Tuesday: Partly cloudy, lows near 20, highs 45 to 50.

Wednesday: Partly cloudy, lows in the mid-20s, highs 50 to 55.

• Hereford weather •

Wednesday's high, 61; low, 24; no precipitation, according to KPAN Radio.

The forecast for Friday shows flurries are likely from New England to Michigan. Lake-effect snow is on tap in those areas downwind of the Great Lakes. Sunshine can be expected from the Southeast to the central Plains. Snow will fall over parts of the northern Plains and Rockies, while the West will remain dry.

• Cold front moves through •

For some Texans, it should be a cool, sunny day. For others, it will be cloudy and rainy.

Skies should clear up in North Texas on Thursday afternoon following a cloudy morning. Temperatures are expected to be in the 50s.

A cold front moved through North Texas early this morning, when temperatures ranged from the 30s to the lower 50s. Light rain fell in parts of the region.

No rain is forecast for West Texas today. The region is expected to be a mixture of cloudy and sunny, with temperatures mostly in the mid-40s to lower 50s.

Skies were mostly clear over West Texas and the Panhandle early this morning. Temperatures ranged from the upper 20s to the 50s in the region.

Morning showers are expected today in Southeast Texas and the upper coast, and widely scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected to hit deep South Texas. Some rain may also fall in other parts of South Texas, where temperatures are expected to range from the 60s to the lower 80s.

Flower Sisters - Rose and Daisy, portrayed by Vondell Plummer (left) and Jerre Clark, are two of the three Flower Sisters in the melodrama "Showdown on the Showboat, or Don't Throw Your Garbage in the River." The play will be performed at 7 tonight and again at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Senior Citizens Center in conjunction with the annual Festival of Trees. Tickets for the Saturday dinner theater are $15. Reservations are required. Call the Senior Center at 364-5681.

■ Lawmakers, entrepreneurs to participate in forum at college

AMARILLO — Honor students at Amarillo College will sponsor a water forum at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Concert Hall Theater on the Washington Street campus.

The forum's panelists include T. Boone Pickens, chief executive officer of Mesa Water Inc.; State Sen. Teel Bivins; State Reps. David Swinford and Gary Walker; Dr. Ronald Kaiser, professor of the Institute of Renewable Resources at Texas A&M University; Jarrett Atkinson, local government services director for the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission; and Tommy Knowles, executive director of the Texas Water Development Board. Amarillo attorney Steve Hoard will moderate the discussion.

The audience will include AC students, Texas Panhandle elected officials, agricultural producers, ranchers, attorneys, city managers and representatives of state agencies, economic development agencies, chambers of commerce and water districts.

■ Pickens' plan to sell Panhandle water draws fire

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A former corporate raider's plan to sell Texas Panhandle groundwater to other Texas cities will leave the area an "uninhabitable desert," an Oklahoman said Wednesday.

Oilman T. Boone Pickens outlined his proposal in "Gold on Tap: Water in the 21st Century," a keynote speech at the 21st Annual Governor's

Johnson gets students' attention

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Health topics generally studied by sixth-grade students usually fall under the category of b-o-r-i-n-g. Students read or do a handout, but there is really very little to draw or catch their attention.

Students at Shirley Elementary School got just a little bit of a different glimpse of a previously studied health topic, the respiratory system, when a Texas A&M University professor brought some "real" items relating to the respiratory system.

Dr. Larry Johnson of the Center for Environmental and Rural Health came to class toting a wide array of attention-getting breathing related displays.

"Everything we have here is real," Johnson said, holding out a sheep's rib cage and a horse's nose. "The specimens have been embalmed, frozen, cut in half. All the fat and water have been removed and replaced with plastic."

As interesting as the specimens were, they were only of secondary importance compared to the message Johnson brought to the students — the need to increase overall academic performance and stimulate an interest in science in students ages 11-14.

Johnson is working under the guides of a seven-year, $2.5 million federal research grant aimed at capturing the attention of fifth-, sixth- and seventh-grade students and getting them interested in various scientific fields.

"We're targeting the rural area schools," Johnson said. "Mainly because rural schools are in the greatest need of scientific programs and are the least likely to have access to it."

Shirley students became a part of Johnson's project after he sent letters to 561 rural teachers throughout the south west. Less than 60 teachers responded to the letter, among those were the sixth grade teachers at Shirley.

Last year, Johnson reached nearly 1,300 students with his program and this year he hopes to reach more than 5,000.

He introduces his program to students as a "discussion about the respiratory system and a little about smoking." The students have already studied the respiratory system and don't seem to be too intrigued, until Johnson begins showing off some of his display items.

An old-fashioned slide projector, in a slightly darkened room is almost as exciting as the typical health topics they've already studied.

Then comes the preserved dog, cut lengthwise, showing all the organs, bones, muscles and openings.

To really grab their attention, Johnson picks up a plastic bag with lumpy black objects surrounding a large white mass.

"This," he says, "is a real pig's lung, with a tumor in the middle." From the oohs and aahs of the audience, Johnson knows he now has their fullest attention.

Johnson's expertise is in veterinary anatomy and public health, which he uses as a basis for his presentation. In the process though, he brings in other aspects and fields of science as a means of getting students interested in scientific fields.

Many of the students get some hands-on experience when he hands out plastic gloves and lets them feel a pig's lungs which have been specially preserved so they can be inflated with a foot pump. When inflated, the students can feel the lumps and clods which have been caused by carbon introduced into the lungs.

"This is very much like what a smoker's lungs are like," Johnson told the students.

Student evaluations will help Johnson and his team adjust the program, so that new curricula can be more appealing to the students.

The Associated Press

Al Gore said Thursday that George W. Bush's rejection of his recount overture raises questions about whether a fair election is going to be "short-circuited," but pledged to work for reconciliation when a president is chosen. That choice, said Bush, must come soon.

Gore, a surprise guest on a radio talk show, said the choice in the impasse "is whether the voters are going to decide this election or whether the process is going to be short-circuited."

Bush and Gore went before the cameras Wednesday night to put their cases to the public.

Republican Bush declared "this process must have a point of conclusion, a moment when America and the world know who is the next president." He rejected Gore's proposal to expand hand-counting in the disputed Florida election.

Speaking by phone on ABC Radio host Tom Joyner's show, Gore held to the calming tone he had struck in his televised statement, when he offered Bush a deal Democrats knew would be turned down.

"However it comes out we're going to come behind the winner," Gore said. "I just want to do my part to try to protect our country and our ability to come together."

The legal battle pressed on, with his supporters asking a federal appeals court Thursday not to intervene in the Florida election dispute.

Bush's team has turned to that court, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, to try to stop the hand counting of ballots in four Democratic-leaning Florida counties. Gore's supporters said in their brief that the case "is simply not appropriate for federal court intervention of any kind at this point in the proceeding."

A supportive Joyner and his co-host tried to draw Gore into talk of a stolen election but the vice president wouldn't bite.

"I would discourage the use of that word because, however it comes out, we're going to come behind the winner," he said, cautioning that there are "high emotions on the other side," too.

Gore offered in his televised statement to go along with a statewide hand recount of Florida's 6 million votes if Bush did not want the outcome settled by recounts in selected Democratic counties.

No deal, said Bush.

"The outcome of this election will not be the result of deals or efforts to mold public opinion," Bush said. Hand recounting "introduces human error and politics into the vote-

• Landfill capacity questioned •

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — A lack of landfill space and a growing volume of trash will force Mexico and the United States to increase recycling efforts, environmental officials from both sides of the border said.

The comments came at the opening of Border Recycles Day in McAllen on Wednesday.

The number of landfills in McAllen has dipped from nine to four in the past decade as the dumps either reached capacity or owners decided not to upgrade to meet more stringent government regulations. It is not known how many landfills operate in northern Mexico.

"We have only 11 1/2 years of fill capacity left at some of the (Hidalgo County) landfills," said Elvira Alonzo, manager of McAllen's recycling center. "And we're growing at the rate of 16 homes a month in McAllen."

Officials from Reynosa and McAllen said they are concerned about landfill capacity because of the tremendous growth on both sides of the border. The Monitor of McAllen reported in Thursday's editions that while the McAllen area is the third-fastest growing in the United States, Reynosa is the fastest growing metropolitan area in the Mexican border state of Tamaulipas.

• Councilman revises disclosure •

HOUSTON (AP) — A city councilman has again revised his annual disclosure to reduce the amount an anonymous donor gave to pay for his daughter's private school tuition, adding that he still doesn't know who gave it.

