New state program designed to improve math, science teaching

Special to The Brand

Hereford Independent School District has been selected to participate in a statewide project designed to improve math and science education in eligible Texas counties.

The Texas Rural Systemic Initiative (TRSI), which is led by West Texas A&M University of Canyon and which is designed to help improve the way students are taught. learn and assessed in the classroom, will be explained to parents and members of the community at 7 p.m. Monday in the HISD Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Ave

Classroom teachers will get a preview of the program at 3:30 p.m. Monday

At the forum, TRSI staff members will present a summary and conduct a questionand-answer session about the program.

about this opportunity." HISD deputy superintendent Nena Veazey said. "This program is designed to give our teachers extra training and support in math and science and to improve student test $cores. Overall, our students will benefit from the improved curriculum and instruction in math and science that will broaden opportunities for Hereford students."

Some of the benefits of the program include inquiry-based learning for students, building administrators supporting teachers in implementing high quality math and science. technology for teachers and students, and increased parental support.

"We are excited about visiting Hereford and meeting with the staff and local community," TRSI project director Judy Kelley said. "Our program will benefit the district's students. We look forward to We are really excited collaborating to improve mathematics and science for all students."

Veazev urged parents of HISD students, as well as interested community members. to attend the Aug. 30 session.

"One of the ways to you as parents and community members can help facilitate this program is to attend this forum." she said.

State Sen Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, who serves as chairman of the Texas Senate Education Committee, said the state has lacks high school and college graduates with skills in math and science.

"Job opportunities in the technology industries are increasing significantly and this program will help prepare rural students to compete in the global market," Bivins said.

The initiative is funded by a grant from the National Science Foundation and is led by WTAMU through the Texas Engineering Experiment Station, a state research agency and member of the Texas A&M University System. TRSI involves a partnership among 11 universities, the Texas Education Agency, and Region II Education Service Center.

support posting police in schools

WASHINGTON (AP) - Posting police officers in hall-ways would help curb school violence, two out of three adults say in an Associated Press poll. But most Americans see dangerous acts as events that happen elsewhere, with more than 80 percent saying they think schools in their own communities are safe.

Even for people who are comfortable with the safety of their own schools, police officers in schools can provide peace of mind.

"I like the idea of a human being, someone the kids could go to" if there was trouble, said Mary Beth Corvati, a mother of two children in Harford County, Md., and one of 1,016 surveyed in the poll conducted by ICR of Media, Pa.

While 65 percent said they thought stationing officers in schools would reduce violence, compared with 33 percent who said it would not. Americans were less certain that metal detectors would help. Fifty percent said they would help, 47 percent said they would not.

"I would like for my children to view a police officer as someone who could help preserve their safety, be a role model - someone they could look up to," said Mrs. Corvati. "I don't think my children could look up to a metal detector."

People have had the summer to assess how they feel about school safety after two students at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., killed a dozen classmates, a teacher and themselves last April. A sheriff's deputy was on duty at the school when the shootings occurred.

Despite the Columbine shootings and other highprofile cases of violence in schools, only 14 percent of Americans say their schools are not safe.

Blacks were more likely than whites - 30 percent to 10 percent - to say schools in their community were either "not too safe" or "not safe at all."

But more than four out of five of all respondents felt their schools were relatively safe.

"After Columbine, we had a little flurry of activity, but for the most part our schools are pretty safe," said Carrie Clark, a mother of two young children from Lover, N.H. "We had one incident in an elementary school - a boy was caught with a gun in his knapsack. He was expelled."

Her efforts to shelter her children include keeping toy guns away from them, but that has met with mixed results.

"I don't let them play with toy guns, but they build Legos into guns," she said. "My daughter's play hairdryer is a gun. When I'm in another room I hear them (say) 'bang, bang, I'm going to kill you' or (shooting) their stuffed animals."

Reducing violence in TV shows and movies was cited by one-third of those surveyed as the most effective way to stop school violence, with women, Republicans and older Americans most likely to choose that option. Another 22 percent said increased counseling for teen-agers would be most effective. Stricter gun laws and putting metal detectors in schools were chosen most effective by 16 percent each.

In May, in another AP poll, 23 percent chose metal detectors as the most effective curb of school violence.

Universities find alcohol big problem Study finds more students binge drinking than doing drugs WASHINGTON (AP) - The president of Pennsylvania State University says binge drinking is an even bigger problem on college campuses than illegal drugs.

