DROUGHT

Producers, firefighters watch sky

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Panhandle farmers already are using the "D" word.

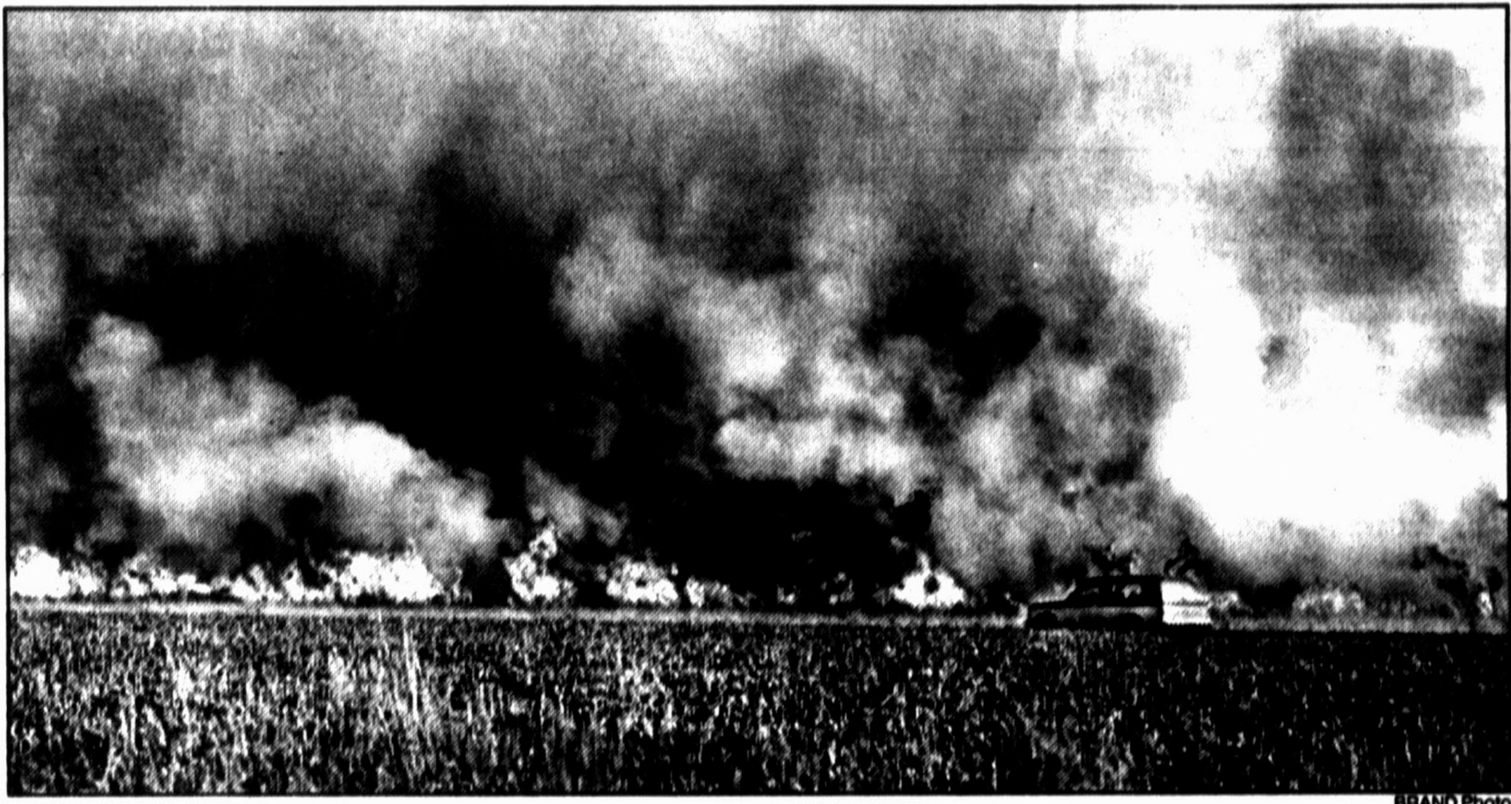

Although "drought" is not a word anyone wants to hear, farmers, ranchers and firefighters are looking at the possibility of another severe drought. If it becomes a reality, it will be the third since 1996 for the area.

John Cockrell, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Amarillo said the most recent drought severity index, dated Jan. 15, indicates this area has just gone from a mild to a moderate drought classification.

"The drought severity index takes into account soil moisture, measured rainfall and other variables. What it boils down to is the air is dry, the ground is dry, and the blowing wind dries it even more," Cockrell said.

Dr. Clay Robinson, professor with the Dryland Ag Institute said the drought severity index relates the amount of time since the last measurable precipitation compared to the normal amount plus the daily evapotranspiration - moisture lost to evaporation and plant use.

"Simply put, it needs to rain and rain soon," Robinson said. Robinson said the soil in this area can hold up to about 10 inches of useable water. It will hold about another 10 inches of water, attached to soil molecules, which can not be used by plants, but it can evaporate.

"We've pretty well used up most of the first 10 inches. The second 10 inches is starting to evaporate. On a warm day, like we've been having, the soil can lose up to a quarter-inch of moisture," Robinson said.

The five-day forecast predicts little change - warmer-than-normal temperatures and drier-than-normal conditions. The long term forecast is more of the same.

At least 75 Texas counties have already been declared disaster areas. Many landowners in far West Texas are reporting their ponds, lakes, creeks and wells have gone dry. Herd owners have already started selling off animals, because the water is so scarce.

Locally, the conditions aren't quite as bad, said Deaf Smith County Agricultural Extension agent Dennis Newton.

"We're not in horrible shape - not like in far West Texas. Our pre-plant conditions are pretty good, especially in stalk fields," Newton said. "The wheat that got some snow, though is pretty dry. The plants are using more water. Dryland farmers may not have enough to make it until harvest."

Robinson said even an inch of moisture may not help really dry areas, because the soil will recharge its reserves before allowing the plants water to be used.

The Cassidys will perform traditional Irish music as part of the Hereford Concert Association's 1999-2000 season.

Traditional Irish band to perform

A traditional Irish band will open the Hereford Community Concert season in the new century.

The Cassidys, a family of brothers who have performed together since their childhood on the rocky western coast of County Donegal, will perform at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 1 in the Hereford High School Auditorium.

The Cassidys' performance will be the second in the 1999-2000 concert season. The season was launched in October by the Brothers Four, whose recording and concert career started four decades ago at the University of Washington.

The members of the Cassidys are from a family of 12 siblings who were raised speaking Gaelic, the ancient language of Ireland. They learned English as a second language after starting school.

Deaf Smith County's complexion changes

By Donald M. Cooper

Deaf Smith County in the 21st century will be less white and more brown, according to a study by the Texas Comptroller's Office.

The agency's population forecast estimates the county's population will increase by 27.4 percent by 2030, with Hispanics being the dominant ethnic group.

During the same period, the number of non-Hispanic whites is expected to decline by 9.6 percent, while blacks should gain by 21.8 percent.

Nationally, the Hispanic population totals about 30.3 million, a 35-percent gain over the 1990 total of 22.4 million, according to the latest estimates of the Department of Commerce's Census Bureau.

In 1998, according to the comptroller's office, Deaf Smith County's population was 21,861, with Hispanics accounting for 11,817, or 54 percent of the total. The non-Hispanic white population was pegged at 9,630, or 44.1 percent, while blacks at 319 made up about 1.8 percent.

Across the state, the comptroller's office found the Hispanic population in 1998 was 28.9 percent, while 56.9 percent was classified as non-Hispanic white.

In 1990, when the last U.S. census was compiled, the Deaf Smith County population was 19,153, with non-Hispanic whites the dominant group at 9,428 (49.2 percent). Hispanics made up 48.8 percent of the population at 9,428, while just 2 percent of the county's inhabitants were black (287).

In the 1990 census, Texas' race/ethnicity breakdown showed 25.5 percent of the population to be His-

TEXAS: NEXT MILLENNIUM

The Associated Press

What Texas will look like in the next millennium: BIGGER: The state's population is expected to top 20 million entering the 21st century. By 2025, the population should reach 27.2 million.

DIVERSE: By 2025, whites will account for 45 percent of the population; Hispanics, 37 percent; blacks, 14 percent; Asians and others, 4 percent.

OLDER: At the turn of the century, one in 10 Texans will be 65 or older. By 2025, that will increase to one in six.

CONTRIBUTORS: Natural population increases, primarily among Hispanics; immigration and migration because of economic development.

WHERE WE'LL SEE IT: Big cities, primarily the "urban crescent" covering Dallas, San Antonio and Houston; the Hill Country, because of growth in the retiree population; and the border, particularly Laredo to Brownsville, because of birth rates, immigration and economic development.

WHERE WE WON'T SEE IT: West Texas, with agriculture and oil and gas in decline, so is the population.

The substantial gains among the non-Hispanic whites and Hispanics across the state was aided in part by a decline in the percentage of black residents. In 1990, the black population of 1,980,693 represented 12 per-

Urban sprawl putting squeeze on ranchers

DENVER (AP) — The cow-town image Denver tries to shake most of the time gets trotted out and gussied up once a year when the National Western Stock Show and Rodeo comes to town.
But after the event ends on Sunday and the cappuccino-sipping cowboys stow their hats and boots, Tom Compton will return to his ranch in southwestern Colorado — a place where he struggles to survive.
"It's a great lifestyle," he said. "It's very rewarding in many aspects, but financially it's not."
Faced with encroaching development and rising taxes, ranchers increasingly are quitting to capitalize on soaring property values as part of the growing cows-to-condos movement.
The transformation has joined low cattle prices, high grain prices and foreign competition as major problems for ranchers.
Between 1987 and 1997 in Colorado, 1.3 million agricultural acres were converted to other uses — an average of 130,000 acres a year, according to Agriculture Department data.
"It can be visualized as a strip of land a mile and a half wide and 130 miles long," said Dave Carlson, a resource analyst with the state's own Department of Agriculture.
And from 1992 to 1997, the pace picked up in the state, boosting land conversion to an average of 270,000 acres per year.
Federal figures do not show what happened to the land, so "it's not accurate to infer that all of that change is due to urbanization and second-home development," Carlson said.
But whatever the transformation, he said, ranchers are feeling squeezed.

In the Durango area where Carlson lives, as well as near ski resorts, selling out to developers appeals to many ranchers who are weary of predator problems, roller-coaster cattle prices and complaints from new neighbors unfamiliar with country ways.
"When you can get $8,000 to $10,000 an acre for a hay meadow, the cattle prices just can't compete," said Kent Lebsack, executive vice president of the Colorado Cattlemen's Association.
Colorado's population growth, one of the nation's fastest, causes much of the pressure, he said. So does demand for more remote cabins and homes as development pushes farther into the mountains.
The number of ranchers in Colorado has dropped from more than 20,000 in the 1960s to roughly 10,000 today, Lebsack said.
"Some of it is consolidation," he said. "But we are losing agricultural acres, we're losing ranches and that land is being converted. The trend obviously can't continue forever because there won't be any ag land base left."
Since 1995, the association has used a nonprofit, private land trust to help ranchers stem the losses, working with those who want to preserve their land but also want a tax break or a chance to benefit from the hot real estate market.
In the trust, ranchers place a conservation easement on their land, forfeiting the right to develop or subdivide the property. In return, the Internal Revenue Service taxes the land based on its lower, agricultural worth — rather than its value if developed. The move helps ease inheritance taxes.

Keyes making some inroads

MASON CITY, Iowa (AP) — Alan Keyes paces on stage, daring listeners sitting in the back rows and squatting in the aisles to tune him out, even for a moment.
They sit rapt as the GOP presidential contender weaves a complex sermon deploring the tax code, abortion, President Clinton and a general decline in morals. Occasionally, they shout "Amen!" or applaud.
These are the Iowans who are supporting Keyes in remarkable numbers as the first-in-the-nation caucus on Monday approaches.
While George W. Bush and Steve Forbes, the expected Nos. 1 and 2, squabble over their projected slices of the vote, Keyes has quietly moved into a tie for third place, drawing up to 10 percent in some state polls.
Who are these supporters, and why are they gravitating to long-shot Keyes?
"They're just folks who realize that the major challenge we face is a moral challenge," Keyes said Thursday night.
Those who braved single-digit temperatures outside to see the former U.N. ambassador in rural Mason City were housewives, factory workers, farmers and students at the community college where Keyes spoke. "These are not your regular Republican activists," said Drake University professor Hugh Winebrunner, a caucus historian.

Many said they supported Keyes for his assertion that morals should underpin American culture and politics, and that morals and rights flow from God, not from citizens or the government.
Asked after the address whether she was a Keyes supporter, 33-year-old Shawna Germundson said, "Now I am."
"He's about restoring morality and integrity," said Germundson, who teaches her children at home. "It's what this country needs after Clinton."
"He seems like a very strong-minded person who's not going to be swayed one way or another — he'll stand his ground," said Ken Roeder, a 30-year-old driver.
"It comes from his heart, he's thought things through instead of looking at polls."

ALAN KEYES
Discussion of morality is appealing to conservatives.

County

By 1998, the percentage of black residents had remained steady at 12 percent, with 2,295,563.
Some economists have cited the strength of the Texas economy, especially along the corridor linking Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex with Austin and San Antonio, and the development of high-tech industries have brought more white professionals into the state.
In Deaf Smith County, the comptroller's study determined Hispanics moved into the majority in 1991. At the end of that year, the estimated population of the county was 19,521, with 9,654 Hispanics (49.5 percent), 9,486 non-Hispanic whites (48.6 percent) and 298 blacks (1.9 percent).
By 1992, Hispanics made up slightly more than half of the county's population. According to the population estimates, there were 9,935 Hispanics (50.1 percent) in Deaf Smith County. The non-Hispanic white population had shown an increase in numbers to 9,510, but the percentage had declined to 47.9 percent. The black population also had shown an increase in numbers to 298, but a slight increase in percentage of the population to about 2 percent.
Since 1990, the Hispanic population has grown much more rapidly than the non-Hispanic white and black populations.
Although figures have not been compiled, the county's Hispanic population is thought to have risen to 12,341, or about 55.2 percent of the total, while the non-Hispanic white total is estimated to have fallen to 9,582, or 42.3 percent. The black population was estimated to have risen to 324, or 2.5 percent.
Between now and 2010, the percentage of Hispanics in the county is expected to rise steadily to about 60.8 percent, while the non-Hispanic white is expected to continue to fall to 37.3 percent.
By 2022, the non-Hispanic white population in Deaf Smith County is expected to fall to 8,979, or 31.9 percent of the county's projected 28,121 inhabitants.
In looking at how the changing demographics will affect the county, Dr. Jennifer Kunz, an associate professor of sociology at West Texas A&M University in Canyon, said some Anglos may harbor some resentment.
"As far as economics go, for some individuals, primarily Anglos, there may be fear and resentment accompanying this growing racial and ethnic diversity," she stated. "Some Anglos may adhere to the stereotype that many Hispanics may wind up on welfare and thereby cause increases in taxes."
"Some studies indicated that an increase in the Hispanic population in Florida, mainly low-skilled workers, had no measurable impact on the wages or unemployment rates of low-skilled African American and white workers in the Miami area," she commented. "If residents in Deaf Smith County continue to acquire higher education, or advanced job skills, then the demographic transition should be rather smooth."
Changes in the political structure may be longer in occurring, she indicated.
"People need to register to vote and then vote. The increase in the Hispanic population can change who holds office and who are the key leaders in the county," she said.
"Even though by numbers, a group may be a majority group, they also need to have equal access to resources before the bureaucracy and social structure of society can change."
"The increase in the Hispanic population in Deaf Smith County can be one of the greatest things that will happen in the near future. Here is an excellent opportunity for humans to celebrate America's growing racial and ethnic diversity," she noted.

Concerts by the Cassidys have been held on several continents. They have appeared in New York's Radio City Music Hall, Carnegie Hall and Citicorp Center. Their concerts have been held in the large halls of Dublin, Austria and Switzerland.
They were chosen to perform for President Clinton and an audience of 80,000 during his visit to Ireland.
Audiences and critics applaud the Cassidys for their dynamic, exciting, onstage performances. Between joyful dance music and reflective airs, the group performs beautiful, harmonic vocal music, sung primarily in the Gaelic language.

Germond book straightforward

By Donald M. Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor
Jack Germond is someone we think we know because he's been such a presence in our living rooms for the last 20 years.

However, readers of his autobiography, "Fat Man in a Middle Seat: Forty Years of Covering Politics," will find out they didn't really know much about Germond, a newspaper reporter who's best known for his work in television.

Germond started out as a sports writer, but soon made the switch to political coverage. A political columnist for the Baltimore Sun, he also has worked as Gannett bureau chief in Washington, D.C., and was a columnist and editor for the now-defunct Washington Star.

He made his first appearance on the TV news show "Meet the Press" in 1972, has regularly appeared on NBC's "Today" show, CNN and is a former panelist on "The McLaughlin Group." He now is a regular panelist on "Inside Washington."

Germond and fellow columnist Jules Witcover are co-authors of four books, "Mad as Hell," "Whose Broad Stripes and Bright Stars," "Wake Us When It's Over," and "Blue Smoke and Mirrors."

"Fat Man in a Middle Seat" is written in the same style as Germond's columns — straightforward, honest and witty.

He offers his opinions of the people he's covered during his four decades of interviewing politicians, both in print and on the air, and the opinions he holds often are not flattering.

"The hard truth is that after all these campaigns I don't know what qualities make a good president," Germond writes. "I used to think it was just intelligence, but there has been no more intelligent than Jimmy Carter, and we know how that turned out. The one quality I believe to be essential is the ability to understand that political opponents are adversaries, not enemies. But that alone is probably not enough. Ronald Reagan had that quality, and look at some of the bizarre things he did."

Still, Germond says his love of what he does has not been diminished "by the lack of great purpose on my part or by my inability to find any final answers."

He says his love of covering politics is the "joy of knowing America" and the people he meets as he crisscrosses the nation.

He voices admiration for several colleagues, Witcover, Walter Mears of The Associated Press, and David Broder of The Washington Post and R.W. Apple of The New York Times.

He doesn't extend his admiration to his former talk show partner, John McLaughlin, whom he describes as arrogant and abusive.

Germond also has other criticism for the press, which he contends has become "too controlled by the lowest common denominator," a phenomenon he blames on television. He says television is setting the agenda, while it also is devoting fewer resources to the coverage.

