STAGE SET

Opening day prospects are better in 1999

By Jim Steiert
Special to The Brand

Timely spring and summer rains and a return to more grain sorghum production by many farmers has set the stage for a much-improved pheasant season in Deaf Smith County in 1999.

After the disastrous drought of 1998 left many pheasant hunters disappointed, sportsmen can expect to see lots more of the winged rainbows during this year's season. The season opens Dec. 11 and runs through Dec. 26.

Danny Swepton, district leader of Texas Parks & Wildlife Department wildlife biologists based in Canyon, says a return to sorghum production here is an encouraging development in the pheasant picture.

"After driving our survey lines we've found that the pheasant counts are nearly double those of last year," says Swepton.

He added all surveys are relative, however. Even with the marked improvement over the 1998 season, pheasant numbers are still well below their incredible peaks that came during the boom years of pheasant hunting here in the 1970s and 1980s, when the pheasant population boomed by as much as 300 percent during one windfall season.

Still, the pheasant hunting outlook in the Panhandle is markedly better than last year. That's good news for the average of upwards of 32,000 hunters who have been flocking to the High Plains for pheasant season during the past decade, and for many motels, restaurants and service stations that get a business boost from this influx of customers.

Hunter participation fell somewhat during the 1998 season, due to the sparse number of birds as the result of the drought, and it remains to be seen if hunter numbers will return to their former levels this year. Odds are good they will with pheasant prospects having improved appreciably for this season.

"Some of the best areas look to be from Dawn westward, in Deaf Smith County, and north of Hereford. Survey lines around Hereford showed fair counts. Ochiltree and Hansford counties show good prospects, but Moore County wasn't as good as we had hoped for," said Swepton.

"Summer rains and increased grain sorghum acreage get the credit for this year's improvement. Sorghum provides lots better cover for pheasants than corn does, because a lot more residue is left after harvest. Timely rains that began as early as March and April meant humidity to help with nesting success, and lots of insects to provide protein for the pheasant chicks once they hatched," he added.

A hunter prepares to shoot as a pheasant takes flight. The annual pheasant season in Deaf Smith County gets under way Saturday. It will continue through Dec. 26.

According to Swepton, CRP and sorghum acreage in close proximity is a virtual pheasant factory, and some of those situations can be found in Deaf Smith County as this year's opener approaches.

"Over the years we've found that monocultures of CRP grass or grain sorghum are not nearly as productive of pheasants as when the two types of habitat adjoin or mix.

You find a lot more pheasants in the mixed habitat," he said.

Future pheasant prospects for Deaf Smith County could be impacted by ongoing trends in local agriculture.

Cotton acreage was up markedly here in 1999, but cotton isn't choice pheasant habitat.

On the other hand, sorghum acreage climbed somewhat as well, as producers who have

Church sponsors breakfast

The handbell choirs and United Methodist Men of First United Methodist Church of Hereford look to make a little extra cash from the influx of hunters with their annual pheasant hunter's breakfast project.

Serving will be 5:30-8 a.m. Dec. 11 in the church's Fellowship Hall, located at Miles Avenue and 5th Street.

Sportsmen — and those just hunting a breakfast bargain — can choose from scrambled eggs, sausage, bacon, biscuits and gravy, fruit, and orange juice or coffee, at a price of $5 for all you can eat. Patrons can also have their coffee thermos filled for $2.

grown irrigation-intensive corn for years look once again at sorghum as an alternate crop that needs less irrigation.

"We saw the big pheasant booms when there were more acres of sorghum in this country. From the perspective of growing more pheasants, it's encouraging that we're seeing more sorghum again. Milo is good for pheasants," said Swepton.

According to statewide figures compiled by TP&WD for 1986-87 through 1997-98, an average of almost 33,000 Texas pheasant hunters have bagged 54,639 pheasants annually during that time span, with the lion's share of those birds harvested in the High Plains.

Only cock pheasants are fair game during the Panhandle season with hens off-limits. The daily bag allowed is three, with six in possession.

Elderly man needs help with fuel bill

■ With the caring and sharing help of the local community, CSF will be able to address the needs of the applicants during the 1999 campaign.

Special to The Brand

Simple creature comforts are taken for granted by most of us, but some of the applicants for assistance from Hereford's holiday charity, the Christmas Stocking Fund, have a hard time providing such basics as warmth for their home.

One of those in need of help this Yule season is a 79-year-old rural Deaf Smith County man who is battling cancer and other health problems.

This man uses propane as the heating fuel for his home; however, because of his numerous medical expenses, he's having a hard time paying for the fuel. It's a cold reality that his home may be less than warm and inviting this holiday unless he gets help.

The anonymous committee of volunteers administering CSF give the needs of the young and the elderly a high priority in deciding what assistance to deliver. With the caring and sharing help of the local community, CSF will be able to address the needs of this applicant and many others during the 1999 campaign.

You can help CSF to make the holiday a bit more cheerful for as many of the less fortunate members of the community as possible through your generous gift.

CSF extends assistance in numerous forms including help with food, utilities, medical and pharmacy bills, and clothing. All assistance, with the exception of food, is via vouchers payable to the merchants, utilities, or medical facilities cooperating with CSF. Food assistance is in the form of staple goods that are boxed and delivered.

This year's primary assistance delivery date is Dec. 22.

Donations to CSF may be made in-person at the Hereford Brand, 313 N. Lee, or mailed to CSF in care of Local merchants say money is changing hands this shopping season.

Cash registers ringing

By Julie L. Carlson
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Well, it's not push and shove, stand in long lines, perfume sprayed so thick in the air it chokes throats nor pushy store clerks, but it is Christmas shopping, yet it's laid back and hometown.

Hereford is home to several gift shops offering a multitude of Christmas items to deck the halls of each and every home. Just one step inside these stores and the cinnamon and pine tree smell takes your breathe away. The Christmas music lifts your spirit and the luxurious presents waiting to be bought catch the eye.

It's official; the "Holiday Shopping" has begun and Hereford store owners are pleased with the turnout of shoppers.

"The shopping is going very good; we had a wonderful day the day after Thanksgiving.

We were busier in the afternoon that day and we were surprised because we figured everyone would shop Hereford in the morning and then head to Amarillo to shop, but we had a steady stream of shoppers all day," said Andra Schlabs, owner of The Secret Garden, 411 Main.

Brian Jones, owner of Inkahoots, 342 Miles, added, "It's kind of early to say how well the shopping season will be this year; it's probably equal to last year, but the day after Thanksgiving was especially great for us, it was a great turnout of people."

Jones also said he expected shoppers to head to Amarillo to shop because of the great deals big stores offer but said people don't want to hassle with waiting in lines, not even for a deal.

County to receive food, shelter funds

Deaf Smith County will receive $10,466 to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in the area, according to a press release from the office of County Judge Tom Simons.

The selection of the county was made by a national board chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and consists of representatives of the Salvation Army, American Red Cross, Council of Jewish Federations, Catholic Charities USA, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA, and United Way of America, which will provide the administrative staff and function as fiscal agent. The board was charged to distribute funds appropriated by Congress to help expand the capacity of food and shelter programs in high-need areas around the country.

A local board made up of representatives from the business community, city and county, school, churches, United Way and individuals will determine how the funds awarded to the county are to be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs.

The board is responsible for recommending agencies to receive these funds and any additional funds available under this phase of the program. Deaf Smith County has distributed emergency food and shelter funds assisting a total of 80,369 meals and 376 utility bills through agencies in the community.

For more information, contact Judy Baker, Deaf Smith County Social Services, by Dec. 10.

Volunteer award deadline

Gov. George W. Bush and the Texas Commission on Volunteerism and Community Service are seeking nominations of exceptional volunteers in Texas communities to be recognized at the annual Governor's Volunteer Awards.

These awards acknowledge and celebrate Texans whose commitment to community and service is others is exemplary. Recipients will be honored April 11, 2001, at a National Volunteer Week ceremony at the Governor's Mansion in Austin.

Mike Harris of Hereford was named as a Governor's Volunteer in 1999.

To request a nomination form, contact the Governor's Volunteer Awards Hotline at 512-475-4432. Forms must be received by Dec. 15.

Letters to Santa deadline

Parents and teachers wishing to get children's letters to Santa Claus published in the special Dec. 19 edition of the Hereford Brand should get the letters to the newspaper office no later than Monday.

Letters can be sent to P.O. Box 673, Hereford 79045 or brought by the Brand office, 313 N. Lee.

Annual holiday dinner set

Members of the American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary will hold their annual holiday dinner Tuesday at the legion hall in Veterans Park.

Activities will begin at 6 p.m. with dinner. The meat, bread and drink will be furnished, but members are asked to bring a vegetable, salad or dessert to complete the menu.

A short program will follow the meal. The speaker will be Dr. Lamuel Salik, vicar at St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

The evening will conclude with a Christmas gift exchange. Members are to bring gifts not to exceed $5 in value.

Snow falls over area

Severe thunderstorms moved across the northern and central parts of the state early Saturday, ushering in cooler temperatures, clouds and snow in some areas, according to The Associated Press.

A winter storm warning is in effect Saturday for the northern Panhandles and a snow advisory is in effect for the rest of the Panhandle and the northern South Plains.

Early Saturday rain and snow fell over the northwest Panhandle, with light rain in the rest of West Texas. Temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s but ranged from 31 at Guadalupe Pass to 53 at Dryden.

Snowfall amounts are expected to increase across the Panhandle. Rain will likely change to snow around noon near Lubbock.

Overnight lows will drop into the 20s and 30s with upper teens in the Panhandle. Highs Sunday will range from the mid-30s far north to the lower 60s far south.

Showers and thunderstorms were occurring across Northwest Texas from Bowie to Chico. Temperatures ranged from 52 degrees at Abilene to 71 degrees around Dallas and Fort Worth.

Unseasonably warm and humid conditions continued across South Texas.

Winds were generally south at 15 to 25 mph but were gusting up to 35 mph along the coast. Temperatures were mainly in the upper 60s and lower 70s, but cooled into the 50s over the Hill Country. Temperatures early Saturday ranged from 57 degrees at Junction to 73 degrees at Alice, Rockport and Port Isabel.

A winter storm pushing through the Panhandle dumped 5 inches of snow on Hereford by 7 a.m. today, with more expected through tonight.

Much cooler conditions can be expected overnight across South Texas. Lows will mainly be in the 40s with temperatures dipping into the 30s in the Hill Country.

Winter storm warning

A winter storm warning is in effect for tonight.

Tonight: Periods of snow and blowing snow, decreasing after midnight, blustery north to northwest wind 20 to 30 mph and gusty, total snow accumulation of 5 inches, low 20 to 25.

Sunday: Mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of light snow early, high in the upper 30s, north to northwest wind 15 to 25 mph, decreasing to 10 to 20 mph in the afternoon.

Extended forecast

Monday: Mostly clear, low 15 to 20, high 50 to 55.

Tuesday: Partly cloudy. Low in the mid-20s, high 60 to 65.

Wednesday: Partly cloudy. Low in the lower 30s, high in the mid-50s.

Gin manager doesn't know if local farmers lost cotton

The manager of the Hereford Farmers Cotton Gin said this morning the recently refurbished gin has suffered a number of setbacks, which he says is inherent with any new system.

"We've had some problems with the hydraulics in the press and like all the other new gins, we're having to work out the bugs," David Varner said.

Reports indicate some local farmers may have taken cotton to the Littlefield gin due to the problems locally and some farmers may have lost cotton in a Thursday afternoon fire encompassing some 180 cotton modules.

Varner could not verify if local producers had lost cotton in the Littlefield fire.

"We're up and running again. I do know some farmers took their cotton to Castro County and Muleshoe. I don't know about Littlefield. We've been running full tilt since Wednesday," he said.

JEWELL DEMENT MILLER Dec. 3, 1999

OLTON — Services for Jewell Dement Miller, 83, of Olton will be 11 a.m. Monday at the first Baptist Church of Olton with Rev. Kyle Streun officiating. Burial will be in the Olton Cemetery under the direction of Foskey-Lilley-McGill funeral Home of Olton.

Mrs. Miller died Friday at the Running Water Draw Care Center. She was born Sept. 19, 1916 in Texas County, Oklahoma. She married Joseph Frances Miller on Dec. 9, 1934, in Olton.

Mrs. Miller lived in Olton until moving to Hereford in 1974 and returned to Olton in 1996. She was a member of the First Baptist Church in Olton and very active in the WMU.

Survivors include her husband; one daughter, Helen Miller Franks of Olton; one son, Joseph Miller Jr. of Amarillo; one sister, Bertha Dement Miller of Lubbock; eight grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorials be made to the Running Water Draw Care Center or the Olton Ambulance Association.

Actress Kahn dies of cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — From Jewish matron to saloon singer, Madeline Kahn's spirited portrayals of daffy and lusty characters won her Oscar nominations, a Tony Award and the admiration of fellow actors.

"She is one of the most talented people that ever lived," Mel Brooks once said. "I mean, either in stand-up comedy, or acting, or whatever you want, you can't beat Madeline Kahn."

Ms. Kahn died of ovarian cancer at a hospital in Manhattan on Friday. She was 57.

