Cattlemen losing up to $200 a head

Cattle prices plunge to lowest level since 1991

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Steve Amosson sees bad news on the horizon of his computer screen that tracks cattle prices for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The green blips on the economist's screen are rumbling down like a stampede into a ravine.

"Slumps are one thing," Amosson said. "That's a crash."

A glut of beef and poultry have plunged prices on the cattle market to their lowest level since 1991, Amosson said. The result leaves cattlemen losing up to $200 a head.

Prices fell from $76.87 per hundredweight in mid-April to as low as $62.30 in late May, industry observers said. Cattle were trading at $64.50 this week.

Ernie Davis, cattle marketing specialist at Texas A&M University, explains that $850 invested in one animal would require a market price around $71 per hundredweight to break even.

Davis predicts prices back up over $70 by August. Demand for beef typically increases during summer months, he and others said.

Nevertheless, cattlemen in the Texas Panhandle "feel out of control of their own business," said Richard Winter, who manages the 56,500 cattle at the Randall County Feedyard, near Amarillo.

packer the luxury of picking and choosing," Winter said. "The day that the packer has to start competing to own the particular type of animal they want, ... that's when we're going to turn the market around."

Retail prices at the meat counter have not dropped correspondingly. However, the Beef Industry Council has launched a $10.4 million promotional campaign, hoping to spur demand.

In the meantime, analysts advise cattlemen to keep watching the market.

"You know that if you hunker down and stay with it, it's going to come back," Winter said. "You have to just be prudent and efficient."

Jury selection starts here Monday for Gudgell trial

Defense and prosecution attorneys will begin selecting a jury at 10 a.m. to hear testimony in the murder trial of Donna Gudgell, 48, accused in the death of her husband last September.

A panel of 250 persons originally was summoned for the jury but the number has decreased by 75, or more, by excused absences.

Trial of Gudgell and Chris Don Barron, 24, was scheduled Friday but a delay was granted her attorney because of developments that came up Friday.

Judge David Wesley Gulley of 22nd District Court granted severance in the case allowing for separate trials of the two defendants.

The defendants were indicted last October for murder in the death of Bill Gudgell on in the early hours of Sept. 12. He was found a few hours earlier at his home with a gunshot wound to the head.

Citizens see money at work from park fund

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A drive around town will afford Hereford residents an opportunity to see their money at work in city parks.

Since summer of 1991, water and sewer customers of the City of Hereford have contributed to a special fund to pay for park improvements.

Those who have exercised the option of paying the $1 per month can begin to see the benefits.

There are some success stories in accomplishments to date. A notable example is a sand volleyball court installed in Dameron Park.

If the City Commission has its way, things will get even better.

During their work session last Tuesday night, commissioners hopped onto an idea for developing neighborhood pride and input into park planning.

City Manager Chester Nolen suggested a planning project that would target each park and recruit interested citizens in the neighborhood to join the planning.

Told that the program could take "a lot of time and effort," commissioners didn't hesitate to flash a green light.

Details of the program will be submitted at a later date to the commission for approval.

In the meantime, improvements, which some commissioners privately admit are overdue, are popping up in several areas of the city.

Since March, the park development fund has been tapped for $25,852 in equipment and other needs.

And, that's probably only a drop in the bucket to what is in the future.

Bleachers for spectators at sports activities at the 14th and Avenue H park have been installed at a cost of $1,650.

Restroom facilities at the south edge of the same park are being constructed. Price tag is expected to be $4,500 when that job is complete.

Play areas at Central and Jaycee Parks have been rejuvenated with curbing costing $2,765 and sand, $2,826.

Changes in the playgrounds are necessitated, Nolen said, by concern for providing a safe area for children. New equipment also is replacing worn-out items.

To help citizens keep their parks and streets clear of litter, the city has invested $13,337 in trash receptacles. Forty-two heavy-duty containers have been spotted around Hereford.

Family outings to parks will be invested in Central Park as a match for a grant for planting trees in the park.

The balance in the fund, after expenditures, is $128,772, which the commission expects to continue to tap for work in the city's recreation areas.

Success of the volleyball court in Dameron Park has prompted the commission to tell the park superintendent to build a second one there and proceed with plans for one in the 14th and H park.

Carr expressed some distress that the net on the volleyball court was damaged.

"We'll just keep repairing it," he declared.

much more aggressive in reporting problems," he declared.

Since vandalism is a continuing problem, he sees neighbors exercising their own initiative in keeping their park free of vandalism and litter.

Another deterrent to vandalism, Nolen said, is high use.

"If there are people using the facilities, there's less opportunity for vandalism," he said.

Well-lighted areas in parks also help scare off those bent on destruction because there is more chance they will be seen, Nolen added.

When the Hereford park superintendent, Johnny Carr, spoke to the City Commission Tuesday night, he said Veterans Park presents ongoing problems.

"Nearly every day we have to go over there and spend a lot of time picking up beer cans and bottles and other trash people leave there," he said.

He described acts of vandalism that may eventually prompt the commission to order closing of Veterans Park during night hours.

Besides the $25,852 spent from the park fund this year, $4,850 was more convenient with outdoor cooking grills and picnic facilities.

Nolen said a double grill has been installed at Jaycee park. Two single-size grills are new at Dameron while one each went to Central and 14th and H. Total cost of the grills was $1,047.

On order, but not received, yet, are a dozen metal picnic tables. Cost of each is estimated at $540.

Cities larger and smaller than Hereford are looking at ways to improve park facilities and the neighborhood concept seems to be a coming thing, Nolen said.

Some special side effects accrue with neighborhood involvement, he observed.

"For one thing the involvement of residents in the area makes them

Simpson flees, then surrenders at home

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Charged with murdering his ex-wife and her friend, O.J. Simpson did what made him famous: he ran.

Instead of surrendering to police on Friday, Simpson vanished, leaving behind what sounded like a suicide note that proclaimed his innocence. After a five-hour manhunt, police spotted the former football star riding down the highway with an old teammate and holding a gun to his head.

was arrested in the driveway of his mansion after more than a dozen police cruisers trailed the white Bronco at moderate speed for 60 miles. Millions nationwide watched the unfolding drama on live television as thousands of people along the freeways and city streets waved and cheered "Go O.J.!"

Simpson, 46, was fingerprinted, photographed and jailed without bond. He was to be arraigned on two counts of murder as early as Monday. Prosecutors said they would decide later whether to seek the death penalty.

Simpson was allowed to call his mother, Eunice, and drink a glass of orange juice before police took him away, said Cmdr. David Gascon.

At least 300 curiosity seekers pressed against police lines around Simpson's $1.2 million mansion, chanting "Free O.J.!" and "Juice, Juice!"

The driver of the Bronco, Simpson's lifelong friend Al Cowlings, was charged with aiding and abetting the escape and released on bail.

Beach volleyball

Though not a beach, a volleyball court in Dameron Park is a reasonable facsimile, one that is a popular new addition to the Hereford park development program. A second court is planned for Dameron and one will be installed at 14th and H. The improvements are among several being implemented this year from the park fund established three years ago.

County to study budget

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will work on the budget for the next fiscal year during a special meeting Monday, beginning at 9 a.m. Commissioners also will award bids on water and sewer installation in the Campbell Street area, hold a pre-construction conference with the contractor and consider a request for a line to cross a county road.

City has short agenda

Hereford City Commissioners have a business agenda of only three items for their regular meeting Monday, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The commission will consider a contract for a city audit for the year ending Sept. 30, consider a resolution related to airport improvements and hear a request for extension of a sewer line on North Progressive Road.

Hospital board meets Tuesday

A regular meeting of the Deaf Smith County Hospital board of directors is set for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the board room at Hereford Regional Medical Center. Topics of discussion include: Board committee appointments; approval of amended agreement with Dr. Glen Alford; board resolution establishing depository agreement; review of the board's orientation workshop; medical staff report; administrator's report, and other operations and financial reports.

Summit meeting set between two Koreas

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - Prompted by a nuclear impasse that threatened war on the Korean peninsula, the presidents of North Korea and South Korea agreed today to hold the first summit between their nations.

The meeting was proposed by North Korean leader Kim Il Sung and the invitation conveyed by former U.S. President Jimmy Carter on his return to Seoul from an unofficial diplomatic mission to the North.

Carter said the North Korean leader wanted him to relay that a summit could be arranged without "extensive delay."

South Korean President Kim Young-sam accepted the offer and asked Carter to convey his response to the North, said the South's chief presidential spokesman, Choo Don-shik.

Details of the encounter have yet to be worked out. The top leaders of the two Koreas have never met since Korea was divided into the communist North and the capitalist South in 1945.

A summit could help resolve a number of problems between the two Koreas - the biggest being the 15-month standoff over suspicion into the North to cover Carter's trip.

Carter said on his return to Seoul today that the North Korean president promised to freeze its nuclear program and resume negotiations.

"We have to go to sanctions if the violations continue," Clinton told reporters.

Cable News Network was the only Western news organization allowed into the North to cover Carter's trip.

Carter said on his return to Seoul today that the North Korean president promised to freeze its nuclear program if the United States resumed high-level talks with the country.

Throughout the impasse, North Korea has insisted its nuclear program is peaceful, but has not provided proof.

DIMMITT-- A Castro County jury convicted a 25-year-old Dimmitt woman of voluntary manslaughter Friday and sentenced her to 20 years in prison, County Attorney Jerry Matthews said.

Martina Ramos was found guilty of stabbing Eddie Gonzales to death on Oct. 30 at their home in Dimmitt. Ramos alleged that she had been physically abused by Gonzales, her live-in boyfriend, and that she feared for her life when a fight erupted between the couple.

Ramos originally was charged with murder. The six-man, six-woman jury deliberated about two hours Friday before finding Ramos guilty of the lesser charge. Involuntary manslaughter is a second-degree felony.

Mrs. Houston was born in Des Moines, Iowa. She married Ted G. Houston in Santa Fe and was a member of the Holy Faith Episcopal Church. She was a member and past president of Santa Fe Garden Club and a board member for the Santa Fe Park.

Survivors include her husband, Ted; a son, David Houston of Santa Fe; one sister, Lucy Reed of Las Vegas, N.M.; and other relatives and friends.

Judge sentences Davidians to maximum prison terms

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A judge proclaimed the Branch Davidian shootout and standoff a "tragedy of epic proportions" then sentenced five Davidians on Friday to maximum 40-year prison terms for killing four federal agents.

U.S. District Judge Walter Smith handed out less-than-maximum sentences to three other David Koresh disciples. Their terms for weapons convictions ranged from five to 20 years.

"The evidence from this trial has not faded from my memory. Certain images are clear," the judge said. "I remember evidence the jury didn't see, evidence I ruled was too gruesome."

The Davidians showed no emotion during sentencing. A packed courtroom full of friends, relatives and federal agents looked on.

The stalemate had begun with a Feb. 28, 1993, gun battle between Koresh's religious sect members and officers of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Four agents were killed and at least 16 wounded. Six Davidians died.

"On February 28, 1993, an American tragedy of epic proportions took place," Smith said, noting that mistakes made by government officers were not the questions before his court.

Smith said none of the eight Davidians had apologized for their crimes.

from $2,000 to $10,000.

Graeme Craddock, a soft-spoken man who told Smith he is "not a person who would harm anyone," got a 20-year sentence and a $2,000 fine for possessing a grenade and using or possessing a firearm during a crime.

Paul Fatta, who was not present during the shootout, got a 15-year sentence and a $50,000 fine for two convictions on machine gun charges.

Ruth Riddle, the only woman on trial, got the lightest sentence - five years and a $2,500 fine for using or carrying a weapon during a crime.

Initially, Smith threw out that weapons verdict for all seven defendants convicted of it, but then reinstated it after hearing prosecutors' post-trial legal arguments.

Jury forewoman Sarah Bain since has said the guilty verdict on that count was a mistake and that jurors never intended the Davidians to serve so many years in prison.

"I feel directly responsible," a crying Ms. Bain said after watching the sentencing. "If we had done that (weapons) count properly, the maximum sentence for anyone in there would be 10 years ... I just regret that part."

Smith ruled all eight defendants would be responsible for $1.31 million in restitution. The judge largely followed the sentencing recommendations of prosecutors, who declined to say much afterward.

Defense attorneys criticized the five Davidians' 40-year terms.

SIMPSON

Police believed that Simpson held a gun to his head during the chase, said state police spokeswoman Angel Johnson. A gun was found later in the car.

In a letter read by a friend at a news conference, Simpson said goodbye to friends and mentioned a "last wish" to "leave my children in peace."