In reviewing the presidents he has covered, Germond expresses the thought that Sens. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and Howard Baker, R-Tenn., were two men who could have been good occupants of the White House. Although his Senate colleagues often pressed Bumpers to make a run, he stayed out, while Baker stumbled early in his bid.

In the end, Germond writes, "I have not given up on politics, however. I still nourish the notion that one of these years they will get it right and we will elect someone to the presidency who will bring out the best in the country. We might even find a leader willing to take an unpopular position occasionally because it is the right one to take, then set out to persuade Americans of that fact. That has been known to happen, but not lately."

■ Hereford's sale tax rebate up this month

By Donald M. Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor
Hereford's economy started the new century off on a good note, at least by one measuring stick.

The city's sales tax payment from the Texas Comptroller's Office for January was $87,057, up 25.1 percent from the $69,570 received in January 1999. The January rebate, however, was well below the $111,091 for December 1999.

Deaf Smith County received a payment of $30,363, up 29.5 percent from the $23,438 for January 1999. The January payment was down from the $39,836 received in December.

The comptroller's office delivered $197.2 million in monthly sales tax payments to 1,105 cities and 119 counties, a 20.3 percent increase compared to the $163.8 million paid in January 1999.

January's sales tax rebates include local sales taxes collected by monthly filers in November and reported to the comptroller's office in December.

"This month's sales tax rebates are a good start to what could be another good year for the Texas economy," Comptroller Carole Keeton Ryland said.

January rebates of $181.4

was allocated to Texas cities, up 20.5 percent compared to January 1999. Texas counties received rebates of $15.8 million, up 18.7 percent compared to one year ago.

Another $6.3 million went to 47 special-purpose taxing districts around the state. The state's six Metropolitan Transit Authorities and two City Transit Departments received a total of $72.4 million in sales tax rebates.

By law, the state collects sales taxes for Texas cities and counties that have local sales taxes. The comptroller's office then returns the portion of the taxes on a monthly basis.

The state charges a 6.25 percent sales tax and local sales taxes can be up to 2 percent above that.

Around the area: Dimmitt received a rebate of $27,894, up 28.2 percent from the $21,764 received in January 1999. The January payment, however, was down from the $31,863 payment for December.

Dalhart received a January rebate of $78,284, up 17.5 percent from the $66,650 received last year, but well below the $107,482 for December.

Pampa received $201,716 in January, an 18.3 percent improvement over the $170,457 payment in January 1999. The January allocation, however, was below the $228,032 payment in December.

Plainview received $193,549 in January, up 11 percent from the $174,445 for last year, but well below the $214,407 payment for December.

Borger received $191,658 in January, up 4 percent from the $184,338 for the previous year. The January payment was down from $223,810 in December.

Dumas received $128,870 for January, up 27.6 percent from the $101,020 received in the previous year. The January payment also was up from the $115,790 received in December.

Vega received $2,397 in January, up 25.8 percent from the previous year. The payment, however, was well below the $3,860 received in December.

Friona's payment of $16,297 in January was a 16-percent gain over the $14,052 for the previous year. But the January payment was significantly below the $29,678 received in December.

Among the area counties, Castro County received $11,689, a 45.8 percent gain over the $8,019 for January 1999; Hale County received $74,115, up 15.9 percent from the $63,940 for the previous year; and Oldham County received $3,840, up 131.2 percent from $1,661 for January 1999.

'Dinosaur Day' scheduled

Special to The Brand
CANYON — The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum will host "Dinosaur Day" between noon and 4 p.m. Feb. 12.

"Dinosaur Day" is an annual one-day event in which the community is invited to participate in dinosaur-related activities. The Panhandle-Plains Historical Society will provide free admission for families attending the event. Participation in the games area requires an activity ticket priced at $2 per child. Dinosaur-related prizes will be awarded to all participants in each game.

The focus of the program is to increase and enhance knowledge about dinosaurs and paleontology through hands-on activities and game competitions. The program is designed for participants ages 3-13. There will be games and activities appropriate for participants in this age range. Scheduled activities include dinosaur films, puzzles and fossil rubbings; a scavenger hunt; Dino Data Quest; Dino Cliques; Volcano walk; Dino Wheel; Dino Dig; Dino Dominoes; Create and Paint a Paper-maché Dinosaur; Draw and Color a Dinosaur; and 10 engravings will be used in the fossil rubbing activity.

After completing the activities, participants will be able to identify and characterize the Triassic, Jurassic and Cretaceous periods. Participants also will discover various methods for classifying dinosaurs, define dinosaur vocabulary terms, and explain the research and work of paleontologists and archaeologists. # State of families to be examined

"There are so many challenges facing families today — challenges that can seem insurmountable when added to an already jam-packed life. It's important that parents know they're not alone, and that there are resources available to them."

■ Ellen Robertson Neal, KACV-TV executive producer, discussing the state of the family.

Special to The Brand
The American family underwent dramatic changes in the last half of the 20th century: women in the workforce, climbing divorce rates, absentee fathers, the advent of blended families and the increasing number of one-parent families are examples.

The state of families in the Panhandle will be the focus of a 90-minute discussion next week on local public television station KACV-TV.

"There are so many challenges facing families today — challenges that can seem insurmountable when added to an already jam-packed life," KACV-TV executive producer Ellen Robertson Neal said. "It's important that parents know they're not alone, and that there are resources available to them." "The Family 2000: A Panhandle Perspective" will begin at 8 p.m.

Tuesday with an hour-long live call-in program.

Dr. Lynn McDonald, founder of the nationally-recognized program Families and Schools Together (FAST), will participate in the program via satellite from Madison, Wis., where she teaches at the University of Wisconsin.

Guests in the studio will include Dr. Dawson Orr, Pampa Independent School District superintendent; Joyce O'Rear, Texas Tech University psychologist; Mark Leach, Travis Middle School principal; Amarillo PTA presidents Tina Williams of Oakdale Elementary, Angela Lee of Windsor Elementary, Lisa Love of South Georgia Elementary and Teri Morgan of Olsen Park Elementary; and members of several Amarillo families.

Viewers are encouraged to call in or e-mail questions during the broadcast. Immediately following the broadcast, at 9 p.m. there will be a follow-up discussion on the Internet.

Anyone who wishes to participate in the chat room can link to it off KACV-TV's webpage, www.kacv.org. Anyone needing assistance to either e-mail questions during the telecast or join in the chat room can go to the computer center on the 2nd floor of the Amarillo College Library to watch the program and receive assistance.

Extension service lauds a Panhandle lawmaker

Special to The Brand

COLLEGE STATION — The Texas Agricultural Extension Service has no better friend than State Rep. David Swinford, R-Dumas, according to Bob Robinson, agency district director for agriculture programs in Amarillo.

Swinford was honored by the state Extension Service professionals' honor society, Epsilon Sigma Phi, with the organization's highest public service recognition, "State Friend of Extension Award" in ceremonies held at the 2000 Agriculture Program Conference in College Station.

"David is perhaps the best interpreter of Extension programs in the nation," said Robinson.

Swinford is a graduate of Texas Tech University and a native of Dumas. He is a farmer and 4-H club leader who has championed and sponsored extension's educational events and leadership mission for 30 years.

He has represented District 87 in the state House of Representatives since 1991, and is chairman of the agriculture committee. Swinford has been the recipient of several prestigious state extension awards, including the Knapp-Porter Citation of Service to 4-H.

Robinson credits Swinford as the champion of the Risk Management Initiative, which brought over $1 million of additional funding to the extension service during the last legislative session.

Environmental protection is our business

Environmental protection is everybody's business. The U.S. Supreme Court said as much when it upheld the right of citizens to go to court to seek redress when contamination has occurred.

The case involved litigation that had been brought against a South Carolina hazardous waste incinerator by environmental groups. The suit contended that the incinerator's owner, Laidlaw Environmental Services, had illegally polluted the North Tyger River.

But although provisions of the Clean Water Act, as well as several other federal environmental laws, seems to allow citizen-initiated suits, in practice such suits are often thrown out of court on the argument that the citizens who filed them lack "standing."

The court's 7-2 decision last week, written by Justice Ruth Ginsburg, reversed a lower court order dismissing the suit. The groups had standing, Ginsburg wrote, because the pollution had deprived citizens of their right to enjoy use of a publicly owned river, even though they might not be able to demonstrate direct economic loss or physical harm. ...

The court essentially upheld the right of citizens to intervene legally against polluters when public agencies fail to do so. That's an important right, because environmental protection really is everybody's business.

The customer's always right, psychologically

Julie L. Carlson

The last two Thursday nights have been an enlightening experience for me. Joel Combs of Pampa presented a two-part business training/improvement seminar, which was sponsored by the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce and attended by many businesses, including the Hereford Brand.

During the first session, Combs explained how to set, maintain and reach your goals. He also presented advice about handling those "difficult customers," whom we have all dealt with, or have been ourselves at one time or another.

His advice on handling this type of person made practical sense, but we all know how hard it is to let hateful customers win. So, I remembered one catch Combs threw in as a safety net for sanity — letting the customer win psychologically.

I used Combs' Six Commandments just last week. A person called to inform me information in one of my articles was not precise. My conversation began:

"Good afternoon, this is Julie."
"LET ME TELL YOU SOMETHING MRS. JULIE CARLSON!" the hateful customer shouted from the other end of the phone.

I didn't have the heart to tell this person I wasn't deaf.

The hateful party continued to inform me of my mistake, and at the same time chose to belittle me.

Born at the right time

Donald Cooper

Uncle Man was born at the right time because if he'd been born 50 or 60 years later, he would have gone to prison, not Tulsa.

He was born Edgar Ware McCrary in 1878 on the family farm in Nashville, Ark. I'm not sure how he picked up the nickname "Man" — my grandfather said it was because he liked to wear his Sunday-go-meeting clothes every day and their mother said, "Edgar looks just like a little man" — but like most of the nicknames in my family, the origin depends on whom you're talking to.

Unlike his brothers, Uncle Man hated farm work and couldn't wait until he could grow up and leave the small town in southwestern Arkansas. In 1901, he graduated with a degree in geology from the University of Arkansas.

He got a job as a geologist for the U.S. Interior Department and moved to Washington, D.C. One of his first big jobs in the field was to conduct a geological survey of Indian Territory (now Oklahoma) and find the likely oil deposits.

After finding out where the oil was, Uncle Man bought stock in the companies that were leasing the land.

In today's world, what he did would have earned him a stretch in the federal prison for insider trading, but at the start of the 20th century, it was just considered a sign of business acumen.

When the oil industry boomed in Oklahoma, my granduncle's stock began paying big dividends, and he quit his job with the Interior Department, packed up his touring car and he and his new bride, Gladys, moved to Tulsa, arriving in the rough-and-tumble boom town on New Year's Day, 1912.

He opened a geological consulting firm, built a two-story, Georgian-style brick house, complete with an English garden surrounded by a brick wall, and he and Aunt Gladys joined all of the right clubs and civic organizations.

Although he left the farm and small town in Arkansas, Uncle Man never severed his ties with the place where he was raised. During the Depression, when my grandfather and his brother, Duckett, who were running the family farm, suffered some bad times and fell behind on their tax payments, Uncle Man paid off their bills, including the tax collector, to make sure the family farm stayed in the family.

Uncle Man and Aunt Gladys never had children, devoting their lives to the business and their social life in Tulsa. But after Uncle Man retired, they looked forward to visits from their grandnieces and nephews.

My mother's older sister, Helen, and her husband had moved to Tulsa in the mid-1930s, and a summer visit with Aunt Helen was a regular event, an event that also included a visit with Uncle Man and Aunt Gladys.

On one of these visits, I learned about the stock market.

Whenever I visited with Uncle Man, he would always take me to lunch. This time, when I was about 9 years old, he decided to take me to the Tulsa Club for lunch. It was an exclusive enclave for the city's leading businessmen, a place where they'd gather, sit back in big oversized leather chairs, smoke cigars, drink fine liquor and talk about how the Democrats (or Republicans, depending upon the political persuasion of the speaker) were taking the country to hell in a handbasket. The club, which was on the top floor of one of Tulsa's tallest buildings, featured a fine restaurant, with solemn waiters wearing white jackets who pampered the diners.

When it came time to order, Uncle Man ordered a filet mignon, or some other expensive cut of meat, and I ordered a hamburger steak, which was the cheapest item on the menu.

He insisted that I order whatever I want, no matter what it cost, but I couldn't because as I scanned the menu, I kept hearing my mother's admonition. Before leaving for Tulsa, she took me aside and said, "Uncle Man will want to take you to lunch. You order the cheapest thing on the menu. It's rude to take advantage of his generosity."

Oddly enough, I would learn that Uncle Man appreciated it. A few weeks later, when he took my cousin to the Tulsa Club, he was annoyed because David scanned the menu and then ordered lobster, the most-expensive item on the menu, and then left most of it on his plate.

After our meal, Uncle Man decided to go to the stock exchange, which was a short walk away. We went into the smoke-filled room and looked at the miles and miles of ticker tape that gave the latest stock prices.

He chatted with the director of the exchange. During the conversation, he introduced me as his "nephew from Arkansas."

"Well, son," the exchange director boomed. "Do you have any stock?"

"Oh, yes," I said cheerfully. "A calf, some rabbits and a couple of pheasants."

I didn't know what I'd said that was so funny, but I laughed along with the men.

Uncle Man thought the little exchange at the exchange was so amusing, he contacted the city editor at the Tulsa Tribune. At the time, the newspaper ran a front-page column generally filled with amusing anecdotes about Tulsans.

The paper ran the item about "Mr. McCrary's nephew from Arkansas."

Everyone in the family, and I guess a good portion of the reading public in Tulsa, agreed that it was a funny story.

Except my mother, who was not at all amused.

A diehard Arkansan, she was always on the alert for instances of ridicule, no matter how subtle, of her state. She was very successful because she could detect anti-Arkansas bias that the less astute would miss.

She went to her grave convinced that the little item on the front page of the Tulsa Tribune that summer day in 1955 was just another effort to put down Arkansas.

Nor did Uncle Man ever forget it. About two years before he died at the age of 98, I visited him at his apartment in Tulsa. I was sitting beside him on the sofa, and he reached over and patted my leg.

"Do you remember when I took you to the stock exchange?" he asked.

"I sure do," I said, "I've got even less stock now."

And, we laughed together.

C'mon, voters, wake up! It's election time

Mauri Montgomery

Hello, Hereford:

They say you don't have a heart if you're not a Democrat by age 20, and you don't have a brain if by 40 you're not a Republican. I've largely believed I have both, since I brand myself a moderate conservative, but my wife tells me she is still deliberating on both accounts.

Still, I have always voted, even if it wasn't a straight Republican ticket.

The buzz of another presidential election is under way, earlier than ever, thanks to states such as California which bumped up their primary elections.

Campaign 2000 will officially be under way when the Iowa caucuses begin next week, then to be followed Feb. 1 by the opening primary salvo in New Hampshire. By March 14, both the Republicans and Democrats will have allocated about two-thirds of the delegates to their national conventions.

But candidates, who've been in such a busy rush to raise campaign money while canvassing the nation for electoral support, have finally looked up and now are wondering where all the noise is? What? We did all this work and no one noticed. How do you drum up excitement for a war when no one cares who is throwing the rocks?

"Wake me when you're finished"

The precursory food fights between Republican and Democrat presidential hopefuls have thus far largely been ignored by an electorate that seems to be saying, "Wake me up when you're finished."

Many pundits are predicting the voter turnout for the Nov. 2, 2000 presidential election will be even lower than the 48.8 percent that turned out in 1996, then the lowest since Calvin Coolidge was elected in 1924.

Unfortunately, it seems the voter involvement index is beginning to mirror the hopelessly detached tranquility we've seen so often on the "Tonight Show" where host Jay Leno invariably taps an uninformed America and asks the terribly difficult question: "What country borders the southern United States?"

"That would be South America, right?" smiles one of California's innumerable bronze gods.

Leno's chin pans toward the camera. "Well, no-o-oh. Actually we were looking for Mexico, but no one cares much about national borders anyway," he laughs. "Here's another: We are absolutely sure life exists on which planet in our solar system?"

"Oh! Oh! Wait a minute. Dude, I know this one. It's, it's — I can see it. It's red and they've been probing it!" the bronze god proclaims, mentally exhausted.

In a similar vein, one major study illustrates most voters are unfamiliar with either the Republican or Democratic candidates' positions on key issues.

That, alone, is not an entirely damning indictment of American society since candidates in both parties still don't seem fully capable of articulating what their true positions are.

But sadly, the study also showed that almost 63 percent of surveyed voters were confused about WHO the candidates are — much less what the issues or a candidate's position on them are.

There's nothing that knocks the wind out of presidential campaign sails any quicker than when no one beyond campaign headquarters seems to be aware the campaign exists. That did it.

When no one beyond campaign headquarters seems to be aware a campaign is in progress, the alarms go off. Normally, the air is knocked out of the campaign sails and desperation rules. Promises become bolder and more ridiculous, and political stances are set to blow with the wind of the day.

Candidates try to stir voters

Presidential candidates aren't taking the national shrug-off lightly. They are doing their best to stir voter interest.

"No taxes, ever. Same taxes, no new ones. And, while we're at it, let's give good teachers some tax breaks. A chicken in every pot. A tongue depressor for every mouth. GI gays are OK. Keep the Confederate flag. Burn the Confederate flag. Fly a white surrender flag. Give the farmers better prices, bigger tractors. Better schools, a smarter Republic is what we need!"

Yet, the promises still fall on the deafness of voter indifference.

According to observers, voter apathy is a by-product of the prosperity and contentment of the American electorate.

In 1992, the percentage of voting-age Americans who went to the polls rose for the first time in more than 30 years because of concerns about the sagging economy.

The economy is now booming. Unemployment, crime and welfare rolls are dropping. It's all quiet on the western front.

The pollsters say most voters aren't angry

Where did they come up with 'typical' family?

A recently released government study reports the typical U.S. family saw a huge 17.6 percent increase in net family wealth during the mid-1990s. I love governmental studies. They make such easy targets.

According to this "most recent" study, the Federal Reserve reports the typical family's net worth rose to $71,600. Just to make that much money a person would have to earn nearly $1,400 per week.

I think I need to know more about this "typical" family. I might put in for adoption. Does it consist of two employed, higher-degreed parents with the national average of 1.8 children? (I still haven't figured out that 0.8 kid.) Or is this typical American family made up of one biological parent — working full time and going to school at the local community college — with the standard 3.6 children, and one stepparent with another 2.3 kids?

