Juvenile board to get status report

A report on the status of a possible study to determine if it would be feasible to build a juvenile detention center in Deaf Smith County will be presented Thursday to the members of the county juvenile board.

Juvenile Probation Officer Lou Serrano will make the presentation when the board meets at 10:30 a.m. Friday at the county courthouse, 235 E. 3rd.

The county, City of Hereford and Hereford Independent School Districts have agreed to fund the feasibility study, which will be conducted by Public Facilities Investment Corp. of Los Angeles and is expected to cost a maximum of $7,500 for each of the three entities.

During the past several months, the county, the county Juvenile Probation Department, HISD and the city have been dealing with rising costs in housing juvenile offenders.

At a recent county commission meeting, Serrano, who also is a member of the school board, reported the agency will spend about $200,000 outside the county this year for juvenile detention. When the county approved the Fiscal 2000 budget that went into effect Oct. 1, 1999, the commissioners had budgeted $50,000 for juvenile detention.

Also, the July 18 city commission meeting, Serrano said the feasibility study is needed because it will give the three entities — city, county and school district — the information they will need before deciding to build a detention facility.

"The study will look at current expenditures and determine whether it is beneficial to build," Serrano said. Benefits of construction of a detention center would be the creation of jobs, both in the building phase and in the operation of the facility, and the money now being sent out of county to house juvenile offenders would remain in county, Serrano said.

In other business, the juvenile board is expected to approve its Fiscal 2001 budget and discuss state assistance from the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission for the next budget year.

South Texas gets rain

Welcome rain greeted southern sections of Texas on Wednesday, but the storms stayed away from northern parts of the state, according to Associated Press reports.

Highs reaching toward the century mark were expected again through Thursday. A heat advisory was posted by the National Weather Service for North Texas.

Overnight readings were warmer, resulting in early-morning temperatures ranging from the mid-60s to 80s across the region.

It was 72 degrees at Comroe and 84 at Sea Rim State Park.

Widely scattered showers moved across the mid and upper Texas coast.

