REALLY a long haul!

Traffic along some Hereford streets was delayed slightly on Friday as this monster truck rolled through town on a trip from Abilene to Minneapolis, Minn. The 180-foot-long tanker weighed 271,000 pounds and was diverted through Deaf Smith County along FM 2943 from Dimmitt, then along Park Avenue, which is the state-designated Loop 211, then north on U.S. 385. To help the truck make its wide turns, right, a second driver takes a temporary seat at an auxiliary engine and steering wheel that turns the back seven axles, making it possible for the vehicle to turn without climbing the steps and going through the front door of St. Anthony's church.

Tank trip through town tangles traffic

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Traffic in Hereford snarled briefly on Friday as a truck passed through town.

Now a truck is normally no big deal in the middle of farm and cattle country, but this one was.

The passing of the semi-tractor rig carrying a tank through town en route from Abilene to Minneapolis, Minn., shut down traffic on Park Avenue and the intersection of Park and U.S. 385 around 2 p.m. as police, sheriff's deputies and State Troopers escorted the vehicle through a tight right turn and off on its northerly journey.

What was so special about the truck and its load?

Well, said DPS Trooper Gary Whitfill, the tank being hauled was 11 feet wide and 15 feet high, but the empty tank was a whopping 180 feet long -- more than half the length of the football field at Whiteface Stadium!

Whitfill -- who works with the DPS license and weights division -- said he picked up the truck and load just outside Dimmitt Friday afternoon and checked all paperwork to make sure it was in order.

The vehicle could not continue up U.S. 385 through Hereford, so Whitfill called ahead for backup, then led the 271,000-pound tank north on FM 2943 to U.S. 60, then across to Park Avenue -- which carries the state designation Loop 211 and thus is approved for use by oversize and overweight vehicles -- for the trip through Hereford.

The procession, which included the tank being hauled by a large tractor and carried on 18 heavy-duty axles, was accompanied by two escort trucks working with the truckers.

In addition, police stopped traffic all along the route, then closed the intersection of U.S. 385 and Park

Faulkner wins discrimination case, will be cadet at Citadel

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) - Shannon Faulkner is arming herself against the tyranny of tradition, ready to cut her hair or put on a poker face as the first female cadet in the 151-year history of The Citadel.

"They always say the color of the corps is gray. I've seen in their faces the grayness," Ms. Faulkner said. "It's the solidarity stare. That's what I expect still and I will be putting on that same air."

But senior Shawn Edwards predicted cadets would go easy on Ms. Faulkner, who won her sex-discrimination lawsuit Friday when a federal judge ordered the all-male college to admit her as a cadet this fall.

"I don't see how you could have any option. Everyone will be gun shy," Edwards said.

U.S. District Judge C. Weston Houck ruled The Citadel's all-male policy violates Ms. Faulkner's rights under the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment. He gave the state-supported school in Charleston one year to decide how to accommodate other women.

"I never doubted that one day I would win," said Ms. Faulkner, 19. "I was told I would never enter the Citadel's gates. Now, I've entered them and I'm very happy."

SPAW program bringing dividends, although not what originally planned

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

An innovative plan to reduce the number of inmates in the Deaf Smith County Jail didn't exactly accomplish that purpose but benefits have developed for the community and the participants.

Supervised Prisoners Alternative Work was seen as a way to allow persons convicted of misdemeanor offenses and sentenced to jailtime to stay in their own homes at night and work in supervised community projects.

SPAW is opposite from a work release program which has prisoners in jail at night and released to continue their jobs during daytime hours.

When Deaf Smith County Judge Tom Simons and the Commissioners' Court authorized SPAW, the jail was bulging at the seams. Officials feared repercussions from the Texas Jail Standards Commission.

By removing prisoners for SPAW, the hope was that jail population would decrease.

"That isn't what really happened, though," said Judge Simons. He usually has only a half-dozen, or so, assigned to SPAW from his court. But, every little bit helps.

The program, supervised by Deaf Smith Jailer Manuel Ramirez, also accepts trustees who are willing to work.

In the last few months, SPAW workers have performed most of the tasks in converting a house to the juvenile detention home and have built a storage facility for their own supplies and equipment.

Beginning this week, Ramirez will move his entire work force to the site of Hereford's new aquatic center.

"It looks like they'll work there about a year," Ramirez said about the assignment.

He expects their first job to be building forms for concrete for the swimming pool complex.

The storage building, located adjacent to the Precinct 1 barn, was little more than four walls when the SPAW group started on it.

