Showers and thunderstorms are expected across the eastern third of the country Friday, according to weather forecasters. Cold air will invade the Upper Midwest and Great Lakes regions. Elsewhere, expect sunshine, except for a few showers and flurries in the southern Rockies.

• Taste of winter • nearing Panhandle

Snow is in the Texas Panhandle forecast while possible rain is back in the picture for other parts of the state as the coldest air mass so far this fall was expected to sweep through before the weekend.

Early-morning temperatures today ranged from the 60s to 80s.

Extremes were 69 degrees at Conroe and 82 at Port Isabel.

Gulf moisture was moving inland along the Texas coast as Hurricane Keith approached the upper Mexican coast south of Brownsville.

Winds were mostly easterly and southeasterly under 10 mph, except for Dalhart where winds had already shifted to the west as a weaker cool front passed through in advance of the colder air.

Skies were mostly clear, except for Dalhart, which received prefrontal cloudiness after midnight.

The frontal systems promised to bring wind chills near 30 degrees and possibly lower through the weekend.

A chance of thunderstorms was forecast for the southern areas of the region, along with brief periods of rain in the north. Bands of showers and thunderstorms associated with Tropical Storm Keith were expected to keep skies cloudy.

DIFFERENT DOG SHOW

■ Animals available for adoption to be on display Saturday at Dameron Park

When the Deaf Smith County Humane Society conducted its low-cost vaccination clinic last month, members of the group rescued some dogs from the city animal shelter.

Several of the dogs, which received re-privies, were adopted at the clinic. However, the humane society has dogs still available for adoption.

So, the organization will show off more than a dozen adoptable dogs this weekend. The animals will be on display 1-5 p.m. Saturday on the north side of Dameron Park.

The available dogs include bassett-beagle mix, spaniel-pointer mix, mixed-breed Labrador, heeler-mix puppies and terrier-mix puppies.

The cost of the animals is $5 for puppies and $10 for larger dogs. A coupon for a free rabies shot will be given with each dog or puppy purchased, according to Nathan Stone, humane society president.

Stone said the animals are in "last-chance motels" — temporarily boarding with some of the humane society members until new homes are found.

At a recent Hereford City Commission meeting, Stone said the animals are in "last-chance motels" — temporarily boarding with some of the humane society members until new homes are found.

LOCH NESS MONSTER?

BRAND Mauri Montgomery

Well, maybe it's not exactly the stuff of legends, but it's not the normal fish found in bodies of water in the Panhandle. City employee Johnny Carr (right) and Charlie Munger, a fisheries biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Canyon, examine a spotted plecostomus, a scavenger fish that was found in the Hereford Aquatic Park Pond. The fish is a tropical species generally used to clean aquariums. It will eat smaller fish and apparently was put in the pond when the water temperature was warmer. More of the fish reportedly are in the pond, but a city spokesman said they likely will not survive cold weather.

New jobless claims increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans filing new applications for state unemployment benefits rose last week but still hovered at a level showing the robust economy's strong appetite for workers.

The Labor Department reported today that new claims for jobless benefits increased to a seasonally adjusted 299,000 for the week ending Sept. 30.

That was up by 10,000 from the previous week and pushed claims to their highest level since Sept. 16 when they stood at 310,000.

The more stable four-week moving average of claims, which smoothes out week-to-week volatility, however, fell last week to 306,000, the lowest level since Aug. 19, when claims were at 302,250.

The nation's labor market — while showing signs of loosening a bit over the past several months — still remains tight, economists said.

A tight labor market is good for workers. Economists are always watchful for signs that the tight labor market will trigger wage and price inflation.

They worry that wages and benefits could rise too sharply as employers struggle to recruit and retain workers — added costs that companies could pass along to consumers as higher prices. That has not happened yet.

The Federal Reserve has raised interest rates six times since June 1999 with the goal of slowing the economy enough to prevent inflation, but not retard growth so much as to cause a recession.

Drought toll still climbing

BRYAN (AP) — The financial toll of Texas' long-running drought has risen to $820 million and could soon slow the state's booming economy, Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs says.

The commissioner told Brazos Valley farmers and ranchers on Wednesday that losses to producers will have a ripple effect in the rest of the Texas economy.

"It's the cumulative effect (of droughts in) '96, '98, '99, 2000, and there is tremendous concern about where agriculture will be in the next year," she told the Bryan-College Station Eagle. "It's very, very serious and I'm trying to remind folks in the cities that if agriculture in Texas hurts they'll feel the pain, too."