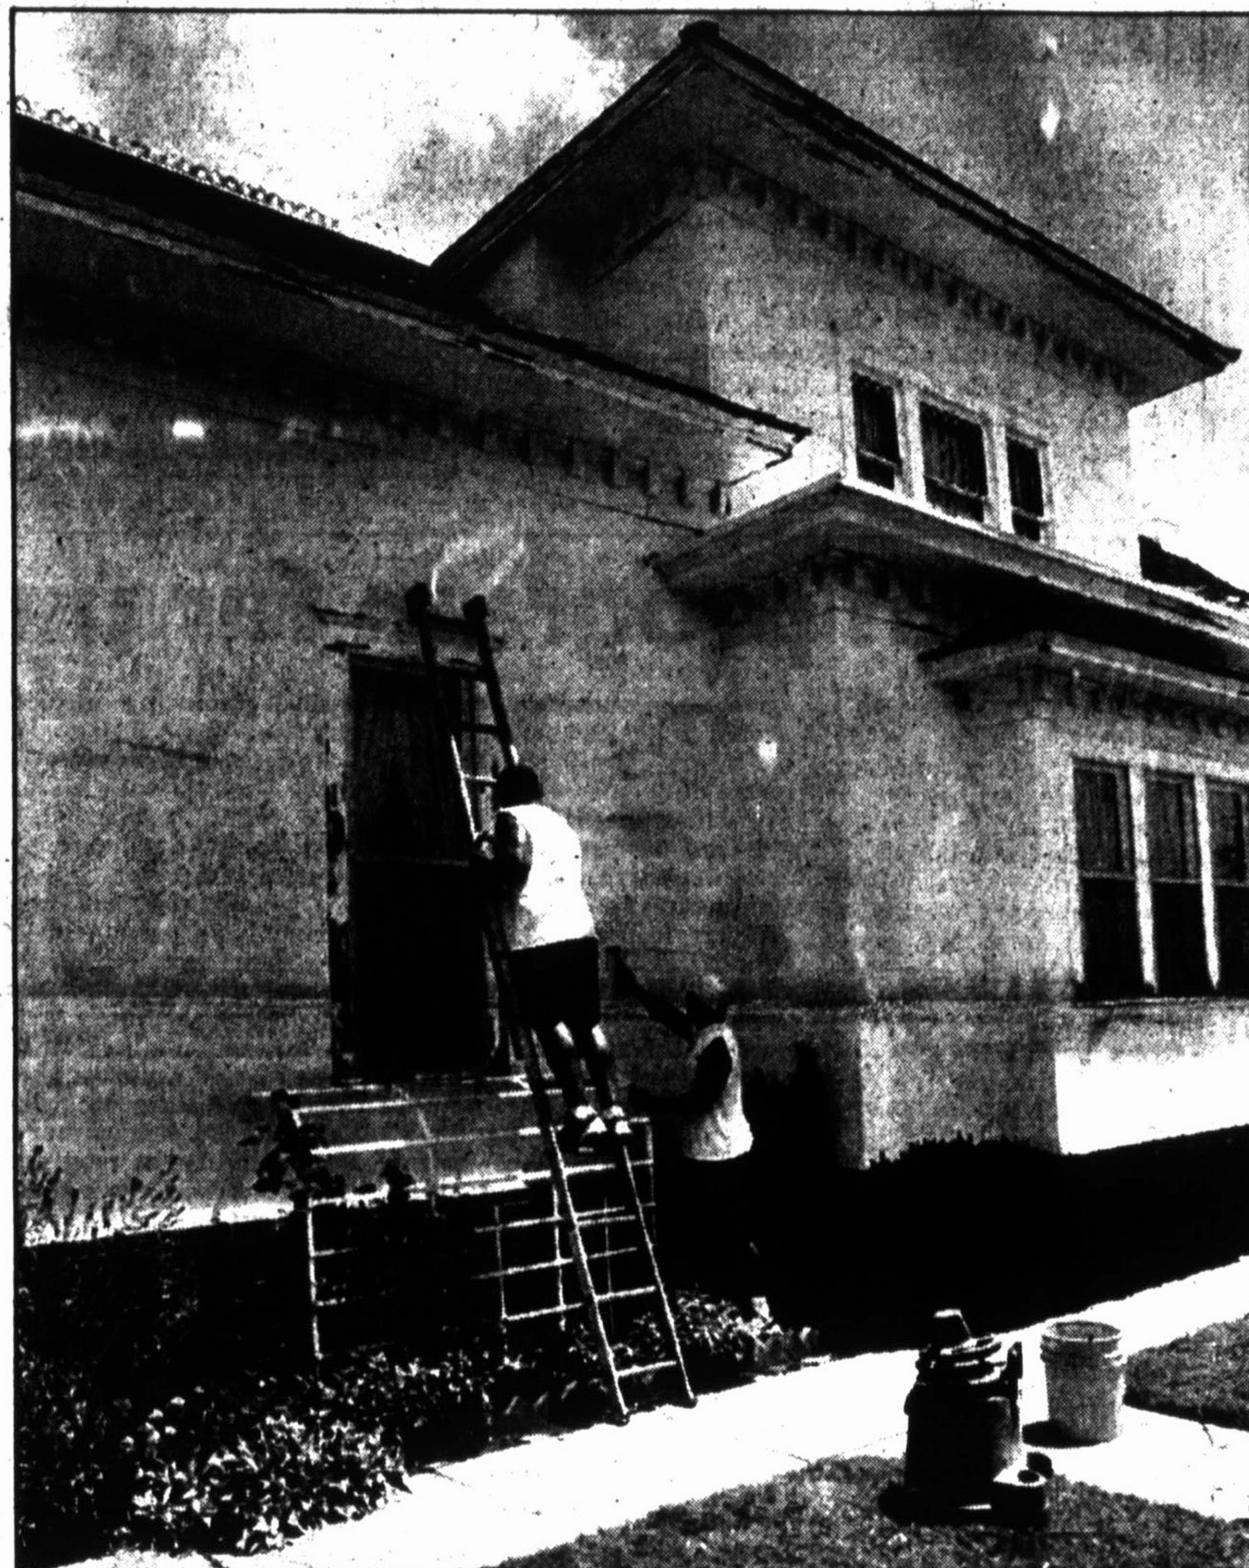

Winds were mostly southerly to southeasterly at 5 to 15 mph.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were also moving across parts of far West Texas.

Daytime highs through Friday should range from the upper 90s in the east to 105 along the Rio Grande and near 108 in the extreme northwest.

Lows overnight were expected from the 60s to 80s, with a few 50s in the southwestern mountains.

The weather service forecast an increased chance of rain for deep South Texas and for coastal areas.

Getting ready to paint — Gilbert Hernandez (on ladder) and Michael Barba scrape the side of the historic E.B. Black House Tuesday afternoon as part of the preparation for giving the structure a facelift. The house, which is owned by Deaf Smith County, will be painted and receive some other repairs that have resulted from age.

Urbanczyk picked for board seat

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

He's a common sight at the Kid's Inc. baseball games and even more commonly recognized in the uniform he wears as a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper. Now Sgt. Ben Urbanczyk will be a common sight at school board meetings.

Urbanczyk was the only qualified candidate to be interviewed Tuesday night by Hereford Independent School District trustees as they considered filling a vacancy on the board. The position became open when Allen Foster resigned only one week after being sworn into office. Foster, who was the local Energas manager, was transferred to Lubbock.

The board received two other applications, but the applicants, Robert Chavez and Dr. Lamuel Salik, did not meet the residency requirements to fill the position.

Urbanczyk, who is a recent transplant to the area from Dalhart, has already made himself visible in the community, volunteering his time with Kid's Inc., as a HOSTS mentor, the Deaf Smith County United Way co-chairman in 1999, and as a Big in Schools participant. He has never served on a school board, but has always been active in the communities where he has lived.

He has served as DPS trooper since 1986 and believes being a member of the school board is another opportunity to help direct the schools in their decisions regarding the students.

"I just saw a need in the community and felt I could help fill that need. I don't have an agenda, I just want to do what I can to help," Urbanczyk told the school board.

During the brief question-and-answer session, Urbanczyk said the education of children is very important to him and this is another way in which he can be involved with the education of his own children.

Board members learned Urbanczyk had intended to be a coach while attending college; however, after farming for a time, he went into law enforcement when the opportunity arrived.

The big question revolved around Urbanczyk's schedule and the permanency of his residency.

Urbanczyk eased their worries when he said as a supervisor he could pretty well work around the sched-

DEMOCRATS: Highest-ranking elected official in Texas to skip the convention

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' highest-ranking elected Democrat will be notably absent from the party's national convention. House Speaker Pete Laney will stay home as 250 Lone Star delegates and alternates head to Los Angeles next week.