They installed plumbing, extended a wall, put in two overhead doors and finished the walls -- the same kinds of tasks they handled at the juvenile home.

Ramirez generally has about 10 or 11 men on the crew, but not the same ones all the time. Those who complete their jail sentences are replaced by new men.

The supervisor said the level of skills of the men assigned varies from none to fairly adept.

And, he feels that some men who entered the program with no training have learned skills they may use in the job market.

Judge Simons concurs with Ramirez.

"They got some experience at a

Project finished

Finishing touches are put on the Supervised Prisoners Alternative Work headquarters, adjacent to the Deaf Smith County Precinct 1 barn. Participants in the SPAW program remodeled and added onto a building to provide a storage and work area for SPAW.

Health reform questions still unanswered

By DAVID ESPO

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - After months of debate, Democratic leaders in Congress say many of the most important decisions remain to be made as they draft health reform legislation for a vote in August.

A target date for universal coverage, provisions to control government costs and - perhaps most importantly - the issue of requiring employers to finance health insurance all remain undecided, according to lawmakers and their aides.

President Clinton stressed anew his commitment to health reform in his weekly radio address today, saying "my clear and unchanged goal is universal coverage that will protect hard-working Americans."

He said Americans should brace for being "bombed with a last-ditch special-interest media blizzard aimed at derailing reform and frightening you."

Clinton argued against "half measures" and likened his struggle to that waged by President Johnson to get Medicare enacted 29 years ago.

He said Johnson heard objections similar to the ones being leveled against health-care reform "until the very end of the vote."

"But ... he was able to sign legislation creating a system that has helped hundreds of millions of older Americans and their families," the president said.

Supporters of universal health coverage staged made-for-media events of their own.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton was in Portland, Ore., on Friday to kick off a bus caravan designed to promote her husband's legislation.

"If we do not guarantee health insurance to all Americans, then we have failed all Americans," she said.

"If we give our energy, our hearts, our souls to the next few weeks and make it clear that the American people want what the members of Congress have, guaranteed health insurance paid for with an employer-employee shared responsibility system, we will get it for every single American."

Back in Washington, Democratic leaders struggled over the details as they worked to write legislation that can extend coverage to all and win a majority in both houses of Congress.

"We haven't decided the exact amount of time yet," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, told reporters when asked what the target date would be for providing coverage to everyone.

Early voting to start for special election on sales tax hike

Early voting will begin Monday in the Aug. 13 special city election that will decide if a half-cent sales tax will be levied for economic development purposes.

In-person early voting will be conducted in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse office of County Clerk David Ruland weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., through Aug. 9.

Applications for ballots by mail may be sent to Ruland no later than Aug. 5.

The sales tax election was called by the Hereford City Commission in response to a recommendation from a task force, People Promoting Progress, appointed to seek ways to develop new business and industry.

Members of the committee urged the election to give residents the opportunity for input on economic concerns of the city.

If levied, the tax would provide funds for working with existing businesses and recruiting new business to Hereford. A five-member board, appointed by the City Commission, would administer the fund, with consent of the commission.

A number of other cities in the Panhandle and South Plains have implemented the tax. Supporters maintain that Hereford needs the tax to compete with other cities in the area in economic development.

Four years ago, the issue was defeated by a margin of 1,137 to 481. In the election on May 7, 1990, the ballot also included candidates for city offices.

The ballot this year is limited to the sales tax issue.

Approximately 6,800 city residents are registered and eligible to vote in the special election.

Shuttle, crew, animals home after record trip

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Columbia returned home today with seven astronauts and a laboratory full of animals after a delay that made it the longest U.S. space flight in more than 20 years.

The shuttle landed at Kennedy Space Center at 6:38 a.m. EDT, right around sunrise and 15 days after blasting off on its science mission.

Offshore storms prevented a landing Friday and gave Columbia the space shuttle endurance record - 14 days, 17 hours and 55 minutes. The previous record was 14 days, 13 minutes set by another Columbia crew last fall.

Today's weather was fine, except for some fog way off to the west.

"Welcome home, Columbia. Excellent, excellent job," Mission Control told commander Robert Cabana and his crew.

"It's great to be home," Cabana replied.

Columbia logged 6.14 million miles and circled Earth 236 times during its journey.

The shuttle was swimming with newts, fish, sea urchins, jellyfish and other creatures used for research into how organisms reproduce, develop and adapt in space. Ground teams hustled to stabilize the spaceship so they could unload the animals quickly.