The actress-comedian, who first acknowledged the disease publicly last month had been undergoing aggressive treatment for the illness, said Jeff Schneider, a spokesman for the William Morris agency.

"Madeline was a performer of brilliance and a loyal and trusted friend to everyone she encountered," said her husband, John Hansbury.

Shopping

"Hometown shopping is more convenient and easier," Jones said.

Cindy Walker, owner of The Gift Garden, 220 Main, was ecstatic about the turnout the day after Thanksgiving.

"I believe Friday after Thanksgiving was a great day — better than average."

Each gift shop in Hereford is unique caring it's own standard gift items, but one thing most have in common is candles! Candles have been around for thousands of years, but once electricity hit the world, the candles were thrown to the trash. In recent years, candles have made a come back. They're seen on every store shelf and sold by the dozens. They come in every size, shape and fragrance and are the perfect gift for anyone who is considered to be that "hard to shop for person" or the "person who has everything." You can't go wrong with candles as long as a watchful eye is kept on them.

"With Wishes, we can't keep candles on the shelves, but that's always, candles are hot items year round," said Carolyn McDonald, owner of Wishes, 144 W. 4th.

"Yankee candles and angels are the best-selling things we have," Walker said about her store's choice items, which, of course included candles.

One store in Hereford will celebrate its first Christmas here in several years — the J.C. Penney catalog store located inside Wishes. According to McDonald, children's items are the most-sought-after catalog products.

"As far as our J.C. Penney's catalog store, our highest selling items are rocking horses, anything to do with Barbie or Star Wars and, of course, Game Boys and Furbies," McDonald said.

Down the street at Caryn's Hallmark Shop, 236 N. Main, owner Caryn Davis says we have yet to see the end of Beanie's.

"Of course, the hottest items are always Beanie Baby's and Beanie Buddies and in recent years Dept. 56 Christmas houses and figurine items. I don't think there's just any one hot thing anymore."

Jones at Inkahoots agrees, saying, "Beanies have always been the big thing, for right now and Pokémon for the kids of course is a hot item."

According to Davis, there was not a rush of shoppers this year, well, at least not yet.

"I think people shopped earlier this year, like in August and September. I don't think we have that mad rush like we used to have, I don't know if it's money situations or just eager shoppers wanting to shop earlier and avoid the crowds."

Many people would expect the day after Thanksgiving to be the busiest shopping day of the year but due to all those last minute holiday shoppers, usually men, Christmas Eve is the busiest shopping day.

Schlabs agrees, "Our busiest day is Christmas Eve; men usually come in for last-minute shopping."

There are 20 days left for holiday shopping, which means 19 more days for the last-minute shopper to ponder on what to get that hard to buy for person on their list — remember candles.

With all the hustle and bustle this holiday season, take a breath, relax and Happy Holiday shopping wherever it may be!

Open house is set

Parents will get a chance to visit with the children's teachers and the public will get a look at the new band hall at an open house Monday at Hereford High School.

Principal Linda Lowe said the open house will begin at 6 p.m. Monday and will continue until after 8 p.m., with special activities planned.

A regular open house with refreshments and door prizes will be 6-7:30 p.m. Parents are encouraged to meet with their children's teachers and also receive a tour of the modern band hall facilities.

This will be followed by a special parents meeting in the auditorium.

Immediately after the parents meeting, the high school Modeling Club will conduct a "Winter Wonderland Festival" beginning at 8 p.m. in the auditorium.

The public is invited to attend the activities.

Van Doren named department head

Special to The Brand
CANYON — Dr. Ken Van Doren, mathematics professor at West Texas A&M University, recently was named head of the Department of Mathematics, Physical Sciences and Educational Technology.

Van Doren, who has been serving as interim head of the department since July, officially took over as permanent department head on Dec. 1.

He joined the WTAMU faculty in 1977 as head of what was then the Department of Mathematics and Physics. He served as dean of the graduate school, 1983-86, before returning to the mathematics department as an assistant department head.

Because chemistry and engineering technology are now under the department's auspices, Van Doren said the job is more challenging than before.

"It's even more challenging than when I had it before because we've got more disciplines in the department. But I look forward to taking on this challenge to try and give the department some continuity. We've had some turnover in faculty recently, and we're understaffed right now. My first priority will be to get us back up to full staff, replacing the people we lost in mathematics and chemistry," he said.

Hospital board to consider contract

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Deaf Smith County Hospital directors on Tuesday will discuss a management agreement that would shift responsibility for the day-to-day operations of Hereford Regional Medical Center to an Austin-based hospital management company.

The agreement will be the leading issue on the directors' agenda when they meet at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in the hospital board room.

At their November meeting, the directors approved a proposal by TMSI (Torch Management Services Inc.), a subsidiary of the Texas Organization of Rural and Community Hospitals (TORCH), for a management agreement. TMSI recommended a two-year agreement.

In the original presentation to the board in October, TMSI president/chief executive officer Larry D. Krupala indicated the company will emphasize three major elements:

- Leadership and management expertise;
- Commitment to improvement of financial strength; and
- Communication.

The presentation stated the company will provide the hospital district with access to leadership and innovative management expertise in all areas of hospital operations.

The company also would be committed to working with the local board to boost financial strength and productivity by improving systems and services, and by entering into strategic alliances.

The company also would improve communication among the board, physicians and employees in an effort to redefine the hospital's vision. This would involve a clarifying the board's role, addressing the shortage of some medical professionals, developing a plan for the changing demographics in population, dealing with the expense of technological advances, working to improve the community's perception of the hospital, and developing a health care network that will link HRMC through an integrated delivery system.

Krupala indicated he sees the role of the board as establishing policies, with TMSI implementing them.

The major benefit of the management agreement to the hospital district is the access to management expertise in a variety of areas. The firm will provide training and support for hospital staff.

Archeologists wind up area field work

Special to The Brand

Texas Historical Commission (THC) archeologists have concluded the second season of field work on the Red River War sites in the Texas Panhandle.

During the five-month investigations, the team identified and documented the maneuvers of the U.S. Army and the Plains Indians during the final conflicts that brought an end to Native American domination of the Southern Plains.

The team identified the sites of the Battle of Red River and located one of the Indian village sites that the military attempted to capture as well as the military supply camp that Col. Nelson Miles established after the battle. The team recovered more than 1,400 metal artifacts, including cartridges from a Gatling gun. The archeologists spent the last months at the Price's Engagement battle site and identified where the battle began and the position where the Indians initiated the attack.

Hospital board has opportunity

An opportunity is being presented to the Deaf Smith County Hospital District, an opportunity that can give the directors some breathing room for the next two years.

When they meet Tuesday night, the directors will consider entering into a management agreement that will turn over the responsibility for day-to-day operations of Hereford Regional Medical Center to TORCH Management Services Inc. (TMSI).

Under the agreement, the board will continue to establish policy, but TMSI will be responsible for the daily operation of the hospital.

The agreement will give the board time to turn its attention to long-term strategy for guiding Hereford Regional Medical Center and its affiliates for the long term. The management agreement also will provide some sense of continuity and stability at the administrative level, which should mean an improvement in employee morale. The hospital's efforts to deal with its problems — out-migration, declining tax base, adverse changes in Medicare/Medicaid reimbursement procedures — have been hampered by the turnover in the leadership positions, a revolving door that sees the top jobs filled by interim administrators.

Ideally, the board would have hired a new hospital administrator who would have brought the knowledge and expertise needed to lead the hospital — on a permanent basis — to solutions to the many problems facing it. However, this decision to enter into the management agreement with TMSI is perhaps the second-best option available to the board.

The board can use this opportunity to strive to overcome the perception in the community that it has no sense of direction of where it is going nor how to get there.

An opportunity is being presented to this board; we hope it will seize this opportunity and make the most of it for the good of Hereford Regional Medical Center and the community it serves.

Republican John McCain and Democrat Bill Bradley are not running against each other — although they'd like to as presidential nominees — but they are competing for some of the same independent voters in the New Hampshire presidential primary.

In the Feb. 1 balloting, people registered as independents can cast ballots in either the Republican or Democratic primary. At 37 percent, the independents outnumber the voters registered in either party.

At this point, McCain and Bradley, who sometimes campaign on the same themes, appear to be the candidates best positioned to attract independents, potential swing voters who could have a major impact in each party primary.

In judging success or failure in New Hampshire, winning isn't everything. Margins of victory or defeat, measured against the polls

Newsrooms often home to collection of oddballs

It's been more than 30 years since I walked into J.Q. Mahaffey's office at the Texarkana Gazette and asked for a job with the newspaper. In looking back over my newspaper career, a career that's wound through six states, I've run into some very, very strange characters — in the newsrooms.

One of the most bizarre characters I've worked with was Sam, an old copy editor. He was bald with a fringe of lanky, greasy hair that fell forward to frame his face when he leaned over the page dummies. He talked to himself incessantly while working, often referring to himself as "copy desk" which was where he worked. He also had a favorite sweater that he wore throughout the year, winter or summer, spring or fall. It was ratty, gray and shapeless, with holes in the elbows. Because the buttons had long been lost, Sam held his sweater together with paperclips.

For some reason, Sam adored Big Mildred, who squeezed her 250 pounds into the confines of the composing room, but she detested him.

One night, Sam came into the backshop, where Big Mildred was pasting up the front page, and leaned against her, put his arm around her and said, "Mildred, if I'd met you 20 years ago, we'd own this paper now."

Big Mildred picked up her scissors and calmly cut Sam's tie in two.

"If you ever do that again, I'll cut something else of yours in two," she said.

Sam must have gotten the picture, because he stayed well away from Big Mildred after that.

His days at the Texarkana Gazette ended abruptly. Sam lived in an old downtown hotel that had been turned into apartments, and he liked to stand at the window of his second-floor apartment and watch the secretaries walking to work. Unfortunately for Sam, he also liked to be nude at the time. One day, one of the secretaries looked up and saw the naked man staring down at her.

Within minutes, Sam was called into the editor's office and fired. When the editor asked for Sam's keys to the building, the former copy editor refused and stormed out.

It seems Sam was a member in good standing of an obscure fundamentalist sect. For several days after Sam was fired, the members of his group marched up and down the sidewalk in front of the Gazette building and called down curses upon the newspaper. Sam would move to Corpus Christi, where he got a job on the Caller-Times copy desk. A few months later, he was fired for slashing the tires on the managing editor's car.

Bob Downs wasn't strange. In fact, he was one of the most stable, decent people I've ever worked with in the newspaper business. He was a good reporter whose facts were always accurate. I don't think I ever fielded a single telephone call from someone complaining about the accuracy of a story that Bob had written.

But like most people in the newspaper business, Bob was just scraping by. He and his wife had three children, and when they found out a fourth child was on the way, he went to Mack Stewart, the Gazette's general manager, and asked for a raise. Mack listened to Bob's explanation, nodded and promised to do what he could.

A few days later, Mack told Bob he'd been assigned to cover the Civitan Club's noon meetings.

"Why? I already cover the Noon Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis and Optimists," Bob said.

"Well, we can't give you a raise, but now

Every town should have its very own Santa

Mauri Montgomery

Hello, Hereford.

Christmas has arrived in Hereford. I know this because Santa Claus has already visited us once — this past Monday night during the City of Hereford's 4th Annual Christmas At The Park.

Under the umbrella of a blazing starlit night and the hushed whisper of El Niño wind, the jolly ol' elf made his way to the center of Mother's Park, virtually unannounced, and was immediately swarmed by a throng of local kids.

He was a natural, this character. He walked the walk, and talked the talk. He knew the script like the back of his hand. "Ho! Ho! Ho!"

The children squealed with delight.

Certainly, they wanted the peppermint candy canes he was digging out of his red ditty bag, but more, they also wanted to brush-up against Santa's cheerful countenance. They were drawn as much by his demeanor as by his well-known uniform. He had them hooked.

The park was decorated beautifully, but the brightest lights at the park that night shone through the wide-eyed wonderment and cherubic faces that were glued to every movement of Ol' St. Nick made.

Some of the kids were old enough to question whether this was the real Santa, but most doubts were quickly idled by hope — maybe even a little fear.

"Are you going to test his beard?" one boy whispered to another.

"No dummy," the other said emphatically. "Didn't mom tell you he might not come to see us if we did."

"I've seen them do it in the movies and get away with it."

"DUH. The movies aren't for real. You know that. If you do it you're gonna be in trouble," the older of the two brothers said.

If the pair of boys had run the test, they would have learned the curly white beard was not nature's own.

But with their discovery, they would have also uncovered a better than average human being posing as Santa's understudy — one that embodies the same sort of kind-hearted exuberance so often heralded by yuletide folklore.

By day this benevolent actor earns a living as an employee of West Texas Rural Telephone, yet he is one of the most steadfast ambassadors of good will this town has, offering a smile and a magical knack for roll-playing that makes the grumpiest childhood or adult disposition soar with mirth.

He is gifted and he carries that gift as purposely as he carries his big red ditty bag.

His philanthropy within this community is not measured in money, but rather by his volunteerism — the spokes of which touch many lives, especially the young ones.

The local Make-A-Wish Foundation and Hereford YMCA are just a couple of the organizations which have received the fruits of his talents. There are many others.

This Santa always seems to be on call, always making spirits bright, night or day at special programs and community events, never appearing to be weary even though he must be.