"It makes a real difference if you've got every small town struggling because the farmer and rancher doesn't have the spare cash to do things," Combs said.

The drought could cost producers $1 billion this year, Combs said. Texas A&M agricultural experts are estimating. Dry weather has cost the industry more than $4 billion since 1996.

Sales tax revenues will plunge if farmers and ranchers have no money to spend, hurting schools.

"It ripples and ripples and ripples," Combs said.

Rains last month have done little to slow this year's drought, which has kept reservoirs in many parts of the state at low levels. Thirsty towns have had to pipe water in from neighboring communities because their own lake levels are too low to provide safe drinking water.

The drought has heightened the danger of brush and forest fires statewide.

The agriculture department's Go Texan program, which markets products made in the Lone Star State to other states and abroad, could give farmers and ranchers needed economic assistance.

Cheney, Lieberman square off in debate

DANVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Dick Cheney and Joseph Lieberman square off in a campaign debate tonight to sell their White House tickets, their own leadership credentials — and perhaps deal with the echoes of scandal raised and dismissed by their bosses two nights earlier.

After days of practice, the Republican and Democratic vice presidential nominees meet here at Centre College for their one, 90-minute debate of the campaign.

Vice President Al Gore and Texas Gov. George W. Bush have two presidential debates before them, on Oct. 11 in Winston-Salem, N.C., and Oct. 17 in St. Louis.

An estimated 46.5 million people watched Tuesday's Bush-Gore debate, according to Nielsen Media Research. Fewer viewers are expected to tune in for Cheney-Lieberman since the understudies generally attract less attention than the men

For Lieberman, the Connecticut senator, and Cheney, the former defense secretary, the aim of the talk-show style debate, where they will sit at a table with moderator Bernard Shaw of CNN, is to seek support for the men at the top of their tickets.

Lieberman's biggest assets may be a manner that at times allows him to criticize without appearing to, his experience in debating on the Senate floor and his sense of humor, analysts say.

Cheney's advantages include an authoritative manner, his own years as a congressman and his experience running the Pentagon during the Persian Gulf War.

• Feds shut pirate station •

AUSTIN (AP) — An unlicensed radio station in Central Texas has been silenced by federal agents who cut the broadcaster's cable.

Radio One, which has broadcast since May on FM, went off the air Wednesday morning when a Federal Communications Commission agent scaled a 40-foot radio tower in the back yard of a Northeast Austin house and severed the cable, one of the station's founding members said.

Noel Waggener said one reason for Radio One's shutdown is that an estimated 150 corporate leaders are coming to Austin next week for the Fortune 500 forum.

"We expose news and information pertaining to corporations' abuse of human rights here in America," Waggener, a station founder, told the Austin American-Statesman in Thursday's editions.

But authorities said the radio station, housed in a shed behind the residence, was violating the law by operating without an FCC license. The federal government sued the station.

Agents seized the station's equipment, including two turntables, a cassette player, two CD players, a mixing board, a jam box and a phone.

Waggener said the crackdown was related to a court case involving a San Marcos pirate radio station, KIND, operated by Joe Ptak.

The San Marcos station stopped operating recently after a court order, said Waggener.

Other unlicensed, community-based radio stations have been shuttered by the FCC in Berkeley, Calif., Tampa, Fla., and elsewhere in recent years.

Bio-tech lawsuit dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit by critics of agricultural biotechnology who want the government to require labels on foods made with genetically engineered crops.

The lawsuit challenged the Food and Drug Administration's 8-year-old policy that considers gene-altered crops to be essentially the same as those produced by conventional breeding methods and thus not subject to the same regulatory controls as food additives.

U.S. District Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly, in a ruling Sept. 29, said the biotech critics failed to prove that FDA violated procedural and environmental laws in establishing the policy or that the agency should mandate labeling of the foods.

Unless the agency decides biotech ingredients are materially different from conventional products, it "lacks a basis upon which it can legally mandate labeling, regardless of consumer demand," she wrote.

Genetically engineered crops, herbicide-resistant soybeans in particular, became popular with farmers in the late 1990s and are found in products throughout supermarkets.

The FDA policy was established in 1992 in the last year of the Bush administration and has been defended vigorously by the Clinton administration. FDA officials announced this spring that they would propose mandatory safety reviews of new gene-altered products but they insist they still believe the foods are safe. Such reviews are now on a voluntary basis.

The lawsuit was filed in 1998 by several anti-biotech organizations, including The Center for Food Safety, and a group of scientists and religious leaders.

