from the state," Palmer said. "If my coming here helped to increase or improve that, that would be good enough reason for me being here."

U.S. team looks at success

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — On the eve of the most anticipated game in women's soccer history, several players felt it was time to sit back, look around and give their impressions of the incredibly successful Women's World Cup.

The United States meets China on Saturday at the Rose Bowl for the third women's world championship. A sellout crowd approaching 90,000 and including President Clinton will be there. Many of the fans will have painted faces or will be wearing U.S. flags. Or both.

Television ratings should be strong, even on a Saturday afternoon and considering this is women's soccer, after all. With the exception of the 1996 Olympics, mainstream America generally has ignored the sport.

This U.S. team, with lots of help from China, Brazil, Nigeria, Norway and the other nations in the tournament, has created something very special out of the World Cup. The Americans recognize that.

"I am proud of this team and the way we have handled ourselves since Day 1 in residency camp," star forward Mia Hamm said as she sat with her left leg wrapped in ice and leisurely spoke with the mass of media in a Rose Bowl locker room. "The way we have carried ourselves on and off the field has been awesome."

"We have been asked to do a lot off the field, and we've pretty much done all of it with the understanding of how important it is for women's soccer. We've pretty much done it with a smile and, in the same arena, we have been trying to prepare to play the best teams in the world."

They've prepared well enough to have gone 5-0 and allowed only three goals while scoring 18. China has been even more impressive, scoring 19 and yielding two.

And now, fittingly, the two best teams in the world meet for the crown. "We are still getting better," China coach Ma Yuanan said. Then he got mystical.

"They've learned the meaning of soccer. Soccer itself has its own nature."

They have mastered the nature of soccer. They have confidence, which comes from the three games with the USA and winning two.

While China's journey has been longer in miles, U.S. forward Tiffeny Milbrett doesn't think anyone has spent more time or more effort getting this far than the Americans. Nor has anyone spent more time or effort in helping this World Cup exceed all expectations.

On Saturday, though, things change. "We felt that pressure of getting to the final and what it would mean for the tournament. We did that for America, for the fans," Milbrett said.

"This is all about the players now. This is our trophy, it's for us. Hopefully, we can allow Americans to share it with us."

"Getting to the finals was for the fans. This is for us." Will it be victory for them? While that has been the goal all along and a defeat will be a bitter disappointment, the Americans comprehend just how much good work they have done — and how much goodwill they have created.

"I don't think if we win or lose will have that much of an impact, because this tournament has been a tremendous success already," Hamm said. "And this team has been able to bring about a lot of excitement and recognition for women's sports."

"But I think people also realized how well the other teams play and how entertaining our game is. The World Cup has achieved what all of us wanted it to."

Mets beat Yanks at Shea

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Piazza hit a tiebreaking three-run homer and A. Leiter outpitched Roger Clemens for the second time in a month, leading the New York Mets over the Yankees 5-2 Friday night in the opener of Subway Series Part Two.

After the Yankees tied the game at 2 in the top of the sixth, Edgardo Alfonzo opened the bottom of the inning with a single. John Olerud walked and Piazza hit a scorcher into the bleachers.

Leiter (8-6) allowed two runs and four hits in eight innings.

The Mets scored in the second when Brian McRae doubled and came home on Rey Ordonez's single.

Ordonez saved at least one run in the first with a sliding stop of a grounder by Paul O'Neill to the right of second base. Ordonez threw out O'Neill.

The Yankees tied it on Chuck Knoblauch's RBI single in the third, but the Mets went back ahead on Olerud's solo homer.

Clemens allowed nine hits and five runs in six innings. Armando Benitez pitched the save.

Astros beat Royals, 6-5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City's hottest RBI man was facing a pitcher with a 1-9 record.

The bases were loaded in the ninth. There was only one out.

Then, much to Mike Sweeney's consternation, there was only one pitch.

Swinging at a low breaking ball, Sweeney grounded to second baseman Craig Biggio, who started an easy 4-6-3 double play that preserved Houston's 6-5 victory over the Royals Friday night and gave Chris Holt his first career save.

"One pitch is all it takes. Strikeouts are overrated," Holt joked.

Holt, a starter who was sent to the bullpen on strictly a fill-in basis for this final three-game series before the All-Star break, was summoned after Carlos Beltran and Joe Randa, who went 5-for-5, hit RBI singles and Johnny Damon walked.

"I went in there and tried to throw the two-seamer down and got the ground ball I needed," said Holt. "That's what we had to have. It's a big win for us."

Holt also pitched an inning of hitless relief against Arizona the night before, but he has no plans to start a new career as a reliever.

"Absolutely not. I'm a starting pitcher," he said. "I'm not a 1-9 pitcher. I'm just going to start the second half 0-0."

He was facing the Royals' hottest hitter. Sweeney had already driven in two runs Friday night and earlier in the week tied an AL record by getting an RBI in 13 straight games.

"Sure he's hot. But it was the right time for us to maybe cool him down," said Holt. "It wasn't a particularly good situation for us."

Sweeney swung at the low breaking pitch and bounced it to second.

"I swung at probably a bad pitch," said Sweeney. "Unfortunately, I didn't get the job done. I'm willing to take that loss on my shoulders. If I'm a betting man, I get the job done more times than I don't."

Royals manager Tony Muser said Sweeney may have been over-anxious.

"I think Michael swung at a borderline pitch," he said. "He's a gamer. He wants to be the guy."

Jose Cabrera (1-0), called up from Triple-A New Orleans earlier in the day, got his first major league victory by getting three outs in the eighth as the Royals lost for the seventh time in 10 games.

Bill Spiers hit a tie-breaking double off Jeff Montgomery in the Astros ninth and Carl Everett added a two-run single.

Montgomery (1-4), the Royals' career saves leader who has fallen upon hard times at the age of 37, started the ninth and walked Biggio on four pitches.

Biggio stole second and took third on an infield out before Jeff Bagwell, who had hit his 28th home run, was intentionally walked. Spiers followed with a double on a ball that Beltran failed to make a shoestring catch on in center field.

Kiggins looking for second win at Michelob Classic

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It has been a long time between wins for Lisa Kiggins.

Kiggins admitted to some self-imposed pressure to do well in today's third round of the Michelob Light Classic. Her only tour victory came at the Rochester International in 1994.

"Hey, I'm just glad to make the cut," the Bakersfield, Calif., native joked Friday after a 6-under 66 on the par-72 course at Forest Hills Country Club for a 135 total.

Kiggins said she felt relaxed after the good round.

"Things are going well," she said. "I've gone two days without a bogey. I'm just tickled. I've been very patient. It's been five years since I won."

Kiggins finished one stroke ahead of Tina Barrett, Thursday's leader, and Nancy Scranton.

Eleven golfers were not able to complete the second round because of rain. They will finish this morning.

Scranton, 5-under after her first round, played consistently Friday and didn't let some bad breaks rattle her.

