Whitman is still on Bush list

AUSTIN (AP) - New Jersey Gov. Christie Whitman is still among a long list of potential running mates to Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush.

Bush on Thursday in an interview said Whitman, a moderate who supports abortion rights, is on a list that includes Republicans of every political stripe, including Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge.

"Christie's on the list, Tom Ridge is on the list. Others are on the list. Anything is possible at this point in time. It'll be narrowed down over the next couple of months," Bush said during an interview Whitman would be "thrilled to be asked, but it is not our expectation," said Peter McDonough, spokesman for Whitman.

The governor is one of the most high profile Republicans in the country. She has a very big national following. If the nominee is looking for a moderate woman, she has got to be on a very short list," McDonough said.

Bush, who opposes abortion, has said the topic won't be a litmus test for vice presidential contenders. But voices from the party's right wing, including Bedminster, N.J., publisher Steve Forbes, former presidential candidate Gary Bauer and Christian Coalition founder Pat Robertson, all have said Whitman's support for abortion rights should eliminate her from consideration.

Bush made the remarks during an interview with reporters from New Jersey, Florida, Wisconsin and several cents a bushel this year, while prices for wheat will rise somewhat, USDA said.

The department already had been expecting to spend $7.3 billion on crop subsidies this year, because of the continued low prices. The lower price projections released today could raise that as high as $8 billion, said USDA economist Larry Salathe. But, he said, "a lot can happen between now and September," when most of the crops are harvested.

The price declines are unlikely to have much impact in supermarkets, because the cost of raw ingredients and animal feed accounts for just a small portion of consumer food prices.

Commodity prices collapsed in 1998 because of financial problems in Asia and heavy worldwide crop production and are expected to recover slowly through the coming decade. Congress is considering a third multibillion-dollar bailout of the U.S. farm economy in as many years.

The price of corn averaged between $1.85 to $1.95 in 1999. The price should range between $1.60 to $2 a bushel this year, with a mid-point of $1.80, USDA said.

Wheat prices, which averaged $2.50 per bushel in 1999, are expected to range between $2.40 to $2.90 this year.

U.S. production of winter wheat is down 3 percent this year, as a drought severely damaged the crop in Texas. The state is expected to produce just 70.4 million bushels less than Ohio and five other states - compared to 122.4 million bushels in 1999.

The year is shaping up much better for cattle and hog producers. Prices for hogs are expected to average between 44 to 46 cents per pound, up from 34 cents last year. Beef prices are estimated at 68 to 71 cents this year, compared to 65.5 cents in 1999.

New Mexico firefighters get break

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Slackening wind and increased humidity today gave firefighters a boost as they struggled to hold the line against a fire that destroyed 280 homes and forced 25,000 people from the town where the atomic bomb was built. "With the light winds, we're hoping to get air power in here today to put it out," Gov. Gary Johnson said this morning on NBC's "Today" show. "There haven't been any new fires, so this is really positive." Some who fled the flames also found reason for hope as they returned to Los Alamos for the first time since being forced out. Margrethe and Bill Feldman discovered their home was still standing.

"It was relief. It was joy," said Mrs. Feldman. "I was prepared to find just nothing and all of a sudden there it is.'

Winds of up to 50 mph had blown the fire through the town on Thurs-

With helicopters, airplanes, bulldozers and hand tools, firefighters feverishly worked to stanch the weekold blaze that was deliberately set to burn brush at Bandelier National Monument but had sliced through about 28,000 acres like a white-hot sickle by this morning. The man who gave the OK for the so-called controlled burn was placed on leave Thursday.

The fire was still spreading this morning but at a slower pace as winds calmed. Winds were expected to gust up to 25 mph but lose their earlier force. "It looks like a war Ed zone." Pullian, a battalion chief with the Los Alamos Fire Department, said early this morning.

He had slept just seven hours over the past three getting overrun.

"It came roaring down like a freight train off the mountain," he said. "We didn't have a chance. We kept retreating, retreating, retreating and kept getting overrun."