Councilman Orlando Sanchez Tuesday said the unknown donor paid $2,000 toward his daughter's $8,165 tuition, the Houston Chronicle reported Thursday. The remainder of his daughter's tuition is being paid by him and his wife, Sanchez said.

Last week, Sanchez reduced the donation to between $1,000 to $10,000 from between $10,000 to $50,000.

Included with his latest revision was a letter to the city's Ethics Commission, which is probing the gift, in which he called the gift a scholarship.

"I have been made aware that my daughter is the recipient of a scholarship at her school. Although I have inquired through the school regarding the identity of the donor, I was told that the donor's name is anonymous; the donation was intended for the sole benefit of my daughter, not me or her mother," Sanchez wrote.

That breathing thing

A deep breathe and blow — Dr. Larry Johnson, a professor at Texas A&M University in College Station, visited with Shirley sixth grade students Wednesday to discuss the respiratory system. Using the student audience, Johnson demonstrated various tools used in diagnosing diseases and problems of the human respiratory system. Kristina Coronada demonstrated exactly how much air her lungs could hold. Her deep breathe registered nearly three liters. A classmate registered only one liter.

DNA leads Bush to pardon parolee

HOUSTON (AP) — It's been three years since Anthony Robinson was paroled after serving 10 years of a 27-year sentence for an alleged rape. And he never even committed the crime.

It wasn't until earlier this week that Robinson's name was officially cleared, when Governor George W. Bush pardoned him after a DNA test.

Robinson scraped up the $1,800 for the test after his parole by working a variety of odd and temporary jobs. After that test, the state quickly scheduled its own test to confirm the results.

"I did just about anything that could give me enough money so I could feed myself and save for the DNA testing," Robinson, 39, told the Houston Chronicle.

Now, the college graduate and former Army officer is free to pursue a career that his background qualifies him for. He's now working as a clerk for a local oil field supply company.

Robinson said he avoided seeking higher-paying positions after parole because of the potential extensive background checks that would identify him as a convicted sex offender.

"I spared myself the embarrassment and the exposure of trying to go for a big job," he said. "I just wanted something that would let me save the money."

Randy Schaffer, Robinson's attorney, said others in his situation have it even worse. "You have to give a guy like that a lot of credit," Schaffer said. "For 13 years, he fought the case and finally was exonerated."

Robinson was convicted of the 1986 sexual assault of a University of Houston student. That was two years before DNA testing was admitted as evidence in Harris County courts.

Robinson said he offered University of Houston police a blood sample and other evidence, but they didn't accept.

He said that when he was arrested, he matched the victim's description of the rapist — a black man wearing a plaid shirt or jacket — except for one detail: Robinson didn't have a mustache.

"The company I worked for had a policy about no facial hair," he said.

Robinson's pardon re-opens the case at the university, but spokesman Mike Cinelli said the campus police will have to decide whether they can investigate it again.

Meanwhile, Robinson said he holds no bitterness toward the woman whose testimony put him in prison.

"This woman was relying on them to protect her and avenge her for this rape," he said. "I feel badly for her."

The Texas Legislature, which meets for its next session in January, is expected to consider bills that would guarantee the right to use DNA evidence to prove innocence.

Officials consider settling roadside memorial battle

TYLER, Texas (AP) — State highway officials will consider settling a statewide battle over state-sanctioned roadside memorials for drunk driving victims and the makeshift memorials made by the families of other kinds of automobile accidents.

The Texas Transportation Commission will meet in Austin to discuss whether the state should placate the families of non-alcohol-related accident victims, who have been told their roadside crosses must be taken down, by charging the families $100 for uniform, state-approved markers to be placed temporarily at fatal accident sites.

Officials from the Texas Department of Transportation have said the families' roadside memorials aren't permitted because of a state program to highlight traffic deaths that are caused by alcohol.

Plans for the memorials, are rectangular signs with white letters on a blue background bordered by small white stars. The signs would read "In memory of" and include the person's name and date of death.

Crosses are being avoided to keep separation of church and state.

JROTC is topic of DAR program

Joe D. Rogers was guest speaker at the recent meeting of Los Ciboleros Chapter NSDAR held in the home of Juanita Brown.

Rogers gave a brief history of the work which has been done to obtain a Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps at Hereford High School. The procedure was begun with a belief that an ROTC program would be beneficial to non-traditional students.

Rogers stated that school officials believe that involved students are successful students and that three benefits of an ROTC program are that it reduces absences and drop-outs among participants, offers post-graduate opportunities and provides positive student leadership.

After almost two years of completing paperwork and making necessary contacts, a site survey was conducted of the Hereford campus on April 18, 2000, and on April 28 it was approved by the board.

Hereford has been put on a waiting list and as soon as an opening is available, a Junior Marine Corps Reserve Officer Training Corps cadre will begin on the high school campus.

Regent Patricia Robinson presided over the opening ritual and business meeting.

A nominating committee consisting of Ruth Knox, Helen Rose and Mary Williamson was named to recommend names for a new slate of officers.

The next meeting will be Dec. 14.

Refreshments were served by hostesses Brown and Charlotte Clark to Lois Gilliland, Margaret Bell, Linda Knowles, Pat Smart, Jean Beene, Robinson, Knox, Rose and Williamson.

On Veterans Day, Nov. 11 the Los Ciboleros Chapter, with the assistance of American Legion Post 192 and Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4818, held a memorial service in the Circle of Flags in Veterans Park.

Special tribute was paid to Korean Veterans since the 50th anniversary of the Korean War is currently being observed.

Korean veterans in attendance were Pete Jacks, Dick Montgomery, Robert Murray, John C. Robinson, Bill Acton, Bill Walden, L.J. Clark and Mel Charest.

The roll of soldiers who were killed during the Korean War from Deaf Smith County and surrounding areas was read by Jess Robinson. The list included John C. Airhart, Dawn; Roger Hartman, Gerald S. Shirley and Allen Lynnwood Hallum, all of

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing about the woman from "Lake Worth, Fla.," whose daughter-in-law no longer speaks to her and cut her off from the grandchildren after they had a terrible argument two years ago. You said the daughter-in-law should find it in her heart to forgive the woman, or she would regret it later. Don't bet the farm, Annie.

I am sad to report that I identified with the drastic actions of the daughter-in-law. When I married, I hoped to have a happy, close relationship with my husband's parents, based on mutual respect. Instead, I have endured unbelievable verbal and emotional abuse and have been treated like a second-class citizen, even in my own home. My in-laws took over our wedding, tried to choose the names for our children, and insisted on telling us where to spend holidays and vacations. They did not like my parents and made no secret of it.

My husband and I moved away because they were damaging our marriage. We still visit, but not often. Their behavior put a strain on our marriage, and it simply was not worth it. Any argument where someone winds up not speaking for two years indicates serious, long-term trouble. In-laws should remember that it is in their own best interest to develop a good relationship with their son's wife, especially when grandchildren are involved. After 11 years, it would not bother me one bit if I never saw my in-laws again.

Fed Up in South Carolina: Your description of The In-Laws From Hell was depressing. The sad part of in-law battles is that they end up with one set of parents estranged from the grandchildren. Everybody loses. Here's more on the subject:

From Ft. Worth, Texas: That letter could have been written by my mother. She and my sister-in-law haven't spoken for 20 years. I love Mom dearly, but she can be very manipulative. She comes across as sympathetic and innocent, but she is a chronic liar and a gossip. The woman has had problems with everyone in the family. After 15 years of marriage, my sister-in-law "divorced" my mother, and I don't blame her. There are two sides to every story, Ann.

Lafayette, La.: That daughter-in-law is behaving childish. My mother went through a similar situation, and it was devastating. Not only is this daughter-in-law hurting her husband's mother, she is also hurting her children. How terrible to use the children to get revenge on the grandparents. Even if she doesn't want to see her in-laws, she should make sure the kids visit. What is this daughter-in-law teaching her own children about forgiveness? How sad.

Andover, Mass.: A parent's responsibility is to expose their children to healthy relationships, not toxic ones just because they happen to be related. My mother and sisters are like an aggressive wolfpack. They need to control everything and are critical and mean to my wife. I have gotten counseling and read dozens of books. I even offered to pay for joint counseling, but my mother refuses. She sees nothing wrong with her behavior. I used your test, "Are you better off with them or without them?" and decided I am a lot happier without them, and believe me, Ann, that decision was good for my health.