"I'm really comfortable," said the Centralia, Ill., native after a 3-under 69 in the $800,000 tournament.

"I made a lot of really good swings and I was rolling them pretty good, too. Some of them just didn't drop in."

With a chance to go 9 under on the par-4 17th, Scranton hit a slightly downhill putt that ran to the lip of the cup and somehow stopped.

"That green slopes so much," she said later. "I just didn't think it could just hang there."

On the par-5 18th, Scranton hit a 9-iron to what she hoped would be several paces past the hole. The ball hit the pin a couple of feet above the ground and bounced 30 feet away.

"I hit such a good shot there," Scranton said. "I knew I had to get it past the hole because my ball had been backing up all day. But it hit the pin and bounced."

Her birdie putt just missed and she had to settle for par to end the round.

Comets survive Mercury

Tech's Sheryl Swoopes shoots 18-footer to close out resurgent Phoenix

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix Mercury coach Cheryl Miller may have found the way to push her players to do their utmost: Get kicked out of a game.

Miller was assessed a second technical foul and was removed because of it as the Mercury lost to the Houston Comets 71-70 Friday night on Sheryl Swoopes' 10-foot jumper with 18.7 seconds left.

The Mercury's last chance went awry when Jennifer Gillom launched an 18-footer that circled the rim and came out with 4 seconds left.

Gillom said she thought the shot would go in. "I had the follow-through," she said. "That's my favorite shot."

Phoenix staged a 17-8 run that started with Miller's ejection — her second this year and the fourth in her three years with the WNBA career.

"I think win or lose, this has changed the tone of the season," said Miller, who was hobbling about in blue jeans while nursing an Achilles tendon tear.

The Mercury trailed 61-53 when Miller argued with official Lamont Simpson about what she thought was charging on a 3-pointer by Houston's Cynthia Cooper, who finished with 13 points. The debate earned her her second technical foul of the game and her eighth this year.

Mercury center Marlies Askamp scored nine of her 10 points in the run and gave Phoenix a 70-69 lead with two free throws with 39 seconds left.

The Comets (12-2) ended the first half with a 33-27 lead. Swoopes scored 14 of her 18 points in the second half, and Cooper, another WNBA all-star, produced 11 of 13 during the same period. Polina Tzekova had 15 overall.

Michelle Timms led the Mercury (3-9) with a season- and game-high 22 points, 12 in the first half. Besides providing five assists, she held Cooper to nine points off her WNBA-leading average.

"This time we're upset but we're energized," Timms said. "We know we're that bit closer to getting it right. We could taste it. For the first time this season there's some light at the end of the tunnel."

Gillom added 15.

"I'm feeling good right now," Gillom said later. "I can't hold me head down right now."

With its fifth loss in a row, the team is only two defeats short of its entire regular-season total last year, when the Mercury wound up losing to Houston in the WNBA finals.

"We do need a 'W,'" Gillom said. "We can't keep saying next time, next time. If we play like we did tonight, 'W's are coming."

However, the Mercury made only 2 of 12 3-pointers to 5 of 10 for Houston and only 18 of 23 free throws, to 20 of 22 for Houston.

leading off the fourth and Clayton hit a two-run shot with two outs in the sixth.

After the game, Williams sat at his locker with his head in his hands, staring at the floor for about 20 minutes.

"It's a low point in my pitching and it's bringing everyone down around me," Williams said. "Every time I make a mistake it's pretty much pounded. There's no quality in anything I'm doing right now."

Mark McLemore had an RBI single in the fourth, and Rusty Greer and Juan Gonzalez hit consecutive sacrifice flies in the ninth.

Sele was chased in the seventh by two-out RBI singles by Quilvio Veras and Reggie Sanders. Left-hander Mike Venafro came on with runners on first and second and struck out pinch-hitter Phil Nevin.

Sanders said he wasn't impressed with videotapes of Sele's previous performances. "But tonight, he spotted his balls very well. He had his curveball working and kept us off balance. He pitched a good game."

Said Oates: "Aaron threw some very good curveballs tonight, almost unhittable. They respected his curveball a great deal and he was able to throw some fastballs by people."

Sele allowed two runs and nine hits in 6 2-3 innings, struck out eight and walked three.

The Rangers ended Eric Owens' 18-game hitting streak, which was a career-best and the team's season-high. Sanders extended his hitting streak to a career-best 14, and Dave Magadan went 3-for-3, all leadoff singles.

Rules of GOLF

Editor's Note: Upon the suggestion of one of our regular readers, who finds great frustration in playing with those who faint ignorance of golf rules sanctioned by both the United States Golf Association and The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, Scotland, we've decided to publish the Rules of Golf each week in our summer sports pages when space permits.

Rule 3. Stroke Play

3-3. Doubt as to Procedure a. PROCEDURE

In stroke play only, when during play of a hole, a competitor is doubtful of his rights or procedure, he may, without penalty, play a second ball. After the situation which caused the doubt has arisen, the competitor should, before taking further action, announce to his marker or a fellow-competitor his decision to invoke this Rule and the ball with which he will score if the Rules permit.

The competitor shall report the facts to the Committee before returning his score card unless he scores the same with both balls; if he fails to do so, he shall be disqualified.

B. DETERMINATION OF SCORE FOR HOLE

If the Rules allow the procedure selected in advance by the competitor, the score with the ball selected shall be his score for the hole.

If the competitor fails to announce in advance his decision to invoke this Rule or his selection, the score with the original ball or, if the original ball is not one of the balls being played, the first ball put into play shall count if the Rules allow the procedure adopted for such ball.

Small piece of paper instills pride

By Becky Thorn
Brand Lifestyles Editor

For Marie De Leon, pride is a tangible thing in the shape of a Texas drivers license.

De Leon has completed a course offered by Celia Serrano, Panhandle Community Services Hereford center coordinator, and has passed both her written and driving test to get her license.

The course was made possible because Serrano set a goal in keeping with PCS's objective of helping others to help themselves. Serrano saw that some of her clients needed a drivers license in order to improve their quality of life so she originated the classes.

De Leon is the first student from the first class to reach the ultimate objective of obtaining that freedom-giving document.

While De Leon already knew how to read and write English, she admits she was scared of taking the written test.

"At that moment I didn't have enough confidence in myself. I was afraid I would fail the test and then I would not want to go back," De Leon said.

"But Celia gave me the confidence. She believed in me. I really want to thank her because she took the time to sit with me and study with me for the five sessions and she really believed in me."

"We didn't do it, she did it herself. She set her mind that she was going to do this. All I did was serve as motivator, so Marie should be proud of herself," Serrano rejoined.

It's not the laminated copy, complete with notoriously bad picture, but Marie De Leon still displays her newly-acquired drivers license with pride.

De Leon's pride is well justified, because now that she has a drivers license she can work towards getting her own car, which will make her self-sufficient, according to Serrano.