They don't plan to appeal the decision and will instead wait to see what rules FDA proposes for the mandatory reviews, said Andrew Kimbrell, an attorney who handled the lawsuit. Industry officials say the FDA rules are unlikely to make much difference in how foods are brought to market.

"Genetically engineered foods have gone virtually unregulated in the United States," he said Tuesday.

Anti-biotech groups also are likely to challenge the Environmental Protection Agency as it decides in coming months whether to renew registrations for several varieties of corn that have been genetically modified to resist insect pests, Kimbrell said.

The biotechnology industry has been on the defensive in recent weeks because of a nationwide recall by Kraft Foods last month of taco shells that were found to contain a variety gene-altered corn that hasn't been approved for human consumption.

The decision "reinforces the integrity of the system, which is based on sound science, at a time when this system is under discussion," said Michael Phillips, who directs agricultural issues for the Biotechnology Industry Organization.

The FDA confirmed the corn was in the taco shells and said it planned to test additional products.

The corn, known as StarLink, is the only biotech crop that is not approved for food use. Aventis CropScience, which developed the corn variety, has agreed to reimburse the government for buying all of this year's crop to ensure that it does not get into the food supply again. EPA allows the corn to be used only for animal feed because of unresolved questions about whether it could cause allergic reactions in people.

Irate couple needs to seek counseling

Dear Ann Landers:
Last week, my husband and I were on our way to a restaurant to meet some of my relatives for lunch. The restaurant is about two hours away from our house.

CREATORS SYNDICATE

Ann Landers

"Dwight" was doing at least 65 mph in a 35 zone. I calmly asked him to please slow down. Instead, he sped up to pass some bicyclists on the side of the road. We then came to a curve where several motorists have been killed in the past few years. He kept his foot on the gas pedal. I was terrified that his reckless driving would get us both killed. Finally, I said, "If you cannot slow down, stop the car, and let me out."

Dwight immediately turned the car around, went back to our house, and told me to get out of the car. I begged him not to make me miss the luncheon. I told him how important it was for me to spend time with these relatives, some of whom I had not seen in months. Dwight said nothing. He simply got back in the car and drove to the restaurant — by himself. I had no way of getting there, so I was stuck at home. Dwight not only had lunch with my relatives, he also went along with them to visit my grandmother, who has not been feeling well.

I was so furious when Dwight returned that I told him to leave the house and never come back. We have been married 12 years — this is my second marriage. Right now, I hate him. He is basically a good person, but this is not the first time he has behaved in an immature manner, and I've had it. Am I just too angry to see straight? I'm afraid if I forgive him, he will do it again. If he truly loved me, why would he treat me like this? Please tell me what to do. — Angry in North Carolina

Dear North Carolina: You two are in desperate need of marriage counseling, and Dwight could use some sessions on anger management. Yes, I know counseling costs money, but your marriage and Dwight's mental health need propping up — big time. Please get the help you need. This is no do-it-yourself project.

Dear Ann Landers: I live 20 minutes from my daughter, and have not seen her in three weeks. She has a job and works hard, but I don't think that is the reason.

There must be more to it.

Last weekend, my grandson and his wife came to town to attend a Saturday wedding. They stayed at my daughter's house and were to return home late Sunday afternoon. I was told I wouldn't be able to see my grandson because he would be very tired, having stayed up late at the wedding. Also, my daughter said she and her husband are taking weekend classes in order to improve their job status, and they were not up to receiving company.

Still, I was deeply disappointed when I was told they couldn't see me. I thought I was family and not "company." I was called "selfish," and told I should put the children's needs ahead of my own. I couldn't believe my ears. I have always been there for my daughter when she had marital difficulties. I baby-sat a lot, and helped out whenever there was an illness or they had financial problems.

Am I wrong to feel hurt? My daughter says she loves me, but I'm beginning to wonder. Any ideas? — Boca Raton, Fla.

Dear Boca: It sounds like there were lots of frayed nerves as a result of too much going on that weekend. Family get-togethers can do that. Cool it. Let things settle down. Call your daughter and suggest a Sunday supper together, and don't bring up the past. Time is the best healer.

That first kiss, that first embrace ... Remember all those things that brought you and your loved one together? Ann Landers' new booklet, "How We Met," is now available. This collection of sentimental love stories will make a terrific gift for that special someone. For a copy, please send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.50 (this includes postage and handling) to: How We Met, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. NEW APARTMENT?

Here's another necessity.

If you recently moved into an apartment or duplex, this may be the first opportunity you've had to experience the benefits of having natural gas in your home.

You'll find that for heating your home during cold weather, for hot water, or for cooking, nothing beats natural gas for convenience, economy, and efficiency.