Whoever they are, they sure as heck don't live in my neighborhood. If I add up all my assets and subtract my liabilities, it comes up a negative number. I could sell everything I own and not have enough for a postage stamp, never mind claiming a net worth of more than $70,000. Supposedly, my son's heart is now worth about $168,000, but I don't think I can claim him or his heart as an asset.

Granted, this marvelous new study, which cost taxpayers millions, also acknowledges people making less than $25,000 saw their income decrease by as much as 25 percent. I think that's the bracket I'm in.

This study was based on interviews with more than 4,300 families. I'm just guessing, but I would like to bet the interviewers didn't contact people in towns like Hereford, Littlefield, Dimmitt or Friona.

I'm sure some of the landowners with irrigated land, cattle and private family businesses might indeed have a net worth of more than $70,000, but those individuals are the exception to the rule.

Dianna F. Dandridge

Accordingly, nearly one-half — 48.8 percent, to be exact — of all American families now own some sort of stock. Along with this, the Fed reports the value of the average American home has hit an all-time high of $129,500. Boy, would I hate to pay rent on that place.

Basically, the report indicates the rich people in the United States are getting richer and the poor people are getting poorer, and the gap continues to widen at a phenomenal rate. Gee, imagine that!

Families headed by individuals with less than a high school diploma reported a downward slide in net wealth to $20,900. Families headed by college-degreed individuals showed a net worth $146,400.

I don't know where they got their degrees, but I don't think my diploma from Texas Tech will ever be worth that much.

Now I wonder how someone who makes a mere $25,000 a year — striving to pay back a $30,000 student loan, make a $225 car payment, pay $400 rent/mortgage, keep utilities on and keep the kids in shoes, clothes and food — can possibly have a net worth three times what they earn? Someone's math is a little screwy.

True, this report exchanged the word "median" for the word "average" and that probably throws things off a bit. After all, average indicates all numbers in a list added together and divided by the number of numbers in the list. Median is simply the number in the very center of a long list of numbers arranged from lowest to highest.

What all this boils down to is the taxpayers spent oodles of money so a bunch of unknown, faceless super think tanks could develop a theory that should make the American public feel good.

Personally, I think the oodles spent on this and other "governmental studies" could be spent much more efficiently if it were just distributed to those individuals under the median net income range.

It's kind of like the Richard Pryor movie where he had to spend several million dollars in an allotted amount of time and have nothing to show for it when he was finished.

The government really has nothing to show for the cost of this study.

I reminded myself of Joel Combs' advice.

Step 1: Listen attentively.

Step 2: Don't interrupt.

Step 3: Thank them for complaining.

Step 4: Get their name and use it.

Step 5: Apologize for their trouble.

And, my personal favorite —

Step 6: Let them win psychologically.

As this person continued to yell, I continued to say "I'm sorry for the trouble, it will be corrected next time."

Combs' advice didn't work so well on this hateful person.

Generally, the only three people in this world from whom I will accept criticism are my mother, father and husband — in that order. And, trust me, I do not take criticism very easily, and definitely not when someone is yelling at me. Just ask any of those listed above.

I basically kissed this person's, well, you know, foot — and felt miserable for having to do so. I would be less than honest if I said I didn't prefer the Julie Carlson complaint handling method. Oh, please! I know I'm not the only person who ever thinks about doing this.

Step 1: Set the phone down and step back — you can probably still hear the person clearly.

Step 2: Don't interrupt them. Remember, they're interrupting you — continue as you were.

Step 3: Pick the phone up every so often and say "I'm sorry," quickly placing it face down and continue with what you were doing.

Step 4: Remembering to use their real name vs. the new ones you have just mentally assigned to them is a task only for the professional. I don't recommend it for the novice.

Step 5: Once again, "I'm sorry."

Step 6: Wait for them to slam the phone in your ear. It's now appropriate for you to slam the phone down and say, "Thank you, (newly assigned name)."

One of my friends said it best: "It's hard being perfect in an imperfect world."

I'm not saying I'm perfect — well, yes I am.

Apathetic voters

enough, and therefore they are not interested enough to cast a vote — except for the one group that always votes: senior citizens.

And that's why many analysts are picking seniors as the linchpin for critical votes in this election; because they are the most reliable, most engaged, most interested and most loyal.

By today's standards, seniors are literally an anachronism — believing it is still a civic responsibility to vote.

They may even have the necessary clout to pick a president who can restore some leadership to the post — someone who can mend partisan wounds well enough to lead Congress in shoring up important fixtures such as Social Security or creating health care reforms that make basic health care affordable.

But the seniors, as resilient and resourceful as they are, must be getting tired of carrying the weight of the entire electorate — waiting for those basking in self-centered contentment to grow up, develop a brain or a heart, and then finally invest some of either toward some greater purpose than themselves.

A country full of indifference would be a good place to start.

"We're talking about South America, right?"

Exhibit featuring old blueprints

Special to The Brand
CANYON — "Renovating Yesterday, Building Tomorrow" will be on display through Nov. 16 in the Alexander Gallery at Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.
 The exhibit features historical blueprints of the museum from the past and proposed renovations for the future, which are scheduled to begin this spring and be complete by May 30, 2001.

 The exhibition shows actual historical blueprints of each addition to the museum and documents chronologically each renovation/annexation in the life of the largest history museum in Texas.
 A narration is included in the exhibit of the progression of the museum from the original "brick drive" in the early 1940s to the opening of the Harrington Petroleum Wing in the 1980s, with all of the other changes in between. The presentation will chronicle the growth of the museum from the less than $500,000 initial investment to the more than $6.3 million in proposed renovations.

 A historic view of the 20th century is the highlight of the exhibit and offers a new perspective to the vital growth and enormous change representative of the Texas Panhandle as illustrated in the development of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

Swayze, Thornton to appear

AMARILLO (AP) — Billy Bob Thornton and Patrick Swayze are among the stars expected to make an appearance in this Panhandle city Monday for the filming of scenes for a comedy called "Wakin' Up in Reno."
 The film has fueled interest among Amarillo residents, who are seeking dozens of extra roles.

The movie is billed as a road comedy romance about two couples from Arkansas who take a vacation in Reno, Nev., to see a monster truck show. Along the way, they decide to stop in Amarillo to take a shot at The Big Texan Steak Ranch's famed 72-ounce steak.

The Big Texan will shut down for the first time in 40 years for a day of business ... but they're (Miramax) making it very worthwhile," restaurant co-owner Bobby Lee said.

Most of the movie is expected to be filmed in Los Angeles.
 "Wakin' Up in Reno" won't be Amarillo's first brush with movie stars.

Other films, including 1992's "Leap of Faith" and 1963's "Hud," were shot in the area.

The most recent movie shot in the Panhandle, "Abilene" starring Ernest Borgnine, has yet to be released, though it was screened in the town of Shamrock, where most of the filming was done.

Swayze last made a public appearance in Amarillo when he taped an appearance on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" in February 1998 during the talk-show host's libel trial.

Texas jobless rate is steady

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas unemployment rate remained 4.2 percent from November to December, according to the Texas Workforce Commission.

The overall jobless rate remained the same, the commission said Friday, although the actual number of unemployed Texans increased by 3,900 over the month.

The increase was unusual because unemployment usually decreases when retailers prepare for the Christmas shopping rush.

The Workforce Commission reported that total employment had previously not fallen between November and December since 1985.

December's jobless rate was unchanged from November and represented the lowest percentage since 1979, the commission said.

The agency said about 9.38 million Texans had jobs last month. Of the state's 27 major urban areas, 22 saw employment rates decline or stay the same. Jobless rates in five other areas increased.

TWC said Bryan-College Station had the lowest unemployment rate, at 1.5 percent. Austin-San Marcos was second with 2 percent, followed by Lubbock with 2.3 percent. Dallas and Fort Worth-Arlington were tied for fourth with 2.8 percent.

Wrestling deserves support

It could be said that each sport in Hereford has gotten its share of good support.

But if anyone told you every sport gets a good amount of support, that person is wrong.

Not all sports in Hereford receive the same level of support that others receive.

One in particular is wrestling.

I know many people are turned off by wrestling, thinking it is nothing but the trash most Americans see on Monday nights, thanks to cable gurus like Ted Turner and Vince McMahon.

But if anyone thinks that's real wrestling, then that same person must also believe in the tooth fairy.

Ladies and gentlemen, wrestling is not the same "entertainment" you see on cable television.

Wrestling is a sport that requires a lot of patience, discipline, and a whole lot of endurance for an athlete.

The way the wrestlers at Hereford High School have to train in order to get a match you could say is ridiculous from the mortal standpoint.

But they do it, just to get a piece of that glory. Just to get into a match. Just to taste sweet, sweet victory.

I know that Hereford wrestling is not winning a lot, but people should take time to go watch these wrestlers and give them a lot of support.

Many of the wrestlers in Mike Dominguez's squad are freshmen, but if you ever go to a practice and look at how they workout, they put everything into their sport.

Not even football has the same restrictions and demands wrestling has.

Wrestlers have to follow a certain diet of no fatty foods, plenty of fruit, no soft drinks, and no sweets. Now, what high school students don't enjoy those type of foods?

To add wood to the fire, just look at how much they have to work out to keep in shape and survive on the mat.

But hardly any support from the fans. It's very disappointing.

In a sports program full of winners, it's sad to learn that sometimes fans in this town will only support the winners.

But if you ever feel that you want to support someone who's not winning many games (or matches), go see a wrestling match. It's intense, hard, and a lot of fun.

Now, why do you have to go see it? Because you have to smell what the Herd is cooking.

And, that's the bottom line: Because Yuri said so.

Girl cagers battle lack of intensity in defeating Caprock

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

AMARILLO — It was another game in which the Lady Whitefaces found themselves struggling to get excited.

But they somehow found a way to find a rhythm Friday night as they defeated the Amarillo Caprock Lady Longhorns 58-38.

After both teams went the first five minutes of the game with Hereford leading 2-0, Valerie Guzman, Tori Walker and Toni Eicke added baskets to give Hereford a 12-3 lead after one period.

Both teams combined for 45 percent shooting in the game.

Caprock found a spark and was able to get back into the game thanks to free-throw shots by Saira Hernandez and five points from Sabre Parks.

Hereford got a combined four points from Eicke and Walker in the period as Hereford extended its lead to 25-14 at halftime.

Walker's seven-point third period sparked Hereford to a 40-24 lead.

Then, help came from all directions, including three-pointers from Amanda Hill and Tiffany Mercer to outscore Caprock 18-10 in the final period.

Tori Walker led the Lady Whitefaces with 17 points. Valerie Guzman added 9.

The victory gives the Lady Whitefaces a 18-5 record, 4-1 in District 3-4A play.

Tiffany Mercer attempts a shot against Amarillo Caprock. Mercer scored five points in the Lady Whitefaces' 58-38 District 3-4A victory.

Herd runs loop record to 3-0

AMARILLO — The Hereford Whitefaces looked to improve their record to 13-10, 3-0 in district.

Well, they did just that Friday night in a 70-54 victory against Amarillo Caprock.

Early on, it seemed both teams could take advantage of the other at any time.

Thanks to seven points by Cody Hodges and two perimeter shots by Chayse Rives, the Whitefaces grabbed a 20-17 lead over the Longhorns, who were sparked by Laroy Hardy's eight points in the period.

The second period became a low-scoring affair with turnovers and missed shots. Both teams combined for nine turnovers in the period, but Chayse Rives' six points helped Hereford maintain a lead before halftime.

Hereford led 33-24 at halftime despite Caprock's Derrick Collins four points inside.

Hereford kept the lead in the third period, thanks to seven points by Eric McNutt, which included a three-pointer to start the period. The Whitefaces led 50-36 after three periods.

In the fourth, three-pointers by Cody Marsh, Rives and Cody Hodges added to Hereford's lead while shutting down Collins, last year's District 3-4A scoring leader to eight points in the period.

Cody Hodges led Hereford with 21 points. Eric McNutt and Chayse Rives each added 13 points while Cody Marsh contributed with 10.

Hereford improves to 14-10 on the season, 3-0 in district.

In the next round of district competition, the Lady Whitefaces will play host to Dumas at 6 p.m. Tuesday, with the boys squads taking the court at 7:45 p.m.

Cowboy defensive line coach decides to leave the team

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, still seeking a replacement for ousted coach Chan Gailey, lost another coach Friday when Jim Bates, who carried the title of assistant head coach and defensive line coach, informed owner Jerry Jones he won't return. Bates, who has been with the Cowboys for four years, is expected to be introduced as the defensive coordinator of the Miami Dolphins at a Monday press conference. The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday. The Fort Worth Star-Telegram quoted Bates as saying, "Everything is heading in that direction, ... (and) I would get the job on Monday." Bates, 53, is scheduled to fly to Miami on Sunday afternoon and meet with new Dolphins head coach Dave Wannstedt on Monday. Meanwhile, Gailey is scheduled to be in Miami next week to interview for the offensive coordinator vacancy. The Dolphins asked the Cowboys for permission to speak to Bates.

Wild enthusiasm for pheasant hunting sometimes travels in packs

On more than a few mornings this past pheasant season, there were enough wrecking-ball-like tails flailing about with gusto to cause an owner of fine lamps and vases the nervous nellys, had they been operating within their home or shop.

Fortunately, all of the vigorous flailing took place in the wide-open outdoors. Except for the odd mild whirlwinds they stirred-up, the wagging by legions of Labrador retrievers of various ages didn't hurt a thing as the hounds wielded their metronomes to measure their glee at being turned-out of their crates and included in a day of bird hunting.

A Labrador retriever is unfailingly downright delighted to be there with you at the outset of an adventure. No point in being bashful about displaying it, especially when your nose tells you that the maize field you're parked next to is full of pheasants.

There's probably some sensible limit on the number of Labs one should put in a line of pheasant walkers. If there is, we didn't follow it this past season. Instead, we subscribed to the theory that as long as the dogs had any manners at all about staying close and not fighting, the more of them snooting around the stalks in front of us, the greater the merriment--and the more pheasants put up.

We told ourselves we were doing this because the sprawling maize stubble fields were wider and more dense than we felt we could effectively cover with the people we had. The dogs would, of course, help us hunt more territory more efficiently.

Candidly, there were other motivating factors. Few sounds are more piteous than the wails of a Lab or other four-legged hunting partner left in the truck kennel while his pals are getting to poke around after pheasants amid the stalks. The left-behind dogs know that they are missing out on the greatest fun in life, and they sing the blues about it.

Touched by Labrador laments, there were some mornings when we probably ran more dogs than necessary. Depending on who brought their canine help along, some days we had as many as half-a-dozen dogs snooting and probing and romping enthusiastically in front of us.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

Amidst the phalanx of walkers we would fan the likes of Slim and Biscuit, Nicole and Velah, Smokey, and Beau, and even though he wasn't black or yellow, had virtually no tail at all, and certainly no stature as a Labrador, we even let a nine-month-old German Shorthair pup named Utah join the ranks.

We are not snobs here--besides, Utah was on a stout check line that limited his hard-headed Shorthair ways and forced him to work within the confines of shotgun range, like self-respecting Labs do.

After the get-acquainted snorts and growls and nose-touching, the dogs would more-or-less find their own zones of operation within the strips we walked, fanning out to do their work with the ground radar in their noses, running joyfully across the rows in windshield-wiper fashion, pausing to sniff curiously at tumbleweeds and tufts of grass, and to eye how they were faring in comparison to the others.

Assorted shouts and whistle blasts kept them, for the most part, on cue. When a particularly powerful noseful of scent or the sight of a running pheasant was just too much to stand, a dog would sometimes bolt ahead, running beyond shotgun range to roust-up a rooster.

Called to task for such misdeeds, the transgressors generally would come back alongside their people, and soon be working close again. Should they fail to correct this boorish behavior and display the vulgar habit of busting birds beyond range, they faced the stiffest of all punishment--being relegated to the crate in the pickup while the other kids got to keep hunting.

If any critter in the world knows how to have a good time while working, it is a Labrador retriever.

Sent-in to flush, Smokey sprints, grinning, to jump-start a rooster's flight with an acrobatic bound into the air after them. If Beau begins investigating and plants his front paws, best pay attention. He may stop and look back at you over his shoulder and grin, then snoot and root the tightest-holding roosters from beneath tumbleweeds and fodder tangles and run forward after them as they flush.

Slim races with wild abandon to downed birds, snatching them up in a circuitous lope and fairly skipping back alongside his man with the prize.

Even non-Lab Utah has his moments, edging forward, nose down, paw up--his stubby tail indicating that we should look, there's a big rooster--right there where I'm pointing!

They hunt hard and with gusto, and in each pass through the field, an observer on the turnrow can probably see a whole line of tails wagging above the stalks, measuring the enthusiasm and the joy and the happiness that are at work here.

Once the birds are bagged and we're back at the pickups, nobody loves their water and their snacks better than a pack of these hard-working dogs.

And when satisfaction and a full stomach and the warmth of the afternoon finally stall out the wagging tails, the only ones snoring with more gusto than the dogs are the people that the good time gang have such a marvelous time working with.

AFC CHAMPIONSHIP

Big news is McNair's toe hurts

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A day before the AFC championship game, there's actual news — Tennessee quarterback Steve McNair's toe still hurts.

OK, so McNair said there's no chance he'll miss Sunday's AFC title game with the Jacksonville Jaguars. But he did miss Friday's practice in Nashville and was wearing a boot to protect his turf toe injury at the obligatory final press conference after the Titans arrived in Jacksonville.

"Steve is 100 percent in my eyes and his eyes as well," running back Eddie George said. "Any time you play 20 games in a season, nobody is totally healthy."

There were, of course, no startling revelations at the final press conference for either team.

It was the usual fare — questions to Jacksonville coach Tom Coughlin about his sense of humor, or lack of it; questions to the Jaguars about whether they want to force McNair out of the pocket or keep him in it; questions about the weather report (a chance of rain), and a question to Tennessee's Jevon Kearse, the defensive rookie of the year, about how fast he is.

"Fast enough," Kearse replied.

But there were two major subjects — the fact that Tennessee inflicted Jacksonville's only two losses this season and McNair's toe.

The Jaguars said the two losses to the Titans were additional incentive.

The Titans said they didn't matter.

"We're playing this like we've never played them before," McNair said.

And nobody on the Tennessee side seemed particularly concerned about McNair's toe problems, which he's had off and on for at least two years.

In fact, last season, when the Titans — then the Oilers — beat the Jaguars here 16-13, McNair wore a piece of hard plastic over his toes for protection during the game. He ended up scrambling for 81 yards and passing for 232 more.

