$1 billion surplus recorded

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials and top congressional Republicans are vying for credit after the Congressional Budget Office said it thinks fiscal 1999 ended with a $1 billion federal surplus, excluding Social Security.

If accurate, Tuesday's estimate by Congress' nonpartisan fiscal scorekeeper would mark the first time since 1960 that the government had balanced its books after discounting Social Security's big surpluses.

The projection came amid a budget fight in which President Clinton and Republicans are both claiming they don't want to use Social Security's surpluses to help pay for fiscal 2000's spending bills.

"Because Republicans held the line on spending, we were able to stop President Clinton from spending Social Security and were able to put the needs of seniors ahead of the needs of bureaucrats," said House Majority Leader Dick Army, R-Texas.

The 1999 surplus would have been even larger had congressional Republicans and Clinton not agreed to $21 billion in "emergency" spending for dozens of domestic and defense programs last autumn, and $15 billion for Kosovo, aid to U.S. farmers and other items last spring.

County OK's tax abatement

Top of Texas eyes expansion of its plant

By Julie L. Carlson
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Top of Texas Inc. received its final approval from the Deaf Smith County Commissioners for a five-year, 50 percent tax abatement.

The commissioners joined the City of Hereford and the Deaf Smith County Hospital District in approving the tax break for the company, located on New York Avenue in Hereford. The company sought the tax abatement for the expansion of its facility, a project estimated to cost more than $1 million.

The abatement request was rejected by the Hereford Independent School District.

In other business, the commissioners reappointed Troy Don Moore to the county appraisal district board. Other members of the board are Carey Black, city representative; Bobby Owen, hospital representative; and Lloyd Ames, HISD representative.

The county's retirement plan was approved with a 7 percent employee contribution rate and 9.42 percent employer contribution rate, with a matching ratio of $1.75 per employee's $1.

Although they took no action, the commissioners discussed an elevator service contract.

The contract calls for about $1,300 for yearly ADA (American Disabilities Act) inspections on the courthouse. The vote will occur at a later date.

The commissioners also did not vote on the meetings from their last meeting because County Clerk David Ruland was in Austin on business and the package was not available. The commissioners will review the minutes at the next meeting.

The motion to pay bills and review reports was approved. Among the reports was the September summary of activities from the Deaf Smith County Library. The activities include:

- Circulation of books
- Adult total: 4586;
- Children total: 2394.
- Collection Development
- Books total: 69,484;
- Paperbacks total: 3,781;
- Videos total: 1,022;
- Talking Books total: 772;

HEDC sets goals for year

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Hereford Economic Development Corp. directors want to keep doing what they've been doing — only better.

At the annual meeting of the HEDC board Tuesday afternoon, the directors reviewed Executive Director Don Cumpston's proposed goals for the next year.

DON CUMPTON
HEDC

Among the items on his list, Cumpston recommended a continued effort to promote the Hereford area as a good place for the dairy industry to do business, continue the effort to recruit small manufacturing firms not related to agriculture, continue the effort to encourage local industry growth/expansion, and continue the effort to recruit expansion of the local retail sector.

In his presentation, Cumpston said he has been in contact with dairy operations that are considering relocation or expansion.

"We've had some interest in our area," Cumpston said, adding he has visited with a dairy operator whom he said is very interested in the area.

HEDC chairman Cliff Skiles said the organization has "worked hard on the dairy industry without much success. These two grain operations (Farmland Industries and Archer-Daniels-Midland) should help us. They should give us a leg up."

Cumpston said HEDC has spent considerable money over the last two-three years promoting the county among the dairy industry. Most of the promotion has been through direct mail.

He said public relations consultant Steve Jolly has asked if HEDC will continue the project. Cumpston said if HEDC were to continue to work with Jolly's firm, a new brochure would have to be produced because some of the people who are pictured in the brochure no longer live in the county.

Hereford Mayor Bob

Josserand questioned the success of the direct-mail operation, saying the people most likely to respond to the mailouts are "people who are looking for a handout."

Cumpston said he agrees the approach should be modified, but he wants to continue to recruit the dairy industry.

Skiles suggested the effort should be face-to-face contact rather than direct mail.

Cumpston agreed, saying "word of mouth" likely will make more headway.

Josserand suggested approaching companies that provide feed to the dairies. He said if the feed companies are cultivated, they might pass the word that Hereford's interested in dairies.

Cumpston also said he believes there are some opportunities for HEDC to recruit non-agricultural industry. He said light manufacturing not tied to agriculture will help diversify the economy. He said he has been in contact with some serious prospects.

Skiles said the idea of recruiting non-agriculture industries is good, but HEDC doesn't have the resources to put any money up front. He said he would prefer to work out an arrangement to assist on a monthly basis, such as with a rent subsidy.

Cumpston said he will attend a small manufacturing trade show soon. He said more than 1,700 companies are expected to be at the trade show, which will be in Las Vegas, Nev.

He also said HEDC has done a good job in helping local companies with expansion projects, and he wants to continue the efforts.

In the goal to promote the retail sector, Cumpston said HEDC needs to do more to sell Hereford to retail operations. He said there has been no movement on location of a Wal-Mart Supercenter store in Hereford.

The board also had a lengthy discussion about the pork industry, with Cumpston saying problems with Seaboard Farms' development of a pork processing plant in Great Bend, Kan., could put Hereford back in the picture as a possible site.

2 firms looking at city

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

There are no guarantees, but the executive director of the Hereford Economic Development Corp. said today his agency is involved in negotiations with two manufacturing firms interested in a possible relocation/expansion to this area.

Don Cumpston said this morning he hopes to be able to bring representatives of the two companies to Hereford to tour the possible plant sites and get acquainted with the community.

Cumpston said he spoke with representatives of Fink & Co. Inc. of Hope, Ark., and Safe Solutions of Dallas and said both companies have shown interest in Hereford as a possible location.