Laney has refused to publicly endorse Vice President Al Gore, but the speaker's spokesman said Tuesday the fact that Texas Gov. George W. Bush will be on the presidential ballot has nothing to do with Laney's decision to skip the event.

"This is nothing out of the ordinary. He's never gotten involved in any presidential campaign," said John Bender, Laney's communications director. Laney has not attended any recent national convention, Bender said. Speaker of the Texas House since 1993, Laney has worked closely with Bush since he was elected governor in 1994. The pair also share a close personal relationship.

Bender shrugged off any suggestion that Laney's neutrality was a silent endorsement for Bush, who has earned some bipartisan support, including an endorsement from Jan Bullock, the widow of former Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who had supported Bush's re-election for governor in 1998.

Mrs. Bullock spoke in Bush's favor last week at the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia.

Laney, who said he will focus on state business and legislative races next week, has been consistent and persistent in remaining mum about which presidential candidate he supports.

At a March state party event, Laney danced around the issue as reporters asked the question several different ways.

In June, at the state Democratic convention in Fort Worth, Laney literally fled from the press rather than discuss the presidential contest.

"No, no, I'm not going to talk about anything," Laney said then as he trotted through the crowded convention center. "I'm going to be very involved with all my House members. That's my priority."

Maintaining control of the state House of Representatives this year is especially important for Democrats, who have vowed to expand their majority in the chamber and win back the Texas Senate.

The 2001 Legislature will draw new voting districts for Congress and the Legislature.

Republicans currently hold a 16-15 majority in the Senate. Demo-

Agency likely to get earful

By Donald M. Cooper

If the rest of the hearings on proposed designation of critical habitat for the Arkansas River shiner go like they did in Amarillo, U.S. Fish & Wildlife officials will get an earful of angry protests.

The federal agency conducted a public hearing at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center and heard no support for the proposal, which was published June 30 in the Federal Register.

Public hearings on the proposed designation also were scheduled for today in Oklahoma City and Friday in Pratt, Kan.

Although the FWS still could decide not to follow through on the designation, Hereford City Commissioner Michael Kitten, who attended the Amarillo hearing, said that is unlikely.

If the critical habitat designation does go into effect, it also is likely that a lawsuit will be filed to block it. That became apparent Tuesday when Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water District, said if the agency does carry through on its designation, "I antic-

Gore, Lieberman acknowledge differences on variety of issues, contend it is a strength

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vice President Al Gore and Sen. Joseph Lieberman acknowledged Wednesday that they have some disagreements on issues but portrayed their differences as a strength in developing national policy.

"I am not afraid to have somebody as my vice president who sometimes disagrees with me," Gore, the Democratic candidate for president, said as he and running mate Lieberman set out on their second day of campaigning as a ticket.

Added Lieberman: "If I'm lucky enough to be elected, that free exchange of ideas is going to continue in private. ... But when President Gore decides, Vice President Lieberman will support him entirely."

The two, interviewed on NBC's "Today," CBS' "The Early Show" and ABC's "Good Morning America," were asked about differences on such issues as vouchers for education, parental-notification rules on abortion and affirmative action.

"The Republicans have made much ado about what is little or in some cases nothing," Lieberman said.

"The policy will be the policy I decide," Gore

Lawyers, non-lawyers at odds

AUSTIN (AP) — Some Texas lawyers say a proposal by the state bar association that would allow non-lawyers to draft more real-estate documents is a cost-cutting move that could lead to errors by unqualified outsiders.

Angry lawyers have attended a series of meetings and written to a task force of the State Bar of Texas, which is considering lifting Texas' requirement that lawyers take part in draft papers any time a title is affected in a real-estate transaction, the Texas Journal of the Wall Street Journal reported Wednesday.

The requirement adds about $200 to the average mortgage.

"My law license used to mean something. People like me in a solo practice are just being abandoned by the state bar," state Rep. Burt Solomons, R-Carrollton, a real-estate lawyer, said during a four-hour meeting last week in Austin.

In a letter to the bar, Solomons wrote that opening real-estate transactions to non-lawyers would "legitimize the trend" of real-estate and lending companies which are taking advantage of loopholes in the law to conduct title changes without lawyers.

Elsewhere:

PRISON ESCAPE: Avoiding a hail of gunshots from prison guards, an inmate driving an 18-wheel tractor trailer cab smashed through a prison fence, then left the truck on an airport runway before hitching a ride in another vehicle and fleeing. State troopers, Texas Rangers and sheriff's department officers, along with corrections officers using tracking dogs, were hunting for Terry Rhodes, 31, who escaped about 9 a.m. from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Wynne Unit at the northern edge of Huntsville near the Huntsville airport.

School days

Bells will be ringing — Soon, Monday to be exact, Hereford schools will open their doors for the 2000-2001 school year and each campus is getting ready. Parents and students lined up Tuesday at the junior high, above, to enroll seventh and eighth grade students. Across town, third grade teachers, Jan Reeve and Mary Ann O'Rear, at Aikman Elementary took a break from room preparation to sit and chat. No, that's not a smudge on Jan's face, it's a giant bubble. She promises to get rid of her gum before class on Monday.

Health program far under-used

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly two-thirds of the nation's 11 million uninsured children are eligible for free or low-cost health insurance through the government, but their parents mistakenly believe they don't qualify, according to a study released Wednesday.

The survey found that about three of five parents whose children qualify for the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) or Medicaid believe they're not eligible for these programs, leaving 7 million children unnecessarily uninsured.