"We don't want to say that drug use is no longer a problem, but the truth is we don't see nearly as much of it as excess consumption of alcohol," Graham Spanier told the National Press Club. "Alcohol has been the drug of choice on campuses today."

While universities have always had a drinking student population, Spanier said Thursday, the ones who do drink are doing so more heavily and more frequently.

He spoke two days after a Penn State student celebrating her 21st birthday was hospitalized with a blood-alcohol content of 0.682 percent - a level twice what normally sends a person into coma. The student participated in a tradition of drinking at least 21 alcoholic drinks during a 21stbirthday "bar tour."

Last summer, drinking by Penn State students led to rioting. Some 1,500 students gathered in downtown State College as rioters set bonfires in the middle of the street, tore down light posts, battered storefronts and injured more than a dozen police.

"There are unmistakable consequences of such behavioral patterns," Spanier said. "Frequent binge drinkers are far more likely than non-binge drinkers to have multiple problems" that include engaging in unplanned sexual activity, getting hurt and damaging property.

Spanier said a recent survey found that more than 40 percent of college students today engage in binge drinking,

News in brief

Military defends its role

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Attorney General Janet Reno opens a full investigation into the FBI's newly disclosed use of incendiary devices in the 1993 Waco siege, the military is insisting it only played an observer's role on the day the Branch Davidian cult compound burned.

Three Army special operations officers were present that final day, April 19, 1993, but they were not involved in the FBI operation in any way, not even in an advisory role, a senior Pentagon officer said Thursday.

The officer, who is familiar with the military's participation in the 51-day standoff but spoke only on the condition of anonymity, said the Pentagon had no say in the FBI's decision to use potentially flammable tear-gas grenades.

Federal law prohibits the military from direct involvement in domestic law enforcement, unless a presidential waiver is granted.

Immigration turmoil passes Arizona

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) - With unemployment high, area leaders ion't favor renewal of a "guest worker" program that Douglas Mayor Ray Borane suggested as a partial solution to illegal mmigration.

Gov. Jane Hull recently told Arizona's congressional delegation she would be willing for Arizona to host a pilot version of such a plan.

"I love the governor, but I voiced my negative opinion of that." San Luis Mayor Joe Harper said this week. "We have 70 percent unemployment and they are all farm workers, so why would we bring in more?"

Mrs. Hull is to tour the porder next month to see the illegal migrant problem first hand. Harper said she won't see the same kind of border turmoil that has been plaguing the Douglas area when she visits southwestern Arizona.

Mexican prosecutor indicted

A former Mexican prosecutor who has been fighting extradition from the United States was to go to court today on charges of drug trafficking and money laundering.

Mario Ruiz Massieu was indicted Thursday on the federal charges, Mexican officials announced.

He will face trial in the United States, the Mexican attorney general's office said in a statement Thursday night.

Ruiz Massieu had been under house arrest while he fought extradition and was arrested at his Newark, N.J., home Thursday, according to his attorney, Tony Canales, in Corpus Christi, Texas.

He said Ruiz Massieu was to appear this morning before a federal magistrate in Newark.

Andersen, now a psychology professor at Texas Tech University, was inspired by that need to create a unique program that gives recovering addicts a chance at scholarship money to enroll at Tech and obtain a degree - regardless of their academic his-

He says the program gives recovering abusers the chance to excel — not just exist.

"You've got be able to look in the mirror and feel good about the person looking back," said Andersen, 64. "It helps to have something to aim for."

The addicts-to-scholars program, started four years ago at the university's Center for Addiction Studies, which Andersen heads.

It may be the first program of its kind in the nation.

To get in, participants must show that they have been in drug or alcohol rehab for at least a year. That, a high school diploma or equivalency degree and Andersen's faith are the only requirements for acceptance into the program, which admits around 100 undergraduates each year.

former U.S. deputy drug czar and director of Columbia University's Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse. Officials at the National Association of Colleges were also unaware of any similar rehab program.

The amount of money a student gets depends on the participant's grades: a 4.0 grade-point average earns $2,000 per semester, a 3.5 is worth $1,500, a 3.0 gets $1,000 for a 3.0, and a 2.5 earns $500. Participants have to pay the rest of their expenses. Tuition and fees at Texas Tech are typically $2,500 per semester.

Anything less than a 2.5 GPA and students can be kicked out of the program. They also can be removed for poor attendance at class or recovery meetings.

"I have deans sometimes tell me that I'm being too hard on students," Andersen said. "But one of the first signs of a reversion back to a substance is tardiness or absence from scheduled events.'