Thursday, fire crews took advantage of nightfall, with its lower temperatures and higher humidity, to burn trees, grass and brush about five miles from town, hoping to create a scorched earth zone that would stop the fire. Other crews doused homes with water, cut brush and dug trenches in still-standing neighborhoods.

"Today is a little better day for firefighting," said Jim Paxon, a spokesman with a federal-state "It came roaring down like a freight interagency train off the mountain," he said. "We manage ment team didn't have a chance. We kept retreatthat deals ing, retreating, retreating and kept with fires on public land.

Alamos, 70 miles north of Albuquerque, is essentially a company town for the Los Alamos National Laboratory, which employs 7,000 people at buildings scattered throughout the city. At the weapons lab, flames burned trailers and portable buildings, rolled past concrete bunkers containing explosives, and came within 300 yards of a plutonium storage facility. Lab officials insisted dangerous materials were protected in fire-resistant facilities strong enough to withstand the crash of a 747.

"These materials are in the best place, given the fire," Johnson said after the flames passed by. "There hasn't been the release of anything dangerous, again, there's not going Danger was still posed by a hazardous waste area in nearby White Rock, where asbestos, low-level radioactive waste and PCBs are stored in steel drums and fiberglass compound containers.

Paul Schumann, an official with the lab, said possible health effects if the area catches fire range from short-term problems such as liver poisoning to long-term ailments including cancer, the result of breathing a plutonium particles.

The fire was about 5 miles away from the area Thursday night.

In Los Alamos, brick fireplaces and chimneys were the only things remaining of some homes while others escaped the fire's macabre dance unscathed.

With the fires still burning, finger-pointing had already begun.

The fire was set May 4 by the National Park Service to clear brush near Bandelier, but raged out of control in the dry, windy conditions. Roy Weaver, Bandelier's superintendent, could not be reached for comment on whether he had seen a special National Weather Service forecast faxed to the park beforehand that said fire-growth conditions were at their highest.

Carriers to collect food items

Hereford mail carriers not only will collect mail Saturday, they'll collect food as well.

This will be the third year that the Hereford carriers will participate in the annual National Association of Letter Carriers' food drive.

Hereford postal employee Michelle Hammarbeck said recently the food collected will be donated to the Hereford Food Pantry. Anyone interested in donating non-perishable food items for the drive is asked to place the items in a bag and set it beside their mailbox by 9:30 a.m. Saturday The mail carriers will be responsible for picking up the food.

Hammarbeck said the goal for the entire Panhandle is at least 90,000 pounds of food.

The bags of food will be collected by the mail carriers only within the city limits of Hereford.

ECONOMY Energy prices plunge, offset rise for food

WASHINGTON (AP) - Wholesale prices fell 0.3 percent in April after surging for two straight months as energy costs took their biggest plunge in nine years, more than offsetting a jump in food prices.

The decline in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index, which measures inflation pressures before they reach the consumer, was right on target with many analysts' expectations and was the best showing on inflation since a 0.4 percent drop posted in February 1999. The report was released today. Outside the volatile energy and food categories, the "core" rate of inflation at the wholesale level for the second month in a row rose by just 0.1 percent in April - also matching many analysts' forecasts. On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average gained 61 points in early trading and Nasdaq added 90. Yields on 10-year Treasury notes edged up to 6.42 percent from 6.40 percent late Thursday.

In February and March, wholesale prices shot up by 1 percent, the sharpest increase in nearly 10 years. In both months the jolts came from soaring energy prices.

The Federal Reserve has raised interest rates five times by a quarter-point each since June 30 to slow the supercharged economy and keep inflation from escalating.

Many economists widely expect Fed policy-makers will boost interest rates again when they meet Tues day. A growing number of analysts are predicting a more aggressive half-point interest rate increase.

So far this year, wholesale prices have been rising at an annual rate of 5.4 percent, compared with a 3 percent gain for all of 1999. The pickup in this year's wholesale prices largely reflects rising energy costs.