About four of five parents of eligible children said they would enroll their children if they knew they could, said Sarah Shuptrine, head of the Covering Kids program of The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, a philanthropic group devoted to health issues.

"Many families really believe that they have to have very low incomes or have to be on welfare in order for children to be eligible," Shuptrine said. "It's critically important that we try to reach these families and let them know about these opportunities."

The government created the children's program in 1997 to help kids whose families earn too much to qualify for Medicaid but can't afford private insurance. About 2 million children were enrolled in the program in 1999.

Samantha Stovall, 23, a portrait photographer from Boise, Idaho, signed up her 2-year-old son, Tyler, for CHIP coverage only three days before he suffered a serious asthma attack requiring medical attention.

"With everything we've gone through with his health, it's really helpful to have something that helps to pay," Stovall said.

Stovall and her husband didn't have private insurance for their son and earned too much to continue receiving Medicaid. She didn't know she could be eligible until she heard some radio commercials about her state program and a friend encouraged her to go.

Eligibility for program varies among states, with most setting the income level for a family of four around $30,000.

The survey found households with two working parents or with income above $25,000 were most likely to mistakenly believe their children wouldn't qualify for aid.

Social stigma often is considered a deterrent to getting families to sign up for government assistance, but that doesn't seem to be a problem with the health program, the survey found. Three out of four parents of children eligible for CHIP believe that government health programs are "a good thing to help people take care of their families," the survey said.

Outreach efforts are underway in more than 20 states to encourage families to enroll in the program.

In his schools will include brochures about the program in back-to-school packets. In Salt Lake City, local groups plan events promoting the program in 20 elementary schools and all the city's secondary schools. In Atlanta, children will be enrolled during a back-to-school immunization drive.

"States have been working hard to streamline application and re-enrollment processes to make them more family friendly," said Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala.

The national telephone survey of 1,066 eligible but uninsured parents was conducted between June 8 and July 6 by Wirthlin Worldwide and has an error margin of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Readers: In a recent column extolling the virtues of Dr. Michael DeBaKey, world-famous heart surgeon, I spoke of his excellence and wrote that he performed surgery until he was 90. Very soon after that column appeared, I received word from Dr. DeBaKey, my good friend of 30-plus years, informing me that he had read the column and was pleased. He also said that while he no longer has the heavy operating schedule he followed for many years, he still goes to the operating room when patients insist upon it.

The very next day, I received a letter from Virginia Krieger in Killeen, Texas, along with a clipping from the Temple, Texas, Daily Telegram, reporting on Dr. DeBaKey's most recent achievement. He successfully implanted a heart-assist device one-tenth the size of current pumps in a 31-year-old Houston woman. The woman is awaiting a heart transplant, and will rely on the device until a human heart becomes available. The device was developed by Dr. DeBaKey, Dr. George Noon and NASA engineers. It is called the MicroMed DeBaKey Ventricular Assist Device.

Dr. DeBaKey truly is a national treasure. In 1969, he received our nation's highest honor — the Medal of Freedom — from President Lyndon Johnson. I cannot imagine a more deserving person.

Dear Ann Landers: A while back, a reader asked why the government doesn't ban cigarettes. Well, Ann, I will tell you.

I work for a tobacco company. It costs the manufacturer about 12 cents to make a pack of cigarettes. Sales and promotion costs bring the total pack price up to around 15 cents. The cigarettes then go to a warehouse, where the federal government collects taxes, and then, the state collects more taxes. The result? A pack of cigarettes winds up on a store shelf costing a whopping $2.50. The manufacturer's profit after subtracting the costs of manufacturing, sales, promotion and taxes? Between five and 10 cents per pack, depending on the brand.

I hope this clarifies who is making the real money on cigarettes. — Anonymous in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Dear Chapel Hill: I appreciate your explanation, but there is one large hole in it. If there is so little profit for the tobacco companies, why do they keep making cigarettes — especially when their image is taking such a beating? Obviously, they are making a great deal of money, too. In Chicago, a pack costs nearly $5.

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for your response to "A Midwestern Common-Sense Reader" regarding his comments about obesity. He said fat people eat too much and are too lazy to exercise. You said it is sometimes a metabolic problem, and that he should be less judgmental.

I have an older brother who weighs 500 pounds and is about to undergo stomach bypass surgery to help him lose weight. The reason my brother became so heavy was because of a botched operation on his knees. The surgery left him unable to exercise, and the medication for pain caused him to pack on the pounds. He has been struggling with his weight for 15 years. We know if this bypass surgery doesn't work, we could lose him to heart failure. He is only 39 years old.

Too many people think obesity is a matter of choice, when, in fact, most overweight people are trying desperately to stay healthy. Thank you for being a voice of reason and compassion. — Tina in Massachusetts

Dear Tina: Your letter will be greatly appreciated by obese readers and their families. Thank you for being understanding and supportive.

Reticent author takes stock of legacy, passion for books

ARCHER CITY, Texas — He sits in the back of one of his bookstores, looking rumpled in jeans and a white knit shirt, his eyes darting. Larry McMurtry, a Pulitzer Prize winner for "Lonesome Dove," says he isn't comfortable talking about himself or his work — ironic for someone who makes a living with words.

McMurtry, 63, comes across as painfully shy. He doesn't do many interviews and wants to make certain he isn't portrayed as a celebrity. For 45 minutes McMurtry tries to reveal as little as possible on a variety of subjects.

"Really, what I think about anything is in my books," McMurtry says.