Andersen said only 5 percent of participants have reverted to drug or alcohol

Creative family fun

By Donna Erickson Labor Day weekend traditionally signals the onset of a new school year, but it's also a good time to remind our children that we work, and that work is very important.

Do you ever wonder how our kids perceive our workday? Some of us get up in the morning, grab a quick breakfast, read the comics and vanish, not to be seen again until eight hours later. We are working, but do the kids really know what we do?

Here are ways you can share the idea of work with your children.

-Make a simple booklet for your preschoolers filled with pictures and brochures illustrating what you do during your workday. If you're an athome parent, the book will show that caring for home and family is also important work.

-Plan an outing to your workplace with your kids. If you work in an office, kids will be excited to see their photographs or their original paintings displayed on your desk or wall.

-Familiarize your children with the work skills of your ancestors. Compile a list of relatives and interview them or gather information from your family tree. Was greatgrandfather a farmer? You may enjoy visiting a living-farm museum to see what that job used to be like.

--Talk with your children about their interests and skills and how they might apply to a future vocation.

Adapted from Donna Erickson's book "More Prime Time Activities with Kids' (Augsburg Publishing, 1991).

A blessing for the Catechists will take place Saturday during the evening liturgy. The Cursillistas will have their Ultreya immediately after the Commun-ion Service on Wednesday night. The prayer meeting will begin immediately after the Communion Service on Thursday night.

FELLOWSHIP OF BELIEVERS

St. Anthony's Janie Banner will share her story at FOB. And a good story it is. Out of her own sense of vocation and calling Janie began a pen pal connection with a death row inmate in the Huntsville prison system. The details of that story are fascinating. And Janie has agreed to tell that story to FOB's "Forum" gathering this Sunday from 9:30 until 10:15.

St. Thomas Episcopal's Linda Gilbert will play the piano at the 10:30 expression Banner and Gilbert. Catholic and Episcopalian. What a rich ecumenical combination. FOB will be blessed.

Whatever else FOB is, she is at least a progressive Christian congregation. One principle of such a fellowship is that we invite all sorts and conditions of people to join in our worship and in our con as full partners, including (but not limited to) believers and agnostics, conventional Christians and questioning skeptics, homosexuals and heterosexuals, females and males, the despairing and the hopeful, those of all races and cultures, and those of all classes and abilities, without imposing on them the necessity of becoming like us.

Please watch for hallway decorating and room dressing-up as FOB prepares to launch a renewed Sunday school program for children and younger teens beginning Sept. 12.

FOB - the church building - is located at 245 N. Kingwood. FOB - the people -are everywhere on Sundays. Some are chilling at the lake or the mountains. Others are cooking and baking. Some are sleeping-in on their one day off. Others are reading the Hereford Brand. Some are playing with the kids. Others are visiting the sick or checking on parents in nursing homes. But, as always, all are loved and valued. All matter. The spiritual presence and devotion of each person is what energizes the "Fellow-

ST.ANTHONY'S CATHOLIC CHURCH

This weekend Catholics celebrate the 22nd Su day in Ordinary Time. Scripture readings have Jeremiah (20:7-9) Paul (Romans 12:1-2) and Matthew (16:21-27) asking us if we are influencing those around us or if we are being caught up in the values of an increasingly self-centered world. Our doors are open to welcome all to the Catholic way of worship in liturgies at 6 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. Sunday.

All senior citizens in our parish are ainded to mark their calendars for S.A.P.O. Senior Night Out on Sept. 11, following the Saturday evening liturgy. Food, fellowship and fun are being planned. (In October there will be a night for parishioners age 40-59.)

Children and youth registration for Christian Formation will be held from 7-8 p.m. Sept. 8 in the gym/cafeteria. Cost of materials is $12 per student. Classes begin at 7 p.m. Sept. 15.

A Southern Deanery Catechist training night will held at San Jose Parish on Sep'_ 1 from 6-9 p.m. All catechists in the parish are encouraged to attend. Final sittings for photos for the Y2K Parish Pictorial Directory will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 26. For an appointment, call Annette at 364-6150.

The whole community is invited not to sit on their cans. Bring them to our aluminum recycling barrels on the church parking lot so the altar servers can successfully collect enough for an outing next summer.

