Packing up the store

George Ramos, an employee of Crafts Etc. in Midland, boxes up picture frames in the Winns/Crafts Etc. store here as the store began closing on Wednesday. Thursday was the final day of business for the store, which had been in operation since 1985. Crafts Etc. merchandise will be taken to Midland, while Winn's goods are being farmed out to other stores in the area. Winn's district manager Ruben Rodriguez said the company is closing numerous stores, but that 45 leases -- including the one here -- had been purchased by another company he would not identify.

Local store closing doors

Winn's variety store will close its doors for good today, bringing to a close the company's nine-year involvement in Hereford.

But, said regional manager Ruben Rodriguez, the move is good for Hereford.

"There's speculation that a firm has bought our lease," Rodriguez said, declining to name the company.

However, he said, the company also has purchased all fixtures in the building. In all, that company has purchased 45 Winn's store leases.

"It will be good for Hereford," he said.

Rodriguez did say that the new company is a variety store.

On Wednesday, crews from Winn's and Crafts Etc. -- which shared the 27,000-square-foot Park Avenue and U.S. 385 location with Winn's -- were moving through the store, packing stock in boxes.

The Crafts Etc. stock was being loaded for the trip to the company's store in Midland.

At the pet counter, Rudy Perez, manager of the Winn's store in Tulia, packed live fish, birds, hamsters and guinea pigs for the one-hour drive to his store.

The rest, Rodriguez said, will be distributed among remaining Winn's stores in the area.

The status of the local store has been uncertain for some time.

Its purchase by another company was rumored at one time, but that deal fell through.

Then, Winn's filed for bankruptcy protection.

The company, Rodriguez said, is simply cutting back and does not reflect on the Hereford store.

The move affects seven full-time employees, including manager Melvin McDougal.

Figures show trips, contributions made by health concerns

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Health care interests paid for 181 trips for at least 85 members of Congress over the past two years, part of a massive lobbying campaign in which the wealthiest groups combined to "overwhelm the decision-making process," a watchdog organization asserted today.

Groups with a direct interest in health care reform also poured $25 million into congressional campaigns, hired nearly 100 lobbying or public relations firms and are spending $50 million for television advertising alone, according to a study released by the Center for Public Integrity.

"The result is the largest blitz on proposed legislation in the nation's history," said the group, which said it takes no position on how or whether health care reform should proceed.

"Especially in the current health care reform debate, we have seen that some factions are so strong they overwhelm the decision-making process," it said.

The group does have some ties to organized labor, and has received some of its financial support from labor unions.

The report was based in part on filings with the Federal Election Commission, lawmakers' financial disclosure statements and other public records.

Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., sponsor of a major alternative to Clinton's health reform plan, was a major recipient of health industry-generated campaign cash in 1992-93, receiving $461,800, the report said. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., former chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, was listed as receiving $218,750.

The American Medical Association sponsored the most congressional travel, paying for 55 trips to such destinations as Palm Beach, Sarasota and Naples, Fla., and San Francisco, the report said.

The AMA generally would "educate" its guests until noon, then the rest of the day would be free, the study said.

Leading congressional travelers on the health care tab were Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, who took 11 trips each in 1992-93.

Durenberger spokesman Ed Belkin defended the travel, saying the Minnesota Republican "has been at the center of the whole health care debate" as a member of two key committees, Finance and Labor and Human Resources.

"He's called on often by people in the health care industry to hear his views of policy and for him to hear their views," Belkin said. "Senators and congressmen have an obligation to go out and talk to people away from Washington, D.C."

John Haugen, a Stenholm aide, said his boss sometimes has used the trips to challenge or criticize his hosts, particularly on issues of drug pricing. "It's his way of getting his message out to various special-interest groups," Haugen said.

The center's lengthy report is largely a narrative based on interviews and news stories, chronicling how lobbying has shaped health care since the issue took on national momentum during Clinton's 1992 campaign for the White House.

It traces the emergence of the idea of "managed competition" as the guiding principle for health care reform, favored by large companies and insurers, from the days of the Jackson Hole Group - whose $600,000 budget was financed by Aetna, Prudential, Metropolitan Life and other insurers.

"Some special interests were remarkably effective, and the money they had was incredibly useful to them," said center director Charles Lewis, singling out the National Federation of Independent Business and the Health Insurance Association of America.

HRMC gets second interim administrator

Hereford Regional Medical Center on Tuesday welcomed its second interim administrator as Jim Robinson assumed the reins of the facility.

The 53-year-old Robinson takes over from previous interim administrator Mike Maloy, who took over after Ron Rives resigned on May 9. Maloy had told officials he would only stay on the job two months.

Robinson arrived in Hereford on Tuesday and Maloy departed on Wednesday, so "effective 10 o'clock this morning (Wednesday), I'm it," Robinson said.

Robinson lives in Fort Worth with his wife, Anna. She is an R.N.

"I am, I guess the best way to put it, an independent contractor," Robinson said, noting that Lubbock Methodist Healthcare System hired him to act as interim administrator. "I'm here for the duration," Robinson said.

He said he has not applied for the permanent CEO position, but that is an option.

However, he added, he had only been in Hereford two days and had not come to a conclusion about possibly applying.

Robinson holds a masters degree in hospital administration. He worked for Saint Joseph's Hospital in Fort Worth for 16 years.

"Most recently I was with the American Hospital Association for nine years as assistant regional director of a four-state area," working with more than 950 hospitals in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

"I'm very, very excited to be here and I'm looking forward to exciting times. The community deserves a first-class facility," Robinson said. "I'm certainly going to do my part to make sure we live up to the expectations of the community."

Robinson, who is an elected member of the Keller Independent School District board of trustees, said he has worked with elected boards before and knows both sides of the issue.

"I really am looking forward to working with the board," he said.

Stunt plane pilot had failed U.S. Navy jet training test, Dallas TV broadcast reports

DALLAS (AP) - A stunt pilot had flunked his Navy jet training program before forming a company that took an Oklahoma television reporter on a fatal plane ride, a broadcast report says.

Navy records released Wednesday show that pilot Maurice "Skip" Stevens failed the second phase of his flight training two times, according to Dallas television station KDFW.

The National Transportation Safety Board met Wednesday with investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration on the July 5 crash that killed Stevens and Kathy Jones, a reporter for Oklahoma City station KFOR.

The KDFW report said Stevens could not safely land an A-6 jet on an aircraft carrier's deck, with the Navy calling the first attempts "inadequate" and the second showing "no improvement."

"His marginal performance ... underscored the fundamental lack of the skills necessary to function as a naval aviator," said R.Y. Weber, a Navy Department spokesman, in the report.

"I do not believe that Lt.j.g. Stevens has the aeronautical ability to safely fly high performance aircraft."

Tommy McFall, the NTSB's regional director, told KDFW that Stevens had considerable difficulty landing the A-6 on a carrier.

"He also experienced difficulties in the training command on carrier landing training or carrier landing ability, and he also had some below-average performance in other areas," said McFall.

The station was shown the Navy report but a copy was not immediately available to The Associated Press. The NTSB office at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport did not immediately return a telephone call to the AP today.

McFall said last week that investigators could not find a pilot's license for Stevens, 38, or valid medical certification in Federal Aviation Administration files.

Navy personnel records for Stevens show he was discharged as a lieutenant in January. But officials will not disclose whether he was honorably discharged, citing federal privacy laws.

The pilot and others at his McKinney, Texas-based Air Strikes International had said that he was a 15-year Navy veteran who flew A-6 attack planes on combat missions during the 1991 Persian Gulf war.

But the KDFW report said Stevens failed to demonstrate to the Navy he could make daytime shipboard landings, so he never qualified for nighttime training.

In the fatal crash, Steven's plane slammed on its belly into a riverbed.

Discovery of plane ends crash story

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The discovery of an empty airplane deep in Lake Michigan gives clues in the 28-year-old mystery of a Texas man's fate.

Divers Tuesday helped pull the twin-engine Piper Aztec airplane from the bottom of the lake, pried open its door and found no one inside.

"I'm sure they set it down there in the waves and got out of there," said Larry Corbell of Lubbock, son of the man who's been missing since 1966.

On Aug. 27, 1966, the Lubbock-to-Detroit flight vanished, along with Custer C. Corbell, 52; former Lubbock Police Chief Harold F. McInroe, 49; and the pilot, Lubbock businessman Jack L. Goodman, 33.

About a week after the plane was reported missing, McInroe's body washed ashore. But the recent discovery fueled speculation that bodies of Corbell and Goodman would still be aboard.

Seven weeks ago, two Chicago men found the plane while taking sonar images from the bottom of the lake.