He grudgingly admits he has achieved a certain level of prominence, although not as great as some perceive. "I'm probably the main celebrity around here north of Willie Nelson," he says.

"My popularity, such as it is, is a regional thing. I have some status, I'm not saying I don't, but if you asked a cross section of readers nationally to list their top 10 novelists, most wouldn't mention me. They'd think of Anne Tyler, John Updike, Philip Roth. Texans might mention me."

He says that "Lonesome Dove" is really his only popular book. "The books of mine making the bestseller lists are the 'Lonesome Dove' series ('Streets of Laredo,' 'Dead Man's Walk,' 'Comanche Moon') or other westerns," he says. "My last couple westerns barely made the list. My last nonwestern novel, 'Duane's Depressed,' a very good novel, didn't make it at all."

McMurtry, through modesty or disingenuousness, isn't giving himself sufficient credit. His reputation as a writer is immense. Booked Up, the massive old-book business McMurtry has gradually moved from Washington, D.C., to his tiny West Texas hometown, is flourishing (it currently occupies four buildings along or near Archer City's main street).

Almost a decade after heart bypass surgery, he finally feels he has recovered. And, over the next few months, he has no fewer than three books being published, all by Simon & Schuster — "Roads," a non-fiction account of driving some of America's major highways; "Still Wild," a McMurtry-edited collection of short stories by other writers about the modern American West; and "Boone's Lick," new western fiction from the man who has proved a master of the genre with "Lonesome Dove" and "Anything for Billy."

But in Archer City, McMurtry appears most content when he is opening boxes of books to place on shelves in his store. His reluctance to embrace stardom prevents him from stocking his own titles at Booked Up, because, invariably, he would be asked to sign books for visitors. This would take him away from day-to-day tasks in the store.

When fans do show up, McMurtry says, "I try to be reasonable. If I can, I talk. I suppose people are curious."

He isn't particularly forthcoming about "Roads," a series of first-person essays that openly discuss many aspects of McMurtry's personal life. "I always liked to drive, but I don't do that much anymore," McMurtry says. "I had an eye problem that was corrected, so I indulged myself in a year of driving."

But McMurtry does become more expansive when discussing Booked Up. He first became involved in book buying and selling during his college days at Rice University in Houston.

"I don't scout books anymore, but I go out and buy collections," he says. "Buying books is like breathing to a bookseller. If we don't have new boxes to open here, after three weeks I start to get paranoid."

McMurtry won't allow his staff to computerize the Booked Up operation, which involves an ever-changing inventory of hundreds of thousands of titles. He prides himself on knowing where any given book is shelved and how much it costs.

He proves it when asked where a visitor could find "Yankee From Olympus" by Catherine Drinker Bowen: "That's about Justice Holmes. It's a five-dollar book, and you'll find it on the south wall of this building." He's right.

When the topic turns to his personal library, McMurtry practically becomes effusive. He leans forward, props his chin in his hand and gives the subject some thought.

"I have a large personal library, about 20,000 books, and it's a working library," he says. "It has various world literatures, lots of history, a lot of historical biography. I wrote 'Crazy Horse' (a short biography of the Sioux/Cheyenne war chief) out of my own library. I'm writing another book, eventually, maybe two or three years from now, about the role the Missouri River has played in American history. I have 30 or 40 books on the Missouri River now and expect to have maybe 100 by the time I'm ready to write. I'll read them all."

He is a prolific reader, saying it is the most important thing in his life.

"For me, reading is more central than writing, more central than anything," he says, smiling. "What I read varies but includes mostly biography and nonfiction. In the event I do read fiction, it's mainly older French or Russian fiction. A lot of the non-fiction concerns the 20th century."

In "Walter Benjamin at the Dairy Queen," a collection of essays published last year, McMurtry ruminates on "Don Quixote," one of the first "real" books he read as a child. The novel fascinated him, McMurtry wrote, and started him on a lifelong quest to seek out classic writing.

Cowboys focusing on weaknesses

Dallas works on limiting penalties and turnovers in this week's camp

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Two games and too many penalties and turnovers into training camp, the Dallas Cowboys returned to the practice field Tuesday with their rest-of-summer priorities coming into focus.

"We're going to get after them this week and get some things cleaned up," coach Dave Campo said. "It's still a period for individuals to be getting better from now until next week, then we'll start getting into the chemistry of units and things like that."

In losing both preseason games, the Cowboys have committed 12 penalties and given the ball away 10 times. Both are exorbitant numbers for a coaching staff that has been working to correct the problems all off-season.

"We've got to eliminate turnovers," Campo said. "That's an area we've got to improve in. We've had too many in two weeks, you can make excuses, but there are no excuses."

Generally, though, camp has been pretty smooth. The worst injury has been to a backup tight end and the biggest controversy — Erik Williams' absence — doesn't seem to bother anyone.

Still, there are plenty of hot topics and nagging issues, such as:

Finding a second blocking tight end.

Mike Lucky's season-ending knee injury hurts because he lined up opposite David LaFleur in the two-tight end scheme that accounts for about 20 percent of the offense.

Newcomer Jackie Harris isn't an option because he's better suited as a receiver. Brian Roche also catches better than he hits, which is why he was released Tuesday and replaced by Rickey Brady, a former Oklahoma Sooner who has been in training camp with Dallas before.

Brady comes on the high recommendation of his NFL Europe coach, who is close friends with Campo.

"He's been with the league a number of years, but on practice squads and training camps. He hasn't quite been able to stick. In our situation, I think he's worth a real good look," Campo said.

