City clears another hurdle

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Progress may be slow, but it's still being made on two fronts, City Manager Chester Nolen said.

Nolen said Tuesday the city administration hopes to have a completed design for a wastewater treatment plant ready to submit to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) by early October.

Also, Nolen said another hurdle has been cleared in the city's application for a Type IAE landfill.

In May, Mayor Bob Josseland cast the tie-breaking vote as the Hereford City Commission directed the city engineer, Oller Engineering Inc., to design an aerated lagoon system for treatment of wastewater at the city farm.

The city's wastewater treatment plant does not meet state standards, and the commissioners had reviewed two options — aerated lagoon system and facultative system — for the new plant.

The aerated lagoon system is more efficient, but more expensive to operate. The facultative system is less expensive to operate, but it also is less efficient and requires more land area.

The plant under design should be capable of dealing with 1.2-1.5 million gallons of effluent generated each day by the wastewater system's customers.

The aerated lagoon method will require about 34 acres of land. There would be three aerators in each lagoon that would treat the effluent.

This system would require the installation of pumps and motors, as well as electricity. While much more efficient than the facultative system, the aerated method also is more expensive to operate and requires personnel on site.

Construction of the aerated lagoon system will cost an estimated $4 million. The city has about $1.2 million available for the project. In anticipation of this situation, the city commission had authorized 10-percent increases in water/sewer rates for three years, with the extra revenue to be set aside for improvements to the aging facility. The last of the three annual increases went into effect last summer.

Nolen said the landfill permit application was reviewed at a hearing conducted by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission's Solid Waste Advisory Committee.

The panel signed off on the permit application and a recommendation for its approval was forwarded to the TNRCC.

The city had operated a Type I landfill until 1993, when it was closed because of costs associated with the federal Clean Water Act. The expense of lining the landfill with clay or a polyvinyl material in addition to a leachate

THE LONG, LONG WAIT

Parents and children will have to get used to long lines over the next several days — they won't be able to avoid them if there's a family member who'll be going to the Hereford Independent School District schools. Juvenile center study draws OK

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

It's budget season again for the Hereford Independent School District and board members were faced with a number of questions which will affect the 2000-2001 budget.

Just in time for budget considerations, board members were asked to approve an interlocal agreement to fund a feasibility study for a juvenile detention center. The funding for the study, which is estimated to cost $21,000, will be divided equally among the City of Hereford, Deaf Smith County and the school district. The cost for the school should be $7,500.

This year, the school district had to approve budget amendments of $9,000 to cover the additional costs of juvenile detention.

The board, on recommendation from Superintendent Beth Abernethy, approved joining with the city and county.

Proposals from Brown, Graham & Company, P.C. and McGinty & Associates for the external auditor contract for the year ending Aug. 31, 2000, varied by more than $6,000, with Brown & Graham presenting the low bid of $17,500-$18,000. McGinty & Associates, which has been doing the district's outside audits for 11 years, entered a bid of $24,725.

A budget workshop has been scheduled for 6 p.m. Aug. 1 and a budget/tax hearing will be conducted at 6 p.m. Aug. 22. By law, the budget must be accepted by Aug. 31.

The board also accepted the resignation of trustee Alan Foster, who resigned after he was transferred to Lubbock. Foster had been elected to the board in May.

The district will accept applications to fill Foster's position through Aug. 4. Board interviews will be Aug. 8.

The board has 180 days to fill Foster's position, but would like to have the new board member participate in the budget process.

Assistant Superintendent Nena Veazey presented the latest student code of conduct and cited several changes, including a formal definition of fighting and changes in this year's dress code.

Students wanting to wear the newest fashion in head gear must do it somewhere other than at school as no hats, scarves, bandanas or caps may be worn. Hair must be within the natural range of colors — no pink, orange, blue, purple or rainbows.

Also, students' pants must fit at the waist and have no more than 4 inches of excess material when gathered at the knee and notched eyebrows will not be permitted.

Veazey encouraged all students and parents to review the discipline and student handbooks for changes.

In other business board members agreed to pay $16,018 to demolish the remaining portable buildings at Hereford High School.

Board members accepted the following employment recommendations for the 2000-2001 school year:

Diane Aragon, Amy Carlson, Julie Carlson, Leah Evans, Annalisa Garcia, Margarita Hernandez, Peggy La Mascus, Terry Morton, Daniel Pena and Christy Velasquez.

MEDIA VIOLENCE

Health experts say research shows adverse effect on youngsters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children love teen horror flicks, shoot-'em up interactive video games, hard-core rock and rap and risque television.

And in one of the most definitive statements yet on violence in American culture, four national health associations link the violence in television, music, video games and movies to increasing violence among children.

"Its effects are measurable and long-lasting," the four groups say in a statement. "Moreover, prolonged viewing of media violence can lead to emotional desensitization toward violence in real life."

The joint statement by the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Psychological Association and the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry was to be the centerpiece of a public health summit Wednesday on entertainment violence organized by Sen. Sam Brownback, R-Kan.

"The conclusion of the public health community, based on over 30 years of research, is that viewing entertainment violence can lead to increases in aggressive attitudes, values and behaviors, particularly in children," the organizations' statement says.

Advocating a code of conduct for the entire entertainment industry, Brownback compared the statement to the medical community declaring that cigarettes can cause cancer.

"I think this is an important turning point," said Brownback. "Among the professional community, there's no longer any doubt about this. For the first time, you have the four major medical and psychiatric associations coming together and stating flatly that violence in entertainment has a direct effect on violence in our children."