Fink & Co. manufactures jigsaw puzzles and building block toys. If the company were to relocate to Hereford, it would begin operations with about 40-50 employees, a figure that officials believe could increase to 70-80 workers.

Cumpston said he traveled to Arkansas recently to meet with company officials and tour the plant.

Safe Solutions is a two-year company that manufactures a line of skin care products, as well as some pet care products.

"They use all-natural ingredients, with the juice of the prickly pear cactus as the base ingredient," Cumpston said. "They are getting their raw products from West Texas."

The company's main products are sunscreen, insect repellents and lotions for burns and abrasions, as well as pet shampoo.

If the company were to relocate to Hereford, Cumpston said officials indicated they would employ 25-30 workers during the first year, with a target of 50-60 employees in the second year.

Cumpston stressed the talks with the two companies are still in the early stages, but he is optimistic about the prospects.

Senate moves forward on farm bailout bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate headed toward final approval of an $8.7 billion package of emergency farm assistance after turning aside protests from eastern senators who said their farmers were being shortchanged.

The Senate voted 79-20 Tuesday to limit debate on the $69 billion agricultural spending bill that includes the aid package.

"The sooner we pass this legislation, the sooner we can assist the family farmer," Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa., said.

A final vote on the legislation, which would send it to President Clinton for his signature, was expected this afternoon. The first checks could be going to farmers within a few weeks after the president signs the bill, said Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

Clinton has made no threat to veto the measure.

Senators from the Northeast are unhappy that it doesn't provide more money for growers hit by drought this year and allow New England states to continue fixing milk prices.

"We in the East ... have always been there to vote for disaster assistance for other parts of the country even though it has not affected us," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.

It would be the second big government bailout of the farm economy in as many years, and Democrats say that's evidence that the market-oriented farm policy that the Republican-controlled Congress enacted in 1996 isn't working. Commodity prices collapsed last year because of a worldwide glut of grain.

"This program is getting more and more expensive with fewer and fewer satisfied customers," said Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb.

This year's aid package includes $5.5 billion to double the annual "market transition" payments that farmers were to have gotten this year and $1.4 billion in disaster relief, including $200 million earmarked for livestock producers. Additional money is targeted for tobacco, soybean and peanut growers and to reduce premiums that farmers pay for crop insurance.

The market transition payments would go out first. Claims for disaster assistance would take much longer to process and may be paid in two installments, Glickman said.

Congressional leaders are considering providing additional assistance later for North Carolina producers whose land was flooded by Hurricane Floyd last month, said a spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott.

Farm losses are $1 billion. Work on the bill has been delayed several times, starting in late June when Senate Democrats tried to attach controls on HMOs. Last month, the bill was held up in a House-Senate conference for more than a week because Republican leaders refused to include provisions to allow sales of food and medicine to Cuba and overhaul the Agriculture Department's new milk-pricing regulations.

"The fact is ... we need to get some assistance out," said Tom Buis of the National Farmers Union.

McCain gaining on Bush

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — For the first time, Sen. John McCain led Texas Gov. George W. Bush in a new Arizona poll.

The Grand Canyon State poll conducted by Northern Arizona University between Oct. 2 and Oct. 10 found 39 percent of Arizona's Republicans preferred the senator to 28 percent for Bush. That portion of the poll had an error margin of plus or minus 5.7 percentage points.

In an Arizona State University poll last month, McCain trailed Bush by 9 percentage points. Gov. Jane Hull recently endorsed Bush.

Fred Solop director of the Social Research Laboratory at Northern Arizona, credited the rise to McCain's tour to promote his book, "Faith of My Fathers," which has been on the bestseller list for several weeks, and his formal announcement of his campaign.

"McCain has made a large push in the state," Solop said. "I would say it is a two-person race right now."

Fourteen percent in the Grand Canyon State poll were undecided. Six percent preferred Steve Forbes, and Elizabeth Dole was at 5 percent.

All four have visited Arizona recently, though the Forbes visit was prior to the poll and the Dole visit came just as it was ending.

McCain has staked his campaign on a strong finish in New Hampshire with victories in South Carolina and Arizona for momentum going into California's March 7 primary.

Demos drop effort to delay pact vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle said today that Democrats and the White House appear to have lost an effort to delay a losing vote on a global nuclear test-ban treaty.

"We're prepared to vote," Daschle declared, adding that rejection of the treaty would be an election issue.

He said neither he nor President Clinton is willing to make any further concessions to Senate conservatives — even if it means the treaty will be rejected later today by a largely party-line vote.

Supporters concede they are far short of the 67 needed to ratify the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

"There's a limit to what I can do and I've reached that limit," Daschle said.

Daschle blamed a "small group of senators on the far right" for preventing Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott from honoring a tentative deal reached Tuesday by the two Senate leaders.

Lott could still delay today's vote if he chose, Daschle indicated.

Since the Senate put aside debate on the treaty to take up farm legislation this morning, it would require a majority vote to go back to the treaty, Daschle said. He said Democrats would oppose that motion.

Daschle commented as Lott met with Republicans to see if a deal could still be found that would permit a delay.

"There hasn't been much movement this morning" among Republicans, said Lott spokesman John Czawartacki.

While bipartisan support had appeared to be building in the Senate to delay the vote, finding a graceful exit from near-certain defeat of the pact remained elusive.

A small group of conservatives continued to threaten to block any effort at meeting Clinton's request that the vote be delayed.

On Monday, Clinton met one GOP demand — requesting a delay in writing. Daschle on Tuesday offered a further pledge to Republicans: that he would not seek to reschedule a vote on the treaty during next year's presidential election season "barring extraordinary circumstances."

"The White House is not prepared to make any further concessions," and neither is he, Daschle told reporters.

"I'm prepared to accept the vote on this treaty. ... We'll let the chips fall where they may."

Furthermore, Daschle said, "We expect this will be an issue in the national elections next year if this isn't resolved."