TRINITY

FELLOWSHIP CHURCH

There was a time that large crowds followed Jesus everywhere anxious to see a miracle or to receive a blessing. But, when Jesus began to talk about the cross and the cost of following him, many turned away and were no longer his disciples. We will soon be confronted with the same choice. Join Pastor Brady Boyd this Sunday as he begins a series entitled, "How far will you go with Jesus?" Services will begin at 10:30 a.m. at 401 W. Park Avenue. Professional childcare is available

Son Seekers children's church and Sunday school starts again on Sept. 12. Sunday school is designed for children and adults of all ages. Son Seekers is a true worship experience designed just for children.

Men's Retreat is scheduled for Sept. 23-26 at Frontier Lodge in Colorado and registration is now underway. Wellington Boone will be the featured speaker at this year's retreat.

Starting Sept. 15 and continuing for 10 consecutive weeks, area men will bring a sack lunch and take part in a men's Bible study from 12:15 to 12:45. These "power lunches" are designed for men seeking a deeper personal relation-ship with Christ and will feature topics that are relevant to today's man.

Join us on Sept. 12 for a special Sunday with lunch in the fellowship hall following the morning services. This will also be the Sunday that your children can meet the new teachers and our new youth interns.

On Sept. 12, our youth will begin to meet weekly for ministry and worship at 6 p.m.

put that in quotations because literally you can't "go" to church. Since the church is people it is the church that goes. The church goes to the park, to school, to ball games, to work, to the store, and lots of places.

When we talk about going to church we are really talking about when the people (the church) gather to praise together, pray together, learn together, hurt together, and encourage one another to service.

If you've "been to church" lately it ay look a little different and sound a little different. That will depend on the style of worship your congregation has pted. But I am willing to bet (wait. I can't bet, I'm Baptist)...I am willing to believe that if your congregation bases what it does on the Bible, the substance, if not the style is the same.

At First Baptist we are liable to have a variety of styles in worship but it is our hope and aim for our substance to be nded in Jesus. grou

One style of worship will be participated in this Saturday at 6 p.m. It is our Last Saturday service. Last Saturday is a contemporary, multimedia service for those who need a little more upbeat sound and a more visual experience in worship. It could also be for those who can't make it "to church" on Sunday morning

Normally on Sunday morning we are a mixed up group of tradition and contemporary but we will have our Praise Team in this Sunday's worship, too. They are kinda new around FBC so many of our folks haven't had the opportunity to worship with them. We will Sunday.

I hope you will "come to church"

We also celebrate Holy Eucharist each Sunday. St. Thomas' offers open communion. If you have been baptized in any church and you are a true believer in esus Christ, we welcome you to share the Lord's Supper with us.

Sparks slow down Comets

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - The Los Angeles Sparks put the Houston Comets' championship reign in danger Thursday night.

Lisa Leslie scored 15 of her 23 points in the first half in a 75-60 victory in the open-ing game of the Western Conference finals.

Houston holds the championships from both previous seasons of the Women's National Basketball Association. The loss was only the team's second in eight playoff games.

"We looked at this game as the most important game of the year," Sparks coach Or-lando Woolridge said. "If we would have lost this game, it would have been very difficult going into Houston."

Game Two of the best-ofthree series will be played Sunday at Houston's Compaq Center, where the Comets were 15-1 in the regular season, including victories in their final 12 games, a WNBA record. A third game, if necessary, would be played Mon-day in Houston. The winner will face the victor of the Eastern Conference finals between New York and Charlotte, which start Friday night in Charlotte.

The Sparks opened the game by missing their first seven shots and allowing the first eight points. But then, Los Angeles began chipping away at the deficit. The Sparks took their first lead, 24-23, at 7:18 before halftime. They went ahead for good at 29-27 on Leslie's three-point basket with 4:24 left in the half.

"It was a great team effort," Leslie said. "We came out and played - for the first, I believe, this whole

It was just a scrimmage, plain and simple.

But the Hereford Whitefaces came into Thursday's' scrimmage against Lubbock High ready to take some names.