Researchers and divers from the Michigan State Police, Coast Guard and University of Michigan searched an area about 14 miles offshore, northwest of New Buffalo, Mich. An underwater robot helped the search.

The craft was found in near-perfect condition in 210 feet of water, indicating that it was set down in the lake, not crashed. However, no bodies were found, indicating that all aboard drowned while attempting to swim ashore.

"This ends it. We're done," said state police Lt. John Behnke on Tuesday. "The divers went down there, and there's no one in it."

But Corbell said they told him it appeared the plane had been ditched in the lake and those on board tried to swim ashore. Corbell said he was told that many Lake Michigan drowning victims are never found.

"I think we can pretty well put it to rest now," said Corbell. "It would have been nice to be able to go to a grave site where you can put flowers out, but bringing the bodies back would have caused a lot more grief. I think this finalizes it."

Man convicted in 1981 gets new sentence of 35 years

A man convicted of burglary in 1981 and sentenced to life in prison as an habitual criminal had another day in court Monday.

The result for Jackie Ray Williams, 42, was a burglary conviction and a 35-year prison term. But, he will receive credit for 4,694 days served on the 1981 conviction.

Williams applied to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals for a writ of habeas corpus last year, claiming his 1981 trial was flawed because he was "denied effective assistance of counsel."

The appellate court granted his writ and issued a mandate on Oct. 13, 1993, sending the case back to 222nd District Court for re-trial.

Williams was returned to Deaf Smith County and granted bond of $10,000. He had been free on bond until appearing Monday in court.

During the Monday court session, Williams, in a plea bargain, admitted his guilt in a 1980 burglary. There was no habitual criminal charge.

In documents prepared by Williams and sent to the Court of Criminal Appeals, he based his case on previous rulings of the court related to representation by counsel.

Williams said he told his attorney that, if found guilty, he preferred punishment be assessed by the jury. State law provides that unless the defendant requests punishment by the jury, the trial judge has that responsibility.

He claimed, in his application to the appellate court, that his attorney in the 1981 trial failed to file at the proper time the appropriate papers for the jury to assess punishment.

Earlier cases with similar circumstances were returned to trial courts by the Court of Criminal Appeals, according to Williams' papers. The court agreed with Williams and sent the case back to 222nd District Court.

WASHINGTON - Health care interests paid for 181 trips for at least 85 members of Congress over the past two years, part of a massive lobbying campaign in which the wealthiest groups combined to "overwhelm the decision-making process," a watchdog organization asserted today.

WASHINGTON - If Congress scaled back health reform to assure 95 percent coverage, which five senators would go without? Senate Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan among others, according to the pingpong balls that Sen. Paul Simon and others plucked from a wire basket in a staged-for-television mock lottery.

WASHINGTON - The Clinton administration is dismissing peace feelers from Haiti's military leaders, but officials also say a decision on an invasion is still probably weeks away.

GOMA, Zaire - Soldiers collect bodies as cholera claims its first victims in the disease and filth-ridden camp where more than a million Rwandans have taken refuge. Relief officials call it one of the biggest catastrophes they've ever faced. The desperate conditions haven't stopped tens of thousands more refugees from fleeing across the border.

EVERETT, Wash. - Perhaps one day Tlingit dancers in hand-carved masks and button-studded ceremonial robes will tell the story of two young men who found trouble in the white man's world and redemption on lonely islands off Alaska.

Perhaps not. The tribe's official council has objected to a judge's decision to allow the two to be banished for 18 months instead of serving jail time for robbing and viciously beating a pizza delivery man.

WASHINGTON - Barbara Faye Waxman and Daniel Fiduccia want to marry. But because they are disabled, a twist in federal law keeps them apart.

MEXICO CITY - Honking cars and a masked superhero regularly led tens of thousands of noisy opposition supporters through Mexico City's streets in the months before the 1988 presidential election.

But six years later, less than one month before the 1994 contest, the streets are strangely quiet. The only impressive street demonstrations have been celebrations of the national soccer team's World Cup triumphs.

"The campaign this time has very little charisma," says Homero Aridjis, a prominent writer and environmental activist. "It's almost boring."

Much of the difference seems to be the economy.

Scientist has fun watching comet action on Jupiter

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer
SUNSPOT, N.M. (AP) - Scientific jargon notwithstanding, scientists are pretty clear about what they think of the ongoing comet bombardment of Jupiter.

Naturally, astronomers watching fragments of comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 battering the giant planet are excited by the event's scientific significance.

But more to the point, "It's kind of a fun thing," Drake Deming of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center said Wednesday.

Mountain-sized fragments of the comet, which had been drifting in orbit around Jupiter, began raining down last Saturday and will continue hitting the planet until Friday.

Telescopes around the world are trained on Jupiter to watch the colossal collisions, which are sending fireballs exploding into the atmosphere and leaving scars that are visible from Earth.

Three different research teams are observing the bombardment from the Apache Point Observatory perched on a remote bluff in southern New Mexico's Sacramento Mountains - a range better known for recreation and resorts than for research projects despite also being home to a nearby solar observatory.

Deming, head of Goddard's planetary systems branch, is watching the impacts in infrared in an effort to detect seismic waves which could reveal something about Jupiter's composition.

Seismic waves cause temperature increases which may be seen and tracked in infrared, giving researchers an idea of how they travel across Jupiter and some clues as to the nature of the planet's interior, he said.

"If we could see the seismic waves, (the impacts) become of paramount importance," said Deming, who dropped the scientific lingo to acknowledge that it's also "neat" to watch.

Such feelings carry over to others at Apache Point.

"Everybody's just incredibly excited," said Mark Marley, an assistant astronomy professor at New Mexico State University.

Marley said he had been preparing since last fall to observe the impacts. "We were just kind of biting our fingernails to get the telescope ready to go," he said.

Apache Point's 3.5-meter multipurpose telescope - its white housing rises above mountain pines - was dedicated during another celestial event that turned the nation's eyes skyward, the May 10 annular eclipse.

Marley, who has been at Apache Point since Friday, said that in recent years, astronomers have used space probes to better understand how collisions between planets and meteors and other space-borne objects play an important role in planetary development.

"Everywhere we go (with probes), planets are covered by impacts," he said. "So finally we have an impact to look at."

Marley hopes the dust kicked up high above Jupiter's surface by the impacts will reveal something about wind patterns as particles drift in the planet's upper atmosphere.

But besides that, it also gives him a chance to witness a once-in-a-lifetime event.

"I don't expect to see anything like this again," Marley said. Neat.

Parent of school truant may get sentence for community service

AUSTIN (AP) - Parents may be sentenced to community service work or fined if their children repeatedly skip school, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales says.

HBA commends property owners

Residents who have used their time and effort to keep up their property are being recognized by the Hereford Beautification Alliance.

Letters of recognition, called KUB (Keeping Us Beautiful) Awards are being sent for the week beginning July 20.

Recipients of the letters are Cecil Ray Henderson, 114 Lake Street; Eva Valdez, 410 Lawton; Thomas Albracht, 201 Western; Lupe Bermudez, South 25 Mile Avenue; James Hodge, 521 Star, and Jeff Torbert State Farm Insurance, 809 N. Lee.

Judges consider neatness, lack of weeds and junk, trim and house painted, mowed lawn, flowers and shrubs and lack of junk cars on premises.

In a new legal opinion released Wednesday, Morales said school attendance was made compulsory in 1915 for children between the ages of 6 and 17, and that children and parents may be held criminally liable for a child's failure to go to class.

"We've given the police and the juvenile courts the flexibility to deal more effectively with problem children," Morales said of the ruling.

"This also provides a stronger incentive for parents to take an interest in the whereabouts of their children," he said.

The opinion was sought by Gov. Ann Richards, who asked whether police officers have the authority to enforce truancy laws.

"This should put parents and school children on notice that our truancy laws can and will be enforced and it gives our police officers the authority they need to keep kids in school where they belong," Richards said.

Jeff Prescott, a spokesman for the Austin Independent School District, said he will wait and see how Morales' opinion affects truancy.

"You would hope it will get parents' attention so they would become more involved with their children and take the time to find out why their children aren't in school," Prescott said. "Whether this will do that, I don't know."

An amendment to state law in 1993 makes it a Class C misdemeanor for a child to repeatedly skip school.

That amendment also authorized law enforcement officers to take a child into custody if the child is engaged in "conduct indicating a need for supervision."

The law says that a child's unexcused absence from school for 10 or more days or parts of days in a six-month period, or three or more days or parts of days in a four-week period, constitutes "conduct indicating a need for supervision."

Parents may be fined up to $50 for their child's first offense; up to $100 for the second offense; and up to $200 for the third offense, Morales said.