Flare-ups continue Texas blaze

A blaze consuming more than 43,000 West Texas acres is growing today despite efforts by hundreds of firefighters battling flames in rugged, mountainous terrain.

The fire triggered by multiple lightning strikes has already claimed one life. The pilot of an air tanker dropping water on the stubborn blaze died over the weekend when his craft crashed.

No injuries or evacuations have been reported, although flames spreading through thinly populated ranch country have threatened at least one house.

"The fire has grown in size," one firefighter who spoke on condition of anonymity said today. "It is bumping up against (U.S.) Highway 385 south of Fort Stockton, between Marathon and Fort Stockton.'

He said authorities have identified three lightning strikes that triggered the blaze that has raced across Brewster and Pecos counties in the Glass Mountains since Saturday.

Weather conditions have been ideal for the fire's growth, with low humidity, wind gusts and temperatures in the 90s. Firefighting has been difficult because the blaze has burned into brush-covered streambeds and valleys. Also, some attention has been diverted to New Mexico where city blocks of Los Alamos have been consumed in another wildfire that began with a controlled burn at a national monument.

On Thursday, crews thought they had established a fire line to contain the flames.

Congress views compensation

Lawmakers wrestle with moral and financial concerns

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is wrestling with the Clinton administration's plan to compensate every radiationexposed, cancer-stricken nuclear weapons factory worker, living and dead.

For lawmakers, it means decisions both financial and moral: What's a fair payment for a shortened life or ruined health? What should determine who gets paid and who doesn't?

"These are people's lives we're talking about. No amount of money can make up for that, but we've got to do as much as we can to help these people," said Rep. Ted Strickland, D-Ohio, whose district includes the Portsmouth Gaseous Diffusion Plant, an Energy Department facility where uranium is processed for nuclear weapons.

The administration's plan offers $100,000 lump sum payments only to those who contracted cancer and beryllium disease, and steers other sick employees to state workers' compensation programs. It would not allow compensated workers to sue the government or government contractors for further damages.

Most of the estimated 3,000 workers who would be in line for federal payments worked at the Hanford Reservation in Washington state; the Oak Ridge Reservation in Tennes-

Workers have described being sent into highly radioactive areas without any film in their radiation-measuring film badges; going without lung protection into areas where contaminants created a thick fog; and eating their lunches on the same tabletops where they wiped down leaking chemical containers.

Some spent years trying to get accurate information on their medical conditions but got documents with the identity of what they were exposed to blacked out for security reasons. In some cases, exposure records were altered or destroyed.

Sam Ray, a disabled former employee at the Portsmouth plant, said he and other production workers were never told about plutonium and other contaminants in the uranium they were processing.

"Information was provided based on a 'need to know' basis - and production imperatives determined what you needed to know," he told a recent congressional hearing. "Even to this day, we don't know what we confronted."

Ruben Slesinger, a University of Pittsburgh economics professor who frequently testifies in lawsuits, calculating dollar figures to help set damages for injured people, said he could imagine few instances in which the administration's

"They're being hoodwinked.

"Unless someone worked up until the day he died, lost wages alone would probably be more than that. Three years of lost wages is over $100,000," he said.

Slesinger said the minimum should be $350,000.

Sen. George Voinovich, R-Ohio, and Rep. Ed Whitfield, R-Ky., introduced legislation this week to make the minimum payment $200,000.

The lawmakers say they expect some kind of compensation program to pass, but expect long negotiations to de-termine the price tag and a

"It is not only a responsibility of this government to pro-vide for these individuals, it is a moral obligation."

White women are twice as likely as blacks and Hispanics to see a doctor in the first few months of pregnancy, according to a study released Thursday by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

A CDC review of 13 states showed that in 1997, the percentage of babies born to mothers whose first medical exam was more than three months into their pregnancy was 27.7 percent for black women, 26.3 for Hispanic women and 12.1 percent for white women.