Republic of Croatia: Humans make mistakes. That mother admitted she was wrong and has tried to apologize. I am shocked by her daughter-in-law's attitude. She is teaching her children it's OK to hate people. Someone should remind her what goes around, comes around, because before long, it will be her turn.

Cultural Extension Education Club members report volunteer hours

The Cultural Extension Education Club members reported a total of 89 volunteers hours when answering roll call at the Nov. 10 meeting held in the Hereford Community Center.

President Perry Keyes presided at the business meeting. Virginia Sumner read "What Is Love?" as the opening exercise.

Members were reminded of the Westway bazaar and urged to attend the Nov. 16 Christmas party to be hosted by the Wyche Club. County Extension Agent Beverly Harder will present the program.

Those attending voted to give gifts again this year to the Community Service Project. Gifts will be for ladies only and left unwrapped so as to be checked for suitability.

Summer was nominated as Cultural Club's choice for "Woman of the Year." She is a 49-year club member.

Attending the meeting were Marilyn Smith, Edna Marnell, Nell Pope, Keyes and Sumner.

'Christmas Shared 2000' program was presented to Westway Club by Harder

At the regular meeting of the Westway Extension Education Club Friday, a program titled "Christmas Shared 2000" was presented by County Extension Agent Beverly Harder.

She shared entertaining and good food ideas and emphasized that each person learns from another all through their life.

President Carolyn Evers presided at the business meeting. Grace Covington gave the Council report. Committee plans for Extension Education Council for 2001 were reviewed. The Westway Christmas bazaar was discussed, with final plans being made. Rosie Valdez gave the treasurer's report.

Hostess Evers served pumpkin pie, spiced tea and hot chocolate to members Helen Brown, Bonnie Duke, Covington and Valdez.

Method demonstration — Deaf Smith County 4-H'ers Cindy and Katie Marnell educated the Trailblazers 4-H Club with information on avoiding rattlesnake bites and how to seek emergency help with appropriate first aid techniques when they presented their 2000 method demonstration on "Don't Get Rattled." The Trailblazers 4-H Club focuses on learning about nature and wildlife with leaders Jim Steiert and Julie and Michael Carlson. ## ALL-DISTRICT PLAYERS

■ Four volleyball players make All-District list while Isaacson and Cosby get recognized for tennis

Hereford High's Regional Quarterfinal champion Lady Whitefaces had two players named to the first team District 3-4A.

Junior middle blocker Michelle Bernhardt and sophomore outside hitter Sarah Griffin were both named to the first team 3-4A All-District list.

Senior outside hitter Pam Klein and junior middle blocker Kali Hall each made the second team All-District short list.

Girls athletic director and head volleyball coach Brenda Kitten also received Coach of the Year honors from District 3-4A after leading the Lady Whitefaces to a 30-6 record while going 14-0 in playoff action. Along with coach Kitten, Canyon Randall coach Shelly Williams was also named Coach of the Year.

In Whitefaces tennis, seniors Ivory Isaacson and Clay Cosby were named to the second team All-District list for their efforts in mixed doubles.

Leach gets another year

■ Tech head coach gets one more year added to five year deal

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech reportedly has awarded head football coach Mike Leach a one-year extension on his five-year contract.

The university will announce the extension at a 10:30 a.m. news conference on Thursday, the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal and The Dallas Morning News reported in their Thursday editions.

Tech Chancellor John Montford declined comment on Wednesday. However, Leach told The News that he learned of the extension on Wednesday.

"It's great news," he told the newspaper. "It just reaffirms the commitment the school has to me and to building a great program."

Leach originally signed a five-year deal in December 1999 for $550,000 in annual salary, including a base salary of $250,000. The newspaper reported the new agreement reached Wednesday extended that package by one year.

Leach, who was offensive coordinator at Oklahoma last season, was hired to succeed long-time Red Raiders coach Spike Dykes.

Since then, Tech has compiled a 7-4 overall record and a 3-4 mark in Big 12 play. The Red Raiders currently rank fourth in the Big 12 South.

Suns roast Dallas, 99-78

■ Marion scores 19 against Mavericks

PHOENIX (AP) — Just how good can Shawn Marion be?

"The sky's the limit," Phoenix coach Scott Skiles said.

Considering the way the 6-foot-7 second-year forward can jump, even the sky will have trouble containing him.