He is surely the only Santa who has ever hung the coveted Hereford Bull Chip above his toy land hearth.

And he has even been known to impersonate "Sparky" the clown during the off-season. His cheerful personality, whether by clown or jolly elf, resonates through every crowd, every audience he has performed to.

Every community should have its very own Santa, someone who showers its residents with unselfish kindness and humble service. They should have a Santa like ours.

I believe in this Santa Claus and I don't have to test his beard to do so. I've seen him work the crowd.

I believe in Mike Harris.

Keep up the good work, Sparky.

you'll have a free lunch every day," Mack said.

Nowadays, Dennis Byrd is chief of Donrey Media Group's Little Rock bureau, but back in the early 1970s, he was assistant managing editor of the Texarkana Gazette and the man who invented the "Funky Gorilla."

I had met Dennis not long after I got out of the Army and went back to work for the Gazette. He was a journalism student at Henderson State in Arkadelphia, Ark., and was working for the paper during the summer. We became good friends, and a few years later when there was an opening for a news editor at the Gazette, he talked me into leaving the sports editor's job at the Big Spring Herald and taking the news editor's job in Texarkana.

I'm not sure whose idea it was, but a year or so after I moved to Texarkana, the nightside staff, both editorial and composing, began to have regular parties on Thursdays after we put the paper out. For several months, most of the parties were held at my house -- and that's where the world, or at least one small part of it, was introduced to the Funky Gorilla.

After a few beers and a lot of rock 'n' roll got him loose, Dennis began to dance, which was a sight in itself -- a bald, 295-pound former All-State lineman moving like one of the Temptations on steroids. As the music got faster, Dennis danced back through a door into another room, then bounced two or three times and leaped high into the air, sailing across the living room to come down -- WHOMP! -- shaking all the furniture and making me worry about the load capacity of the floor.

With everyone staring wide-eyed and with our mouths gaping open, he grinned and said, "That's the Funky Gorilla."

The Funky Gorilla was caged, at least in my house with its old wood floors, but it did reappear several times more at parties in ground-floor apartments with carpeting, carpet pads and concrete floors.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

We want to express our deepest appreciation to so many in our community and school who were such wonderful fans throughout our volleyball season.

We are so grateful for the encouraging words and supportive gestures we received since the first of August. Thank you for traveling to watch us play and creating an advantage for us from the bleachers. We want you all to know that you DO make a difference to us. Very few teams have the kind of support from their communities like we have from ours. We know that we have been blessed in many ways and appreciate all of your kindness -- win or lose.

We also want our parents and families to know how much you have meant to each of us this season. Thank you for the hours you've spent making signs and decorating locker rooms. Thanks for the miles you've traveled to watch us compete. Most importantly, thank you for your endless encouragement that you unselfishly provided through the tough workouts, nervous game days and the frustration we sometimes felt in ourselves.

We are proud to be state champions from Hereford.

and political expectations, can weigh for or against candidates. And it doesn't take many votes to alter those readings.

That magnifies the potential role of the independents. While all the candidates obviously want them, tailoring a campaign to get them is the challenge.

McCain has made the most direct, organized effort to date, his campaign claiming to have recruited some 2,500 Democrats to switch registrations to independent or Republican in order to vote for him.

The deadline for changes is past; the new registration numbers count 274,927 independents; 265,679 registered Republicans, or 36 percent; and 197,816 Democrats, 27 percent.

With their shared emphasis on political reform and bipartisanship, McCain and Bradley are campaigning with the messages that seem most likely to attract truly independent voters.

McCain has said that he and Bradley could be in a kind of separate contest for the independents.

An indirect one, as McCain challenges Gov. George W. Bush in the six-way Republican race, and Bradley runs against Vice President Al Gore.

"I'm competing against Al Gore, I'm not competing against John McCain," Bradley said the other day in Keene. But he also said he knows how to win support among independents because he did it in winning his Senate elections in New Jersey. "This is not new territory for me," he said. "There are a lot of issues to attract independents."

He shares one with McCain -- their stress on campaign finance reform.

"There are a lot of good people in politics, but they are trapped in a bad system," he said at Keene State College. "The system needs to change and campaign finance reform is the way to change it."

"I can guarantee you that if I'm president of the United States, we're going to do campaign finance reform."

Reform is the centerpiece issue in McCain's Republican campaign.

"This system makes good people do bad things and it's got to be fixed," the Arizona senator said in Exeter. "I want to get these huge amounts of money out of American politics."

It is a popular promise; McCain and Bradley are applauded every time they repeat it.

The reform summons blends with their calls for a new era of bipartisanship, which also may register with independents.

"I hate to sound like Johnny One Note," McCain said, "but if the Democrats are gridlocked by special interests and big money on one side and the Republicans are gridlocked on the other side, you're not going to get bipartisan action."

"It's time we sat down and started acting in the public interest instead of the special interests," he said.

As does Bradley: "I believe that money is a wall that comes between the people and their elected representatives."

The former New Jersey senator said he wants to end the partisan, negative tone of politics because doing that is essential to rebuilding trust in government.

New Hampshire polls indicate that Bradley has been gaining support among Democratic-inclined independents. The Gore campaign has been trying to counter that by inviting undecided voters to meet with him informally.

In the Republican contest, Bush campaigners say he'll get his share of the independents because many of them are younger voters who tend to favor the Texas governor.

'Look before you leap' takes on new meaning

Dianna F. Dandridge

'Look before you leap" is probably the one expression that closest friends and family would tell me to observe.

Too often, I react hastily and make unwise decisions without thinking about the end results. As a result, I frequently find myself up that proverbial creek, without the proverbial paddle.

This week, as stacks of "final bills" rolled in, I realized how truly grateful I am that for once I actually looked before I leaped.

This fall I was informed the price of insurance was going to increase. While not really a whole lot, it was more than I thought I could actually afford, so I contacted other agencies, thinking I could get a better deal.

Even without a better quote, I nearly dropped the policy, thinking nothing has happened in the two years I've had it, surely we'll be OK.

Right!
The day before I had to give a final answer, my son collapsed at church. We spent the evening in the emergency room. He was sent home, but he collapsed again the next day at school.

I called the Amarillo doctors, but was told it would take two weeks to get an appointment. After a third episode, I called my mother and, like me, she thought the kid needed to be seen before two weeks. She called her cardiologist and he said to bring Joshua in that day.

For the next two weeks, I made several flying trips to Lubbock to see a doctor who charges $250 just to say hello.

After several rounds of tests, we were told he had a hole in his heart. No big deal, it could be fixed the first week of summer. More tests, the date was moved up to Christmas holidays. Then something changed with the test results and I found my son in the hospital.

He was admitted on Tuesday, Oct. 18. First, he was over on the cardiology wing, then he was moved to the pediatrics.

Every day a few more tests. Finally, after every kind of cardiac test you can imagine, suddenly — after the cardiac cath — the doctors moved the surgery up from Christmas to the following Monday.

I made a flying trip home to get some clean clothes, say hello to Rebecca, feed the dog and check the mail.

So far it had been so easy. Just show the well-respected and widely accepted insurance card and get immediate attention.

The Sunday it snowed, I was on my way back to Lubbock. I got there to find my son wondering if I would drive in the snow to be there when he had surgery.

Before 7 a.m., the surgical prep team came to get him. He had faced the IVs and the thought of surgery without a tear.

Then they told him he had to take off his underwear. Then came the tears — big tears.

He got over it and by the time he went in to surgery, he was laughing again. The next time I saw him, he was pale and wan and a 9-inch incision bisected his little chest.

Shortly afterwards, the doctors told me he could have blown out his heart by standing up. The hole was larger than a silver dollar.

Tuesday morning, the doctors all came by and said how good he was doing. Dr. Bricker told him he needed to get up and walk.

My son looked up and said, "I'm not going any where without my underwear."

Bricker then said, "By all means, put your drawers on."

After that, the kid's recovery went more rapidly than anyone ever thought. He left the hospital Friday evening — four days after major heart surgery.

He spent a week with my mother, then another week at home, all the while getting more and more bored. He would check the mail and comment on how many bills we got from the same place.

Then he started adding up the amount on those bills. Once he even asked, "Am I really worth that much now?"

"I don't guess he's seen the "final bill." Even he would have to doubt his worth at $168,755 and some odd cents. Thank goodness, my portion is only 20 percent.

Yeah, the bills are in. They're enough to stagger me, but he's back to being his old energy-filled self. Yes, I'm awfully glad I didn't drop the insurance on the last day. He's even worth the final amount, but he better hold on to his drawers. It may be awhile before he gets some more.

Electric cooperative systems found ready for Jan. 1, 2000

Special to The Brand

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative has joined other electric utilities around the country that are taking steps to make sure the lights stay on as the turn of the century approaches.

"Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative has initiated 'Year 2000' assessments and remediations," said DSEC Executive Assistant Mike Veazey in a recent press release. "We believe this program will prepare our company for any problems associated with the coming of the new millennium."

"DSEC has a comprehensive checklist of steps toward 'Y2K readiness,'" Veazey said. "These steps, begun many months ago, have been to inventory, assess, test, repair or replace, retest, and plan for contingencies."

Veazey said DSEC has done assessments in all of the following areas: computer hardware and software, communications systems, critical systems, substations, and metering equipment.

According to the press release, no major problems have been identified in DSEC equipment. Company computers have been repaired or replaced to satisfy Y2K compliance.

"Much of our distribution system is mechanical and is less sensitive to Y2K problems because there are few digital controls and relatively few embedded chips in our equipment," Veazey said.

And while DSEC Cooperative has taken precautions to safeguard its delivery systems, the cooperative is still reliant on the generated wholesale power supply of New Century Energies, Southwestern Public Service's parent company. New Century Energies, in turn, is connected to regional electric power grids. There are also many other supply and delivery points all along the line, which the cooperative relies on in its daily operation, but has no control over.

Veazey said the delivery of electric power is the result of the efforts of these many different and diverse organizations.

"We are in constant contact with our wholesale power providers and our distribution material suppliers concerning the possibility of Y2K glitches in their equipment. They have assured us that everything humanly possible is being done to alleviate any Y2K problems on their systems," Veazey said.

Study: WTAMU is among low-crime campuses in U.S.

Special to The Brand

CANYON — West Texas A&M University enjoys the lowest violent crime risk of any residential university in Texas, according to data compiled in the 1999 APBnews.com/CAP Index College Community Crime Risk Assessment.

The study, which ranked all of the nation's 1,497 four-year colleges by neighborhood crime risk, focuses on violent crime, which is defined as murder, rape or robbery. The assessment of neighborhood crime risk looks at the total environment encountered by students as they move around the campus and its surrounding areas.

The institutions are ranked 1 through 1,497, with the largest number representative of the nation's lowest-risk campus environment. WTAMU came in at 1,041, the only public four-year school in Texas to place higher than 1,000 on the list.

"This figure (1,041) is a significant accomplishment," WTAMU Police Chief Eddie Wilson said.

CAP Index — its name stands for "crime against persons" — provides neighborhood crime risk assessments to clients that include the U.S. Department of Justice and companies such as the Bank of America, Exxon and McDonalds. APBnews.com has retained CAP Index to provide various crime-risk data consulting services.

The system does not measure actual crime rates, but it estimates the risk of crime for the coming year through a sophisticated computer model that compares socioeconomic data to past reports of actual crime. Factors that drive CAP Index's estimates of crime risk include household income, family structure, migration patterns, housing values and average level of education.

Wilson thinks several factors contributed to WTAMU's solid ranking.

"Our major crime rate has dropped 70 percent since 1992," Wilson said. "And, we utilize a pro-active means of crime prevention, which has had a great effect and probably contributed to pushing us out ahead of some other four-year schools that are otherwise quite similar. "We have no-tolerance policies for assault as well as for alcohol and drug abuse."

Longer periods of incarceration in Texas, a strong push within the state toward community policing programs and strong working relations with outside and on-campus organizations are other factors Wilson cites.

"The results of this study are very pleasing," WTAMU President Russell C. Long said. "The safety of our students is of utmost importance, so maintaining a safe campus environment is something on which we place a great deal of emphasis."

Anna Maria College, a small Catholic liberal arts school in Paxton, Mass., made the list as the lowest-risk school — No. 1,497.

The highest campus neighborhood risk found in the study was that of Morris Brown College in Atlanta, Ga. — No. 1.

Only two private non-residential institutions in Texas received higher rankings than WTAMU: DeVry Institute of Technology in Dallas ranks 1,409, while Northwood University in Cedar Hills ranks 1,379 on the list.

McCartney tells about band split

LONDON—Paul McCartney says he "went straight to the whisky" in the Beatles' darkest days.

McCartney spoke of the band's acrimonious split in a BBC interview.

"We had been mates. We'd come up together. It had been very beautiful. We'd done all these great things and then suddenly here we were, really bitching at each other and we'd never bitched at anyone in our lives," he said.

"So I didn't want to get up in the morning — when I did get up I went straight to the whisky. Lovely. By about three o'clock I was out of it, would go back to bed again."

McCartney plans a solo concert Dec. 14 at the Cavern Club, where the Beatles first performed in 1961. Tickets are free but limited to 200 fans. No distribution plans have been announced.