Legislator seeking law on initiative, referendum

AUSTIN (AP) - A state legislator says its time for Texans to take lawmaking into their own hands.

Sen. Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, said Wednesday that she will sponsor a bill in the 1995 Legislature that could give Texas voters the powers of initiative and referendum.

Her initiative and referendum measure would allow citizens to propose and approve laws through petitions and elections, and to vote to repeal laws through similar methods, she said.

"Our government is too accustomed to business as usual, where politicians make all the decisions and the voters are stuck with the consequences," Ms. Nelson said.

"Passing initiative and referendum would turn that process around and make government more responsive to the needs of the people they are elected to represent," she said.

Legislative researchers say that 24 states, including California and Florida, already have such laws.

Texans in more than 200 home-rule cities also have the power of initiative and referendum when it comes to local policies and ordinances.

Ms. Nelson's bill, if approved, would offer a constitutional amendment to give Texans a chance to vote on any approved initiative or referendum. Similar legislation died in committee in the 1993 Legislature.

"The power of the people should not be limited to whose name they check at the ballot box on election day," Ms. Nelson said.

While the senator was announcing her proposal, a coalition of citizen groups was going her one better.

The groups, including officials of Ross Perot's United We Stand and the Texas Association of Concerned Taxpayers, announced plans for a petition drive to win Texas the rights of initiative, referendum and recall of sitting politicians.

The coalition is seeking 50,000 valid petition signatures to place the question before voters.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I read your column every day you have many interesting topics.

Here is something I am concerned about: What has happened to people? They have become so disrespectful of many things.

My mother just passed away. The funeral procession was enroute to the cemetery. We had a police escort to get through the stop lights, and as soon as the police car left one light to go to another, people just came across and cut the procession off. Some of the people lost their way and did not get to the cemetery.

What's wrong with people? Are they so busy they can't respect a fire truck, ambulance or a funeral? Thank you. — Viola Estes Dove, Dayton, Va.

People are always in such a hurry these days. They don't take the time to check out their surroundings. Also, unfortunately, many people may not know what they should or shouldn't do. Thank you for writing. — Heloise

NAIL-POLISH STORAGE
Dear Heloise: I like to store my nail-polish bottles upside-down since they mix better that way. I've found that an egg carton, if you turn it upside-down and punch out the caps, makes an excellent storage box. Also, you can put nail files into the holes. — Helen Rash, Arlington, Va.

Dear Heloise: For a quick way to remove wrinkles from an outfit needed in a hurry, I wet a dryer fabric-softener sheet with water and put it with the outfit in the dryer.

Five minutes later the wrinkles are gone and the outfit is ready to wear. — Janis L. DePasqua, Youngstown, Ohio

Although this sound like a good idea, some fabrics may get grease-type stains on them from the dryer sheet. To keep this from happening, use a damp washcloth in place of the fabric sheet. — Heloise

RADISH CLEANING
Dear Heloise: Here's my suggestion: How I used to hate to clean those little radishes! Now I cut the green part off and put the radishes in a plastic container, add water and a lid, then shake vigorously until all the dirt is off, take off the lid and trim each radish. So easy!

If you need to, you can let them soak a while first. — Linn Whiteley, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 45-year-old widower currently dating a 40-year-old divorced woman. The problem is, I don't think "Amanda" has ever recovered from the loss of her first true love—the young man to whom she lost her virginity. He died 12 years ago in a small plane crash, and the trauma devastated her.

I understand how such a tragedy can leave scars, but Amanda still goes to pieces on his birthday, the anniversary of the day they met and the day he died, and so on. She keeps his picture in her bedroom and makes no secret of the fact that she is still mourning this loss. She also has frequent bouts of depression, which I believe stem from this unresolved trauma.

I have suggested to Amanda that she see a counselor, but she insists it wouldn't help and says I should accept her the way she is.

Ann, I love this woman and would gladly jump in the lake if that would bring back her lost love. It hurts that she shuts me out and accuses me of being insensitive and unsympathetic.

After all these years, do you believe it is normal for a person to be so depressed? Should I walk away from this relationship? Is there any hope that Amanda will get over her grief? No name, no province, just—Hurting in Canada

DEAR CANADA: If you want to spend the rest of your life with a woman who is severely neurotic, stick with Amanda.

Granted, she experienced a terrible tragedy, but that was 12 years ago. The fact that Amanda refuses to seek help for her depression should tell you something. If you marry this woman, I'm afraid YOU'LL end up needing counseling.

DEAR ANN: My 5-year-old nephew is very cruel to animals. He choked a little rabbit to death and set fire to our cat. His parents think he'll outgrow it. What do you think?—San Antonio

DEAR SAN: I think that child should be evaluated by a professional and watched carefully. His sadistic tendencies indicate that he is extremely troubled. He should certainly not be allowed to have a pet.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I spent some time in prison recently and was incarcerated with a man who, like me, participated in an outside work program. At one of the first places we worked as laborers, "Sam" met a very attractive older woman.

This woman and her husband were having marital difficulties, so Sam seized the opportunity and became friendly. The lady was quite influential and arranged to have Sam transferred to a work facility closer to her home. She visited frequently and bought him expensive gifts.

Sam did a lot of bragging about his conquest. He told everyone that life is much easier if you can get a rich woman to "fall for you." When he was released from prison, the woman met him at the gate and drove him to her home.

I don't know how this affair turned out, but all the inmates I knew who had contact with women on the outside were trying to get something out of them, and they bragged about it. I thought your readers should know.—Ex-Con in Sacramento

DEAR SAC: Thanks for the warning. It brings to mind the old adage: "None is so blind as he who will not see."

How to be a smart driver

Heeding these hints can help you be a smarter, safer driver and perhaps save a life while on the road.

1. When entering a freeway, try to keep steadily increasing your speed as you enter the ramp, avoiding any sudden stops. Use your rearview and side mirrors and look over your shoulder to judge the traffic. Don't forget your turn signal.

2. Before proceeding through an intersection, look first to the left, then to the right and then back to the left again.

3. To see if you're driving in someone's blind spot, glance at their inside rearview mirror. If you can't see it, the driver can't see you. Move forward or fall back out of harm's way.

4. If you're the first to arrive at an accident, pull up well beyond it, turn on your emergency flashers and look out for downed power lines or spilled gasoline. If you can do so safely, turn off the ignitions of the wrecked cars. Don't move the injured unless they're in imminent danger. Send for medical help.

5. If you come upon an accident where someone is bleeding severely, press firmly against the wound with a thick pad of cloth. It's a good idea to keep latex gloves in your first-aid kit and to use them in this type of emergency. If not, put a plastic bag, several dressings or other barrier between yourself and the victim's blood.

6. Keep a first aid kit in your car. It should include change for a pay phone, chemical cold packs, sterile bandages, a gauze pad, gauze roll, a large box of assorted adhesive bandages, a roll of adhesive tape, scissors, safety pins, blanket, large sheet, cleansing wipes and alcohol swabs, two pairs of latex gloves, flares, a working flashlight with extra batteries and small fire extinguisher.

The word "credit" comes from the Latin credo, meaning "I trust."

Aikman looks sharp in Blue-White scrimmage

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The last time Troy Aikman played for Barry Switzer, at the University of Oklahoma, he left the Sooners after Switzer went to a run-oriented attack. He transferred to UCLA, polished his passing skills and eventually was the No. 1 pick in the draft.

Aikman needed no time in Sunday's Blue-White scrimmage of the Dallas Cowboys to remind Switzer of his throwing ability.

On the very first play of the scrimmage, Aikman hit Alvin Harper with a 46-yard pass. A few plays later, the all-pro quarterback found tight end Jay Novacek on a short scoring pass.

"He's something, isn't he?" Switzer marveled.

Now that they're reunited, Aikman is ready to do all he can for Switzer.

Aikman is at peace with the change that saw Switzer take over from Jimmy Johnson, he says.

"I owe a lot to coach Johnson, but everything will be fine with me and coach Switzer as long as we win," Aikman said. "I think everybody is over the shock of Barry being the coach. He is our head coach now and we accept it. I hope Barry has the answers."

Aikman sees Switzer adopting a role much like the one Johnson had.

"I think coach Switzer can be effective like coach Johnson," Aikman said. "Coach Johnson wasn't a big X and O guy. He let his assistants do that."

"But make no doubt, coach Johnson put his stamp on the team. He got the team motivated. Right now Barry is observing. Eventually, he has to put his stamp on the team. It will be tough on him."

Aikman said not only does Switzer have to learn the players, he has to mesh with the staff.

"These are assistants he inherited and he has to find a way to fit in," Aikman said.