The Motion Picture Association of America and the National Association of Broadcasters refused to comment Tuesday on the medical associations' statement.

The four health professional groups left no doubt about their feelings in the statement:

Father attends execution

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Edward Bolden had decided he wouldn't attend the execution of the Fort Worth man convicted of killing his teen-age son 15 years ago, but condemned killer Juan Soria's attack on a prison chaplain last month changed his mind.

"He made the decision for me," Bolden said this week as he prepared for Wednesday evening's trip to Huntsville, where Soria was set for lethal injection. "I decided it was something I needed to do."

Soria, 33, who nearly severed the hand of a prison minister in a razor attack on death row in June, headed to the death chamber for abducting Bolden's son, Allen, 17, and fatally stabbing him before driving off in the victim's car.

Civil War blockade runner excavated

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — On a hot night in May 1865, a ship made its way quietly from the Gulf of Mexico into Galveston Bay.

The vessel's last stop had been Havana, where it was loaded with a cargo of smuggled goods like paper, boots, uniforms, lead, and the latest in Paris fashions.

The mostly British crew members were worried as they came close to the Confederate port of Galveston, because the area was known for its shifting sandbars and shallow waters.

Only a quarter of a mile from shore, the hull of the ship — called the Denbigh — scraped against a sandbar and stuck.

The crew escaped on a smaller boat to the Bolivar Peninsula before Union soldiers blockading the port began to shell and burn the unarmed steamer.

Policies affect school gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — States that reduce class sizes, enroll more kids in public preschool, give teachers more classroom materials and target additional money to poor children are improving the lot of all students, according to a private study of how state policies affect test scores.

And Texas schoolchildren — regardless of how much money their parents make or what race they are — are likely to do better than counterparts in other states, researchers at Rand, a California-based think tank, concluded in a report released Tuesday. California children had the lowest scores in the several socio-economic categories examined by Rand.

"Regardless of where a child starts out in Texas, the research shows there is going to be improvement," said David Grissmer, the study's principal investigator.

The three-year Rand study examined math and reading scores from the National Assessment of Educational Progress tests given between 1990 and 1996. It ranked the 44 states that participate in the voluntary national test program by average test scores, by average score improvement and by directly comparing scores of students with similar race and socio-economic backgrounds.

For example, the study compared scores of students who shared similar family circumstances, such as whether their parents were single, were teen parents or had finished high school — all factors that have generally affected a child's ability to do well in school.

The study was funded by ExxonMobil's education foundation, the St. Louis-based Danforth Foundation, as well as divisions of the Education Department and Rand itself.

Like Texas, Wisconsin, Montana and Iowa also ranked high in the Rand study. Louisiana, Mississippi and West Virginia joined California in posting low scores across all categories.

Researchers used specific categories to see how well each state is educating children regardless of background.

Then states' education policies were examined, Grissmer said. Texas and other states were successful because they were most likely to have lowered pupil-teacher ratios, enrolled more children in public preschool and have given teachers more materials for classrooms, he said.

But Doug Stone, a spokesman for California's Department of Education, said the early 1990s data used in the Rand study don't reflect the state's most recent increases in education spending, teacher hiring and academic standards for students.

"The seeds of improvement were planted just a few years ago," Stone said, adding that elementary and middle school children made double-digit gains in math scores this year.

Factory emissions add to pollution woes

HOUSTON (AP) — Unplanned emissions that exceed state permits for factories and refineries are contributing to Texas' pollution woes, according to a new report.

Such excessive emissions, or "upsets," are the subject of a state district court lawsuit in Corpus Christi against Valero Energy Corp.

And environmentalists are calling such emergency discharges a huge loophole.

"The public thinks you get a permit and you shall not emit pollution beyond a certain amount, that it's a hard-and-fast amount," Jim Marston, director of the Austin office of the advocacy group Environmental Defense, told the Texas Journal of The Wall Street Journal in Wednesday's editions.

Marston said many plant operators use regular emergency discharges to exceed their permitted emissions.

The unplanned emissions or "upsets" sent at least 240 million pounds of pollutants into the air from plants and refineries in 1998, the last year for which a rough estimate based on state data can be made, according to the Journal.

That amounted to about four percent of the total harmful pollutants, as classified by the state, allowed by regular permits. But environmental groups and the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission say figures of "off-the-books" pollution could be badly understated.

Vice President Al Gore contends that Texas ranks No. 1 in industrial pollution. Texas Gov. George W. Bush, presumptive GOP presidential nominee, has been campaigning on his environmental record.

Upset pollutants, unlike emissions normally released, are in an untreated form that poses a greater health threat than day-to-day emissions that undergo extensive filtering.

Pam Giblin, an Austin lawyer, said some upset emissions should be considered when the state issues pollution permits.

Not all upsets are unforeseen since plant equipment is often designed to burn off emissions when a certain pressure or capacity is reached, said Ms. Giblin, who represents a group of 50 companies including chemical plants, refineries and utilities.

Executives of Valero and other companies say they have a financial incentive to minimize unplanned emissions, since they're linked with costly shutdowns.

The TNRCC rarely punishes companies for abusing upset rules, and the agency says it has never adjusted an emissions permit because of excess unplanned pollution. It has been criticized for its emergency-discharge policies.

The TNRCC is up for legislative review in January under the state's Sunset Act, a forum for lawmakers to reform state agencies.

Neighbors who live about a mile from the Valero refinery are suing the company in a Corpus Christi court for health-and-property damage claims stemming from emissions, including sulfur oxide and other contaminants released in raw form through upsets.

