Pacific adventures.
On May 6, 1941, Stalin for the first time stepped out of the Communist Secretariat to take government office. He took the premier-ship from Molotov. He struggled to placate Hitler. But on June 22, 1941, Hitler struck. Stalin presided over the defense committee, with Molotov. Beria, Voroshilov and an up-and-coming young man, the boss' pri-vate secretary, Georgi M. Malen-kov. Stalin announced a scorched earth policy as the Germans ad-

Commission a few weks ago.

Along with details of U. S. progress and plans in the atomic field it presumably contains the latest available information from scientific and agent sources on Soviet efforts. But since then a new regime has come to power in Moscow.

Under that regime, the already considerable state and political power of Lavrenti P. Beria, a ruthless and coldly calculating official, appears to have become greater.
Beria wears several official hats.

He is boss of the secret police. Now he heads both the Interior and State Security Ministries, com-bined when Malenkov picked up the reins held by the dead Stalin. And Beria is director of the Soviet atomic energy program.

Beria's jobs fit together. His Interior Ministry gives him a firm hand for acquiring the brains, brawns and material needed in the atomic program. Control of the secret police brings with it control of external as well as internal espionage — the operation of the atomic spy network which has worked so well for Russia. Berla, so far as is known, no scientific background to qualify him for direction of the Soviet atomic program. He doesn't espe-cially need it. To a nucleus of able Russian physicists he has added scientists kidnapped or lured from World War .

Engineer Can't Stop Train From Hitting Two Youthful Pals

MOUNDVILLE, Ala. IF - Engineer H. Paul Hassell couldn't stop his freight train in time to save the lives of two youngsters who had won his heart.

His freight plowed into a pickup truck which pulled into its path at crossing three miles south of here yesterday.

The shaken 50-year-old Birming-ham engineer then learned that its occupants had been a brother and sister who had waved at his passing train for many years.

Both Jean O'Neal Perry, 17, and Benjamin Douglas Perry, 15, were killed instantly.

Hassell first noticed the children eight years ago, when they began running from their trackside farm to wave as he passed. He dropped Christmas presents with his name on them, and the children sent him presents too. He had hunted with Ben and other members of his family.

Trouble With Dictators Is That They May Be Smart But Not Wise

The man Stalin enlarged the Russian Empire from approximately ope-ninth to one-sixth of the earth's land storface. He brought under its direct sway over 200 -000,000, people, and to its chariot wheels perhaps as many as 600,000,000 more. He converted what was essentially a feudal agricultural economy into the second most powerful industrial nation on earth. This he did in 29 years.

Stalin will rank in history as one of the great conquerors of all time. Like many a conqueror before him, he waded through slaughter to a throne, and like most of them his self-created empire probably saw its best days under his per-sonal sway. Well might be have said with industrial development just as he built the French king, "After me the deluge". He pushed Russia to a high state of up his personal political power - by enslaving his own people, by mass murder and the ruthless disregard of humane consideration. It may be the Russian people enjoy a higher scale of Mving than the subjects of the czar, but they enjoy less in the way of personal liberty than the oldtime serfs. Under Stalin Russia achieved industrialization, but few of the fruits of that industrialization have sifted down to grace the tables and persons of the Russian people. The object of industrialization was not to better the machine to further the ambitions of Stalin and his cohorts to spread the reactionary doctrine of communism by force over the world.

What becomes of this vast war machine now remains to be seen.

If his successors are wise, they would give the masses of Russia a break by diverting more of the fruits of loom and factory to the uses of the people, and less to making war. One-tenth of the cost of maintaining the Communist war in Korea applied to the clothing, feeding and nousing of the people of Russia, could easily have doubled their living standard.

The trouble is dictators are never men of real wisdom and mercy.

New Zealanders Think They Have A Beef Over The Price Of Beef

Residents of New Zealand, who had been complaining loudly at the price of beef had advanced 9 per cent in a few months, got a big laugh out of the recent protest of American cattle producers over e low estate to which beef prices - to the producers, that is - had fallen.