In a speech, meanwhile, at the University of Maine, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said the United States has no plan to conduct nuclear weapons tests, whatever the outcome of the Senate debate, and would discourage other nations from testing.

New rector at St. Thomas has survived trial of faith

By Becky Thorn

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

The Rev. Dr. Lamuel G. Salik will be instituted as rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Father Salik and his family came to Hereford in mid-August of this year from New Jersey, but his story encompasses many miles, many years and a miraculous trial of his faith.

Father Salik was born in 1941 in a small village in the district of Sahiwal (then India), now Pakistan. He worked as a book salesman, an industrial chemist, a gemstones dealer and a social worker.

But according to Salik, a great change came in his life when he met Bishop Chandu Ray of Karachi in 1967. Bishop Ray was a convert to Christianity from high-caste Hindus.

"The Rev. G.M. Naaman, who was a convert from Islam, introduced me to the bishop and we stayed in few days of fasting and prayer," Salik said. "During that period, I felt the call for the Lord's service and immediately resigned from my secular job and proceeded to the Seminary in Gujranwala, Pakistan."

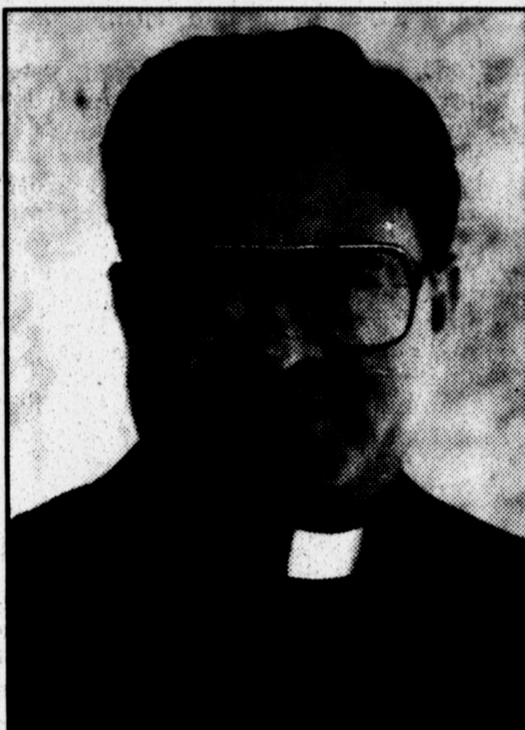

After completing his seminary education, Father Salik worked as a Curate at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Karachi, and as a Vicar at St. John's Church, Sanghar, Sind, Pakistan.

"In the month of September 1974, while visiting Istanbul, Turkey, I had an experience of physical persecution because of my faith in Christ," Father Salik said. "Four Muslim fundamentalists argued with me about my faith and the superiority of Islam to all other religions."

These men blamed Father Salik for converting Muslims to Christianity in Pakistan and demanded that he recite the "kalima," or Islamic creed, in an attempt to convert him to Islam.

When he refused to recite the creed, they started beating him and threatened to kill him.

"On my persistence of refusal, they became furious and demanded that I denounce Jesus and embrace Islam. Though no bone was broken, bruises were all over because of the blows and kicks received to my body. Persistence to my Christian faith infuriated them even more, and the blows to my body became more severe," Salik said.

"Jesus Christ, my Savior and Lord, miraculously kept me alive and saved me from those brutal people and death. After two days, I traveled to Athens, Greece, and received comfort and treatment."

"I do not have hatred or ill feelings for the religion of Islam or followers of Islam. I have very good Muslim friends and I enjoy witnessing among them. And I would like to say I have forgiven the people who tortured me."

After Father Salik's tormentors had locked him in a room and left him for dead, he was assisted by a man from Pakistan who knew Salik's uncle, the headmaster of the man's native village. Father Salik was able to escape and get back to his hotel, but he has never heard the fate of the man who helped him.

But the miracle does not end there. All of Salik's money had been taken by the men who tortured him, but just as he returned to his hotel he received a phone call from the Turkish State Bank.

"The bank officer said 'Bring your passport and take your money.' I went to the bank, showed my passport and took $1,000 which somebody from America sent. How somebody would know I am staying there with that passport number? It was just like Jesus Christ miraculously sent me the money and I receive it," Salik said.

In September 1977, Father Salik went to Birmingham University in England, where he studied in the Department of Theology for a diploma in Pastoral Studies.

He then came to the United States and worked for the World Relief Friendship Foundation and as a volunteer priest in different churches.

He was rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Woodstown, N.J., from 1991 to 1993.

From 1993 to July 1999, he worked as a supply priest in several different churches in the Diocese of New Jersey and during this time continued his education. He attended the Parish Development Institute at General Theological Seminary, New York and the College of Preachers in Washington, D.C. From May 1996 to June 1998 he studied at Faith Theological Seminary and completed his Doctor of Religious Education degree.

"Though it is a big change to move from the East Coast to Texas, I am enjoying the new challenge as the people and clergy of the diocese and town are hospitable, cooperative and willing to progress," Father Salik said.

"I love Hereford. These people are angels in the form of human beings. My purpose is not to steal sheep from the other churches but I cordially extend an invitation to those people who do not go to any church that they are most welcome to worship with us."

Salik also said he will provide free counseling and pastoral service for those of any faith who feel they need help with marital, social or other problems.

Salik and his wife Rose have two children, Sarah and Simon, who are a senior and junior, respectively at Hereford High School.

The Right Reverend C. Wallis Ohl, Bishop of Northwest Texas, will institute Father Salik. Among others expected to attend the institution are guests from the East Coast, Salik's cousin from London and perhaps a member of the Pakistan Parliament.

"I wish to express my gratitude and thanks to the parishioners and to the congregations at large and their pastors. I very much appreciate it," Salik said.