Plaintiffs' lawyers have asked a state district judge to certify the lawsuit as a class action for property owners and residents of about 400 homes near the plant who contend they have suffered respiratory and other health problems as well as property damage.

Compilation reveals 'History of the World'

Dear Ann Landers: CREATORS SYNDICATE

Ann Landers

I have been searching your column for my favorite article, but have yet to see it. Would you please reprint "The History of the World"? It was a compilation of lines from student papers, collected by history and English teachers, and put together by Richard Lederer. It was hilarious. — Laura in Atlanta

Dear Laura: I remember it well, because the man who put it together has the same last name as mine, although we are not related. Here it is:

The History of the World

Adam and Eve were created from an apple tree. Jacob, son of Isaac, stole his brother's birthmark. One of Jacob's sons, Joseph, gave refuse to the Israelites.

The inhabitants of Egypt were called mummies. They traveled by Camelot. Moses led the Hebrew slaves to the Red Sea, where they made unleavened bread, which is bread made without any ingredients. David was a Hebrew king who fought the Philatelists. Solomon, one of David's sons, had 100 wives and 500 porcupines.

The Greeks invented three kinds of columns — Corinthian, Doric and Ionic. The mother of Achilles dipped him in the River Styx until he became intolerable. In the Olympic games, Greeks ran races, jumped, hurled the biscuits, and threw the javs. The reward to the victor was a coral wreath. Socrates was a famous Greek teacher who died from an overdose of wedlock.

Eventually, the Ramones conquered the Greeks. Nero was a cruel tyrant who tortured his poor subjects by playing the fiddle to them.

In the Middle Ages, King Harlod mustarded his troops before the Battle of Hastings. Joan of Arc was canonized by George Bernard Shaw. The Magna Carta provided that no free man should be hanged twice for the same offense. William Tell shot an arrow through an apple while standing on his son's head.

In the Renaissance, Martin Luther was nailed to the church door at Wittenberg for selling papal indulgences. He died a horrible death, being excommunicated by a bull. The painter Donatello's interest in the female nude made him the father of the Renaissance. Gutenberg invented the Bible. Sir Walter Raleigh invented cigarettes, and Sir Francis Drake circumcised the world with a 100-foot clipper.

Queen Elizabeth's navy defeated the Spanish Armadillo. William Shakespeare wrote about Romeo and Juliet, a romantic couplet. Miguel Cervantes wrote "Donkey Hote." John Milton wrote "Paradise Lost." Then, his wife died, and he wrote "Paradise Regained."

Christopher Columbus was a great navigator who discovered America while cursing about the Atlantic. His ships were the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Fe.

One of the causes of the Revolutionary War was that the English put tacks in their tea. Benjamin Franklin invented electricity by rubbing cats backward. Franklin died in 1790, and is still dead.