So it finally got back to the sense of humor, or lack thereof, possessed by the dour Coughlin, one of the most driven coaches in a league full of them.

"He'll have a rare moment when he'll have a chuckle," said safety Carnell Lake, who signed with Jacksonville after playing most of his career under the equally obsessive Bill Cowher in Pittsburgh.

NFC CHAMPIONSHIP

Surprise teams reach title game

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Where are the Cowboys? The 49ers? The Packers?

Sure, none of them made the NFC championship game last year, but wasn't that a fluke? Those were the powerhouse teams of the 1990s, and one of them must belong in the title game.

Not quite. The Cowboys lost in the first round of the playoffs. The Packers were a .500 team, and the 49ers had their worst season in nearly two decades.

So when the St. Louis Rams and Tampa Bay Buccaneers trot onto the Trans World Dome turf on Sunday, it might be the start of a new era. Regardless, it sure is better than what we've come to expect from these two franchises.

The Rams were the losingest team of the 1990s until their turnaround season, going from 4-12 to 13-3.

"The only thing I've talked about is winning, even when we lost eight straight," coach Dick Vermeil said. "I would tell them, 'I can't promise you when we are going to, but we're going to win. I don't think anyone can do anything if he plays in fear of losing.'"

There's no fear in his team's eyes, and why should there be? The Rams have the league's most dynamic and dangerous offense, led by quarterback Kurt Warner, the NFL's Most Valuable Player, and running back Marshall Faulk, the Offensive Player of the Year. It has a defense that hasn't allowed a 100-yard rusher all season and ranks sixth overall.

It has a perfect 9-0 record at home in the noisy dome.

The Bucs, 12-5 and winners of the NFC Central, also have been losers for much of the decade. Where they have an edge in negativity is that they've generally been a poor team throughout their 24-year history.

Drama over boy hardens attitudes toward Castro

Four decades after he seized power, Fidel Castro continues to loom large in American politics as a nemesis for all seasons and to both parties.

Tom Raum
The Associated Press

Why does this aging leader of an impoverished island nation, isolated from the rest of the hemisphere and long ago abandoned by his Moscow benefactors still command so much attention from U.S. policymakers?

A trade embargo has stood fast through nine American presidencies — even as the United States has moved in recent years to trade with communist-ruled China and Vietnam and to try to forge ties with North Korea.

"We are driven 3/8 the electoral votes coming out of the state of Florida, and that goes unchallenged," said Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., who has waged a long and still-uphill battle for normalizing relations with Havana.

And, Rangel added, "Castro is the only communist dictator in the Western Hemisphere."

The riveting drama over custody of Elian Gonzalez could place another obstacle to efforts by those like Rangel and Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who want to ease the embargo.

Elian, 6, was rescued at sea Nov. 25 after his mother drowned trying to reach the United States.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has ordered him home to his father in Cuba. President Clinton and Attorney General Janet Reno have supported the INS ruling, but it is presently being challenged in federal court by the boy's Cuban-American relatives in Florida.

If anything, the controversy seems to have hardened political animosity toward Castro after a period that appeared to be moving toward a slight thaw — with baseball team exchanges, a limited increase in travel and the easing of restrictions on humanitarian aid.

Now, one of the first things Congress will take up when it returns next week is legislation — both in the House and the Senate — to automatically grant Elian U.S. citizenship.

That would block the INS from being able to deport him. The citizenship bill has strong backing from Florida's congressional delegation, and from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., authors of a 1996 law that tightened the embargo.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., has signed on as a cosponsor of the bill; and House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., expressed support for the move.

Not only have all the Republican presidential candidates criticized the INS ruling, but the two Democratic candidates are now agreeing that the boy's father should come to the United States to seek Elian's custody.

"I think we should remember and honor the fact that this child's mother lost her life, sacrificing her life in order to try to get her child freedom," Vice President Al Gore said in Monday's Democratic debate in Iowa.

Echoed rival Bill Bradley: "The best answer would be for his father and Elian to be in the United States."

Gore earlier said the issue should be decided by the courts, while Bradley had said he wouldn't "second-guess" the INS.

"I'm a little disappointed in Gore and Bradley," said fellow

Democrat Rangel. "It is so inconsistent for them to support wanting to keep the Cuban kid here when it would never enter their minds to do the same for a kid from China or North Korea."

Business leaders, farmers and tourist organizations continue to push for an easing of the embargo that was first imposed when Dwight Eisenhower was president in 1960.

Craig Johnstone, a former senior State Department official who now heads the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's international division, said the Elian drama "makes it harder for people to take an informed and rational position" on the Cuba trade issue.

"There are two losers out of the embargo process: the American people and the Cuban people," he said in an interview.

Johnstone said that some opening with Cuba seems inevitable, but added: "What is not inevitable is the timing."

Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., who like many farm-state senators opposes keeping the embargo, said that while Castro "is no friend to freedom," current policy is a relic of the past — and has done nothing to displace Castro.

"We close our eyes to the fact that the world has changed," Hagel said.

Cuban boy's grandmothers reach U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS News digest

NEW YORK — Elian Gonzalez's grandmothers spoke pointedly, at times tearfully, in asking a nation to let them take their grandson back to Cuba.

"I came here to tell you all and to ask you to finish this tragedy that has been so hard for us as a family and to ask you that our grandson can return as soon as possible," Mariela Quintana, Elian's paternal grandmother, said after arriving at Kennedy International Airport on Friday.

The women flew to New York with a church delegation that has supported Elian's return over the objections of the boy's relatives in Miami.

The next step toward reclaiming their 6-year-old grandson was expected to take place later today in Washington — a meeting with Attorney General Janet Reno and Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner Doris Meissner.

U.S. officials said that the grandmothers requested the meeting and that the Clinton administration wants to hear what they have to say. The INS has ordered that the boy be returned to his father in Cuba, a decision supported by Reno.

Elian was found clinging to an inner tube off the coast of Florida on Nov. 25, after the boat on which he was heading for the United States capsized, killing his mother, her boyfriend and nine other people.

He has been living with relatives in Miami, who say he would have a better life in the United States. Attorneys for the family in Florida have asked a federal judge to prevent his return before he has an asylum hearing.

Nuclear secrets mistakenly disclosed, Congress told

WASHINGTON — The government's aggressive push five years ago to declassify historic papers led to about 1,000 documents containing nuclear weapons secrets to be mistakenly declassified, the Clinton administration told Congress.

While the nuclear weapons documents were inadvertently opened to researchers, only one of the files — on nuclear weapons deployment in foreign countries in the 1950s — was actually examined by any outsiders before the mistakes were discovered, the Department of Energy said in a report.

The papers were among millions of pages that were declassified between 1995 and 1998 under an executive order from President Clinton directing federal agencies to lift the veil of secrecy from documents that are more than 25 years old.

The openness campaign was widely applauded as an effort to reverse decades of secrecy about the nuclear weapons programs at the old Atomic Energy Commission and about a variety of events from the Vietnam War and UFO research to the failed Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba.

The declassification effort is expected to cover about a billion pages before it is completed in a few years.

The classified report sent to Congress just before Christmas details the findings of a DOE audit of some 948,000 pages of nuclear weapons related documents that had been part of the three-year declassification effort.

During the review, auditors found that 14,890 pages containing secret weapons information were mistakenly declassified and made available for public view at the National Archives, according to an unclassified summary of the report.

Winning isn't always everything

Walter R. Mears
The Associated Press

Winning isn't everything in the prelude contests of the presidential campaign.

Sometimes, a victory by the favorite has been discounted, an upset only a brief boost to an underdog. So the 2000 candidates and their managers are trying to set themselves low thresholds of success in Iowa and New Hampshire, the better to claim satisfaction in almost any outcome.

The champion at claiming victory in defeat was President Clinton in the New Hampshire primary of 1992. The record for losing while winning there was Edmund S. Muskie, 20 years before.

So Gov. George W. Bush is trying to keep his public expectations lower than his poll numbers in the Iowa Republican caucuses Monday night. He says that winning with 37 percent, the record GOP share Bob Dole gained in 1998, would be a winning benchmark for him in a field of six.

His rivals say not, that Bush should do at least as well as the polls, which put his support in the mid-40 percent range. "I think we're going to have a nice surprise," says Steve Forbes, the closest of Bush's rivals, although still polling far behind him.

Vice President Al Gore has been cautious in his forecasts about the Democratic caucuses, going only so far as to say in a fund-raising letter that "we feel real good about our prospects." The polls put him ahead of Bill Bradley by margins of 20 points and more.

The former New Jersey senator says that while he is running hard, he is at a disadvantage in a caucus state that "rewards entrenched power."

Bradley's campaign says he would count it a success to gain about 30 percent of the caucus vote. Bradley said he is more optimistic about his prospects in the New Hampshire primary Feb. 1.

He said he doubts an Iowa loss would damage him in New Hampshire. It certainly will not help him. There is precedent for his argument.

George Bush, the Texas governor's father, upset Ronald Reagan in the 1980 Iowa caucuses, and claimed "Big Mo" momentum. That faded before New Hampshire, where Reagan beat the elder Bush on the way to the nomination.

Dole embarrassed Bush, who finished third in Iowa in 1988. But Bush recovered in New Hampshire on the way to the White House. Democrat Walter Mondale trounced Gary Hart in Iowa in 1984, raising his expectations in New Hampshire, where he promptly lost, although he led the losing ticket as the nominee that year.

In this New Hampshire GOP campaign, Sen. John McCain has overtaken Bush, and the race is too close for pollsters to call either man the clear leader at this point.

McCain avoids inflating his expectations. He says he would be foolish to "assume that somehow we're going to win."

"I don't intend to lose it," Bush says.

McCain, skipping the Iowa campaign, says he needs a victory or a very close second in the primary to propel his challenge into the next arena, where he knows he must beat Bush outright or effectively concede. McCain says his game plan for the Feb. 19 South Carolina primary has only three pages and they all say "Win."

The Democratic campaign in New Hampshire also has turned into a pollsters' dead heat. So when Bradley moved up, leading in some 1999 surveys, Gore took out expectations insurance, pronouncing himself the underdog.

"I'm asking people to give me a come-from-behind upset victory here," he said in a Durham, N.H., debate on Jan. 5.

The pre-season forecasts for both Bush and Gore were so high as to put them both at expectations risk, which is what happened to Democrat Muskie in 1972. As the national front-runner and the senator from next-door Maine, he campaigned and acted like a favorite son, sure to win.

He did, but a campaign manager made the mistake of saying anything less than 50 percent of the vote would be grounds for wrist-slashing. Muskie got 46 percent, beating Sen. George McGovern by 9 percentage points, with three other Democrats far behind them. It was a comfortable victory, but Muskie was rated against expectations, and there, he lost, and never recovered.

Bill Clinton, the front-runner who stumbled over questions about an extra-marital affair and his avoidance of the Vietnam draft, lost the 1992 primary by the same margin Muskie had won it, 9 points. He upstaged the winner by claiming the outcome proved him "the comeback kid," and rode that line to an actual comeback in the later primaries.

Positioning and gamesmanship are in play in the stand-alone opening contests. Later, if the nominations still are contested, the campaign will become one of won-lost columns, scored by a candidate's count of delegate votes.

PIECES OF TOMORROW

(Kari Lisa Martin)

Pieces of myself, like roses drifting slowly like torn petals drifting slowly to the ground as my life was taken from me, it went to pieces and left me only broken and unbound.

Unbound to yesterday, without a hint of tomorrow, no promise that it would ever be the same and I was left crying, pieces falling slowly as I found myself in a place without a name.

For who can understand all the pain I went through, the broken pieces of my hurt inside? A feeling of completeness somehow left my life and I was all alone as I cried.

Tell tomorrows hello, for now those falling pieces begin to come together once again and I will always wonder, looking at the roses, when does yesterday ever end? Two hands holding mind; it takes another someone to somehow give those hurts another name. And I was broken slowly, slowly as the future that somehow would give me back the same.

I will never understand why I had to suffer as only God in heaven could explain and yet he took those pieces, those pieces of a flower, and called my heart a rose just the same. I know that I will never, never hurt another and never cause another all the pain, he pain of roses falling, falling, petal by petal, into a broken place without a name.

Poet's Corner accepts poems of any form or style to 40 lines. All submissions should include the poet's name. Poems may be delivered to The Hereford Brand, 313 N. Lee, or mailed to P.O. Box 675, Hereford 79045.

Pollution drawing attention

"We have to be a quality place to live. The threat of a having a clean air problem threatens our ability to recruit intellectual talent."

James Royce, chairman, Greater Houston Partnership

AUSTIN (AP) — Civic and environmental leaders Friday urged Texas to find ways to reduce smog and pollution in the state.

"This is really a statewide issue," Houston Mayor Lee Brown told a Capitol news conference.

Although Houston recently earned the dubious distinction as the nation's "smog capital," the problem doesn't stop at the city limits, he said. "It goes without saying we all want cleaner air. It's my administration's top priority."

A recent national survey found Texas second only to California in ozone violations.

Officials and environmentalists warn that Texas could lose hundreds of millions of dollars in federal highway funds if the state doesn't soon make progress in cutting pollution.

Civic, state and business leaders have formed the Texas Clean Air Working Group to work toward finding a pollution solution. A reputation as a dirty state could hamper Texas businesses' efforts to recruit talent, said James Royce, chairman of the Greater Houston Partnership.

"We have to be a quality place to live. The threat of a having a clean air problem threatens our ability to recruit intellectual talent," Royce said.

Proposals have included stricter vehicle emission testing, reduced speed limits, cleaner fuel and restrictions on driving and construction equipment use.

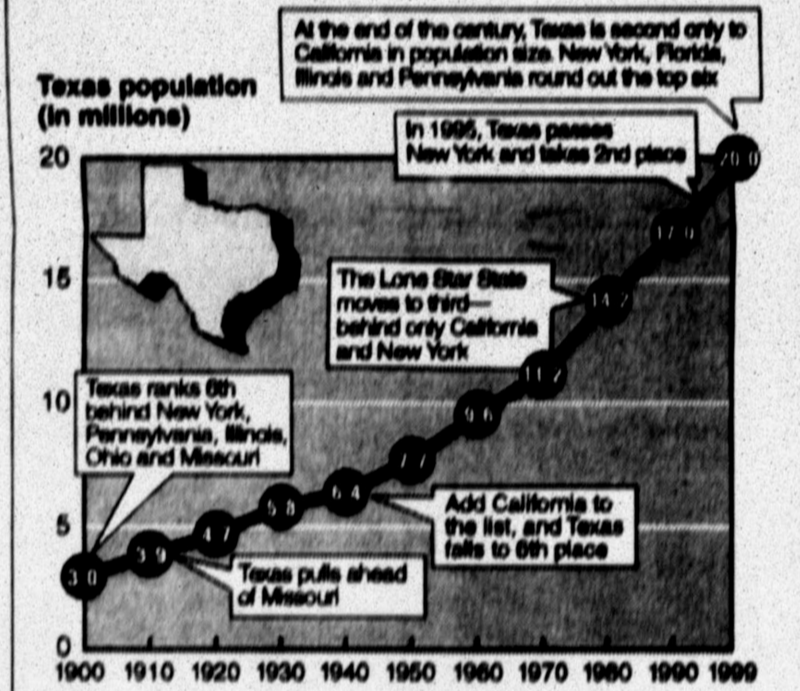

The group was short on ideas however, saying an upcoming series of Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission public meetings around the state should help develop ideas. The first of eight hearings is Monday in El Paso.

"Everything's on the table," said TNRC Commission Ralph Marquez. "Which ideas will survive and which will change depend on the comments we get during the public hearings."

December has a $33B surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government recorded a budget surplus of $33.08 billion in December helped along by a flow of tax payments, the Treasury Department said Friday.

That compared with a $5.16 billion deficit posted for December 1998. That deficit stemmed from two Social Security payments made that month because the payment date for January fell on a weekend.

'Super Bowl Sunday' calls for quick, easy party foods

Since Super Bowl Sunday is, according to the American Institution of Food Distribution, the second largest day of food consumption (behind only Thanksgiving), it seems appropriate to offer recipes suitable to prepare for a Super Bowl party next weekend.

Quick and easy recipes are the order of the day since everyone will want to spend time in front of the TV, not in the kitchen.

Snacks and finger-foods are easy to consume while watching the game and require less clean-up when the final quarter ends.

Snappy Snack Mix is a classic crunchy, make-ahead treat of baked pretzels, peanuts, popcorn and spicy seasonings.

The zesty flavors of chili powder, mustard and cayenne add pizzazz to an all-star favorite, Spicy Chicken Wings.

Dessert of Super Bowl Brownies can show off your team spirit when you decorate the football-shaped brownies with your team's colors.

Spinach Bites, Chili Cheese Bites and Sweet Meatballs are great additions to a hearty buffet spread.

Snappy Snack Mix
3 cups pretzel sticks
3 cups mini buttery crackers
2 cups cocktail peanuts
½ cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons red pepper sauce
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1½ teaspoons seasoned salt
3 quarts popped popcorn*

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line a large roasting pan with aluminum foil. Combine pretzels, crackers and peanuts in foil-lined pan; set aside.

Combine butter, red pepper sauce, Worcestershire sauce and seasoned salt in 2-cup glass measuring cup. Cover with wax paper. Stirring after 30 seconds, microwave on High 1 to 1½ minutes or until butter is melted. Drizzle butter mixture over pretzel mixture in foil-lined pan, stir to coat. Add popcorn; stir to coat.

Bake 10 to 15 minutes or until heated through and mixture appears dry.
Makes 5 quarts.

*One (3.5 oz.) package microwave popcorn yields approximately 3 quarts. Two tablespoons unpopped popcorn yields about one quart.

Spicy Chicken Wings
3 pounds chicken wings, tips removed and cut in half
½ cup bottled barbecue sauce
1 tablespoon chili powder
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Line a large broiler pan and rack with aluminum foil. Slit foil at rack openings so fat can drain through. Rinse chicken and pat dry; set aside.
Combine barbecue sauce, chili powder, mustard, cornstarch, garlic powder and cayenne pepper in a large bowl. Add chicken; stir to coat chicken with sauce. Arrange chicken in an even layer on foil-line rack of broiler pan.

Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until chicken is tender.
Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Super Bowl Brownies
1 package fudge brownie mix
1 container chocolate frosting
1 tube decorating icing

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spray 15½ x 10½ baking pan with non-stick cooking spray; set aside.

Prepare brownies following package directions. Spread batter evenly in pan.