The concert is the first to be scheduled in the new stadium. More than 50,000 tickets, starting at $25, are expected to go on sale.

Heston ignores anti-gun protesters

LOS ANGELES — Charlton Heston read poetry, Shakespeare and recited a biblical passage about Moses at a Jewish center in honor of a late friend, despite anti-gun activists who said he shouldn't appear.

The group Women Against Gun Violence said it was inappropriate for Heston, president of the National Rifle Association, to do the reading Thursday night because of a shooting at a San Fernando Valley Jewish Community Center in August that left several wounded.

The shooter, who was also accused of killing a postal worker after the attack, was charged with hate crimes Thursday in a federal indictment.

The Skirball Cultural Center was one of three sites circled on a map that authorities found after the shooting, but its tight security apparently dissuaded the gunman.

Heston didn't discuss the controversy.

'The Simpsons' hitting the stage

LOS ANGELES — Have a cow, man: Bart Simpson is hitting the stage.

Actors who provide the voices of "The Simpsons" will appear at February's U.S. Comedy Arts Festival in Aspen, Colo., coinciding with the Emmy-winning animated show's 10th anniversary.

Nancy Cartwright (Bart), Hank Azaria (Mo, Apu and Chief Wiggum), Dan Castellaneta (Homer), Yeardley Smith (Lisa) and Harry Shearer (Mr. Burns, Principal Skinner) plan to attend.

"This gives the audience a rare chance to see 'The Simpsons' cast bring the dozens of characters they play to life," the show's executive producer, Mike Scully, said.

On Jan. 14, "The Simpsons" will get a star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

More than just George W. to be on the 2000 ballot

AUSTIN (AP) — Candidates began filing for the Democratic and Republican primaries on Friday. And yes, more hopefuls than just George W. Bush will be running.

While the governor who would like to be president has dominated the political news lately, the 2000 Texas ballot will include races for the U.S. Senate, all 30 U.S. House seats, 15 Texas Senate seats and all 150 seats in the Texas House.

Friday was the first day to file for the March 14 primary elections. The deadline for filing is Jan. 3.

Winning his home state's presidential primary would give Bush a big boost, since Texas will send 124 delegates to the 2000 Republican National Convention.

While Bush campaigns nationwide, at home both parties are paying lots of attention to races for the Texas Legislature.

After a century of Democratic dominance, Republicans wrested control of the Senate in 1996 and held onto it in 1998. GOP senators currently hold the slimmest-possible majority, 16-15, in the 31-seat chamber.

In the House, Democrats

still rule. But Republicans have made steady inroads in recent elections, and the Democratic edge today is a narrow 78-72.

Among other things, the 2001 Legislature will redraw legislative and congressional district lines for the next decade.

"Gaining a majority in the Texas House is a top priority for the Republican Party in 2000. We have good candidates, and we have high expectations," Robert Black, state GOP spokesman, said Friday.

"We believe that not only can we hold the Texas Senate, we can pick up seats," he added.

Mike Hailey, spokesman for the Texas Democratic Party, said his party also will be focused on legislative battles.

"It's extremely important," Hailey said. "We're confident that we will keep our majority in the House and get the Senate."

U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey

Hutchison, a Republican first elected in a 1993 special election, will be seeking re-election next year. All 30 Texas seats in the U.S. House will be on the ballot as well.

Two seats on the Railroad Commission, the panel that regulates the oil and gas industry, are up, along with eight of the 15 spots on the State Board of Education.

Voters will choose three justices of the Texas Supreme Court and three judges of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, including the presiding judge.

Corpus Christi lawyer Tom Greenwell filed for Place 1 on the criminal appeals court bench, the first Republican statewide candidate to do so Friday. "I guess you could say I'm the front-runner," Greenwell said.

Races not settled in the March 14 primary will be finished in an April 11 runoff. The 2000 general election will be held Nov. 7.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

- All 176 Pages in full color
- Each page measures a large 15x11 inches
- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over ten years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

The 176 pages offer countless maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community. Texas A&M University Geographical Laboratory staff members produced the maps based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing - county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, camping grounds, golf courses, communities, towns, and many other features too numerous to list.

From staff reports

PLAINVIEW — The Hereford Whitefaces played their second game in the Plainview Pioneer Classic and were shelled by Lubbock Estacado, 79-38 on Friday afternoon.

Lubbock Estacado had the hot hand shooting the basket in the first half, hitting 52 percent from the field. They even got hotter in the second half as they shot 53 percent from the field and outscored the Whitefaces in the third period 22-4.

The Whitefaces, who dropped their record to 1-5 on the season, shot 41 percent from the field.

Estacado was led by Willis Duvall, who made four-of-seven baskets for a team high 16 points. Gerome Duvall and Carlton Phillips contributed with 11 points each.

Hereford was led by James Stow, who scored 12 points on five-of-seven attempts. Jerry Harmon added 8 while Eric McNutt and Justin Carroll each poured in six in the loss.

Ali wins Sports Illustrated's Athlete of the Century Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali was honored as the Sportsman of the Century during Sports Illustrated's 20th Century Sports Awards at Madison Square Garden on Thursday night.

"This is a great feeling," said the three-time heavyweight champion, who playfully sparred with presenter Billy Crystal after taking the stage.

Babe Ruth was honored by the magazine's editors as the best baseball player, Michael Jordan was selected the top basketball player, Jim Brown the best football player, and Wayne Gretzky the best hockey player.

"It's great to be back in Madison Square Garden," said Gretzky, who retired after playing last season with the New York Rangers. "I wish I had my skates."

In other awards, Carl Lewis was selected the best Olympian, Jack Nicklaus the top male individual athlete and Babe Didrickson Zaharias the top female individual athlete.

The magazine also honored seven athletes who had a special impact on their sports — golfer Arnold Palmer, soccer player Pele, driver Richard Petty, baseball player Jackie Robinson, basketball player Bill Russell, figure skater Peggy Fleming and tennis player Billie Jean King.

Congress gives thumbs-up to late snow goose conservation season

Snow goose hunters take heart! Both houses of Congress passed the Arctic Tundra Habitat Emergency Conservation Act in mid-November. If all goes well in the world of politics, this action will allow the continued hunting of snow geese in a special spring conservation season featuring liberalized regulations after the close of the traditional season in mid-February.

A special spring conservation season was implemented by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service at the conclusion of the 1998-99 regular waterfowl season after a coalition of conservation groups and scientists agreed that increasing hunting opportunities was the best way to reduce a massive overpopulation of snow geese and save habitat.

Experts estimate that the number of migratory snow geese in the mushrooming mid-continent population has tripled in the last 30 years—to as many as six million. Much of this increase can be attributed to agriculture and land-use changes in wintering and migration habitats that have favored the geese.

Liberalized regulations during the conservation season allowed the use of electronic calls, unplugged shotguns, and no bag limit on light geese. A number of local waterfowling enthusiasts enjoyed tremendous success in decoying and harvesting surplus light geese during the initial special conservation season.

A lawsuit by the Humane Society of the United States and others failed to stop the 1999 conservation season, but did lead a federal judge to direct the Fish & Wildlife Service to perform the time-consuming task of compiling an Environmental Impact Statement before authorizing another special conservation season.

With the mountains of paperwork involved, the EIS could take as long as two years to complete, and the liberalized harvest of these light geese would have been stymied by legal maneuvering while the exploding population continued to damage its fragile Arctic habitat.

The wary nature of snow geese frequently thwarts conventional methods of harvesting them through sport hunting. Liberalized regulations, particularly the use of electronic calling devices, gives snow goose hunters an opportunity to fool these elusive white geese more regularly and harvest more of them.

Congressional action on the Arctic Tundra Conservation Act would allow the special conservation season on light geese to continue while the FWS completes its EIS.

A coalition of national conservation groups including the National Wildlife Federation, the National Audubon Society, American Bird Conservancy, Delta Waterfowl, and Ducks Unlimited, recognized the importance of the conservation season issue to the future of the snow goose resource, and to the habitat that the geese and other species depend upon.

Many members of the coalition mounted campaigns to inform the public and legislators about the snow goose overpopulation problem and its potentially catastrophic consequences for the Arctic. Widespread attention eventually led lawmakers to call for action.

"Congress is to be commended for their leadership on this issue," says Dr. Bruce Batt, chief biologist with Ducks Unlimited and chairman of the Arctic Goose Habitat Working Group.

"This action supports the broad consensus that has been reached, following years of study, by all who have a deep concern for these birds and the Arctic ecosystem that supports them."

Texas Congressman Tom Delay, a supporter of the conservation season, expressed satisfaction with the Congressional action.

"The Arctic habitat being destroyed is extremely fragile and will take decades or longer to be restored. This legislation will enable us to take action now, before the habitat losses are unrecoverable," he said.

Congressman John Dingell of Michigan is hopeful that U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service plans, including spring hunting, can be implemented in time to make a difference.

"As a member of the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission, I was aware of the growing problem of mid-continent snow goose overpopulation. After legislation became necessary to help solve the problem I worked with Congressional leadership to help move this legislation through the process. This problem touches areas all the way from the Arctic to Mexico," Dingell said.

New Jersey Congressman Jim Saxton, author of the legislation that would allow a conservation season to continue in the interim, says the environmental degradation in the Arctic is too severe to delay actions that will bring snow goose numbers under control and save habitat.

"The fragile Arctic ecosystem needs to be preserved now, before large tracts of habitat are possibly lost forever," Saxton emphasized.

Part of what all of this means to local sportsmen is that they should continue to have the opportunity to harvest bonus snow geese at a time when their numbers are at a peak here, and to help in this conservation issue. There are certainly no guarantees in snow goose hunting—even with electronic calling the action can be sparse, but there are also those conservation season days when the opportunity can present itself to enjoy some of the hottest action imaginable in goose hunting.

Dueling grievances could lead to longer contract for Leaf

SAN DIEGO (AP) — By filing a breach-of-contract grievance against Ryan Leaf, the San Diego Chargers are apparently trying to gain leverage over the length of the quarterback's contract.

The Chargers' grievance, filed this week, seeks to withhold the last $2.95 million payment on Leaf's $11.25 million signing bonus.

The grievance was in the works while Leaf was serving a four-week suspension for insubordination, during which he violated his NFL contract by playing flag football with friends.

Leaf was suspended without pay and fined an additional week's salary, a total of $73,530, for cursing general manager Bobby Beathard and strength coach John Hastings after refusing to do a weight workout while rehabilitating his surgically repaired right shoulder.

Leaf felt the punishment was too harsh and filed his own grievance.

Yet, he returned to practice this week, apologizing to players and team management.

Does the Chargers' grievance change the good will that both sides said was building?

Hardly.

Leaf doesn't think he's going to lose that $2.95 million payment, and thinks he'll end up with an additional year or two tacked onto the already complex deal he signed after the Chargers made him the second pick overall in the 1998 draft.

Both sides said Friday that they expect to settle the grievances in a matter of days, before the NFL Management Council sends them to arbitration.

"The intent of the resolution is to make sure that Ryan has long-term stability here," club president Dean Spanos said. "I'm happy, he's happy and we're going forward."

Neither Spanos nor Ed McGuire, the coordinator of football operations, would offer specifics, but said if the two sides resolve their differences, both grievances would be dropped.

"The end result is that Ryan Leaf is the quarterback for many years and leads this franchise to many great things," McGuire said.

That would be a change from 1998, when Leaf threw two touchdown passes and 15 interceptions, got benched and made news with boorish off-field behavior. Leaf has yet to take a snap this year, but might make brief appearances in the closing weeks of the season.

Leaf said the Chargers' grievance was a moot point with him.

"You don't want any more strain on this relationship as it is," Leaf said. "I'm just out here playing football, and they've shown me 101 percent backing, so it's not an issue to me at all."

When asked if he thought the Chargers' grievance was a way to keep him here longer, Leaf said: "I think, yeah. From what I've been told, it's just a formality. I think the best thing is, everybody seems to be on the same page with everything."

As it is Leaf's contract becomes void after the 2000 season, at which point the Chargers can "buy back" the fourth and fifth year with an additional $4 million signing bonus.

Leaf hinted that under the resolution, the contract might not void until after the 2001 or 2002 seasons, which in turn keeps that $4 million in the Chargers' pockets that much longer.

"If this goes through, it's going to be a large part on me going in and trying to shut up everybody and say, 'I don't want out of here,'" said Leaf, who twice last summer indicated he was unhappy in San Diego. "If we put an extra year on my contract, it's because I want it."

"Now, next year, what if I go out and play well and my contract's done (becomes void)?" Leaf said.

With this season basically shot, "it seems like to evaluate me and put a good effort to this team, you need two more years where I know I'm not going anywhere," Leaf said.

The two sides are still discussing his grievance, but Leaf indicated that having an additional year added to his contract would more than make up for the $73,530 in lost salary and fines.

"I think we're all on the same page that way, too," he said.

And Leaf thinks he'll see that final $2.95 million signing bonus payment, which is due March 1, one way or another.

"It's not a big deal to me," he said. "If they want to give it to me 15 years down the line when I'm done, that's fine."

Samuel drops out of list

NMSU coach drops himself from Texas Tech football job candidacy

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico State football coach Tony Samuel says the opportunity was good, but the timing was bad.