October: National Pizza Month

Traditional time to celebrate popular food industry

FENTON, Mo. — According to Pizza Today Magazine, October is National Pizza Month. It was first so designated in 1987 and continues to be the traditional time for celebration of one of America's most important and popular food industries.

Pizza has a long history, longer than most Americans realize. The first pizza were most likely made in prehistoric times with bread cooked on hot, flat stones.

According to the Smithsonian, around 1,000 years ago herb and spice covered circles of baked dough known as focaccia became very popular in Naples, Italy.

After focaccia, the Italians took the next step toward modern day pizza, "Casa de nanza" or "take out before." Housewives would pound out dough into a thin crust and place leftovers on to bake all day in the hot sun.

Though pizza was originally created as a peasant food and designed to be eaten without utensils, modern day pizza was created for a queen. In 1889, Don Raffaele Esposito of Naples was asked to prepare a dish for Queen Margherita Teresa Giovanni while she was visiting Naples.

Esposito's pizza featured tomatoes, mozzarella cheese (a never before used ingredient made from the milk of a water buffalo), and basil. Then it was topped with red, white and green for the Italian flag. The first modern day pizza was titled the Margherita pizza after the guest of honor.

As we round the corner of a new millennium, pizza has become one of the most popular foods in America. Ninety-three percent of Americans eat at least one pizza per month; that's approximately 100 acres of pizza each day, or 350 slices per second.

Most people would agree that the first step to a great pizza is a great crust. This year, in honor of National Pizza Month, Fleischmann's Yeast has created two new pizza recipes that are sure to please the whole family - Basil Parmesan Pizza and Cheese-Tomato Pizza.

Formulated as a bread machine recipe, Basil Parmesan Pizza has a yeast-risen crust with basil and Parmesan cheese baked right in. Topped with green pepper, red onion, tomato, and mozzarella cheese, Basil Parmesan Pizza is an attractive and mouth watering dish pleasing to the king or queen of your life.

If it's a simpler taste you are looking for, try Cheese-Tomato Pizza. Cheese-Tomato Pizza has a delicious, yeast-risen crust, which contains peanut oil. The crust is topped with a savory tomato sauce with crushed oregano and basil then smothered with a mozzarella and provolone cheese blend, grated cheddar, and fresh grated Parmesan cheese.

CHEESE-TOMATO PIZZA

Dough:
3 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 package rapid rise yeast
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 cup water
2 teaspoons peanut oil

Topping:
Quick Tomato Sauce (recipe follows)

1 1/2 cups mozzarella and provolone cheese blend
1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese
1/2 cup grated fresh Parmesan cheese

In large bowl, combine 2 cups flour, sugar, undissolved yeast, and salt. Heat water and peanut oil until very warm (120 to 130 degrees). Gradually stir into dry ingredients. Stir in enough remaining flour to make stiff dough. Turn out onto floured surface. Knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Cover; let rest 10 minutes.

Divide dough in half. Shape each half into a ball. Roll each into a 12-inch circle. Place each on greased 12-inch pizza pans or baking sheets. Prick dough with fork; let rest 10 minutes.

Parbake at 450 degrees for 5 minutes. Remove from pans; place on wire cooling racks. Spread Quick Tomato Sauce evenly on each crust; sprinkle with cheese. Bake on wire racks at 450 degrees for 10 minutes or until done. Cut into wedges and serve immediately.

Quick Tomato Sauce:

Combine 1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce and 1/4 cup tomato paste. Stir in 1/2 teaspoon each of crushed oregano and crushed basil.

BASIL PARMESAN PIZZA

1 cup water
2 tablespoons olive oil or vegetable oil
3/4 teaspoon salt
3 cups bread flour
1/4 cup grated fresh Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
2 teaspoons bread machine yeast

1 tablespoon cornmeal
Add water, oil, salt, bread flour, cheese, basil and yeast to bread machine pan in the order suggested by manufacturer. Select dough/manual cycle. When cycle is complete, remove dough from machine to a lightly floured surface. If necessary, knead in enough flour to make dough easy to handle.

Grease pizza pan (see tip below for pan size) and sprinkle with cornmeal. Roll out dough and place on pan or pat dough in pan. Top with green pepper, red onion, tomato, and mozzarella cheese. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 to 25 minutes or until done. Pizza is done when edges of crust are golden and cheese is bubbly. Makes 1 or 2 pizzas.

Pizza Pan Tip

Bake your pizza in any of the pan sizes listed below.

- 1 1/2-poufd recipe:
Two 12-inch round pans (for a thin crust)
- One 14-inch round pan (for a thick crust)
- One 15 x 10-inch baking sheet (for a thin crust)

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from Boca Raton, Fla., regarding infertility brought back many memories. "Boca" said she had tried for years to become pregnant, and finally gave up and adopted. The very next month, she became pregnant. When she told everyone the great news, they said, "It happened because you finally relaxed." She said relaxing had nothing to do with it.

Thirty years have passed, but I remember the frustration of trying to conceive as if it were yesterday. My husband and I were part of the original fertility research group at the University of Washington Fertility Clinic, over 30 years ago. We endured four years of biopsies, medication, artificial insemination, temperature record-keeping, and countless other personal invasions because we wanted a family. Finally, we were dismissed as failures. The only reason given was that I didn't ovulate and that process could not be duplicated. We then decided to adopt.

By the time the adoption application process was completed, I was pregnant. That was the first of four pregnancies. Ten years ago, I was contacted by the U. of W. Fertility Clinic as part of a follow-up study. When I informed them of the resulting pregnancies, they told me stress can cause the pituitary gland to malfunction. So you see, Ann, there is indeed a valid scientific basis for the relationship between relaxing and fertility. — Been There in Seattle

Dear Seattle: You are not the only one to point this out. I heard from several readers who said the same thing. Keep reading:

From Santa Rosa, Calif.: I am an art therapist who works with people suffering from infertility. Well-documented studies show that stress can have a major effect on fertility. One study at Harvard Medical School showed that women who went through a 10-week stress-reduction program conceived at a 44 percent higher rate. You were right, however, when you said her fertility is nobody's business.