Here are a few reminders from your friends at ENERGAS Company on the safe and responsible use of natural gas.

- YOUR FURNACE NEEDS AN ANNUAL CHECK-UP. Contact your landlord or apartment manager to arrange for an annual inspection by a qualified heating contractor.
- A CLOSET ISN'T ALWAYS A CLOSET. Your water heater or furnace is probably in a closet by itself. As tempting as it may be, don't use the space around a water heater or furnace for storage. This will assure adequate air circulation.
- IF YOU SMELL GAS. Day or night, exit your home then call toll free 1-888-363-7427. Do not flip light switches or use any other electrical equipment. Do not light a match or a candle. Do not try and find the leak yourself.

Depth key for Herd

Hereford hosts undefeated Pampa team

By Jeff Blackmon
Hereford Brand Sports Editor

As the Hereford Whitefaces get ready to host Pampa tomorrow night at Whiteface Stadium during the Herd's homecoming, they will have to look to some new faces to step up and fill the void left by missing starters.

The Herd will be without the services of senior starting tailback Ramiro Zambrano for 2-3 weeks because of a sprained knee, junior receiver Cody Marsh due to a recurring ankle injury and senior offensive lineman Trey Madrigal to a knee injury.

The team has also lost three varsity players who have been placed on disciplinary suspension for an unknown length of time. Boys athletic director and head football coach Craig Yenser refused to comment on any specifications relating to the action.

The coach said he feels his team can win with any combination of players on the field after three consecutive big game wins. Yenser said his team is also starting to believe, even with the injuries suffered so far this season, they can still win.

"Our attitude right now is whoever shows up we are going to play with, and we are going to win," Yenser said. "It's also a neat deal when the kids feel like that."

Yenser said there was a chance the team would be without senior quarterback Cody Hodges after he suffered a mild concussion and neck injury in last week's win at Borger, but tests on Hodges came back negative giving the senior the start.

Yenser said the Whitefaces tailback situation is also still up in the air. The coach said junior tailback Juan DeSantiago is still waiting to be cleared to play in Zambrano's spot after coming back from a broken wrist.

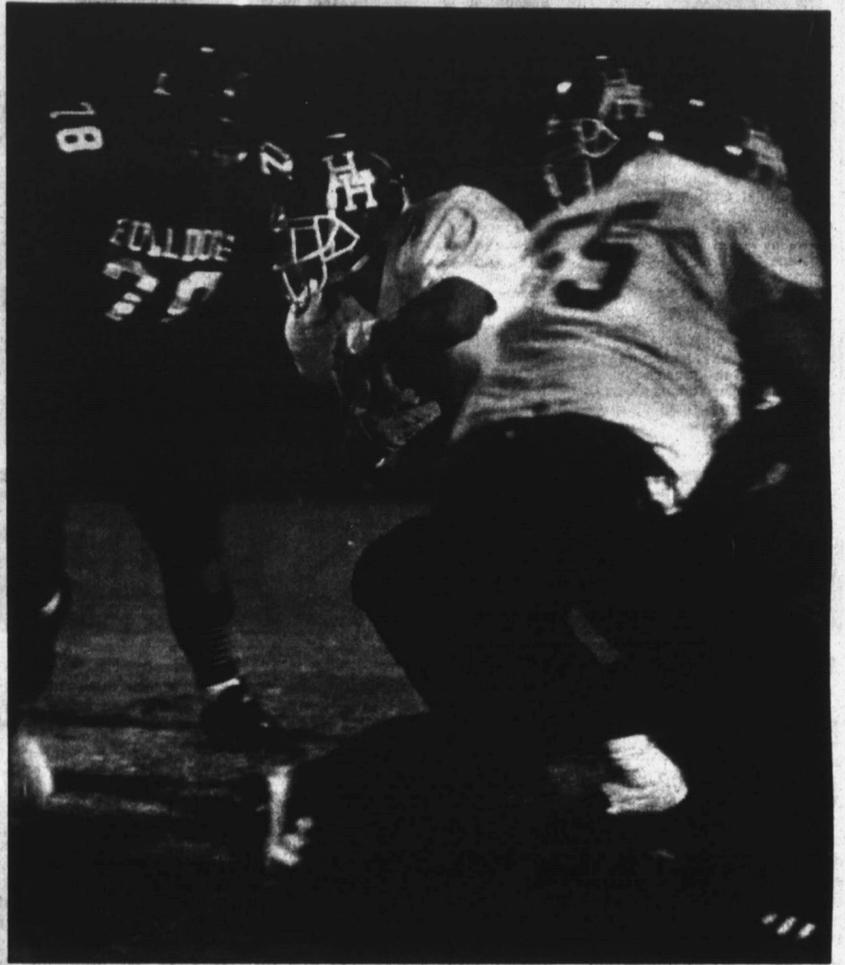

Even though the team will be without several players Friday night, Yenser said his team is playing with a lot of confidence and will be ready.