Campo also is considering using a backup offensive lineman, such as guard Michael Lies, a rookie free agent from Kansas, or Ben Fricke, a center who saw limited action last season.

Enduring the "growing pains" of young cornerbacks.

To help replace Deion Sanders, the Cowboys drafted three cornerbacks: Dwayne Goodrich, Kareem Larrimore and Mario Edwards. All have made their share of rookie mistakes, some more than others.

Goodrich has looked the worst of the bunch, and now is out up to two weeks with a hamstring injury. Edwards has committed several penalties and was beaten for a touchdown against Atlanta. Larrimore has been the most impressive, especially the second game with a broken hand suffered in the first.

"I just think it's a rookie thing," Campo said. "This is the NFL, not college football. They've got to learn how to do things and continue to progress."

Campo was Dallas' secondary coach when Larry Brown and Kevin Smith were rookie starters on Super Bowl teams. They were helped by a strong defensive line that didn't give quarterbacks much time to throw. The same could happen this season.

"I really feel like the improvement of our front four is going to allow us to get enough pressure to where our secondary is going to be able to perform well," Campo said.

Duane Hawthorne, coming off a co-defensive MVP performance in NFL Europe, is day-to-day with a shoulder injury. Dallas has added Hurley Tarver, who played opposite Hawthorne in NFL Europe.

Setting the receiver rotation.

James McKnight was penciled in at No. 3, but has been held to one practice per day while continuing his recovery from knee surgery. Jason Tucker's bad feet and Jason Ogden's bad luck with various ailments have prevented them from challenging for the job.

That should've been a golden opportunity for Wane McGarity and Chris Brazzell, but neither has capitalized. Both dropped passes and failed to prevent interceptions on balls thrown to them in the opener. Each improved in the second game, but not enough to guarantee themselves a job.

"At this point right now, I don't think the third guy has emerged," Campo said.

"I'm hoping Tucker gets back as soon as possible, and Ogden, and really make it a race for the end of camp. I think it'll help us."

Choosing a third quarterback.

Paul Justin came to Dallas to be No. 2, then Randall Cunningham was signed. Justin has performed so badly in two preseason games that undrafted rookie Clint Stoerner may bump him for the No. 3 spot.

In eight series, Justin has thrown four interceptions, fumbled twice and had two drives end in punts. Stoerner's best attribute is being more than $300,000 cheaper than Justin.

POSITIVE THINKING

Dave Campo staying positive despite lack of preseason success

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — If Dave Campo wasn't coaching the Dallas Cowboys, he'd be a great spin doctor for the presidential campaign. His specialty: finding something good in any situation — even the bad ones.

No matter what has happened the first three weeks of his first training camp in charge, Campo has remained upbeat. Or, to use his favorite buzzwords, he's been "positive" and "positive."

Whether it's the team's continued problems with penalties, the offense's struggles in enemy territory or the absence of two Pro Bowl offensive linemen, Campo has done his best to find the silver lining in each.

Here's how Campo spun those subjects at his daily press conference Tuesday.

On penalties: "The Cowboys were the most penalized team in the NFL last season and Campo spent the off-season training his players to follow the rules."

On the offensive line: "He harped on things like focus and tempo to cut down the pre-snap penalties, such as offsides and false starts. He also brought in officials to work every summer at camp and every training camp session."

On the defense: "The dedication seemed to be paying off, especially after his team had just two penalties in the opener. Then came the second exhibition game against Atlanta this past weekend."

Dallas committed 10 penalties, including six prior to snaps. Four of the pre-snap penalties were by the defense in the first quarter, when Falcons quarterback Chris Chandler tricked them with a hard count.

On the offense: "The defense was just being overly aggressive, which is easier to correct than if they were too passive, and he's glad to know they need to practice handling a hard count."

On the defense: "I felt like we'd made a lot of progress in that area, but Chris Chandler is one of the best in the business at it and he exploited us," Campo said. "We can expect it again from here on out, so it's an area we've got to focus on."

On the offense: "As for the false start by receiver Reggie Iupati and the holding by center Ben Fricke, Campo said: "The positive is that we had one pre-snap penalty and it wasn't by an offensive lineman. That's two weeks in a row that our offensive line has not had a pre-snap penalty. I'm very pleased with that."

On the offense: "Among the problems that led to Chan Galley being fired after last season was the team's tendency to drive deep into enemy territory then settle for field goals instead of touchdowns."

Hopes remain high that a revamped offense will do a better job of finding the end zone. But of the four scoring drives from the first team thus far, three have been field goals.

On the offense: "This has been a great way to test Tim Seder and Brian Lindell, two unknowns trying to break into the NFL."

"I was disappointed we didn't get the ball in the end zone, but at the same time I felt OK that we moved the ball as well as we did and our field goal kickers had a chance to kick the ball, which I think is an advantage as well," Campo said.

On the offense: "Revolving offensive line. In both preseason games, Dallas has started replacements in three of its five offensive line spots."

The changes began when Pro Bowl right tackle Erik Williams decided not to report to training camp because he's considering retirement. A second job opened when right guard Solomon Page moved over to replace Williams. Not long after, All Pro left guard Larry Allen broke his hand.

On the offense: "That coaches get a better chance to evaluate newcomers."

pate that we'll see you in court."

However, it is unlikely the City of Hereford will become a party to any lawsuit, unless the Texas Municipal League were to "rally the troops," Hereford Mayor Bob Josserrand said Tuesday afternoon.