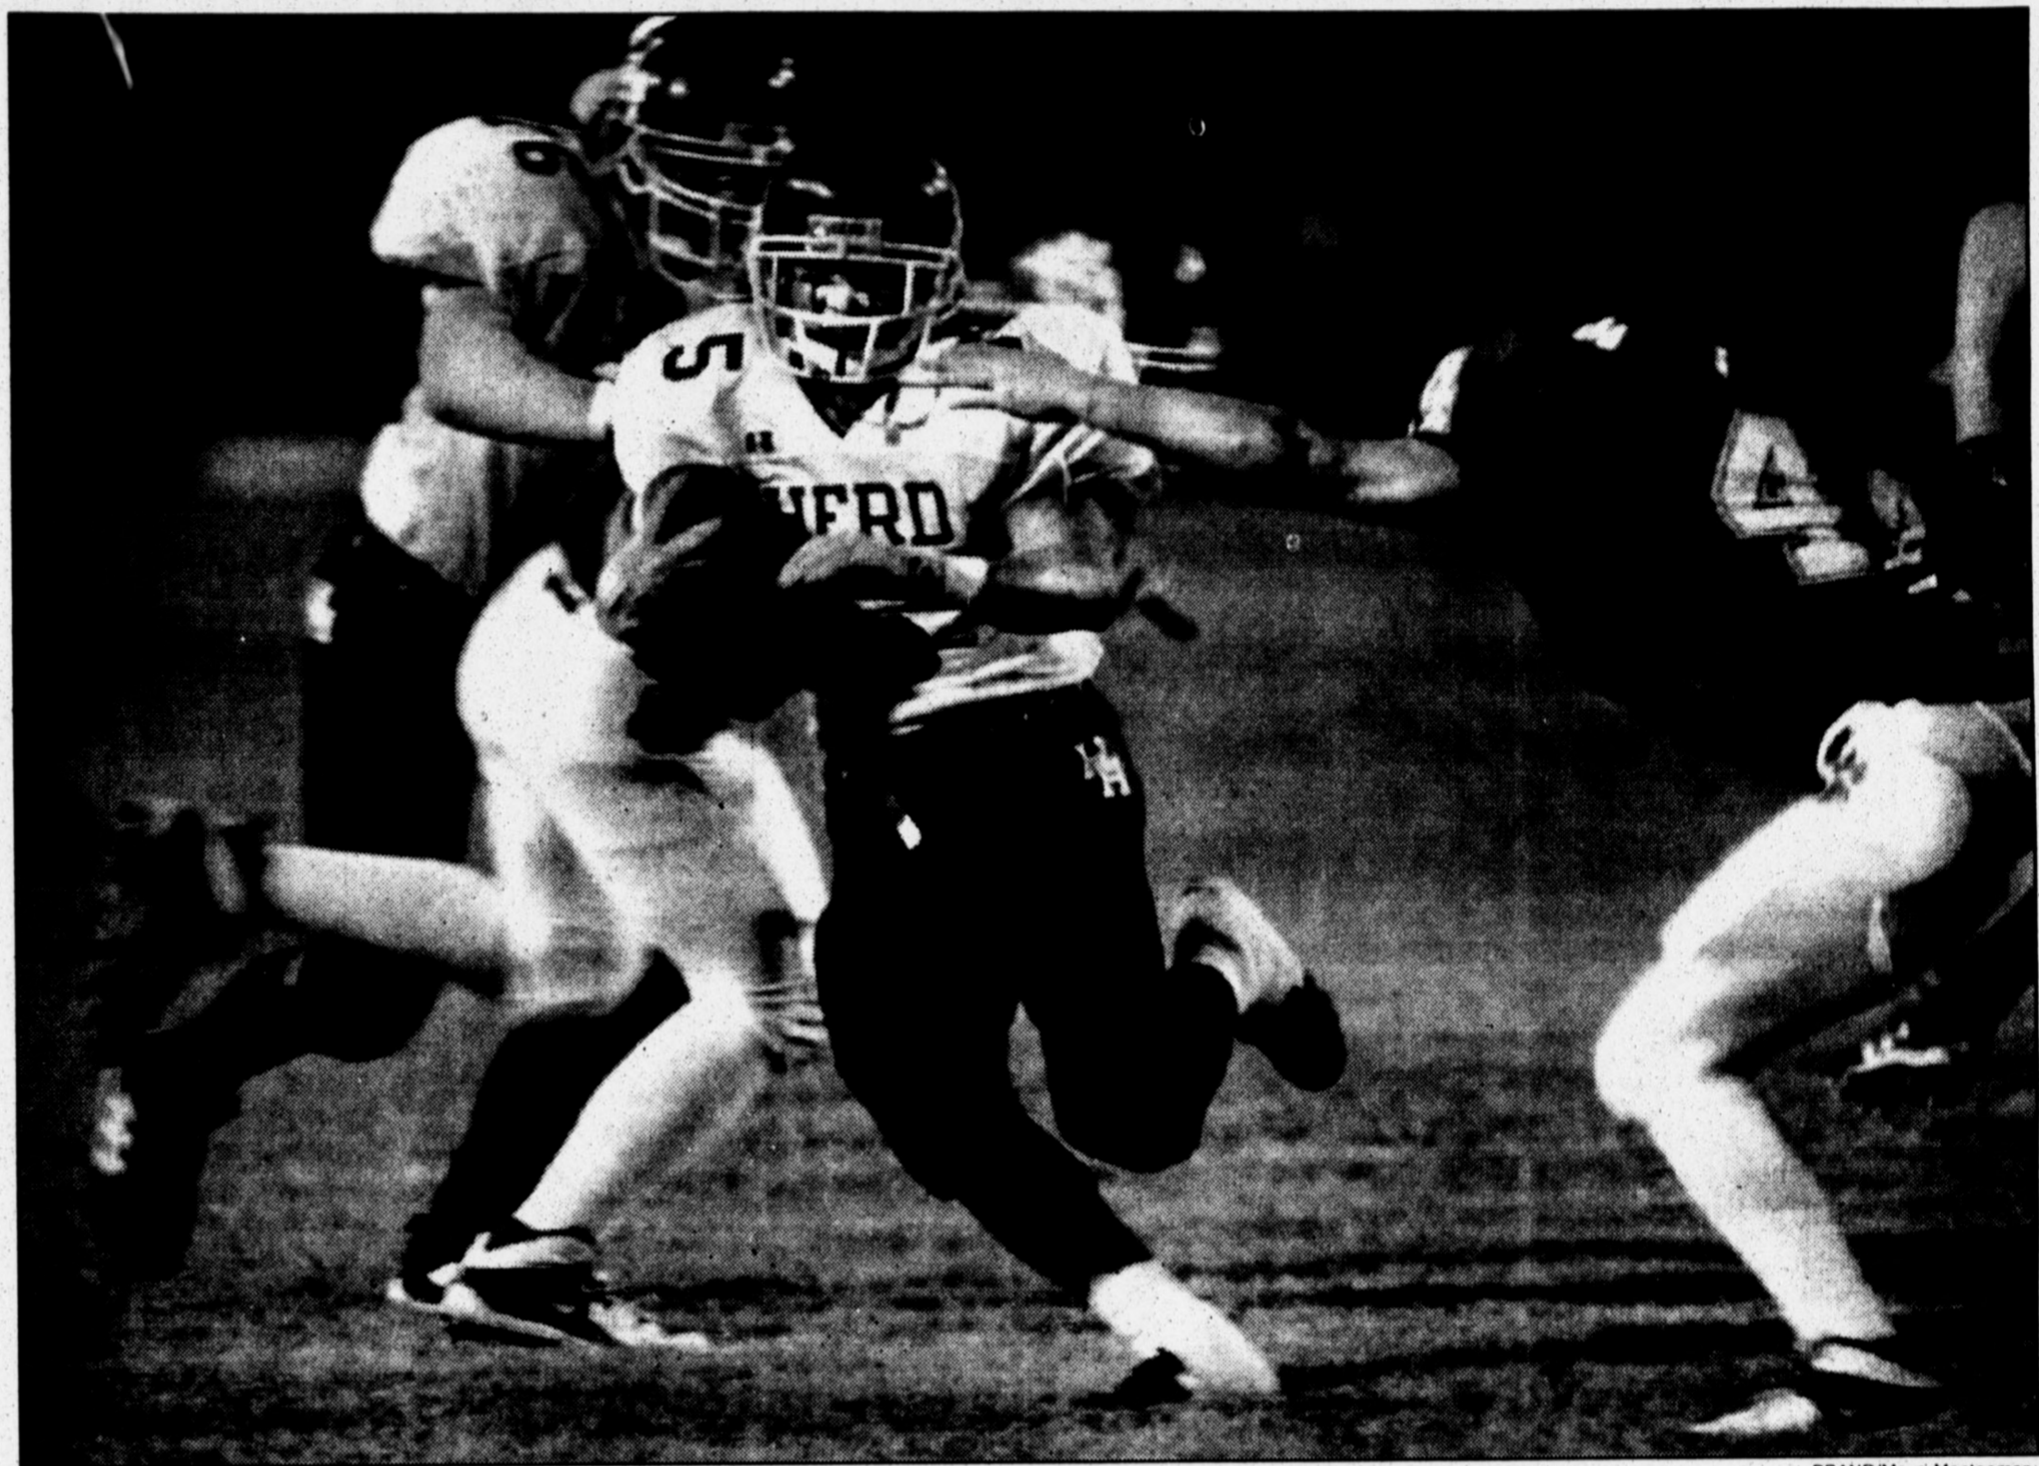

Marion had 19 points, a career-high 19 rebounds, five blocked shots and four steals Wednesday night as the Suns, off to their second-best start ever, won their seventh in a row, 99-78 over the Dallas Mavericks.

"Right now he's the best small forward in the West," the Suns' Mario Elie said. "Right now he's an All-Star to me."

The Suns' 7-1 start is their best since they began the 1980-81 season 11-1.

Rodney Rogers scored 19 for Phoenix. Jason Kidd had 15 points and nine assists despite foul trouble. Tony Delk added 17 points and Cliff Robinson 10.

Running game—Hereford senior tailback Ramiro Zambrano takes the ball upfield against Wolfforth Frenship (8-2, 6-1) on Sept. 22. Zambrano rushed for 98 yards against the Tigers in the Whitefaces' (9-1, 7-0) 48-28 win that occurred in the third week of the 2000 season.

Tiger tales

■ The Hereford Whitefaces will attempt to add another successful chapter to their 2000 season when they face Wolfforth Frenship Saturday in Canyon

By Jeff Blackmon

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

It is not that often when two top 10 Class 4A teams meet in the first round of the Texas State football playoffs.

That is exactly what will occur Saturday at 1 p.m. when District 4-4A co-champion Wolfforth Frenship (8-2, 6-1) and the District 3-4A champion Hereford Whitefaces (9-1, 7-0) clash for the second time this year at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium Saturday beginning at 1 p.m.

Boys athletic director and head football coach Craig Yenzler said he expects the game to be much like their first encounter of the season as the Whitefaces try to catch the Tigers by their tails twice in a season.

"They have been a little bit more conservative in the last couple of weeks but that time is gone," Yenzler said. "Our expectations are going to be to see the full throw and run package."

"I think it is going to be crazy, because we both are going to come out with our offenses wide open," Yenzler said.

Yenzler said that much like Sept. 22 in Frenship, the game will come down to whose defense is better.

"Whoever's defense can slow the offense down and make the fewest mistakes should win," Yenzler said.

Yenzler said the last two games should have given his team, especially the defense, experience and preparation. The coach said facing two tough teams at the end of the regular season (Dumas and Canyon) should help make them ready.

"It certainly has helped us get our feet back under and do all of the things we need to get ready for the playoffs," Yenzler said.

Yenzler said the fans should look forward to seeing a great match up, but he knows it will be tough to

By The Numbers

■ Jorge Rodriguez is Frenship's leading rusher: He has 1,329 yards on 172 carries, with 15 touchdowns.
■ Kendal Briles is Frenship's leading passer: He has completed 93-161 passes for 2,054 yards, with 21 touchdowns and three interceptions.

■ Bryan Moore and David Thomas are Frenship's leading pass receivers: Moore has 34 catches for 545 yards and five touchdowns. Thomas has caught 33 passes for 731 yards and eight touchdowns.

■ Heath Fires is Frenship's leading tackler. He is averaging 16 stops per game. Thomas averages 10.4 tackles per game while Bradley Burns averages 9.4 tackles per game.

■ As a team, Frenship averages 460 yards and 36.5 points per game. It has allowed an average of nearly 330 yards and 24.4 yards per game.

■ Cody Hodges is the Whitefaces' leading passer completing 158 passes for 2,205 yards and tossing 26 touchdowns.