Bake 15 to 17 minutes or until set and dry on top. Cool. Frost brownies with chocolate frosting. To make cutting easier, refrigerate 15 to 20 minutes or until frosting is firm.

Using a sharp knife, cut brownies into square or diagonally every 1½ inches into diamond shapes. Use decorating icing to pipe football laces or your favorite team's logo on each brownie.

Makes two dozen brownies.

Spinach Bites
2 packages (17-1/4 oz. each) frozen puff pastry sheets

1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped spinach, cooked and drained
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup lowfat cottage cheese

1/4 cup fine dry bread crumbs
3 eggs, divided
½ teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon water

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Spray cookie sheets with non-stick cooking spray. Thaw pastry sheets at room temperature 20 minutes before unfolding.

Combine spinach, Swiss cheese, onion, cottage cheese, bread crumbs, 2 eggs, salt and nutmeg. On lightly floured surface, unfold each pastry sheet and roll out into a 12-inch square. Cut each sheet into sixteen 3-inch squares.

Place 1 teaspoon spinach mixture in center of each square. Beat together remaining egg with water. Brush 2 edges of each square with egg mixture. Fold squares in half to form triangles. Press edges together with a fork. Place filled triangles on cookie sheets; brush with egg mixture.

Bake 12 to 14 minutes or until golden brown and puffed.
Makes 64 appetizers.

Chili-Cheese Bites
1 package (11 oz.) refrigerated plain breadstick dough
1/3 cup butter or margarine, melted
1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1½ teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon ground red pepper
½ teaspoon garlic salt
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.
Spray a 15x12-inch cookie sheet with non-stick cooking spray.

Unroll breadstick dough on cookie sheet. Cut dough into small squares, about 1-inch each, using a pizza cutter or knife. Separate square about 1/4-inch apart.

Combine butter, Parmesan cheese, chili powder, red pepper and garlic salt in small bowl. Spoon about ¼ teaspoon Parmesan mixture over each square; use the back of the spoon to spread evenly. Sprinkle squares with cheddar cheese.

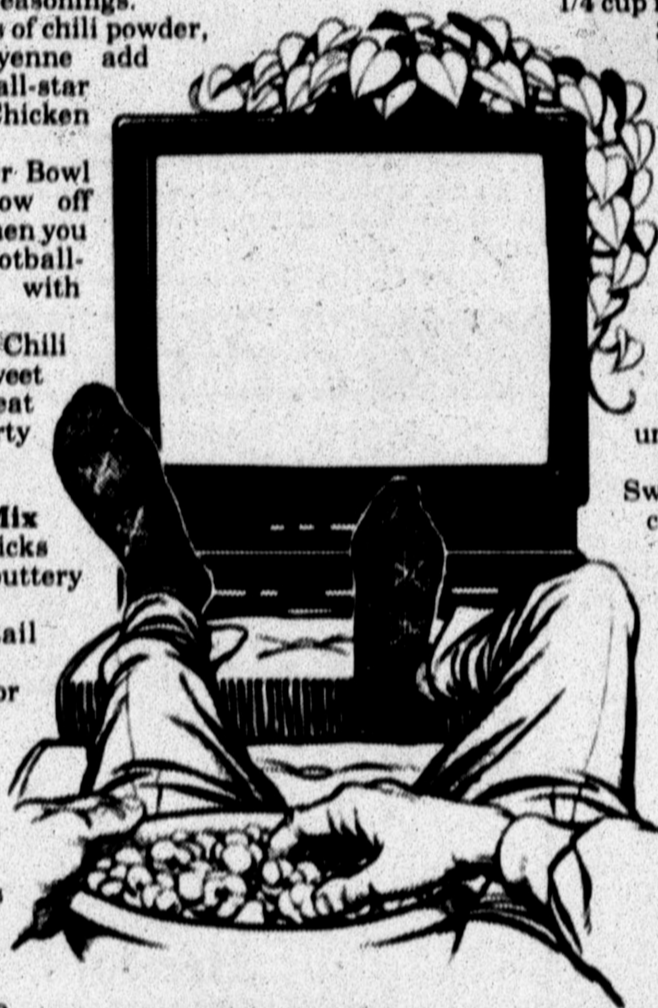

Bake 13 to 15 minutes or until bottoms are golden brown and crusty. Cool slightly on cookie sheet on a wire rack; serve warm.
Makes about 3½ dozen bites.

Sweet and Spicy Meatballs
2 pounds frozen meatballs
1 jar (9 oz.) sweet and sour sauce
1/4 cup packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons soy sauce
3/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 to ½ teaspoon cayenne pepper

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
Arrange meatballs in a single layer in 13x9x2-inch pan.

Combine sweet and sour sauce, brown sugar, soy sauce, garlic powder, and cayenne pepper in a medium bowl; pour mixture evenly over meatballs. Stir to coat.

Bake 35 to 40 minutes or until meatballs are cooked through and sauce is hot. Spoon sauce over meatballs. Serve warm.
Makes about 6 dozen meatballs.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Readers: My thanks to whoever sent the following, which certainly has the ring of truth, as every woman who has given birth will testify. Four cheers to the anonymous donor.

If Men Got Pregnant

1. Maternity leave would last two years — with full pay.

2. Men would stay in bed during the entire pregnancy.

3. All methods of birth control would be 100 percent effective.

4. Natural childbirth would be obsolete.

5. Newborns would be kept in the hospital until toilet trained.

6. There would be a cure for stretch marks.

7. Morning sickness would rank as the nation's No. 1 health problem.

8. People wouldn't think twins were so cute.

9. Triplets would be subsidized by the federal government.

10. Briefcases would be designed so they could double as diaper bags.

11. Paternity suits would be a fashion line of women's apparel.

12. All male children would have to be home by 10 p.m.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's cousins were planning to visit us last weekend — three children and two adults. They live about nine hours away, and were driving here. We knew they were short on money, so we bought food for the weekend, knowing they would not be bringing anything with them. We also bought six tickets to the zoo, which are not cheap around here.

We don't have enough pillows or towels for five extra people, so I asked if they could bring some from home. We always bring pillows, blankets and towels for my children when we visit, so I didn't think this request was out of line. I was mostly concerned for their comfort, but apparently, they didn't feel I was hospitable enough, because they decided not to come. They didn't even bother to tell us they had changed their minds. They just didn't show up. I became worried when they didn't arrive on time, and called to find out what happened.

My husband's aunt evidently told those cousins it was rude of us to ask them to bring towels and pillows, and so, they were offended. I am furious right now, and have decided that if any other family members want to visit, they can stay at a motel.

Tell me, Ann, was I wrong to ask them to bring pillows and towels? Should I have gone out and bought more pillows, even though we don't need them and they are expensive? It's not as if I had invited guests to spend the weekend. These cousins are FAMILY, and they invited themselves. I'm happy to put them up, but I don't see why I should spend so much money so they can have a vacation. What do you say? — Disgusted in San Diego

Dear San Diego: Your husband's relatives were extremely rude not to phone and say they weren't coming. You can always use the extra pillows, so there's no legitimate beef there. But someone should tell your husband's aunt to MYOB.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a good friend I'll call "Rita." Whenever we go to Rita's house for bridge, a tea, dinner, whatever, one of her children approaches us to buy a magazine subscription, candy bars, cookies, etc., for a school fund-raiser. We love Rita, but every visit costs $15 to $20. We would never allow our children to do this, and we're getting tired of it. Advise, please. — Oxnard, Calif.

Dear Oxi: Leave Rita out of it. The kids need to be dealt with directly. Decline politely when they put you on the spot. After a while, they will get the message. And Rita will, too.

THE GOLDEN LIGHT CAFE

The Golden Light Cafe was established in 1946 in Amarillo, Texas by Chester "Pop" Ray and his wife, Louise. Pop was born in 1889 and died in 1971. Actually Pop got sick about a week before The Golden Light was open so his son Charles and wife Edye opened the doors for the first time. Charles got some plywood, built a few booths, and with some hamburger meat and buns grossed $10.48 the first day. Pop was well in a few weeks and ran the cafe until 1957, when he got tired of cooking hamburgers and sold the GLC to Dorothy Gaudin. Dorothy ran it until 1979. Then Bill and Pat Alexander bought it and continued to serve those same great hamburgers. The chili recipe has changed with each owner... Pop's recipe was lost, Dorothy won't let me have hers, and I couldn't cook Bill and Pat's great taste consistently. As tradition would have it, I have my own recipe now... don't even think about asking for it.

The original Golden Light Cafe is the oldest restaurant in Amarillo and perhaps the oldest restaurant continuously operating in the same location anywhere on Old Route 66.

Today the Amarillo restaurant has many of the same customers Pop had in 1946. They were there when the doors opened and I can only hope they never see them close. Our newest location in Canyon, Texas opened in 1999 and is operated in the same spirit and tradition as the original restaurant.

As the fourth and possibly last owner of this wonderful bit of history, I would like you to enjoy yourself and take the time to remember a little of your past.

College Report

Kari Barrett of Hereford has been named to the dean's list at Lubbock Christian University for the fall semester of 1999.

In order to be considered a part of the dean's list, a student must be taking a minimum of 12 semester hours and achieve a 3.5 grade point average or better for the entire semester.

John Wayne Messer, son of Roy Dale and MaryBeth Messer of Hereford, and Mark and Anna Sellmyer of Amarillo, has been elected president of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity at the University of Texas at Austin for the year 2000 after serving as vice president in 1999.

Messer is a candidate for graduation in 2000 seeking a degree through the College of Business in Management Information Systems.

Messer was also elected as the Beat Omicron "Fellow" to attend the Beta Theta Pi National Convention in Oxford, Ohio, at Miami University.

He is a member of Management Information Systems Association and is working for the Texas Rural Development Council as coordinator of information systems.

Engagement jewelry is symbol of permanence

By The Associated Press

Wedding and engagement jewelry symbolizes permanence, but that doesn't mean there aren't any new slants on its traditional look.

One of them is Tiffany & Co.'s new Lucida diamond engagement ring, with square-cut gems in a four-prong arched setting in 18K gold or platinum.

Then there is the renewed interest in three-stone rings.

Another is the increased popularity of almost invisible inscription on a diamond for both sentimental and security reasons.

Yet another trend is toward more valuable jewelry for the groom.

The new Tiffany creation won't supplant the company's 114-year-old classic and often-copied six-prong diamond ring. But the Lucida should appeal to those who prefer modern design. The diamond has mixed-cut square shaping with a high step-cut crown and wide corners, with its fire enhanced by a brilliant-style pavilion. The band of the setting curves smoothly into the prongs; viewed from the side, it reveals crossed arches reminiscent of cathedral design.

Three-stone rings are classics making a comeback. The three stones can all be diamonds, or they might be combinations of diamonds with rubies, emeralds or sapphires. These are most popular in rounds set on a plain band, according to the Diamond Information Center, the information arm of De Beers. The three stones can represent the past, present, and future, says the DIC, making it an appropriate choice for the millennium. It cites the three-diamond ring worn by Sophie Rhys-Jones, recent bride of England's Prince Edward, which features a central round brilliant-cut stone flanked by two heart-shaped diamonds.

It might say something like "Forever Yours," or it could be the gem's grading report number. The use of diamond inscription on the gem's outside edge (called the girdle) has jumped 500 percent in the last year alone, says Thomas C. Yonelunas, chief executive officer of the Gemological Institute of America's Gem Trade Laboratory.

The laser engravings can be read only under magnification but offer a way to personalize the diamond or identify its ownership and grade number. According to GIA, any diamond weighing one-quarter carat or more can be engraved.

At least one line, Keepsake Diamond Jewelry, laser inscribes the girdle on the center diamond of all its rings with its "K" logo, registration number, quality grade and carat size. Each buyer receives a Gemological Laboratory certificate with the ring.

Bowers addresses meeting of Delta Xi

Virginia Bowers, Area XI coordinator of Delta Kappa Gamma Society International, was guest speaker at the January meeting of the Delta Xi Chapter.

Bowers presented the members with individual pocket mirrors and inspired them by recounting the various aspects of "reflections" on the seven purposes established for Delta Kappa Gamma 70 years ago.

Dorothy Mercer offered the invocation and Patsy Giles led the Chapter Collect.

Membership chairman Donna Warrick recognized those celebrating birthdays in January.

The World Fellowship committee, Doris Bryant, Betty Sue Robinson, Tricia Sims and Lois Miller, reported that the Christmas gift exchange resulted in the collection of more than $50 for the World Fellowship fund.

President Kris Dollar appointed Betty Mercer to fill a vacancy on the nominations committee.

Hostesses for the meeting were Wana Brewer, Thelma Alexander, Linda Cumpston, Marylin Leasure, Elizabeth Abernethy and Tricia Sims.

Looking Back

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Saturday, Jan. 22, the 22nd day of 2000. There are 344 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 22, 1917, President Wilson pleaded for an end to war in Europe, calling for "peace without victory." By April, however, America also was at war.

On this date:
In 1901, Britain's Queen Victoria died at age 82.

In 1922, Pope Benedict XV died; he was succeeded by Pius XI.

In 1938, Thornton Wilder's play "Our Town" was performed publicly for the first time, in Princeton, N.J.

In 1944, during World War II, Allied forces began landing at Anzio, Italy.

In 1953, the Arthur Miller drama "The Crucible" opened on Broadway.

In 1968, the comedy show "Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In" premiered on NBC-TV.

In 1970, the first regularly scheduled commercial flight of the Boeing 747 began in New York and ended some 61 1/2 hours later in London.

In 1973, the Supreme Court handed down its "Roe v. Wade" decision, which legalized abortion using a trimester approach.

In 1973, former President Johnson died at age 64.

In 1997, the Senate confirmed Madeleine Albright as the nation's first woman secretary of state.

Ten years ago: Up to 2 million Azerbaijanis marched through the republic's capital to mourn those killed when Soviet troops put down a nationalist revolt. A jury in Syracuse, N.Y., convicted graduate student Robert T. Morris of federal computer tampering charges for unleashing a "worm" that crippled a computer network.

Five years ago: Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy died at the Kennedy compound at Hyannis Port, Mass., at age 104. Twenty-one Israelis were killed and dozens others injured in a suicide bombing in central Israel.

One year ago: Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va, abruptly called for dismissal of charges against President Clinton to "end this sad and sorry time for our country." President Clinton called for spending $2.8 billion to protect the nation from cyber terrorism and chemical and germ warfare. Pope John Paul II arrived in Mexico on his first visit in 20 years.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Ann Sothern is 91. Former Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., is 72. Actress Piper Laurie is 68. Actor Seymour Cassel is 65. Author Joseph Wambaugh is 63. Chef Jeff Smith ("The Frugal Gourmet") is 61. Actor John Hurt is 60. Country singer-musician Teddy Gentry (Alabama) is 48. Rock singer Steve Perry is 47. Hockey Hall of Famer Mike Bossy is 43. Actress Linda Blair is 41. Actress Diane Lane is 35. Actor-rap DJ Jazzy Jeff is 35.

YOUR EYES
Finding Hypertension In the Eye
A person can have high blood pressure without realizing it. Some of the earliest indications of high blood pressure, or hypertension, occur as changes in the eyes. An eye doctor can detect these changes during a thorough eye examination. He or she can then alert the patient that there may be a greater medical risk if the condition is not corrected.
It's important that we all have regular eye exams to make sure that our eyes are healthy and there are no signs of any other diseases. It is recommended that adults age 19 to 40 have their eyes checked every two or three years. People from age 41 to 60 should be examined once every year or two. Those over 61 should see an eye doctor once a year.

President's Corner

By Truman Thurston, HSCA President

My, my how the time does fly. Here it is only February and Margie has been to market to purchase trees for this year's Festival. This year's holiday season is gone and we seem to relax a little now. Maybe a little too much because our attendance has fallen off in the dining room at noon. If the meals are not being prepared properly or the menu needs to be adjusted please let us know. The donations from our noon meals are a major portion of our support.

Now is the time of year to start paying attention to our phone bills. Maybe you have been "slammed" or "crammed" with out your knowledge.

Slamming is the illegal act of switching your telephone company without your permission. You may not realize you've been slammed until you see a different company name on your phone bill or that your charges are much higher than usual.

What is cramming? More and more consumers are finding their local telephone bills "crammed" with mysterious charges from third parties for services the customers say they never ordered. When companies add charges to your telephone bill such as voice mail, paging, personal 800 numbers, or club memberships, it's called cramming.

These charges will usually appear every month, but you may not notice them because they're relatively small and might be mistaken for part of your regular phone charges.

Look at the fine print on contest entry forms and product coupons. You could be agreeing to switch your phone service or buy optional services without realizing it. Watch out for impostors. Companies may falsely claim to be your regular local or long distance carrier and offer some type of discount plan, bill consolidation, or special service. Or they may say they are taking a survey when they contact you. Beware of "negative option notices." You may receive something that looks like junk mail but is actually a notice that you will be switched or signed up for optional services unless you say NO.

If you have been crammed, call the number appearing on the page where the charges are detailed.

Not too many have seen these items happen to us so don't hesitate to use your phone. Any errors can be and will be corrected by your phone company.

See you next month. Thanks for your time.

Truman

Osteoporosis topic at January's monthly education seminar

On Wed., Jan. 26, 2000 our Monthly Education Seminar was entitled "Osteoporosis." A video and materials were supplied by the Senior Network, Inc. and was presented by Patsy Bryant, Hereford Senior Citizens education coordinator. The presentation time was 12:30 p.m. in the dining room. Everyone was invited to attend.

Monthly educational seminars are presented by Bryant. The materials and videos are supplied by the Senior Network, Inc. The monthly seminars are scheduled the last Wednesday of each month at 12:30 p.m. in the dining room.

On Wed., Feb., 23, 2000, "Sound Sleep Seminar/Good Nights/Great Days," will be presented. Everyone is invited to attend. Seminar topics are subject to change monthly.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Hello everyone! It's hard to believe one month of the dreaded 2000 is gone. We watched on TV all the time zone celebrations and they were very interesting. I learned more about the history of the countries and saw all the beautiful people. It was a very humbling experience.

The Braschler Music Show will be here March 3-4. We have tried for years to get them for 2 days and we finally made it. We still have some seats for Friday but some really good ones for Saturday. Hurry, get your tickets soon!

Nancy Gresham, Attorney General's representative, will be at the Center on Tuesday, Feb. 22 at 12:30 p.m. Please come in, have lunch with us and listen to her. I feel we are fortunate to have her visit us.