It turns out that the top grade of beef in that Commonwealth nation was 35 cents s pound, while lower grades scaled down through 28 cents to a bottom of 21 cents. Those, of course, are consumer The New Zealanders got a special charge from the fact that American producers complained of "cheap" beef from their country, when they consider 35 cents a pound for the top grade much too dear

New Zealand beef got into the American picture in a roundabout sort of way. When the U. S. government imposed a ban on Canadian meat about a year ago beeause of the hoof-and-mouth disease out-break there, Canada had to look about for another market and since Great Britain does not object to receiving meat from areas affected with foot-and-mouth dis-ease, the Canadian beef moved directly

This constricted New Zealand's market, and since that island had no foot-andmouth problem, the American market was wide open to its beef - about 27,000 tons of it first and last

The ban on Canadian meat has now been lifted, and it is coming into the American market once more. That means New Zealand beef will have harder sailing here, so perhaps the New Zealanders will soon have their wish — cheaper meat gratified since more of it will pile up there for want of an export market.

Meantime, the British will get a sensational break on April I when for the second time in twelve years cream will be available to those who have the money to pay for it. Starting in 1940 all the milk produced in Britain was used for butter and cheese, and cream was not available. The ban on its production has now been removed for a period of four months, and consumers will make up for lost time. It is in reality the second time since 1940 that cream has been available (except for a bit of "the top of the bottle"), for the ban was lifted for six months in 1951.

These Days - George Sokolsky

Writer Recalls Stalin Years Ago As Being An Inconspicious Man

Back in 1917 and 1918, I was in charge of a little newspaper, published in Petrograd (now Leningrad), called "The Russian Daily News." The Bolsheviki had taken over a girls' school, the Smolny in-stitute, where they made their headquarters and from which they conducted a dual government until the October Revolution, when they seized power in Russia. The big men of the day were Kerensky, Lenin, Trotzky, Chernov, Tseretelli, Kameney, Zinoview. As a reporter, these were the men I sought out for data, for explanations of events to come. Among the lesser folks were J. Stalin, then head of the Commissariat for nationalities of the Bolshevik party.

Stalin was an obscure personality who spoke at meetings. In fact, although I would see him about-Koba, his intimates called him-he made little impression. In the Smolny, he was one of great many active and fierce-looking figures. His pock-marked face, his short stature did not add to his attractiveness.

Such figures as Madame Kollontai, who was as beautiful and striking as Clare Luce and who afterwards became an important Soviet diplomat, excited interest and attention. The sailor, Dybenko, looked heroic. Trotzky was full of life and significance, Bukharin and Lunacharsky were philosophical and pedantic. But Stalin seemed to be stolid, quiet, distant, No one payed too much attention to him. This is before he became General Secretary of the Communist party.

I have a file of my newspaper, "The Russian Daily News," with me, having saved it all these years. A hurried glance does not show that even there on the spot, I ever wrote anything about Stalin in the news, although a more thorough check may show that he did provide some data on the smaller peoples, the Kalmuks, Uzbegs, Kazaki and the Jews and Ukrainians, with whom he concerned

John Reed was a contemporary in those days in Russia and he was so absorbed in it that he finally went over to the

The Big Spring Herald

Bolsheviks and was buried in the Kremlin wall. As I write this, I am thumbing his book, "Ten Days that Shook the World," but I do not run across Stalin's name except a mention in the appendix. Although I had a pass to the Smoiny and moved about it freely-but with decreasing freedom as the Bolsheviki rose to power-Reed was a big man among them and advised them on their diplomacy. Yet, in his book, he did not find it important to note the incidence of Stalin.

In later years, when power, I tried to recall those early impressions and what I remembered best was his black, handlebar mustache, which made him look, to me, like a Rumanian I once knew in Greenwich Village whom we called "the terrible Turk," and that Stalin's fanatical eyes were unforgettable.

In looking through my material on the Constituent Assembly, which was the last attempt to establish some kind of a democratic government in Russia and which was attended by all the leaders of all parties in Russia, I do not find that Stalin spoke. He may have been there, but all attention was upon Lenin.

The Bolsheviks were so fractional in the Constituent Assembly that when they walked out they hardly left a visible sign of their absence. Yet their retirement from it killed this notable assembly. I was able to stand close to the stage in the Tauride Palace and to watch all that happened. Lenin sat on the stage and seemed amused all the time. He was a simple person, who might have been taken for a schoolteacher or a small businessman. Trotzky was the fire-eater, the mass orator.