■ Slade Hodges and Geoffrey Marquez are the Herd's leading receivers compiling 1,585 yards and 16 touchdowns this season. S. Hodges has 61 catches for 856 yards and 10 touchdowns while Marquez has caught 51 passes for 729 yards and 6 touchdowns.

■ As a team, the Whitefaces average 403.5 yards per game while allowing 269.8 yards per game.

■ Frenship likes to spread its offense and show a variety of looks, often lining up without a tight end. The multi-talented Briles can run and pass equally well from the multiple sets.

■ Defensively, the Tigers show a four man front most of the time but will offer different looks depending on where the tight end is lined up. Big Spring coach Dwight Butler complained that the Tigers' defenders were holding out during snap counts last week, causing the steers to jump offside nine times.

■ Quarterback Briles has three capable receivers what will demand Hereford's attention. In addition to Moore and Thomas, Patrick Steeby has 16 catches and has averaged 36 yards per grab with 6 touchdowns.

■ Frenship's defense is still nursing a shoulder separation suffered against Hereford High on Sept. 22. Yenzler said he knows that each team will not hold anything back even though they are hurting.

"If you lose you go home," Yenzler said. "I don't expect either of us to hold back."

In recent weeks since their first

The game at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium should give Hereford a little bit of an edge as far as location goes, but Yenzler said he knows each team will bring a ton of fans.

The match up once again is also receiving attention for the potential fireworks between Frenship quarterback Kendal Briles and the Herd's Cody Hodges. The Whitefaces also know their running game will be key especially since it helped them take care of Frenship in September when the Herd rushed for 306 yards.

"Lately in the first half teams have been rushing and stunting us on almost every play wearing out their defensive linemen and linebackers," Yenzler said. "In the second half we open up the running game, because they are tired."

Yenzler said he knows the Whitefaces' offense must be productive against the Tigers' upstart defense.

"It will be interesting to see the way they defense us," Yenzler said. "We need to be smart enough to adjust to what they give us."

One player the Whitefaces should have back is senior noseguard Kris Hammerbeck. Hammerbeck injured his knee against Canyon Randall in October, and Yenzler said they would be glad to have his services available.

Other Hereford injuries for Whiteface players include Hodges' groin pull, senior tailback Ramiro Zambrano's knee problems and the usual wear and tear that comes with playing 10 games, Frenship's Briles is still nursing a shoulder separation suffered against Hereford High on Sept. 22. Yenzler said he knows that each team will not hold anything back even though they are hurting.

"If you lose you go home," Yenzler said. "I don't expect either of us to hold back."

In recent weeks since their first beat the same team twice in a season.

"It is tough to beat a team twice in one season," Yenzler said. "We know each others secrets since we have already played once."

"It comes down to who executes better on the field," Yenzler said.

Steelers sick of apologies

■ NFL officials apologize for the third time this season to Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH (AP) — There's no apologizing for the Pittsburgh Steelers' inability to win close games — except by the NFL, that is.

For the third time this season, the NFL has told coach Bill Cowher that an officiating crew made an incorrect call in a game the Steelers ultimately lost.

Of the Steelers' five losses, four were by three points or less, and all but one involved a key officiating call that erroneously went against them. Two of the plays involved receiver Hines Ward.

"I'm not allowed to talk about the refs, but at the same time, when you get three apologies, you kind of get fed up with it," Ward said Wednesday.

The Steelers (5-5) were told by an unidentified league official that referee Dick Hantak's crew should have penalized Philadelphia for improperly blocking Ward on an inside kick attempt that proved crucial in the Eagles' 26-23 overtime victory Sunday.

With the Steelers leading 23-20 with 21/2 minutes left in the fourth quarter, the Eagles were penalized 5 yards for touching the ball before it traveled the necessary 10 yards.

On the Eagles' second inside kick attempt, from their own 25, Philadelphia's Tim Hauck recovered the ball at the 32 after it was tipped by the Steelers. An inside kick can be recovered by the kicking team inside the 10-yard zone if it is touched by the returning team.

However, the Steelers unsuccessfully argued Ward was blocked by several Eagles inside the 10-yard zone. Under NFL rules, the receiving team cannot be blocked inside that zone and must be given a clear shot at recovering the ball. Outside the zone, the kicking team may attempt to recover it.

"I asked the ref, 'If I step over this line here, I'm in a free area, right?' He said, 'Yeah,' "Ward said. "I thought he was watching the whole time, but when they kicked that ball, I ended up down the field on my back. I felt deep down inside we were going to get that call, but there was no flag."

If the Eagles had been penalized again, the penalty would have been 10 yards, forcing them to kick off from their own 15-yard line.

Cowher blamed the Eagles' inside kick recovery for one of the Steelers' worst losses ever in Three Rivers Stadium. They led by 10 points with about 31/2 minutes remaining, only to allow the Eagles to score on three successive possessions.

After the Eagles recovered the inside kick, they mounted an 11-play drive that resulted in David Akers' tying 42-yard field goal as regulation time expired. After the Eagles won the overtime coin flip, Akers kicked another 42-yarder to win it.

"With everything that was said and done the other day, if we recover that inside kick, the game is over," Cowher said. "That is a fact."

Cowher and special teams coach Jay Hayes talked to league officials Monday and were told the call was missed. However, Cowher would not address specifics of his conversation, and the NFL also said it would not comment.

"I don't think I'm allowed to talk about those things," Cowher said. "(But) after 10 yards, everybody is fair game. Inside that 10-yard area, until the ball goes 10 yards, you are not allowed, when the ball is kicked, to be blocking as a kicking team member."

Earlier this season, the NFL acknowledged the Steelers should have been given more time to attempt a potential game-tying field goal they never got off in their 23-20 loss in Cleveland on Sept. 17. Jerry Seeman, the NFL's senior director of officiating, said the clock was not stopped for the required five seconds after Steelers quarterback Kent Graham was sacked on the game's final play. A week later, the league told the Steelers that referee Walt Coleman was wrong for not reversing a call with instant replay when the officials ruled Ward down at the 1-yard line on an apparent touchdown catch. The Steelers thus lost a timeout they could have used later in the game before Kris Brown missed a 50-yard field-goal attempt on the final play.

Buffalo evens Stars, 2-2

■ Hull saves Dallas with game tying goal with 4:58 remaining to crush Sabres

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Brett Hull frustrated the Buffalo Sabres once again.

Hull's goal with 4:58 remaining pulled Dallas to a 2-2 tie with Buffalo on Wednesday night, stirring memories of the Sabres' loss in the Stanley Cup finals 17 months ago.

It was the Stars' first visit to Buffalo since winning the Cup in the early hours of June 20, 1999.

Hull also played a role in that finish. He scored the decisive "No Goal" that still has Buffalo fans crying foul.

In Game 6 of the finals, Hull scored a disputed goal in the third overtime. While replays showed Hull's left skate in the crease — against the rules at the time — NHL officials allowed the goal, ruling he never lost possession of the puck. Wednesday's game was played before a relatively subdued crowd of 17,106 — 1,500 short of a sellout.

The Stars were jeered when they first took the ice, and a large sign, "STILL NO GOAL," was at one end of the arena.

Hull's goal conjured images of his Cup-clinching score. This time, the result was not quite as drastic. It didn't end the Sabres' season or spoil Buffalo's unbeaten home record, which stands at 7-0-2.

"Yeah, (the goal's) not quite as big, but good for us right now because we've been having a little trouble lately," said Hull, who has a five-game point scoring streak. "It was a great game."

After Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek stopped Jere Lehtinen's shot, the rebound went directly to Hull, who flipped it in off Hasek's pad.

Hasek — who claims the only time he thinks about Hull's previous goal is when people ask him about it — blamed Wednesday's goal on not having his stick at the time.

"I made a mistake," Hasek said. "I tried to freeze the puck and actually, the puck banged off my stick, and I lost the stick. And after I lost my stick, I just couldn't make the save I want to make. I gave the puck exactly on Brett Hull's stick and he was wide open. If I had a stick, it could never be a goal." Hull's score ended a night of frustration. He was stopped by Hasek on three other chances, including a point-blank opportunity five minutes into the third period.

"He's just a great player and he was in the right place at the right time and snuck one in on us," Buffalo's Curtis Brown said of Hull.

match up, Frenship has shown resilience on defense while their potent offense has slowed a bit leading to a loss at Andrews and by barely beating Big Spring for a share of the district crown 25-23. Yenser said the Tigers have played it conservative on film, but he expects the Tigers on Saturday to give it their all.