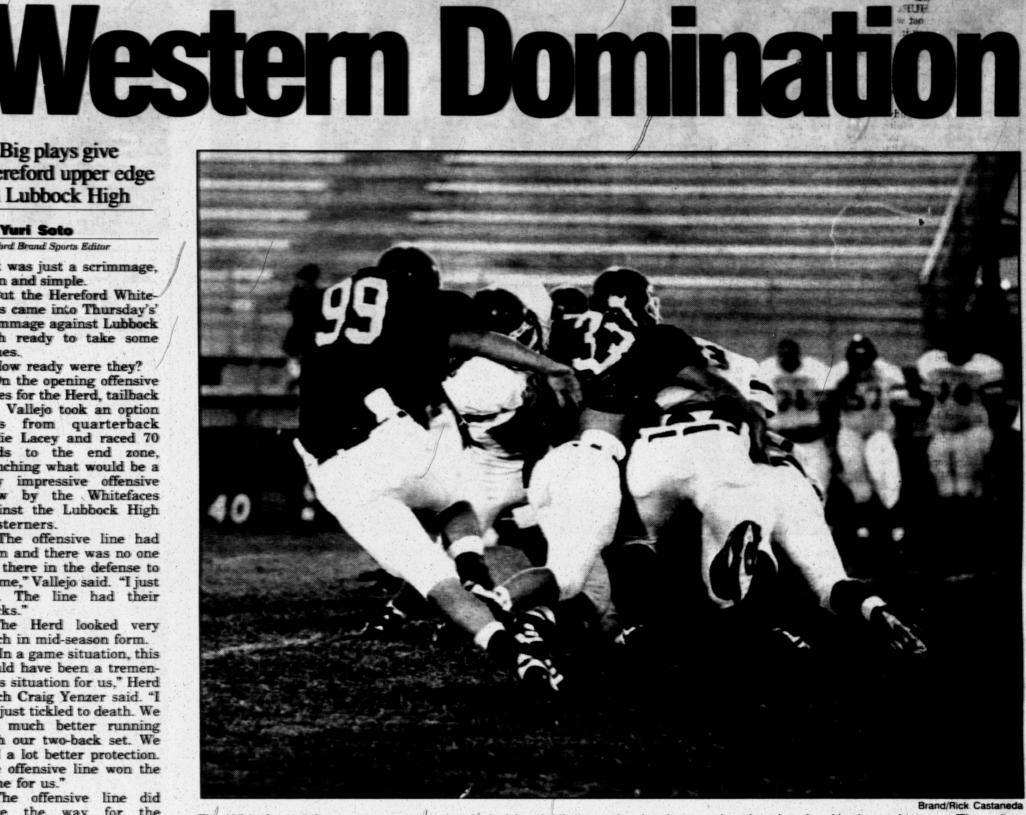

How ready were they? On the opening offensive series for the Herd, tailback L.J. Vallejo took an option pass from quarterback Eddie Lacey and raced 70 yards to the end zone, launching what would be a very impressive offensive show by the Whitefaces against the Lubbock High Westerners.

"The offensive line had them and there was no one out there in the defense to get me," Vallejo said. "I just ran. The line had their blocks."

The Herd looked very much in mid-season form.

"In a game situation, this would have been a tremendous situation for us," Herd coach Craig Yenzer said. "I am just tickled to death. We did much better running with our two-back set. We had a lot better protection. The offensive line won the game for us."

The offensive line did pave the way for the offense. Vallejo would score once more on a 28-vard run. He could have had a third one but as he neared the end zone, he was stripped of the ball by a Lubbock High defender. But receiver Tony Lopez recovered the ball and got the third score for the Whitefaces. "We pretty much shut them down most of the time," Vallejo said. "I think we cut down the big plays on them."

Houston guard Cynthia Cooper, the WNBA's scoring champion in all three of its seasons, was held to 12 points. She missed eight of her first nine shots, 12 of 16 overall and six of seven threepoint shots.

"She didn't shoot the ball that well," Comets coach Van Chancellor said. "I thought she got some great looks." DeLisha Milton added 16 points and La'Keshia Frett had 11 for Los Angeles before a Forum crowd of 10,099. Sheryl Swoopes had 17 points and Tina Thompson contributed 13 for the Comets.

The Sparks led 33-29 at halftime. After an exchange of baskets to start the second half, Los Angeles scored nine consecutive points to lead 44-31.

Bush woos voters GOP front-runner says he'd consider

Dole as running mate

RALEIGH (AP) - Texas Gov. George W. Bush wooed North Carolina voters at a public housing project and a $1,000-a-plate dinner, adding $350,000 to his Republican presidential campaign chest.

During his first campaign swing to North Carolina, Bush said Thursday he would consider Elizabeth Dole as a vice presidential running mate, oppose further increases in cigarette taxes and support the federal tobacco program.

He also touched on the recent controversy over whether he had used drugs as a young man, but didn't say whether he had. "I made the decision to say that when I was younger I made some mistakes," Bush said. "I have learned from the mistakes. I think it's important for someone to stand up and say enough is enough of rumors and gossip and the politics of personal destruction."