If the bluebonnets are pretty this year we are planning a short trip to Bluebonnet Country. If you are interested please let me know.

The following is information about Canada's Atlantic Coast Tour for next fall:

The trip takes off Sept. 9, 2000, and will last 10 days. Areas visited will be Halifax, Peggy's Cove, St. Andrews, By-The-Sea, Prince Edward Island, Cavendish National Park, Cape Breton Island, Cabot Trail, Fortress Louisbourg and Grand Pre National Park.

Rates are as follows:

Twin - $1,809
Single - $2,209
Triple - $1,779

A deposit of $100 is necessary and the cancellation waiver is $60. The trip includes 16 meals - nine breakfasts, seven dinners. For more information call me at 364-5681. You need to make your reservations as soon as possible.

The secret of contentment is the realization that life is a gift not a right.

"But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out." 1 Timothy 6:6-7

See you at the Center.

Nutrition Update

By Charlotte R. Clark, MS RD/LD

One in every three Americans is fighting the weight loss battle. Tipping the energy balance scale in favor of using more calories than you consume is the bottom line for losing weight.

Sounds easy! Then why are so many people losing the weight loss battle instead of the weight?

Whether you have tried to lose weight on your own or with the help of an organized program, the focus is too often on severely restrictive diets and unrealistic goals. Not being able to reach these goals can set you up for an endless cycle of failure and discouragement. Also, extremely limited food choices may trigger binge eating, which can undermine your efforts.

Increase your chances for success by focusing on managing your weight. Weight management involves adopting a lifestyle that includes a healthful eating plan and regular physical activity. The key to managing weight throughout life is a positive attitude and the right kind of motivation. Internal motivators such as health, increased energy, self-esteem and personal control increase your chances for life-long weight management success. Your physician can determine the appropriate type of weight management plan for you. A registered dietitian can tailor a plan to meet your individual needs and show you how to follow these strategies for long-term success.

Strategy 1: Make health, not appearance, your weight management priority. A realistic goal is to achieve a healthy weight, not necessarily the lowest weight you can reach or an "ideal" weight from a chart.

Strategy 2: Focus on a healthy eating style, not on "dieting." Dieting usually lasts for only the short term and rarely produces long-term success.

Strategy 3: Eating for good health and eating to control weight are virtually the same. Choosing a healthful eating plan that includes a variety of food choices from the Food Guide Pyramid can accomplish both objectives. All foods can fit into a nutritious, reduced-calorie eating plan, rich in foods with complex carbohydrates and fiber, like whole grains, fruits, and vegetables and low in fat. You can feel full and satisfied with the suggested number of servings from each food group: 6-11 servings of bread, cereal, rice, or pasta; 2-3 servings of fruit; 3-5 servings of vegetables; 2-3 servings of milk, yogurt, or cheese; and 5-7 ounces of lean meat, poultry, fish, or meat alternatives such as dried beans, eggs, peanut butter, or nuts.

The number of servings you need depends on your age, gender, activity level, and weight loss goals. Usually for weight management you should choose servings amounts from the lower end of the range for each food group.

Strategy 4: People who keep physically active are more successful at losing and keeping off extra pounds. A physically active lifestyle offers many rewards in addition to weight management, such as heart health, strong bones and stress relief. For weight management, experts recommend a combined total of 30 minutes of moderate activity on most days. Smaller amounts are okay, but try to accumulate at least 30 minutes a day. If you haven't been physically active, build up the time gradually. Focus on increasing daily physical activity, rather than setting unrealistic "exercise" goals. Pick an activity that you enjoy and are likely to continue, such as a brisk walk in the morning or a swim after work. Before beginning any exercise program, however, be sure to consult your physician.

Strategy 5: Prescription medication may be part of a weight management program for obese patients that also includes nutrition counseling and regular physical activity. Prescription medications for weight loss generally reduces the appetite, making it easier to control food intake. Talk with your physician to learn about possible side effects and determine if prescription medications are safe and should be part of your weight management program.

PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER

To make sure your weight management plan is safe and effective, ask yourself a few questions before you begin.

- Does your plan:
- include a variety of foods from all five major groups in the Food Guide Pyramid;
  - include appealing foods you will enjoy eating for the rest of your life, not just a few weeks or months;
  - include foods available at the supermarket where you usually shop;
  - allow you to eat your favorite foods in moderation;
  - recommend changes in your lifestyle and budget;
  - include at least the minimum number of servings from the Food Guide Pyramid; and
  - include regular physical activity.
- If you can answer yes to all these questions, chances are your weight loss program will allow you to achieve long-term success.

Turn tax free income into home equity

According to U.S. Census Bureau's Population Survey almost 13 percent of the U.S. population is now 65 or older and by the year 2025 older Americans will outnumber teenagers by a 2 to 1 ratio.

As the population ages, median income levels drop considerably upon reaching the "golden years" and with it a need for financial readjustments to maintain lifestyle patterns.

Older homeowners can now participate in the Federal Housing Administration's reverse mortgage program. The program enables homeowners age 62 and older the opportunity to turn their locked-up home equity into tax-free income while maintaining ownership and requiring no monthly repayment.

The amount of money that can be received is based primarily on the value of the home and the age of the youngest participant.

Participants can draw the money through a line of credit, a lump sum cash advance or through a regular monthly income. Many homeowners have used the additional cash to payoff their existing mortgage, to pay their property taxes, for medical expenses, to payoff credit cards and to make home improvements. There are no restrictions on how the money can be spent.

The reverse mortgage program is a safe, financial alternative enabling older homeowners to comfortably remain in their homes and enjoy a secure retirement. To learn more, individuals can contact Jeffrey Moulton of the Reverse Mortgage Department at (800) 206-2754.

Older Texans Hotline

Lady receives help through 800 number

Maria Johnson, one of the lawyers who staffs the Legal Hotline for Older Texans, remembers the caller well.

"She sounded frail," Johnson says, recalling their first encounter. Johnson eventually learned that the woman was partially blind and had just come home from a stay in the hospital when a vacuum cleaner salesman had come to the door.

"The salesman left with a check for $1,600," Johnson says. "He'd even taken the old woman's Dirt Devil!"

The problem was this: the woman had succumbed to the salesman's pitch, but once he was gone, she realized she didn't want the new vacuum cleaner after all. But the check had been cashed and all of the calls that the woman and her friends made to the company asking that the money be returned were unsuccessful.

Could the Hotline help?

"We can't actually represent the people who call the Hotline," Johnson says. "I sent her consumer information and at one point I even called the customer service office at the vacuum cleaner company myself."

But to no avail, reluctantly, Johnson prepared to close the woman's file. Then Johnson saw an article in the Wall Street Journal, which she reads every day. "It was a front page story about the tactics used by the same vacuum cleaner company. But it mentioned some sort of golden age clause which allowed people over age 65 to change their minds about a purchase and get a refund."

The time period for the refund was a year, and Johnson noted that ten months had already elapsed since the elderly caller had first written the check. Johnson called the woman immediately and also enlisted a friend of the woman to help draft a letter to the vacuum cleaner company. "The friend didn't get the Wall Street Journal," Johnson laughs, "but her dentist did." She ran down to the dentist's office to get this additional ammunition. The letter was sent certified mail, but Johnson says she could hear an imaginary clock ticking away in the background.

The result? Just under the wire, "The caller got a refund from the company for the full $1,600," Johnson says, grinning with satisfaction. She doesn't know whether the company ever returned the Dirt Devil that the salesman had taken.

"But this is what the Hotline is all about," Johnson continues. "You give the people who call the legal tools to solve the problem — in this case, without hiring an attorney." A lot of older people balk at hiring an attorney, Johnson says, either because they can't afford it or they're embarrassed by the problem or they just don't want the hassle of a lawsuit. "But they have rights," Johnson says, "and the attorneys here want to preserve their rights."

The Legal Hotline for Older Texans can be reached at (800)822-2520. Its primary mission is to serve low-income clients over the age of 60. The Hotline is funded through grants from the Texas Department on Aging and the Texas Equal Access to Justice Foundation.

Maria Johnson (above), a lawyer on the staff of the Older Texans Hotline, represents low-income clients over the age of 60. She recently received a call from a lady who had been caught in a vacuum salesperson's scheme. The elderly lady had been hospitalized and had been home only a few days when the salesperson arrived. The lady was interested in the materials offered and gave the salesperson a check for over $1,000, he took the check as well as her vacuum! The lady never again saw the salesman or her vacuum, nor did she ever hear from the company again. She called the hotline and Maria Johnson helped her receive her money back.

Positive images of aging helps health

By Lauran Neergaard
AP Medical Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negative stereotypes about getting old can hurt how people function, says a study that found healthy elderly people could suddenly walk faster when they were subconsciously fed positive images of aging.

How well older people walk — both their speed and whether they shuffle unsteadily — can predict their future health and independence. Falls are a huge health problem, and doctors recommend exercise programs for even the very elderly to strengthen muscles important for walking and balance.

But the new study, published today in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, suggests the mind also may play a powerful role — and that bleak expectations of aging may hurt even healthy people's strides.

"The effects are pretty profound," said lead researcher Jeffrey Hausdorff, a gerontologist at Boston's Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center who invented thin, electronic shoe soles that precisely measure gait.

"It means we need to think about trying to reduce the stereotypes of aging," he added. "We concentrate a lot on physical function and things related to that. This shows other aspects of aging are also important."

Doctors have long explored the mind's role in medicine. Case in point: The "placebo effect" where some ill patients get better if they think the sugar pills they swallow are really drugs. Also, psychological studies suggest subconscious messages can influence perceptions.

That's where stereotypes enter. Harvard University graduate student Becca Levy conducted experiments that found negative stereotypes of aging worsened people's memory and self-confidence, while positive stereotypes improved them. But, she wondered, would those stereotypes also affect physical function?

Walking is a good test. Walking speed declines with age, ed without a cane or walker.

First, participants walked a hallway almost the length of a football field. Using Hausdorff's special invention, the walkers' speed and "swing time," the time a foot spends off the ground, were recorded.

Then participants played a brief computer game. Positive words — such as "wise," "astute" or "accomplished" — flashed on half the screens just long enough to register subconsciously. Negative words — such as "senile," "dependent" and "diseased" — flashed to the other half.

Then they walked that long hallway again. This time, the positively influenced people walked 9 percent faster — improvement similar to some exercises. "Swing time" also increased, meaning they shuffled a little less.

Maybe positive stereotypes "change their mood or self-confidence and that impacts their behavior," theorized Levy, now an assistant professor at Yale University.

Walking didn't change for the negatively influenced people, who presumably already were exposed to society's negative stereotypes, she said.

Nobody knows how long the positive effects last, or if positive thinking also could help patients with arthritis, Parkinson's or other gait-altering diseases, said Hausdorff, who is continuing the research.

The finding "is an interesting one, and it makes sense in the context of ... the multiple factors that play a role in balance problems," said geriatric specialist Chhanda Dutta of the National Institutes of Health.

Why do the elderly have problems walking? Hausdorff explains with a demonstration: Strap 10-pound weights to each ankle, simulating how heavy a muscle-wasted leg is to lift, and don a pair of taped-over glasses to simulate bad eyesight. A youthful stride immediately turns to a tentative shuffle; the feet even turn in a way that skews balance.

There are good ways to avoid falls, Dutta said: Muscle-strengthening exercises that even 90-year-olds can do, adjusting medications that skew balance, proper eye care and clearing clutter from walking paths.

But one study that found tai chi improves the elderly's balance also concluded the exercise provides "a better self-awareness, self-perception of their body." Dutta said that finding fits with the new study's emphasis on positive thinking.

Pointers for senior citizens to stay out of tax troubles

Of the 30 million plus Americans who are tax delinquent many are senior citizens. They live with threats of losing their homes, having their social security checks garnished, losing their treasured assets and putting their children and loved ones in jeopardy because of tax delinquency.

Although the IRS has a new taxpayer-friendly approach and a "Fresh Start" program designed to turn Tax Delinquents into Taxpayers, IRS agents are still in the collection business. Legislative reforms were passed in 1998 to help protect taxpayers from overzealous collection agents, but people still walk away from IRS negotiations distressed over the bad deals they ended up with.

The following are some pointers to help the millions of Senior Citizens who are tax delinquent get out and stay out of tax trouble!

Q: What if I owe $50,000 to the IRS and I don't have the money to pay them?

A: The IRS may settle your tax debt for pennies on the dollar if you have little or no disposable income and assets less than your tax debt.

Q: What if I owe $50,000 and I own a home worth $150,000? What if I paid off the mortgage years ago and own my home outright?

A: If you are 69 years old or older, disabled or ill and living on a fixed income, the IRS may settle with you for pennies on the dollar regardless of the equity you have in your home.

Q: What if I just give my children the house before I die? (Give my assets away)

A: You can leave the house, but if the IRS has placed a lien on it, your children will inherit both the house and the lien. To make matters worse, that lien will ruin their credit. It is better to settle with the IRS before you die and leave the house to your children with a clean title.

Q: What if I started negotiating with the IRS by myself and I don't like the way things are going?

A: You have the right to representation. Just as you are entitled to a lawyer when you are talking to law enforcement agents, you are entitled to a tax expert when you are negotiating with the IRS. Even if you are in the middle of a negotiation, and you feel uncomfortable with the conversation, you have the right to stop the negotiation and inform the agent that you are going to hire a tax specialist.

If you have questions about tax delinquency, Bruce Mayberry, general manager of Capital Tax Relief - a national consulting company that negotiates settlements with the IRS, can be reached at 800-762-3906 or on the Internet at www.CapitalTaxRelief.com.

Alzheimer's Association to hold monthly meeting

In affiliation with the Alzheimer's Association, Panhandle Chapter, the Hereford support group for family caregivers of persons with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias, will meet February 17 at 10 a.m. in Fellowship of Believers Church, 245 N. Kingwood.

A support group is a gathering of people with common problems, needs and interests to share their feelings, thoughts, questions, experiences and concerns in a combined effort to better cope with and survive the challenge presented by persons with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias.

Friends, relatives and neighbors of these brave caregivers are encouraged to offer to stay with the person with Alzheimer's to allow the caregiver a rest. Respite care is vital for these caregivers whose days are typically 36-hours long.

Group facilitator is Nathan L. Stone, Ph.D., pastoral counselor and former senior chaplain with Family Hospice of Temple.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Competing in the New Century

I don't have a crystal ball and I'm not clairvoyant. However, I think I can tell you what successful businesses will be doing to stay successful in the next century.

Sometimes you can predict the future by studying the past. Here are my predictions for what successful companies will do to maintain their success. These prognostications are based on what successful companies have been doing all along.

The elements of excellence

- Successful companies will excel because they are willing to pay the price of success. Hard work, sacrifice, long hours, continuous learning, ever changing and never satisfied are characteristics you'll see driving winning companies in the next century.

- Successful companies will know where they are headed. They will have a plan, a sense of direction and a purpose to guide them. Just as a mountain climber heads for the peak, a quarterback aims for the end zone and a runner pushes toward the finish line, these companies will focus on the results they have targeted.

- Successful companies will prosper because they seek success, not security. A company that is focused on protecting its assets is a stationary target for firms that are willing to risk their assets for gain. Businesses in the next century will find neither ease nor comfort. But, those who pursue prosperity with hard work, an iron will and a daring spirit of adventure will prosper.

- Successful companies will grow because they know that bigger is not better. Successful companies will grow because they focus on continually improving what they do. Those companies who strengthen their market position, focus on their customers and strive to make improvements, will achieve long-term, sustainable growth. Getting bigger is a byproduct of getting better.

- The dinosaurs were big, but are now gone. The elephant is huge, but the lion is still king of the jungle. When you concentrate on becoming faster, smarter and better competitor, you won't have to worry about the biggest kids on the block.

- Successful companies will succeed they have their priorities right. They know the four P's of prosperity: 1) People. They care for customers and employees. 2) Planning. They know the value of thinking slowly before acting quickly. 3) Promotion. They know they can increase their standard of living if they increase others' standard of living. 4) Profit. The byproduct of getting the first three priorities right.

- Successful companies will use power tools. For example, they use the power tools of marketing. They have the power of appeal in their products. They have the power of value in their prices. They have the power of benefit in their position. They have the power of technology in their promotion. They have the power of product knowledge in their people. They have the power of convenience in their location.

- Successful companies will prosper because the current level of success is never good enough. Some of the best-run companies of the 70's were battered by the up-and-comers of the 80's. Those who relaxed a little in the 80's were blown away by the over-achievers of the 90's. It will be the same in the 00's. Watch the companies who are unhappy with just being good. They'll be great before long.

- Successful companies will not wait for their ship to come in. They will wade out to meet it. They are pro-active, not reactive. They won't wait for opportunity to knock, they will wedge the door wide open and leave the light on.

So what about you? Will you be leading the parade, or following it? I plan to be at the front. Hope to see you there.

Some books worth reading

Between the Covers

By Martha Russell

If you haven't been to the book sale yet, there is still time. We have sold hundreds of books and have hundreds yet to sell. Books are still being donated, so if you feel like you have already "shopped" the sale, there may be some new stuff since you were here last.

Something unusual this year is the number of children's books we have for sale. After we weeded more than 1,000 volumes from the juvenile nonfiction section, we put them in the book sale.

All adult and children's hardback books are 25 cents and paperbacks are 10 cents. Magazines are just a nickel. Where else can you get such bargains? The sale will continue through Jan. 29.

As the title Cold Case indicates, Stephen White's latest novel is about a 10-year-old unsolved case that is not only cold for lack of leads, but has taken place among the snowy peaks of the Colorado Rockies.

Two teenage girls were brutally murdered on a crisp autumn evening and their mutilated bodies not found until the following spring.

Now, more than a decade later, one of the families has requested that the case be reopened by an elite group of prosecutors, federal agents, forensic specialists, and others. Clinical psychologist Alan Gregory and his wife, Boulder County assistant district attorney Lauren Crowder, have been enlisted to join them.

With Lauren doing some local fieldwork, Alan is asked to create psychological profiles of the two dead girls. As he reconstructs their lives, he discovers two apparently average adolescent girls who were, in reality, shadowed by secrets they kept from their families and from each other. What began as psychological detection becomes a dangerous cat and mouse game between Alan and Dr. Raymond Welle who has a damning connection to one of the victims.

When someone investigating Welle is killed, Alan steps up his own search for answers, following leads into the high country near Steamboat Springs, where the truth begins to emerge. It is a truth hidden in the deadly confidences between a doctor and a patient, a husband and a wife, and by two teenagers from the rest of the world. It is a truth Alan Gregory may not survive.