"We've played three tough opponents, and we have a lot of confidence," Yenser said. "Their (the team's) never say die attitude has really surprised me."

Yenser said their game against Borger tested the character of his team, and they

"We were set up emotionally for a loss, but a win really puts us one up on everybody else."

Head Football Coach

Injured tailback—Senior tailback Ramiro Zambrano finds a seam in the Herd's 14-7 win at Borger. The Whitefaces (3-1, 1-0) will be without Zambrano for 2-3 weeks as he rehabilitates a sprained knee.

Noble to start

IRVING, Texas (AP) — By his own admission, Dallas Cowboys defensive tackle Brandon Noble isn't one of those great athletes playing football.

"I just consider myself a football player. I'm not going to run a 4.4 (second) 40 or have some incredible vertical leap," Noble said. "I enjoy playing football, I love it and I think I do it pretty good."

He will get no argument from Cowboys coach Dave Campo. The move of Alonzo Spellman to defensive end and a nagging injury to Leon Lett have disrupted plans for a rotation of at least three players at defensive tackle. It also provided Noble his first NFL start last Sunday.

In the 16-13 overtime victory at Carolina, Noble had four tackles and four quarterback pressures. His performance with his most extensive action in his two seasons with Dallas could lead to more playing time — and could solidify the Dallas plans to rotate defensive tackles.

"Every time he goes out there, he plays well," Campo said.

Giants stun Hampton, win 5-1

Bonds keys San Francisco's big inning

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Barry Bonds wore a broad smile when he stepped into the on-deck circle in the first inning.

He might have had an inkling his playoff luck was about to change.

Bonds, the three-time MVP whose career has been defined by regular-season prowess and postseason futility, kicked off his latest playoff appearance with an RBI triple and a key single in the San Francisco Giants' 5-1 victory over the New York Mets in the opener of their NL series.

For Bonds, a 2-for-3 performance was an early answer to his critics. He hit .200 in four previous seasons in the playoffs, but he had the fourth multihit playoff game of his career.

"You should stop dwelling about the past with Barry," Jeff Kent said. "This is a new team and a new year."

If its first playoff game is any indication, this new team has what it takes to win in October. Livan Hernandez held the Mets to five hits for 7 2-3 innings, and Ellis Burks hit a three-run homer as the Giants gave manager Dusty Baker and Pacific Bell Park their first postseason wins.

But none of the Giants gave particular credit for the win to one player. Kent said Bonds' standout game was no more important than Billy Mueller getting two hits or Burks' homer. This is a team. We don't depend on just one or two guys."

After the game, Bonds eschewed a trip to the post-game interview room and answered only a few questions at his locker before leaving with his young son. He blames the media for blowing his postseason struggles out of proportion.

"I don't want to get into the past. That's history," Bonds said. "We're starting over here."

Bonds couldn't have imagined a new start much better than this. His two-out triple — which came after he took a close 2-2 pitch — during San Francisco's four-run third inning ricocheted crazily off the wall in right, scoring Mueller and setting the table for Burks' three-run homer.

That was all Hernandez needed. He pitched strong into the eighth inning before handing the game over to setup man Felix Rodriguez and closer Robb Nen.

YANKEES REBOUND

Pettitte comes through for Bronx Bombers

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Andy Pettitte stood on the mound, talking to himself and mentally blocking out a stadium full of screaming fans. That mental intensity is partly why he has been so successful in the postseason, and he needed every bit of that focus Wednesday night as he pitched the struggling New York Yankees back into their playoff series against the Athletics. Pettitte allowed five hits in 7 2-3 scoreless innings, surviving a goofy pratfall by second baseman Luis Sojo, and the Yankees defeated the Oakland A's 4-0 to tie their best-of-five AL division series at 1-1. "He focuses and gets himself in this trance, I guess you can say, and he does a lot of talking to himself. He has meetings with himself on the mound very often," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "Most of the time he's locked in, and he was tonight." The playoff series moves to New York for Game 3 on Friday night, with Oakland's Tim Hudson (20-6) facing Orlando Hernandez (12-13). Pettitte, who has had some of his best performances in the postseason, said he's always talked to himself during games — mostly to remind himself about pitching mechanics. "Obviously, I feel like I get a little more locked in in playoff games," he said. "You try to see the pitches. You try to see them before you make the pitch." Pettitte's performance and a radically revamped New York lineup helped the two-time defending World Series champions snap an eight-game losing streak. The Yankees, derided by critics as over-the-hill champions, also ended a 10-game road losing streak. "We've been down. We've been on a terrible skid," Pettitte said. "I hope this will get us going. This is a big game for us, obviously. We've really been struggling." Glenallen Hill, in the lineup as part of Torre's effort to shake up a moribund offense, broke up a scoreless game with an RBI single, and Sojo followed with a two-run double as the Yankees scored three in the sixth.