While Serrano describes De Leon as capable, she felt that she was intimidated by others. But this has also begun to change.

"I am willing to help others to work with Celia to get their drivers license now, too, because it means a lot when somebody else is there for you," De Leon said.

Taking the written test wasn't so hard, according to De Leon. Actually, she said, it took her longer to complete the necessary forms than it did to take the test, which she passed with only two incorrect answers.

She was so proud to have passed it on the first try. De Leon knew she had two more chances to pass the test, but she didn't want to go back, she said.

Even though drivers licenses are notorious for having really bad pictures, De Leon doesn't care.

"It doesn't matter as long as I have that little card," she said.

And she now has that card, proudly, in her possession.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: On your next airline flight, I hope you are squeezed into half a seat against an obese stranger who has raised the armrest because he can't fit into one seat. The airlines should have a scale by the ticket counter, and anyone who appears to weigh 300 pounds or more should be made to buy two seats.

On a flight from New York to Los Angeles, I was seated next to a human whale. The man weighed at least 350 pounds. He wheezed and perspired throughout the entire trip. If fat passengers get weighed in, normal people can enjoy the space we pay for. — A Square From Oneonta, N.Y.

Dear Square: You say you want fat passengers weighed at the checkout counter like cattle and charged by the pound? You can't be serious. In addition to the problems they already have, you want to add humiliation? Your mean-spiritedness and lack of compassion sadden me. There are laws against discrimination, and overweight people are protected by this legislation, as well they should be. Keep reading for more on this subject.

From Bay City, Mich.: I have struggled with weight problems all my life, so my heart went out to the obese woman who was seated next to the complaining couple from Denver. It would not have hurt the Denver pair to put up with a few hours of discomfort and show a little sympathy for the oversized passenger, who, I'm sure, has suffered plenty because of her size.

Arlington, Va.: Fat people face discrimination everywhere. We are unable to enjoy the rides in amusement parks because we can't fit into the seats. As for shopping for clothes, if the top fits, the bottom doesn't. In restaurants, we can barely squeeze into a booth. What is "normal size"? My size is normal for me.

Van Nuys, Calif.: Don't we have enough problems with anorexia and body image complexes? Now, the airlines have shrunk their seats and made matters worse. Why must they try to pack in a few more people?

New York: The worst are inconsiderate businessmen who whip out laptop computers and swing their elbows in your face. I once sat next to a guy with a briefcase the size of Texas, and he kept it on his tray table for the entire flight. I have never been so close to blowing up.

Fort Worth, Texas: Airline ads that stress safety and comfort make me laugh. I've been seated next to the morbidly obese, screaming infants and garlic lovers. Leaning into the aisle is no solution. It can get you run over by a beverage cart.

Toronto: On our honeymoon, bound for Hawaii, my husband and I were seated next to an enormous man. He was nearest the exit door. In an emergency, he never could have gotten out of his seat. The flight attendant said if she moved him, he could sue the airline for discrimination. How do you like them apples?

Providence, R.I.: Why don't you feel sorry for those of us who are forced to sit next to obese passengers? Have you ever tried to read a book or eat a meal in this position? And what about when you need to use the bathroom, knowing it will take an obese person five minutes to dislodge himself from the seat? People in the United States are getting more obese every day, and the number of airline passengers is on the rise. For those of us who cannot afford first class, this is unfair and downright dangerous.

Agana, Guam: If the airlines are interested in passenger comfort, as their ads claim, they should redesign their planes so the person in front of you can't tilt his seat so far back that he is in your lap. It's all about money, honey.

Dear Guam: Of course it's all about money. Running an airline is a business, and the business of business is to make a profit.

San Antonio couple exchanges vows

Mrs. Joel Turner
...nee Gina Brisendine

Brisendine, Turner united in marriage

Gina Brisendine of Hereford and Joel Turner of Southlake exchanged wedding vows in an evening ceremony on July 10 in the First Baptist Church of Grapevine.

The bride is the daughter of Mickey and Michelle Brisendine of Hereford.

The bridegroom is the son of Keith and Cathy Turner of Southlake.

Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Melburn Sibley of the First Baptist Church of Grapevine.

Dana Brisendine, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Wendy Brisendine, sister of bride; Elizabeth Turner, sister of the groom; Diane Nino; and Deidra Whipple.

Matt Turner, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen included Jon Lineberger, Leland Wells, Eric Higgins and Jeff McCutcheon.

Justin Turner, younger brother of the groom, served as an usher and presented a special scripture reading during the ceremony. Serving as ushers and candle lighters were Brad Anderson and David Dyer.

The bride's cousin, Elizabeth Hillish, served as a flower girl. Krista Hendrick, cousin of the bride, registered guests. The registry table and programs featured a poem written for the couple by the bride's mother.

Music was provided by organist, Sue Tate, and vocalist, Wendy Brisendine, who sang the Ave Maria during the lighting of the Unity Candle.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a sleeveless gown with a sweetheart neckline and corset style bodice covered in embroidered appliques and pearls. The bouffant tulle skirt was sprinkled with matching appliques and flowed into a Kimberly Jan Schumacher and Alejandro Ortiz, both of San Antonio, were united in marriage May 29 in St. Louis Catholic Church in Castroville.

The bride is the daughter of Jean Schumacher and Al Schumacher of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Celia Ortiz of El Paso and the late Nicholas Ortiz.

Father Jim Conway officiated at the ceremony.

Matron of honor was Carrie Papon. Best man was Ruben Ortiz.

Bridesmaids were Jennifer Henslee, Kelli Devault, Brooke Schumacher, Diane Adams and Chelli Cummings.

Serving as groomsmen were Glen Akers, Michael Devault, Karl Schumacher, Morgan Jeffcoat and Danny Martin.

Leroy Jackson served as usher.

Flower girl was Justine Adams, daughter of Diane and Charlie Adams.

Ring bearers were Michael Angelo Vitale, son of Angelica and Jim Vitale, and Nicholas Storm Huffaker, son of Cecilia and Michael Huffaker.

Serving as readers were Marina Ortiz and Kim Gonzales.

Gift bearers were Santana and Kim Gonzales and their children, Jessica, Jeremy, Victoria and Dylan.

Music was provided by the St. Louis Church Choir with Wanda Haby as vocalist.

The bride wore a sleeveless sheath dress of candlelight Italian satin with a detachable train, detailed with embroidered border print, scoop neckline and covered buttons in the back leading down to sheer rosettes fashioned at the back of the waist.

The dress was complimented with a satin flowered headpiece and cathedral length veil accented with Venice lace appliques and iridescent pearls.

She carried a teardrop bouquet of white porcelain roses, lace, gold ribbon and pearls.