"I'm sure we will see them throwing out of the shotgun and doing what they do best," Yenser said.

The Whitefaces are 8-5 lifetime against Frenship and look to make it 9-5 lifetime.

Hoops

The news wasn't all good for the Suns. Starting center Chris Dudley sprained his left ankle 31/2 minutes into the game and is expected to be out at least three weeks.

Marion had a series of spectacular plays. The most impressive came late in the third quarter when he soared to catch a half-court pass from Kidd that looked headed out of bounds, then went back up and dunked it.

"I thought he would get his hand on it. I didn't know if he would catch it," Kidd said. "He said he would have dunked it on the catch but he stopped. If he would have done that I would have had to call timeout just to calm down."

Marion also had a breakaway tomahawk stuff in the second quarter.

"I just love playing basketball," he said. "I like going out there and making everybody cheer up, everybody excited. People want to see some fun and exciting basketball, so I give it to them a little bit."

Averaging 19 points and 12 rebounds, Marion is no NBA surprise anymore.

"I know what's going to happen now," Skiles said. "The more attention he gets, the more and more the other coaches are going to be talking about how to neutralize him, and that helps everybody else. We need other guys out there that people are focused in on besides Jason."

Steve Nash scored 19 and Dirk Nowitzki 15 for the Mavericks. Steve Finley, who spent much of the night in foul trouble, was just 3-for-16 from the field for Dallas and scored seven points.

The Suns didn't seem to

Clinton says Vietnam visit is 'new page'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS News digest

BANDAR SERI BEGAWAN, Brunei — President Clinton was flying to Hanoi Thursday night, bearing his promise of "a new page in our relations with Vietnam." He is the third U.S. president to visit Vietnam, and the first since the fall of the South and reunification under Communist rule.

Lyndon B. Johnson went to Vietnam twice as president and Richard M. Nixon once, in 1969. First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton arrived in Hanoi ahead of her husband, flying in today from Israel, where she delivered a eulogy at the funeral of Leah Rabin, widow of former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Quake shakes Pacific near Papua New Guinea
PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea — A huge earthquake shook the Pacific Ocean just off the coast of Papua New Guinea Thursday, generating a tidal wave that crashed ashore and damaged a supermarket and other buildings. There were no immediate reports of injuries, but communications were cut with Rabaul and nearby Kokopo, the two towns in the area of north-east Papua New Guinea where the tsunami hit. Japan's Meteorological Agency said the undersea quake registered 7.8 magnitude and the U.S. Geological Survey put it at 8.0. Quakes that strong can cause widespread damage and heavy casualties in populated areas.

Amtrak picks up speed with Acela Express
WASHINGTON — Amtrak's new 150 mph Acela Express bullet train represents America's most serious effort yet to draw travelers back to the rails. The train enters regular passenger service Dec. 11 between Washington and Boston. If it succeeds as an alternative to crowded highways and congested skies, the snub-nosed train could be a first step toward European-style high-speed train travel elsewhere in the United States. If it fails, however, Acela Express could be the swan song for Amtrak, the federally subsidized railway that is under orders from Congress to become financially self-sufficient by 2003.

Government unleashing flies to combat fire ants
WASHINGTON — The

South's newest weapon against the dreaded fire ant sounds like something out of a sci-fi thriller: An insect whose larvae eat the heads off their prey. The Agriculture Department plans to release hundreds of thousands of tiny ant-eating flies in the South and possibly in California, where the fire ants have now spread. USDA says the gnat-like phorid flies, imported from Brazil, pose no harm to anybody or anything other than fire ants.

"Dr. Seuss' 'Grinch' premieres in London
LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II took in the London premiere Wednesday of "Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas." The charity screening of the film adaptation of the much-loved Dr. Seuss book was also attended by the author's widow, Audrey Geisel, the film's star, Jim Carrey, and director Ron Howard. Geisel was tickled with Carrey's performance as the lanky green grump who masquerades as Santa Claus to rob a small town of its holiday cheer.

Fed won't hike interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve has extended a cease-fire, now lasting six months, in its battle to tame economic growth and thwart inflation, deciding another rate increase isn't currently needed. Most economists predict the Fed won't resume an attack anytime soon and some believe a rate cut could possibly occur in the second half of next year.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan and his colleagues opted Wednesday to leave short-term interest rate unchanged at 6.5 percent, a nine year high. Policy-makers noted that economic growth was slowing, something they have been trying to engineer with interest rate increases. This slower growth, they added, could last "for some time."

The Fed's six rate increases since June 1999 are aimed at guiding the high-flying economy to a "soft landing" — slowing growth enough to keep inflation in check but not enough to cause a recession.

"I think the Fed will have to monitor the conditions to the economy very closely to ensure that it does not decelerate too rapidly," said Lynn Reaser, chief economist for Banc of America Capital Management Inc.

"At this point, the Fed is willing to watch the economy grow at a somewhat more subdued pace to make sure inflationary pressures don't build," she added.

Analysts doubted the Fed would make any major policy changes at Wednesday's meeting, given the political uncertainties with the presidential race still undecided.

The Fed previously passed up opportunities to boost interest rates at its June, August and October meetings.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and colleagues left the short-term interest rate unchanged at 6.5 percent.

The last rate movement, which pushed interest rates up to 6.5 percent, occurred in May. That boosted the prime rate, the benchmark for millions of loans, to 9.5 percent, a nine-year high.

Also at Wednesday's meeting, Fed policy makers kept their policy directive, intended to signal the future direction of rates, tilted toward further rate increases because of inflation risks.

But, analysts said, as long as the economy slows and inflation remains well behaved, they didn't expect any additional interest rate increases. Some said the next rate move, a cut, could come in the second half of next year, provided there isn't an abrupt downturn in the economy.

Ken Mayland, economist for ClearView Economics, predicted that by mid-November next year, interest rates will be cut from the current 6.5 percent to 5.5 percent.

Consumer prices higher in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices edged up 0.2 percent in October as falling prices for gasoline and airline fares helped blunt rising costs of natural gas, medical care and clothing.

The advance in the Consumer Price Index reported Thursday by the Labor Department followed a 0.5 percent jump in September that reflected surging energy costs. The CPI is the government's most closely watched inflation gauge.

Excluding the volatile energy and food sectors, the "core" rate of inflation also was up 0.2 percent in October, following a 0.3 percent rise in September.

Both the overall inflation figure and the core rate matched analysts' expectations.

The Fed has raised interest rates six times since June 1999 with the goal of bringing about a "soft landing" — slowing the economy enough to keep inflation in check but not so much as to cause a recession.

On Wednesday, the Fed decided not to raise rates a seventh time. The central bank held the door open to additional increases in the future, citing concerns that the tight labor market and rising energy prices could pose inflation dangers down the road.

In another report Thursday, the number of Americans filing new claims for state unemployment insurance fell sharply. Claims declined by a seasonally adjusted 20,000 last week to 326,000, possibly because of fewer layoffs in the automobile industry, which has been scaling back production as the moderating economy slows demand for new cars and trucks. Even with the drop, claims are at a level suggesting the red-hot labor market may be cooling a bit.

For the first 10 months of this year, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 3.6 percent, a sharp increase over the 2.7 percent rise in 1999.

The pickup has come from soaring energy prices, which resulted from production limits by oil-producing countries and tight supplies. Higher crude-oil prices this year have made gasoline and home-heating oil more expensive.

In October, energy prices moderated, rising just 0.2 percent, compared with a whopping 3.8 percent advance in September.

BOOK AWARDS

■ Sontag wins top prize for fiction for critically panned 'In America'

NEW YORK (AP) — With Steve Martin serving as master of ceremonies, the National Book Awards felt just a little bit like the Academy Awards. They felt even more so when Susan Sontag, the very image of the serious-minded author, won the prize for fiction.

"To say I'm astonished is an understatement. I'm really more moved than I could say."

"To say I'm astonished is an understatement," said the 67-year-old Sontag, who didn't pretend not to enjoy the award, or to say she expected it. "I'm really more moved than I could say."

Oscar winners like to joke that they rarely win for their best work; many would say the same about "In America," the novel that brought Sontag her first NBA Wednesday night.

Based on the life of the 19th century stage performer Helena Modjeska, "In America" was Sontag's first novel since the acclaimed 1992 best seller "The Volcano Lover." Although highly anticipated, the new book spent little time on best-seller lists and received a number of negative reviews. The New York Times' Michiko Kakutani labeled it "a banal, flat-footed narrative."