The hits by Hill and Sojo came with two outs and immediately after an intentional walk to struggling Paul O'Neill, who has not had an extra-base hit since Sept. 6. The coach said that after watching some game film of Pampa he noticed that the Harvesters like to line up in the shotgun formation but often will still run the ball. Yenser also said he is not surprised they like to stick to the ground with an offensive weapon like Pampa's running back Thomas Long while trying to confuse the defense with different sets. "He's been a good player for them the last two or three years," Yenser said. "The formations they run will cause some problems alignment wise. They still are going to try to run the football though," Yenser said. Yenser said he looks for his team's defensive unit to step up big again. "The defense playing the way they have with several injuries has made them feel good about themselves," Yenser said. "The defense is playing unbelievable right now." The game begins at 7:30 p.m. at Whiteface Stadium.

Seattle steals two from Sox

Chicago bats cooled by Mariner pitching

CHICAGO (AP) — Lou Piniella won't divulge Seattle's pitching plans to the team that led the majors in scoring this season. That approach by the Mariners' manager is working, and they're headed home to Safeco Field with a 2-0 lead in their division series. If the Chicago White Sox want to avoid a sweep, they'll need to figure out how to improve on a 3-for-23 performance with runners in scoring position. They need to hit a Seattle bullpen that's pitched 10 scoreless innings and allowed just three hits. And they need to get some hits out of Frank Thomas, who is 0-for-7 in the first two games. "We have a specific game plan. I can't talk about that," Piniella said following Wednesday's 5-2 victory over the White Sox, who averaged six runs this season while winning an AL-best 95 games. "We've been fortunate to shut them down. You're not going to find better hitters." Game 3 is in Seattle on Friday. "We don't want to get in a slugging match with the White Sox. I don't know if it's them struggling or we're making our pitches," Alex Rodriguez said. It's been a little of both. Seattle's win Wednesday featured 3 1-3 hitless innings by Mariners relievers, a go-ahead homer by Jay Buhner and superb defensive play by Mark McLemore. It all puts the White Sox near an early exit, although they did have a major league-best 49-32 mark on the road this season and won four of six at Safeco Field. "We've never been in this situation, 0-2 going to a team's home field, but we have played good baseball there," Chicago manager Jerry Manuel said. "We won 95 games and feel we can find a way to win three more." Paul Abbott gave up five hits and two runs in 5 2-3 innings to win in his first postseason appearance in a pro career that began in 1985. Relievers Arthur Rhodes, Jose Mesa and Kazuhiro Sasaki didn't allow a hit the rest of the way. "To tell you the truth, we're not surprised. But we also know they could turn it on at any minute," Rhodes said. Abbott, who began the sea-

INSIDE

It's the Chicks' night

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Despite a little history made by Tim McGraw and Faith Hill at the Country Music Association awards, the night and the year belonged to the Dixie Chicks.

The trio from Texas was named best entertainer and best vocal group on Wednesday, and took home awards for best album for "Fly" and video for "Goodbye Earl."

The awards come the year the multimillion selling act toured for the first time as a headliner.

"We want to thank every person who bought a ticket to our show," Dixie Chicks lead singer Natalie Maines said.

McGraw won the best male vocalist award, and his wife Hill won best female vocalist. It was the first time a husband and wife won those awards the same year.

"I would rather not have won it if Faith hadn't won it," McGraw said.

Hill and McGraw, who won the vocal event award together in 1997, thanked each other from the stage of the Grand Ole Opry House.

"I feel so alone," Hill said while accepting her trophy. "My husband's not out here. I don't know who to hug. Can I hug somebody?"

From the audience McGraw threw her a hug, just minutes after winning his award and calling Hill "my soul mate, my wife, who's my inspiration."

Two songs that have raised eyebrows in Nashville were acknowledged.

wife beater — is poisoned to death and his body dumped into a lake.