"As I get older, I throw less and less in the off-season," Aikman said. "In fact, I didn't throw at all unless we had a mini-camp or quarterback school and I didn't throw that much. My arm feels strong."

Aikman is working with new offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese, who turned the Los Angeles Rams into one of the most potent passing teams in the NFL.

Zampese also tutored Dan Fouts into several 3,000-yard passing seasons at San Diego.

Norv Turner, the coordinator for the Cowboys' two Super Bowl victories, became head coach of the Washington Redskins. Turner learned the passing game at Zampese's side.

"Norv learned our system from Ernie so there's not going to be that much change in the offense," Aikman said. "Ernie has put in a few new wrinkles that should be interesting."

Aikman said he's curious about Zampese's all-important play calling tempo.

"It got to the point where I knew what play Norv was going to call before he called it," Aikman said. "It's important for me and Ernie to be on the same page."

Aikman said he probably won't play a lot in the Cowboys preseason opener on July 31 against the Minnesota Vikings.

"But I'll be looking forward to our second preseason game so Ernie and I can get things going," Aikman said. "I think we can get back to the Super Bowl. But right now we have a long way to go. There's a reason no team has ever won three consecutive Super Bowls. It's hard to do."

Oilers' backup QB pulls for Carlson

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Sean Salisbury finds it easy to cheer for Cody Carlson.

Both know the feeling of being a backup quarterback, waiting for a chance that may never come.

Carlson's chance is here as the starting quarterback for the Houston Oilers and Salisbury, signed in the off-season as his backup, is one of his biggest supporters.

"When you're a backup quarterback, you pull for the backups," Salisbury said. "You watch them and I've known and watched Carlson and pulled for him to do well and now he's getting that opportunity. He richly deserves it."

Salisbury played in the Canadian Football League and for the Minnesota Vikings before signing a one-year contract with the Oilers for this season - again as a backup.

Salisbury said he preferred coming to the Oilers than remaining with the Vikings, where he would have been a backup to former Oilers quarterback Warren Moon.

"If I had to do it all over again, I'd still be here," Salisbury said under the beaming sun at the Oilers training camp. "Change is good sometimes, and this change has been very positive for me."

Last season, Salisbury was a backup at Minnesota for Jim McMahon and when the Vikings traded for Moon, he decided it was time to move on.

"I'm coming to a team that's receptive, has tremendous offense, good coaches and a chance to compete and contribute."

Salisbury completed 115 of 195 passes and nine touchdown passes with the Vikings last season and was negotiating a return to the Vikings until the Vikings obtained Moon in a trade with the Oilers.

He pondered his options and narrowed his choices to the Oilers and San Diego Chargers.

Now that he's with the Oilers, he sees a role for himself in the new offense that will include tight end and two-back alignments.

"What they're doing with the tight end in the offense is what I've been doing the last few years in Minnesota," he said.

"I feel quite comfortable with what we're doing with the run-and-shoot. When I was in Canada, we ran a similar offense. It's just a matter of coupling them together and getting used to it."

"For me, it's just getting used to certain receivers and seeing how they break. Cris Carter does it different from Haywood Jeffires or Ernie Givins."

Palmer leads Senior British Open

LYTHAM, England (AP) - The two most recent public images of Arnold Palmer couldn't be any more different.

Last month he left the media tent at the U.S. Open in tears after opening rounds of 77 and 81. He looked every day of his 64 years and then some.

Many spoke the unthinkable: we had seen the last competitive golf from the man who shaped the game in the United States some 30 years ago.

On Wednesday, that was long forgotten as Palmer left Royal Lytham and St Annes as one of the first-round leaders of the Senior British Open with a 3-under-par 69.

Arnie's Army hasn't disbanded just yet.

Palmer, tied with Liam Higgins of Ireland and Alberto Croce of Italy, credited the one-round resurgence to a couple of weeks off.

"I had the grandchildren with me for a week, I swam every day, hit a few balls in the afternoons and had some early nights. I guess it has done me some good," Palmer told the Times of London.

Palmer was 3-over-par on the fifth tee, having birdied No. 1 before making double-bogey, bogey, bogey.

There was nothing remarkable about the way he played No. 5 - a 5-iron to 30 feet and two putts for a par - but it sent Palmer on his way. He was 6-under-par over the last 13 holes.

He eagled the par-5 15th using driver and 1-iron.

As great as the day was for Palmer, it was horrible for Tony Jacklin, who was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard in his senior debut on the same course he won the British Open 25 years ago.

Jacklin, who had an 81, signed for a 4 at No. 13, when he had actually made 5.

He had a triple-bogey 8 on No. 11 after his ball rebounded onto his chest as he tried to escape from a greenside bunker. He was uncertain of the penalty, but after some discussion it was agreed it should be two strokes.

"With all the trouble I had at the 11th, and getting the penalty for that sorted out, I hadn't checked my card closely enough," he said.

Legends of Golf volunteers lose free outing with move of tourney

AUSTIN (AP) - Volunteers who helped run the Legends of Golf tournament say the event's move from Austin to California has left them without a promised reward.

After 17 years in Austin, the tournament that is widely credited with helping start the booming PGA Senior Tour announced recently that it was moving to PGA West in La Quinta, Calif.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday that the tournament has left its volunteers without the annual compensation for their work: a free golf outing at Barton Creek Country Club.

According to volunteers, anyone who worked four or more days during the Legends week was promised, as in years past, an outing that included golf, lunch, soft drinks and contests with prizes.

But in a letter dated July 5, Maggie Hand, assistant to Legends founder Fred Raphael, told the volunteers that the Oct. 18 event was canceled.

"When I called Maggie, she said that it would be too much of an inconvenience to come back and run the (volunteers') tournament after moving," said Bill Hembree, a stockbroker who took time off from work and paid nearly $100 for his marshal's uniform to work at this year's tournament.

"That is not right. I've talked to about a dozen others, and we want our deserved rewards," Hembree said.

Pat Patton, chairman for the more than 250 marshals who worked this year, said he has received about 75 complaint calls. He estimated that at least 250 tournament volunteers qualified for the event.

One Barton Creek official told the American-Statesman that another tournament - the Demaret Cup, scheduled during September for some tournament sponsors - also was eliminated.

The Legends tournament is sponsored by Boston-based Liberty Mutual Insurance Co.

Stu Lerner, who oversees public relations for the insurance company, said he was unaware that the outings were eliminated. He said the action likely was taken by the Legends' executive director, with whom he planned to discuss the matter.

"I never even thought about it," Lerner said. "I don't get involved in those decisions."

The YMCA is a great place to go for any kid.
For some kids, it's the only great place to go.

The truth is, because of family problems or low incomes, a lot of kids can't afford the opportunities to go places and be with adults who can give them the caring attention they need.

That's why the YMCA is so important. We give kids the positive experiences they need to grow up prepared for happy and productive lives. But we always run out of money before we run out of kids.

Two Way Man
PITTSBURGH (AP) - There are few - very few - players in the NFL who can operate on both offense and defense.

Rod Woodson of the Pittsburgh Steelers is one and has worked on both the defensive and offensive units.

But Woodson, a cornerback, is so valuable that Coach Bill Cowher likes to keep him on defense.

"Rod is a great defensive player," Cowher said. "We'll keep the offensive side in mind, but he'll be making his bread and butter most of the time on defense."

Rangers win marathon with Tribe

By The Associated Press

The Texas Rangers acquired Manuel Lee to play the infield, not to hit.

The Cleveland Indians got Jeff Russell to close out games, not to blow saves.

Neither fulfilled their assigned tasks Wednesday night, much to the delight of the Rangers.

Lee, who had only 18 homers since 1985, hit a three-run shot off Russell in the ninth inning to tie the game 11-11. Texas went on to beat Cleveland 13-11 in 14 innings on Juan Gonzalez's two-run homer.

"I got lucky and hit the ball out of the park," Lee said.

He also got lucky just by getting to the plate in the ninth.

"We were talking about hitting Will Clark for Manny, and I said, 'No I don't want to,'" manager Kevin Kennedy said. "I didn't know Manny would hit a home run, but I knew he would have a good at bat. He's been hitting well with men in scoring position all year. It worked out."

The homer was Lee's first in 321 at bats since last Sept. 3.

Russell, meanwhile, blew his fourth save of the year - his first for Cleveland. He was acquired from Boston last month.

"It's a tough loss," Cleveland's Paul Sorrento said. "We were up three runs going into the ninth with our closer, and Jeff's been doing a good job. It's just one of those things."

Larry Casian (1-4), the Indians' sixth pitcher, yielded a one-out single in the 14th by Jose Canseco - his fourth hit - before Gonzalez drove the winning home run into the bleachers in left. Gonzalez also homered in the third.