Nashville, Tenn.: My uncle and aunt were told by a number of fertility specialists that they could never have children. When my cousin and his wife were killed in a car accident, my aunt and uncle adopted their young son. After the adoption, my aunt became pregnant. But she didn't stop there. They ended up having 11 children of their own, plus the son they adopted.

Seattle: I am a nurse in an obstetrician's office. It happens so often it has become trite — after failing to get pregnant for years and years, a woman will become pregnant soon after adopting. I do not have any actual statistics on this, but everyone knows someone this has happened to. Even doctors are beginning to admit the validity of the body-mind connection. I say "EVEN doctors" because I suspect they don't want people to know how much healing can be done through the mind and spirit, without medical help.

Dear Seattle: I have long believed that what goes on in the head can have a profound effect on the body. Your theory that doctors don't want patients to know this is incorrect. In fact, many physicians use this approach in the healing process. Here's one more:

Dear Ann: My parents were married for 11 years, and were told by fertility experts they could not have children because my mother was "barren," and my father had a low sperm count. They decided to take a trip around the world on the money they had set aside for the family they would never have. By the time they reached Australia, Mom was pregnant. They went on to have eight children — two after she was 45 years old. So much for the experts, eh?

Just Rolling Along

■ Lady Whitefaces just a few victories away from a district championship, defeat Amarillo Palo Duro 15-4, 15-4

By Yuri Soto
Hereford Brand Sports Editor

AMARILLO—The Palo Duro High School Lady Dons only scored one point against the Lady Whitefaces on Sept. 25.

The Lady Dons quadrupled that point total on Tuesday night thanks to aggressive play.

But it wasn't enough as Hereford escaped Amarillo unscathed and defeated Palo Duro 15-4, 15-4 on Tuesday.

From the onset, it was evident that Palo Duro was ready to play the Lady Whitefaces.

Palo Duro's Joannie Ransom started the game with a kill. Then, it was Michelle Bernhardt with a kill of her own.

After two more sideouts that seemed to take forever, a kill errors by Paige Diggs put Hereford up 1-0.

"We came out a little slow," said defensive specialist Catherine Beville, who recorded six digs. "I guess we took them for granted because how bad we beat them the last time."

Kills by Ashley Fangman, Audra Witkowski, a service ace by Sarah Griffin and kill errors by Palo Duro hitters put Hereford in a commanding 7-1 lead.

"I was very pleased how I played tonight, but I don't think we prepared like we should have been," said Fangman, who finished with two kills. "We were very iffy."

A couple of sideouts followed before Adrienne Howard's kill put the score 7-2 in favor of Hereford.

The Lady Whitefaces had trouble putting away the Lady Dons all evening.

"You certainly worry about coming in flat after an emotional victory and emotional match like we had on Saturday," Hereford coach Brenda Kitten said. "Win or lose, is awfully tough to play the next match."

Teresa Murray's kill error put Hereford up 8-2, but more sideouts followed, until a kill by Tori Walker gave Hereford the ball on service.

Two errors by the Lady Dons, a kill and block ace from Walker and a service ace from Ashley Gonzales put the Lady Whitefaces up 14-2.

But here came those pesky Lady Dons again, refusing to go down.

A Ransom kill and a dig error by McKenzie Tabor put two more points for the Lady Dons. Hereford had a 14-4 lead.

"They're a good team and they're going to come after you. They're not just going to lie down and die," said Michelle Bernhardt, who scored seven kills. In the first game, they wanted us bad because they got embarrassed, and I just had to fight back and not let them pick Spiked at You — Toni Eicke spikes the ball toward Palo Duro's side Tuesday night. Hereford is just a few wins away from clinching a playoff spot and from winning a district championship. They will play at Pampa on Saturday, starting at 3 p.m.

Double Bookend Trouble

■ Whiteface defensive ends create trouble for opposing offenses

By Yuri Soto
Hereford Brand Sports Editor

Offensive coaches fear them. Quarterbacks are petrified by them when they play them.

But nobody knows them, until they watch that film of the Whitefaces, or when they play the Whitefaces.

Those two players opponents have had trouble stopping are Hereford's version of Lawrence Taylor and Derrick Thomas, Michael Barba and Gilbert Hernandez.

Michael Barba knows the success of football because not only has he experienced it, but it's in his blood, thanks to a former standout defensive lineman named Bobby.

"I always saw my brother play and I want to be like him and be respected like he was," Barba said. "Everytime, he tries to give me tips and I try to do everything better because he's been there and helped me become a better player."

Those tips from Bobby has helped Michael become one of the most relentless defenders in the area. He currently has 39 tackles, 17 of them solo, and five sacks.

"We're very pleased to have Michael and he was a very, very important part of our football team as a sophomore," Hereford coach Craig Yenser said. "He has tremendous experience from playing in the game and played the playoff game as a sophomore."

Michael got one sack against Dumas on Friday, but on one play, he delivered a vicious hit to Dumas quarterback Derek Shipworth that could have been felt in any man's bad back.

"He just would come back on a backward pass every time and he wouldn't get hit and I wanted to shake him up a little bit," Barba said. "I just tried to get to him and we talked about it on the sidelines about to try to hit him and said 'lets knock him down and get him scared and just go after the ball."

That's just part of what Barba has to offer on the Hereford team. Hard work and plenty of plays. Heck, he's always on the ball.

"We just go out there everyday and be ready to play every game," Barba said. "I try my hardest, go all out for the team and play defense and I think that's why we're loose."

That could also be said about the other half of the bookend, Gilbert Hernandez.

Last year, Hernandez battled with injuries and didn't get a lot of playing time from the rover position. But switching positions has been good for Hernandez. He's been one of those unselfish players.