"First, everyone understand, I had nothing to do with Nicole's murder," Simpson's letter begins. "If we had a problem, it's because I loved her so much."

"Don't feel sorry for me," the letter said. "I've had a great life, great friends. Please think of the real O.J. and not this lost person."

His attorney, Robert Shapiro, described the football Hall of Famer as suicidal after he and Cowlings vanished Friday morning.

"I can't express the fear I had that this matter would not end the way it did," Shapiro said after their arrest. Shapiro said he didn't know how Simpson and Cowlings eluded police.

Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and her friend Ron Goldman, a 25-year-old waiter and aspiring model, were found stabbed to death Sunday night outside Ms. Simpson's condominium in the city's Brentwood section. Her ex-husband lives two miles away.

Ms. Simpson's throat was slashed, and Goldman - whose family said he was not romantically involved with Ms. Simpson - had wounds indicating he fought fiercely for his life.

Nearly a week of evidence-gathering turned up a bloody glove and ski mask in Simpson's home and blood in his car and on his driveway, according to news reports.

The couple divorced in 1992 after a seven-year marriage. In 1989, Simpson pleaded no contest to wife beating.

A family friend said Simpson turned vengeful after recent attempts to reconcile with his wife failed.

"He was telling her girlfriends and her that if he ever caught her with anyone he would kill her," the friend told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity. "She totally broke it off with him three weeks ago."

Simpson's attorneys say he was at home at the time of the slayings.

Orenthal James Simpson was a nimble and powerful running back for the Buffalo Bills, for whom he set a single-season NFL rushing record with 2,003 yards in 1973. He helped make USC a national champion in 1967 and won the Heisman Trophy in 1968.

New LD system will require dialing 806 for calls in area

Long distance telephone users can begin practicing 11-digit dialing on July 3 even though the system does not become mandatory until next January.

Beginning Jan. 3, 1995, telephone customers must dial 1-806 to call within the 806 area. Previously, the area code was not required.

Officials at West Texas Rural Telephone said the permissible 11-digit dialing beginning in July will allow customers to become accustomed to the procedure.

Long distance dialing into other area codes will remain the same.

Calls made between exchanges in the WTRT system will require use of the area code, said Keith Hacker, central office foreman. However, calls from Hereford to WTRT local exchanges will not be affected.

New area codes will become effective in some parts of Texas and the U.S. next January as part of changes being made in telecommunications.

Telephone officials suggest that businesses check with their long distance provider to be certain systems are compatible with the new dialing format.

Program of summer jobs for needy youth is pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration is pushing for summer employment for nearly a million youths in economically depressed areas, with government providing twice as many jobs as private industry.

The government will spend $908 million to create 623,000 jobs for poor youth from age 14 to 21 who live in communities with high rates of unemployment. That is less than the $1 billion spent two years ago, when the program served more than 780,000 participants. The cost per participant is up from $1,282 in 1992 to an expected $1,458 this year.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Doug Ross said the program costs more per person because many participants now also receive mathematics and reading instruction over the summer.

Participants in the program earn at least minimum wage. Last year, they worked an average 32 to 36 hours a week for eight weeks. Local program operators determine the kinds of jobs in which they are placed.

Labor officials are pushing to increase the number of young workers hired for the summer by private employers from 300,000 last year to 330,000 this year.

Many Texans drive without insurance

By ADOLFO PESQUERA
San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO - Terrie Cardenas spent a May afternoon in Municipal Court, wiping the slate clean after she was ticketed for driving without liability insurance.

The 24-year-old had completed her six-month probation and paid a fine of $162.50. She wanted the incident removed from her record.

Ms. Cardenas drove without insurance for about a year before a traffic accident slammed the brakes on the practice. Her new policy carries an annual premium of $648 for minimum liability coverage.

"Full coverage is outrageous," Ms. Cardenas explained. "I don't even think about getting it."

Henry Hernandez spent 24 days behind bars in April because he couldn't pay a $273 fine for driving without insurance, along with several other traffic fines.

He was in court again last month for lack of insurance. Penniless and already on probation for the previous offense, Hernandez hoped the judge would assess community service in lieu of a fine.

The plights of Ms. Cardenas and Hernandez underscore the local attitude about insurance: Many San Antonians say the cost is too high, regulators are unresponsive to consumers' needs and rates aren't based on understandable criteria.

More than 230 tickets for driving without insurance are processed in San Antonio each day - 13,785 in the first quarter of 1994, according to statistics from the Municipal Court director's office.

San Antonians - like drivers everywhere - gripe about the high cost of insurance. But it can be argued that local drivers are among the worst in the state.

Furthermore, Houston is the only Texas city with higher stolen car ratio than the Alamo City.

Jerry Johns, spokesman for the Southwestern Insurance Information Service, said rates are higher in metropolitan areas because of traffic and population density, accident risk and auto thefts.

The number of Texas accidents per 100,000 residents in 1993 was highest in San Antonio and Houston, respectively, according to Department of Public Safety records.

Houston ranked first and San Antonio second in auto thefts in 1992, the last year for which the U.S. Justice Department has statistics.

Houston has the dubious honor of posting the highest premium rates in the state, according to the Texas Department of Insurance; San Antonio ranks fourth.

Rate structures are determined by complex calculations involving type of automobile, how it is used, driver history, jury award trends for accident injuries in a particular area, and the percentage of uninsured motorists in that area.

For example, in Dallas - where premium rates are the second-highest in the state - 29 percent of motorists hit the road without insurance.

Despite the high cost of insurance, many industry observers believe Texas is turning the corner on what, in the 1980s, was a very unstable market.

"What we've got now in Texas is greater flexibility in pricing for insurance companies, so they can operate more competitively," said Decece Eckstein, a San Antonian who sat on the now-defunct State Board of Insurance.

"We're much tougher on solvency than we used to be and we're holding insurers to task more for how they treat their customers," Eckstein said.

He gives the credit to Gov. Ann Richards, who in 1991 began stacking the insurance board with her appointees.

Richards also selected J. Robert Hunter, former president of the Virginia-based National Insurance Consumers Organization, to head the commission system that replaced the insurance board.

Eckstein said Hunter's innovations have increased customer access to insurance information.

One such innovation was an "800" number to distribute home and auto rate cards directly to consumers. More than 35,000 were dispensed in several weeks, Eckstein said.

"I think Texas is competitive with other states," he said. "We certainly have stabilized our rates at a time when they are going through the roof elsewhere."

Despite the kudos, state regulation of the insurance industry is flawed, observers said.

If an injury claim is not settled quickly, accident victims must sue the other driver's insurance company to prove fault, said Max Watson, spokesman for the American Insurance Association.

"It's unfair because two similar injuries can go through the system and result in very different awards," Watson said. "It's inefficient because one-third of the money goes to lawyers."

Insurance Commissioner Hunter said court awards can be unjust: People with minor injuries are sometimes awarded more than their due, while those seriously hurt in accidents are shortchanged.

However, Hunter cautioned that no-fault plans developed by the insurance industry keep caps on catastrophic compensation too low.

He said just one state - Michigan - has an effective no-fault insurance system. Damages as high as $5 million have been awarded under the Michigan program, with no increase in premium costs.

However, Hunter does not believe enacting a system such as Michigan's would coerce the 21 percent of Texans driving without insurance to purchase policies.

Many of the uninsured motorists concoct elaborate plans that allow them to remain on the road without coverage.

Some purchase temporary insurance to obtain license and inspection seals, then discontinue their payments; others use counterfeit insurance cards.

DPS spokesman Tom Mobley said troopers issued 96,528 citations for driving without insurance last year, and about 70 percent of the tickets were dismissed in court.

Speedy Nieman Shrinking tax base

The tax base in Hereford and Deaf Smith County has been shrinking over the past five years, which is bad news not only those who pay property taxes, but for all residents, points out the People Promoting Progress committee.

That's one reason the group is urging citizens to adopt a half-cent sales tax for economic development in the special city election scheduled Aug. 13.

What is the tax base? Put simply, it is the assessed value of real and personal property. Each local taxing entity applies a tax rate to the assessed value that will produce the revenue needed for its operation.

Statistics from the tax office reveal that local entities have lost a combined $719,701 in revenues over the past five years because of the shrinking tax base.

The largest shrinkage came in the Hereford Independent School District. The tax base was $475.2 million in 1989; it had dropped to $430.2 million by 1993—a decrease of some $45 million. And that tax base loss, even with tax rate increases, has resulted in revenue losses of $476,894 over five years.

Tax revenue losses for Deaf Smith county over the same period were $116,517; the City of Hereford lost $72,659; and the hospital district lost $53,630. The city is the only entity that did not increase the tax rate over the five years, although some fees have been increased.

So, does approval of a half-cent sales tax help? The PPP group believes that, through aggressive economic development, Hereford can retain and expand existing business and industry and attract new ones. The economic development tax provides funding for that purpose.

Hopefully, business and industrial growth results, then the tax base expands and the burden of property taxes is less for everyone.

What will it cost us? The state comptroller's office has estimated that a family making $10,000 will pay an average of 40 cents a week in additional sales taxes. A family making $25,000 will pay an additional 77 cents a week, while a family income of $35,000 would expend an additional 98 cents a week.

That's not much investment for what appears to be the only practical source of funding for economic development. No one likes new taxes, but this one could actually save money in the long run.

Editor's Note: While The Brand does not ordinarily print unsolicited poetry, we are making an exception for Father's Day. The following poem was submitted without last names:

FISHING IN THE RAIN
I remember one time when I was a kid; Daddy took me to the clinic for shots. When we got home, I dug out my pole, the big tent and those old Army cots.

"If you don't cry," Dad had promised me, "I'll take you fishin' come rain or shine."

When it came time to go, sure enough, a front blew in and I knew what was on his mind.

He said, "Heck, Dee, it's raining; don't you think it'll wait; it might let up tonight." As tears filled my eyes, I said, "Daddy, you promised;" he could see there was no use to fight

Dear Editor:

As a Kids Inc. softball player, I find it hard to believe that The Hereford Brand does not print anything about girl's softball.

I always check to see if they have printed anything and I always see boy's baseball pictures and boy's baseball results. I have played in Kids Inc. softball since T-ball and the girl's program never gets any publicity. The girl's games are just as exciting as the boy's.

We have a good program for kids to participate in and maybe the girl's program would get a little

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

A while back I wrote about government acronyms and how ridiculous they have gotten.

Well here is Acronyms II, which includes some abbreviations of groups that I have received recently in the mail.

What kind of set me off on my quest to discover this continuing explosion of abbreviations was two news releases I got on the same day.

The first was about "The Etiquette of Sympathy" from the Society of American Florists, which abbreviates itself the SAF.

The second was from the American Floral Marketing Council, the AFMC.

All of a sudden I saw several news releases from organizations that seemed to think that I would leap up in recognition of their initials.

For example, I got something from the AHAM, the PMA, the TBA, CCAPC, TASB, CA and the NFIB.

Now, how many of those can you identify?

More importantly, does reading those initials make you want to read the information accompanying them?

You see, initials are the creation of government people and advertising agencies, who think that by attaching initials to everything, we will remember much better what everything is.

In the newspaper business, we call it "alphabet soup" (if you don't know why, read above).

All I know is, it sure makes my life more confusing than it already is to try to figure out that AHAM is the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers; PMA is the Publisher's Marketing Association; the TBA is the Texas Bison Association; CCAPC is Coalition for Consumer Access to Pharmaceutical Care; TASB is the Texas Association of School Boards; CA is Communicating for Agriculture; and NFIB is the National Federation of Independent Business.

The second was from the American Floral Marketing Council, the AFMC.

This next little thing scares me just to read because of the current situation in Washington, particularly in relation to pro-Christian organizations.

Now comes a lawsuit filed by the Freedom From Religion Foundation that wants the U.S. Motto "In God We Trust" removed from our currency.

This foundation claims that a survey "proves" most people think the motto is religious and endorses religion.

Of course, they only published survey results of 900 people that were sampled randomly by a Madison, Wis., organization.

They also only provide us with the answers to two questions from the survey, so we don't know what questions were asked before or after these to narrow the focus of the survey.

For example, they may have thrown out the responses from Southern Baptists, Catholics, Jews, Muslims, Jehovah's Witnesses and others who claim some type of deity.

They may have targeted their surveys only toward those "random" people who indicated in the survey that they considered themselves to be atheist or agnostic in their religious belief.

Since they didn't, we are left with the impression that 61.1 percent of Americans think "In God We Trust" is a religious statement and that 71.2 percent believe the statement endorses a belief in God.