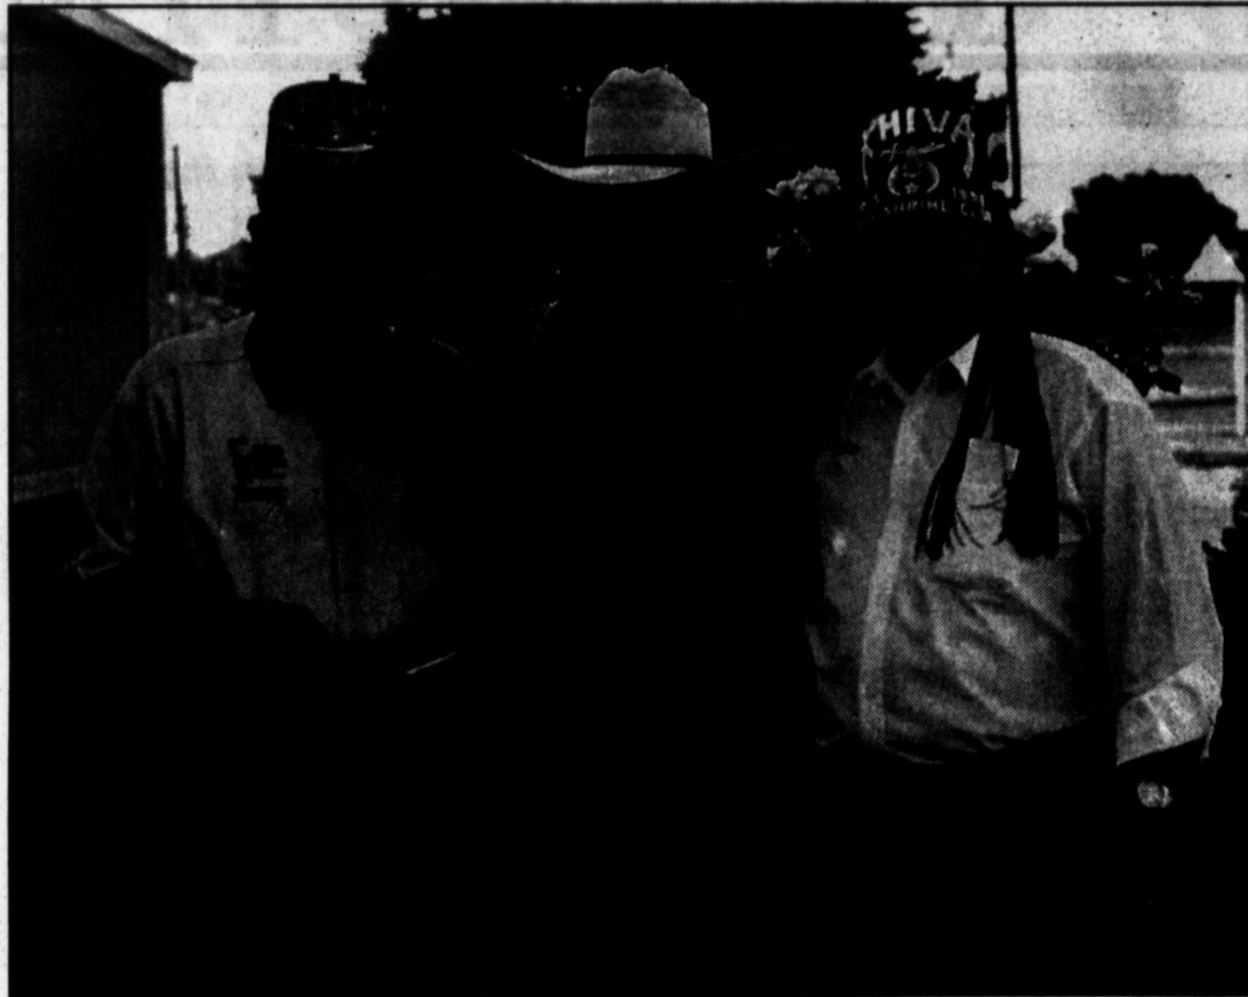

Abraham Lincoln's mother died in infancy. He signed the Emasculation Proclamation. In 1865, Lincoln got shot by an actor in a moving picture. His name was John Wilkes Booth. This ruined Booth's career.

Gravity was invented by Isaac Walton. It is chiefly noticeable in autumn, when the apples are falling off the trees. Bach and Handel were famous composers. Handel was half-German, half-Italian and half-English. He was very large. Bach died from 1750 to the present. Beethoven was so deaf that he wrote loud music. He expired in 1827, and later died from this.

Samuel Morse invented a code for telepathy. Louis Pasteur discovered a cure for rabies. Madman Curie discovered radium. And Karl Marx became one of the Marx Brothers.

The two also competed in a modified trap contest that consisted of 50 more difficult targets. Denison hit 45 of those targets while Baird hit 44.

Other results in the senior competition included Steven Reinart with a score of 88 and teammate Tyler Martin scoring an 86. In modified trap, Reinart hit 38 targets and

Trotter, Marshall dominate field

Hereford marksman Eddie Trotter is continuing his dominance this summer in trap shooting.

The Hereford native traveled around the country for the last month to meets in Illinois, Ohio and Texas. Trotter is paired with Richard Marshall of Lincoln, Neb.

The two All-American trap shooters traveled to Illinois State at Bunker Hill, Ill. on June 13-18 to compete in doubles competition. Only Trotter came away with trophies from the Illinois State competition scoring 98 in preliminary doubles and 99 in both the doubles class championship and doubles championship.

On June 19-25, the two traveled to Dayton, Ohio to compete at the Ohio State Shoot. Trotter won the AA Championship of preliminary doubles with a score of 99, the Singles Class Championship (junior) with a total of 196 targets, the Championship Singles (junior) with a score of 98 and Trotter was named the High Overall Champion.

At the same meet, Trotter's partner Marshall won the Doubles Class Championship with a score of 100, and he won third place in the preliminary handicap with a 98 score. Marshall also won the class AA Doubles Championship with a 98, and Marshall won the High Overall Championship.

At the Texas State Shoot in San Antonio on July 4-9, the two again made their mark winning 12 awards combined. Trotter won the preliminary doubles, Lone Star Doubles, Doubles Championship, Singles Championship, Handicap Championship, All-Around Junior Champion and High Overall Junior Champion.

Marshall, in the non-resident division, won the Class AA runner-up Singles, Doubles Open Championship, Preliminary Handicap Long Yardage Championship, High All-Around Championship and High Overall Championship.

Trotter is the son of Johnny and Jana Trotter of Hereford and the late Dee Ann Trotter.

tion. In the sub-junior division, Aaron Franks hit 42 out of 50 targets while partner Johnathan Paschel hit 35 out of 50. Franks did not compete in the modified trap shoot, but Paschel hit 35 out of 50 targets.

Hank Messer, Greg Balderaz and Daniel McElmurry combined to win sixth place in the three man team competition in American trap. Messer hit 41 targets, Balderaz hit 43 and McElmurry hit 39. The three also competed in modified trap with Messer hitting 32 targets, Balderaz hitting 29 and McElmurry hitting 26.

The Deaf Smith County club was also treated to an exhibition put on by Tom Knapp of Benelli and Winchester. Knapp was also filming a show for TNN's (The Nashville Network) The American Shooter. Hereford's Paul Martin and Mark Harrell assisted Knapp during the exhibition that will air on TNN on September 15-17.

Tournament competitors were treated to Knapp's breaking of the world record in targets hit at the same time with a pump shotgun. Knapp threw up eight targets and hit each one before they touched the ground setting a new world record. Knapp also matched his own world record of targets hit at the same time with a semi-automatic shotgun hitting nine targets at the same time.

The state tournament in San Antonio brings an end to the shooting sports season for the team. A new sign up to be on the team will be held at the beginning of September.

CHENEY: PROS & CONS

■ Selection boosts ticket, gives Democrats fodder

By Ron Fournier

AP Political Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Unwilling or unable to make a bold choice, George W. Bush played it safe with Dick Cheney.