The astronauts worked in two teams round the clock in Spacelab, the bus-sized laboratory in Columbia's cargo bay.

Science controllers in Huntsville, Ala., and a few in Europe beamed up nearly 26,000 remote-control commands during the past two weeks. Eighty-one of 82 planned experiments were conducted during the mission. One study of the separation of latex particles ran into equipment problems.

Crew members also measured one another occasionally for a study of spinal changes in space. All astronauts tend to grow 2 or more inches in space because of an elongated spine, an often painful effect caused by the absence of gravity. They revert to their normal height once back on Earth.

The spinal study is expected to help scientists figure out how humans adapt to space travel, said Canadian Space Agency project scientist Allen Mortimer.

"We do know enough about changes in height and body shape to make recommendations on spacesuit design - leave room for expansion," Mortimer said.

Although the voyage is long for a shuttle crew, it doesn't come close to three astronauts' 84-day stay on Skylab in 1973-74. And cosmonauts have done stints of six months to a year aboard Russia's space station Mir.

The crew aboard Columbia consisted of six Americans and Chiaki Mukai, the first Japanese woman in space.

State hails agreement with Feds to gain super collider, land, cash

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - State officials are hailing a proposed super collider termination plan that would provide Texas $720 million in cash and assets, but agree that nothing can compensate for the atom smasher's loss.

"We have made the best of a bad situation, but to say we've come out ahead or better is not fair," said Sheldon Smith, chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, which helped negotiate the settlement with the Department of Energy.

"We haven't made lemonade out of a lemon, but we now have a good recipe to make great lemonade," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, whose district is home to part of the collider complex.

The deal announced Friday would give Texas up to $210 million in cash as well as title to the buildings and land on the super collider's sprawling campus - a total estimated value of $720 million.

The buildings and equipment retained by Texas would allow it to operate a state-of-the-art cancer treatment facility, regional supercomputing center and magnet development laboratory.

"I think every possible drop of blood has been squeezed from the turnip on behalf of the state," said Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, one of the collider's biggest defenders.

Some $2 billion in state and federal funds were spent on the super collider before Congress killed the $11 billion project nine months ago. Since then, Texas and the DOE have been negotiating over how to repay the state for its $539 million contribution to the high-energy physics project - with Texas threatening a lawsuit, if necessary, to recoup its investment.

"It is good to have made this great progress without a lawsuit, while being able to preserve some of the science down there," said Deputy Energy Secretary Bill White.

"This is a constructive way of moving on in this process," White said Friday. "It is a tragedy that we went as a country so far into this and dropped it. And this is a way that we can preserve some of the value."

White, a Texan, credited Democratic Gov. Ann Richards for much of the success of the negotiations and took issue with GOP gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush's claim that the settlement is a "consolation prize."

"I can tell you this, that it's the national clout and prestige that Ann Richards has brought to this that has allowed it to happen politically on Capitol Hill," he said.

In addition to $145 million in cash outright, Texas could receive another $65 million if the state's plan for a cancer treatment facility is approved under peer review. The state wants to take the partially completed linear accelerator and use it to construct a proton-beam cancer therapy center - one of only three in the world.

Texas to give back immigration money

DALLAS (AP) - At a time when the state of Texas is complaining it needs more federal aid, it is being told it must return about $90 million in immigration aid because it didn't spend it all.

Any unspent cash under a 1986 aid program will revert to the federal government on Sept. 1 for redistribution to other states, said Leticia Vasquez, a spokeswoman for Gov. Ann Richards.

By the end of September, Texas will have distributed to schools and other local agencies about $345 million of $435 million allocated to the state under the federal State Legalization Impact Assistance Grants.

Among other things, the 1986 immigration-reform law provided amnesty to 2.8 million undocumented residents who gained the chance to qualify for citizenship.

To lessen the burden on states, Congress approved $3.5 billion to help defray their costs - such as education and health care.

Forty-three states qualified to participate. California received $2.2 billion, followed by the $435 million that went to Texas, $244 million to New York and $155 million to Illinois.

Of the 2.8 million people who gained amnesty, 440,000 were in Texas.

Federal policymakers divided the money using projected costs and an estimate of the immigrant population in each state. That formula led to the excess funding for Texas, Ms. Vasquez said.

Texas drew a large share of the 1986 program because of its immigrant population, but the state has relatively few programs that eventually qualified under the federal guidelines.