As "something old" the bride wore her mother's three-strand pearl choker with a diamond buckle. As "something blue" she had a blue piece of her grandmother's wedding dress sewn in the hem of her dress. "Something borrowed" was a diamond set gold bracelet of Marina Ortiz and a ring from her matron of honor given for her sweet 16 by her grandmother.

Bridal attendants wore deep burgundy floor-length gowns of soft crepe with a square neckline and v-neck back accented by a detachable sheer train which was attached to sheer rosettes at the waist. Accessories of pearl necklaces with pearl teardrop earrings, given by the bride, were worn by the bridesmaids. Each carried a bouquet of white baby tulips.

Following the wedding, a formal dinner, followed by dancing, was held at the Alsatian Chalet.

Each table held a tall bouquet of cotton candy roses in an antique gold vase surrounded by tealight candles. At each setting were gold-wrapped chocolates in a tulle pouch tied with burgundy ribbon.

The three-tier white Victorian style wedding cake was covered with falling vines, grapes and morning glories made of cream and white buttercream icing, topped with a soft white porcelain bride and groom.

After a seven-day Royal Caribbean cruise, the couple is at home in San Antonio.

The bride is employed at La Petite Academy Pre-School in San Antonio as assistant director and is attending San Antonio College pursuing a degree in education.

The groom is owner and manager of Glowmasters Maintenance Services and is attending Palo Alto College in San Antonio pursuing a degree in business management.

Military Muster

Marine Pvt. Robert M. Cozby, son of Robert M. Cozby Sr. and Brenda House of Hereford, recently completed basic training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

Cozby successfully completed 12 weeks of training designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally.

Cozby and fellow recruits participated in the physical conditioning program and spent numerous hours in classroom and field assignments which included learning first aid, uniform regulations, combat water survival, marksmanship, hand-to-hand combat and assorted weapons training. They performed close order drill and operated as a small infantry unit during field training.

Cozby and fellow recruits ended the training phase with The Crucible, a 54-hour team effort, problem solving evolution which culminated with an emotional ceremony in which the recruits were presented the Marine Corps Emblem, and were addressed as "Marines" for the first time since boot camp began.

YOUR EYES

Windows to the body

Philosophers refer to the eyes as windows to the soul. Eye care professionals add that the eyes are windows to the body.

Annual eye exams are often recommended to detect common vision problems. These include myopia, hyperopia, presbyopia, cataracts, and glaucoma. But through your eyes your doctor can also get a good look at your total health picture.

As your doctor checks your eye health for infections or abnormalities, the tests can reveal underlying health problems. High blood pressure, diabetes, carotid artery disease, atherosclerosis, and thyroid disease are among the problems that might be detected. Evidence of trauma, small strokes, or brain tumors can be found, or signs of jaundice, which could indicate hepatitis, cirrhosis, or gallbladder disease.

While there's no substitute for a regular medical checkup, what your eyes can reveal about your health gives you another good reason to have them examined often.

The Best Medicine Is Close To Home...

Hereford Regional Medical Center's mission is to provide excellent health services to Hereford and the surrounding areas. To us, it is essential people have access to quality physicians and healthcare without having to travel great distances.

We believe the best medicine is caring for the whole person. Our physicians and staff strive to uphold a work ethic where patients and families receive the highest level of care and concern. They bring with them exceptional skills, which HRMC supports with the highest technological equipment their skills require.

Equally important to us is giving back to our community, by promoting healthcare education. We have a vital interest in making our area a healthier, safer place to live, work and raise a family.

Hereford Regional Medical Center has a heritage which is centered around the idea of neighbors taking care of neighbors. This tradition delivers the highest level of care with the personal attention patients and families deserve.

After all, the best medicine should be close to home.

One year ago: Air Force Lt. Michael Blassie, a casualty of the Vietnam War, was laid to rest near his Missouri home after the positive identification of his remains, which had been enshrined at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington, Va.

On the Waiting List

Danelle is 13 years old and one of 16 children on the waiting list with Big Brothers Big Sisters.

Danelle would enjoy doing almost anything with a big sister. She collects sea shells and rocks. She really likes alien movies, pizza, hamburgers and TCBY treats. She would like to learn some different kinds of arts and crafts with her big sister.

With three wishes, she would ask for a dirt bike, electric guitar and a phone of her own. She likes literature and computer class at school.

Big Brothers Big Sisters provide screened adults to serve as mentors in a one-to-one relationship with boys and girls from single parent homes. To become a Big Brother or Big Sister, an individual completes an application with referrals; criminal checks and personality tests are done on each applicant. Volunteers are asked to give a minimum of eight hours per month to their Little Brother or Sister.

There is a great need for Big Brothers Big Sisters. Anyone interested is asked to call 364-6171.

Editor's Note: The Hereford Brand will periodically run a profile of a child who has made application for a big brother or a big sister in order to keep the public informed about the needs of these children.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Upside down in life: Ways to waste your wealth

In the used car business, they use a term to describe owing more on an automobile than it's worth. The term is "being upside down."

I know folks who live their entire lives "upside down." They earn good money, but they spend a little more. They wear expensive clothes, drive ritzy cars and live in expensive homes.

To most folks, the look wealthy. Many people believe these "upside downers" are enjoying the American dream. They seem to have it all.

And, I guess in a way they do have it all. They have bills, payments, mortgages and long lease contracts. They have huge debt and difficulty in making ends meet. Very few of these "upside downers" could pay one month's cycle of bills if they didn't get their next paycheck.

Unfortunately, these folks are growing old, not wealthy. They are spending their retirement to maintain a showy lifestyle. They are living above their means with the help of liberal credit policies and low monthly payments.

Many are trapped in the lifestyle. They love it when someone compliments their new suit or new car. The ego boost they get from creating the perception of wealth carries them through the next cycle of payments and into another spending spree.

However, many of these wealthy "wanna bes" have little or no net worth. Their retirement portfolios are meager and they have not financial safety net. Both husband and wife must work full-time to keep up.

Bubba and Bill

Bubba and Bill are the same age, finished college the same year and work for the same company. Though they work at different jobs, their salaries are similar. Bill actually earns $1,800 per year more than Bubba.

However, no one at work would believe it. Bubba is living the "upside downers" lifestyle. He drives a brand new SUV, lives near the country club, spends the weekends on the golf course and owns both a motorhome and a boat. Bubba wears tailored suits and looks like a millionaire.

Let's take a look at Bubba's personal balance sheet. Bubba has no savings and only enough cash to make it to the end of the month. Bubba's toys would not bring enough to pay them off. Bubba has $52,000 in his company retirement account and $38,000 in credit card debt. Bubba's house is worth $60,000 more than the 24 years of mortgage payments he has left. Bubba's total net worth is about $100,000 including household items.

Bill on the other hand, lives well below his means. He drives a 6-year-old Ford Taurus and has lived in the same house for 14 years. Bill paid his house off four years ago, and spends most weekends working in the part-time business he started in 1990. This year his part-time business will bring in more than double the income of his full-time job. Bill and his wife have no debt and enough ready cash to cover four month's expenses.