During Tuesday's meeting of the Hereford City Commission, Josserrand voiced concern about the designation, saying it posed a threat to producers dependent on irrigation because it would take control of water supplies away from landowners and local government.

The FWS published the proposed rule to designate 1,160 river miles as "critical habitat" for the endangered Arkansas River shiner. The areas affected include portions of the Arkansas River in Kansas, the Cimarron River in Kansas and Oklahoma, the Beaver/North Canadian River in Oklahoma, and the Canadian/South Canadian River in New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma.

The tiny fish — adults only reach a maximum length of 5.1 centimeters — was listed as an endangered species in 1998 because dams, water diversions and pumping, and pollution drastically reduced its population size and range.

The FWS initially declared it was "not prudent" to protect the shiner's habitat; however, a lawsuit was filed by the Center for Biological Diversity, an environmental organization based in Tucson, Ariz., led to a settlement and the federal government agreed to review its decision.

In addition to designating

1,160 miles of river as critical habitat, the FWS would include 300 feet of adjacent habitat on either side, decision that opponents have indicated is too vague and represents an infringement of private property rights. Foes also contend the designation would include tributaries, which would expand the federal agency's control into areas not directly part of the shiner's habitat.

In this area, the shiner is found in Quay County in New Mexico and Hemphill, Hutchison, Oldham, Potter and Robertson counties in Texas.

In this area, the critical habitat designation would run from the Canadian River from Logan, N.M., to the upper end of Lake Meredith near Amarillo.

declared. "But I think it is a strength, not a weakness, an asset, not a liability ... to have somebody in that room when the decision is made who can bring up the strong points that ought to be considered, to try to make it work for all people."

Lieberman, who harshly criticized President Clinton's behavior in the Monica Lewinsky affair, and Gore denied they were trying to separate themselves from Clinton in neglecting to mention his name at a Nashville rally Tuesday.

"Bill Clinton is not running for re-election," Lieberman noted. "He can't. ... We're about the future."

With his selection of Lieberman, Gore reclaimed a share of the spotlight that had been focused on the Republican ticket of George W. Bush and Dick Cheney.

Texas Democratic Party chairwoman Molly Beth Malcom said the party will miss the speaker in L.A., but she supports his decision.

"The speaker has important business dealing with the Legislature and legislative races.

It's no big deal that he's not going," Malcom said Tuesday.

As for the Texas Republican Party, spokesman Robert Black told The Dallas Morning News: "We really don't have any interest in the soon-to-be-ex-speaker's travel itinerary." Black was not available for comment Tuesday.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Greens to be on ballot

AUSTIN (AP) — The Green Party has been certified for the Texas election ballot for the first time, party officials announced Tuesday.

The secretary of state's office verified more than 51,000 signatures collected by hundreds of volunteers to get the Green Party on the ballot. The total was well above the 37,380 signatures required from voters who had not participated in another party's primary on March 14.

"It bodes well for our chances in November," said Green Party presidential candidate and consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Along with Nader, the Green Party is running former Texas Observer publisher Gary Dugger and Charlie Mauch for Texas Railroad Commission; Doug Sandage for U.S. Senate; and Ben Levy, a candidate for the state Supreme Court.

In the Railroad Commission and Supreme Court races, the Democratic Party failed to field any candidates.

Texas prepares to execute 2

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The nation's busiest death chamber was set for a double execution Wednesday night, including an inmate opponent's say is retarded and should not be put to death.

Oliver David Cruz, 33, was condemned for the 1988 abduction, rape and fatal stabbing of a 24-year-old woman stationed at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio. His IQ has tested as low as 63.

The U.S. Supreme Court voted 6-3 on Wednesday morning to deny his emergency application for a reprieve. The court also rejected a separate appeal for Cruz.

Shortly afterward, the high court voted 7-2 to refuse to block the execution of the second inmate, Brian Keith Roberson, 36. He was condemned for the 1986 stabbing deaths of an elderly couple who lived across the street from him in Dallas.

The back-to-back lethal injections — Roberson first, then Cruz about an hour later — would be the first multiple executions in Texas since June 1997 and would be only the third time since capital punishment resumed in the state in 1982.

The execution dates are set by district judges at the local level," said Heather Browne, a spokeswoman for the Texas Attorney General's office. "The fact that two executions are set on the same date is just coincidence."

The double execution is a far cry from Feb. 8, 1924, when Texas prison officials, taking over execution duties from the counties for the first time, inaugurated the electric chair in Huntsville by putting five inmates to death.

The attention paid to the two inmates have paled in comparison to the hoopla that drew hundreds of protesters and media to Huntsville in June for the execution of Gary Graham.

Blazes raging in West

HAMILTON, Mont. (AP) — Even as fire crews made progress across the West, vast blazes in western Montana forced more evacuations and sent smoke streaming into South Dakota, more than 500 miles away.

There are now some 200,000 charred acres in the Bitterroot Valley, stretching south from Missoula to the Idaho line. Ravalli County Sheriff Perry Johnson estimated 500 to 800 dwellings have been evacuated in the scenic valley and at least 52 houses have burned so far.

Hundreds waited for word about their homes.

"This thing is so powerful you just feel helpless," Judy Greene, 67, said Tuesday as she sat in Darby's Montana Cafe picking at breakfast. She said there weren't enough firefighters to protect her family's property.

"I'm sure they're doing the best they can, but their resources are stretched to the limit," she said. "You can't expect them to do the impossible."