If Stalin was there, he was in the crowd. During the months between September, 1917 and March, 1918, when the world was being changed by the Revolution, Stalin remained a minor figure, recallable only by challenging one's memory and searching through one's material. It was later that he rose to power, killing on the way most of his old colleagues. But he does come back to memory as the man who even then could say that minority nationalities are important and from whose lips I once heard the names of the small peoples who made up what became his empire,

I haven't made any great study of the problem, nor do plan to, I have come to this conclusion, though: There are people in this world more capable of carrying their liquor than the Americans. The English, for one, who seem to enjoy inbibling as much as the next one. If a man likes his bitters here, generally lets the world know about It. There are those people who are more adult with their habit. They drink. They enjoy drinking. But they don't make themselves obnaxious.

Saddest Commentary Of All Is That Madmen Have Followers

WASHINGTON, -No novelist would heard it. He had been present at both dare to employ the coincidence of Stalin's passing at this moment when all the forces of the world crists seem to be converging. It is drama on the grand scale, in keeping with the awesome sweep of events of the past 15 years.

The endless speculation about what it means for the future is largely meaningless. We cannot even tell what the new sphinx will do. But something can be learned from the past.

The noteworthy fact was the constancy of Stalin's policy. It was invariably designed to push by any and all means the Communist revolution all over the world. But invariably, before the threat of outwar, Stalin pulled back.

That ironhanded capacity to go so far and no farther Stalin had developed in his long and bloody climb to power. That constancy-the ability to turn back at the last moment-can scarcely be expected from new leadership. It is why the likelihood is for greater rather than less danger at those points at which the tension etween East and West is most serious. The evil that Stalin has done in the world is incalculable. Above all, it is in the example he set of brutal and ruthless intrigue: of oriental despotism valuing human life, the individual, as no more than a matchstick; of the necessity for human sacrifice to atone for any error in policy; of the savage and subhuman means that have long since overwhelmed the glitter of the false idealism of the

One has only to look around to see the corrupting force of this example. The twin motives of fear and hate inspired by the evil genius, Stalin, make our actions at times resemble those of the image we profess to loathe.

It was not merely the present and the future that Stalin worked incessantly pervert. He had a host of backs hard at work rewriting the past to make it conform with the Stalinist view of history, enshrining the great man in the center of the revolutionary drama. The Stalin henchmen do not bother with anything as flamboyant as burning the heretical books in public bonfires. They merely root them out of every library and classroom and replace them with the official texts.

Some of or own politicians seem to want history rewritten. Charles E. Bohlen, nominated ambassador to Moscow, was interrogated by the Sepate Foreign Relations Committee on Yalta and Potsdam. And, again what a coincidence-that Bohlen, one of the two or three survivors who really know what happened at those meetings, should be making a new enrance at this particlar moment.

In secret session Bohlen testified that the agreements reached at Yalta and Potsdam were fair and would have been to the advantage of the West if Russia had lived up to them. This was not what some of the Republican senators wanted to hear. They were determined that the testimony should fit their version of a sellout" by Roosevelt and Truman. But that was not the way Bohlen had conferences as a technician; a technicianinterpreter of a high order but nevertheless a nonpolitical, nonpolicy-making expert. Before the committee he testified as to his expert knowledge of what happened at those sessions. And even though his confirmation was at stake, he presented the facts as he had known them.

John Carter Vincent, is, in a sense, sacrifice to the failure of American policy China. To this observer it seems that John Foster Dulles has handled the Vincent case in as humane a way as possible. Given the attitude in Congress, Vincent could not have stayed long in any post to which he might have been assigned. But with a little more candor Dulles might have said that Vincent's unselfulness was ended not by his own acts but by the at-facks directed against him by Senator I seph McCarthy of Wisconsin and oth

The evil that Stalin has done will live long after he has gone. Throughout history men mad for power have brought terrible calamaties down on the poor, struggling human race. And the saddest commen-tary of all is that these madmen find folwers, often followers by the millions, who glorify them as heroes and even as gods. The terrible chorus of the Sports Palast saluting Hitler, the long processions bearing the Stalin iconography, these are the dark stains on the page of our PHILADELPHIA (A- The flercest animal on earth, says Alan Devoe, writing in "Frontiers," is not the tiger or grizzly bear but the tiny shrew.