Samuel on Friday withdrew as a candidate for the head coach's job at Texas Tech.

He was among three frontrunners in the search to replace Spike Dykes, who announced his retirement after the Oklahoma-Texas Tech game on Nov. 20, when Tech closed out its season with a 6-5 overall record.

Samuel said he was in the midst of building up his NMSU team, and did not want to risk taking any steps backward.

"It's flattering that they (Tech) want to take a look at us. It's a good sign for the New Mexico State University program," he said.

The Aggies last month wrapped up their first winning season since 1992 with a 6-5 overall record and a 3-3 mark in the Big West Conference.

Samuel said Texas Tech athletic director Gerald Myers had contacted NMSU athletic director Brian Faison about Samuel's availability for the Tech job.

"It was a good shot in the arm for the (NMSU football) program," Samuel said. "There was just a lot of positive energy that came out of it." A lot of people told me that they would hate to see me go.

But Samuel, who has completed his third year of a four-year contract, said there's too much going on with recruiting at NMSU.

"It's building up. We've got a lot of good people making visits and we don't want to risk that," he said.

The other leading candidates for the Tech job are Clemson offensive coordinator Rich Rodriguez and Oklahoma offensive coordinator Mike Leach, Myers said.

Samuel said he did not know if he would have been the choice to succeed Dykes.

"I know I might be in there, but I don't know if I wanted to stick it out to find out," Samuel said.

Myers said he has an idea who the new coach will be, but wouldn't identify him.

The school wants a young new head coach with a flair for a spread-it-out, passing offense, said Myers, who is leading the search to replace Dykes.

The earliest that Texas Tech can appoint a new coach is at 5 p.m. Tuesday because state law requires that the job posting be posted for 10 working days.

Myers said he was flying to San Antonio Friday for Saturday's Big 12 Conference championship game. He said no new interviews will be conducted during the week-end.

Spurs get beaten by Motor City Pistons, 102-80

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Grant Hill scored 28 points as the Detroit Pistons ended San Antonio's seven-game winning streak with a 102-80 win Friday night.

David Robinson had 15 points, Tim Duncan 14 and Chuckie Brown 13 for the Spurs, which made only three baskets in the fourth quarter. San Antonio, which shot only 36 percent from the field, went into the game tied with Portland for the NBA's best record at 14-3.

Jerry Stackhouse scored six of his 21 points as Detroit opened the third quarter with a 9-2 run. His driving layup gave the Pistons a 74-52 lead with 2:46 left in the third quarter.

The Spurs took a 12-4 lead with three consecutive jumpers by Duncan to start the game. Robinson's three-point play with 7:02 left in the quarter gave San Antonio a 17-9 lead, but the Pistons rallied.

Lindsey Hunter, who finished with 20 points, scored eight of his 12 first-quarter points as the Pistons went on a 16-6 run. Detroit took its first lead, 25-23, on a jumper by Michael Curry with 52 seconds left in the quarter.

Mavericks rookie faces new troubles off the court

CHICAGO (AP) — Troubled Dallas Mavericks rookie Leon Smith was back in custody of Chicago police Friday night hours after he was released on bond from a charge of threatening his ex-girlfriend.

Police said they are interviewing the basketball player about a complaint that he broke several windows of his ex-girlfriend's mother's new car Friday afternoon.

Smith, who went to the NBA directly from Chicago's King High School, was arrested Thursday night on a charge of assaulting his ex-girlfriend at a Chicago high school. He posted $100 bail Friday morning and was released pending a Dec. 29 court appearance.

The ex-girlfriend's mother called police later Friday saying Smith went to her home on Chicago's West Side and smashed her car windows.

Smith's agent did not immediately return a call Friday night.

The new accusations are just the latest against the 19-year-old, who spent his childhood as a ward of the state but seemed headed to a better life. A star high school player, he averaged 25.5 points and 14.5 rebounds as a senior. Then he made a big leap, going right to the NBA as a first-round draft pick.

Signing a $1.4 million contract, however, has not done any wonders for him.

Smith has not played a minute in his troubled rookie year with the Dallas Mavericks. His arrest follows an apparent suicide attempt last month.

Although his agent says he hopes Smith eventually can play in the NBA, the case has raised questions about the way teams help — or fail to help — the increasing number of teens who skip college for a shot at the pros.

Unlike others, such as Minnesota Timberwolves star Kevin Garnett and Indiana's Al Harrington, who found their niche on teams right out of high school, Smith has been sidelined — he's officially on the injured reserve list with back problems.

Smith also been isolated from the rest of the team and refused suggestions that he spend time playing overseas or in a developmental league.

"He was only 18 years old when he was drafted, then got put in an organization that tells him they don't need him right now," said Ormon O'Quinn, a former assistant basketball coach at Chicago's Martin Luther King High School, where Smith played. "Then they want to send him to a foreign land. He doesn't speak a foreign language."

Smith, who had lived in group homes since becoming a state ward at age 5, feels frustrated because he cannot play, O'Quinn said. That, combined with a lot of money and no role models, resulted in someone who is scared and susceptible to problems off the court, he said.

"When you're drafted in the first round of the NBA, you want to play in the NBA like all rookies do," he said. "Now they just gave him lot of money and throw him to the side."

O'Quinn believes the isolation exacerbated Smith's off-court troubles.

Smith was arrested on Nov. 14 and put in a psychiatric ward after Dallas police found him overdosed on aspirin. He was charged with criminal mischief after he reportedly smashed the rear window of a friend's sport utility vehicle.

On Thursday, he was arrested after allegedly threatening his ex-girlfriend with a gun on Wednesday at John Marshall High School on Chicago's West Side.

"Idle time brings on idle problems," O'Quinn said. "Leon is not crazy, he's looking for some attention."

Mavericks coach Don Nelson on Thursday said he hopes Smith gets needed help. Mavericks spokesman Greg Elkin said the team would have no further comment.

But Mavericks forward Cedric Ceballos on Friday said the situation was mishandled.

"As soon as they made the decision 'this is our draft pick,' he should have been around so we could teach him, groom him, put him together," Ceballos said. "Obviously he's scared. But if you go through four years of college, you're scared."

"But if you put him in a shell, make him feel special or treat him different because of the situation, it kind of puts the pressure on him more and makes him feel like he's done something wrong."

O'Quinn said he'd hoped the Mavericks would treat Smith like Harrington or the Pacers, who lived with older player Antonio Davis' family after joining the team.

Garnett, who was drafted out of a Chicago high school in 1995, rebuffed a Timberwolves suggestion that he live with University of Minnesota players so he could be around kids his own age, Timberwolves spokesman Jim LaBumard said. But he said vice president of operations Kevin McHale paid special attention to Garnett, often talking about issues unrelated to basketball.

Dan Wasserman, spokesman for the National Basketball Players Association, said the union has been trying to help Smith. Wasserman would not give specifics, but said the player assistance program often provides counseling and mentoring.

Smith's agent, Matt Muehlebach, said he is trying to "focus on today and getting him better and getting him to a point where he can contribute either to Dallas or any other team."

Love ya, Herd

Music teacher Tammy Yenzler and physical education instructor Jill Harrison hold a sign made by Northwest Intermediate School students urging the Hereford Whitefaces to victory in Saturday's playoff game against Hewitt Midway in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium. The sign was supposed to be across the street in front of the school for the first Herd bus to break as the team headed out of town. However, Mother Nature interfered when strong winds tore the sign, just seconds before the bus convoy arrived.

HISD students gear up for fair

Budding scientists will get a chance to show off their knowledge next month at the Hereford Independent School District's annual science fair.

The fair will be Jan. 24-28, 2000, in the banquet room at the HISD Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Ave. Students will set up their projects for judging on Jan. 24, with public viewing to be Jan. 27.

Students already have started planning for the science fair, which saw participation by more than 650 students last year.

The fair is designed to:

- Stimulate interest in science and engineering;
- Emphasize the positive aspects of young people and encourage creativity and curiosity;
- Give public recognition to talented students;
- Encourage students to experience the wonders of science through individual involvement in preparing a project;
- Teach students how to recognize a problem, pursue a solution and draw conclusions;
- Encourage students to study mathematics and sciences; and
- Encourage exploration of the Internet.

Campus coordinators for the fair include Dorothy Szydloski, Hereford High; Jana Rudd, Hereford Junior High; Jeanie Conway, West Central; Diane Stokes, Bluebonnet; Twyla Jones, Shirley; Jan Reeve, Aikman; Mary O'Rear, Aikman; Elaine Calkins, Northwest; Connie Gilbert, Hereford Junior High; Virginia McWhorter, West Center; Tonya Stewart, Bluebonnet; Cristal Kelso, Bluebonnet; Kelly Goodin, Shirley; Nicole Schulte, Aikman; and Diane Tannahill, Tierra Blanca.

Students will be allowed to set up their projects 9 a.m.-8 p.m. Jan. 24 in the exhibition hall. Transportation from the various campuses to the administration building will be provided by the school district during regular school hours or they may be accompanied by a parent that evening.

The projects will be judged Jan. 25-26 by several volunteer citizens representing the local community. Top honors will be awarded at special ceremonies beginning at 9:15 a.m. Jan. 27.

The judges will select the best six projects by grade level in each of four divisions: life, physical, earth, chemistry and behavioral social sciences. Students whose entries are selected will be interviewed by the judges who will then determine final placements.

First-place winners of each division will be judged against each other to determine which entry earns the Best of Division honors. The Judges Choice Award will be given to the project the judges believe has the best display.

Public viewing of the projects with their award designations will be 10:15 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Jan. 27, with the projects being removed Jan. 28.

Teen violence seminar set

Special to The Brand

AMARILLO — Free seminars on teen violence will be conducted at Amarillo College.

"Teen Violence: Saving Lives by Heeding the Warnings" will begin at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in Durrett Hall.

Instructors will offer guidance on confrontational vs. supportive approaches, and provide referral information.

The curriculum includes three parts: motivation, awareness and intervention.

Instructors are Diana Rudolph, a clinical psychologist with Northwest Texas Healthcare System, and Roberts Allen, a clinical social worker and alcohol/drug counselor. Allen also is the new director for therapeutic services for Quest Hospital.

YOUR EYES

Puffy Eyes

One look in the mirror after a fitful night's sleep is enough to make anyone want to hide under the blankets. One of the most common signs of lack of sleep are puffy eyes. You can also get puffy eyes by crying. But lack of sleep and crying are not the only causes of puffiness. If you're menstruating or you eat salty foods or drink anything - even water - less than two hours before you go to bed, you may wake up with puffy eyes.

If you want to get rid of the puffiness before starting your day, put a cold compress or apply a cold tea bag wrapped in tissue on each eye for about five minutes. Tea contains tannin, a natural astringent which helps reduce puffiness.

To avoid puffy eyes in the first place, take a good look at your diet. You may be eating too many salty foods. Avoid alcohol if that's the culprit.

Finally, when you go to bed at night, sleep with two or three pillows so your head is raised. That will help keep the water from pooling under your eyes.

The rest of the story

(Editor's Note: The story of how Roger Abalos and Cathy Rangel met on the Internet was featured in a previous edition of the Hereford Brand. This is the conclusion of their cyber-romance story, when modern meets traditional.)

By Becky Thorn

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

Asking for a girl's hand in marriage is as traditional as cyber-romance is modern. Yet that's exactly where the cyber-romance between Roger Abalos and Cathy Rangel has led.

"Basically I'm an old-fashioned guy," Roger said. "And I wanted to ask Cathy's dad for her hand in marriage and get my parents' blessing."

Roger met his future bride on the Internet in April and in person for the first time in June when he went to her sister's wedding in Corpus Christi.

They decided they were "soul mates" and Roger moved from Hereford to Corpus to be near Cathy.

With time, the couple found they had more and more in common.

"Of the millions of people she and I could have met on the Internet, we just happened to run across each other. She was from the Panhandle, I was from the Panhandle, my dad knew two of her uncles. We find more in common all the time," Roger said.

Although he had already asked her to marry him and she had said yes, they wanted to pursue the more traditional engagement routine of asking for the woman's hand in marriage.

The couple, along with her parents and his, met for a family dinner on the Friday night after Thanksgiving.

"It felt a little awkward, but between the salad and the main course, I just said, 'Well, I don't know when the proper time is for me to say what I'm going to say, but Mr. Rangel, I am very much in love with your daughter. She came into my life at a time when I was ready for a relationship and I am asking for your permission to marry her,'" Roger said.

"My dad got real quiet. He's not a real emotional person, but he kind of got choked up," Cathy said. "He just looked over at my mom and asked her, 'So what do you think?'"

It was a very emotional time for all involved, Cathy said, because she has always been close to her mom and they realized they were going to have to let go of each other.

And, even though Cathy's dad never actually said yes, her mom gave her blessing and her dad said if it was what Cathy wanted they were behind her.

"And that's a lot from my dad because he doesn't say very many things or show a lot of outward emotion," Cathy said.

Then Roger turned to his parents and said, "Well, what I'm asking from you all is that I have your blessing," Roger said, and they gave it.

"We think she is a great girl and we're glad she is coming into the family. We're glad that Roger found her," Pilar Abalos, Roger's mother, said.

Two other people to be considered in this relationship are Roger's children, Roger, 16, (known as Little Roger) and Tamara, 13.