His newly minted running mate gives the Republican presidential ticket a gold-plated political resume. The former defense secretary knows his way around the White House — and the world — and can offer comfort to voters questioning Bush's readiness. Cheney is a bridge between two generations of Bush family politics.

So why are Al Gore's advisers chortling?

They look at the same selection and see an opportunity to tie Bush to his father's recession, his party's right wing and his favorite special interest, the oil business.

Yet independent analysts, including Democrats, say the pros slightly outweigh the cons.

"I don't think anybody can argue that anything is wrong with Cheney," said Democratic strategist Jim Duffy of Washington. "You can disagree with him politically, but even Democrats must admit he's a decent guy with a resume to die for. In that sense, it shows that Bush chose wisely; he chose a man who can step in and do the job."

Cheney was not the best political pick.

Bush could have put John McCain on the ticket, appealing to moderate Democrats and ticket-splitters who backed the Arizona senator during the Republican primary fight.

But Bush wanted somebody loyal and subservient. McCain is neither.

Bush wanted to land retired Gen. Colin Powell, knowing the Persian Gulf War leader is America's most popular political figure. Democrats think it would have cost them the election.

But the retired general refused to take the job, though Cheney was still talking about the possibility of a Bush-Powell ticket three weeks ago.

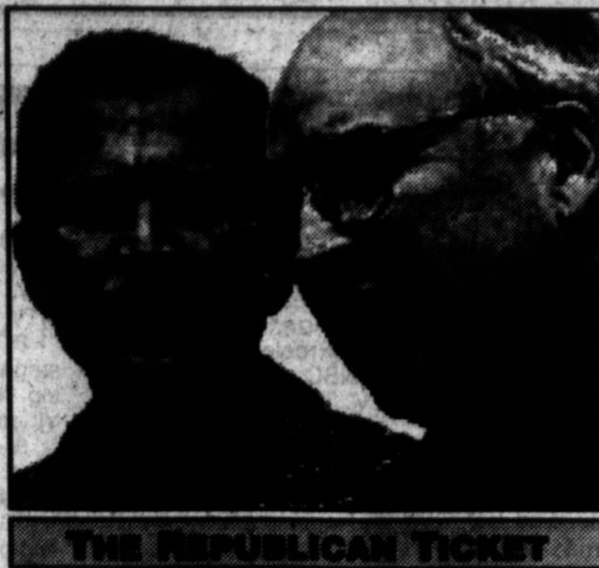

Bush could have named Govs. Tom Ridge of Pennsylvania or George Pataki of New York, abortion-rights supporters who would have signaled the ticket's independence from the religious right. Ridge also could have helped the ticket win Pennsylvania, a battleground state.

Bush decided not to take the risk. He gambled that he can play it safe.

With an edge in polls, Bush thinks he can beat Gore without a running mate from a key state or an important constituency.

"I think it's a pretty good pick for what Bush is trying to do. It's safe. It's secure. He'll do no harm," said Terry Madonna of Millersville University in Pennsylvania.

An overnight poll showed that voters are no more or less likely to vote for Bush with Cheney on the ticket.

Though just five years older than his new boss — Bush is 54 and Cheney is 59 — Cheney is light years ahead of Bush in public service. He is a former White House chief of staff, six-term congressman and Pentagon chief under Bush's father, former President Bush.

Gore advisers were quick to exploit Cheney's ties to the elder Bush.

One Gore aide, Chris Lehane, called it "a retro pick." Another, Mark Fabiani, said: "The race is now clearly between the Old Guard, which brought deficits and economic stagnation; and the New Guard, represented by Al Gore."

Many voters, however, consider Gore a continuation of the Clinton administration. With Cheney in the mix, both Gore and Bush will have a hard time calling themselves fresh faces.

It's the Old Guard vs. the Older Guard.

"Gore's people should just leave Cheney alone if you accept the fact that people vote for the man at the top of the ticket and (Cheney) is capable of being president," said Democratic strategist Duffy.

Yet even some Republicans winced at the idea of a look-back ticket in Philadelphia, the history-bound city hosting the party's convention next week.

"The old man is back in play," sighed a senior GOP strategist, referring to the elder Bush's role in promoting Cheney to his son.

Cheney defends his voting record

Associated Press

Dick Cheney defended his staunchly conservative congressional voting record and downplayed differences with running mate George W. Bush, who is campaigning as a moderate, in his first interview since being tapped as Bush's running mate.

Cheney said he opposed some worthy social programs while he was in Congress because the country couldn't afford them; given budget deficits and the need to increase military spending to fight the Cold War.

"Certainly, I do have a conservative record, but I'm proud of it," he said on CNN's "Larry King Live," his first interview since being asked to run as Bush's vice president.

In a wide-ranging interview, Cheney said his opposition to abortion should not be a major issue this fall and tried to explain a number of his votes, including opposition to a resolution calling for the release of jailed South African leader Nelson Mandela.

Cheney said his opposition to social programs including Head Start, the preschool program for poor kids, was fueled by the large federal deficit. He was one of the few members of Congress to vote against renewing the program, but he said that today, in an age of budget surpluses, he'd vote differently.

"I voted, I'm sure, a great many times, against various and sometimes worthy programs," he said. "I would not vote against Head Start today."

But given the current eco-ported the Second Amendment of the Constitution (and) believe in the right to keep and bear arms," he said.

Adopting himself to the Bush team, he said he could support the Texas governor's call for modest measures.

Bush has called for mandatory trigger safety locks, although Cheney only promised to support their availability and encouraging their use, along with the standard Republican call for better enforcement of existing laws.