California, in contrast, offers statewide assistance and health-care programs and has already documented costs greater than its allocation.

while the truck made its right turn.

To help the massive vehicle around corners, Whitfill said, a second truck sits on a small metal seat welded between the sets of axles at the back of the tank.

He operates an auxiliary motor that drives those tires, steering them separately through the turn, insuring the vehicle makes it around corners.

The auxiliary seat is only used in towns or areas when the vehicle needs to make turns.

After making the turn onto U.S. 385, it was a straight shot out of town for the tractor and mega-tank.

time when they couldn't do anything else," he declared.

"Of everything they get out of the program, though, the best may be an improvement in their own self-esteem," he continued. "They can see something positive and it makes them feel some satisfaction."

The storage facility built by the crew represents an investment of about $7,500 in materials. The contribution of the prisoners in labor has not been calculated.

The work SPAW participants perform in the swimming pool construction, though, will be calculated by the construction superintendent for purposes of matching grant funds for the project.

SPAW, then, will make a major contribution to that community-wide effort, providing labor that would be expensive to hire.

So, while Judge Simons is frank about the success of SPAW being found in something other than expected, he is grateful for the benefits that have accrued to the men.

"They have done some good things for the community and will continue to do so," said Judge Simons.

Area pair joins tour of Washington D.C.

Cassidy Wilhelm, daughter of Dean and Dianne Wilhelm of Nazareth, and Chad Jennings, son of Leland and Vickie Jennings of Dimmitt, recently represented Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative at the 1994 Government-In-Action Youth Tour to Washington D.C.

The tour is sponsored by the electric cooperatives of Texas and coordinated by Texas Electric Cooperatives Inc.

President Lyndon Johnson promoted and encouraged the idea of the youth tour during the 1950s when as a senator he selected outstanding young people and offered them an opportunity to observe their national government at work.

While in Washington, the teens visited with their congressmen and observed the legislative process.

Other trip highlights included visits to monuments, memorials and attractions, including the White House, Arlington National Cemetery, the Smithsonian Institution, Ford's Theater, Mount Vernon, the National Archives, the Supreme Court and the Vietnam Memorial.

Special activities included Rural Youth Day, participating in the wreath-laying ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, viewing the sunset parade at the Iwo Jima Memorial and attending the U.S. Army's production of "The Spirit of America."

The tour was held June 10-22.

WTAMU's Thompson named head of Texas A&M University System

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer
COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)

Retiring West Texas A&M University President Barry Thompson, promising to re-connect the A&M System with its roots, was named chancellor of the Texas A&M University System Friday.

The selection of Thompson by the A&M Board of Regents technically is an interim appointment. State laws require posting the names of finalists for state agency heads at least three weeks prior to selection.

However, with no other candidates named, the appointment has the effect of a permanent selection.

"I want to see that we are lean and mean and responsive to people," Thompson said. "The A&M System is all about service and we're going to re-emphasize that."

"I love this state with a passion. I've lived all over the state. In my judgment it's one of the most dynamic areas on earth. And I'm very fortunate to have the opportunity to attempt to provide some leadership. That's my sole goal: to serve the state."

"If you can't be enthused about being in something like the A&M system, then you're probably a cadaver somewhere in the Guadalajara medical school."

Thompson, 58, is a native of Kermit. His family has lived in Texas since 1846. He succeeds William Mobley, who announced last month he was stepping down as chancellor effective Aug. 31 to return to Texas A&M's faculty as a business professor next year.

At the A&M System's flagship school at College Station, Thompson will oversee a university hit in the past year by criminal investigations, alleged faculty misconduct and athletic scandals.

"What more can I say? He's an honest guy," Mary Nan West, the regents chairman, said. "Barry Thompson is a students' advocate. He knows the system. He can take care of the whole enchilada."

Thompson said he planned to initiate in the next six months a project he calls Operation Lone Star, described as "an effort to reconnect with the roots."

"We'll go out into the hinterlands of Texas and talk to people about how the A&M System of the 21st Century should look," he said. "This is not a long-range plan but a short-range action plan to make sure we're doing our job."

Thompson had told the regents in May he planned to retire as West Texas A&M president effective Aug.

He had been at West Texas A&M since Jan. 1, 1991, leaving Tarleton State University in Stephenville where he served as president from 1982 to 1990.

Harvard University was founded in 1636.

Why I support the half-cent sales tax

Early voting will begin Monday in the Aug. 13 city election to determine if a half-cent sales tax will be levied for economic development.