Overall, a CDC analysis of U.S. births showed the number of women who delayed prenatal care or did not seek care declined from 25 percent in 1989 to 18 percent in 1997.

Women who don't see a doctor until after the first three months of pregnancy risk complications such as premature delivery and low birth-weight babies, CDC epidemi-ologist Suzanne Zane said. Diabetes, high blood pressure, infections, clotting and bleeding need to be caught early to avoid health problems that can kill, she said. The improvement may be partly due to an expansion of Medicaid in the mid-1980s that made it possible for more women to pay a doctor. Of the women who did not see a doctor early on, the most frequent explanation was that they did not know they were pregnant. Inability to pay and lack of health insurance were also significant fac-

In Washington, Surgeon General David Satcher called for research into why the gap persists. He pointed out that black women are nearly four times as likely to die of pregnancy-related causes as white women.

Trotter receives award from WTAMU Alumni Association

Special to The Brand

Three West Texas A&M University graduates received Distinguished Alumnus Awards at the Alumni Association's 37th Annual Phoenix Club Banquet

Alby Peters, Dr. Robert Robinson and the late Dee Ann Caison Trotter were this year's recipients of the award, which is given to successful graduates who contribute time and support to the university and to humanitarian causes.

Trotter, a native of Hereford, received her bachelor of arts degree in 1981. She died in 1997, the same year she was appointed to the WTAMU Foundation board of directors. In 1998, family and friends contributed more than $85,000 to a scholarship endowment in her memory.

A co-owner and manager of the Bar G Feed Yard at Summerfield, Trotter served a four-year term as president of Hereford Cattlewomen. She was Miss Hereford in 1977 and went on to garner the Miss Congeniality title at the Miss Texas America and Miss Texas USA pageants.

Peters, who graduated in 1958 with a bachelor of science degree in home economics, retired in 1998 from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for which she served as Potter County Extension Agent for Family and Consumer Sciences.

Peters has received the Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of 4-H Agents, and she is the only Texan to receive the Home Economist of the Year award from the National Extension Association for Family and Consumer Sciences.

Robinson graduated in 1970 with a bachelor of science degree in animal science and

FELLOWSHIP

OF BELIEVERS The liturgical calendar calls this the Fourth Sunday of Eastertide. Pentecost (June 11) will come soon enough. But the Church needs to linger in Easter and Resurrection. Liturgical churches will wander in the wonder of Easterlove for seven Sundays.

According to the secular calendar this is also Mother's Day. Come and worship and pay tribute to mothers and all those surrogates who mothered us in one way or another. Or - go and visit mother wherever she is and make her queen for a day. Say "Thanks" and "I love you." Say it a lot.

Worship begins at 10:30 a.m. and concludes no later than 11:30. Excellent timing to beat the "Take-mama-out-tocrowd. Worship at FOB may be brief by some standards, but it always strives to be full and meaningful.

Sunday morning snacks are served at 9:15. Snacks and great coffee may then be carried into a gathering called "Forum" (9:30). In "Forum" we are dialoguing about Gerald Jamplonsky's "Love is Letting Go of Fear." This is an amazingly simple yet profound way to retrain our minds and to practice living the way of the spirit.

FOB is a church in process. Her people are invited to ask many questions and to always be open to learning new and fresh ways of seeing eternal truth. Her people are urged to walk the walk more than talk the talk. FOB is multidenominational, ecumenical and non-exclusive. A supervised nursery is available at services. A unique Sunday school for children meets at 9:30.

The FOB building is located at 245 N. Kingwood (at Moreman), next door to Hereford Care Center. The FOB people are out playing, mowing the lawn, reading the Hereford Brand or the New York Times, enjoying the lake, getting ready to feed mama - and maybe even going to church.

Mihm to skip final year for NBA draft

■ UT seven-footer Chris Mihm reportedly would go to Chicago as a lottery pick in 2000 NBA draft ter the NBA draft.