Cheney dodged when asked about his vote against a resolution calling for the release of anti-apartheid leader Mandela.

He said the issue "wasn't clear-cut," but added that he has great respect for Mandela, who later headed South Africa.

Defending his votes against social spending, Cheney said he would be able to support more of social spending today, now that the budget deficit has been erased.

Already, Democrats are pouncing on his conservative record, though in the interview, he wasn't asked about many of the votes that are sure to surface. On the environment, for instance, Cheney opposed funding for the Clean Water Act, the Safe Drinking Water Act and the Endangered Species Act.

Cheney credited Reagan with ending the Cold War, which he said led to the end of deficits. He suggested that President Clinton deserves little if any credit for the good economic times — naming appointment of Federal Reserve chief Alan Greenspan as his only accomplishment.

economic climate, Cheney said: "We're now in a position to be able to look at doing some things from the compassionate standpoint." He mentioned prescription drug benefits for Medicare recipients, something his fellow conservatives fought for some time before offering a plan of their own.

As for Head Start, he mentioned that there were questions about whether the program was being operated "in the fashion that would allow us to get the maximum benefit out of it."

He said he remains opposed to abortion in all circumstances, including rape, incest or when the life of the mother is at risk. But he said he'd be willing to go along with Bush's position, which allows for such exceptions.

And adopting Bush's line on the divisive issue, he said he could accept other views on abortion within the Republican party and predicted it would not be a particularly important issue in the fall election against Vice President Al Gore, who supports abortion rights.

On another controversial issue, gun control, he downplayed an unblemished record of opposition to stricter laws — including one banning armor-piercing bullets called "cop killers" and another banning plastic guns that could be smuggled past metal detectors.

Beatles' appearance on 'Sullivan' tops rock list

NEW YORK (AP) — Feb. 9, 1964. A British band from Liverpool takes "The Ed Sullivan Show" stage and sends waves of teen-agers into screaming convulsions across America, bewildering millions of parents.

What's rock 'n' roll's biggest TV moment?

A new top 100 list from VH1 and Entertainment Weekly magazine says that was it — the day Beatlemania hit the States and stayed.

The Beatles' U.S. debut even topped the 1968 comeback of the King.

An estimated 73 million people were watching that night in '64 — about three times the audience of an episode of this summer's TV blockbuster "Survivor." John Lennon was so nervous he taped song lyrics to the back of his guitar.

As Ringo Starr explained, the band didn't realize until it arrived in America how important Sullivan's Sunday night showcase was.

For a generation of rock 'n' rollers, it was the moment they knew they wanted to be stars. "I remember thinking, 'this can be done. I can do that,'" singer Billy Joel said.

Elvis Presley's comeback special four years later, his return to television after years top 10 included Michael Jackson's first moonwalk on the 1983 "Motown 25" special, the Live Aid telecast in 1985, Madonna's "Like a Virgin" performance on the 1984 MTV Video Music Awards, and The Who's appearance on "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" in 1967.

The most bizarre selection: No. 17, the man who crashed Bob Dylan's 1998 Grammy Awards performance with "Soy Bomb" written on his bare chest.

The most recent: Ricky Martin's performance at the 1999 Grammy Awards, one of 28 events from the 1990s.

The list also includes three performances of the national anthem: by Marvin Gaye at the 1982 NBA All-Star Game in Detroit, by Whitney Houston at the 1991 Super Bowl, and by a crotch-grabbing Roseanne at a 1990 San Diego Padres game.

The Beatles made the list seven times, Madonna and Michael Jackson are each on it five times.

VH1 plans to air selections from the list in a series of five one-hour specials on VH1 starting July 31.

Investigators try to find why SST crashed

News digest

GONESSE, France — With the Concorde fleet grounded, French investigators combed through the blackened remains Wednesday of an Air France flight seeking clues to what caused the supersonic jet to catch fire during takeoff and smash into a hotel.

French experts also were examining the charred bodies of the 113 victims, mainly German tourists, to determine their identities, as relatives flew into Paris. A prayer service for the victims also was to be held Wednesday at a chapel in Hanover, Germany, on the grounds of the World's Fair.

Air France said the crash of flight AF4590 on Tuesday appeared to have been caused by a fire in one of the engines at the moment of takeoff, and investigators were trying to determine what started the fire. Experts said possible causes included birds flying into the air intake to mechanical failure.

Early Wednesday, the Ministry of Transportation said the plane's two black boxes — the flight recorder and cockpit voice recorder — were damaged during the crash but had been found.

All Concorde flights were grounded Wednesday to give Air France time to check its remaining supersonic jets. British Airways canceled its two Tuesday night Concorde flights from London to New York and New York to London.

Until Tuesday, the Concorde had a perfect safety record during 31 years of service since it was developed by Britain and France in the 1960s, and the crash was a blow to French pride.

At least one of the two left-side engines was on fire as the plane took off at 4:44 p.m. from Charles de Gaulle airport carrying 100 passengers and 9 crew members, witnesses said. As the jet struggled to gain height, witnesses saw a plume of flame trailing 60 yards behind it.

Israel, Palestinians face new decisions

THURMONT, Md. — The collapse of the Camp David summit leaves Israel and the Palestinians facing a round of tough new decisions about when — or whether — to return to the bargaining table.

For President Clinton, the failure of the make-or-break summit leaves him with the clock running out on his time in office and a disappointingly diminished chance of leaving a Mideast peace legacy.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak, meanwhile, faces renewed political infighting at home and a drive by his right-wing opponents to force early elections — a move that could put peacemaking on the back burner for months.

And Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat was heading into consultations with other Arab leaders, trying to forge a consensus on whether Palestinians should consider accepting some form of control in Arab neighborhoods of east Jerusalem. That is more than Israel has ever offered before, but falls short of Palestinians' long-standing sovereignty demands.

After a two-week summit punctuated by moments of high drama, repeated walkout threats by both sides and a premature U.S. declaration last week that the summit was dead and finished, its final ending was both sudden and somber.

"They couldn't get there; that's the truth," Clinton said simply, announcing that the two sides could not come to terms.

The chief cause of the breakdown, all sides said, was Jerusalem, which both Israel and the Palestinians claim as their capital.

Russians deploy space station module

KOROLYOV, Russia — Opening what exultant space officials called a new era in space, the long-delayed international space station linked up smoothly Wednesday with the Russian-made Zvezda control module.

The crucial module will allow the first crew to start living and working in the station this autumn. It also will provide steering controls, as well as adjusting the station's orbit and distributing electricity.

Russian space officials, including several cosmonauts, anxiously monitored the automatic docking on a large screen at Mission Control in Korolyov, just outside Moscow. Applause rippled through the hall once the linkup was achieved at 4:45 a.m., and beaming technicians shook hands all around and gave each other thumbs-up signs.

"Speaking from the NASA side, this is an astonishing achievement, something we've been waiting for quite some time," said Robert Castle, a NASA liaison at Russian Mission Control. "This is the beginning of a new era in space."

The international space station is running two years behind schedule, and already has gone $3 billion over budget because of problems on the Russian side that raised questions about Moscow's reliability as a partner. Zvezda was the first module to be built solely by the Russians.

Russian space officials tried to put that all behind them on Wednesday.

"I want to wish you all that we will see such events happen again without any more delays," said Yuri Semyonov, head of the state RKK Energiya company, which built the module.

Violence

more likely to view violence as an effective way of settling conflicts. Children exposed to violence are more likely to assume that acts of violence are acceptable behavior," it said.

"Viewing violence can lead to emotional desensitization toward violence in real life. It can decrease the likelihood that one will take action on behalf of a victim when violence occurs."

"Viewing violence may lead to real-life violence. Children exposed to violent programming at a young age have a higher tendency for violent and aggressive behavior later in life than children who are not so exposed."

Brownback said he hopes the statement will convince lawmakers that something has to be done about media violence. And, "I hope parents will look at this and say that they're going to have to police their children's entertainment violence content the same way they police what their children eat and other health issues."

One entertainment violence monitoring group, The Lion & Lamb Project in nearby Bethesda, Md., cheered the statement.

"Right now, the message we're sending children in the media is that violence is OK ... that it's part of life and sometimes it's even funny," executive director Daphne White said. "We're even using violence for humor now."

Jeff Bobeck, a spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters, said television now has V-chips and a rating system to help parents take control of what their children watch. "We think more parents need to control their remote control," Bobeck said.

collection system and monitoring well would have exceeded $400,000.

After closing the landfill, the city began hauling its solid waste to a commercial landfill at Canyon. City officials estimate about $205,000 per year is saved by hauling the waste to Canyon.

However, the TNRC has eased the rules regarding landfills in arid areas, which would allow a city to operate a Type I arid-exempt (AE) landfill in addition to other landfills that aren't required to comply with all of the more stringent regulations governing the non-exempt landfills.

The Type IAE landfill doesn't require the leachate collection, groundwater monitoring, methane gas monitoring and ply or insitu liner, which would mean a significant reduction in the cost of operating a landfill.

The permit process could take six months to two years, depending on complications associated with geotechnical surveys and/or protests from adjacent property owners.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
 Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then remember these hints:
 • Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of
 • Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 • Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach

Collapse of Mideast parley turns out to be a near miss for Clinton

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press Writer

For nearly eight years, President Clinton has tried to forge peace out of some of the world's most intractable conflicts, from the Middle East to Northern Ireland and the Balkans. With less than six months left in office, Clinton has little to show but partial victories — no crowning peacemaking legacy.

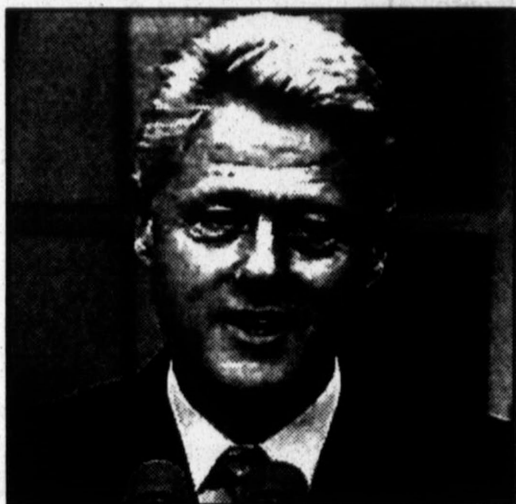

Tuesday's collapse of delicate peace talks between Israel and the Palestinians represents the latest, and probably the bitterest, near miss. It is an achievement to have brought both sides to Camp David at all, better yet to keep them talking for two weeks, but ultimately a failure to walk away without a deal.

"I'm not trying to put a funny gloss on this," an exhausted Clinton said at the end Tuesday. "They couldn't get there. That's the truth. They couldn't get there."

He went on to say the talks position Israel and the Palestinians to finally "get there" and end a half-century of war and hostility. But his disappointment was plain.