What is Bill's net worth? Bill has $114,000 in his company retirement plan, more than $200,000 in other investments, market value of real estate about $85,000 and personal and household items worth nearly $30,000. In addition, he has nearly $140,000 in assets of his part-time business. Total including his four-month cash reserve: $580,000.

Bill has nearly six times the net worth of Bubba. Bill's investments will make him an official "millionaire" before his 60th birthday.

Want to know how Bill did it? Read: "The Millionaire Next Door," by Thomas J. Stanley and William D. Danko. This book will give you the surprising secrets of America's wealthy.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Martha Russell

Texas Summer Reading Club has been going on since the year one, I guess. It's a program that I did not grow up with in Oklahoma, but have been so impressed with since I came to Texas. In the four years I have been involved directly with the planning and implementing end of the business, I have learned much from Rebecca's extensive experience.

The goal, of course, is to turn kids on to reading, and a librarian will use anything and everything to reach that goal - crafts, games, movies, field trips, stories, contests, whatever! Some will even go so far as to dress in a clown suit - just ask your kids!

Historically, having a guest speaker/performer come in can result in either the thrill of victory or, if the invited guest does not show, the agony of defeat! Sometimes people seem to feel that since it's just a kids' program, it's not terribly important. Wrong!

We have been blessed this year with such a great group of people who have come in to share their talents and knowledge with our participants. They have shown up on time, brought all the proper equipment, entertained as well as informed, and just generally done a wonderful job of making our summer program a success and a pleasure. AND, they've done it just for the pure joy of doing it. What a great crew!

We have already personally thanked those who have helped, but I want to thank them again, publicly. Dr. Laveta Purday, Joe and Janet Nelson, Lams of God Mime Troupe, Chuck Short, and the Master's Hands puppet ministry have all done an outstanding job. The acid test of a good program for 250 kids is, if they are attentive for the program, it must be a good one. Each one of these amazing folks managed to hold the attention of a very large group of normally very restless kiddos. We could not have done the program this year without them!

Our next, and final, program for this year will be "The Magic of Montgomery" with Monte Holder of Lubbock. Mr. Holder has developed a special program to encourage reading through a combination of read-alouds and performances of magic. The program centers around the reading of Brian Selznick's book The Houdini Box followed by a magic show and concludes with one of Harry Houdini's most famous tricks. Your kids will not want to miss this one!

Karen Robards' books are always popular. Her latest, The Midnight Hour, is the story of Judge Grace Hart, who leads an apparently charmed life. However, what lies underneath the surface is not so pretty. Her beautiful teenage daughter is exploring the world of drugs and liquor, and a stranger has begun lurking about threatening their safety and peace of mind.

Unnerved by the prospect of a stalker, Grace calls the police, and that's where Detective Tony Marino comes in. But his presence creates as much confusion as it does security. While outwardly they seem to be opposites, the undercurrents of a romantic attraction between them are undeniable. When it becomes clear that the stalker has the power to destroy all that Grace holds dear, Grace and Tony join forces to stop him, soon learning that any hope for their future will require a reckoning with the past.

If you like Patricia Cornwell, you may also like Kathy Reichs, a forensic anthropologist who divides her time between the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner for the state of North Carolina and the Laboratoire des Sciences Judiciaires et de Medecine Legale for the province of Quebec. Drawing on her professional experience, Reichs has created the Kay Scarpetta-like character of Temperance Brennan. In Death DuJour, Tempe, as she is known, is digging up the corpse of Sister Elisabeth Nicolet, dead for over a century, and now a candidate for sainthood. The puzzle surrounding the sister's death provides a welcome contrast to the scorched and twisted bodies discovered at a burning chalet and that now await Tempe's expertise.

Who are these people? What brought them to this gruesome fate? And where are the children?

Homicide Detective Andrew Ryan, with whom Tempe has a combusive history, joins her in the arson investigation. From the fire scene they are drawn into the worlds of an enigmatic and controversial sociologist, a mysterious commune, and a primate colony on a Carolina island. (Are you keeping up?)

Tempe is overwhelmed by the case, confused by her mounting attraction to Ryan, and plagued by worries about her sister Harry's search for spiritual awakening.

The graphic descriptions of Tempe's investigation are fascinating, but not for the weak of heart or stomach.

After the Harley rally in Amarillo recently, you might be interested in one of our new nonfiction books, Outlaw Machine: Harley-Davidson and the Search for the American Soul by Brock Yates.

This book is a definitive history of Harley-Davidson motorcycles and their place in American culture. From their relatively wholesome reputation before the war to the rise of Hell's Angels (originally a small club formed by disaffected World War II vets, now a huge organization with a worldwide reputation) to the counterculture classic Easy Rider, Yates looks at American history through the lens of the Harley-Davidson.

It is also the success story of the company itself - a small family business that became the industry leader, only to get clobbered by stiff Japanese competition. In the 1980's, the company made a stunning turnaround when white-collar suburbanites rediscovered the Harley as a true American classic.

Grasshoppers munch across Texas Hot summer and dry winter set stage for green eating pests

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Marauding grasshoppers are munching their way across Texas as part of an infestation that is expected to grow worse for farmers and gardeners as the summer wears on.

Hordes of hoppers have been fattening themselves on grass, weeds and anything edible in North Texas.

"These things will feed on a lot of things as long as there is green vegetation. We've seen them feed on fence posts," said Ellis County extension service agent Glenn Moore. "I got a call from a guy the other day who claimed grasshoppers were chewing around on his house's plastic siding."

Unusually picky in their menu selections, many members of this year's grasshopper crop have been denuding choice plants rather than the entire landscape.

"Some things that have helped us is a lot of areas are getting rain, keeping pastures green and more attractive to them," said Moore. "Otherwise the grasshoppers head to the field crops."

Moore said minor crop damage has been reported so far, although another month of hot weather is expected to bring out peak numbers. That's because the hotter and drier it is, the happier the hoppers.

"They're just kind of getting started," said Moore.

Allen Knutson, an extension entomologist for Texas A&M University at Dallas, said this year's grasshopper infestation will indeed be a bumper crop. That's primarily because there was an outbreak of the bugs last year. Grasshopper infestations build over three- to five-year dry periods as large numbers of adults lay increasingly more eggs.

This past mild winter helped protect the eggs, while dry weather kept a fungal disease at bay. Add a spring dry enough for immature grasshoppers to survive, yet wet enough to grow plenty of vegetation for the young bugs and the result has been near-perfect pest conditions.

"I think we're lined up for a pretty heavy infestation," said Moore.

Experts don't expect the insect invasion to grow into a plague of Biblical proportions or even to the size of swarms weathered by the West between 1984 and 1987.