Bush also told business executives and state GOP leaders at the fund-raising dinner at Research Triangle Park that he supports lower taxes, free trade and more restrictions on lawsuits that can be filed against companies.

"Preach it, brother," one member of the crowd yelled.

But Bush tempered his pro-business remarks with a call for an inclusive society that leaves no one behind, a

"Our next president must work tirelessly to close the gap of opportunity."

That gap was apparent ear-lier Thursday when Bush stopped at the Children's Learning Center in the Heritage Park public housing com-plex near downtown Raleigh.

The center gets 95 percent of its funding from private sources, including IBM, which donated a computer lab. That kind of partnership between public agencies and private supporters can help children more than federal regulations can, Bush said. "I don't believe that Washington has the answer to the education needs of America," he said.

Many in the housing project were unfamiliar with Bush, and none who was interviewed admitted to being a Republican.

But resident Karen Hinton, a Democrat, said she was ready for a change from President Clinton.

etting Gore be Gore Team retools message

By Ron Fournier

WASHINGTON — Al Gore and his retooled presidential campaign team are putting the finishing touches on a fall strategy designed to sharpen his muddled message and reassure jittery Democrats with raw displays of political force.

Advisers say the next two months are critical to the vice president, who stumbled out of the gates, struggled with overcoaching from his staff and now faces a stronger than expected challenge for the 2000 Democratic nomination.

"What we're trying to do now is show that Al has broad-based support and that he's ready for a general (elec-tion) campaign," campaign chairman Tony Coelho said.

To put it more simply, Gore and his advisers are trying to show that they've finally got their act together.

In the campaign's opening months, the Gore team underestimated Democratic rival Bill Bradley, bickered with the vice president's White House staff and couldn't get Gore's abortion reckrd straight. The vice president became the butt of jokes, claiming he created the Internet and taking a canoe ride on an artificially raised river in New Hampshire.

Even President Clinton said he had concerns about the campaign.

The Gore team spent the summer polling voters - and rounding them up into focus groups — to devise better language and tactics to get his message across. They also laid out plans for a flurry of endorsements in September and October to highlight Gore's advantage in the hattle for the party's core voters: blacks, Hispanics, labor and elected officials. Coelho, hired in May to bring discipline to the effort, made several staff changes and drew clear lines of authority - all of which pass through his office. Gore, who had been micromanaging the campaign, gave Coelho the keys to his faltering political machine.

The former California lawmaker likes to tell the story about one of the first trips he took with Gore. Minutes before a speech, Coelho noticed an eide scribbling a long list of VIPs that Gore would acknowledge in his remarks.

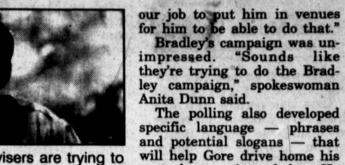

Recognizing a recipe for another dull speech, Coelho ripped the paper out of the startled aide's hands and tore it into shreds. He pulled the vice president aside and told him to forget about the notes.

"Just tell the people thank you," Coelho told Gore. "Then tell them a few stories. And tell them what you believe."

He uses the anecdote to illustrate what he thinks has been Gore's biggest problem: Overcoaching. Too many aides giving him too many instructions — putting too much clutter between the vice president and his audience.

"I don't think Al Gore needs crutches to communicate. And I think the crutches have hurt him," Coelho said.

He has ordered staff to

A summer's worth of polling has helped the campaign narrow its focus from a laundry list of Gore proposals to a select few that impact voters' lives. He will focus less on 10-point plans this fall, and try harder to humanize one point at a time, aides

To highlight his concern about school discipline, Gore might talk to a victim of school violence. His hopes for health care are best explained over the kitchen table in a middle-class neighborhood.

"He's got to sit down and talk to people. It's gotta be him," said Coelho, munching on popcorn in his high-rise office. "It can't be fake. It can't be phony. It can't be the consultants. It's got to be will keep the economy strong and help American families cope with the challenges of rapidly changing times. About 70 Democrats in Congress already have announced their support for Gore, but campaign aides are rounding up more for a big wave of fall endorsements. They want to show that — despite Bradley's challenge — the party appa-ratus is firmly behind Gore. A senior Democrat on Capitol Hill said Gore could ex-pect up to 120 House members to endorse him in time for a fall announcement, though there are still pockets of lawmakers anxious about Gore's campaign.