It overcame the Indians' second five-homer performance in two nights. Albert Belle, Eddie Murray, Jim Thome, Paul Sorrento and Wayne Kirby homered for Cleveland.

Tom Henke (3-4) pitched three scoreless innings for the win. Matt Whiteside got the last three outs for his first save.

In other games, New York beat Oakland 1-0, Chicago beat Detroit 3-0, California beat Boston 8-4, Milwaukee beat Kansas City 11-1 and Toronto beat Minnesota 9-2. The Baltimore-Seattle game was postponed due to continuing problems with the Kingdome roof.

Yankees 1, Athletics 0

At Oakland, Melido Perez outducced Steve Ontiveros and Mike Stanley hit a solo homer for the game's only run.

The teams combined for only five hits, two by New York and three by the A's.

Perez (8-3) pitched eight innings and got his fifth straight win. The right-hander struck out five and walked one before Steve Howe pitched the ninth for his 11th save.

Ontiveros (5-3), who entered the game undefeated as a starter this season, struck out two, walked one and hit two batters in pitching his first complete game of the season.

White Sox 3, Tigers 0

At Chicago, Jack McDowell pitched a six-hitter for his 10th career shutout.

McDowell (8-8) struck out nine in his second shutout this season and third complete game. Darrin Jackson hit a solo homer, his 10th.

David Wells (3-6), who allowed seven hits and struck out a season-high seven, got the loss.

Angels 8, Red Sox 4

At Anaheim, Bo Jackson and Chili

Davis hit solo homers and Spike Owen had three hits and two RBIs for California.

The Angels won their fifth straight against Boston, getting 5 1-3 strong innings from Phil Leftwich (5-8) before Russ Springer went the rest of the way for his first major-league save.

Brewers 11, Royals 1

At Milwaukee, Jose Valentin hit his first major league grand slam and Matt Mieske drove in three runs for the Brewers, who scored five times off Tom Gordon (9-6) with two outs in the sixth.

Ricky Bones (9-7) scattered seven hits in seven innings without allowing a run.

Blue Jays 9, Twins 2

At Toronto, Ed Sprague homered and tied his career-high with four RBIs and Juan Guzman (10-9) pitched eight strong innings, allowing only five hits.

Scott Erickson (8-9), who hadn't pitched more than 3 1-3 innings in his two previous starts, didn't last much longer or fare much better, allowing seven runs and eight hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Expos catch Braves with Bucs' help

By The Associated Press

Thanks to the San Diego Padres and Pittsburgh Pirates, there is a tight race in the National League East.

The Montreal Expos and Atlanta Braves are virtually tied for the NL East lead thanks in large part to their respective play against one opponent. Montreal is 12-0 against San Diego while Atlanta is 3-9 against Pittsburgh.

Take away those two matchups and Atlanta is nine games better than Montreal. The bad news for the Expos heading into the last 70-odd games of the season is that both series are finished.

Montreal completed its sweep of San Diego and ran its two-season record against the Padres to 22-2 with a 5-2 victory Wednesday night. Pittsburgh, a foil of the Braves only a couple years ago, beat the Braves 5-4.

"I read in the papers someone called the Padres a Triple-A team," said Montreal's Butch Henry (7-2), who allowed two runs on six hits. "A lot of people don't give them enough credit. They swing the bat well. This is a big-league ballclub."

Except against Montreal, which hasn't lost at home against the Padres in over a year.

Moises Alou's bases-loaded RBI single off Andy Benes (6-11) in the fifth broke a 2-2 tie, and Wil Cordero's two-run homer, his 14th, made it 5-2 in the sixth.

Mel Rojas and John Wetteland, the latter earning his 16th save, finished up for Henry.

"I'm glad we're leaving and won't be seeing them until next May," NL batting leader Tony Gwynn said after going 1-for-4 to drop his average to .385.

Everybody wearing a Pirates uniform has the same affect on the Braves, it seems. The five runs Wednesday night were produced by the bottom of the batting order. Tom Foley singled in the go-ahead run after Don Slaught, who was 3-for-3, doubled. Starting pitcher Danny Neagle drove in three runs to set the stage for Paul Wagner (6-8) to win it.

On Wednesday, the Pirates roughed up Tom Glavine (11-8), one of the premier lefties in baseball.

In other NL games, it was Florida 8, Cincinnati 7; Chicago 9, Colorado 8; New York 5, Los Angeles 4; Houston 2, St. Louis 0; and San Francisco 9, Philadelphia 2.

Astros 2, Cardinals 0

At Houston, Greg Swindell (7-6)

and John Hudek combined on a five-hitter, and Chris Donnels broke a scoreless tie with an RBI double in the sixth.

Swindell gave up all five St. Louis hits in eight innings and struck out six. Hudek got his 16th save in 17 chances.

Bob Tewksbury (10-9) allowed both runs and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings and struck out eight.

Marlins 8, Reds 7

At Cincinnati, Gary Sheffield hit the first pinch-homer in Florida history, a two-run shot in the eighth inning off Jeff Brantley (5-5).

Sheffield's franchise-record 21st homer bounced off the top of the wall in center field to put the Marlins ahead 7-6. His run-scoring forceout in the ninth scored the eventual deciding run as Florida snapped a five-game losing streak.

Terry Mathews (2-1) got the win despite giving up a solo homer to Bret Boone.

Cubs 9, Rockies 8

At Denver, Mark Grace had four hits and three doubles, the last a two-run shot in the eighth.

With the score tied 7-7 in the eighth, pinch-hitter Tuffy Rhodes singled with one out off Steve Reed

(3-2) and moved to second on a walk to Mike Maksudian. Grace followed with a double, giving the Cubs a 9-7 lead.

Randy Veres (1-0) pitched two innings and Dan Plesac got the final out for his first save.

Giants 9, Phillies 2

At Philadelphia, Mike Benjamin drove in a career-high four runs.

Matt Williams hit a solo home run in the ninth, his 35th of the season. Barry Bonds hit a solo homer in the seventh, his 29th overall and sixth in seven games.

Mark Portugal (9-6) won his fourth straight start, allowing both runs and nine hits in eight innings. David West (4-8) gave up five runs and five hits in 3 1-3 innings and walked six.

Mets 5, Dodgers 4

At New York, Bobby Bonilla hit a go-ahead two-run homer in the third inning, his 16th of the season, and Bret Saberhagen (11-4) beat Los Angeles for the third time this season.

Saberhagen allowed four runs and nine hits in 6 1-3 innings. John Franco got three outs for his 22nd save in 27 chances.

Ramon Martinez (8-7) allowed five runs and eight hits in five innings.

Falling roof sends Mariners on road

SEATTLE (AP) - The Seattle Mariners are on the road until at least the end of the month, and it could be longer if the Kingdome can't be repaired.

As a precaution, the Mariners won't play in the Kingdome until King County officials assure them that ceiling insulation tiles won't fall on fans or players.

"Obviously, the concern has to be the fans," All-Star pitcher Randy Johnson said.

"This may be the last time I see this locker," closer Bobby Ayala said as he packed up to join his teammates for an unexpected plane trip to Boston.

After four tiles fell from the Kingdome ceiling into the stands in Tuesday afternoon, the Mariners' night game with Baltimore was postponed. King County officials and the Mariners met Wednesday and decided not to take a chance that night.

So a Wednesday afternoon doubleheader with the Orioles was postponed, and American League president Dr. Bobby Brown decided to move the scheduled Boston-Seattle Kingdome series this weekend to Fenway Park.

The Mariners and Red Sox will play Friday at 5:55 p.m. EDT, a doubleheader Saturday at 1:05 p.m. and Sunday at 1:05 p.m.

The Mariners are off Monday. Then they will go to Detroit and Chicago for six games on a scheduled road trip that ends July 31.

The Kingdome problems came at the wrong time for the Mariners' Mike Blowers. His wife delivered the couple's second child, a girl, last Sunday.

"After what happened yesterday, the ceiling has to be fixed," Blowers said. "It would have been nice to have been here longer, but what are you going to do?"

Ken Griffey Jr., Seattle's five-time All-Star center fielder, tried to take the Kingdome troubles lightly. The Mariners won't need the building much longer, he pointed out.

"We're about to strike anyway," Griffey said.

Alex Rodriguez, Seattle's new 18-year-old shortstop who has played in eight games in the majors, was philosophical about not getting to finish his first homestand in the Kingdome.

He noted the inconvenience came at a time when the Mariners have lost five of six and 10 of 13.

"Maybe it'll be good for us," he said. "Maybe it'll shake up the team. But I really don't care where we play. As long as we get in these games."