That infestation was the nation's last major plague as grasshoppers by the millions smothered an area the size of Kansas. The insects devoured wheat and grasses over 55 million acres and forced farmers in 17 Western states to buy feed for cattle and sheep. The United States Agriculture Department called in military jets and spent over $21 million spraying the bugs.

Grasshoppers, in combination with fall army worms and the drought, cost Texans twice that last year alone. According to the agriculture agency's figures, $42.3 million was lost for local agriculturalists in 1998.

"Last year they stripped the peach trees. They left the pits," said Moore.

A voracious insect, about seven to eight grasshoppers per square yard are capable of consuming as much vegetation as a cow, according to Moore.

That leaves farmers and ranchers bracing for their crops and range to be devoured again this year.

For advice and aid they need to turn to their county and state extension agents because the federal government has no currently active program against grasshoppers, according to Anna Cherry, a spokeswoman for the USDA.

Agents are advising farmers and gardeners to mow down weeds near crops and to carefully use chemical sprays.

Another possibility is releasing flocks of birds on the bugs.

Although not complaining about being called to duty, the fowl are outnumbered, said Moore.

"I've talked to folks and they say their chickens are full. They can't handle all of the grasshoppers," he said.

U.S. sugar refineries get sweet Mexico deal

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. sugar refineries are getting a sweet deal on Mexican sugar, but low prices are leaving a bitter taste with growers in the United States and abroad.

The sticky situation can be traced to the adoption of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which gave U.S. refineries the ability to buy Mexican sugar at the prevailing world price plus a duty, now set at 14.2 cents for every 100 pounds.

But even with that duty, U.S. refineries can save money by buying cheap Mexican sugar — a prospect few people envisioned when NAFTA was approved in 1994.

But that was before world sugar prices plummeted this spring due to weak demand in large countries suffering from the global financial crisis.

Sugar Land-based Imperial Sugar Co. took advantage of the low prices by purchasing about 100,000 tons of raw sugar from Mexico at the bargain price of about 6 cents per pound.

Even with the duty tacked on, Imperial got a better deal from Mexico than it could from domestic sugar cane producers, whose product sells for about 22 cents per pound. Deals like that anger growers here and in non-NAFTA countries.

"We just messed up when we negotiated NAFTA," Jack Nelson, president and chief executive officer of Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers in Santa Rosa, told the Houston Chronicle. "We didn't have any producers as part of the negotiating. We got the short end."

Growers' fears of a flood of imports from Mexico are about to come true. Experts predict the United States will import 145,000 tons of raw sugar from Mexico this year.

Domestic growers also charge that Mexico has dumped sugar into the U.S. market at below-cost prices.

"They have the potential of oversupplying the U.S. market and depressing the market," said Jack Roney, director of economic and policy analysis for Washington-based American Sugar Alliance. He said the sugar industry may file an anti-dumping suit against Mexico.

But Mexican growers deny the dumping allegations.

The Mexican imports also cut into sales to the United States by other foreign sugar growers. It forces those countries to dump some of their sugar into the cheaper world market instead of earning the high prices they expected from the U.S. market.

Island countries, such as the Philippines and Dominican Republic, base much of their economy on selling sugar to the United States, where the average person consumes 27 pounds of sugar a year.

World sugar prices recently rebounded, and sugar specialists said that might limit the imports from Mexico.

Fungi causes plants to rot; hurts yield Pathologists seek naturally disease resistant soybeans

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Glen Hartman opens what looks like a giant refrigerator and pulls out a tray of soybean plants sprouting under fluorescent lights in white tubes.

Some of the plants look healthy and strong; others are droopy with yellow and brown leaves.

That's just the way Hartman wants it.

The plant pathologist is combing through soybean collections at the University of Illinois, trying to find plants that are naturally resistant to two diseases that have hit Illinois farmers hard in recent years — sudden death syndrome and white mold.

Sudden death syndrome is caused by a fungus that lives in the soil and affects the plant's roots. It causes the leaves to yellow and pods to fall off prematurely.

White mold, also known as sclerotinia stem rot, is also caused by a fungus, but it affects the plant during flowering and grows into the stem. Anything above the affected part of the stem dies.

Both were virtually unheard of in Illinois 10 years ago. But sudden death syndrome was observed in 90 percent of the counties in the state in 1998. Both diseases can severely hurt yields.

Hartman, who is with the U.S. Agriculture Department Research Service unit at the UI, is screening three collections.

The first is of soybean genetic material from around the world gathered at the USDA's Soybean Germplasm Collection, housed at the university. These soybeans are similar to what was domesticated in China thousands of years ago.

He's also testing wild annual progenitors of today's domesticated soybeans and a group of wild perennial relatives of the soybean that were collected by UI geneticist Ted Hymowitz on trips over the past 25 years to secluded spots in Australia.

Lamb producers pleased with Clinton's support Administration imposes higher import tariffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers will face higher prices for lamb chops at the grocery store, but U.S. lamb producers say they are happy that President Clinton responded to their pleas for import protection.

The administration announced Wednesday that it was imposing higher tariffs ranging from 9 percent to 40 percent on imported lamb in an effort to protect American producers from a flood of imports from Australia and New Zealand.

But Australian officials said they would immediately seek to bring a case against the United States before the World Trade Organization for violating global trade rules.

"There is no justice in the decision," said Australian Prime Minister John Howard, who is scheduled to visit the United States next week.

The White House announced Clinton's action Wednesday in South Dakota, where the president had visited an Indian reservation as part of a tour promoting his proposals to provide economic assistance to distressed areas.

Clinton's decision, which goes into effect July 22, will impose a border tax of 9 percent on the first 31,851 metric tons — about 70 million pounds — of foreign lamb, the amount imported into the United States last year. Lamb imports above that level will carry a 40 percent tariff, the White House said.

"The package of import relief and domestic assistance has been carefully crafted to help our lamb industry achieve sustained competitiveness while respecting our international trade obligations," the White House statement said.

"You always want more and want it sooner, but this is a critical decision that could make the difference for family ranchers and small communities throughout the West,"

The U.S. lamb industry is one of a number of farm and manufacturing groups that have been hit hard by the global currency crisis, which has cut sharply into export sales and led to a flood of cheaper imports into the United States.

The Clinton administration has struggled to balance its support for free trade with growing calls in Congress for protectionist barriers as the U.S. trade deficit has risen to record levels because of the Asian currency crisis.

Part of the administration's effort has been to push Japan and Europe to do more to boost their own growth and provide markets for crisis countries.

New Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers criticized efforts by the Japanese government to keep the Japanese currency weak as a way to boost exports to the United States and other nations.

"I think the focus in Japan has to be on strengthening the fundamentals, which goes back to domestic demand-led growth ... not seeking to manipulate currencies," Summers said in an interview on CNBC.

Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota said Clinton's decision to impose higher tariffs on imported lamb would provide badly needed help for U.S. producers, who have seen lamb prices fall by as much as 40 percent since 1995 while imports have climbed by more than 50 percent. Imported lamb has captured about a third of the U.S. market.