Some species of shrew are so small that they come 14 to an ounce. A shrew is so tough it will attack and devour almost any animal up to twice its size and so voracious it eats its own weight in meat every three hours. Without food, it starves to death in less than a day. It dies of old age in about 18 months.

According to late figures there are 150 million Buddhists in the world today. Their name came from the fact that they consider themselves followers of the Buddha (pronounced BOOD-uh, the first syllable rhyming with "hood").

Except for a few hundred thousand members in North and South America, Buddhism is a religion of Asia. It was started in India almost 25 centuries ago, and has spread, since then, to Ceylon, Burma, Siam, the Malay States, China and Legends have grown about the man who founded the religion, who is known as the Buddha, or "Enlightened One." Some say that he was born from a beautiful lotus blossom which floated on the waters.

The actual fact is that he was a child of the noble Gautama family, and had the name of Siddhartha, or Prince Siddhartha. His father's palace is believed to have been located in the foothills of the Himalaya Mountains, in the area known as the prince which puzzled his father. His nature seemed to very sensitive, hardly able to bear seeing anyone suffer the slightest pain.

The father, we are told, gave orders that his son should be shielded from the sight of suffering. Never, during his youth, was he allowed to see any person who was in the grip of severe illness.

The years passed, and the youth grew into a man. His father chose for him a beautiful young woman as a bride.

Life brought Prince Siddhartha pleasure until there came a fateful day. On that day the young man ordered his chariot driver to take him to a city near the palace.

Martica is the only human memgraphed in full color, entirely under water. In it she floats gracefully beneath the surface of he sea, while her finny pals carry out the plot with professional ffnesse. Martica observes:

"Bron taught me to swim a little under water, but I still can't swim on top."

The movie happened after Marion Gering, veteran producer-direc-tor, paid a visit to Bermuda and some of Hartley's color film of marine life. It occurred to him that these fish looked and acted very much like people, and he set picking character types. The setting is Reef Town, the coral reef where Hartley takes his tourists twice a day, and where all the fish are his personal friends. In addition to the fishactors mentioned above, the cast includes the mayor, a porcupine fish who can blow himself up to ture begins to boil, start beating twice his normal size; Miss two egg whites. Four Lost Fliers

BROWNSVILLE OF Civil Air Patrol planes planned to continue their search today for four Michigan residents missing since Feb. 22 on a flight between Mexico City and Brownsville.

Seven planes returned here yes-terday after another day of unsucterday after another day of unsuccessful searching. Bad weather conditions have hampered the search the last few days.

The missing plane was piloted
by Harold Stevenson of Battle Creek, Mich. Also aboard it were his wife, their daughter, Mrs.
Sharon Warren of Battle Creek, and a friend, Charles Stembol, Marshall, Mich. The group had been vacationing in Mexico.

been vacationing in Mexico.

Tampico, Mexico, reported yesterday that the CAP search planes passed over there but that Mexican planes were making no search because the missing plane had not ben reported to Tampico officials.

Man Suffers Broken Leg In Auto Mishap

COLORADO CITY - Sam Palmer Jr., Route 3, Colorado City, was hospitalized in the Root Hospital with a broken leg early Sun day morning after an automobile accident, on Highway 80 in the eastern edge of Colorado City.

Highway patrolmen Dan Nowlin and Ed Allen said that Palmer had dozed momentarily and falled to make the curve east of the Colorado City Cemetery. Palmer struck two curve markers as he left the highway and seriously damaged his car. He had been home only a few weeks, accord-ing to Mrs. Sam Palmer Sr., after receiving a discharge from the armed forces.

Solon To Go Ahead With Plan To Set Up Water District

AMARILLO UM-Sen. Grady Hazelwood says he plans to go ahead today with his bill to create a Canadian River Municipal Water Authority by legislative action.

The State Board of Water Engineers set up such a district Friday after falling to approve the plan of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Jan. 12. Hazlewood had withdrawn his bill temporarily for revision to meet criticism that it would lead to federal control of water in the He said he hopes to have the bill called up for a vote today The Hazlewood measure still had provisions for either federal or private financing of the water project for 12 West Texas cities. "Representatives of the affected communities have stressed all