Mariners fans won't get to see the Boston series live, but they won't be shut out. The team announced all four of the weekend's relocated games will be televised locally.

Kingdome officials called in forensic engineers to try to determine why the tiles fell from the ceiling nearly 180 feet into the stands behind home plate.

No one was hurt, but it forced the first postponement of a sporting event in the dome's 18-year history.

Freedom Bowl gets deal with Pac-10, WAC

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - The Pac-10 and WAC have agreed to a three-year contract to have football teams from their conferences meet in the Freedom Bowl at Anaheim Stadium after the next three seasons.

The bowl will match the Western Athletic Conference runnerup team against the Pac-10 third-place team this December. In 1995 it will be third place teams from both conferences, and in 1996 revert to the WAC's second-place team.

Texas Christian, Southern Methodist and Rice will begin competition in the WAC in 1996.

WAC Commissioner Karl Benson and Orange County Sports Association Executive Director Don Anderson jointly announced the agreement Wednesday.

The PAC-10 previously agreed to send its third place team to the Freedom Bowl through 1996. Because of a no-repeat rule, Southern Cal cannot play in this year's game. USC defeated Utah last December after the Trojans lost in the 1992 Freedom Bowl to Anaheim.

In the 10 previous Freedom Bowls, Pac-10 teams have appeared in five games and WAC teams seven times.

NFL cap leaves many players on sidelines

By The Associated Press

The NFL has taken parity to a new high, or low, thanks to the salary cap. A veritable all-star team could be assembled using the high-priced players set adrift by teams unable to afford them due to the limits of the salary cap.

And the makings of an All-American team is sitting on the sidelines as training camps begin. Many rookies are unhappy with the limited money being offered by cash-strapped clubs.

Take the New Orleans Saints, for instance. They had three All-Pro linebackers last season. Had is the key word, since Vaughn Johnson was cut while in the hospital and Sam Mills and Rickey Jackson are missing. If either or both returns, it'll be for a lot less money than they commanded a year ago.

"The salary cap is squeezing a lot of good people out of the game or down in pay," the Saints' Les Miller said.

On the other side of the issue, there's Heath Shuler, a highly touted quarterback from Tennessee. Had he remained in college, he'd be among the front-runners for the Heisman Trophy this fall. It's looking increasingly like he won't be playing soon, given the distance between his wants and the offer made by the Washington Redskins.

Given this atmosphere, it's not surprising that running back Roger Craig plans to sign with the San Francisco 49ers - so he can then retire.

"I had made up my mind to retire," Craig told the Quad City (Iowa) Times. "I just didn't know how I wanted to announce it. I'm best years there, so I've dreamed of going out with the 49ers."

Salary cap constraints and a decision to use part of the rookie pool money on veterans have cut into the 49ers' ability to sign draft choices. Both first-round picks, defensive lineman Bryant Young and fullback William Floyd, remain unsigned.

Also unsigned are third-round picks Doug Brien, California's all-time leading kicker, and wide receiver Cory Fleming of Tennessee.

"The last couple of years, the rookies were signed on time and away we went," coach George Seifert said. "But this year the involvement with free agency and the cap, it just hasn't allowed us to operate quite as fast."

In the midst of all this, a note of sanity was injected by Don Shula, coach of the Miami Dolphins and the career leader in victories. He is reportedly ready to sign a contract extension through 1996.

Elsewhere around the NFL:

Giants Starting safeties Myron Guyton and Greg Jackson and left cornerback Mark Collins are gone via free agency, leaving the job of playing defense to the likes of John Booty, Jarvis Williams and Jesse Campbell.

Broncos Denver lost two rookie offensive linemen, one to injury and one to early retirement. Kenny Hall dislocated his right shoulder during the afternoon practice, sidelining him indefinitely. Scott Vaughn quit after two days of two-a-days.

Steelers Gary Anderson, one of the NFL's best kickers, is at odds with Pittsburgh management over - guess what - money. Anderson says he won't report to camp until the Steelers make good on a promise to make him one of the league's best-paid kickers. He wants $4.5 million over four years. The Steelers have responded by bringing free agent Charlie Baumann to training camp.

Browns There's money troubles haunting Cleveland, too. Wide receiver Michael Jackson says he may walk out of training camp by the time veterans report if he doesn't get $1 million or more per year for the next three years.

Jackson, who is under contract for $649,000 this season, is seeking a three-year, $4.7-million deal, said Jackson's agent, Gary Uberstine.

Colts From the moment he was drafted, everybody was drooling at the idea of Marshall Faulk in the NFL, perhaps as another Barry Sanders. Still a dream, however, because Indianapolis can't get his name on a contract. He supposedly has agreed to one, but the team was thought to be checking the deal's legality with the NFL Players Association and the NFL Management Council.

Bengals Ray Woodside, a rookie free agent, worked out one day with Cincinnati and immediately left camp after seeing his competition. The rookie offensive lineman from the University of Cincinnati hopes to catch on elsewhere.

Cowboys Running back Lincoln Coleman has been told to lose weight and is being fined until he does. Coleman came to camp at 256 pounds and was fined $400. Dallas coach Barry Switzer wants him down to 240, and soon.

Horry hit with paternity lawsuit

HOUSTON (AP) - Tiffani Dawn Murphy, the 23-year-old daughter of NBA Hall of Famer Calvin Murphy, has filed a paternity lawsuit alleging that Houston Rockets forward Robert Horry fathered her infant son.

Ms. Murphy, in her June 29 lawsuit, seeks future and back child support, attorney's fees and medical costs related to the Feb. 17 birth of Nicholas Damian, the Houston Chronicle reported in Thursday editions.

The woman asks State District Judge John Peavey Jr. to confirm the results of a paternity test that did not eliminate Horry as the child's father, according to the lawsuit.

The case also says Horry agreed to the paternity test. Horry did not return messages left by the Chronicle.

Peavey has ordered Horry, 23, to appear in court Aug. 3 to show why he should not be declared Nicholas' father.

Should Horry be declared the legal father of the child, the lawsuit asks that support be attached to Horry's estate and continue in the event of his death.

Horry was the Rockets' first-round draft pick in 1992 from the University of Alabama. He was a starter during the Rockets' NBA championship drive, averaging 9.9 points in the regular season and 11.7 points in the playoffs.

Calvin Murphy, a former Rockets star who now works as a television commentator for the club, refused direct comment on the lawsuit except to say, "I don't know nothing about that."

"Let me explain something to you. My daughter is 25 years old. That means she's grown. I don't get off into her business," Calvin Murphy said.

Grandparents can play key roles in kids' lives

There are many benefits to the grandparent-grandchild relationship.

Grandparents, for example, can impart a sense of family roots, history and family continuity that will help grandchildren pinpoint their identities within the family - and, in the broader scope, the outside world. By sharing their experiences, grandparents who settled in the United States from other countries can provide children with an understanding of different cultures and traditions. This can give a children a sense of identity and support that can help them grow into independent and responsible adults.

There are also benefits for grandchildren on an emotional level. The grandparent-grandchild relationship differs from the parent-child relationship. Unlike parents, grandparents are generally not required to set limits and enforce rules on a consistent basis.

A close relationship with the grandparents can be especially valuable if there is a loving but conflictive parent-child relationship, or during adolescence, when the parent-child relationship may be strained. At these times, grandparents can serve as another set of loving caring adults to whom a youngster can turn for advice and discussion. They may add perspective and insight by discussing how they handled the parents' behavior when he or she was young.

There also are some responsibilities for grandparents that come with the territory. It is important, for example, that the grandparent avoid interfering with the relationship between a parent and child. If a grandchild is having a serious problem, the grandparents may want to discuss it with the parent - depending on the relationship of the grandparent with his or her own child.

The grandparents must bear in mind that the parents' wishes and rules must be obeyed no matter how they differ from those of the grandparents. It is also important that grandparents avoid playing favorites among their grandchildren and give each one equal attention. One child may have a special place in the grandparents' hearts, but playing favorites may cause tension among other family members.

The grandparent-grandchild relationship can be fostered in many ways, including spending some special time alone with the grandchildren. The relationship does not have to be limited by the proximity of the family. Making regular phone calls, and sending pictures, cassettes and letters through the mail can also help foster and maintain the relationship.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is your opinion of the new approach to treating ulcers with antibiotics? — D.L.T.

ANSWER: The idea of using antibiotics to cure an ulcer strikes an alien chord for some readers. And it would have been strange, indeed, until a few years ago, before researchers discovered that some ulcers occur in the presence of a certain bacteria — Helicobacter pylori. Subsequently, an impressive amount of evidence has helped indicate that organism as a co-conspirator in some ulcers.