"Tamara has been telling me for years, 'Dad, why don't you go out and find me a stepmother so she can do all the work,'" Roger said.

In response to the question about what they thought of Cathy, Tamara said, "She's nice," and Little Roger said, "She's pretty cool."

As to the romance having begun via the Internet, Paul Abalos, Roger's father, said, "I'm not into all that, but I've read about it and heard about it, but so much of it is bad. I just thought, well if it happens, it happens, but my first impression was, 'I hope nobody gets hurt.'"

The budding romance between Roger and Cathy could very well not ever have bloomed because Roger was not completely honest originally — he sent a picture of his roommate, telling her it was his picture.

They got to know one another by visiting online and by phone, so that when Roger confessed what he had done, Cathy was willing to accept his apology.

"If one of my children told me they had met someone over the Internet, my first question would probably be, 'Are you sure they are who they say they are?'" Roger said.

"As for meeting on the Internet, it worked for Cathy and me, but I would advise anyone else not to rush into anything, to be truthful and to get to know the person online and then maybe on the phone," he said.

Roger and Cathy are also following this advice. Although they have agreed to get married, the wedding date is not until December of 2000.

Winners announced in Shriners give-away

The Oasis Shrine of Hereford has once again held a successful fund-raiser, according to secretary L.J. Clark.

Each year the local Shrine club holds a give-away for two ½-beef. The winners this year were Wayne Winget of Hereford and Nancy Brown of Borger.

"Thanks to all who bought tickets and to the feedyards, Beef Tech Inc. and Circle 3, who donated the beef to us, we have once again raised a substantial amount," Clark said.

The proceeds from the give-away help with the expenses of crippled children who go to Houston and Galveston for treatment and a final cure for their physical ailments.

It also keeps the 1927 fire truck, which is maintained by the Oasis Shriners, ready to go to the parades in this area.

Christmas lighting is to be judged

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division will sponsor the annual Christmas Lighting Contest for homes and businesses.

Nominations will be accepted for any home or business in Hereford.

Entry forms will be available at the chamber office, 701 N. Main, beginning Dec. 1 and completed forms must be returned to the chamber office by 5 p.m. on Dec. 15.

Categories are: residential, total home or residential windows and doors; and total business, or business windows and doors.

Engagement announcement

Angelina Fischer, Damian Charles Artho

John and Elisabeth Fischer of San Antonio announce the engagement of their daughter, Angelina Mae Fischer, to Damian Charles Artho.

The prospective groom is the son of Raymond and Christi Artho of Vega. He is the grandson of Roberta Artho of Hereford and the late Elroy Artho and Marie Loerwald of Hereford and the late Gene Loerwald.

The couple will be married Dec. 29 in the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Vega.

The bride-elect is a 1995 graduate of William H. Taft High School in San Antonio. She graduated from Texas A&M University in August 1999 with a degree in Agronomy.

Artho graduated from Vega High School in 1995 and is a candidate for December graduation from Texas A&M with a degree in Biomedical Science. He plans to attend Parker Chiropractic College in the spring of 2000.

Texas Partnership set to meet

The annual meeting for the Texas Partnership for Farm Family Health and Safety, Inc., will be held from 5:15-7 p.m. Tuesday in the banquet room of Hereford Community Center.

All interested citizens are invited to come and be a part of this activity. The 2000 calendar of events will be shared and election of officers for the year will take place.

Officers for 1999-2000 year have included Jaime Brorman, president; Loretta Urbanczyk, vice president; Melody Betzen, secretary and Brenda Campbell, treasurer. Janice Brumley served as the Progressive Farmer Safety Day Camp Coordinator and Sue Malamen serves as council representative on the Texas Council of Agricultural Safety and Health.

The Texas partnership is an incorporated, non-profit organization that creates innovative solutions to the hazards and health concerns that families face daily on the farm or ranch.

During the last year, the partnership has featured educational exhibits at numerous activities, presented programs for schools and civic clubs reaching both adults and youth, hosted the first Progressive Farmer Safety Day Camp for youth in the fifth grade in public and private schools, presented media information, held training for partnership members and organized the first of its kind partnership in the State of Texas.

The Deaf Smith County Texas Partnership started with an original grant from the Southwest Center for Agricultural Health and Injury Prevention of Tyler.

The Nursing Division of West Texas A&M University conducted initial health and injury surveys of several Panhandle communities. Deaf Smith County survey participants indicated an interest in forming an on-going educational endeavor.

Working with the Family and Consumer Sciences area of the Deaf Smith County Texas Agricultural Extension Service, a group began forming that would provide an educational service to the community in presenting information to aid rural families in preventing injuries and improving health.

All interested persons are invited to attend the annual meeting Tuesday. Companies are invited to send representatives. More information may be obtained by calling the County Extension Office at 364-3573.

Pierson honored on 80th birthday

C. W. (Walter) Pierson was honored on his 80th birthday with a reception hosted by his wife and children in the Assembly of God Fellowship Hall.

Pierson was born Nov. 29, 1919. He retired from farming 10 years ago, but still works on a part-time basis for local feedyards.

Pierson and his wife, Lenora, have four children, sons Charley, who is an Assembly of God pastor in Dell City; Billy, who is an Assembly of God pastor in Pearland; Dale, who works for the Texas Workforce Commission in Dumas; and daughter Esther Allen, who teaches school in Dumas.

They have 15 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

FCE Christmas activity planned

Deaf Smith County Family Community Education Council and clubs will hold their annual Christmas Activity at noon Monday in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library. Members will meet for a covered dish luncheon, and reminded to bring unwrapped donations for the community service project.

For more information, all 364-3573.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Buying a business: Don't be The Greater Fool (First of two parts)

I have a theory about selling a business. Sometimes it is easier to find a fool than a qualified buyer. There is an old saying that no matter how big the fool, there is always a bigger fool to admire him. I often see this theory proved when a business is about to change hands. A new potential owner will ignore business danger signals, take a seller's word for gospel and wade in deep. Please stay with me here. I'm not saying that everyone selling a business will misrepresent the business or try to cheat a potential buyer. There are many honest people who have legitimate reasons for selling their businesses.

However, I see many so called "exciting opportunities" turn into "costly disasters" when buyers don't look before they leap. Let me share some real life examples. I've changed the names and business types to protect individuals and businesses.

True buyer beware stories

Mary took early retirement and used some of her retirement savings to purchase a small business complete with building and equipment. The shop had been closed for several months, but the previous owner assured Mary that the old customers would still be loyal. He was right. All three of them still came in for coffee every day.

Mary had to take a part-time night job to keep the bills paid. She may never get her retirement funds back.

Sharon and Terry were so happy to find a business to buy that they never asked to see the financial statements. They paid nearly $250,000 for about $100,000 worth of assets and a list of funds back.

After the sale was finalized, the previous owner came to the business nearly every day and hauled away equipment, tools and fixtures that he said weren't part of the deal. Sharon talked to an attorney, but without a written list of assets there was no recourse. Sharon and Terry still feel they were cheated.

Jim's "friend" kept bugging him to buy a part of his business. The two of them could turn it into a real gold mine his friend promised. Finally, the price got so low for a half interest that Jim agreed.

Jim signed the papers and the work began. A few months later Jim discovered that he was legally obligated for half of a mountain of debt. The gold mine had turned into the shaft.

All of these incidents had unhappy consequences. And, I believe the buyers could have avoided all of these nasty situations.

A word to the wise

You've heard the adage, "A word to the wise is sufficient." Here are a few words to help you avoid becoming the greater fool when buying a business.

There are two areas in every business where there is value. The first area is the market value of the assets the business owns. This is what the furniture, fixtures, equipment, inventory, vehicles, etc. would bring if offered for sale under reasonable circumstances.

The market value should not be confused with the book value of assets shown on the balance sheet. The balance sheet values may be significantly higher or considerably lower than the actual "what-is-it-worth-today" price.

The second area of value in a small business is its future earning potential. If you buy the assets of a business, what can you expect to earn as income? And, what return will you get on your investment?

Next week I'll give you a step-by-step approach to use when considering the purchase of a business and for arriving at a fair price. Don't miss "Buying a business: Don't be The Greater Fool" part two.

Don Taylor is the co-author of Up Against the Wal-Marts. You can reach him at Minding Your Own Business, PO Box 67, Amarillo, TX 79105.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Rebecca Walls
Some of you have noticed that my mood will sometimes determine what books appear on the new book list that week. Before you look at the selection of books this week and begin to wonder, I must make it very clear

- I am not pregnant nor is my daughter. However, while Christmas shopping last weekend I noticed several women that were.

So when I saw Baby Names Around the World, The Good Housekeeping Illustrated Book of Pregnancy and Baby Care, Your Pregnancy and Getting Ready for the Baby I thought someone, or several someones, may like to have these books now.

The Automotive Repair Manual did get put on the new book list because I had trouble with my car this morning. This manual wasn't much help for me because I drive a Ford and the manual is for Dodge Caravan, Plymouth Voyager and Chrysler Town and Country Mini Vans.

Because of tight budgets, figure problems and because I'm in the mood to sew, Easy Guide to Sewing Pants, Fabric Savvy, Easy Guide to Sewing Jackets, Weekend Sewer's Guide to Pants and Skirts, and Sewing a Travel Wardrobe also made the new book list.

The last one is wishful thinking, for I have no travel plans. Although if any of you need a travel partner, please keep me in mind. I'll help you with your wardrobe.

Donna Kooler's 555 Christmas Cross-Stitch Designs and Santa Claus: An American Treasure are also on the new book list. If you start right now you could have all 555 cross-stitch patterns completed by Christmas.

Along with the cross-stitch patterns, Santa Claus gives the history and origin of each Father Christmas included in the book. After looking at the book you may want to take up cross-stitch.

Now are you in the mood for a spine-tingling thriller?

Peter Straub, the "Edgar Allan Poe of our times" has crafted just the thing in Mr. X. Every year on his birthday Ned Dunstan experiences a paralyzing seizure. It is during the seizures that Ned is forced to witness scenes of ruthless slaughter performed by a mysterious figure in black named Mr. X by Ned.

This year as his birthday approaches, Ned is pulled back to his hometown by a premonition that his mother is dying. Before Star loses her hold on life, she gives Ned the name of his father and warns him that he is in grave danger.

Despite Star's warning, Ned is determined to learn all he can about his absent father. Unknown to Ned the search for his father will throw him into a series of extraordinary adventures.

Ned discovers he is shadowed by an identical twin brother who can pass through doors without opening them, and that isn't the only law of nature he is able to defy.

Ned becomes the lead suspect in three violent murders. Ned learns of, and begins to investigate, the "shadow world" within Edgerton, learns to "eat time" and remembers one occasion when he and his brother were united as a single being.

Now Ned must call upon everything he has learned to save himself in the final battle with evil.

Sara Paretsky's Hard Time is another V.I. Warshawski novel that promises to be the best yet. A multimedia conglomerate, Global Entertainment, has purchased the Chicago Herald Star.

The purchase of the paper is forcing the staff to scramble to even stay employed. Reporter Murray Ryerson has managed to secure a job as a television show host. That is, if he can perform.

V.I. is on her way home from a party celebrating Murray's debut when she almost runs over a woman lying in the street. V.I. is determined to solve the mystery of this battered woman that has been discarded like a bag of trash.

Little does V.I. know that she has entered the most emotionally shattering case of her career involving a wealthy Chicago family, the pampered world of Hollywood stars and a women's prison.

Eye of the Beholder by Jayne Ann Krentz features Deco Art expert Alexa Chambers who has an eye for art, a flair for style and a need for a job.

Alexa exposed her boss as a fraud. It seems he was selling fake pieces to wealthy clients. Alexa's reward was no job and a tainted reputation as an art dealer.

With no other choice left, Alexa moves home to Avalon, Ariz., and opens her own shop. Determined to rebuild her career, Alexa agrees to work as a consultant on a deco collection being exhibited at the new Avalon Resorts.

The resorts are owned by J.L. Trask, the man who accused Alexa's stepfather of murder. Trask insisted that the fatal car crash that took his father's life was no accident. Trask vowed he would have his revenge 12 years earlier. Now he wants to piece the past together.

Alexa wants to protect her family. When a killer emerges, Alexa and Trask team together for survival.

4-H members master nutrition skills

Knowledge of nutrition and food safety were demonstrated by local 4-H youth during the Deaf Smith County 4-H Food Show, a judged event held at the Hereford Community Center on Nov. 19.

Junior, Intermediate and Senior-level youth prepared foods in four categories and were interviewed by judges to determine who would advance to the District contest on Dec. 4 at Valleyview Middle School. The food classes included main dish, nutritious snacks, fruits and vegetables, and breads.

Those qualifying to compete on the District level are:

Seniors: Kylee Auckerman with "Vegetable Pizza Ole" in Fruits and Vegetables; and Dawn Auckerman, "Italian Peasant Bread" in Breads.

Intermediate: Stephanie Shaw with "Taco Soup" in Main Dish; and Chelsea Blain with "Roasted Fan Potatoes" in Fruits and Vegetables.