Now while I do not believe the survey was accurate or properly done, I am still worried about the whole thing.

That is because there is now a lawsuit on the books in Federal Court in Denver, Colo. Some liberal judge just might decide that the Freedom From Religion Foundation is right and issue orders prohibiting the issuance of new money until that motto is taken off.

In fact, judging from some of the stupid court rulings that have been handed down of late, the court could very well order the federal government to mint all new money and exchange it with existing currency to remove the "offending" phrase as fast as possible.

Because this is a lawsuit, there's not much we can do about this threat to one of the last expressions of America's former status as a "Christian nation."

But let's hope and pray that good sense prevails and we are freed from the Freedom From Religion Foundation.

Well, that's it for this week. Don't forget Father's Day is this weekend.

Get Dad something nice to honor him. It doesn't have to be a fancy gift, or anything -- just a note telling him how much he means to you and how he has influenced your life.

Editorial opinion from around state

San Antonio Express-News on college drinking:

In a nation where alcohol is a socially acceptable drug, drinking has long been viewed as a rite of passage to adulthood. For many young Americans, this transition accompanies going away to college...

Unfortunately, though, a growing number of college students are not responsible drinkers. A Columbia University study reports that the number who drink abusively has increased dramatically over the past two decades.

The report recommends that Congress require colleges to investigate and report the involvement of alcohol in all campus crimes.

The study also urges... that schools be required to "establish explicit policies about alcohol use, offer a full range of prevention and outreach programs for alcohol abusers, ban the advertising and promotion of alcohol in campus publications and at college-sponsored events."

These are necessary steps that should be taken as soon as possible, both by colleges and, as appropriate, by Congress. But they are not likely to resolve this growing problem so long as irresponsible binge drinking is too often tolerated as a rite of passage.

Benton Enterprise on candidates campaigning against Clintons:

Tex Lezar is running for Texas lieutenant governor. Marta Greytok is running for land commissioner. Their common opponent? The Clintons, Bill and Hillary.

Meanwhile, voters back here in Texas so far get little idea of the differences between the Republican candidates and the Democrats they seek to replace in Austin. Greytok called a news conference earlier this week in which she compared Land Commissioner Garry Mauro to first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry also got into the act by blasting the Clinton administration but never mentioning his Democratic opponent, Marvin Gregory.

Lezar, though, has been particularly blatant in exercising this peculiar campaign strategy. He has aired political advertising that never mentions his real opponent, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, by name. Instead, he lashes out at President Clinton, seeking to link Bullock to Clinton merely by party affiliation...

With five months remaining in the campaign, Lezar and others on the GOP ticket have time to hone their arguments. Let's focus them, though, on the people whose names appear on the ballot this fall. Bill Clinton's name won't be there.

Austin American-Statesman on plans for public paddling:

While Michael Fay's sentence from a prison in Singapore, some misguided citizens and their elected representatives have introduced legislation that would allow public paddling of errant juveniles...

In their quest to recapture an oversimplified past, what's to stop the authoritarian crowd from stopping at public paddling? Let's bring back the good ol' punishments used by the Puritans. How about stocks in public places where passersby could throw stones or rotten apples at the offenders, or merely pelt them? What about returning to the day when some Americans burned suspected witches and put the crimson A on the chests of adulterers?

Public paddling sounds about as reasonable as those long-abandoned practices.

Valley Morning Star, on congressional term limits:

Thanks to the enduring staffers of liberal congressional stalwarts like Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., and Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., Americans have yet another reason to limit politicians' terms in office:

It could save money.

According to a survey by Roll Call Report Syndicate, Frank, who first won his seat in 1980, has the highest-paid office staff out of 435 members in the U.S. House of Representatives. His staff's total last year was $631,780.

No slouch in lavishing tax dollars on her staff, Schroeder, first elected to the House in 1972, came in a very close second at $630,780...

The conventional wisdom on Capitol Hill is of course that these aides carry considerable experience with them to work each

Father's day message for a remarkable generation

By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

So where in the name of Hallmark do you find a Father's Day message for an entire generation of dads, those who fathered the baby boom?

These guys aren't exactly a sentimental lot, thanks to the Great Depression and the battles of World War II. And they themselves would admit they're vulnerable to second-guessing - sometimes, their paternal strengths and weaknesses were made of the same right stuff.

So what would be appropriate?

Demos insisting on universal coverage

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democrats in Congress are taking a harder line on health reforms, insisting on universal coverage and voting the party line for the first time in the House Ways and Means Committee.

"The Democrats are now the ones walking in political lockstep," Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif., said Thursday after losing a string of 24-14 party-line votes in Ways and Means.

Thomas had hoped to embarrass some Democrats into jumping ship when they were asked to trim a proposed 60-cent cigarette-tax increase to 45 cents.

But the Democrats took the line set by acting Chairman Sam Gibbons, D-Fla. They rammed through a series of amendments to sweeten the subsidies for small business, accept a smaller increase in the tobacco tax and - to make up for those losses - delay the start of long-term care for the severely disabled.

"I think we have a critical mass in the committee to pass out a health care bill that accomplishes the president's goals," said Rep. Benjamin Cardin, D-Md.

In the Senate, key supporters of President Clinton's health reforms insisted they would settle for nothing less than universal health coverage that he demands.

"There is no universal and there is no comprehensive coverage unless all Americans are assured that as of a certain date they are going to have coverage," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., told a Capitol news conference. He and several other Democrats said that if Congress settled for incremental health reform, America's middle class would pay the price.

"Millions and millions" of Americans "will never have health insurance unless we act here in Congress this year to give them that universal coverage," declared Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., prime

Dear Dad:

-For enduring the Depression's deprivations (did you really walk to school five miles, uphill, each way and pinch pennies so tightly that Abe Lincoln would cry?).

-For saving civilization with the sacrifice and resolve needed to win history's most destructive war (OK, but it was America's last declared war - the so-called "good war" - and the country was united like no other time).

-For begetting the largest birth explosion in U.S. history and providing for those children with your nose-to-the-grindstone Puritan work ethic (hey, the rules were a lot simpler then, when the mark of man was being just a breadwinner, not a nurturer).

-For soldiering on during the Cold War only to be stereotyped as old-fashioned, flag-waving conformists (OK, so you didn't always understand those kids of yours, and they didn't always understand you).

-For passing the torch, scrapbooks filled with memories, when male roles are evolving (you know, of course, that you're the inspiration for the men's movement, where a guy and his wounded inner child can beat drums in the woods because his father was too busy or too distant to share his feelings).

Do any of these sentiments fit the bill?

There's never been anything like them, before or since, this can-do cohort labeled variously as the command generation, the take-charge generation or the silent generation.

This is their legacy: In fatherhood, they channeled the same courage and grit that got them through hard times and bitter battles to shoulder their everyday responsibilities. Shouldered them the way a man learned to shoulder everything.

"Men's part in the baby boom was taken in stride. Being a father was the hallmark of a mature man," said Robert Griswold, a historian at the University of Oklahoma and author of the book "Fatherhood In America."

"And being a breadwinner was essential to male identity," Griswold said. "Their first and foremost responsibility was to provide for their families."

Some lament that the role was so dominant it eclipsed other elements of fatherhood considered essential today - being involved with your children, expressing the joy of watching them grow, or just tossing a ball in the backyard.

Today's fathers - given chances for self-fulfillment and recreation - say their top priority is being emotionally available to their kids, according to The Fatherhood Project, a New York-based research center.

But it was different back then. A good provider could protect his family from what he feared most - Depression-era privations.

After the war, Don Borbee of Rochester, N.Y., got married and fathered 11 kids. He worked for General Motors Corp. for 27 years while earning his doctorate degree at night school. A grandfather 12 times over, he now teaches at St. John Fisher University in Rochester, N.Y.

"I never had a job that paid enough to put 11 pairs of shoes on the floor or 11 gallons of milk in the house. When the bills pile up, you have to do something about it, so I worked at second jobs," said Borbee, now 81.

All of it was done with little bellyaching.

"Wailing and moaning and whining and wearing your heart on your sleeve is not going to work," he said.

The challenges of fatherhood seemed less daunting following Borbee's earlier trials and tribulations.

His father worked on Wall Street when the market crashed in 1929, and he recalls waiting in a welfare line for his family's weekly allotment of salted ham, cabbage and potatoes, week after week after week.

"I still stoop down to pick up pennies on the ground. I can never walk over a penny," said Borbee, whose children heard so many Depression stories they once bought him a gag birthday gift of tattered shoes cobbled with cardboard.

Right after Pearl Harbor, Borbee enlisted and survived 35 missions over Europe as an 8th Air Force bombardier in a B-17 Flying Fortress.

"We saw such destruction. It made us think we could get through anything," he said.

Get through anything. In the Depression, in war, in life's daily struggles, these fathers got through it. If it was their duty to serve their country, it was their duty to serve their families.

"Everything a man does, you wonder if you might do it different if you had the opportunity to do it again. My No. 1 priority as a father was to provide for the family," said Bill Dunlap, 72, of Falls Church, Va., an ex-Marine and the father of three daughters.

"I didn't read any psychology books or anything to learn how to raise my kids," he said. "It was something that was done naturally. I disciplined my kids. I pushed them when it came to school. I always thought each generation ought to be a little better than the other. I wanted them to have it better than I did."

Dunlap's attitude was shaped by the crucible of the Depression, when his family struggled each month to pay the taxes required to keep from getting evicted from their home.

And he was further tempered by the war, in which he served as a machine-gun squad leader in the 6th Marine Division at Guam, Okinawa and other Pacific battlefields.

"World War II was like a touchstone, a measuring stick. We had a saying in the Marine Corps: 'It can't get any worse than this.' I must have heard that 10,000 times," said Dunlap, whose daughters used to chuckle privately about how long it would take him to break into a war story.

After the war, he used the GI Bill to get his college degree from West Virginia University, working two or three part-time jobs at a time, and then worked at the Pentagon for 27 years.

It seems that having so little themselves is what motivated so many of these fathers to see to it their children had it better.

"My education has been hard knocks, learning as I go. I think my children and grandchildren have more opportunity," said Donald "Bucky" Harris, 73, of Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"I had to work and fight for what I got and what I have," he said. "I guess I tried to take advantage of the opportunities presented to me. I'm very vehement about people hollering that they're due this or due that. If they would just quit spouting off and go to work or go to school."

Harris was already married with two children when he was drafted into the Army's 25th Division and sent to the South Pacific. He and his wife had two more kids after the war, and he joined the National Guard and stayed active in the American Legion.

He's not alone among fathers who sense a shift from the traditional values he cherished.

"I think we've gotten away from basics," Harris said. "We were taught to respect the flag, respect our elders, respect other people's property, respect God and country."

Still, he's not looking for anything special now.

"I'm just one in the millions who served," Harris said. "I'm happy I contributed something to the cause of the country. I don't have any thoughts about distinction. I'm real proud of my family. I've had a good life."

OK. So a card just wouldn't cut it. But Happy Father's Day.

DADS ARE SPECIAL

No matter how old we get, it seems like the times spent with Dad are unique and special. There is something about Fathers — an instinctive something — that breeds a bonding unlike any other we experience in our lives. With Dad we share a certain pride in our accomplishments — from the short distance with no training wheels through the years' journey to graduation. Just as though it was yesterday, we can remember walks with him laughing all the way to the fishing hole, crying all the way to the altar.

On this Father's Day, First National Bank extends to you our wishes for a memorable day and a few stolen moments with the man you call Dad.

Palmer gets emotional after his last US Open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) - The King cried, and through his tears Arnold Palmer said goodbye.

There will be other tournaments in other places at other times. "Maybe a few more," Palmer said - but there was no mistaking the meaning of the moment when, his voice choking and tears streaming down the famous face, he said: "After 40 years, all the fun, all the work ..."

He could say no more and buried his face in a white towel, a victim of his own emotions.

One of the most powerful, poignant moments in golf's history overshadowed the efforts of all others Friday in the second round of the U.S. Open.

When all the sweating in sweltering heat, all the straining and striving against adversity was over, when all the cards were in, Colin Montgomerie of Scotland held a 2-stroke lead over Hale Irwin, David Edwards and John Cook at the tournament halfway point.

Montgomerie, last year's leader of the European Order of Merit, holed a sand shot for an eagle-3 in a round of 65 that gave him a 136 total, eight under par.