Research has indicated that the bacterium lives in the stomach's protective mucus layer, and by punching holes in that layer, permits stomach acid to eat into the lining.

So getting rid of the bacteria with antibiotic therapy has found its way into practice, especially if the ulcer is large, failing to heal or recurring. The antibiotics are used in conjunction with bismuth subsalicylate — Pepto-Bismol.

For more, see my ulcer report. For a copy, write: Dr. Donohue — No. 25, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Just what is beta carotene? My doctor suggests that I take an "anti-oxidant" that contains beta carotene and other vitamins and minerals. Also, I now see on some food cans that this or that is a good source of beta carotene. Is it beneficial? Is it necessary for health? Is it a vitamin? — W.M.

ANSWER: Beta carotene is not a vitamin. But the body does transform it into vitamin A. So it gets the name "pro-vitamin."

You can find beta carotene in carrots, dandelion greens, sweet potatoes, mangoes, winter squash, cantaloupes, apricots, cress, kale and other green, leafy vegetables.

Not all the beta carotene gets changed into vitamin A. Some sticks around unchanged, and as such does play its own vital body function. It protects body cells from some of the noxious substances produced in normal metabolism. Those metabolic substances are called oxidants, and so beta carotene falls into the anti-oxidant category.

As an anti-oxidant, you might say that beta carotene is a kind of cell rust fighter, preventing its deterioration. The suggested significance here is that it might act as a cancer preventive. Some also say that it might protect against cataract formation.

Much research remains to be done to settle the matter of beta carotene's real significance.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have carpal tunnel syndrome. It bothers me only at night. A wrist splint helps me sleep. Surgery was suggested by a capable orthopedic surgeon after neurological tests. I have no trouble playing golf or other activities. Are there exercises I can use or other alternatives to surgery? I am 87. — J.F.

ANSWER: If splinting serves so well, why disturb peaceful water? Rest, splinting and anti-inflammatory drugs often suffice.

There are exercises to stretch the confining tunnel's ligaments, but I cannot recommend them without specific knowledge of your problem.

At your age, it is perfectly fine to reserve any surgery for when the problem becomes debilitating, and if you can play golf with your wrist disturbance, it would not fit into that category. If your regular doctor does not want to push for surgery, why should you?

For others, carpal tunnel syndrome affects the carpal nerve. When the nerve gets squeezed in its passage on the way to serving the fingers, wrist and finger pain can result. Surgery is performed to free the nerve.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: One day I got a terrible headache. I went to the doctor and he thought it was a migraine. He treated me for that. The medicine didn't help, so I went back. They did a CAT scan and found fluid on my brain. It was eventually diagnosed as a colloid cyst. I had surgery to remove it, and today I am back at work. All this happened in two months' time. Why is it called a colloid cyst? I would also like you to tell me the difference between a cyst and a tumor. What might be other signs of the colloid cyst? — V.H.

ANSWER: A cyst is any fluid-filled sac. A tumor, on the other hand, is solid growth of cells, benign or malignant.

A colloid cyst of the brain forms during development in the uterus, "colloid" referring to its jellylike substance. Although such cysts have been there from Day One of life, they almost never make themselves known outwardly until adulthood, when they might begin to block normal flow of fluid in the brain's caverns. Headache follows.

It's important to know that a colloid-cyst headache usually subsides with change of body position, such as bending. The change allows the cyst to float away, permitting resumption of fluid flow. Unsteady gait, leg weakness and vision disturbance can be other signs of the problem.

I predict clear sailing now, since you have had successful removal of the cyst. Congratulations on a fine diagnosis and cure.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Years ago, when a relative of mine was born, she was called a "blue baby." Could that condition cause poor health the rest of her life? — M.N.

ANSWER: Many babies have a blue skin cast right after delivery. For most, it happens because they have not yet learned the dynamics of proper breathing. For awhile, they need assistance, some extra oxygen. The problem is strictly transient and causes no future health problems.

The "blue baby" term to which I think you refer is different. It describes a special heart defect. Instead of blood returning from the body circulation normally to the lungs for fresh oxygen exchange, it bypasses the lungs, recirculating to the body in an oxygen-poor state. The body takes on the blue cast characteristic of oxygen lack.

Often, the heart defect requires corrective surgery right away. Results are usually good, but they are not uniform. Sometimes, the correction is less than complete, and the patient might face problems associated with imperfect circulation the rest of his life.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: For those of us who have ulcers and who thus cannot use regular daily aspirins to prevent stroke and heart attacks, what do you recommend as a substitute? — C.A.

ANSWER: If you mean a substance to substitute for the daily aspirin preventive therapy, there is none. But aspirin is only part, and not a universal part, of therapy for stroke-risk patients.

The prevention story involves controlling blood pressure, quitting smoking, losing excess weight, adding an aerobic exercise program and limiting the dietary intake of cholesterol and fat, especially the saturated kind.

To repeat, aspirin therapy is not for everyone, only for those whose doctors recommend it.

My stroke report might help. For a copy, write: Dr. Donohue — No. 31, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Prunes make wonderful ingredient in desserts

By The Associated Press

A rich, decadent dessert may not be the first thing that comes to mind when you think of prunes. But in the following recipe, chocolate fudge cake is made with prune puree in place of butter and oil. The cake is rich and moist and contains only 4 grams of fat per serving.

A unique combination of pectin, malic acid and sorbitol found in prunes allows a simple mixture of prunes and water to simulate a full-fat texture and taste. When used as an ingredient in baked goods, prune puree reduces fat in cookies, brownies, quick breads, muffins and cakes.

Black forest chocolate fudge cake is topped with fresh, red sweet cherries during the summer or frozen cherries year-round. The recipe is adapted from Mani of Mani's Bakery in Los Angeles.

Black Forest Chocolate Fudge Cake

- 1 cup Prune Puree (recipe below)
- 2 cups cake flour
- 1 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1-1/2 cups brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 egg white
- 3/4 cup nonfat milk
- 4 teaspoons vanilla
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 tablespoons instant espresso powder
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 2 cups frozen pitted unsweetened dark sweet cherries, coarsely chopped, thawed and well drained
- 1/2 cup chopped toasted walnuts
- Powdered sugar, for dusting (optional)
- Fresh cherries or additional frozen cherries, for garnish
- Prepare prune puree. Set aside.
- Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

Coat a 3- to 4-quart bundt or other tube pan with vegetable cooking spray; set aside. Into a large bowl sift together flour, cocoa, baking powder and salt; mix in brown sugar. Set aside.

In another bowl, whisk eggs with the prune puree, milk and vanilla; set aside.

Pour boiling water in measuring cup; stir in espresso powder and baking soda. Stir egg and water mixtures into flour mixture; mix just until blended. Pour half the batter into prepared pan; sprinkle cherries and walnuts evenly over batter. Evenly pour in remaining batter. Bake in a 350-degree F oven about 45 minutes until pick inserted into cake comes out clean. Cool in pan on rack for 15 minutes; invert onto rack, remove pan and cool completely. Dust with powdered sugar; place on serving plate. Fill cake center with additional cherries. Makes 16 servings.

Prune Puree

2-2/3 cups (1 pound) pitted prunes
3/4 cup water
Combine prunes and water in container of food processor. Process about 1 minute until pureed. Puree may be covered and refrigerated up to 2 months. Makes 2 cups.

HOUSTON (AP) - Blonde bombshell and big bucks: Model Anna Nicole Smith has married an 89-year-old oil tycoon.

Smith, 26, best known for her provocative poses for Guess? jeans and Playboy, married J. Howard Marshall II in Houston on June 27, publicist Cece York said.

Smith does not want to be interviewed, York said. A receptionist at Marshall's house said Friday he was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Marshall, who was 63 when Smith was born, is the head of oil-based Koch Industries, which is part of a family fortune worth at least $400 million.

In 1991, Marshall was included in Forbes magazine's list of the 400 richest people in the nation.

Yams are not only a great source of healthful beta-carotene, they may be the one it's easiest to get youngsters to take.

Simpson offers $500,000 for information

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent
LOS ANGELES (AP) - O.J. Simpson thinks authorities aren't looking hard enough for the "real killer" - and he's putting up $500,000 to get the ball rolling.

Simpson, accused of murdering his ex-wife and her friend, is mounting his own investigation - complete with a claim that he was railroaded, his own squad of detectives, a nationwide toll-free number and the $500,000 reward.

"O.J. wants to confirm to the public that he is innocent of all charges in this matter and that he is most eager to get to trial to prove his innocence," his business attorney, LeRoy Taft, said Wednesday.

Taft said the reward is for information that would exonerate Simpson and convict "the real killer or killers."