Juniors: Chelsea Campbell with "Apple Salsa" in Fruits and Vegetables; Amy Adams with "Bacon 'n' Cheddar Bubble Bread" in Breads; Erika Culp with "Nifty Nana Shake" in Nutritious Snacks; and Shayla Wilcox with "Chinese Chicken Salad" in Main Dish.

Also competing in the local food show were Junior-level 4-Hers Sandi Navarette, Madison Urbanczyk, Nichole Goodall, Kaci Gallagher, Kristen O'Rear, Kalyn Esqueda, Sandra Martinez and Jessica Blakely.

The youth participated in a workshop in October that focused on learning sports nutrition, the food guide pyramid complete with food experiments, the basics of food safety and food preparation, and utilized food models. The teen leaders for the event included Kylee and Dawn Auckerman, Jerad and Justin Johnson, and Stephanie Shaw.

A new aspect of the 4-H Foods and Nutrition Project is the Nutrition Quiz Bowl. Teams of contestants answer questions on the Food Guide Pyramid, basic nutrition, food science, preparation, storage, safety, and consumer skills. Deaf Smith County will field three teams in the District Quiz Bowl, also to be held Dec. 4.

Texas Tech raises tastier pork

System produces better meat, less environmental damage

LUBBOCK (AP) — Researchers at Texas Tech University say they've created a new hog-raising system that creates tastier pork without all the environmental damage associated with conventional hog farms.

The system, called Sustainable Pork, features a back-to-the-future twist. The hogs are raised in uncrowded houses or in pastures fertilized by the pigs' manure. Sows nurse piglets in pens, much like on the farms of yesteryear.

It's a far cry from current large hog-farming operations, in which pigs are raised in crowded buildings with slatted metal or concrete floors that let waste drop through and be funneled to open-air lagoons. Neighbors and environmentalists have complained about the farms' stench and threat to water supplies.

The Sustainable Pork system is the creation of John James McGlone, a professor of animal science and food technology at Texas Tech and head of its Pork Industry Institute.

"In 20 years, half of all pigs will be raised this way. Fifty years from now, this is the only way pork will be produced," McGlone told the Texas Journal of the Wall Street Journal. "Consumers will demand it."

McGlone estimated that at least 5 percent of the pork-buying public — which could amount to $700 million in the wholesale market — would pay more for meat that tasted better and was produced in a more environmentally benign manner.

Texas ranked just 20th in the United States in hog production last year, at 1.2 million hogs. McGlone believes that within 20 years hogs will outnumber cattle in Texas feedlots, which now process 6 million cattle a year.

He said the arid climate, available grain and water, transportation and empty spaces make the Southern Great Plains perfect for hog production.

The day of mass raised pen-fed pigs may be drawing to an end if researchers can convince producers and buyers of the better taste and quality of pasture fed hogs.

Meat from the first large-scale test of Sustainable Pork is scheduled to be tested starting Dec. 9. Previous tests found the pork to be more tender, juicy and flavorful than pork raised in confined quarters, Texas Tech researchers say.

Plans call for Sustainable Pork to be marketed at upscale groceries with a label declaring that the hogs didn't receive ongoing doses of antibiotics — which are frequently given to healthy hogs to help them gain weight and prevent disease — and were raised in an animal-friendly way.

The National Pork Producers Council, based in Des Moines, Iowa, defends current hog-farming methods.

"The concept of raising hogs for specific consumer groups is promising, but there's nothing inferior about modern hog production," said a spokesman, Steven Cohen. "We think the typical production systems' designs and operations are very animal-friendly."

In some West Texas towns, large hog-farming companies have been invited in to bolster the economy. But they have also prompted opposition.

In the Panhandle town of Perryton, a few miles south of the Oklahoma border, neighboring farms sued Japanese pork producer Nippon Meat Co. after it built a complex of waste lagoons and barns holding 1,000 hogs each. After an initial setback, Nippon won a permit from the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to operate the farm.

Peanut farmers harvest record crops

Urbanization, horse farms claim old peanut land

WHITESBORO, Texas (AP) — Many peanut growers in Grayson County are finding more profitable ways to use their land and time, but a few, such as Tom Harville, haven't given up.

"I've done some hellacious hard work here," Harville said, looking over the plot where he started growing peanuts in 1942, using mule power to tame 30 acres. "Right here was a burred-up mess."

Recently, Harville and two helpers finished a harvest of nearly 15 tons — one of just five peanut harvests in Grayson County this year. He said he "might have made a little" money after losing some in the recent droughts.

But Harville, going on 85 and fighting cancer, is one of a vanishing breed in this county, just south of the Oklahoma state line.

New homes are being built on land that was once used to grow peanuts. The highways are getting more crowded as commuters and horse farms begin to move in.

Recent profit-killing droughts and a change in federal farm policy has driven the peanut growers out of business in Grayson, Denton and Fannin counties.

"It's a thing of the past. Just like cotton," said Dan Spartman, who didn't fire up his peanut dryer this year in the Denton County town of Aubrey. No nuts, no need to lose money.

"I'll just let it sit there and tear it down" after more than 30 years of operation, Spartman said.

But Harville doesn't want to let go of the land. "That would ruin the place," he said.

Harville has worked his own land in the past, but this year he leased 110 acres from a local family, paying them with a fourth of his peanuts and a third of his hay.

In 1945, Harville was one of 600 peanut farmers in Grayson County who combined for 7.9 million pounds of peanuts from 13,329 acres. This year, five of the county's 12 peanut growers produced about 200,000 pounds on an estimated 150 acres.

Texas is the nation's second-largest producer of peanuts, behind Georgia, and the state's total crop is approaching record levels this year, Mary Webb, executive director of the Texas Peanut Producers Board, told The Dallas Morning News.

But much of the action has moved to West Texas — from Comanche and Eastland counties, historically the heart of Texas peanut production, and from the smaller centers such as Grayson County.

With plenty of sand, a favorable climate and irrigation,

Gaines, Terry, Dawson and Yoakum counties last year accounted for 59 percent of the state's total production.

The changes began in 1978 when Congress began limiting the amount of peanuts farmers could sell at a federally set price.

The idea was to ensure a predictable supply of the perishable peanuts and provide farmers with stable incomes, while preventing price-lowering surpluses.

"I've done some hellacious hard work here. Right here was a burred-up mess."

Tom Harville, longtime peanut grower

In setting the price for average-grade peanuts at $610 per ton, Congress in 1996 allowed farmers for the first time to sell or lease their quotas to growers in other counties. And farmers, many sacked by recent droughts, have taken advantage of the opportunity.

"They're tired of fighting it, and they're not making any money," said Leon Huneycutt, who owns a peanut dryer near Collinsville, Grayson County's last such operation. A dryer prepares peanuts from the field for sale to a sheller.

With such odds, some peanut growers north of Dallas have turned to other crops or idled their land. Some are simply retiring with no one taking their place. Or, like other farmers, they are harvesting dollars by selling or subdividing their land as demand for housing booms prices.

Horse farms have settled across much of former peanut country in Denton County. And such operations are moving north into Grayson County. The sand helps cushion the animals' legs and is prime for growing the coastal Bermuda grass they like to eat. Turf farms, serving the expanding residential housing market, are also thriving in the area.

"The horse people have taken up all the land," said Jim Blaylock, who has been farming peanuts in Denton County since 1982. "You sell the land for the best use, and that's the best use right now."

Alternative crops provide solutions

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Farmers who turn to alternative crops or seek help from a new generation of agricultural cooperatives could find relief from falling prices that threaten the family farm, agriculture experts say.

For farmers willing to adjust their work habits, a few acres of tomatoes might be enough to turn the farm into a profitable enterprise. For others, the solution may be participating in cooperatives that focus on finding markets for crops instead of simply buying bulk supplies.

"We just think farmers need to think outside the box," said Bruce Johnson, marketing and support manager for Producers Alliance, a new effort by the Illinois Farm Bureau to expand agricultural markets.

Speakers at a conference on new approaches to farming urged farmers Tuesday to consider everything from specialty fruits to small-scale timber harvests to allowing hunters to use their land for a fee.

Falling federal supports, domestic overproduction, drought and soft overseas markets in recent years have left many farmers financially drained, threatening the viability of some farms. The Illinois Farm Bureau recently reported that a majority of Illinois farms will not make enough to cover family living expenses this year, with 20 percent falling to cover even operating expenses.

Fruits and vegetables such as tomatoes, blueberries, sweet corn and squash consistently out-earn feed corn and soybeans and can be the one profitable crop on many farms, said Jeff Kindhart, a fruit and vegetable crop expert with the University of Illinois Extension Service in Dixon Springs.

But high labor costs and more intensive management requirements scare many farmers away, he said.

Production-oriented cooperatives are another alternative, Johnson said. Such organizations typically include a limited number of farmers who send their crops to a centralized facility that produces a consumer product. Participating farmers earn their living off shares of the profits of that cooperative.

Dry weather ahead

National Weather Service expects below average winter moisture

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Drought or downpour. Moisture for area farms never seems to be just right.

Total rainfall for the area this year is standing at more than 26 inches. Six inches more than normal. Unfortunately farmers have seen less than an inch since August.

Many farmers were able to get the winter wheat planted with available ground moisture, but now are seeing the tops burn off. Cattlemen are looking at additional feeds stuffs, and playa lakes are rapidly drying up.

"It's hard to say, but we could be in the beginning stages of another drought," said Ken Schneider, National Weather Service meteorologist.

The good news is a weather system is moving through the area possibly producing as much as five inches of wet snow which will equal about a half inch of moisture.

The long-term outlook is not so good. The models indicate temperatures for December should be slightly above normal with near normal precipitation of .43 inches.

Winter forecasts through the winter season of 2000 also include above average temperatures and slightly below average precipitation.

Farmers throughout the area say the same thing. "You can't count on the weather. What often looks like a good year ends up badly. Bad years often show very good results. If you're counting on the weather — don't."

AAM makes a comeback

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — A farm organization that was highly visible during the financial crisis that hit agriculture in the early to mid-1980s is making a comeback after stumbling on its own finances.

Joyce Jobgen, the national treasurer of the American Agriculture Movement, said the group's lobbying office in Washington, D.C., racked up a huge debt that nearly floored the organization.

AAM, which focuses on the preservation of the family farm, faded into the background several years ago after gaining notoriety with a 1979 tractorcade on Washington and outspoken criticism in congressional hearings on national farm policy.

The group's near-demise was forced by $100,000 in debts, said Jobgen.

"When people get into leadership positions, you always find some who don't know how to manage money, and that's what happened to our organization," she said. "We got in financial problems and had to withdraw and regroup in order to get our bills paid."

Jobgen, who runs a bed and breakfast with her husband, Donald, in the South Dakota Badlands, said AAM debts are nearly paid off, and the group will begin recruiting members early next year.

"We hope we can start building momentum again and restart our Washington office," she said. "We will revitalize the old campaign. I don't think we'll change our goals any."

AAM will continue to pursue its original goals, said Bob Hemminger of Hale, Mo., national president of the organization.

"We're not militant. We're very civilized, and we're trying to do things that would be beneficial for the family farm," Hemminger said Wednesday. "If we can join with other farm organizations and get their ideas, and if they use our ideas, maybe with a united front we can manage to do something."

Hemminger, 73, who has put most of his land in a federal conservation program and is semiretired, said low commodity prices and increasingly high expenses are steadily forcing many small farmers to give up. Even large farm operations are feeling the pinch, he said.

About 20 states have AAM chapters, he said. The group's annual convention will be held Feb. 9-12 at Oklahoma City, and that may be the starting point for a strong comeback, Hemminger said.

Producers react to labeling

Farmers cut back on number of genetically altered crops

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Midwestern farmers will cut back on genetically modified crops next year in reaction to demands for labels on foods made from them, a commodities analyst predicts.

How far the crops' favor will fall depends upon attitudes in Asia, Richard Feltes told 50 grain traders, elevator operators, farmers and representatives of food processing companies during a private briefing Tuesday at the Minneapolis Grain Exchange. Feltes is vice president and director of commodity research for Chicago-based Refco Inc.

While Europe is the hotbed of resistance to so-called GMO crops, Japan and other Asian nations are the biggest buyers of grain exported from the United States, where most GMO crops are grown, Feltes said.

"Asia is the key," Feltes said. "They are the big buyers of corn. Japan takes 16 million tons of U.S. corn (a year). Europe takes 3 million."

Seeds given genes to help plants fend off insects and other problems have helped boost yields this year.

Writing want ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

EVENING
in the Classifieds.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information. Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer. Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live. Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise. It's an integral part of our lives.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I suspect my wife of six years is having an affair. She means a great deal to me, and I don't want a divorce. My suspicions are beginning to wreck my personal and professional life, and I don't know what to do.

I recently heard of a TV show that investigates and catches cheating spouses on film. I am seriously considering contacting the producers. Do you think my wife and I would be able to reconcile if I had her investigated and caught her on this show? — Just Asking in the Big D

Dear Big D: If you had your wife investigated, and she were caught cheating, and it later appeared on TV, your marriage would not stand the chance of the proverbial snowball in hell. I think you need some professional help, Mister. Please get it.

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago, I hired an attorney to represent me in a legal matter. He told me it would cost $3,000. I gave him $1,000, and we agreed that I would make monthly payments of $100 until it was all paid off.