Evacuations were ordered Tuesday evening miles from here, south of Helena, where Jefferson City was threatened by a 6,000-acre fire. The order affected approximately 180 homes.

With the forecast calling for more dry, hot weather with gusty winds and the potential for lightning-packed storms, Gov. Marc Racicot was expected to soon restrict access to public land. Early Wednesday, logging and campfires were banned in eight southwestern Montana counties.

More than 20,000 civilian and military firefighters are battling fires across the country, with the West particularly hard hit. The fire season is being called the worst in 50 years, with more than 4.1 million acres burned as of Wednesday.

Washington Gov. Gary Locke declared a state of emergency due to a high fire danger and a shortage of firefighters. As many as 500 National Guard members will be trained to fight fires.

WTAMU seminar focuses on Internet commerce

Special to The Brand
CANYON — Business and non-profit organizations continue to face questions about how best to establish and manage their E-business and online marketing operations. West Texas A&M University's Continuing Education Center will focus on these topics during a seminar, "E-business and Online Marketing Strategies," Friday in the Office of Business Resources, Room 101 in the Classroom Center on campus.

The all-day seminar (9 a.m. to 5 p.m.) begins with registration at 8:30 a.m. and is being offered at a cost of $295 per person with lunch included. It is targeted at business leaders—from presidents, chief officers and senior business executives, to attorneys, hospital administrators, physicians and plant managers. Certified public accountants, marketing managers and leaders of small businesses are also encouraged to attend.

"In the last five years, the Internet and E-business-related initiatives worldwide have changed the business landscape and are expected to grow significantly in the coming years," Dr. Syed Tariq Anwar, seminar director and WTAMU professor of marketing and international business, said. "The E-business revolution is spreading to every area of the business world, and the United States maintains a major leadership advantage in E-business."

Eight speakers are scheduled to take part in the four-session seminar. They are: Anwar; Marc Sollosy, vice president and chief information officer, Corporate Systems; Mitchell Winick, assistant dean, Texas Tech University Law School; Richard Burk, president and CEO, NII Communications, San Antonio; De'Arno De'Armond, marketing consultant, NEC Business Network Solutions, Inc., Dallas; Lloyd Kruckeberg, president, Internet Commerce.com Resource Technology, Inc.; Kent Thornton, president, Fortiva Corp.; and Christian Stewart, attorney, Brown and Fortunato.

"The seminar will provide practical perspectives of the market and its business and legal issues affecting online marketing and E-business activities of the 21st century," Anwar said. "It will also provide participants with the learning tools and skills necessary for creating and managing their E-business."

Primary seminar sponsors include: Amarillo Economic Development Corporation; Amarillo National Bank; Corporate Technology Group; Internet Commerce.com Resource Technology, Inc.; Media Shoppe/In Amarillo.com; NII Communications; Northwest Texas Healthcare Systems; Plains National Bank; Systems Advisory Group Enterprises, Inc.; West Texas A&M University's T. Boone Pickens College of Business; and Utility Engineering-Utility Services Division.

Reform Party feuding likely to go to court

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The battle for control of the Reform Party appears headed for court as the presidential nominating convention has turned into two rival gatherings.

A civil war ripped the party in two Tuesday, with one faction rallying around White House hopeful Pat Buchanan and the other fiercely against him.

What was supposed to be a procedural hearing proved the flashpoint, and the anti-Buchanan contingent stormed out to stage their own meeting down the street.

The split raised the prospect that the convention here will produce two nominees, and it was all but certain to spark legal action. At stake is $12.5 million in federal funds for the nominee.

The Buchanan foes, many of them partial to party founder and Dallas billionaire Ross Perot, huddled late into Tuesday night plotting legal strategy. Jim Mangia, installed as chairman of one faction Tuesday, said his loyalists were considering legal action on three fronts, and were sure to take action by Thursday.

'Star Wars' now faces more delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's experimental missile defense, already beset by high-profile test failures, must now deal with longer delays from the contractor building new rocket boosters. The setbacks could jeopardize the missile's readiness by the target date of 2005.

Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said Tuesday that Defense Secretary William Cohen is not ready to abandon the 2005 goal, but he conceded that delays in technical aspects of the project are growing.

"We have always admitted that this was a high-risk program and part of being high risk is the deployment date; whether we can meet the deployment date of 2005," Bacon told reporters. "We will try our best."

The new rocket booster is designed to carry into space, then release, a self-guiding "kill vehicle" that would maneuver in the path of an incoming warhead and destroy it by force of impact.

The new rocket would replace the old-generation rocket booster used in an embarrassingly failed anti-missile flight test last month. A 10-year-old electronic component failed to send a signal to release the "kill vehicle" from atop the rocket, and the "kill vehicle" never attempted to intercept its target. The $100 million test was a washout.

The new rocket poses one of several technical problems Cohen is weighing as he considers whether to recommend to President Clinton that he take initial steps toward deploying a national missile defense.

Cohen said Monday he is postponing his recommendation for several weeks, and Bacon said it probably would be made in early September.

Asked whether 2005 was now an unrealistic target, Bacon said Tuesday: "That's exactly the type of question the secretary is considering now."

It remains possible that even if Cohen were to decide to move back the 2005 target by a year or two, he could recommend that Clinton begin the first deployment steps now in order to ease the overall schedule crunch. The first step would be awarding contracts for construction of a new X-band radar on a remote island off Alaska.

The new rocket had been eight months behind in development, and Bacon disclosed Tuesday that it is running an additional several months late. He said department officials are still calculating an exact timetable.