"About my limit around a course like this," he said after stretching the lead with a 10-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

Cook and Edwards also had 65s on the course that was eased and softened by overnight rain and were tied at 138 with Irwin, 49, a three-time U.S. Open winner who shot 69.

Jack Nicklaus, playing on the same course and in the same tournament that provided him with his first professional victory 32 years ago, had a 70 and was tied at 139 with Jeff Maggert.

"I'm excited about playing a good first two rounds and being in position," Nicklaus said. "I'm excited about playing the last two rounds."

First-round leader Tom Watson slipped from an opening 68 to 73 and was at 141, one under par.

All who were there will remember the day Arnold bid goodbye at Oakmont, the day he played his last round in U.S. Open competition.

Palmer, 64, the most beloved player the game has produced, the man who led golf into the television era, was given a huge, lasting ovation by the gallery in the stands around the 18th as he walked up the fairway.

As he approached the green, the outpouring of affection and respect increased in volume. Tears came to Palmer's eyes and he doffed his hat and made a little bow, a bald spot gleaming in the sun.

Then he three-putted for bogey, finishing off a round of 81 that made him a victim of the cut.

His day was over. His tournament was over. His career at Oakmont - which covered five U.S. Opens dating to 1953 - was over.

He stumbled and choked through a course-side television interview that, eventually, cut away.

Ewing gets help from team; Knicks 1 win from NBA title

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Hakeem Olajuwon isn't outplaying Patrick Ewing, and the New York Knicks are one game away from the NBA championship because Ewing's supporting cast is overshadowing Olajuwon's.

The Knicks managed to split the first four games of the NBA Finals although Ewing made just one-third of his shots. When he came through with his best game of the series in Game 5 on Friday night, it was no surprise that New York took a 3-2 lead with a 91-84 victory.

Television viewers missed part of the game when NBC switched to live coverage of police tailing O.J. Simpson along the freeways of Los Angeles. Simpson, charged earlier in the day with murder in the deaths of his former wife and a man, was arrested at his home about the time the game ended.

Ewing had 25 points, 12 rebounds and eight blocked shots, more than neutralizing Olajuwon's 27 points. Ewing, badly outplayed in the regular season by the NBA's Most Valuable Player, is averaging 19.6 points, 12.4 rebounds and 4.8 blocked shots in the series, compared to Olajuwon's 26.6 points, 8.8 rebounds and 4.0 blocks.

"We knew that sooner or later Patrick would get his game together," Knicks guard John Starks said. "He did it offensively, and especially defensively with eight blocks. Maybe we've got to jump on his back and let him carry us."

The fact is the Knicks are carrying each other. Starks had 19 points, Anthony Mason 17 and Derek Harper 14 while Olajuwon's on with him coming out of it, it makes us more dangerous," Mason said.

More dangerous is what the Knicks need to be. After winning two of three at Madison Square Garden, they're going back to Houston, where the Rockets' fans are sure to have a positive effect on their bruised egos.

If Houston can win Game 6 on Sunday night to even the series, the Knicks will have that 19-game streak of home teams winning seven games to contend with on Wednesday night.

"We know a very important game is coming up Sunday," Starks said. "It's a business trip. We can't let ourselves get too high or too low."

Rockets guard Vernon Maxwell, a big disappointment with a 12-point average in the series, including eight on 3-for-11 shooting Friday, appears to be especially happy to be returning to Texas.

"We got the homecourt advantage back by winning Game 3," Maxwell said. "Now that we're going home, it will be tough for them to get another game from us."

Maxwell and backcourt teammates Kenny Smith and Sam Cassell again were ineffective Friday night, combining for 20 points on 7-for-20 shooting.

"They're playing well and we're struggling," Maxwell said. "Right now, that's the difference in the series. We've got to get it back."

"We're going back home to play two ballgames," said Robert Horry, who missed 12 of 14 shots and scored seven points Friday. "I think that once we get home we'll be able to play our best ball yet."

from all angles, refused to criticize his teammates.

"We're a team," Olajuwon said. "I don't separate the guards or the forwards from the center. I made mistakes, and that's the nature of the game. We have to settle down and regroup."

Houston regrouped briefly in Game 5 after New York led 56-43 midway through the third quarter. A 22-5 surge in which Olajuwon had eight points put Houston on top 65-61 early in the fourth.

"Sad as it is to say, we do that all the time," Mason said of losing the lead. "We're pretty much used to it."

As they've done throughout the series, the Knicks turned up their intensity down the stretch.

Starks, who scored 11 points in the fourth quarter for the second straight game, hit a 3-pointer with 2:23 left to put New York ahead for good at 81-80. It was the sixth lead change of the final period.

The 3-pointer highlighted a 13-2 run that turned a three-point deficit into an 89-81 lead with 28 seconds left. A 3-pointer by Olajuwon, Houston's only field goal in the last 4:25, made it 89-84, but it wasn't enough.

"We're on the brink," Knicks coach Pat Riley said. "But as excited as we might be, we have a lot of work to do. They're going to be committed and ready back in Houston."

Knicks forward Charles Oakley, whose rebounding total went from 20 in Game 4 to six Friday night, agreed with his coach.

Griffey hits homer No. 30

By The Associated Press

For Ken Griffey, home run No. 30 was the hardest of them all.

Not the toughest, the hardest. Griffey's shot traveled 428 feet and landed in the upper water fountain in right-center field at Kaufman Stadium. It helped the Seattle Mariners to a 5-1 victory over Kansas City on Friday night.

"When you first come here, you think you'd like to hit one in the water," he said. "But I have only hit four here and this is the only one I knew was gone."

"It was probably the hardest ball I've hit this season."

The homer enabled him to match Babe Ruth's mark for most home runs before July 1. Ruth hit 30 by that date in both 1928 and 1930, finishing with 54 in 1928 and 49 two years later.

"He's pretty amazing," said Royals pitcher David Cone, who gave up the blast. "He's doing it everywhere. He did it in this park and that's certainly no fluke, not in the second deck of water."

In other games, it was Milwaukee 8, New York 1; Cleveland 8, Boston 1; Toronto 7, Detroit 4; Baltimore 9, Minnesota 2; Seattle 5, Kansas City 1; California 5, Chicago 3; and Oakland 4, Texas 2.

Athletics 4, Rangers 2

At Arlington, Texas, Stan Javier homered twice and Todd Van Poppel (3-5) got the victory in his hometown.

Hector Fajardo (2-3) took the loss, allowing three runs and six hits over 6 1-3 innings.

Indians 8, Red Sox 1

At Cleveland, the Indians won their 16th in a row at home and their seventh straight overall.

Dennis Martinez (5-4) gave up one run and eight hits in eight innings, striking out four and throwing 35 of his final 38 pitches for strikes.

Unknown Marlin hurts Mets

By The Associated Press

Pete Smith, Dallas Green and the rest of the National League are quickly learning Greg Colbrunn's name.

Colbrunn, who spent seven weeks on the disabled list earlier this season, hit a three-run homer following an intentional walk and Kurt Abbott homered for the fourth consecutive game Friday night, powering the Florida Marlins past the New York Mets 6-5.

With the score tied 2-2 and a runner on second in the third inning, New York starter Pete Smith was instructed by Green, the Mets manager, to intentionally walk Jeff Conine and pitch to Colbrunn.

Colbrunn followed with his second homer to give Florida a 5-2 lead.

"The manager makes the decision," Smith (3-7) said. "I should have got him out, whatever his name is - Colbrunn."

Colbrunn has an eight-game hitting streak with 14 RBIs in the past seven games.

"He's going to help us out offensively," said Marlins manager Rene Lachemann, whose team ranks ninth in the NL in scoring.

"I'm still missing some pitches I shouldn't be missing, but I'm happy with the way I'm swinging the bat," Colbrunn said.

In other games, it was Philadelphia 10, Montreal 8; Atlanta 6, Cincinnati 5; Pittsburgh 7, St. Louis 4; San Diego 3, Houston 2; San Francisco 6, Chicago 1; and Colorado 13, Los Angeles 5.

Padres 3, Astros 2

At San Diego, Eddie Williams hit his first big-league homer in nearly four years and Andy Benes pitched eight strong innings for the Padres.

Bip Roberts went 2-for-4 to extend his hitting streak to 20 games, longest in the NL this year, as the Padres snapped Houston's three-game winning streak.

Braves 6, Reds 5

At Atlanta, Jeff Blauser hit a two-run home run in the bottom of the ninth to rally the Braves to their fourth straight victory.

Barry Larkin's two-out, two-run double in the top of the ninth had given the Reds a 5-4 lead.

The victory was the 1,000th for Atlanta manager Bobby Cox.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Murray struggling on road to Major Leagues

By PHIL ROGERS

The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - Calvin Murray smiles when he thinks how great he once thought professional baseball was going to be. He had barely been in the San Francisco Giants' organization one week, and already things were looking up. Barry Bonds was coming to the Giants.

"I was thrilled," Murray said. "I was going to get to play with the best player in the game, maybe one day play right next to him. I was pretty pumped. I was going to play center field, and my left fielder was going to be Barry Bonds. That was great."

Two years later, Murray is still in the minor leagues, playing for the Giants' Class AA Shreveport team in the Texas League.

Recently, he found himself in San Antonio for a series against the San Antonio Missions. From his spot in center field, he could watch jets fly in to nearby Lackland Air Force Base. It wasn't quite as easy to picture Candlestick Park.

When Murray looks to his right, he saw Brent Cookson, not Bonds. When he looked to his left, he saw Marvin Benard, not Willie McGee. Later, when he went to the plate, the scoreboard flashed a .228 batting average.

Murray does not complain, but it has been a few decades since Dallas kids grew up dreaming about life in the Texas League. "I wouldn't wish it on anybody," he said. "Get out of the minor leagues as soon as you can. That's my advice."

Murray, 23, is learning about patience. Ditto the Giants, who selected him with the seventh pick overall in the 1992 draft, then gave him an $825,000 bonus to bypass his senior season at the University of Texas.

"He isn't coming any slower than we anticipated," said Jack Hiatt, the Giants' minor league director of player development. "We knew he would struggle with the bat. We knew it would take a lot of at-bats to get him where he needed to be. We knew he had some faults with the bat."

Maybe so, maybe no. The Giants had an immediate need for a leadoff hitter when they picked Murray. Al Rosen, then the San Francisco general manager, projected rapid advancement for the former Dallas White High School star.

Why not? He had twice been drafted in the first round - Cleveland wasted the 11th choice overall on Murray in 1989 - and was coming from a top college program. He spent the summer after he was drafted hitting .368 for the U.S. Olympic team in Barcelona.

San Francisco was not alone in predicting quick success for Murray. Rangers scouting director Sandy Johnson was downcast after Murray lit up an NCAA college tournament in 1992.

He had hoped Murray would slide to the 22nd pick, which the Rangers held, but knew it wouldn't happen. Texas selected Stanford righthander Rick Helling instead.

Johnson and his top lieutenants spent the night before the draft at Murray's house in 1989, trying to convince him and his family that he should turn pro rather than attend college. He was the Rangers' top choice over the rest of the talent available at the fifth pick, which included Frank Thomas, Chuck Knoblauch and Cal Eldred. They took Texas Tech outfielder Donald Harris only after another round of telephone calls to Murray.

"What you saw was that he was going to be an offensive machine, a lot like a Rickey Henderson," Johnson said. "We thought he would be a tremendous offensive player who would hit a lot of balls into gaps, steal 75 to 80 bases and have the whole package."

Murray still has speed. He has stayed among the Texas League leaders in stolen bases. But the rest of his development has done little more than illustrate what a risky business the baseball draft can be.

San Francisco invited Murray to attend its major league spring training before he had ever played a game in the minors. He did well enough there to land a job in Shreveport for last season. He wasn't ready.

Murray hit .188 in 37 games and was demoted to Class A San Jose. "We tried to short-cut the process because he had such a marvelous spring," Hiatt said. "We couldn't tell him he couldn't play at Double-A. We eventually had to move him the wrong way, down, which means we made a mistake putting him there. The process was tough on him."

It was a good change for Murray. He hit .281 with nine home runs and 42 stolen bases at San Jose before being rewarded with a week at Class AAA Phoenix to finish his first season as a pro.

He is a more competitive hitter in his second year at Shreveport, although he is still struggling to make the ball jump off a wooden bat. At the time of the San Antonio series, he had only 13 extra-base hits in 337 at-bats above Class A, but is learning how to be more dangerous in the leadoff spot.

"I've been bunting more," Murray said. "It's not like I've always got to bunt for hits, but if I can move the fielders in a little bit, make them think I might be bunting, then it helps me a whole lot."