"As long as everybody is doing their job, nobody will get past us," Hernandez said. "We've been doing a good job busting our butts, him (Barba) and me are always competing against each other since the 7th grade."

Like Barba, Hernandez followed heir play, and want to play, like their older brothers. Both big brothers have been a great inspirations in the play of Hernandez.

"My big brother played here and he was pretty good and I just want to be good like him," Hernandez said, "and we're just trying to play to our potential and just be ourselves."

Hernandez has had his share of success. He's recorded 18 tackles and three sacks.

"He has really come out and played well as a defensive end and has established himself early because he was battling with some seniors that were good athletes at defensive end as well," Yenser said, "and he established himself as the frontrunner during preseason."

But neither player has gotten to the points of success if it wasn't for their competitive attitudes that started way back

Defensive ends Gilbert Hernandez (left) and Michael Barba have been defensive monsters for Hereford, combining for 57 tackles and eight sacks.

Braves take Game 1 of NLCS, 4-2

ATLANTA (AP) — After all the sniping between the Atlanta Braves and New York Mets, Greg Maddux gave both teams something to agree on — that pitching wins in the postseason.

Maddux put an end to the offensive madness that ruled recent playoff games, and the Braves kept on beating New York with a 4-2 victory Tuesday night in the opener of the NL Championship Series.

"What happened last year, the last 10 years, who cares?" Maddux said. "What matters is now."

Of course, pitching has always been the ticket in October. And after Boston and Cleveland combined for 50 runs in two AL playoff games this week, Maddux restored order from the mound.

"We need three more games. We're on the right track so far," Maddux said.

Maddux worked seven innings, allowing only one run against a Mets lineup that once again had Mike Piazza. A day earlier, Maddux admitted he did not know what was being said in the clubs' trash talking — he said he was too busy watching "Franklin," a cartoon show about a turtle, with his kids.

"He's Greg Maddux. He doesn't have all those trophies because he's lucky," Mets manager Bobby Valentine said. "He did a great job."

Maddux, Mike Remlinger and John Rocker combined on a six-hitter as the Braves beat New York for the 10th time in 13 meetings this year. Atlanta, which sent the Mets into a late tailspin that almost cost them the wild-card spot, has defeated them in 14 of the last 15 matchups at Turner Field.

Piazza came back after missing the final two games of the first-round win over Arizona because of a swollen left thumb. He drove in the Mets' only run against Maddux with a groundout, and finished 0-for-4.

Piazza did not hit the ball out of the infield. The Braves also stole three bases against the All-Star catcher — he made a poor throw on one attempt and didn't even make a throw on another.

A crowd of 44,172 — 6,000 short of capacity, perhaps held down by an all-day rain that caused a four-minute delay at the start — saw Atlanta win the opening game of the NLCS at home. The previous two years, the Braves lost Game 1 at home and eventually lost the series.

Every year since 1991, the team that won Game 1 went on to win the NLCS. Atlanta has been in every one of those best-of-7 series.

Game 2 was to be this afternoon, with Kevin Millwood, who pitched a one-hitter against Houston in the opening round, starting for the Braves' against Kenny Rogers.

Maddux, a four-time Cy Young winner and a nine-time Gold Glove, gave an all-around performance in improving to 10-9 lifetime in the postseason. He beat the team that got eight straight hits off him Sept. 29 at Shea Stadium, put down a perfect sacrifice bunt and made several nice fielding plays.

Walt Weiss, making his first start since the last day of the regular season, had three hits and stole a base for the Braves.

Weiss doubled and scored on Gerald Williams' single for a 2-1 lead in the fifth off losing pitcher Masato Yoshii. Eddie Perez homered in the sixth and Weiss hit an RBI single in the eighth.

Cox had been playing Jose Hernandez at shortstop ever since the Braves got him in a late-season deal with the Chicago Cubs. Hernandez was 5-for-7 lifetime against Yoshii, but Cox decided to start Weiss.

Rocker got four outs for a save. As is his custom, he ran in to relieve and, with a runner on second, threw fastballs of 97 mph, 94 and 97 to strike out John Olerud.

New York scored an unearned run in the ninth on Todd Pratt's two-out single. A day earlier, Rocker was one of the most vocal Atlanta players, wondering aloud how Valentine "can say a word" about the Braves.

The Mets missed a chance in the third when Yoshii missed a bunt try on a suicide-squeeze play.

Ends

in the 7th grade football days.

"We both get pumped for a big play and he's happy for me," Hernandez said. "He's one of my best friends and when he makes a play, I am happy for him. But when he makes a play, I usually had something to do with it."

Added Barba: "He's an outstanding player, the way he practices and everything, it's weird. It was hard for him at first, but every week he's improving more and more each week, he main play and doing more things."

It is a team sport, and they are just part of that team. They know how good they can be.

"I think as anyone goes 100%, anybody can make the play, and I know Michael and I bust our butts and take care of our assignments," Hernandez said. "It's a good feeling to know that the guys next to us will do their jobs."

Added Barba: "We can't always make the play or make the big play, we're always trying to do our jobs right."

Chamberlain recalled as gracious, incomparably dominant giant

(AP) — Practically everyone has heard of Wilt Chamberlain's 100-point game, and lots of folks know that he once averaged more than 50 points per game.

Few, however, are aware of Wilt Chamberlain's most unbreakable record of all — he averaged 48.5 minutes per game in 1961-62. It was a mark that Chamberlain himself said would never be broken and the record many of his contemporaries pointed to Tuesday as an example of his incomparability.

"I thought Lou Gehrig's record would never be broken," said Johnny "Red" Kerr, who played part of one season in Philadelphia with Chamberlain game.

Chamberlain set that record by playing almost every minute of every game — including overtime — for an entire season. He sat for only six minutes all season.

"That was something that probably will never be reached again. That was some kind of an accomplishment," said Don Chaney, who played against Chamberlain in the late 1960s.