On the first page of The Book Borrower by Alice Mattison, Toby Ruben and Deborah Laidlaw meet in 1975 in a city playground, where they are looking after their babies, and Deborah lends Toby a book.

Trolley Girl, that will appear, disappear, and return throughout the years in which these women are friends. The book is a memoir about a long-ago trolley strike and three Jewish sisters, one a fiery revolutionary.

Toby and Deborah raise their toddlers in the '70s while arguing over Patty Hearst and the meaning of life. They find work teaching inner-city day-care workers, a job that leads to conflict between them. Meanwhile, Toby reads the opening chapters of Trolley Girl with interest but puts the book aside when its story turns tragic.

Ten years later we find Toby and Deborah as adjunct English instructors at a local college. They are mothers of school children, stealing time together to drink a beer and exchange gossip, still deeply inher anger with the love and support of the white family who took her in and taught her that white is a state of mind - that she could alter her state of mind to claim fully her own freedom and equality.

Another inspirational story of the courage of a teenage girl is She Said Yes: The Unlikely Martyrdom of Cassie Bernall. We've heard so much about this young woman who proclaimed her belief in God as a classmate held a gun in her face, and then paid for that confession with her life. What we haven't heard much about is her mother's story of how Cassie had, at one pint, started down a troubled path similar to that of her killers and of the dramatic transformation that took place in her life.

Other new books available this week: Women's Moods by Deborah Sichel, M.D. Choosing The President: A Citizen's Guide to the 2000 Election by the League of Women Voters Havana Bay by Martin Cruz Smith Hunting Badger by Tony Hillerman Irresistible Forces by Danielle Steel

Baird's roots planted in agriculture

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Roots of 4-H and FFA stock shows have their foundation in the working world of agriculture, and that's where Jerry Baird, a senior participant in this year's Hereford Young Farmer's Stock Show, plans on staying.

Baird, who graduates from Hereford High School in May, plans on majoring in agricultural education at Clarendon College, then transfer to Texas Tech or Texas A&M to finish his degree.

"I like working with older kids. I like knowing I'm helping keep agriculture alive by getting others involved," Baird said when asked why he was letting his friend, Harrison Hoffman, show a couple of his pigs.

Baird just likes working with animals, but the steers are his favorite.

"He hasn't been around them that much, but he was interested, so I let him show a couple I had put in the cull pen," Baird said.

Baird and Hoffman were both pleasantly surprised when one pig was named reserve grand champion and the other won first place in its division at the 4-H Project Show.

When not working with his own animals during a show, Baird can be seen in the ring catching an escaping lamb or guiding a recalcitrant pig into a holding pen.

This year Baird will be showing his first steer, three pigs and two lambs.

His quiet manner belies the hard work that goes into each of his stock projects. His movements are calm and reassuring. Just a soft word soothes a jittery steer.

"I'll work with them more than 10 hours a week, maybe a little more as the show draws nearer," he said.

Frustration is all part of raising the animals, especially when they are young and haven't been worked with much.

Baird says he's always been interested in stock and ranching.

"As a little kid I always used to bug my parents to come out and see the animals," he said.

By the time he was in the fifth or sixth grade, Baird convinced his parents to let him show a lamb. Sometime before his first show season started, Baird also brought in a pig.

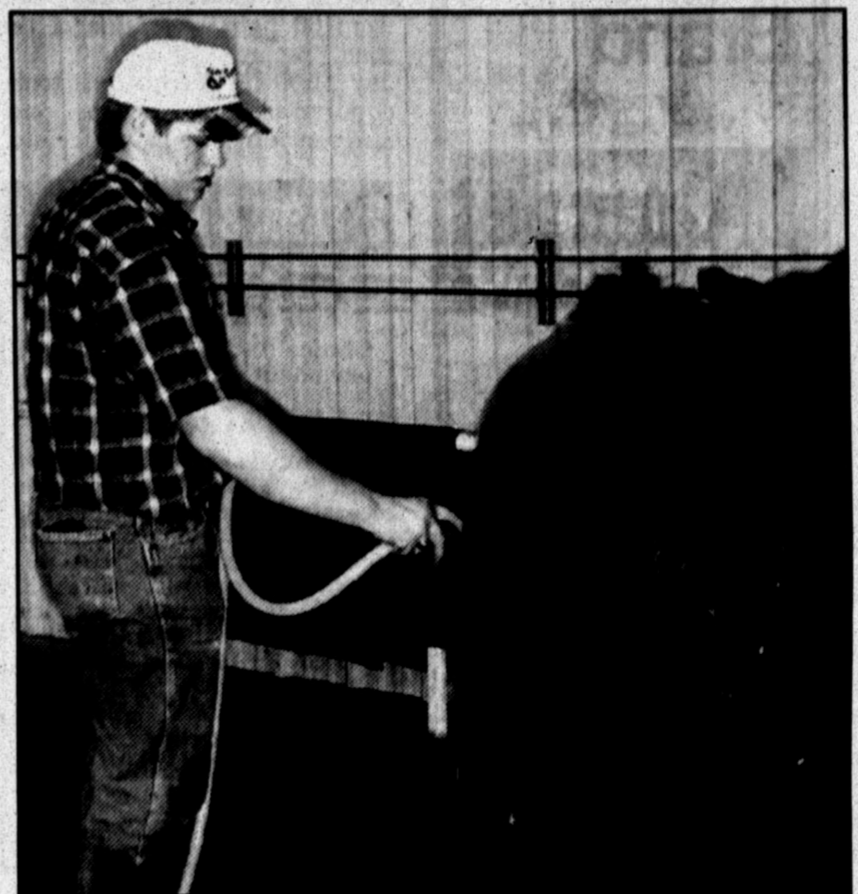

Unlike so many other young participants, Baird doesn't have his own place to keep his animals — they are all housed at the Project Center.

"We've got the family farm, but it's all in CRP (Conservation Reserve Program). The center's really more convenient," Baird said.

He stresses the 4-H and FFA projects are about more than just raising the animals.

"These projects teach you to use your money wisely; they teach responsibility, and it gives future producers an idea of what the industry is looking for," Baird said.

His ultimate goal is to own a working ranch. Until then, he involves himself in as many different aspects of the animal industry as possible. He's worked as a cattle buyer during the summer and keeps abreast of industry standards.

As the stock show season draws near, Jerry Baird spends more time washing and working with his projects

Valley citrus growers expect good crop, small fruit

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Citrus growers in the Rio Grande Valley are calling this year's crop a sweet success, despite small fruit sizes resulting from the drought, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Dr. Julian Sauls of Weslaco, extension horticulturist, said the citrus harvest in the Rio Grande Valley is progressing full steam ahead and will continue through May.

"We are hoping to finish harvesting the early varieties of oranges and navel oranges by the end of January and we'll be harvesting grapefruit until May," he said. "So we are about halfway through."

Dr. Juan Anciso of Edinburg, Hidalgo County Extension agent, said 4 million 40-pound boxes of citrus have been harvested and shipped.

He said the fruit sizes are smaller, however, due to the lack of rain.

"The groves received little rain during the peak growth months of October, November, December and January," Anciso said. "So growers had to irrigate their crops, and the fruit hasn't shaped up as much as we would like."

Sauls said the irrigation supply was not challenged by the drought, unlike years past.

"We got rain when we really needed it," he said. "The rainfall was adequate, so irrigation supplies didn't run out like they did the year before."

Anciso said time is the only cure for small fruit.

"Much of it still has time to grow and will hopefully shape up by its harvest," he said.

Anciso added that yields vary among the groves, but will even out to average production.

"We had an erratic spring bloom," he said. "Most of the groves that produced heavily last year have less this year, and the younger trees that produced little last year have quite a bit now."

Anciso attributes this to new citrus varieties being grown in the Valley.

"Citrus should typically progress forward, producing more each year," he said. "But some new varieties are being used that don't quite follow this trend."

Anciso added that prices per box are slightly higher than average.

"Early in the season, we had very strong prices," he said. "So those growers that harvested early received a little more return."

District extension director Scott Durham of San Angelo said conditions have been warm and windy in West Central Texas.

"There have been scattered showers over the district," he said. "But crops remain in poor condition from the dry weather."

Durham said oat stands and wheat pastures are deteriorating.

"We planted below normal acreage this year," he said.

Durham said there is no grazing for livestock, and there will be no grain for harvest.

"Livestock are being supplemented heavily with feeds," he said.

Durham added that ranges and pastures continue to suffer from drought conditions.

In the Rolling Plains, district extension director Galen Chandler of Vernon said the drought conditions have been conducive to peanut harvest.

"That is the one bright spot," he said. "Conditions have not changed, and the district continues to suffer from the moisture district."

Chandler said cotton harvest has begun, particularly with the use of harvest aids.

"Some irrigated areas are reporting good yields," he said. "But most dryland areas will be below average."

Chandler said supplemental feeding continues as range and pasture conditions deteriorate. "Fall work is nearing the end with lighter than average weaning weights and heavy culling," he said.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district extension directors:

PANHANDLE: soil moisture is short to very short. Temperatures above normal. Limited preparation for spring crops under way. Dryland wheat continues to suffer; mild temperatures have allowed greenbug populations to increase. Some lice problems reported in cattle.

SOUTH PLAINS: soil moisture is short. Warm, dry weather reported. Pastures and ranges in fair condition. Supplemental feeding of livestock continues. Land preparation beginning. Dryland wheat needs rain; irrigated wheat is fair.

ROLLING PLAINS: soil moisture is very short. Moisture deficit in northern region. Wheat is fair to poor. Harvest aids, irrigation bringing good cotton yields. Peanuts yields fair to good. Deteriorating range, pasture conditions. Low weaning weights reported.

Custom Grass Seeding & Field Preparation

Includes: Working new ground, plowing out grasses for new stands, or overseeding current grasses.

Nebraska farmers feel the drought

Officials seek to balance caution with well-thought out planning

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — If more rain hasn't fallen in Nebraska by the time a state drought group meets in late February, it may request a state of emergency.

Also at that time the state's Climate Assessment Response Committee may organize farm producer education meetings, give farmers and ranchers alternatives and alert towns and cities that they should analyze their water situation.

The state Department of Agriculture committee hopes it doesn't have to do all that, but it is keeping those backup plans just in case one of Nebraska's most serious droughts continues into the spring.

"We would have dead crops if this were summertime," said State Climatologist Al Dutcher at the committee's Tuesday morning meeting.

Although farmers are hoping for some heavy rain this spring — necessary to replenish dry soil and bring good yields — the forecast does not look good, Dutcher said.

"The odds of having normal to above normal yields this year are almost nonexistent," Dutcher said.

Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas are also experiencing drought problems, he said.

Parts of Nebraska recorded only an inch to an inch and a half of soil moisture and little or no rain has fallen on most of the state over the last several months.

But state officials are not panicking yet.

Dutcher said the state needs to balance caution with planning and contingency plans — without creating a panic.

Greg Ibach, assistant director of agriculture, said fall 1999 was one of the worst dry periods the state has seen in more than 100 years of record-keeping. Ibach said the dryness compared with droughts of the late 1970s and late 1980s.

"Based on the forecast now, producers and municipalities and all citizens of Nebraska should be starting to consider some options and maybe altering their production practices and usage practices because the forecast isn't for rain," Ibach said.

The committee will update Gov. Mike Johanns next week on the drought.

All Center Pivot Owners/Operators ARE INVITED!

(Even if you didn't buy from us)

Your continued irrigation success is important to us, so we would like to invite you to attend the Zimmatic Customer Maintenance and Operation Seminar.

This specially designed seminar, held in conjunction with your local Zimmatic dealer, presents a number of power-off, hands-on troubleshooting techniques. This information increases your understanding of the irrigation system and enables you to easily handle minor problems before contacting your dealer for service.

Date: Tuesday, January 25, 2000
Place: Hereford Community Center
Time: 10:30 am - 3:30 pm
Lunch: 12:00-1:00

SEMINAR AGENDA

- ✓ System Operation
- ✓ Spring and Winter Maintenance
- ✓ Detecting Operation Malfunctions Using Working Center Pivot System
- ✓ Evaluating System Components Using Appropriate Meters

Lunch will be provided for those attending the seminar.

Writing want ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

MASSIVE PORCH Master Bed Room Down — Perfect For Empty Nest Lifestyle

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

You can rock away your cares on the front porch of this refined country style home. The open rail L-shaped stair adds elegance to your first impression as you enter the grand foyer of the home.

A formal dining room is open to the foyer and the great room, with only columns dividing the rooms.

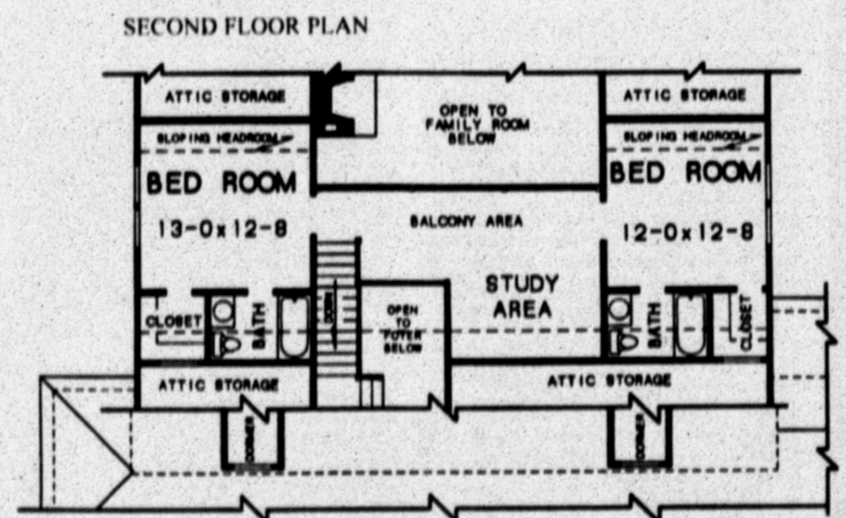

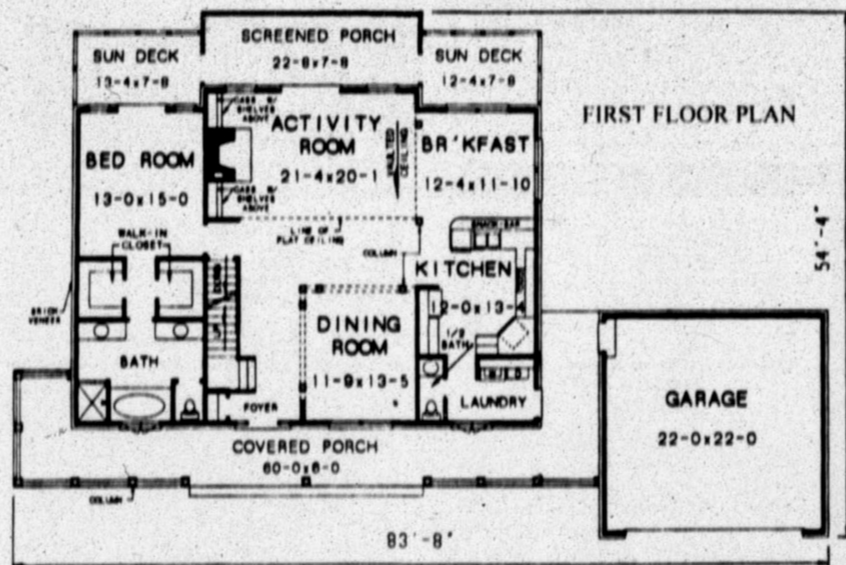

Vaulted ceilings add excitement to the great room, shown with a warm fireplace flanked by built-in bookcases. The great room blends with the breakfast area, dining room and kitchen, providing ease of passage from room to room. Rear decks and a screened porch are perfect for warm weather entertaining. Notice how all the main living areas of the home enjoy beautiful backyard views.

The kitchen is large and complete with corner oven, lots of cabinets and counter top space, along with a convenient snack bar. The breakfast room is flooded with sunshine from windows on two sides.

A laundry room and half bath are nearby. A door leading across the porch and into the double garage is in the laundry room.

This functional floor plan includes a master bed room on the first floor. The room overlooks a private sun deck.

The suite includes twin walk-in closets and a garden bath with oversized tub, separate shower and double vanities.

Upstairs are two generously sized bed rooms. Each bed room includes a private bath and walk-in closet. These bed rooms are isolated from each other, connected by a large study and balcony area. This room could become a studio, hobby room or office. Or, it could just be a place to settle down and read a good book.

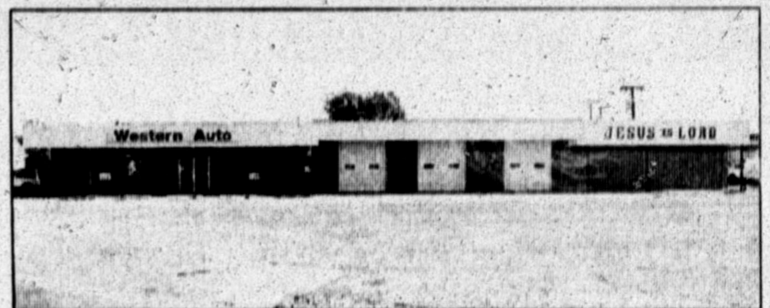

Round top dormers and steep roof lines, combined with a wrap around porch contribute to the eye catching details of this brick home.

Plan number 2387 includes 2,313 square feet of heated space and is available with a basement foundation. All W. D. # New year draws old faces

The 2000 Hereford Young Farmers Stockshow draws numerous returning showmen as well as first time participants eager to strut their stuff

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Some names — Campbell, Hoelscher, Johnson, Schlabs, and Urbanczyk — commonly appear in local stock show listings, and this year is no exception.

Many of the long-time veterans will return to the ring this year, but joining them will be many first-time exhibitors, aged 8 and up.

Many of the newcomers to the stock show circuit are simply the younger brothers and sisters of older participants. Some have been lured in by friends who have shown for years, others have just moved to the area and are only new to the local shows.

Joining the newcomers is Cason Cole, who will be showing a steer for his first project. Cason had the opportunity to bring his steer to town for the 4-H Project Show earlier this month.

This year, more than 140 exhibitors from five counties will show more than 35 steers, 195 hogs, 122 lambs and 13 goats.

Competitors will begin arriving with their animals at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn Tuesday, with the steer weigh-in beginning at 4 p.m.

Weigh-in for Deaf Smith County participants with hogs will be 2-4 p.m. Wednesday, with out-of-county entrants weighing in after 4 p.m.