Captains manager Ron Wotus sees definite improvement from last season.

"We're pleased with the progress he has made with his bat and his whole game. Everybody has set high goals for him, but we don't feel he's off to a bad start," Watus said.

"He's showing a little more pop at the plate, and he's definitely more disciplined. He's like a lot of young guys coming into pro ball. He just needs lots of at-bats, lots of work to get used to the wooden bat and to pro ball."

Murray is popular with the Giants' minor league staff. He is described as a tireless worker who would almost always rather be at the ballpark than lying poolside at a hotel. He does not appear to expect special treatment for being a first-round pick.

Honesty forces Murray to admit that he has been overwhelmed by the day-to-day demands of professional baseball. He loved the college experience at Austin and sometimes still misses it.

He was known as a big-game player at Texas - he hit .400 with 17 runs scored in 14 regional playoff games over his three-year career - and admits it is hard work to prepare to

Spurs' turmoil forced Lucas to Philadelphia

By KELLEY SHANNON

Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Who can blame John Lucas for leaving the San Antonio Spurs for the Philadelphia 76ers?

It should have been an easy call for the young coach after the firestorm that engulfed San Antonio following the Spurs' first-round playoff loss.

Though the Spurs board of directors ultimately proclaimed "full confidence" in Lucas, there was a sense that some team owners thought he was lucky to get to hang around another season.

On the other hand, the 76ers, who hired Lucas Tuesday, treated the lively coach like a hot commodity.

The Spurs had demoted Bob Bass, the vice president of basketball operations who was Lucas' ally, and hired former Spurs and Golden State assistant coach Gregg Popovich in his place. The 76ers made Lucas general manager and coach.

San Antonio faced the prospect of a rough start next season in light of plans to acquire new supporting players for All-Star David Robinson, Philadelphia, with a 25-57 record this past season, can't dip much lower.

A tough career decision?

Hardly.

If Lucas hadn't already been considering a departure - and there have been some reports that he was thinking about it before the season ended - it was clear he was seriously looking into the possibility afterward.

Discord within the Spurs' governing board and management after the season led to the resignation of team president Bob Coleman, also a supporter of Lucas, and the ouster of his teams.

Steamed Spurs owners hauled Lucas in for a post-season meeting and interrogated him about his plans for next year. In the days that followed, the usually talkative Lucas wouldn't speak with news reporters.

The June 9 announcement that the Spurs had agreed to release Lucas from his contract, at his request, wasn't surprising. The report that Lucas by that time already had designs on the Philadelphia job also

The bride was attired in an elegant white satin formal-length sweetheart gown designed with a wedding ring collar of lace and beaded leg-of-mutton sleeves which were accented with satin bow insets with hanging pearls. The hand-beaded bodice featured an illusion back and the detachable scalloped cathedral-length train was embellished with beaded lace and bows. A large designer bow accented the back basque waistline.

The tiered bridal illusion veil formed a pouf at the back of a headband created by white miniature silk flowers and beads.

She carried a cascading arrangement of fresh red and white roses adorned with greenery and baby's breath. As something blue, she wore the traditional garter; carried her great-grandmother's handkerchief; and borrowed her cousin's earrings.

What are your kids watching?

While you can't-and probably shouldn't-protect your children from every bit of unpleasantness in this world, there's a lot you can protect them from, particularly if it's shown on TV.

Today there are a number of products available with varying technologies and price levels that can help parents control TV use and permit them to decide what their offspring will be able to see.

Most are of the black box variety. Parents can plug the antenna input of a TV set into a small black box that has a key lock for parental control.

Others require passwords so the TV can be turned on only after a password is punched into a key pad. Still another device requires a coded plastic card to be inserted into a slot in the box to turn on the TV.

Homes with cable service can get a device which blocks the set from receiving cable TV programming parents prefer not to get.

Many television sets allow consumers to "detune" unwanted channels so they are skipped when scanning channels. Some television sets even come with a built-in channel or time/channel blocker.

Many parents find these products can not only help them supervise their children's viewing habits, but can often help children understand such useful concepts as reaching a compromise, budgeting their time and shutting off equipment when not in use.

NEW YORK (AP) - Jane Alexander says art can mean hope and dignity.

The chairwoman of the National Endowment for the Arts visited a junior high school Monday to see students perform a rap opera about AIDS in their drug-ravaged neighborhood.

"While only a handful of these students might go on to a career in the arts, they all gain a measure of themselves that comes through the hard work, concentration and dedication it takes to make art," the actress said after the performance at the South Bronx Community Action Theater.

Eubank, Curtis wed Saturday afternoon

Becky Illene Eubank became the bride of Jimmy Harlan Curtis Saturday afternoon during a ceremony held at First Baptist Church. Jim Green officiated for the marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Clyde and Leta Eubank of 236 Ave. B. and the bridegroom is the son of Quentin Curtis of Route 4, Hereford, and Sue Schroeter of 705 Country Club Drive.

The altar was decorated by a brass arch trimmed with greenery and white and blue silk roses.

The bride was presented in marriage by Clyde Eubank.

Melissa Shipp served as maid of honor and Ray Brown was best man. Tina LaComb was bridesmaid and the groom's brother, Quincy Curtis, was groomsman.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brothers, Kirby and Rodney Eubank.

Stephanie and Drew Wilburn, children of Shannon and Melonie Wilburn, served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively. Candles were lit by Christi Euler and Whitney Ahola.

Tammy Bruce vocalized "I Swear" and "Next Step In Love."

The bride was attired in a Victorian style satin gown with a lace bodice encrusted with miniature pearls. It was also fashioned with puff sleeves and a full skirt which swept into a cathedral-length train.

that was trimmed with lace and miniature pearls.

The waist-length illusion veil was attached to a headband accented with silk flowers.

The bride carried a floral arrangement of white roses, royal blue snapdragons and English Ivy. She also carried a white Bible belonging to her parents and a handkerchief trimmed with lace handmade by her great-grandmother.

The bride's attendants wore royal blue dresses and carried long stem white roses.

Melanie Wilburn invited guests to register at the reception held in the church fellowship hall.

Diane Wilhelm and Rachel Balderez served cake.

The bride's three-tiered cake was created with a spiral staircase and the groom's chocolate cake was made in the shape of a boot. A kettle filled with wild flowers also adorned the table.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Colorado, the bride wore a western shirt, jeans and boots. The couple will make their home in Summerfield.

The bride is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School. The groom graduated from HHS in 1987 and is employed for Millard Refrigerated Services in Friona.

Out of town guests represented Bovina, Lubbock, Amarillo, Summerfield, Cisco, De Soto, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Have you ever asked a teacher, "Why do you teach?" For most teachers, teaching is fulfilling, enriching work. Even though we encounter occasional punctures, most of us find that the satisfaction in teaching increases as the years go by.

Teachers could be compared to lamplighters. Naturally, we cannot teach all there is to know, but we can light lamps to encourage students to see what can be learned and how they may prepare for their future.

Most people can recall some of their "lamplighters" quite readily and very probably, some of them will have been teachers.

The Junior Historians had a swimming party at Green Acres Swimming Pool on Tuesday. Seventeen members, including Kris Friel, Chip Barnett, Heath Henderson, Krista Warren, Kristin Fangman, Jenny Artho, Tasha Bradford, Leslie Poarch, Clay Brown, Justin Landrum, Josh Rowe, Mark Shakocius, Michael Hall, Jason Collier, Bryan Parrack, Amber Vasek and Lance Pennington, enjoyed swimming, fellowship and refreshments. Sponsors for the event were Evelyn Wells, Margaret Hall, and Carolyn Waters. The group plans to meet at least two more times during the summer.

Since TAAS scores have improved, there will be a number of drawings for prizes that were donated by professional sports teams for the occasion. Prize winners will be listed in this column next week.

Our Route 66 researchers, Justin Landrum and Clay Brown, have been asked to display their work at one of the Sixth Avenue Route 66 businesses as well as at the Route 66 Museum in McLean. Those folks will just have to wait in line as they have two, and perhaps three, reservations here in Hereford within the next few weeks! Kris Friel's project on the Dust Bowl will also be highlighted in two upcoming programs. Congratulations, again, young men.

Have you noticed how many of our students from JHU and HHS are working this summer? There seems to be jobs available for those who want to work! These students and their parents are to be recommended!

Food for thought: Every life is a biography. Will you be a lamplighter to help brighten that biography? Don't overlook the opportunity!

Christi Euler feted with bridal shower

A bridal shower was held for Christi Anne Euler Saturday morning, June 4, at the home of Donna Ruland, 501 W. 15th St. The honoree and David Russell plan to wed July 30.

Welcoming guests were the honoree; her mother, Jayne Euler; her grandmother, Jean Kent of Parachute, Colo.; her sister, Cheri Euler; the prospective bridegroom's mother, Mary Russell; his grandmother, Zelma Wathall; and his sister, Jeanine Russell.

Cheri Euler registered guests.

Cake, punch, mints and nuts were served by Heidi and Amy Ruland and Laura Lomas.

The bride-elect's chosen colors of emerald green and ivory were depicted in the table decorations. The centerpiece was created from fresh cut flowers arranged in an epergne. Also, placed on the refreshment table were napkins with green, pink and purple flowers.

A vacuum cleaner was presented to the honoree by the hostesses: Donna Ruland, Donna Warrick, Carolyn Hiltbrunner, Pam Fogo, Here's a juicy piece of news: That delicious "fruit juice" you enjoy many mornings may not be pure juice at all.

Fortunately, the Food and Drug Administration's new Nutrition Labeling and Education Act makes it easier to tell what you're really buying.

Here are some tips for selecting 100 percent pure fruit juice:

-Look for the words "100 percent pure juice" on the label.

-Watch out for "juicy" product names. Words like "juice cocktail," "drink," "punch," "sparkler," and "beverage" are often causes that the product is mostly sweeteners and water.

-Choose nutrient-dense juice, such as orange or grapefruit juice.

Hints for home buyers

A lot of buyers, in looking for a stylish and affordable home, are finding that high prices (and high down payments) are limiting their choices.

Fortunately, today's manufactured homes, with their high quality construction, innovative designs and affordable financing, are widening those choices.

Today's homebuyers will find two distinct types of manufactured homes - single-section and multisection.

Single-section homes are 12 to 16 feet wide and up to 80 feet in length providing families with over 1,000 square feet of livable space. Multisection homes are usually two or more units joined together that can range from 24 to 32 feet in width and up to 70 feet in length - giving the homeowner up to 2,500 square feet of space.

What appeals most to homebuyers is not just the size of today's manufactured homes but how much they resemble the more conventional site-built homes. These homes are available in a variety of floor plans that include spacious living rooms with vaulted ceilings, formal dining rooms, fully equipped kitchens, bedrooms with walk-in closets, dressing areas and bathrooms with recessed tubs and whirlpools.

Homebuyers can also choose features like wood-burning fireplaces, bay windows, and roofs with gabled fronts. What is particularly appealing is that the buyer of today's manufactured home with these upgrades still pays less than the cost of a conventional site-built home without these upgrades.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

My desk is frequently covered by trade journals. (We get half a dozen, I guess). Usually we just read the reviews to get some idea of what will be available in the coming months that might appeal to Deaf Smith County readers. Some of the articles are excellent, I imagine, but only very rarely do I get the chance to read one. A few weeks ago, however, I happened to run across an article Christian mysteries. Now, Christian fiction, such as that by Oke, Thoene, Morris, or Phillips and Pella is hot stuff right now, but it generally falls in the historical fiction category. The gist of the article was whether it was possible to write material that appealed to mystery lovers, yet not resort to language, violence, and sex that many find offensive. Surprisingly, the opinion of the journal was that it was possible and had been achieved by a few writers.

One of the works to be mentioned was Milennium Eve by Ed Stewart. Actually, the jacket notes make the book sound more like a suspense novel than a mystery, but sometimes that line is thin, anyway. A journalist, in Los Angeles to cover a mega-gathering of Christians, and her new romance—a police sergeant—race time to avert an assassination plot aimed at America's top Christian leaders.

Julie Garwood has another best-seller, Prince Charming. Garwood's new tale covers half the world, and a host of characters, including English matriarchs and Montana ranchers, and a young man caught between the two.