Imagine my surprise when, after my case was over, I received a bill for $6,795. When I called the attorney and asked about the statement, all he said was, "Well, that is what it costs." According to him, I still owe him $3,500.

I realize it was stupid of me not to have a signed contract specifying what the bill would be. However, this attorney, knowing our verbal agreement, never once contacted me to let me know the bill would be so exorbitant. Is there anything I can do, or must I pay the entire fee? I don't feel he deserves it, but I don't want to wreck my credit rating. What should I do? — Legally Entangled

Dear Entangled: If this attorney agreed to charge you $3,000, and did not incur any extraordinary expenses during the proceedings, you may have a case. Contact the state bar association or the state disciplinary commission, and ask them to look into this matter for you. It will cost you nothing to report it. Good luck — and next time, be sure to get agreements in writing, even when you are dealing with attorneys.

Dear Ann Landers: When I read the letter from "St. Pete" about the man who dressed up as Batman and ended up hitting his head on the ceiling fan, it reminded me of an embarrassing incident that happened 40 years ago.

My husband and I were newlyweds, getting ready to attend a Halloween party given by friends. I came home from work, and asked my hubby to answer the door for the trick-or-treaters while I took a bath.

As I was running the water, I thought, "Wouldn't it be fun to play a trick on him?" So, I put on my flapper raccoon coat, a mask, and without a stitch on under the coat, I sneaked around the house and rang the doorbell. When my husband answered, I threw open my coat and shouted, "Trick or treat!" He was so stunned, he backed up, fell down the steps of the sunken living room, hit his head, and knocked himself unconscious.

I called an emergency number, and had to explain what happened to the police and paramedics. My husband was taken to the hospital, where they said he had suffered a concussion.

We never made it to the Halloween party, and, of course, I had to let my friends know why. They thought it was hilarious.

My husband and I will celebrate our 40th anniversary soon. I still love Halloween, but have refrained from pulling any more startling surprises. Life is so much easier if you have a sense of humor. — Tom in Long Island, N.Y.

Dear Tom: What a story! Laughter is indeed the elixir of life, and it can be a great "protector." There are times when, if we couldn't laugh, we'd cry.

Home pros offer tips for holiday decorations

Gracious-living guru Martha Stewart has some ambitious Christmas projects on tap, including a tree with 42,000 lights. In this year's edition of her yuletide special, which airs Wednesday on CBS, she demonstrates how to make snow globes at home and offers some delicious decorating tips.

Hoisting a plastic Rudolph onto the roof, even if it boasts a light-up nose, just won't cut it anymore in sprucing up the house for the holidays.

To help us deck the halls with wow and folly, TV's home mavens offer a preview of what they'll teach on their shows.

The reigning queen of domesticity, Martha Stewart, says her big Christmas project is a tree with 42,000 lights. Do most people have the time (and money) to decorate a tree to this extent? "Well, they can certainly do less than 42,000," she says.

Martha Stewart's Home for the Holidays - The Family Tree airs Wednesday, Dec. 8, on CBS and features, among other special guests, Aretha Franklin.

Stewart plans to show viewers how to make snow globes, explaining that "a tiny bit of glycerin and baby-food jars that are sealed with silicone glue works well." What to use for the ornaments? Stewart suggests "your little collections, like horses or plastic figurines, and you could make one out of old charm bracelets."

She also suggests decorating with cookies, maintaining that "bugs don't eat gingerbread. Gingerbread can stay forever."

The host of The Christopher Lowell Show on Discovery Channel also suggests decorating with dough; he plans to create spiral ornaments using bread dough that has been wrapped around cylinderlike "cream horn cases." Also, he says, stringing penne pasta on lights creates "a gorgeous look" on the tree.

"One of the things I am really emphasizing this year is either do Christmas or don't; don't do junk," Lowell says, adding, "You know you will have to vacuum up the pine needles. Get over it!"

He continues, "Here's what happens historically: We start running out of time around the holidays, and we buy crap." He recommends buying some items new each year. "I don't care what you say; a packed bow never looks the same."

To entertain kids, Lowell recommends lining a wall of their rooms with brown paper and giving them art supplies to make a mural. And for the house, "natural garland draped over doorways with a big grosgrain bow in the center can turn any room into something spectacular."

Lifetime's special Next Door With Katie Brown: 12 Tips for Christmas, airing Wednesday, Dec. 15, focuses on "the mantel and the area above the mantel, and if you don't have a mantel, how to pretend you have one," Brown says.

Unlike her colleagues, Brown says, "You can use a fake wreath if you have to." She advises buying a smaller plastic-foam wreath to fit inside the larger one. Wrap the smaller one with greenery, then stick berries into it and connect the two with ribbon.

Brown advises those without mantels to buy slate steppingstones and build tiers with them inside the fireplace. "Let it look a bit jagged, and then just put some big, fat round candles on them." Those without fireplaces can put the slate steps on a table, she suggests.

"The most important thing," Brown says, "is no matter what you celebrate, just take the time and do something special."

HOROSCOPES

SUNDAY

ARIES - You'll feel pulled in many directions this week. Give yourself some time to reflect on where you are and where you are going! If something puzzles you ask questions. If problems arise you should be able to handle the situation. Use your best judgment!

TAURUS - You will feel very optimistic this week. Organize, put all efforts into becoming versatile your personal and professional life. If you enjoy what you do, continue. Delegate to those you trust. Fun and productivity reach high levels.

GEMINI - You have felt out of control lately, but you will begin getting back on track. Confide in your mate, this is your outlet for understanding and dealing with conflicts. By the end of the week you start to feel like your self again. Relax. Trust your own abilities.

CANCER - Opportunities for success in relationships and at work will arise. Use your energy to organize, rebuild and prepare for changes. Finish last minute business early, so you can work on reviving a relationship. Plan to take a sentimental trip down memory lane.

LEO - Partners, relationships and children play a big part this week. You won't achieve anything if you try working alone. If your relationships are less than ideal this is a good time to resolve those difficulties. Avoid impulse decisions.

VIRGO - Attend important social events and meet new people. Keep your ears and eyes open. Don't allow others to make you feel inferior. Take pride and don't back down. Your ability to make things run smoothly will be noticed by authority figures.

LIBRA - Don't become a victim, your energy and self-assurance is low. Evaluate your sensitivities and leave the confrontations for another time. Don't sign any contracts this week. Your determination could get you anything you want.

SCORPIO - This is a good week to back off from the "rat race" and put your personal affairs in order. Understand your self and try to remove excess stress. Take time to smell the roses and think twice before you make any big purchases.

SAGITTARIUS - You may finally get the freedom you seek. Your challenge is to deal with something new. Changes can help you appreciate others feelings. Be more compassionate to loved ones and enjoy the simple treasures in life.

CAPRICORN - Be independent, but you know when to be compassionate. You might have to explain yourself to someone of authority of someone in a relationship. Be yourself. Share long term plans with those who will be effected, they will appreciate your consideration.

AQUARIUS - You realize life does go on. You cannot wear your emotions on your sleeve. Be positive, a recent chain of events needs to be addressed. Keep a recent promise to continue to keep yourself fit. Everyone you influence can help build your confidence.

PISCES - You could make some impossible dreams come true. Use your bright ideas and follow through. But don't get ahead of yourself, pay attention to the small details. You possess the perfect mix of dreamer and realist. You could find your perfect niche.

Chris Fowler hosts the Heisman Trophy Presentation Saturday on ESPN. The trophy honors the country's most outstanding college football player.

College football's best will take home Heisman

By Josh Greene
 cTVData Features Syndicate

During Ricky Williams' acceptance speech at last year's Heisman Trophy presentation, the Texas back said he never dreamed of playing in the NFL. His desire always centered around participating at the college level.

While making it to the big show is never a given, any college football player is eligible to take home the sport's most prestigious award: the Heisman. But your odds are a lot better if you happen to have the season of a lifetime.

ESPN airs the 1999 Heisman Trophy Presentation Saturday, Dec. 11. Host Chris Fowler joins Lee Corso and Kirk Herbstreit from the Downtown Athletic Club in New York to honor the country's most outstanding college football player.

The special also includes a look back at the accomplishments of past winners, in addition to profiles of this season's top players.

"The winner has to be a standout," DAC public relations director Joe Carnicelli says, speculating that it never hurts if the player is on a winning team. "He has to have statistics and value to his team."

There is no set list of nominees for this year's award. More than 900 voters in the business of sports media coverage cast their ballots for this year's open field.

"The voters are veteran (sportswriters)," Carnicelli says. "They follow college football, especially with the advent of cable television (coverage). It's up to them."

Unofficial predictions put Wisconsin running back Ron Dayne in the lead. He spent the season bearing down on Williams' career rushing yardage record set a year ago. But don't count out quarterbacks Drew Brees from Purdue or Chris Redman from Louisville, two players who also got major publicity this season.

"Everyone has their own criteria for evaluating who should be a Heisman winner," Carnicelli says. "It's the most famous trophy in the United States."

The Heisman may be made of bronze, but it's pure gold to whoever wins it.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
OTVData Features Syndicate

Q: I can't help noticing that Madeline Kahn hasn't been looking well and seems to be wearing wigs on Cosby these days. Is she ill? —Kerrie O., Pocatello, Idaho.

A: I'm sorry to report Kahn recently revealed that for the past year she has been battling ovarian cancer, the illness that claimed the life of her friend Gilda Radner. The 57-year-old actress has undergone several chemotherapy treatments.

You may send supportive cards and letters to this cherished performer c/o Jeff Hunter, William Morris Agency, 1325 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10019.

Q: In the lyrics to the Friends theme song, what is the reference to "your love life" after "Your job's a joke, you're broke ..."? —A friend in San Francisco.

A: "Your love life's DOA," which stands for "dead on arrival."

Q: My husband insists that three actresses have played the role of Ashley on The Young and the Restless. I say there were only two. —Bey Gagnon via e-mail.

A: Your husband is correct. Eileen Davidson, who currently plays Ashley, created the character back in 1982. Davidson left the soap in 1988, at which point Brenda Epperson played Ashley. Shari Shattuck took over the role in 1996 until Davidson resumed the role in 1999.

Q: I say George Clooney (ER) played the eccentric loner "woodsman" on Northern Exposure. My wife disagrees. Who is right? —Larry E. Muehleisen, Colorado Springs, Colo.

A: She is. Reclusive gourmet chef Adam was played by another TV doc, Adam Arkin of Chicago Hope.

Q: Will you please tell my mother that Carnie and Wendy Wilson are not half sisters of Chynna Phillips? —M. Paquette, Sterling Heights, Mich.

Madeline Kahn

A: You're right: The former Wilson Phillips colleagues are not related.

Phillips is the daughter of John and Michelle Phillips of the Mamas and the Papas. Her half sisters are Mackenzie and Bijou Phillips.

The Wilsons are the daughters of Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys and his first wife, Marilyn.

Q: Is my daughter right when she says the actor who plays The Pretender used to play Chris on Northern Exposure? And did Julie Andrews dub the singing voice of Emma (Samantha Eggar) in Doctor Dolittle? —Robert McKinzie, Joplin, Mo.

A: Sorry, wrong on all counts. Michael T. Weiss plays "pretender" Jarod Russell on NBC; John Corbett played DJ Chris Stevens on Exposure. Andrews had nothing to do with the 1967 box-office flop Doctor Dolittle.

Marlena doll tops Days fans' Christmas lists

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Holiday shopping for the Days of Our Lives fans on your list just got a little easier.

Mattel recently introduced a doll designed to look like Marlena Evans (Deirdre Hall) when she married John Black (Drake Hogestyn) last July.

Hall is donating her portion of the proceeds from sales of the collectible to her favorite charity, PATH (People Assisting the Homeless), in Los Angeles.

"The artists at Mattel have done an astonishing job in capturing not only the beauty and warmth of Marlena, but also her strength and spirit," Hall says. "In a very real sense, Marlena fans can have and hold her (and) relive again and again one of the happiest days of her life."

The doll is available in toy and gift stores across the country for around $40.

Dear Candace: Is Lauralee Bell, who plays Chris on The Young and the Restless, related to Catherine Bell (Lt. Col. Sarah MacKenzie) on JAG? —Kathy B. on the Internet.

Dear Reader: The two Bells are not related. But the Y&R actress is the daughter of executive producer and former Y&R head writer William Bell and the sister of Bradley Bell, executive producer of The Bold and the Beautiful.

Dear Candace: I read your article concerning the possible firing of Brad Maule (Tony, General Hospital) in the New York Post. GH has been a regularly viewed program in my family for many years.

Maule has — categorically and unequivocally — contributed to the success and ultimate longevity of this program. He provided his viewing audience with outstanding acting achievement through his characterizations.

It would be a loss for this program if Maule was relieved of his job. We wish him well and hope he continues to entertain on GH for a long time to come. —Richard Cardwell in New Jersey.

Dear Reader: There hasn't been a definite decision about Maule's contract yet, but it looks as if it will be extended for at least 26 weeks. Maule is hopeful that it will all work out and thanks fans for their interest.

Send questions of general interest to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, TVData Features Syndicate, 333 Glen St., Glen Falls, NY 12081, or e-mail to soaptalk@tvdata.com. Only questions selected for this column will be answered. Personal replies cannot be sent.