Others marveled at how Chamberlain, who died Tuesday at age 63, so dominated the game that he made the NBA change its rules.

Years ago, teams could pass the ball over the backboard or take a running start when attempting a foul shot. The former was outlawed because Chamberlain would use the backboard as a screen, cherry-picking passes and converting them into layups; the latter was banned after Chamberlain took a running start, leaped from the foul line and dunked the ball.

Yes, Chamberlain dunked foul shots.

And that was long before Julius Erving or Brent Barry did it (while stepping on the line in the process) in exhibitions.

"I don't think it's fair to compare players in different eras, but he was about as dominant as any one player could be in any sport," Philadelphia 76ers coach Larry Brown said. "I looked at him like he was invincible."

When word came that Chamberlain had died, Brown passed along the news to his team and told them a story that tried to put one of Chamberlain's greatest accomplishments — averaging more than 50 points in a season — into perspective.

"It was a night when someone, Bernard King or Adrian Dantley, scored 50 points," said Brown, who played at Kansas and coached at North Carolina — the two schools that took part in one of the greatest college games ever, the 1957 triple-overtime NCAA championship game won by the Tar Heels against Chamberlain's Jayhawks.

"It was the 257th time a player other than Wilt had scored 50 or more, but all that did was tie the number of times Wilt did it," Brown said.

Brown also told another story about a summer day in the early 1980s at the Men's Gym on the UCLA campus. Chamberlain used to show regularly up to take part in one of the high-octane pickup games tat. That's the truth, I saw it. He didn't let one (of Johnson's) shots get to the rim."

Chamberlain would have been in his mid-40s at the time, a decade removed from one of the greatest careers any basketball player ever produced. But the advancing years meant little to Chamberlain in terms of physical conditioning.

Into his 50s and his 60s, Chamberlain remained an incredible specimen — a mountain of a man who was as coordinated and talented athletically as he was imposing physically.

But the very idea of signing a player so old shows just how well Chamberlain kept himself in shape — and how shocked people were when they heard he had died.

"A guy in that kind of shape, you can't live forever, but you don't expect him to clock in early," Chaney said.

Chamberlain scored 31,419 points during his career, a record until Kareem Abdul-Jabbar broke it in 1984. Chamberlain, who never fouled out in 1,205 regular-season and playoff games, holds the record for career rebounds with 23,924.

Jr. High volleyball struggles at Canyon

From Staff Reports

The Hereford junior high volleyball teams got one win against Canyon, but other teams struggles.

The 8th Grade 'A' team defeated Canyon 15-6, 15-6. Gina Artho and Yvonne Garcia each had six points.

The 8th Grade 'B' team lost to Canyon 12-15, 7-15. Alyssa Garcia and Melissa Stubbs each scored points for the Lady Whitefaces.

Both eighth grade team participated in the Dumas Jr. High Tournament over the weekend. The 'A' team lost to Dumas in the championship game, 15-4, 15-4. The 'B' team defeated Pampa for a third-place finish, 15-11.

The 7th Grade 'A' team lost to Canyon on Monday, 15-10, 5-15, 15-17, 15-6. Jennifer Winget and Sarah Cortez led the team in scoring.

The 'B' team lost 11-15, 6-15. Rhiana Noland scored five points in a losing effort.

on me."

Sarah Griffin's block ace finally stopped the first game momentum by the Lady Dons and ended game one.

Bernhardt, who had more errors than kills against Dumas on Saturday, took it upon herself to key Hereford to the victories in both games with critical kills and blocks.

"Coach Kitten tried to talk to me and she said that you haven't gone at it very aggressive and in practice in the last couple of days," Bernhardt said. "On Monday, I tried to go in and hit very aggressive and focus what I needed to correct like reaching, and I was just able to do that tonight."

I the second game, the Lady Dons came out firing hard, but most of the time, their shots misfired.

"We've seen them play better and we watched the before even they started warming up and some of their hitters were flat out banging the ball," Kitten said. "So we knew we had our work cut out for us and we certainly wanted to take them for granted."

Even more sideouts by both teams, a combined 18, were exchanged, even with Hereford building a 6-0 lead. In the second game.

Howard and Tikita Daniel finally put Palo Duro on the board with a double block ace.

But three errors on the net and a kill by Bernhardt put the Lady Whitefaces up 10-1.

After Howard's service ace put the score 10-2, four more sideouts came along until Bernhardt put Hereford up 11-2.

The two teams exchanged errors and the score was 12-4.

Two more errors gave Hereford a commanding 14-4 lead.

But the pesky Lady Dons would give Hereford three more sideouts until Tori Walker finished Palo Duro off with a kill. Walker finished with nine kills.

"Defensively, we let dome balls fall defensively and just not really anticipating what their hitters were going to do," Kitten said. "The errors we committed defensively were just a matter of being more alert and more respectful of the other team's offense."

The next test for the Lady Whitefaces are the Pampa Lady Harvesters, who got swept in Hereford on Sept. 29.

"They were awfully embarrassed at their play in Hereford," Kitten said. "I know their coach and their kids can play better. It's always a struggle going into their gym."

The junior varsity team defeated Palo Duro's JV, 15-8, 15-5.

It ain't Happy — Texans upset with film portrayal

HAPPY (AP) — It takes a lot to get under the skin of folks in this West Texas town. Even the falling prices of corn and cotton don't seem to rile them much.

Yet Hollywood has managed to make this town, well, un-Happy.

The new film "Happy, Texas" follows the offbeat and sometimes off-color adventures of two escaped convicts who get confused for traveling beauty pageant gurus.

A farce, perhaps, but Happy residents also point out the movie features stereotypical Texans in big boots dodging armadillos in the road on their way to a gay honky-tonk bar.

Trouble is, that's not Happy: The PG-13 rated film wasn't made in this town about 120 miles north of Lubbock in the Texas Panhandle. And many of Happy's 650 residents aren't amused.