This is your lucky week! I know how much you love Emily Dickinson poems. You remember—those with such classic line as "I heard a fly buzz when I died" and "Because I could not stop for death, he kindly stopped for me." Just for you we are releasing Emily Dickinson: Selected Poems To Be Fair to the Maiden of Amherst, she has also written less morose lines than those about death, including "There is no frigate like a book to take us lands away," and "I like to see it lap the miles." I must admit, in all candor, however, that I got a new appreciation for the lady when it was revealed to me that you can put her poems to music. Try "Because I could not stop" with "Auld Lang Syne," "San Antonio Rose," or even "Ghost Riders in the Sky."

The Pictorial History of the Civil War is a large "coffee-table" volume, obviously non-comprehensive (can any single volume of the Civil War be comprehensive)? but it is fun to sit down and look at the scores of pictures of that great conflict.

Speaking of pictures of the War Between the States, are you aware that the library has a six-volume (or twelve-volume, depending on how you count) set of The Photographic History of the Civil War? This set contains hundreds (thousands?) of photos taken during the conflict including shots of battle scenes and sites, common soldiers and generals, citizens and dignitaries. Our copy is a reprint of the original set issued in the early part of this century. It is a reference work, and does not check out, but for those interested in the Civil War, it's worth setting aside a little time to come in and browse through.

We are a third of the way through the Summer Reading Program and a number of kids have finished the reading part and earned their prizes. "It's still not too late to sign up. This Tuesday's program will take us to South America.

Binder, Parker marry in Avenue Baptist Church

Brandi Allison Binder of Hereford and Glenn Earl Parker of Amarillo were united in marriage Saturday afternoon in Avenue Baptist Church of Hereford.

The ceremony was officiated by former Hereford resident, Pastor Roy Shave of the Bellevue Church of Christ in Bellevue.

The bride is the daughter of Bill and Gayle Binder of 229 Juniper and is the granddaughter of Lawrence and Dorothy Binder and Ruby Ellison, all of Ralls. The bridegroom is the son of Bert and Donna Parker of 120 Quince and is the grandson of Terrell and Lou Elliott of Hereford and Mickey Parker of Decker, Mont.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father.

The front of the church was decorated with mixed spring bouquets. Also, enhancing the wedding setting were two spiral candelabra, two angled candelabra and an arch candelabrum accented with greenery. Placed at the altar were a kneeling bench and a lace ivory unity candle. The windows were accented with single 12-inch tapered candles and the pews were marked with fuchsia bows.

Robin Terrell of Garrison served as maid of honor and the groom's father was best man.

The bride's sisters, Brek and Brittney Binder, and the groom's sister, Debra Rickman of Amarillo, were bridesmaids. Groomsmen included Bryan Murry and Kyle Andrews, both of Amarillo, and Darren Jones of Canyon. Brad Gray of Lubbock escorted guests.

Glenn Parker ushered in his mother and Brad Gray escorted the bride's mother.

The Methodist Bell Choir performed several musical numbers including one as the bridesmaids and the bride entered the sanctuary. A quartet, consisting of Kyle Ellison, Judy McCabe, Dale Hollingsworth and Nancy Shave, vocalized "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord Bless You and Keep You." Becky Weatherly accompanied Nancy Shave of Bellevue as she sang "Evergreen" and the bride's mother, Gayle Binder, as she sang "Surround Me With Love."

The bride was attired in a candlelight satin wedding gown fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and short puffy sleeves. The bodice and sleeves were accented with appliques of hand-beaded alencon lace. The long, full skirt and train were adorned with appliques of hand-beaded lace and lace also adorned the hem of the gown. A large bow accented the back of the dress.

The bride's two-tiered tulle fingertip veil and back pouf were embellished with accents of pearls and attached to a headpiece shaped in a crown of flowers with pearl centers and clusters of pearls. The left side was accented with pearl sprays and lily-of-the-valley.

The bride carried a cascading arrangement of irises, stargazer lilies, roses, fuchsia lisianthus and austermerial lilies. She also carried a handkerchief belonging to her great-grandmother and wore a blue and white lace and pearl garter made by her grandmother, Dorothy Binder.

To complete her wedding ensemble, the bride wore a pearl necklace and pearl drop earrings.

Each bridal attendant wore a two-piece fuchsia taffeta floor-length straight skirt with a split up the back. The fitted top with Princess seams was a double breasted creation designed with button fronts. Organza ruffles highlighted the cap sleeves. Each carried a mixed spring bouquet.

Cryssten Murry of Amarillo invited guests to register at the reception held at the E.B. Black House. The table was decorated with a vase of spring flowers and an ivy registry book.

Missy Gilbert of Amarillo and Vanessa Starkey of Ralls served cake. Punch and coffee were poured by Leslie Metzig of Amarillo and Wendy Starkey of Ralls.

The main refreshment table was covered with an ecru hand-crocheted cloth made by the bride's great-grandmother. Placed on the table were a three-tiered cake with candlelight icing and four heart-shaped satellite cakes around the bottom. The cake was covered in fresh spring flowers. The table setting was also enhanced by a large silver fruit punch bowl, ecru candles, greenery, mints and mixed nuts.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Juan to tour the Caribbean, the bride wore a black and white polka-dot sun dress and corsage of white roses, baby's breath and black trim.

The couple will make their home in Amarillo.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School and graduated in May from West Texas A&M University where she received a B.S. degree in elementary education.

The groom is also a graduate of HHS. He graduated from WTAMU in December 1993 with a B.B.A. degree in accounting. He is employed by Ault and Associates in Amarillo.

Out of town guests included Mickey Parker of Decker, Mont., and Carol, Emily, Ryan and Sarah Myers of Sheridan, Wyo. Wedding guests also came from Ralls, Amarillo and Lubbock.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, was held Friday evening at the Hereford Country Club.

— YOUR EYES —

A BABY'S EYES

Babies are not born ready to see the world. It takes some time for eye muscles -- and control of them -- to develop. Under six months, a baby's eyes may wander or seem to cross; this is not a call for alarm.

If crossing continues or seems to get worse, bring the baby in for a professional examination. The sooner the optometrist can start treatment, the better the results will be. Fact is, a child won't simply outgrow crossed eyes or an eye that wanders outward, but many cases can be corrected with the use of prescription lenses and vision training. If there is any weakness of visual acuity, this can be corrected, too.

With continued therapy, most children learn to use both eyes together so that they are straight and aligned. Surgery, a last resort, is not recommended unless all other treatment options have been tried and failed.

How to manage the office

While it takes a lot of office equipment these days to manage documents and maintain communications, people running small or home-based businesses don't often have all that space available.

To help simplify this administrative challenge, a long-time leader in the development of innovative office equipment has come up with a multifunctional device that combines a plain paper fax for transmitting and receiving documents over phone lines, laser-quality printing from PCs, photocopying and a telephone into one compact, generally affordable unit.

Not much bigger than a breadbox (14.1" by 13.7" by 6.9" and about 15 pounds), the Ricoh RAX800 is no larger than any of the individual components it replaces, except the telephone.

When hooked up to PC, the ink jet FAX 800 gives even the most minimal office capabilities equivalent to larger corporate powerhouses including desktop publishing at 350 dots-per-inch resolution. Because all the functions are built into a single unit, each is highly compatible with the rest.

Writing conference planned Aug. 5-6

Seventy-five years of excellence is the theme of the annual Frontiers in Writing Conference, sponsored by Panhandle Professional Writers and Amarillo College, Aug. 5-6 at Amarillo College.

"Not many organizations survive long enough to celebrate a 75th birthday," says Doris Meredith, conference cochairman and author of ten published mysteries. "Panhandle Professional Writers has not only survived, but has built an enduring relationship with both published and aspiring writers of this region. We offer moral support, encouragement, and even a little inspiration to those who want to improve their writing skills. We also offer help of a more practical nature during our annual Frontiers in Writing Conference. This year's conference provides education in career management as well as information on submission of manuscripts and the 'nuts and bolts' of writing fiction and non-fiction."

The conference opens Friday, Aug. 5 at 6 p.m. with a reception and autograph party at the Big Texan Steak Ranch. A "Meet the Speakers" banquet begins at 7 p.m., followed by the address, "Trials and Trials: Life of a Writer," given by keynote speaker Don Goldsmith. Known for his historical novels set in the American West, Dr. Goldsmith is also a physician and rancher whose skill as a speaker is nearly as great as his skill with a pen or a scalpel.

Registration for workshops Saturday, Aug. 6, begins at 8 a.m. on the fourth floor of the technology building at Amarillo College. Study groups will begin at 8:40 a.m., and will feature Laura Blake, an agent from the Curtis Brown Agency in New York, who will speak on "The Care and Feeding of an Agent;" Michael Seidman, senior editor at Walker and Company, who will discuss writing "From Printout to Published;" Abigail St. John, a media consultant, will explain "Does Grandpa Know: How to Write Your Family's History;" and Janet and Jerry Weiner on "How to Successfully Write and Sell to the National Magazine Markets."

At 9:30 a.m., Don Goldsmith will conduct a special workshop on "From the Pulp to the Pulitzer: Evolution of a Western," followed at 10:30 by a repeat of morning study groups with the same speakers.

A panel discussion featuring all speakers will follow an awards luncheon in the College Union Building. At 2:45 p.m., study groups will feature D.R. Meredith, nationally known mystery writer, will speak on "Great-Aunt Agatha is Dead: Elements of the Mystery;" Carolyn Meyer, children's author, gives directions "From Quanah to Quakertown: Writing Your Way Through Texas History for Kids;" Charlie Sinclair, President of the Southwest Cowboy Poetry Association, will discuss "Cornbread, Cobwebs, and Cowboys: Colloquialism in Cowboy Poetry;" and Jodi Thomas, award winning romance novelist, will speak on "Falling in Love With Historical Romance." Study groups will be repeated at 3:45 p.m.

Pre-registration for the conference is $60 for members of Panhandle Professional Writers, and $75 for non-members and includes the Friday night buffet. Pre-registration for the Saturday workshop only is $40 for members and $55 for non-members. Pre-registration must be received by July 30. Registration at the door for Saturday is $60 for members and non-members.

For more information on the Frontiers in Writing conference, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Frontiers in Writing, P.O. Box 19303, Amarillo, Texas 79114, or call co-chairmen Doris Meredith at (806)352-3889, or Frances Clegg-Ferris at (806)764-3458.

White, Vogel united in marriage June 11

Wedding vows were spoken by Stacy White and Rickie Vogel during a candlelight ceremony held Saturday afternoon, June 11, at First Baptist Church.

Officiating for the ceremony was Monsignor Orville Blum of St. Anthony's Catholic Church and Doug Manning. Brian Gross gave the readings.

The bride is the daughter of Butch and Mary Beth White and the groom is the son of Herb and Elizabeth Vogel, all of Hereford.

The church was decorated by three arch candelabra flanked by spiral candelabra and large bouquets of bright summer flowers. The pews were marked with mixed greenery and baby's breath.

Butch White presented his daughter in marriage.

The bride's sister, MarKay Cosper of Lubbock, was matron of honor and best man was the groom's brother, Randy Vogel of Sublette, Kan.

Bridesmaids included Kirsten Abney, Heather Bothe, Jennifer Bullard and Shelley Gross. Serving as groomsmen were Jeff Hicks, Chris Urbanczyk, Terry Watson and Sean Smith.

Escorting guests were Kevin Kuper, Gary Vogel and Larry Vogel.

The groom's nieces were flower girls. They were Jaci Bishop, daughter of Mickey and Carol Bishop, and Konstanze Vogel, daughter of Randy and Tamara Vogel. The groom's nephew, Tyler Vogel, son of Gary and Lee Ann Vogel, was ring bearer. The ring pillow was made by Joyce Allred.

Jan Walser accompanied Beth Haschke as she sang "Surely the Presence of the Lord Is in This Place," "Ice Castles" and "I've Waited a Lifetime."

The bride wore an elegant designer's gown of white silk Shantung and alencon lace. The bodice, which was heavily beaded with sequins and pearls on alencon lace, featured a scooped neckline, lantern sleeves and an elongated waistline highlighted with a scalloped overlay. The full ball gown skirt flowed to a chapel-length train.

To complete her attire, the bride chose a floral and pearl tiara accented with a silk illusion pouf and two-tiered cathedral-length veil. She also placed pennies in each shoe depicting the year of birth of the bride and groom.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white Casa Blanca lilies, white stephanotis, baby's breath and statice tied with white satin. She wore earrings and an engagement ring borrowed from Myseda Smith. The bridal attendants wore purple floor-length dirndl skirts with TROY, N.Y. (AP) - Words of wisdom from Jane Fonda: Don't stop growing.

"If you do your life right, you never stop growing up, you never get there," Fonda said in a commencement address at the Emma Willard School.