Lasting peace between Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland may be closer at hand, but the joint government envisioned with soaring hopes after the 1998 Good Friday Accords faltered this year, and new peace efforts are on a slower track.

The United States helped broker or bomb an end to ethnic bloodshed and reprisals in Bosnia and Kosovo, and

PRESIDENT CLINTON

"I'm not trying to put a funny gloss on this. They couldn't get there. That's the truth. They couldn't get there."

Clinton counts American involvement in the Balkans as a success. But five years after the Dayton peace accords ended the Bosnia conflict, the nominally multiethnic nation is still under U.S. peacekeepers' guard. In Kosovo, a fresher wound, the year-old peace is testy and uneven. U.S. peacekeepers are there too, although in much smaller numbers than in Bosnia.

Haiti, another trouble spot, still is plagued by corruption, violence and poverty despite the commitment of 20,000 American troops and billions of dollars.

"I'd give him very high marks for his work on Ireland and Middle East peace. Not quite a Nobel Prize, but certainly an A+ for effort," said Jonathan Paris, a fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York. Paris gives Clinton an overall B for his management of Balkans crises.

Clinton persistently nudged the Palestinians and Israelis, from the historic Oslo peace accords, shepherded by Norway in 1993, his first year in office, through 1998 peace talks at Wye River, Md., and Camp David.

He was less successful with Syria's late president Hafez Assad.

Clinton helped get Israeli-Syrian peace talks restarted after a four-year lull last year, but the discussions at Shepherdstown, W.Va., produced little. Clinton made a special detour at the close of a foreign trip this spring to meet face to face with the ailing Assad, but again came away empty-handed.

Assad's son and successor has not yet reached out to the United States for peacemaking help.

The low moment of Clinton's foreign interventions was probably in Somalia during Clinton's first term when he converted an ongoing famine-relief operation into a peacekeeping effort that ended in death or humiliation of U.S. troops. The White House learned then that peace is only possible with willing, politically stable partners, current and former administration officials said.

Presidents from Theodore Roosevelt to Ronald Reagan have looked for foreign policy achievements as they near the end of their terms and begin to weigh their places in history.

Clinton began this final year especially eager for a foreign policy victory — after losing a Senate battle for a nuclear test ban treaty, and the cold shoulder his trade agenda received at the chaotic World Trade Organization meeting in Seattle last year.

A pragmatist, Clinton likely realizes he has far less chance now of winning a Middle East peace deal before his year is out, although aides expect him to try. He may go to Ireland to put a personal imprimatur on the tenuous peace there. And he has said he would like to visit Vietnam, where he has sent the first U.S. ambassador since the Vietnam War.

"People that are mired in conflict, whether that is ethnic or religious or tribal or other, will fall further behind" in the new global economy, said P.J. Crowley, spokesman for the White House National Security Council. "That's why the president feels so earnestly about resolving conflicts that have plagued various parts of the world."

Any future peace brokered between Israel and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat will build on Clinton's work, but that payoff may come long after Clinton has left office, said Gideon Rose, a former Clinton foreign policy aide.

"Sometimes it's unfair to judge foreign policy efforts solely by their results," Rose said. "At best you can help history along on the margins."

Cohen: 'Star Wars' not likely by 2005

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may no longer be realistic to expect the Pentagon to build a sufficiently reliable system of national missile defense by 2005, Defense Secretary William Cohen told a Senate panel.

In testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee on Tuesday, Cohen said two consecutive failures to shoot down a mock warhead in space with a land-based interceptor have raised doubts about the timetable.

"Perhaps it has called into question the realism of the date," Cohen said, noting that this was the view of retired Gen. Larry Welch, head of a panel that is advising the Pentagon on its national missile defense project.

Cohen repeatedly stressed, however, that both he and Welch believe the 2005 target date is "the date we ought to continue to focus on."

Cohen is due to make a recommendation to President Clinton — probably in mid-August — on whether to proceed toward a system of 20 missile interceptors and a new high-powered X-band radar ready by 2005.

It is possible that Cohen would recommend moving the start-up date to 2006 or later. He gave no indication in his Senate testimony that he thinks this is necessary, although he pointedly left open that possibility by conceding under questioning that testing thus far has failed to show the system is technically feasible.

The 2005 date is important because, according to U.S. intelligence estimates, by then North Korea could have a missile capable of reaching the United States. The Pentagon says it would take at least five years to complete an anti-missile shield capable of defending all 50 states.

If Clinton does not give the go-ahead this fall to begin groundbreaking work next year at the X-band radar site on Shemya Island, Alaska, the entire project will be set back by at least one year, Cohen said.

WILDFIRE

■ Firefighters receive some much-needed aid from the weather

MESA VERDE NATIONAL PARK, Colo. (AP) — Crews struggling to control a fire that has burned one-third of this sprawling national park headed back to work Wednesday after some much-needed help from the weather.

Favorable winds followed by light rain helped slow the 22,600-acre fire to a crawl Tuesday, stalling it in an area damaged by blazes in 1972 and 1996.

"Things are looking good," said Gene Rogers, a fire behavioral analyst.

The fire has burned about 18,600 acres of the park, the nation's largest archaeological preserve. A thunderstorm with wind gusts of up to 35 mph tested lines cut by some 700 firefighters.

"We don't know what held and what didn't," said Mike Lohrey, incident commander. "I've been in fires where it calms down like this and then lo and behold, Mother Nature has her way about things and then it's off and running again."

None of the park's well-known cliff dwellings or museums were damaged, but archaeologists are worried about destruction of other Anasazi dwellings built on mesas or on steep canyon walls.