Elected officials amount to about 20 percent of the Democratic delegates who will de-termine the nomination at next summer's Democratic convention in Los Angeles. Though Bradley has few so-called "super delegates" in his camp, Dunn said, "We have always believed that people would decide the nomination at the polls and understand fully that the bulk of the

GOP hopes rulings to become an issue

The Associated Press

Far-flung court rulings on school vouchers and abortion are stirring anger in the Republican presidential campaign over what one candidate calls "judicial activism run amok." Both Texas Gov. George Bush and rival Steve Forbes on Thursday attacked a judge's suspension of Cleveland's voucher program, a decision that affects a prime education reform favored by the GOP presidential field and many governors.

Bush called the ruling a "judicial overreach with serious casualties - Cleveland's disadvantaged school children."

Republicans see a potential wedge issue against Democrats in the voucher flap because the program is designed in part to help poor inner city children attend private schools offering superior education.

Democrats argue that vouchers would destroy the public school system and there are better ways to give parents a choice, such as charter schools, experimental institutions that receive public support but can operate independently of local school district rules. Critics of vouchers also say such programs unfairly favor religious schools with tax money.

"This case is not about the state imposing religion," Bush argued. "This is about par-ents having the right to choose an appropriate school for their children."

Forbes was first to attack the voucher ruling and he went beyond that to decry a county judge's decision in Ari> zona forcing officials to pro-vide for an abortion for a 14year-old girl who was 23 weeks pregnant.

"These cases are just the latest offensive examples of judicial activism run amok," Forbes said. He said they underscore the need to appoint judges who will respect the rights of parents and the unborn.

U.S. District Judge Solomon Oliver Jr., who made the voucher ruling, was appointed by President Clinton. Judge William Sargeant of Maricopa County Superior Court, who made the abortion decision, is a Republican and not a presidential appointee.

Forbes, whose anti-abortion views have hardened since he ran for the GOP nomination in 1996, has said that as president he would appoint judges opposed to abortion rights. Among rivals for the GOP nomination, Bush has said he would not make abortion views a test for his judicial appointments.

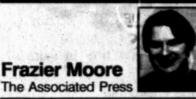

GOP candidate John McCain, recently accused by some conservatives of softening his anti-abortion stance, declined immediate comment on the abortion matter in his own state.

"It sounds like a tregic case," the senator said when asked about it while campaigning in San Diego. But he said he wanted to study the matter further before saying more.

Clarence Thomas vs. Anita Hill 'Strange Justice' tells of fight for and against court nominee

Like the man said, the process stinks.

That was perhaps the only thing everyone could agree on during the Senate confirmation hearings for Judge Clarence Thomas. Those 10 stormy days in October 1991 left the nation polarized and the nominee for the U.S. Supreme Court, in his own bitter words, dying "a thousand deaths."

Now Showtime presents "Strange Justice," a drama of the campaigns waged to save, and to sink, the nomination.

Premiering at 7 p.m. CDT Sunday, this splendid film, based on the book "Strange Justice, The Selling of Clarence Thomas," seems a logical extension of the hearings themselves. Broadcast gavel-to-gavel, day after day, they unfolded as a galvanizing TV event. To view the film is to feel the intervening years evaporate.

In his performance, Delroy Lindo seems to be channeling Thomas, the conservative federal judge nominated by President Bush to replace retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall, a liberal champion of civil rights and the first black member of the high court.

And Regina Taylor, best known from the TV series "I'll Fly Away," is picture perfect as Anita Hill, the former Thomas colleague who reluctantly, forcefully accused him of sexual harassment.

The film, diected by Ernest Dickerson, is told from the perspective of a notso-public player, Washington stvategist Kenneth Duberstein, The Anita Hill-who was hired by Clarence Thomas the Bush Admin- controversy istration to shep- subject of TV movie. herd Thomas through. As depicted by Mandy Patinkin, the likable, relentless Duberstein is the focal point of the off-stage drama to land the job for a candidate seen by his opponents as unfit and, worse, a quota appointment and a traitor to his ethnic group.

Early on, Duberstein spells out the challenge: "To make the case that our candidate is decent, honest, qualified, intelligent and fair, while the other side's gonna claim he's ultraconservative, against women and minorities, and a little bit strange."

Patinkin, a Broadway musical star and a returning regular to TV's "Chicago Hope," captures the blunt realism of this political pro.