Fonda, a 1955 graduate of the girls school, looked back on the "transcendent moments" she experienced as a student.

"There were years, later in life, when I lost those feelings, when I stopped seeing colors as brightly, and I didn't know anything was missing. I had all the success in the world. I lacked for nothing in the material sense," she said, "but I'd forgotten, in the words of Alfred North Whitehead, that 'When you understand all about the sun and all about the atmosphere and all about the rotation of the Earth, you may still miss the radiance of the sunset.'" matching cummerbunds. The white peasant-style blouses, created with full ruffles, were worn off-the-shoulders. The ensembles were made by Carolyn Baxter.

The bridesmaids carried cascades of fuchsia lilies, purple irises, yellow and orange enchantment lilies, red poppies and baby's breath tied with bright streamers.

Christy Urbanczyk and Kim Kuper invited guests to register at the reception held at the Hereford Country Club.

The bride's cake was served by Becky and Barbi Brisendine, the groom's nieces. The groom's cake was served by Jennifer Koenig.

The bride's table was covered with a white full-length cloth with purple organza. The bride's four-tiered white cake was adorned with scalloped swags and tiny dots. It was decorated with fresh spring flowers.

The groom's chocolate cake with chocolate icing had a basket of strawberries spilling over the side. At the center of the table was a silver candelabrum that belonged to the bride's grandmother. Chocolate covered strawberries were furnished by Wendell and Merle Clark.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Francisco, Calif., the bride wore a white sleeveless military style jacket with brass buttons and red floral Palazzo pants. The couple will make their home in Fort Morgan, Colo.

The bride is a 1990 graduate of Hereford High School and graduated from Texas Tech University in May.

The groom, a 1987 HHS graduate, graduated from Texas Tech University in 1991. He is employed with Excel as a cattle buyer.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at their home the evening before the wedding.

A "honey-do" shower for the bridal couple was hosted by Chris and Kamille Urbanczyk, Markay and Ken Cosper, Brian and Shelley Gross and Jennifer Bullard.

A lingerie shower for the bride was hosted by her friends. Also, a bridesmaids' luncheon was given for the bride on her wedding day at the Hereford Country Club. Hostesses were Myseda Smith, Carolyn Baxter, Judy Williams, Marline Watson, Francyne Bromlow, Karen Payne, Lucy Rogers and Joyce Allred.

GEESE WORK

(First of two parts)

As a young man I watched huge flocks of geese migrate north and south over the Missouri farm where I grew up. Over the years I learned to love the honking sounds and watching the big V formations fly overhead.

Although I loved the geese, I remember feeling sad in the fall as the flocks traveled southward because I knew winter would soon arrive. Winter meant cold, bitter weather and more work to ensure the safety and health of our livestock.

The northbound flights of spring were early indicators that warm weather was on its way. It meant no more ice to chop or hay to feed. Spring brought new green growth, war sunny days and pleasant activities around the farm.

I didn't know about the wonderful lessons being taught in the sky as I performed my routine chores. I just enjoyed the sights and sounds.

Geese Lessons

Bill and Marty Geist, owners of Gingiss Formalwear Center in Amarillo, TX, shared an essay with me last month. It is titled "Lessons Learned from Geese."

As I read the essay I remembered those early far days I described above. I was also reminded that we as small business owners and managers need to be alert for business building lessons regardless of the source. I extracted several thoughts from the "Geese" essay. I think you'll agree as you read them that we can even learn from the birds.

According to the essay, as each goose flaps its wings, it creates an uplift for others behind it. There is 71 percent more flying range in a V formation than flying alone.

The lesson we can glean from this information is that people who share a common sense of direction and purpose are more successful. They can work longer and accomplish more because they feed off the energy of others.

Another interesting fact is that when the lead goose tires, it rotates back into the formation and another bird takes over. This allows a fresh goose to keep up the pace while the leader takes a breather.

The message here is that shared leadership and independence gives others a chance to lead as well as follow. While being the lead goose may improve the view, the work is harder. Everyone needs a break from the routine and a fresh perspective may improve your attitude.

I also learned from the essay the reason geese honk as they fly. (It's not because they are passing another goose.) The geese in formation honk to encourage the leaders to keep up the speed.

The lesson here is to make certain our honks are encouraging. We all need a friendly honk from time-to-time. In business, it may be a word of praise or a pat on the back for a job well done. Encouragement is a good team builder.

The final point in the essay dealt with being supportive. When an ill or injured goose can't keep up with the flock, other geese will drop out of formation and stay with it until it revives or dies. Then they catch up with the flock or join a new one.

The point here is that your colleagues may need help from time-to-time. We should stand by them in bad times as well as good.

Teamwork

You've probably guessed by now that the secret of the geese's success is teamwork. It's not really different from any business or organization. For profit, non-profit or sports related, all groups can benefit from teamwork.

Next week we'll build on the "Lessons Learned from Geese" and share more on the value of team building and teamwork. Don't miss "Geese Work Part 2" as we share the five reasons teams are successful.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I wonder about the advisability of making so many products "low salt." Aren't we likely to produce a dangerous low-salt situation for lots of people, especially for those already on low-salt diets? So many doctors want to lower salt to lower blood pressure. I understand that salt is a necessary electrolyte in the body. I think all doctors should check this out. — D.M.

ANSWER: We literally swim in sodium, and all we need for health is a meager 500 milligrams a day, the amount of sodium in a fifth of a teaspoon of table salt. Most of us get the equivalent of four to five times that amount without even trying hard.

Only a couple of rare situations cause dangerously low-sodium levels. Prolonged vomiting or diarrhea can temporarily deplete a body of sodium along with other minerals. So might adrenal-gland failure. The adrenal glands provide special hormones that control sodium levels. Without them, sodium plummets.

Otherwise, the body keeps a faithful sodium vigil, prepared to adjust levels up or down on a daily, indeed hourly, schedule.

Low-sodium diet therapy is not likely to get anyone into trouble. Merely cooking and eating foods prepared with low salt content won't make a dent in overall sodium sources that abound everywhere.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Six years ago, I developed a tremor in my right hand. I was told it was early Parkinson's disease. Later, I was put on Sinemet. If anything, the tremor is worse. It is not the "pill rolling" finger motion you mention. Any advice? — C.L.

ANSWER: With Parkinson's disease, you sometimes need independent second or third opinions to settle things. It's usually time and money well spent.

One might indeed question your Parkinson's diagnosis.

After six years, you'd expect other signs, such as slowness of movement, rigidity and a leaning posture.

Then there is the apparent drug ineffectiveness. Sinemet is standard Parkinson's medicine. The fact that it isn't helping you makes me all the more suspicious of the diagnosis.

Interested readers can order the Parkinson's booklet by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 24, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: How do familial and Parkinson tremors differ? — J.W.

ANSWER: Parkinson's tremor is most noticeable with hands at rest, as when they are resting on the lap. Familial tremor, on the other hand, is most obvious when moving the hand purposefully, as when sugaring your coffee.

Fatigue worsens familiar tremor. Beta-blocker drugs help ease it.

Other drugs come into play for Parkinson's disease.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please write something on adhesions. — D.T.

ANSWER: Adhesions are bands of extra scar tissue. They often form at surgical sites. In an edited portion of your letter, you suggest that yours followed your gallbladder surgery.

Some people are more prone to adhesions.

Any inflammation inside the abdominal cavity can give rise to adhesions. Venereal diseases occasionally cause abdominal adhesions, particularly pelvic ones.

Adhesions cause symptoms when they impinge on some abdominal structures, as when they wrap around the intestine, blocking it.

I wish I could give you some specific advice about preventing adhesions. I really cannot.

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: This is not just another Sunday—it's Father's Day. While keeping my eyes peeled for something special to commemorate the occasion, I came across this letter in the mail, which hit just the right note:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My dad was one in a million. Several years ago, you ran something on Father's Day that warmed my heart. I kept that column for years, and now, it is torn and faded. Please run it again on Father's Day.—Richmond, Va.

MY FATHER

When I was:

4 years old: My daddy can do anything.

5 years old: My daddy knows a whole lot.

6 years old: My dad is smarter than your dad.

7 years old: My dad doesn't know exactly everything.

10 years old: In the olden days when my dad grew up, things were sure different.

12 years old: Oh, well, naturally, Dad doesn't know anything about that. He is too old to remember his childhood.

14 years old: Don't pay any attention

The first trans-Atlantic radio news dispatches were broadcast to England from New Jersey in 1923.

Electrically driven trains that travel through the newly opened English Channel Tunnel - Chunnel for short - require more than 160 megawatts, equal to the peak load of a city of 250,000, according to National Geographic.

to my dad. He is so old-fashioned. 21 years old: Him? My Lord, he's hopelessly out-of-date.

25 years old: Dad knows a little bit about it, but then he should because he has been around so long.

30 years old: Maybe we should ask Dad what he thinks. After all, he's had a lot of experience.

35 years old: I'm not doing a single thing until I talk to Dad.

40 years old: I wonder how Dad would have handled it. He was so wise and had a world of experience.

50 years old: I'd give anything if Dad were here now so I could talk this over with him. Too bad I didn't appreciate how smart he was. I could have learned a lot from him.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Something happened last week that made a terrific difference in my life, and I want to share it with you.

I received a one-page, handwritten note from my son, whom I hadn't heard from in almost two years. The reason for the breakdown in communication between us is not important, but it was very painful for me. I said nothing to friends or family, but not having him in my life was extremely difficult. I prayed every night that I would get a letter or a call.

Yesterday, the note came, telling me about his work and his many activities. Even though there was not one word about the long silence, that brief note made all the difference in the world to me. It also made me wonder if we had really had a problem or if he was just too busy to keep in touch.

For all you busy people out there, please, please write a note to your mothers or fathers. You'll never know how much pleasure it will bring.—Sacramento, Calif.

DEAR SAC: Thanks for the perfect letter for Father's Day.

GEM OF THE DAY: A father is someone who can't get on the phone, into the bathroom or out of debt.

An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love?

"Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Question/Answer

Q: The previous owner of my house installed a kitchen range hood vent that exits into the attic. I will soon have my roof replaced, and at that time, will run the vent through the roof. However, the pipe from the hood into the attic has a 7-inch diameter, and I want to reduce this to 4 inches before extending it through the roof. Will such a reduction cause a dangerous buildup of grease in the pipe?

A: Yes, it could be a problem. The particles of grease that are in suspension will be deposited mainly on the reducing coupling and the walls of the 4-inch diameter extension. All kitchen range vent pipes should be inspected periodically and cleaned if necessary. But since the reducer and extension would be located in the attic, they would probably be forgotten. The resulting buildup of grease would be a potential fire hazard.

The existing vent pipe should be extended through the roof without reducing its diameter. In addition to being safer, your exhaust fan will operate more efficiently without the added resistance that would result from the reduction. The pipe should be flashed properly at the roof joint, and have a storm collar and a rain hood. Also, if there is no damper over the fan, one should be installed.

Question/Answer

Q: We have several hundred dollars' worth of yard and deck plants. Not only are the plants expensive, but they require several seasons to reach a good size and full growth. What can we do to prevent their dying off during the winter?

A: One couple we know stores their plants under fluorescent lights from mid-October to the end of April. They sit many of the plants upon shelves arranged atop a small dinette table in their basement storeroom.

For hanging plants, they hang pipes on chains from the ceiling, with fluorescent shop lights above. The shop lights are often on sale for $10 each, or less, and the bulbs only cost $1 each. The cost of operating them - for electricity - is only pennies per month.

USDA reports oats, barley, corn planted earlier than '93 crops

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Corn, barley and oats plantings are essentially complete for the season, with more than 95 percent of each crop in the ground by May 28, the Agriculture Department says.

The pace of corn planting during the preceding five years averaged 89 percent at this time.

Sorghum planting is well ahead of normal, with 80 percent planted as of June 5, compared with the average pace of 64 percent.

"With most of the feed grain crops in the ground, attention now centers on crop development," said a Feed Update report by USDA's Economic Research Service.

"Plantings were mostly favorable, and early reports indicate the majority of the crops are rated good to excellent," it said.

In the 17 reporting states, 73 percent of the corn was rated good to excellent as of June 5. That is somewhat better than the preceding two years, when 51 percent and 47 percent was rated good to excellent.

Meanwhile, mid-month corn prices received by farmers averaged $2.60 per bushel during May, which was 5 cents below April prices.

"Weakness in farm prices reflects the rapid pace of planting and the relatively favorable conditions for emergence and early plant development," the report said. "Other factors contributing to the weaker prices include a continued poor export sales pace and historically large imports of feed grains."