The Dallas Morning News, citing unidentified sources close to Mihm, reports that Texas' 7-foot All-America center will declare for the NBA's June 28 draft at a news conference today.

Underclassmen have until Sunday to declare for the NBA's June 28 draft.

Considered the best pure center in college basketball last season, Mihm averaged nearly 18 points and more than 10 rebounds as Texas went 24-9 and cracked The Associated Press Top Ten for the first time since 1982. Mihm was the first Longhorns' player named All-American.

Along the way, every team

AUSTIN (AP) — Chris has scouted Mihm, and with Mihm reportedly will skip his improved repertoire of senior year at Texas and enmoves in the post — including a soft hook and a consistent turnaround jumper, he is considered a sure lottery

But some have questioned

his toughness and whether he is mentally ready for the pro ring image for Texas fans from the Longhorns' NCAA tournament loss to Louisiana State is when Stromile Swift blocked Mihm's dunk that would have tied the game in the final two minutes.

The News reports in today's editions that Mihm told Texas coach Rick Barnes of his decision on Thursday. Barnes declined to comment, and Mihm was not reachable by telephone today. Mihm's decision was influenced by interest shown in him by Jevry Krause, the Chicago Bulls' vice president for basketball operations, the newspaper reported. The Bulls' second-worst record in the NBA this season and have a lottery pick in the draft.

Mihm took his time in making his decision as he considered whether to spend another year with Barnes, who Mihm credits with making him a better player. Barnes arrived at Texas after Mihm's freshman year.

He also has said it would be difficult for him to bypass the NBA if he felt he would be a top five pick.

If Mihm declares for the draft, he can still change his mind. If he doesn't sign with an agent, he has until June 21 to declare that he will return to college without los-ing any eligibility. Once he signs with an agent, he can't play again in college. If he declares for the draft, but doesn't sign with an agent, he could change his mind once draft selection is determined

Clinton plays host to marching moms

WASHINGTON (AP) - Joy Livingston, the Michigan co-ordinator for a national gun control rally on Mother's Day, said she had no expectation that President Clinton would accept an invitation to her delegation's reception in Washington on Saturday — the eve of the "Million Mom March."

The president didn't accept. Instead, he invited the Plainwell, Mich., resident and about 1,000 other organizers to his house — that is, the White House lawn. Clinton will address the group Sunday morning, before the partici-

Mall to join a mass rally designed to urge lawmakers to approve licensing and registration of handguns.

"I just got an e-mail to be at the White House," an ex-cited Livingston said Thurs-day. "I can't picture a better Mother's Day."

The president, a major supporter of gun control, will not address the march. The White House cited security concerns, and the president said he did not want to steal the limelight from the organizers - most of them mothers who had not been activists, but were upset about gun violence.

Asked whether the march could motivate Congress to pass more gun control mea-sures, Clinton said, "I don't know, but it ought to."

The president said that "if a couple hundred thousand people show up here and several hundred thousand at these sites around the country it ought to send a signal that we want America to be a safe country and common sense gun legislation is part of the strategy."

Hillary Rodham Clinton, running for the Senate from New York, will be among the marchers. Vice President Al Gore, who wants to move up into Clinton's job, was to babysit his grandson Wyatt on Sunday so that his wife, Tipper, and their daughter, Karenna. could join the march.

The demonstration is really a series of rallies on Mother's Day in more than 70 communities. The main rally in Washington will feature victims of gun violence telling their personal stories.

The rally will have competition from a pro-gun organization, Second Amendment Sisters, which plans speeches on the Washington Monument grounds and a march to the Capitol on Sunday. The event is independent of the National Rifle Association.

Mines, power plants are top toxic polluters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hard rock mining and producing electric power are the industries responsible for the most toxic chemicals being put into the environment, according to the latest Environmental Protection Agency report on industrial toxic chemical releases.

The EPA's annual Toxic Release Inventory — data from 1998 — was made public on Thursday and for the first time included releases from the mining industry and from electric power plants, as well as five other new industry sectors.