Spokesmen for lamb producers said the administration's offer of $100 million in a package of direct payments to producers and market promotion incentives over the next three years would help the domestic industry become competitive.

"We are extremely pleased," said Cathy Cummins, an official with the American Sheep Industry Association, headquartered in Denver.

"You always want more and want it sooner, but this is a critical decision that could make the difference for family ranchers and small communities throughout the West," said Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 • Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 • Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 • Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Fenway provides perfect stage for All-Star game

By Tammy Dorman
©TVData Features Syndicate

Baseball is a sport rooted in tradition. That tradition takes center stage Tuesday, July 13, when Fox heads to Boston's venerable Fenway Park for the Major League Baseball All-Star Game.

The All-Star Break is not only a mid-season event celebrating the achievements of today's players, but also a time to reflect on the game's history and the great moments provided by players of the past.

The first All-Star Game was held as part of the Chicago World's Fair in 1933, when more than 47,000 people packed Comiskey Park to see a game that included 24 future Hall of Famers.

One of those players was Babe Ruth, who, though in the twilight of his illustrious career, treated the crowd to the first home run in All-Star history.

Lou Gehrig, Joe Cronin, Jimmie Foxx, Lefty Grove, Frankie Frisch and Carl Hubbell were some of the future Hall of Famers who saw the American Leaguers grab a 4-2 win in what was meant to be a one-time event.

Instead, the game was such a success it became a yearly fixture.

Probably the most spectacular moment came in 1970 at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium, when hometown hero Pete Rose raced home with the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning and flattened catcher Ray Fosse to give the National League a 5-4 victory.

The 1941 game at Briggs Stadium in Detroit will forever be remembered for the heroics of Boston's Ted Williams, who was in the midst of a magical season in which he would hit .406, becoming the last major leaguer to break the .400 mark.

Williams came to the plate in the ninth inning with his American League squad down 5-4 but threatening with two on and two outs. He proceeded to belt a Claude Passeau pitch out of the park, giving his team a 7-5 win.

Williams is also a big reason people recall the 1950 game. He broke his left elbow crashing into the outfield wall in the first inning but didn't leave the game for eight innings.

That classic contest ended with Red Schoendienst homering in the 14th to give the National League a 4-3 victory.

This year's spectacle is the third one at Fenway Park, which opened its doors in 1912. One of the oldest parks in major league baseball (the other is Detroit's Tiger Stadium, which also dates from 1912), Fenway is considered a landmark by baseball traditionalists. It lacks many of the amenities of today's sleek, comfortable stadiums but is unrivaled in the history department.

Ruth, Williams, Foxx, Carl Yastrzemski, Bobby Doerr and Carlton Fisk are among the greats who have played at Fenway, whose most recognizable feature is the huge wall in left field. Known as the "Green Monster," it towers 37 feet above the playing surface. A 23-foot screen atop it makes the wall even more intimidating for visiting players.

Fenway's small seating capacity and limited foul-ball territory ensure fans are close to the action - another advantage to anyone lucky enough to see a game at this historic park.

At this writing, home-run king Mark McGwire and Ken Griffey Jr. were front-runners for the National League first baseman spot and the American League outfield position, respectively.

ESPN has two All-Star events airing Monday, July 12. First up is the popular Home Run Derby. Then the All-Star Celebrity Hitting Challenge has baseball greats of the past teaming up with stars from the entertainment industry.

Fans will surely be salivating when St. Louis Cardinals first baseman Mark McGwire, the reigning home-run king, takes aim at Fenway Park's fabled Green Monster during the All-Star Game in Boston. Fox presents the game on Tuesday, and ESPN hosts other events, including the Home Run Derby, on Monday.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ July 11-17 ★ ★

ARIES – March 21/April 20

Don't stay silent when you see an acquaintance make a serious mistake and deny responsibility. Instead, address the problem, and help him or her to find a solution. Those involved will be impressed with your efforts. A close friend invites you to a social event. Say yes, because you're sure to enjoy yourself. Leo plays a role.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21

Keep your temper in check when someone purposely irks you early in the week. This person just wants to get a rise out of you; don't give him or her the satisfaction. A loved one turns to you in a time of need. Be supportive, and offer him or her a shoulder to cry on.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21

Try not to get upset when that special someone forgets an important date. He or she doesn't mean to hurt you; it is just a hectic week. Don't make it into more than it really is. A friend asks to borrow money. Before saying yes, find out why he or she needs the cash. Something isn't right about the entire situation. Virgo is involved.

CANCER – June 22/July 22

Your sense of humor makes a tense business situation easier to handle. By lightening the mood, you help those involved relax and actually get work done. The higher-ups reward your efforts. That special someone asks you an important question. Be truthful with him or her.

LEO – July 23/August 23

Don't let your pride get in the way of asking for help when it comes to a personal problem this week. Leo. You know that you can't handle this situation alone. Those closest to you won't think that you're weak just because you need some assistance. Cancer plays an important role.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22

Don't be late for a family event this week. You will miss out on an important financial opportunity if you are. That special someone needs advice about a problem at work. Don't let your feelings keep you from being honest. He or she needs to hear the truth from you.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23

Don't let a disagreement with a loved one get you down. Neither of you means what you say, so don't hold a grudge. Talk with him or her, and clear the air. Once you do this, things will be back to normal. You run into an old friend late in the week. Spend time with him or her.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22

There is a lot to do this week, Scorpio. Don't get distracted by unimportant events. Keep your mind on the tasks at hand, and work diligently. You will make significant progress if you do this. You'll have plenty of time to relax later in the week. Pisces plays a key role.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21

Don't let a minor setback at work get you down. Things aren't as bad as they seem. Try to look at the bright side of things, and work hard to make some progress. Your efforts will be noticed by the higher-ups. A loved one offers you romantic advice. While it sounds corny, don't disregard it. It can make a difference.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20

Don't be shy when you meet an interesting person early in the week. Just be yourself, and you're sure to make a good impression. He or she could be the one for you. A friend needs help with a personal matter. While you don't want to get involved, you have to. Do what you can for him or her.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18

Don't take a co-worker's off-the-cuff comment to heart. This person doesn't mean anything by it, he or she is trying to be funny. Laugh it off, because it isn't worth being upset about. A close family friend confides in you. Be there for him or her, but don't tell anyone about the conversation. Remember, this person trusts you.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20

Show compassion for a friend in need — even if he or she deserves to be in this situation. You really are the only one who can help. Do what you can for him or her.

IN FOCUS

Ted Danson stars as a scientist out to prove the Loch Ness monster is nothing more than a figment of the Scottish tourist trade's imagination in Loch Ness, airing Sunday, July 11, on ABC.

Danson plays a skeptical zoologist who travels to Scotland intent on debunking the myth of the mysterious creature. Needless to say, his quest doesn't sit well with the locals.