Of course, the nomination nearly capsized after Hill stepped forward with allegations of her former boss' crude remarks and come-ons' when they worked together at the Department of Education and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

As delivered by Taylor, Anita Hill's testimony at first faithfully mimics the real-life scene we viewed eight years ago. But in the film's surreal restaging, the cool, composed witness is permitted to cut loose, to exhibit the fury we remember her for keeping in check.

The words are Hill's, but here she seethes, she snarls, she sheds bitter tears. It's a startling display.

No more so than the reenacted testimony of Clarence Thomas, a defiant man who felt cornered and under siege. As with Hill, the film lets Thomas put his rage into action.

"This is a circus! A nar tional disgrace!" he erupts heroically, now on his feet before the senators. He rips off his shirt. "And as far as I'm concerned, as a black American, this is a high-tech lynching!" He tugs his necktie skyward, as if hanging by it.

"Bull's-eye!" says Duberstein, looking on with satisfaction.

In the end, Duberstein won the high-stakes game he had coached so well. The Bush Administration won. And, oh yes, Thomas pulled it out, gaining senate confirmation by a razor-thin vote of 52-48.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these. pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

· Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

· Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

· Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

· Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

House

annual dues and memorial donations has helped with up-keep on the house. Hundreds of labor hours have been spent by historical society members tending to the garden and decorating the house. Edwards and her assistant, Leslie Diaz, look after the house on a daily basis and clean it one to two times per week, depending on how many functions are booked. After the house became property of the county, the original carpet was removed and elegant wooden floors have been added with antique rugs, highlighting the Victorian style which was so popular in Hereford during the early 1900s. A quaint gazebo and enormous flower garden have been added behind the house and tend to get a lot of positive recognition amid all its beauty.

Also, each room has been decorated and modeled after the original rooms, some even maintaining original furniture. Furniture from the Black family includes a bookcase in the foyer, divan and chair in the right front room, as well as box-framed curly lockets of Jim Black's childhood hair along with the original painting of him above the lockets also in the right front room - yes, though it looks like a girl with the bow in his hair and the dress he is wearing, it is he.

Though not the originals, several other pieces of furni-ture are from Mr. E.B. Black's furniture store, such as the dining room table, and some have been purchased at estate and antique sales, one piece in particular is the oldfashion piano in the left front

This year a PVC fence was added on the east side of the property.

down to wire on Y2K ... others to go

WASHINGTON (AP) -The United States and at least five other countries do not expect to finish fixing their Year 2000 computer bugs until just weeks before the new year, an international survey reported Thursday.

Two other countries, Slovakia and Bolivia, do not believe they will finish until next year, meaning problems could occur after midnight strikes on New Year's Eve.

Bruce McConnell, director of the International Y2K Cooperation Center, said the late completion dates are not necessarily reason to expect catastrophe. Rather, he said, the survey points to areas in which to intensify contingency planning.

Y2K readiness is of greatest concern in developed countries such as the United States because they are the most dependent on information technology, Y2K planners say. Many computers were originally programmed to recognize only the last two digits of the year, so some might not be able to differentiate between 2000 and 1900. Unless they are reprogrammed in time, computers could malfunction.

The United States listed a December completion date for computers in the health care industry. Health care has been particularly troublesome because doctors, hospitals and payment systems are so decentralized.

"The health sector is the behind in, so it's not surprising that the U.S. is also getting finished in health later," McConnell said.

U.S. health care industry leaders have insisted that they will be ready for Jan. 1, although a recent congressional study said that assurances from industry groups have been based on surveys one that everyone is further that may be unreliable be-behind in, so it's not surpris- cause of low response rates.

Other countries not expected to finish until December are: Pakistan and Macedonia, for air transportation; Bulgaria, for health; Bolivia, for government ser-vices; Colombia, for customs, and Angola, for sea and land transportation, customs and health.

Clapton, Crow set free show

NEW YORK - Eric Clapton and Sheryl Crow will perform a free concert in Central Park next month that will be broadcast live on TV, radio and the Internet.

The Sept. 14 concert will take place in the park's East Meadow, where the Dalai Lama spoke earlier this month. Concert sponsor American Express will distribute some 25,000 tickets in New York in the week preceding the concert, Parks Department spokesman Robert Lawson said.

Those interested in attending would have to play a free lottery-like instant game, with winners receiving two tickets each.

The concert  $\cdot$  is billed as "Sheryl Crow and friends, including Eric Clapton." Lawson did not know who the additional "friends" would be.