The mining industry and power plants accounted for nearly two-thirds of the 7.3 billion pounds of toxic chemicals put into the environment during 1998.

Two-thirds of the mining industry's chemical releases occurred in Arizona and Nevada, although the company with the single largest amount of releases — 405 million pounds at the Kennecott copper mine — was in Utah, according to the report pounds at the Kennecott copper mine — was in Utan, according to the report.

This was the first time in the 11-year history of the report that mining and power plant releases had to be reported. The expansion of reporting requirements was directed by President Clinton in a 1997 executive order.

With the expansion, Texas no longer was the state with the greatest amount of toxic releases, although it continued to lead the original group of industry sectors with 260 million pounds, mostly from its concentration of chemical plants, and was second in amount of releases into the sir.

Texas was surpassed in overall releases by the four leading mining states — Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Alaska — and in releases into the air by Ohio because of that state's coal-burning power plants.

Toxic chemical releases by industry have become an issue in the presidential campaign with environmentalists and Vice President Al Gore accusing Texas Gov. George W. Bush of not doing enough to force industry to curtail toxic chemical releases. toxic chemical releases.

Only hours after the EPA data was released Thursday, the Gore campaign pointed out that Texas continued to rank among states with the highest volume of chemical releases, especially air releases. "Under George W. Bush, Texas remains one of the most polluted states in the country," declared a Gore campaign statement.

Dan Bartlett, a Bush campaign statement.

Dan Bartlett, a Bush campaign spokesman, said that Texas also "leads the nation in reducing toxic releases." He said the state cut its toxic emissions by 43 million pounds from 1995 to 1998, or about 14 percent. Bush campaign officials also have said that it is only expected the state would have high releases because of its large concentration of chemical plants. concentration of chemical plants.

The toxic inventory data presents only a partial picture of risks from toxic releases. The EPA report cautioned that the information should be used as a guide and not necessarily an indicator of health risk because the report does not take into account exposure or specific toxicity of the high-volume chemicals.

But EPA Administrator Carol Browner said the report is a valuable "right to know" tool for the public.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same intem/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs.

Then rememeber these hints: Give the price. A newpaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respnd to an ad with no price.

· Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

· Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

· Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach

Cowboy poets set breakfast

Special to The Brand
AMARILLO — Working cowboys who write poetry and cowboy country musicians are invited to the monthly Cowboy Poetry Breakfast at the Big Texan Steak Ranch, 7700 Interstate 40 East.

The event kicks off at 8 a.m.
Saturday with Rusty Nichols of Borger for the Southwest Cowboy Poets Association.
There will be round-robin performances, with Jake Holster serving as emcee.

The new western band, Palo Duro, will headline the morning program. Members of the band are Jim Anderson, a musician, singer, composer and cowboy poet; his son, Cody, a vocalist; and 13-year-old violinist Erica Swindell. The band recently released "Comanche Moon," a CD produced by Rockin' DD Productions of Santa Fe, N.M.

Military recruiters may gain access to schools

WASHINGTON — Alarmed by declining recruitments, the Senate is moving toward requiring public schools to give military recruiters the same access to high schools that colleges and the private sector now enjoy.

The Pentagon estimates that approximately 2,000 public high schools have policies that bar military recruiters from one or more of the services.

Included in a $310 billion defense bill expected to be debated in the full Senate later this month is a provision designed to help the Pentagon turn around declining enlistments by giving service recruit-ers more access to high school students.

"Most schools provide their school directory to companies who sell rings, caps and gowns and yearbooks," said Sen. Tim Hutchinson, R-Ark., the principal sponsor. "This language will simply level the playing field between the military, college recruiters and representatives from private industry."

It has bipartisan support on the Senate Armed Services Committee, which adopted it unanimously this week. But there is no such provision pending in the House, and the measure is opposed by organizations representing local school boards and administrators.

"We believe this is a local school district matter, and not appropriate for the federal government," said Reggie Felton, director of federal relations for the National School Boards Association.