"It's a funny song and a funny video about a very serious topic," Maines said. "A lot of women die at the hands of their husbands."

The inspirational ballad "I Hope You Dance," about how people should seize the day, won awards for best single and song. The latter went to songwriters Mark D. Sanders and Tia Sillers.

Lee Ann Womack, who won the prize for best single, performed "I Hope You Dance" backed by five ballerinas dancing around a maypole during the live telecast.

The Dixie Chicks performed "Sin Wagon," in which they sing about "mattress dancing."

Brad Paisley won the Horizon Award, given to someone expected to have a long, successful career. Montgomery Gentry took the best vocal duo trophy — the first time in nine years that Brooks & Dunn didn't win the award.

Charley Pride and the late Faron Young were inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame during the 34th annual awards ceremony held at the Grand Ole Opry House. Reba McEntire got an award for promoting country music overseas.

About 6,000 workers in the country music industry nominate and vote for the winners.

Country's first couple

Country music performers Faith Hill and her husband, Tim McGraw, became the first couple to win top vocalist awards in the same year. Hill won the female vocalist award, while McGraw captured the male vocalist award at the 34th Annual Country Music Association awards, held at the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, Tenn.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs."
Then remember the 5 W's: who, what, where, when, why. The key words for a car are make, model, price, body type, color, condition, year, mileage. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition. • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Gore, Bush hammer away at each other

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Al Gore and George W. Bush are intensifying their struggle for battleground swing states, with Gore hammering at his rival's tax proposals and Bush focusing on credibility.

Still sharpening differences drawn at their first debate, both were stumping in Michigan today after making separate campaign forays into Ohio on Wednesday.

Gore is stubbornly sticking to his insistence that Bush would fritter away the budget surplus on tax breaks for the rich at the same time he touts his own care tax credit proposal.

Bush also was set to talk about children's issues in Michigan as he continues to underscore "exaggerations and embellishments" that he says call Gore's character into question.

"This is a man — he's got a record, you know, of sometimes exaggerating to make a point," said Bush.

Bush pointed to comments Gore made about a disaster inspection trip, and using an example of a Florida schoolgirl forced to stand in a crowded classroom.

The girl did have to stand — but only for the first day of class when there were not enough desks in the room, not longer as Gore implied. And to enrich not just the few, not just in some areas, but all of our families and all of the country?" Gore asked. "We need an all-out, concerted effort to make sure that the prosperity endures and spreads in all of our people."

Gore planned a visit to a child care facility to talk about his plans to broaden child care tax breaks.

Bush also was talking about children's issues in Michigan where aides said he would stress the need for businesses to use flex time to give parents more time at home, as well as use of software filters on computers so they can control where their children go on the Internet.

Both Ohio and Michigan are big industrial states in a region likely to settle the election, and polls show both states are competitive. Their similar campaign schedules left little doubt that the how the campaigns see the race.

The two sides were keeping up their scheduling mirror later in the week, both heading to Florida for campaign stops before the next debate.

sion meeting, Stone said the organization has concerns about the city's animal shelter.

"The age of the shelter concerns us. The building is old and poorly designed, which makes adequate maintenance impossible," Stone said. "We also believe the current method of euthanizing pets is out of date and inhumane."

Stone did said the group believes animal control officer Javier Frausto is doing an outstanding job under the circumstances.

Frausto picks up more than 100 dogs per month and 15 cats. Unless the animals' owners claim them or they are adopted, they are euthanized after three days. Feral cats, however, are generally euthanized earlier because they are unadoptable.

■ Contenders sticking with their debate strategies back on the campaign trail

DANVILLE, Ky. — Al Gore and George W. Bush are sticking with the strategies that marked their first debate, the Republican on the attack, the Democrat playing nice. Both courses are fraught with risk.

Millions of viewers tuned in to their televised clash over taxes, Medicare, abortion and Gore's character. But analysts say the first debate may have minimal immediate impact on the political landscape.

That would be good news for the vice president, who came in with an edge in the state-by-state race for electoral votes. Bush needs to take advantage of every chance to persuade Americans to vote for change in a time of peace and prosperity, analysts say.

Gore appears to be playing it safe, though polls show the popular vote split and his electoral lead fragile. The Texas governor is assuming the role of scrappy underdog.

"Bush didn't make a particularly good case for changing the administration. He didn't look awful, he didn't lose anything, but this wasn't the kind of performance that moved him ahead," said John Green, political scientist at the University of Akron in Ohio, a battleground state that Gore is keeping tight.