Sontag, author of such influential nonfiction works as "Against Interpretation" and "Illness as Metaphor," was also criticized for the uncredited borrowing of passages from other sources.

But novelist Ron Hansen, science fiction writer Ray Bradbury smiles and pages through a book while attending the National Book Awards in New York. Bradbury, author of "The Martian Chronicles," "The Illustrated Man" and "Fahrenheit 451," was given a medal for Distinguished Contribution to American Letters.

chair of the NBA fiction committee, praised "In America" as the "heart and majesty" of American writing in 2000. In a post-ceremony press conference, Sontag said she was too "squeamish" to read reviews and questioned their value.

"I often feel that I really know better what's wrong than any reviewer does," she said.

Other fiction finalists included Joyce Carol Oates' "Blonde," based on the life of Marilyn Monroe, Francine Prose's "Blue Angel"

GLORIA WHELAN
Received award for young people's literature for her novel "Homeless Bird."

and Charles Baxter's "The Feast of Love." Alan Lightman was nominated for "The Diagnosis."

Also Wednesday, the nonfiction award went to Nathaniel Philbrick for "In the Heart of the Sea," the story of the whaling ship tragedy that inspired Herman Melville's "Moby-Dick." Runners-up included 92-year-old Jacques Barzun, author of the 500-page best seller "From Dawn to Decadence," and Patrick Tierney, author of the much-debated anthropological investigation "Darkness in El Dorado."

The poetry prize went to Lucille Clifton for the compilation "Blessing the Boats," and the young people's literature award went to Gloria Whelan for "Homeless Bird," the story of a girl in India married and widowed at age 13.

Ray Bradbury, best known for the futuristic novel "Fahrenheit 451" and the science fiction classic "The Martian Chronicles," received an honorary medal.

Workers end strike against Univision

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Workers have ended their three-week strike against KMXB Channel 34, the flagship station of the country's leading Spanish-language television network, Univision.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — directors, writers, sales assistants and other workers. The new contract includes 20 percent across-the-board raises and a $400-per-employee signing bonus.

A new four-year contract was agreed to Wednesday after a 15-hour negotiating session between station managers and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians/Communications Workers of America Local 53, which represents more than 100 camera operators,

The issue that led to the Oct. 23 walkout after eight months of talks was jurisdiction over equipment. The station wanted to be able to use nonunion workers to help run new digital-based technologies. Union members wanted exclusive rights to run such equipment. Both sides eventually agreed that "primary work" would be done by union members while "incidental work" could be performed by others. "It's good enough to get everyone back to work," said Leroy Jackson, a member of the union negotiating team. KMXB issued a statement calling the contract "mutually beneficial" and saying, "Both parties look forward to continue working together."

FIRST-TIME VOTERS

■ Young, novice citizens get first-time taste of the system

By Arlene Levinson
AP National Writer

Danielle Spawn, a University of Arizona freshman, used to get mad at her parents in Phoenix for sitting out elections. So she looked forward to her first trip to a polling booth at a church near the Tucson campus.

"I'm 18 now and I have a little bit to do with what goes on in the country, and I like to exercise that right," Spawn said.

The deadlock between Texas Gov. George W. Bush and Vice President Al Gore leaves her uneasy, however. Though she voted for Gore, she says she's prepared to accept either man as the winner. "We're going to have to live with that ... so we might as well not be mad about it."

The election of 2000 was a first for some voters, many the youngest voters of all. A week after that rite of passage and with the presidency still undecided, some first-time voters still glowed from taking part in the process. Others were dismayed, or even suspicious. Still others felt disillusioned — but ready to vote again.

"I really felt empowered," said 20-year-old Leeanna Gonzalez, a Cleveland State University student who went to work Election Night wearing a sticker that proved she voted. "It's good to stand for something."

Another Cleveland State student, 24-year-old James Taylor, says he felt "a personal sense of accomplishment." (Until now he was in college out of his home state of Ohio and chose not to vote absentee.)

LEEANNA GONZALEZ
"I really felt empowered. It's good to stand for something."

Taylor thinks the Electoral College should reflect split voting in the states, because otherwise the popular vote hardly seems to matter.

Ohio, for instance, went 50 percent for Bush and 46 percent for Gore — Taylor's choice — yet Bush won all 21 of the state's electoral votes.

For three decades, the youth vote has been dwindling on Election Day.

This year's turnout among 18- to 24-year-olds won't be gauged until the middle of next year, when the Census Bureau expects to release results of a voter survey this weekend as part of its monthly unemployment survey.

But the latest youth turnout was probably less than ever, said Curtis Gans, director of the nonpartisan Committee for the Study of the American Electorate in Washington. He blames the failure of either party to effectively court the youth vote.

The federal voting age was lowered from 21 to 18 in 1971. The next year, 43 percent of 18- to 24-year-olds voted. That's when Richard Nixon won re-election in a landslide over George McGovern. Two years ago, participation by young voters was just over 28 percent, Gans said.

The downward trend was reversed only twice, when Ronald Reagan won in 1984 and Bill Clinton in 1992.

Many of those who voted this year may be extra glad they did. About two-thirds of people of all ages who didn't make it to the polls last week said they now regret it, a new CNN-USA Today-Gallup poll found.

A week after her first vote at age 20, Christina Williams bubbled with pride.

"I felt good that our ancestors, black and white, had fought for our right to vote," said Williams, an English major at Spelman College, a historically black school for women in Atlanta.

"I felt like I was taking part in something really momentous," said Williams, who voted for Gore. In the voting booth, she said, "My hands were all sweaty. I was afraid I'd vote for the wrong person."

She's upset at reports in some places that blacks were turned away. But far from giving up on the process, she wanted to see a re-vote by the entire country.

Monica Yearwood, a 22-year-old student at Chicago's Columbia College, also was eager to do what she considers her American duty.

"Voting — as small as it may seem — does definitely influence things," she said on her way into City Hall on an errand. Her choice was Ralph Nader.

"I feel that regardless of anything, you should vote for who you believe in, whether it's the underdog, whether they have no chance. You need to obey your heart."

Roxanne Solano, a Los Angeles high school student whose parents emigrated from El Salvador, said voting the first time "made me feel kind of proud."

Solano, who voted for Gore, said she was eager to see her one vote poured into the ocean of votes. "I kept watching all night to see who the president was going to be. I stayed up really late. It was kind of fun."

The recount controversy and the chance the Electoral College could put Bush in the White House have tarnished that pride a bit.

"I'm kind of mad," Solano said — though not mad enough to give up on the system. "I will vote again in the next election," she said.

In Cleveland, Gonzalez says the recount is "embarrassing for the country." She knows the system works but fears outsiders may think, "Oh, look at them. They can't even pick their own president."

counting process." Bush holds a 300-vote lead over his rival in Florida, the state that will hand one man or the other a majority of the Electoral College and the keys to the White House. Overseas ballots are to be counted Saturday.

The prospect of continued legal battles was underscored Thursday by Sen. Joseph Lieberman, Gore's running mate, who said voters who supported the Democratic ticket need to see a "reasonable and just conclusion" to the impasse if the next president is to have legitimacy.

Legal action is "the American way," Lieberman said on NBC's "Today" show. "When you feel that you've not received a fair deal, the one place you turn in America is to the courts. I hope that's not necessary, but that's still on the table for sure."

Speaking of Floridians and all Democratic supporters, he said: "Their anger, their frustration with the way this ended as well as the anger and frustration of millions of other people around the country who voted for us, I think has to find a reasonable and just conclusion or else this country will go into the new century divided with a president who does not have legitimacy."

Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., said of the Democrats: "It doesn't take much for them to feel they need to go to court." Thompson said expanded recounts by hand are unnecessary because Florida has done a statewide machine recount confirming Bush's edge over Gore.

Gore had offered to set aside further litigation if Bush agreed either to let manual recounts finish in three Democratic-leaning counties, or have ballots recounted by hand everywhere in the state.

The dueling appearances by Gore and Bush capped a tumultuous day in which Florida Secretary of State Katherine Harris said she would not accept the results of any hand recounts when certifying final totals on Saturday. Only absentee ballots from overseas, due in by midnight Friday night, will be rolled into the totals, she said. Gore's lawyers said they would challenge her decision Thursday.

With Gore urging them on, officials in Broward County said they intended to continue recounting 588,000 ballots by hand Thursday. Just up the Florida coast, Palm Beach County officials said they intended to review ballots cast on Election Day.