But soon his attentions are distracted by another creature: a beautiful single mother.

Matthew Broderick, star of the live-action summer film Inspector Gadget, is featured in Movie Surfers Go Inside Disney's Inspector Gadget Saturday, July 17, on the Disney Channel.

The network takes viewers behind the scenes to get acquainted with the oft-inept security guard who, after an accident, is rebuilt with mechanical appendages by a brilliant and beautiful scientist (Joely Fisher, Ellen).

The special also includes interviews with the film's stars.

Armand Assante stars as Lt. Dixon, the leader of the Confederacy's secret underwater weapon mission against the Union blockade, in The Hunley, airing Sunday on TNT.

TNT returns to the depths of the Civil War in The Hunley

Just a few years before Capt. Nemo's fictional undersea voyage, a very real group of soldiers waged a battle beneath the waves during the Civil War.

The Hunley, airing Sunday, July 11, on TNT, tells the story of nine men who crammed into a converted boiler and changed the way naval wars are fought. Writer-director John Gray's new TV movie looks back at the crew of the first sub to sink an enemy vessel.

When a Union naval blockade threatens the survival of Charleston, S.C., and cannon assaults take their toll on the city's weary and hungry residents, Confederate Gen. Beauregard (Donald Sutherland) commissions Lt. Dixon (Armand Assante) to lead a team on a mission to break the blockade and sink a Union ship by using a submarine armed with a torpedo.

"Armand brings a tremendous soulfulness (to the role)," Gray says. "(Dixon) has a world-weariness and a sadness. He's haunted by the loss of his wife, the woman he loved more than anything. What secretly drives Dixon is this desire to be reunited with this woman. He feels that a submarine is going to deliver him to her. He didn't lose faith that this would work."

Even though the film gives off an overwhelming feeling of fate and destiny, Gray believes the crew's strong sense of duty stands out.

"It's like what Dixon says when Beauregard asks him if he thinks they can win the war: 'No, but there's still a battle we can win, and should win.'"

"On the surface, you think it's a story about the North vs. the South, but it's not. It's about this incredible valor that existed amongst these guys who were willing, crew after crew, to get in that sub and try to strike a blow for what they believed in," Gray says. "That, combined with this primitive technology, had an enormous impact on the history of warfare."

"I hope viewers will be amazed and inspired by the courage these guys showed, and what people are capable of when they believe in what they're fighting for, whether it's a war or something more personal. I hope they come away with the feeling, 'I think I just visited 1864.'"

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: I was very disappointed to hear that ABC was not renewing Vengeance Unlimited. What happened?—Shari K., Bozeman, Mont.

A: Out of 158 shows on TV last season, the Michael Madsen series tied for 109th, so its cancellation wasn't exactly a surprise. Never, however, have I received so much viewer mail about a low-rated series. This show attracted a passionate audience, who complained that ABC put Vengeance in a tough Thursday time period and gave it very little promotion.

Regarding other shows readers have asked about, here are some more cancellations and their relative positions in the Nielsen ratings for the season:

ABC: Cupid (114), Two of a Kind (60), Brother's Keeper (62).

CBS: L.A. Doctors (71), The Magnificent Seven (66), Promised Land (51), Turks (66), Sons of Thunder (46), Unsolved Mysteries (75).

Fox: Melrose Place (95), Brimstone (116), Millennium (111).

NBC: NewsRadio (68), Homicide: Life on the Street (66).

UPN: Legacy (155).

WB: Hyperion Bay (140).

There is virtually no chance that any of these shows will be brought back. Send letters of protest (or thanks) to the Viewer Services Department at the appropriate network as follows:

ABC Television Network, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Century City, CA 90067;

CBS Inc., 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036;

Fox Broadcasting Co., P.O. Box 900, Beverly Hills, CA 90213-0900;

NBC Television Network, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, CA 91523;

United Paramount Network, 5555 Melrose Ave., Marathon 1200, Los Angeles, CA 90038;

Michael Madsen

WB Television Network. 4000 Warner Blvd., Building 34R, Burbank, CA 91522.

Q: On JAG, times appear with the word ZULU. What does ZULU mean? Is it made up?—“Cutaflip” via e-mail (and many other readers).

A: ZULU is a legitimate military code word designating the time in Greenwich, England.

Q: Was Joel Higgins, who played Jill's doctor on Home Improvement, ever in a series? Who sang the theme song on the old Love Boat? Who played the governor on The Governor & J.J.?—B.J., Youngstown, Ohio.

A: Higgins has a large roster of TV credits but is best known for the sitcom Silver Spoons and the shortlived Best of the West. Jack Jones was the Love Boat crooner, though Dionne Warwick lent her vocal cords for the last season. Veteran actor Dan Dailey starred as Gov. William Drinkwater on The Governor & J.J. (CBS, 1969-70).

SOAP TALK

New additions to the ABC daytime family

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

A familiar face from the world of feature films has joined the cast of General Hospital. Donna Pescow (Saturday Night Fever) plays the recurring role of Aunt Gertrude, a meddling relative who gives Chloe (Tava Smiley) a hard time. Pescow's credits include Angie, Out of This World and guest roles on NYPD Blue and Nash Bridges.

In other news from the GH set, Vanita Harbour (Dara Jensen) and husband Allan Dean Moore welcomed son Ezra Brendan into the world on May 20.

The cast of Port Charles also has a new addition. Michael J. Anderson, best known for his roles on Picket Fences and Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, plays Mr. Zorin, a mysterious man with a deadly agenda involving Victor, Eve and Kevin (Nicholas Pryor, Julie Pinson, Jon Lindstrom).

Dear Candace: Stop bashing Brooke (Katherine Kelly Lang) on The Bold and the Beautiful. Stephanie (Susan Flannery) is the one who never gave Brooke a chance. Brooke had to fight back in self-defense.

Ridge (Ronn Moss) made it very clear how much he still loved Brooke when he got jealous watching her kiss Victor (Eric Braeden). Ridge would have never left Brooke if it hadn't been for Taylor's baby. —Claudia Hunter, Corpus Christi, Texas.

Dear Reader: Perhaps Ridge is the real troublemaker. He has always been a playboy. Years ago, Ridge cheated on Caroline (Joanna Johnson) while they were engaged. She found out and passed out at their wedding, and Ridge ended up with Brooke.

Caroline, who later married Thorne (Winsor Harmon), told Ridge that she still loved him. But by then, Brooke was pregnant and Ridge decided to stay with her. After Brooke miscarried, she had an affair with Eric (John McCook), whom she later married.

Now Brooke wants Thorne, and he is engaged to Macy (Bobbie Eakes). Does all this sound familiar? Maybe the writers are to blame for writing the same story over and over.

THE BUCK STARTS HERE.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information.

Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer.

Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live.

Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise.

It's an integral part of our lives.

Newspaper. It delivers.