Lamb and goat weigh-in begins at 2 p.m. Thursday for country entrants and 3 p.m.

for out-of-county entrants.

The actual show begins at 6 p.m. Wednesday with the showing of steers, judged by Dennis Poole.

Hogs will be judged at 4 p.m. Thursday by Lance Ryan. Scott Dass will judge goats beginning at 4:30 p.m. Friday, with lambs to follow.

The sale begins promptly at noon Saturday.

Deaf Smith County students participating in this year's event are:

Also, Tara Carroll, Lewis Castro, Cason Cole, Corey Collier, Jordy Collier, Wade

ON THE COVER

Members of Deaf Smith County 4-H and FFA clubs work with their stock projects on a daily basis prior to the Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show.

Nelson Beville, gives "Wet Ones" an all new meaning as he douses one of several animals which he will be showing. Beville said the animal was a real handful when he first started working him, but he seems to be coming along just fine now.

Returning to the ring this year will be Seth Hoelscher who has shown pigs for several years. Last year he showed a lamb and this year he will show steers for the first time at the 2000 Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show, Jan. 26-29.

Showmen receive help from parents and sponsors, but expertise comes from working their individual animals.

Exotics claimed top honors in 1999 steer show

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

The 1999 Hereford Young Farmers Stock show got off on the right hoof as two categories of American breed steers, three categories of English steers, and three classes of exotic animals vied for top honors.

Claiming the top prize of Grand Champion was a 1,185-pound exotic steer owned by Chad Christie.

Reserve Grand Champion position went to a 1,268-pound shorthorn owned by Craig Campbell.

Stephen Edwards received the Beef Cattlewomen's prize belt buckle. The organization presents the award each year to a first-time showman who exhibits considerable knowledge and skill with the animal. The buckle presentation is an effort to promote the beef industry.

Chad Christie was selected senior showman, while Catherine Beville claimed the junior showmanship award.

Jackie Patton of Hereford FFA walked away with the American breed champion with her 1,284-pound steer.

Coming in closely on the heels of the breed champion was the 1,253-pound reserve breed champion shown by Clayton Paxton.

The smallest of all categories, the lightweight American breed, was won by Nelson Beville with a 1,160-pound cross. Justin Johnson was second with his 1,203-pound animal; Cory Marsh placed third.

First place in the heavy-weight American category, with only four entrees, went to Jackie Patton; Clayton Patton was second, Eddie Lacey placed third and Jarret May was fourth.

Reserve breed champion went to Brent Carlson with a first place going to Nelson Beville with a 1,142-pound shorthorn.

1,236-pound shorthorn.

Second-place English steer went to Cory Marsh with a 1,121-pound Hereford steer.

Cody Marsh showed both third- and fourth-place animals.

Medium weight English division showed four steers, with Brent Carlson's 1,236-pound shorthorn taking first place.

Ivory Isaacson's 1,156-pound Angus claimed second; Ben Sublett took third and Chelsea Campbell was fourth.

Heavyweight English steer category also showed four animals.

A 1,287-pound shorthorn owned by Craig Campbell won first in the heavyweight class. He also claimed second place with a 1,268-pound shorthorn.

Catherine Beville took third place with a 1,300-pound polled Hereford. Evan Isaacson placed fourth.

All project steers were shown and owned by members of Hereford FFA or Deaf Smith County 4-H.

Exotic breeds were divided into three categories, each showing six animals.

Taking off with exotic breed champion was the lightweight winner, shown by Chad Christie.

Reserve breed champion went to Amanda Wall with the Medium weight winner.

In the lightweight division, Chad Christie moved out in first place; Jerad Johnson took second; Ben Sublett was third.

Brent Carlson placed fourth, Toby Duncan was fifth and Craig Campbell placed sixth.

Medium weight exotic steers represented the biggest differences in individual animals in the steer show, with Amanda Wall placing first and Brent Carlson making second.

Justin Johnson took third and fourth place. Jarret May placed fifth and Ian Isaacson came in sixth.

The final class, heavyweight exotic steers, had as many similarities among the animals, as there were differences.

Top animal in this class went to Ivory Isaacson, with Jerad Johnson showing the second-place animal.

Amanda Wall received third place, and Stephen Edwards placed fourth.

Fifth- and sixth-place honors went to Lark Duncan and Glenn Kahlich.

Borden County Agricultural Extension Agent Dennis Poole judged the steers.

Christie's crossbred claims hog show

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

More than 200 pigs arrived at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn this week, to be primped and readied for judging at the 1999 Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show.

Grand Champion honors in Thursday's judging went to Chad Christie, with his champion cross bred barrow.

Reserve Champion was won by Amber Eckert and her crossbred reserve champion gilt.

Justin Johnson won junior showmanship. Amber Eckert won senior showmanship.

The first and smallest class to enter the ring, Berkshires, consisted of three entrants, was won by two exhibitors. With only three entrants, the first-place hog, shown by Kaleb Schmidt, Hereford FFA, also claimed breed champion. Celeste Louder, Deaf Smith 4-H, claimed reserve breed champion and second place. Kaleb Schmidt, placed third with the lightest-weight Berkshire.

Chester category had only one division, with Seth Hoelscher, Hereford FFA, winning breed champion and first; Steven Reinart, Hereford FFA reserve breed.

Chester placements were:

1, Seth Hoelscher, Hereford FFA; 2, Steven Reinart, Hereford FFA; 3, Camille Vasek, Hereford FFA; 4, Elise Eckert, Hereford FFA; 5, Colby Marsh, Hereford FFA; 6, Joshua Fetsch, Hereford FFA; 7, Keely Schlabs, Deaf Smith 4-H.

Writing duo puts the Ally in The WB's Brutally Normal

By Jacqueline Cutler
©TVData Features Syndicate

The WB Network's most recent nod to teens, Brutally Normal, is brutally typical of the latest round of teen shows. There's dialogue attempting to be glib, adults depicted as buffoons and oh, the Angst of it all.

The half-hour series, which premieres Monday, Jan. 24, focuses on three buddies, Russell Wise, Robert "Pooh" Cutler and Anna Privoca (Eddie Kaye Thomas of American Pie, Mike Damus of Teen Angel, Lea Moreno of Legacy).

The problems this trio faces are, well, brutally normal: Anna questions who she is; Russell tries to fit in, while fancying himself a lover; Pooh worries about everything.

Many said Seinfeld was about nothing. The same could be said of this show. Seinfeld, however, was entertaining.

Maybe teens won't find it brutally boring, but that's a long shot despite the fact that the actors are good.

The gang attends Normal High School. In one episode, Anna is trying to prevent a candid photo from being published in the high-school yearbook. The yearbook editor is a slimy Lothario — with a refrigerator, king-size waterbed and neon sign in his bedroom — who looks too old to be in high school.

But it's when Anna decides to steal the photo from the yearbook office that the show switches to the brutally absurd. Suddenly, she is poured into a sexy Catwoman suit and envisions herself a jewel thief with the photo as the precious prize.

Such fantasy sequences may remind viewers of Fox's Ally McBeal. But Normal co-creator and writer Michael Goldberg says the similarities are not intentional. He says he's trying to take the scenes and push them "much further" than McBeal.

"When you develop shows, you have no idea of what other people are doing," Goldberg says. "We knew when we sat down, we wanted to go into the subconscious minds of kids — the things they can't illuminate in real life, sometimes scary, sometimes funny."

"(In) most European movies that you love, almost everyone has flashbacks and fantasy sequences, and America never got into that until recently. We do about three a show. We are just trying to illuminate what can't be illuminated."

In the same episode, Russell shares a deep kiss with a beautiful woman seven years his senior. She turns up at school as his substitute teacher and refuses any further romantic overtures.

"Every single story that you see in some way, is something that Tommy and I went through," Goldberg says, referring to his partner, Tommy Swerdlow, with whom he wrote the screenplay for Cool Runnings.

"Tommy was at a radical high school in New York, and he led a strike in his high school when he heard a teacher was being fired," he explains, adding, "What kid hasn't had a crush on a teacher? I kissed three of them, one in high school and two the minute I got out, and I had sex with one of them, but we won't talk about that."

The student revolt Goldberg refers to is the plot of another episode, in which a popular civics teacher is in trouble because Russell moons the class. Russell was responding to pressure from the teacher about free expression. The mooning is not explicit.

If there's any one reason to watch, it is Tangle Ambrose (Martin), who plays Dru, Anna's confidante. Ambrose manages to deliver otherwise flat lines with panache. And, she, like the rest of the cast, is far better than the material.

HOROSCOPES

Aries -- A female friend calls on your smarts this week. Share some of your skills and experience. If wealth equals knowledge, you're pretty well off. So, practice generosity with your time and encouragement. Good news comes in the mail on Friday.

Taurus -- It's a good time for shopping. Helpful hint: Pay cash, and leave your plastic at home, so you won't be spending more than you want. On Friday, you can get yourself out of an embarrassing situation by thinking quickly on your feet. Be prepared. A friend may need your help.

Gemini -- Find time for new interests this week. Pick up your old camera, and take pictures for the art of it. Go outside, and view nature through your lens. The weekend looks quiet. How about a trip to the library on Saturday? Check out as many new books as you can. The best part? They're free.

Virgo -- Weigh your job options carefully this week. Make efforts to see the whole picture, instead of just the tedious routine. Thinking of taking a course? Good idea. Look for ways to use new skills in your current position, and maybe your place of employment will pick up the tab.

Libra -- Creativity on the job is where you're needed most this week. If you happen to run the show at the office, delegate work sparingly to worthy employees. Use the weekend to write letters to old friends. Don't be afraid to express yourself.

Aquarius -- Think romance this week. Think adventure. Think travel. Open your mind and your spirit, and go where-ever they take you. Even if your wallet doesn't allow the adventure you're dreaming of, flip through some travel magazines, and let them help you plan that dream trip for later on.

Pisces -- Get yourself back to the gym. Your muscles need as much of a pick-me-up as your spirits do. Stop putting it off. A new friend invites you to a gathering over the weekend; bring a friend or pass up the invitation altogether. Your shy side is on the prowl; don't leave home without a base.

Cancer -- Start the week off on the right foot, Cancer. Take time out on Sunday to balance your checkbook. Make a realistic budget for the week, and stick to it. Practice turning good habits like this into a routine. Is a family member out of touch? He or she will come around sooner than you think.

Leo -- Don't let deadlines get in the way of quality. Slow down, and take your time with your work. Practice special kindness in the office. Work may call more for understanding than for creativity this week, but there are lessons to be learned from this, too.

Scorpio -- Social is your middle name this week, Scorpio. Take time off, and have some fun. Use the time to do things you don't ordinarily have time for. Get all the "must-do's" out of the way early in the week, and enjoy all the "want-to's" later in the week. A new friend shows a different side.

Sagittarius -- Feel like you just don't have time for the things you enjoy? Well, make some. Spend time painting and writing poetry this week. Take a fellow Sagittarius out to lunch on Thursday, and share your thoughts. Don't be sensitive when it comes to criticism; it inevitably will better you.

Capricorn -- What's going on, Capricorn? Why so sensitive? You seem to be shutting your friends out of your life. Afraid they won't like some of your latest choices? Does it really matter what they think? If yes, then explain slowly and caringly why you've made them. If no, then carry on as you were.

Wednesday on A&E Network, Biography profiles the stand-up comic whose sitcom became a sensation in Jerry Seinfeld: Master of His Domain.

SUNDAY

Sundays on Fox, Frankie Muniz plays a superintelligent boy living in a chaotic household in Malcolm in the Middle.

IN FOCUS

The Hollywood Foreign Press Association honors Barbra Streisand during The 57th Annual Golden Globe Awards, airing Sunday, Jan. 23, on NBC.

Streisand will receive the Cecil B. DeMille Award for her work in the entertainment industry. Her illustrious career includes four Golden Globes, including two for best actress (Funny Girl, A Star Is Born) and one for best original song ("Evergreen" from A Star Is Born).

Barbara Mandrell plays a mother who stands firmly by her daughter after a harrowing experience in Stolen From the Heart, airing Wednesday, Jan. 26, on CBS.

Leslie Wagner (Tracey Gold) is an unwed woman who is convinced by her friend Karen (Lisa Zane) to carry an unexpected pregnancy to term. But what Leslie doesn't know is that her friend is planning on stealing the baby — right from her womb. Inspired by a true story, the TV movie also stars Billy Moses.

Controversial works by artist Edouard Manet (pictured) and author Mark Twain are revisited in Culture Shock, airing Wednesday on PBS (check local listings).

Culture Shock reflects on works of Manet and Twain

By Josh Greene

©TVData Features Syndicate

One was an artist, the other an author. But Edouard Manet and Mark Twain did share something in common: the creation of controversial yet influential masterpieces.

A new special, Culture Shock, looks back at two of art and literature's most controversial marvels in Born to Trouble: Adventures of Huckleberry Finn and The Shock of the Nude: Manet's Olympia. It airs Wednesday, Jan. 26, on PBS (check local listings).

Twain's Adventures of Huckleberry Finn was one of the first novels to cross the boundaries of race, class, censorship and culture.

In an effort to illustrate the injustice and absurdity of slavery and racism, Twain wrote a story in the vernacular involving an outcast youth who teams up with a runaway slave to flee Missouri.

Opponents of the frequently banned book believe its content and language fuel the fires of racism, while its supporters see it as a valid representation of the U.S. political and social climate of the late 1800s.

To say 1865 Paris was not ready for Manet's Olympia, as America wasn't ready for Huck Finn, is an understatement.

His artistic representation of the human body eventually led to a change in French painting styles, but not before harsh criticism and outrage in the art world took its toll.

It wasn't so much what Manet created, but the means by which he covered the canvas. Moving away from the traditional art techniques of the times, Manet utilized bold brush strokes and simplified forms to represent a nude prostitute in a reclining position, boldly looking back at the viewer.

Even though Twain and Manet were both vilified for their works, they are still regarded as masters of their respective crafts and major influences on the art and literature community of today.

Manet's and Twain's indifference toward conforming to society's norms continues to influence present-day artists and authors, some of whom have created works that make Huck Finn and Olympia look positively mainstream by comparison.

Q: Is Mariska Hargitay of Law & Order: Special Victims Unit the daughter of Jayne Mansfield and Mickey Hargitay? It seems to me that was the name of their baby at the time of Jayne's untimely death. —Betty Ridings, West Farmington, Ohio.

A: Yes, Hargitay, who turns 36 on Jan. 23, was 3 years old when she and her two brothers survived the automobile accident that killed Mansfield.

Q: I loved the recent TV movie version of Annie, but I disagree with a friend who says Victor Garber and Kathy Bates did their own singing. —Tullio Marchetti, San Francisco.

A: Your friend is correct. In fact, Garber has an extensive background of musical credits, including Tony-nominated performances in Damn Yankees and Stephen Sondheim's Sweeney Todd. Bates also did some singing early in her career but took some lessons to get back into vocal shape for Annie.

Q: Where can I write to The Nashville Network to express my unhappiness with all the weird changes they are making? It seems they are taking off all the good programs that have anything to do with country singers. —Beverly Shelby, Braceville, Ill.

A: You can vent by sending a letter to Viewer Services, The Nashville Network, 2806 Opryland Drive, Nashville, TN 37214.

Q: Stephen Collins of 7th Heaven looks so familiar. What else has he done? —Ethel Tarqueno, Worth, Ill.

A: The 52-year-old actor and novelist has had a varied career on both stage and screen. Before Heaven, he had series roles in Sisters, Tales of the Gold Monkey, Tattlers and Working It Out.

He also starred in such high-profile TV movies and miniseries as Chiefs, A Woman Named Jackie and Scarlett.

Among his many feature films are The First Wives Club, The Promise, Star

Mariska Hargitay

Trek: The Motion Picture and All the President's Men.

Q: My husband insists that the actress who played Ally's mother on the Thanksgiving episode of Ally McBeal is the same woman who played Mrs. Keaton on Family Ties. Is he right? —Kim in Utica, Ky.

A: No. That was two-time Oscar nominee Jill Clayburgh on Ally; Meredith Baxter played Elyse Keaton on Ties.

Q: Did Alfred Molina (Ladies Man) previously play the soldier who dressed as a woman on *M*A*S*H*? —V. Boyer, Ranger, Texas.

A: The British-born Molina, 46, was never on *M*A*S*H*. Jamie Farr, 63, played Cpl. Max Klinger.

Q: Is it true that the father on The Wonder Years, Dan Lauria, died? —L.J. in Whitefish, Mont.

A: No, and you can see him in the new Showtime movie Common Ground, premiering Saturday, Jan. 29.

SOAP TALK

Forget VCR's: Channel airs 24 hours of soaps

Thanks to a new television channel, soap opera fans won't have to worry about missing their favorite shows.

ABC and Disney combine forces to launch SoapNet, a 24-hour cable channel, on Monday, Jan. 24.

General Hospital, All My Children, One Life to Live and Port Charles are the focus of this network. These daytime shows will air at their regular times on ABC and will be repeated the same day in SoapNet's prime-time hours.

Past soaps also will air. The lineup includes Ryan's Hope, Falcon Crest, Knots Landing, Sisters, Hotel and The Colby.

"This programming is targeted to a very specific audience, and the fans of serialized drama are passionate and loyal viewers," says Anne Sweeney, president of Disney/ABC Cable Networks.

Many women aren't at home in the afternoons as their mothers and grandmothers were. Soap fans either miss their shows or must rely on VCRs.

"By offering 24-seven scheduling, we accommodate the changing lifestyle of soap fans by making the programs available when they want to see them, as well as provide them with a destination that is all soaps all the time," Sweeney says.

SoapNet also will debut SoapCenter, a new entertainment show focused on daytime serials. SoapCenter takes viewers inside the shows and behind the scenes. Fans will have the opportunity to see how a rough idea becomes a script and how the sets on the various soaps are created. The show also will visit daytime stars in their homes to see what they are like away from the spotlight.

Dear Candace: Where did they find the young boy who plays Timmy on Passions? This soap has gotten my family's and my attention. We can't wait to see what happens next. I heard a rumor that the show might be canceled. —Linda via the Internet.

Dear Reader: Josh Ryan Evans plays Timmy. Before joining the daytime drama, he made several guest appearances on prime-time shows, including Ally McBeal.

Passions is in no danger of immediate cancellation.

THE BUCK STARTS HERE.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information.

Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer.

Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live.

Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise.

It's an integral part of our lives.

Newspaper. It delivers.