Thursday's legal docket stretched to the federal appeals court in Atlanta, where judges called for written arguments on Bush's bid — he lost in Miami federal district court on Monday — to shut down the recounts altogether.

Just over the legal horizon was the U.S. Supreme Court, and already there were predictions the election to pick the nation's 43rd president would wind up there. "Anything this important is going to find its way to the most important court in the land," former Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, a longtime friend of Bush's running mate Dick Cheney, said in an interview.

In their TV appearances, both men strove for a statesmanlike presentation.

Gore went first: "We need a resolution that is fair and final," he said. "We need to move expeditiously to the most complete and accurate count that is possible."

Suggesting expanded manual recounts, he said: "Machines can sometimes misread or fail to detect the way ballots are cast."

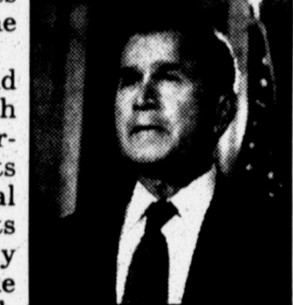

He invited Bush to meet with him immediately, "not to negotiate, but to improve the tone of our dialogue in America." And he proposed a second meeting, after the election, "to reaffirm our national unity."

Vice President Al Gore (right) discusses his proposal for a full Florida recount. His running mate, Sen. Joe Lieberman, listens to Gore's remarks.

MONICA YEARWOOD
"Voting — as small as it may seem — does definitely influence things."

Texas Gov. George W. Bush rejected Gore's proposal.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same items/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs."
Then remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Five weeks after terrorists attacked the USS Cole in Yemen, Defense Secretary William Cohen is trying to shore up military ties in the Persian Gulf region and to send a message that "we're not leaving."
En route to this home port for the Navy's 5th Fleet, Cohen told reporters he has "taken additional measures as far as security is concerned" and ordered the service chiefs to review "what other measures should be taken" to protect U.S. forces. He would not provide specifics.
Against the backdrop of Middle East violence and erosion of support for economic sanctions against Iraq, Cohen said he made his ninth trip to the Middle East to thank U.S. troops and tell U.S. military partners he "appreciated their strong support."
At a news conference Thursday at the Manama airport, Cohen urged Israelis and Palestinians to "lower and eliminate the violence."
"There is no alternative to peace; the only alternative ... is more violence," he said.
The former senator said the United States seeks better relations with Iran and accused Iran of "undermining the Middle East peace process."

APOCALYPSE ORANGE

■ In this Vietnam War legacy, the victims are the innocents

By Joseph B. Verrengia and Tini Tran

Associated Press Writers

The 100 residents behind the walls of Thanh Xuan, a "peace village" on the outskirts of Hanoi, are children. They are retarded, or with stunted limbs or twisted spines. Most arrive unable to walk, speak or read.

Fingers point to one notorious suspect: the chemical defoliant Agent Orange. Between 1962 and 1971, U.S. military tanker planes and helicopters sprayed 20 million gallons of Agent Orange and other defoliants over 14 percent of southern Vietnam's lush forests, mangrove swamps and river basins.

Vietnamese families seem cursed with reproductive problems. A handful of studies suggest the rates of birth defects, miscarriages and other complications here are uncommonly high. Again, the finger of suspicion points to Agent Orange.

During his visit to Vietnam later this week, President Clinton probably won't glimpse these children, mostly innocents born to veterans or villagers whose homes were sprayed. But Agent Orange and the children of the peace villages will be in the background of his discussions.

"If I wasn't here, I don't know what I would do," laments Thoa, 15, sitting in her bedroom beneath a Britney Spears poster.

Thoa's delicate features are wrapped in a shroud of spongy skin tumors and charcoal splotches sprouting bristles. When she was born, her parents said she looked like a black cat. Her condition goes unnamed and untreated.

"I wasn't able to go to school at home," Thoa said. "The children always made fun of me. In their eyes, I was a freak. Here I have friends and teachers who love me."

Thoa's father was too young to fight the Americans, but he served in the Army in 1978-80 along the Cambodian border. The region had been heavily sprayed during the war.

"We know what the health impacts of Agent Orange are," said Hoang Dinh Cau, chairman of the 10-80 Committee, a national panel that investigated the war's ongoing health consequences. "We have lived with it for many years. You cannot tell me there is no connection."

Western pollution experts tend to agree but lack conclusive proof.

"I'm certain both U.S. servicemen and Vietnamese now are suffering from effects of Vietnamese children whose parents served in the war or lived in areas sprayed with the defoliate Agent Orange show the legacy of the war — serious physical and mental problems.

Agent Orange spraying," said University of Texas epidemiologist Arnold Schecter. He has visited 16 times since 1984.

"We need to show where in Vietnam that Agent Orange got into people and at what levels of exposure causes health effects," Schecter said.

The chemicals, distributed in Operation Ranch Hand, was meant to kill vegetation that might have concealed Viet Cong guerrillas and their infiltrating North Vietnamese allies. The American sprayers' wry motto: "Only we can prevent forests."

The defoliant was contaminated with TCDD, the most dangerous form of dioxin. It has been described as "the most toxic molecule on Earth."

Misty clouds of sweet-smelling herbicide soaked the countryside like a deadly perfume. Soldiers on both sides were drenched repeatedly. So were civilians. It seeped into the soil, plants, animals and, many experts suspect, people's chromosomes.

TCDD exposure is associated with cancers, immune disorders and birth defects. In tropical Vietnam, dioxin might leach from moist topsoil after several years. But it persists in river sediments and the fatty tissues of ducks, fish and other animals that people eat.

Thousands of U.S. veterans and their families receive disability benefits for Agent Orange exposure, after years of government deliberation and lawsuits.

In Vietnam, about 1 million are affected, including 150,000 children. Top compensation: $7 per month.

For years, as they reconciled, the former enemies sidestepped the issue.

Vietnam was suspicious of Western scientists who came to investigate. In 1995, customs agents for the communist regime confiscated dioxin samples that Schecter and others collected. Now, a more confident government wants America to make amends.

"The United States has a spiritual and moral responsibility," said Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Phan Thuy Thanh. "Resolving the war consequences, including those of Agent Orange, is a humanitarian issue."

German chiropractor killed in Israeli rocket attack

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli helicopters rocketed offices of Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement and other West Bank targets before dawn Thursday, killing a German chiropractor and wounding 10 Palestinians in an escalation of the worst Mideast fighting in decades.

Also Thursday, an 11-year-old Palestinian boy died of injuries sustained a day earlier in a clash with Israeli troops in the Gaza Strip, bringing the death toll to 221 in seven weeks of confrontation. The vast majority of those killed have been Palestinians.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak on Thursday brushed off criticism at home that the army's response to Palestinian shooting attacks was not tough enough.

"If we thought that instead of 200 Palestinian fatalities, 2,000 dead would put an end to the fighting at a stroke, we would use much more force," Barak said on Israel radio. "The opposite is true, and the state of Israel would then be in a much more complicated situation."

The overnight missile attacks on Fatah offices in the West Bank towns of Salfit, Tulkarem and Hebron, as well as an armory in Jericho, came in response to Palestinian shooting ambushes earlier this week that killed two Israeli civilians and two soldiers.

Harald Fischer, 68, a German chiropractor, was killed in the Israeli attack on Beit Jalla. Fischer's home came under fire.

Water

Water Conference in Oklahoma City.

Pickens, 72, formed Mesa Water Inc. last year to sell Texas Panhandle water to South Texas cities. He denied that his plan to sell 65 billion gallons of groundwater a year would turn the Panhandle into a dust bowl.

"If we don't sell water, we'll be drained," Pickens said.

He said he would be selling only "surplus" water from the Ogallala Aquifer as allowed by the local water district.

The aquifer is an underground sea that extends from North Texas through the Oklahoma Panhandle into Nebraska. It supplies water to the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles and much of north-west Oklahoma.

Pickens said he plans to offer the water to South Texas cities via an 84-inch wide pipeline. Such a pipeline to Dallas would cost $1.2 billion, while a pipeline to El Paso would cost $2.1 billion. Any city that buys the water would pay the cost of the pipeline, he said.

He estimated that San Antonio, which presently pays $800 to $900 per acre-foot of water, would pay $1,090 per acre-foot for Panhandle ground water.

Jay Clapp, whose family owns land in the Oklahoma Panhandle, said Pickens' plan would "leave an uninhabitable desert in the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandle for future generations."

The plan "is purely a money-making operation. It takes advantage of farmers and ranchers who are currently strapped as a result of the low farm prices and the drought," Clapp said.