It noted that dairy cow numbers have been below a year ago, but feed needs actually may be up slightly as producers feed additional concentrates to increase milk production per cow.

"Hog slaughter numbers suggest feed needs by pork producers may still be fairly high," the report said.

"Feed demand in the remainder of the marketing year for cattle is expected to remain near last year's level as the number of cattle on feed declines both seasonally and relative to a year earlier," it added. "Slaughter weights remain well above the low 1993 averages."

Feed demand by the poultry industry is expected to remain strong because of increases in broiler production.

Corn exports in the next three months will be very sluggish, the lowest since 1985-86, the report predicted.

The forecast for U.S. barley imports was raised this month by 5 million bushels to 60 million. Imports through March reached more than 45 million bushels, surpassing the previous record high.

Forecast U.S. corn imports were also raised by 5 million bushels this month to 25 million.

Increases in feed grain acreage are expected because of lowered Acreage Reduction Program requirements and recovery from excessive rains and flooding in 1993, it said.

"Anticipated higher prices are the likely incentive for increasing acreage

U.S. farm income may reach $63 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) - Net income from U.S. farming is expected to range between $53 billion and $63 billion this year, compared with an average of $57 billion during the past five years, the Agriculture Department says.

"Farmers intend to increase planted acres for all major crops except wheat," USDA's Economic Research Service said in a recent report.

Increased livestock and poultry production is expected to translate into higher cash receipts for animal products," it predicted.

Crop yields are forecast to return to normal levels, meanwhile. And inventories, which were depleted in 1993, probably will be rebuilt this year due to increased acreage and the return to normal crop yields, the report said.

Farm expenses are forecast to increase for most items this year, with interest costs rising from low 1993 levels.

Protect family, environment

To ensure that your automobile's engine coolant system runs efficiently and is protected from both boil over and corrosion, engine coolants—otherwise known as antifreeze—must be changed on a regular basis.

While many "do it yourselfers" take this task, few are aware of the potential hazards. Improper handling and disposal of new or used engine coolant can put people and pets at risk.

Like many household chemicals, engine coolant is poisonous when ingested. Children and household pets are especially at risk if spilled engine coolant is not cleaned up. While child-resistant closures, properly labeled containers, and consumer awareness programs have helped reduce the occurrence of accidental poisonings, ultimately user caution is the most effective means.

Glycol, the major component of engine coolant is readily biodegradable. However, used engine coolant may contain contaminants—lead in particular—leached from the engine coolant system during operation. These materials can put the environment at risk if used engine coolant is improperly handled or disposed.

To help consumers handle new or used engine coolant in a safe manner, chemical companies offer these 10 tips:

1. Read all usage and warning labels before using engine coolant.

2. Store new or used engine coolant in properly labeled, child proof containers and do not transfer engine coolant into other product containers.

3. Keep all containers of engine coolant out of the reach of children and pets, especially when containers are open during use.

4. When changing engine coolant, ensure that the fluid has cooled before opening the radiator and draining the coolant. Hot engine coolant can cause thermal burns.

5. Wear proper eye protection when changing the engine coolant in your vehicle. If engine coolant contacts the eyes, flush thoroughly with water for at least 15 minutes.

6. If engine coolant is accidentally swallowed, induce vomiting if the patient is alert. Call a physician or poison control center immediately.

7. Repair leaks in your radiator or engine coolant system immediately.

8. Clean up any spilled engine coolant immediately. Should spillage occur, soak it up with absorbent material and flush the contacted surface with water thoroughly. Do not dump engine coolant onto the ground, into natural waters or into storm sewers.

9. Check the options available for the disposal of used engine coolant, as regulations may vary. Options may include recycling, or disposal by a commercial/municipal sanitary waste treatment facility or a licensed hazardous waste disposal firm.

10. Use common sense. Treat engine coolant with the same caution you would any other household chemical.

World Cup coverage hopes to kick start U.S. pro soccer

Mike Lappin of the United States (left) and Jurgen Klinsmann of Germany converge on the soccer ball in preparation for the World Cup. The largest single-sport event, which began Friday, June 17, and continues through Sunday, July 17, will be broadcast by ABC, ESPN and ESPN2.

BY SARA BENNETT

The Olympics of soccer.

There's no other way to describe the World Cup, which is being held in the United States for the first time. It began Friday, June 17, and continues through the final on Sunday, July 17.

ABC, ESPN and ESPN2 will broadcast all 52 games, mostly live. The nine chosen regions are Chicago, Dallas, Los Angeles, Orlando, Fla., New York, Washington, D.C., San Francisco, Boston and Detroit, whose Pontiac Silverdome becomes the first indoor venue to ever be used in World Cup competition.

"The fact that it's a nationwide, coast-to-coast event is bound to add to the impact, as far as exposure (for the sport)," says ESPN analyst Ty Keough, a former U.S. team and World Cup qualifying team player.

The exposure Keough refers to is greatly needed if soccer is to reach the epic proportions in America that it has in other countries.

"It will be a marvelous event for 31 days, and after that we'll be roughly right back where we started," says ESPN's Bob Ley, who teams up primarily with Keough to handle play-by-play.

"You're going to be treated to the best soccer in the world," Ley says, "the best soccer players in the world, the most incredible passions and vignettes and moments of comic opera and high drama. And there's no way that anything we can put on - be it the new league next year, be it the collegiate league, be it semi-professional league, can compare to this."

Ley adds, "To think that the soccer legacy that's left behind will immediately guarantee acceptance or even immediately guarantee a road to acceptance as a major sport - no. It's just not going to happen."

Ley is not a pessimist. He's a realist who understands that next year's kickoff of a major outdoor professional soccer league (MSL) in the United States is simply in compliance with Federation Internationale de Football Association regulations. FIFA would not have allowed the United States to serve as the World Cup's host country if a league had not been in the works.

"And as it is, I think it's basically, in FIFA's eyes, a C - as in letter C - level league. It's not like the Premier League in England, or the Bundesliga (in Germany) or the Serie A in Italy. It is what it is."

However, before the league gets under way, the U.S. team has the world to contend with.

After opening up against Switzerland on Saturday, June 18, the team, led by New Jersey native John Harkes, faces a tough Colombian squad on Wednesday, June 22, on ESPN. And ABC continues with live first-round coverage of the U.S. vs. Romania on Sunday, June 26.

Other inspired games may come from Brazil vs. Russia on Monday, June 20, and Belgium vs. its neighbor, the Netherlands on Sunday, June 25.

Expect a slew of commentators to call the action on the three participating networks. ESPN features six play-by-play/analyst teams. Rick Davis, Keough, Ron Newman and Peter Vermes, all analysts, are former players.

Roger Twibell, Seamus Malin and Rick Davis will work both on ESPN's and ABC's sidelines.

"(If) we ... can inject some humor and observations, some pictures that really show what a marvelous event this is, I think ... we will do justice to it," Ley says.

Very odd inventions

What'll they think of next? Below is a list of some unusual — but creative — inventions.

High heels without soles: In 1982, Hollywood artist and inventor, Philip Gardner introduced this practical — yet fashionable — item. He claimed that the heels enabled style-conscious women to transform any flat-heeled shoe into a formal high-heeled one.

Burglar trap: Emile Munz, a Swiss inventor, came up with a gadget that "hand cuffs" the wrists of would-be burglars. The user could either place them on either a doorknob or a safe.

Shoes for walking on ceilings: John F. Heard, an American engineer, created "zero gravity shoes." Martin Aerospace Company perfected them in 1962.

Anti-theft peppermill: A Swiss company called ECD Electronics designed this device to decrease thefts in restaurants.

Equipped with an alarm system, the peppermill is sensitive to change of light or temperature. So if it is put in a purse, for example, its sounder will go off and cause a very embarrassing scene for the thief.

LET'S TALK

Yet another Gosselaar death rumor:
This time Thiessen is involved too

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: I have heard rumors about Tiffani-Amber Thiessen, Kelly of "Saved By the Bell," that she committed suicide because Mark-Paul Gosselaar died in an accident. Is this true? Are Tiffany and Mark-Paul really dead? -E.V., Monahans, Texas.

A: Where do the twisted minds that keep propagating this sort of rubbish come from?

No, no and no again! Thiessen, Gosselaar, Slater, Screech and the entire "Saved By the Bell" gang are all alive and well. In fact they'll all be appearing in a "SBTB" wedding special (guess who's tying the knot here?), set to air this fall on NBC.

Q: What was the name of the actor who played Elvis Presley on the short-lived "Elvis" TV series? -A.C., Port Arthur, Texas.

A: Michael St. Gerard was the actor who portrayed the King.

Q: I did not have a TV set when "Hawaii Five-O" originally aired, so I'm just now enjoying the show for the first time and have several questions. First, how long did the show run? Next, what has Jack Lord been doing since "Five-O"? Finally, what happened to the character of Ben? Ariene Adams, Portland, Ore.

A: "Hawaii Five-O" ran on CBS from September 26, 1968 to April 26, 1980, making

ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

Lassie takes a bow; big ape returns; USA adds touch of class; NFL turns 75

Lassie with Roddy McDowall

Summer's dog days will bring the 50th anniversary retrospective "The Story of Lassie" on PBS. Scheduled for August, the special will feature host June Lockhart, who played Timmy's mom on the vintage black-and-white "Lassie" series. A star of movies, radio and television who has her own star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, Lassie will be honored in film clips and interviews with Roddy McDowall, Janet Leigh, Jon Provost, Margaret O'Brien, Lorne Michaels and her current trainer, Robert Weatherwax.

Just when it seems USA Network original movies can do no right, the basic cable channel pulls a stunt worthy of the Hallmark Hall of Fame, announcing a production of "My Antonia" to star Jason Robards and Eva Marie Saint. The dramatization of Willa Cather's 1918 novel is currently being filmed in Nebraska.

A pair of box-office giants promises to return in 1995. First, Robert Redford has agreed to star in Rob Reiner's upcoming comedy, "An American President." At Christmastime, look for an animated "King Kong," with a score by brothers Richard M. and Robert B. Sherman ("Mary Poppins") and animation direction by Art Scott ("Fantasia," "Bambi").

Alan Thicke, who is engaged to former Miss World Gina Tolleson, with a wedding set for August, has been busy writing scripts since "Growing Pains" left the air in 1992. A four-time Emmy nominee for writing, Thicke has completed "When Love Grows Old" for The Family Channel and the series "Lights, Action, Hollywood" for HBO productions.

TNT and NFL Films have announced plays for a Tuesday, Sept. 20, special, "75 Seasons: The Story of the National Football League." Like the game itself this will be a film of grand passions and bold gestures, promises NFL Films' chief Steve Sabol. The two-hour entertainment special is timed to coincide with the release of three retrospective books on the NFL.

Wayne Northrop leaving 'Days' job

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Fans of "Days of Our Lives" can put down their weapons. Several readers have written in about the news that Wayne Northrop (Roman, "Days of Our Lives") is leaving the show.

It is true that Northrop will be leaving in late July or early August. But producer Tom Langan says the character is only being temporarily suspended and he will most likely be brought back in the not-too-distant future.

Wherever Roman is off to, Marlena (Deidre Hall) will not follow. Hall recently signed a multi-year contract, so she will not be going anywhere for a long time. Drake Hogestyn, who plays John Black, has also signed a multi-year contract, so who knows what might happen between their two characters?

Dear Candace: I read that the actor who plays Paul (Doug Davidson) on "The Young and the Restless" is leaving to take over Bob Barker's job on "The Price Is Right."

I don't like the story line they have him in now with Chris. She doesn't seem right for him. He needs someone more exciting.

Paul has always been one of my favorites, and I hate to see him go. I'm a big fan, but I'm not sure I can stand to watch a game show just to see him. -C.L. in Kentucky.

Dear Reader: Davidson is not leaving "Y&R," nor is he taking over Barker's job. Davidson will be the new host of the prime-time version of "The Price Is Right." Barker will continue working on the daytime version. Taping for Davidson's nighttime show begins Saturday, June 25. It is scheduled to debut on Wednesday, Sept. 14.

Dear Candace: I am a fan of "Another World." I was wondering if you could tell me what happened to Kaitlin Hopkins, who played Kelsey. Is she off the show for good? I certainly hope not. I thought she and John were great together. -R.J. in Michigan.

Dear Reader: Hopkins has moved to California and is planning to marry her long-time love Judge Reinhold. Soon after landing out West she was cast in the play "Habeas Corpus," which is being produced by Joseph Stern.