Green and others said nobody will know the full impact of the debate for a few days, until voters digest follow-up media reports and talk to friends and colleagues.

Though their messages were unchanged, both campaigns were slightly adjusting their electoral map plans after the debate.

Gore planned to begin advertising in his home state of Tennessee and renew his ad campaign in West Virginia in recognition of Bush's inroads in two states he had hoped to have wrapped up.

Bush, meanwhile, was airing ads in Nevada, a state he had hoped to have firmly in his corner by this stage. Republicans say he may soon substantially increase the size of his media campaign across the country. His latest ad, due for release Thursday, is described by aides as a "vision spot" that outlines his governing philosophies.

The debate could turn out to be a mixed blessing.

Gore proved the best debater and drove home the experience gap he holds over the two-term Texas governor. But the vice president turned off some voters with constant interruptions and off-camera antics; his heavy sighs punctuated several Bush answers.

"I think if you're a debate coach, Gore did everything you're trained to do, but he looked a little strained and strident," said Terry Madonna, a political scientist at Millersville University in Pennsylvania, a key state that turned toward Gore in September.

Bush looked presidential in style and substance, a relief to voters who wondered whether he was fit for the job. But attacks on Gore's character, a cornerstone of Bush's election strategy, could rub some voters the wrong way.

"I felt there needed to be a better sense of responsibility of what was going on in the White House," Bush said. He targeted President Clinton without using his name or mentioning his impeachment.

It was red meat for his GOP base, which has gotten soft in the Midwest. Bush wove the theme through policy discussion, telling voters that Gore also can't be trusted to keep his promises to cut taxes, improve health care or manage the federal bureaucracy.

Trying to dominate post-debate media coverage Wednesday, Bush advisers highlighted cases in which Gore exaggerated or misstated facts in the debate. Aides said Bush and his surrogates would continue to make the character case against Gore.

In today's vice presidential debate here, running mate Dick Cheney may pick up where Bush left off. A spokesman said Cheney will be a "firm critic" of Gore's proposals in the meeting with Democratic candidate Joseph Lieberman.

Swing voters, particularly women, seem torn: They're cool to political attacks and yet receptive to Bush's argument for change.

"I'm getting really, really sick and tired of them cutting on each other," said Deb Barsh, a restaurant clerk and single mother in rural Pennsylvania who, when first interviewed by The Associated Press in April, said she was undecided.

"Now I'm pushing for Bush a bit. I don't like the attacks but, I just feel like he's being a tad more honest. I didn't like what went on in the Clinton White House and Gore had something to do with it," she said.

Gore is appealing to the same woman — and others like her — by attacking the attacker.

"You may want to focus on scandal," the vice president told Bush. "I want to focus on results."

Advisers said Gore would stick with the low-key response, betting that Bush will face a backlash. Recent polls show the Texan is viewed less favorably since he began sharpening his criticism of Gore.

"I think it's time to make our country an even better country instead of trying to make another candidate out to be a bad person," Gore said Wednesday. However, attacks on Bush's record in Texas won't necessarily stop, Democrats say.

A number of advisers said Bush was not tough enough in the debate: He allowed Gore to dominate the discussion; he failed to recite the GOP talking points against the vice president's prescription drug plan and he rarely talked about education.

But mostly, there was relief among GOP officials who had feared a gaffe or a deer-in-the-headlights moment.

"Bush gave as good as he got ... and showed he's ready to be president," said GOP consultant Scott Reed, who managed Bob Dole's failed 1996 campaign.

And yet, "I don't believe he scored enough to change the dynamics of the race."

three days at debate camp in Kentucky. "We have very different ideas about the future."

Cheney, who ran through his fourth mock debate Wednesday in Washington, said he wants to have "a conversation with the American people. It's important that they get a look at me."

After watching their leaders debate Tuesday night, Lieberman said it was a sign of desperation for Bush, the Republican presidential nominee, to go after President Clinton — by indirection, not by name — while questioning Gore's character and disputing his credibility.

Cheney effectively started it back at the Republican National Convention, saying Gore was trying to shed Clinton baggage but that it was impossible to see one without thinking of the other.

Gore chose not to counter-attack on the character issue in the debate in Boston, and as he campaigned Wednesday, although he made a point of reminding voters again that he is running as his own man and wants to be judged for who he is.

Bush campaign officials on Wednesday challenged several of Gore's debate statements, including his tale about a Florida high school student who had to stand because there weren't enough desks for her overcrowded science class. She did, but only for the first day of class. Republicans said it was a fresh example of Gore's "embellishments and exaggerations."