Lead defense lawyer Robert Shapiro contended in court papers that authorities have ignored evidence pointing to Simpson's innocence.

The papers cite a series of obscene, threatening phone calls to Nicole Brown Simpson in 1992 that police determined were not made by Simpson. They also cite a report that police heard Simpson's 8-year-old daughter - who was asleep inside her mother's condo when the bodies were found outside - say, "I heard Mommy's best friend's voice and heard Mommy."

Simpson has pleaded innocent in the June 12 stabbing deaths of Ms. Simpson, 35, and her friend Ronald Goldman, 25. He is being held without bail and is to be arraigned Friday.

Simpson's toll-free number starts operating Friday, and he plans to hire John McNally to head a team of private detectives, Taft said.

McNally, a retired New York police detective, worked with F. Lee Bailey on the Patty Hearst kidnapping case. Bailey is on Simpson's defense team.

Shapiro is asking authorities to turn over a number of items, including LAPD internal affairs reports on officers assigned to the case, records of visits to emergency rooms near Simpson's estate for cuts or dog bites and all police reports of unsolved murders similar to the Simpson slayings.

Shapiro contends an investigator suggested the killer might have been bitten by a dog.

In other developments:
- An internal investigation has tentatively concluded it would have been nearly impossible for Detective Mark Furhman to filch a bloody glove from the crime scene and plant it at Simpson's estate without being spotted, the Los Angeles Times reported today, citing unidentified police sources.

Shapiro has said he might try to argue that Furhman planted the glove, which authorities said matches one found near the bodies.

- The coroner's office has identified 16 instances of mishandled evidence, with mistakes ranging from mislabeling a fluid sample to leaving the bodies in unlocked crypts, sources told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Legal experts say the mistakes, when considered together, could cast doubt on other evidence and testimony.

- KNBC-TV reported that Simpson's Brentwood mansion was deeded to his company, Pigskins Inc., as security for an unspecified debt on June 29. The station cited court records. NBC News reported that Simpson's property was being transferred to a blind trust.

- Fred Goldman denied a report that the family hired a lawyer to sue Simpson over his son's slaying.

- CNN, citing an unidentified source, said a note pad found in the car of Simpson's friend, Paula Barbieri, had a first page titled "Nicole's schedule" that listing her whereabouts and who she saw over several months last winter. The note pad was found after Newport Beach police arrested a man in January for investigation of stealing Barbieri's car. Newport Beach police said they had no information on the note pad's contents.

The national toll-free number established by O.J. Simpson's defense for people to call with information about the slayings of his ex-wife and her friend is 1-800-322-3632.

Simpson wore the numbers 36 and 32 on his uniforms during his football career.

People calling the line today heard a recorded female voice saying:

"Hello. This is the law offices of Robert J. Shapiro. Thank you for your call. If you have any information or evidence regarding the O.J. Simpson case, press two now. If you are an expert in fields relating to the O.J. Simpson case, and would like to offer your services, press three now. If you would like the address where you can send a letter of support to O.J. Simpson, press one now. If you are seeking legal representation from the law offices of Robert L. Shapiro, press four now."

Johnson daughter named in lawsuit over bank failure

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The FDIC has filed a lawsuit against Luci Johnson-Turpin, daughter of the late President Lyndon Johnson, in a move to recover more than $10 million lost in the 1991 failure of an Austin bank.

Also named as defendants in the lawsuit, filed last week, are Richard "Cactus" Pryor, a well-known humorist and radio commentator, and Carolyn Curtis, assistant vice president for development at the University of Texas.

The FDIC's suit alleges she and other directors of the Bank of the Hills in Austin were negligent in overseeing loan transactions. The result, the agency said, was more than $10 million in losses that eventually "caused or contributed" to the bank's forced closing in 1991.

Bank of the Hills, once the leading independent bank in Central Texas, was purchased by trusts set up for Johnson's two daughters, Lynda and Luci, five years after it was opened in 1972 by A.W. Moursand, a friend and business associate of LBJ.

At their peak, assets exceeded $300 million but had shrunk to $260 million before the bank was closed in 1991.

Shannon Ratliff, attorney for Johnson's younger daughter, said the suit has no merit and said he will file a motion to dismiss the suit against his client.

Attorney Darrell Jordan, representing Pryor and Ms. Curtis, said he will "vigorously deny any wrongdoing or negligence at all. The lawsuit is inappropriate and should not have been brought by the FDIC."

The FDIC identified the president's daughter as a former chairman of the board of directors at the Bank of the Hills, without noting when. The suit said she was a full director from 1977 to 1985 and an advisory director from 1985 to 1991.

After bad loans precipitated a steady decline in earnings in the 1980s, state and federal regulators made one last attempt in 1990 to salvage the institution. They tried unsuccessfully to persuade Johnson family interests to pump more than $16 million into the bank.

That failed and the FDIC closed the bank in January 1991. Team Bank took over the 47,393 deposit accounts of the failed bank and was itself acquired one year later by Bank One,

Texas.

Six other former directors of Bank of the Hills were named as defendants in a separate but similar suit filed by the FDIC Jan. 28, while regulators were discussing a possible settlement with the trio listed in the recent suit.

The original defendants included Lou Gips, Gary Pittman, Donald Selden, Robert W. Taylor, Donald Thomas Sr. and Donnie Williams, former president of the Bank of the Hills.

Thomas was president of the LBJ Co., the umbrella company for Lyndon Johnson's family business interests, until his retirement in 1990. All have filed written denials of any wrongdoing as bank directors.

The first suit is in the discovery process and no date has been set for trial.

The FDIC alleged in both suits that certain directors of the bank were responsible for loans to insiders, their family and friends and business acquaintances. The suits also assert the directors approved loans that exceeded lending limits and made loans to themselves in some cases.

The suit alleges that Ms. Johnson-Turpin shared responsibility for losses in voting on four of the 19 loans specifically criticized in the suits.

The suit criticized a 1986 loan to finance a portion of a reported $1.75 million purchase price of two radio stations in Ardmore, Okla., that the agency said cost the bank more than $669,000 in losses.

The borrower was Sunburst Broadcasting, which was controlled by Patrick Nugent, former chairman of the Bank of the Hills and former husband of Ms. Johnson-Turpin.

"The loan was made largely on Nugent's family connection with the owners of the bank and was funded without the minimum of financial information, collateral value analysis or credit-worthiness," the FDIC said.

Ms. Johnson-Turpin was not identified as one of the three directors responsible for the loan.

A 1991 federal banking law established simple negligence as the standard for the federal regulators to sue bank directors or insiders. In 1993 the Texas Legislature passed a law that set gross negligence as the standard for bank directors to be held liable for losses.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT IS

...one of the wisest investments a community can make for itself because it attracts new industry. New industry means JOBS and GROWTH for our community.

JOBS bring more people, more businesses, more retail sales, more personal income and a much broader tax base. By supporting this vote for economic development we let others (non-residents) who shop in Hereford help pay our taxes. In addition, every new tax dollar raised as a result of job creation is a dollar of tax

YOU DON'T HAVE TO PAY!

WE NEED ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

To get it, WE NEED THE 1/2¢ SALES TAX. Based on current projections, the 1/2¢ sales tax would yield some $330,000 per year which could be used only for specific economic development projects as mandated by state law.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

How Will Economic Development Funds Be Managed?

A five member Economic Development Board will be appointed by the Hereford City Council. They will serve WITHOUT PAY. Funds can be used for:

- Business development - recruitment and retention
- Workforce development - education and training
- Infrastructure development - water & waste water, electrical and street improvements for job-related projects
- Facility development - new and existing buildings
- Loans

Will All Purchases Be Affected By The 1/2¢ Sales Tax?

NO! A city sales tax does not affect most essentials. You pay no sales tax on medical services, prescription drugs, most food products, rents, mortgages, gasoline, automobiles, or agriculture items which are exempt.

What Will A 1/2¢ Sales Tax Cost The Average Family?

According to the State Controller, a family with a gross income of $35,000 would pay about 98¢ more per week. The extra pennies are more than offset by savings on your property taxes.

Is This 1/2¢ Sales Tax Permanent?

Only if you, the voters, want it to be. Under state law, what voters vote in, they can vote out.

What's At Stake?

Our very future is at stake. This election is about JOBS, GROWTH, EXPANDING OUR TAX BASE, AND GETTING HEREFORD ON THE MOVE. A VOTE FOR THE 1/2¢ SALES TAX ON AUG. 13th WILL ALLOW HEREFORD TO COMPETE, AND HELP SECURE A BRIGHTER FUTURE THAT WILL BENEFIT US ALL.