"If they're going to make a movie about Happy, then let them make it about the real place," said Ed Burk, a farmer. "There is no gay bar in Happy."

Added Jess Rutledge, also a farmer: "I don't know why they decided to name it 'Happy, Texas,' if it wasn't filmed here and it isn't really about the place."

The Miramax film's credits make that clear, thanking the residents of Happy "even though we shot entirely on location in Peru, California ... Sorry."

Former Academy Award

nominee William H. Macy, who stars as a hard-boiled county sheriff experiencing a sexual identity crisis, said the film wasn't intended to poke fun at small-town Texas.

"The script made me literally laugh out loud," Macy said Tuesday. "It's a great story, a worthwhile story with real humanity and a genuine love for all the characters. It could've so easily been cliched in that mean-spirited way so many movies are now, with cardboard-cutout stereotypes. It could've made fun of people, but it didn't."

The decision to set the story in Happy was no accident. Co-writer Ed Stone worked as a disc jockey in a town not far from Happy when he was in his 20s. He said even then, his jokes about the town's annual "Miss Happy" beauty pageant raised tempers.

"Like most every small town in Texas, Happy's citizens were just mad when it came to beauty pageants," Stone said. "As a disc jockey from another part of the world, I'd sometimes go on the air and poke a little fun at this obsession with pageants and you wouldn't believe the angry calls that came in."

People in Happy, so named because pioneers who ran out

"Like most every small town in Texas, Happy's citizens were just mad when it came to beauty pageants."

Co-writer Ed Stone

of water were delighted to find a creek here, certainly appear to take their happiness seriously. The city sits behind a giant billboard proclaiming it the "town without a frown."

This is not the first time Happy has been in the spotlight. It was the subject of an ice cream commercial and is constantly swamped with letters from schoolchildren who want to know about the town.

City secretary Patricia Sims said she and other officials voted to give the film's producers permission to use the town's name. At the time, however, they didn't know the plot.

"We have requests like this all the time and we grant most of them because we want people to know about our wonderful town," Mrs. Sims said.

"It's our hope that the movie doesn't make people think badly about a place that is really wonderful. I haven't seen it and I don't think most folks around here have seen it, but it doesn't sound like anything that could happen here."

CBS, NBC battling for top spot in ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS and NBC fought to the wire over last television season's ratings championship, and it appears they will again.

CBS, buoyed by its two new legal dramas, won last week's Nielsen Media Research competition by one-tenth of a ratings point. For the three-week-old season, NBC is in the lead by the same whisker-thin margin. With summer's end, viewers are returning to "ER" in droves. NBC's Thursday night medical drama was the most-watched show by a wide margin, with nearly 7 million more viewers than second-place "Friends."

"Frasier" finished third. For the week, CBS had a 9.1 rating and 15 share. NBC was second with a 9.0 rating and 15 share. ABC had an 8.1 rating and 13 share and Fox was at 6.1 and 10.

CBS's new "Judging Amy" cracked the top 10, the network's highest-rated entertainment show after "Touched By an Angel."

CBS's other new legal drama, "Family Law," finished a solid 18th place. The "NBC Nightly News" won the evening news ratings race with a 7.2 rating and 15 share. ABC's "World News Tonight" was second with a 7.0 rating and 15 share.

Writing want ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket. For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Military takeover in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — A day after his forces overthrew Pakistan's democratically elected government, Pakistan's army chief showed no signs today that he planned to relinquish power any time soon.

Ousted Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif remained under house arrest in Islamabad, Pakistan's capital, where troops loyal to army Chief Gen. Pervez Musharraf staged Tuesday's coup.

Outside government offices in the capital, scores of confused civil servants pressed against the shuttered gates seeking answers from the soldiers standing guard inside, their guns casually slung over their shoulders.

But the troops remained silent.

"No one knows what the situation is, who is in charge," said one government worker, who refused to give his name.

Soldiers guarding Sharif's residence laughed at reporters who tried to enter, shooting them away with a wave. Airports throughout the country remained closed.

The coup took place within an hour of Sharif's announcement that he had fired Musharraf as army chief and replaced him with Gen. Zia Uddin.

Report: Wide disparities in transplant hospitals
 WASHINGTON — Offering a wealth of new data for transplant patients, a government report documents striking differences among hospitals in the likelihood patients will die while awaiting a new heart or liver.

It's the first study to examine survival rates of all patients who enter transplant waiting lists, offering a head-to-head comparison of 106 liver and 128 heart transplant centers.

"If you're a patient, your chances of survival depend enormously on where you get your transplant," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who requested the data from the Department of Health and Human Services.

At the University of Kansas Medical Center, 89 percent of people awaiting liver transplants got them within a year. But in Baltimore, just 21 percent of patients at the University of Maryland and 23 percent at Johns Hopkins Hospital got them in a year.

There were some disparities even among transplant centers in the same cities, though these differences were generally less pronounced than regional variances. In Boston, for instance, about 18 percent of liver patients at Massachusetts General Hospital and 17 percent of patients at the New England Medical Center died while waiting. But it was 33 percent at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, also in Boston, the report found.

Officials cautioned that patients must consider many factors when choosing a transplant center.

"It should prompt questions rather than conclusions," said Campbell Gardett, a spokesman for the Department of Health and Human Services.

Search for food marks daily fight in flood zone
 SAN JUAN ACATENO, Mexico — All they wanted was food for themselves and their village.

To get it, the 40 men had to trudge for three hours along a muddy, damaged road, cross a makeshift bridge and shoulder heavy bags of basic foodstuffs. Then, bent under their burdens, the returns worst disaster this decade. Unofficial counts, based on information from local governments and witnesses, run as high as 600. More than 275,000 people have had their homes flooded.

"Because of the lack of communication ... we are still having problems getting to places where help is needed urgently," Zedillo said Monday in Teziutlan, just east of here. "There are towns which still have not received the aid they need."