Mayor Bob Josserand and his committee are doing their best to inform the public about this proposal - its purpose, how funds will be used and who will make the decisions. We hope citizens will decide that this is our best bet on stimulating jobs and growth in the community.

There are no guarantees in pursuing economic development, but the People Promoting Progress committee feels this is the best alternative under current competitive conditions. Industries now contact the state to see which cities have the tax -- if we don't have the tax, we don't make the first cut.

I am for the half-cent economic development tax for you might call a selfish reason. I think it will help Hereford gain new jobs and grow, and anything that helps Hereford helps me.

As one who has worked as a volunteer in economic development for many years, I have seen such programs make a complete change. While chambers of commerce formerly did much of the industrial development work, they no longer have the finances or the capabilities to face the competition.

While voters rejected this tax four years ago, I believe and hope that they have come to realize the importance of taking a step to do something about promoting business and industry in their community. It should be noted, across the state, that 55 cities rejected the tax the first time, and only three rejected it on a second vote.

I have faith in Mayor Josserand and his committee, which represents a good cross section of the community. With a knowledgeable board appointed by the city, we have a chance to make a difference.

Forget any talk about the city or the chamber using the money for their own goals; the law forbids that. Forget who gets the credit if we have a success. Forget politics and personalities.

In short, the city tax is all about jobs -- creating new ones and keeping the ones we have. That is something that should concern every citizen of Hereford. Jobs put food on the table and roofs over the heads. More jobs mean more income to spend in retail business, stimulating our economy. More jobs mean spreading the tax base so that everyone benefits.

Jobs are worth the half-cent sales tax!

In the last few months, Americans have indulged in lots of remembering, from the Allies' landing on Normandy to the astronauts' landing on the moon.

In this writer's humble opinion, each deserves the attention. But, a trip down memory lane is hardly complete unless some personal attachment is present.

For instance, when President George Bush asked, a few years ago, for the United States to return to a more "gentle time," I tried to remember when such a time existed.

Then, I got to thinking that it's all in the mind. A bit of nostalgia can be a healthy thing, even to exorcising bad memories, as it were, or recalling the humorous times of our lives.

For instance, a gentler time may have been when I was a child and, with a younger sister, attended the Saturday afternoon movie matinee every week.

But, the recollection turns almost violent when I remember the time a wind, hail and rainstorm blew through my hometown, dropping inches and inches of rain, and flooding the flat terrain.

The storm interrupted electrical service and all the children in the theatre stumbled out of the dark to the lobby where we found the outdoors almost as dark from the clouds.

My sister and I waited, with all the others, for a parent to come for us. None came, at least for some time. Some memories dim with the passage of time and I have no idea how we got to my grandparents' home, about five blocks away.

But I do remember the scene that greeted us. Every window in the house had been shattered by the hail. Fortunately, my father and grandfather beat everyone to the lumberyard and got glass to replace the broken panes. They were busy with that chore.

At this point, I must digress ... to explain to those who never lived in a small town in the '30s and '40s that it was not uncommon for residents to keep milk cows and chickens in their yards. And, my grandmother was of the old school. She still raised chickens every year and kept hens for their eggs.

Anyway, on arriving at my grandparents' house, my sister and I found chaos ... the world turned upside down, as it were. There were chickens everywhere, in the house.

Some of the chickens had been drowned, almost, by the heavy rain and were being dried out. There were chickens on the oven door. There were chickens in the bathtub.

And, there were chickens of fryer size in the sink. They had been conked by the hail and were to be dressed for eating.

Water was boiling on the stove for the womenfolk to scald, pluck and dress the dead birds.

Baby chicks recovering from their ordeal were cheeping from boxes.

And, oh yes, there were dead chickens (too small to eat) littering the back yard.

The odor was something less than Chanel No. 5, too. But, there's hardly any way to describe what wet chickens smell like.

Harking back to that Saturday afternoon recently, I wondered what my family would have done if there had been a TV weatherman telling everyone to take cover because a big storm was on the way.

Although I'm not one to bet large sums, I think I still would be safe in wagering my last nickel that my mother and grandmother would have gathered up chickens and taken them to the basement, even before they picked up the kids at the cowboy show.

Thinking of that experience every now and again, I chuckle and thank my lucky stars that such memories are part of my life.

Now, about those Saturday afternoon picture shows ... but that's for another time. -- Georgia Tyler

OUT OF THE BLUE

By Garry Wesner

Well, this past week marked the 25th anniversary of the first Apollo landing on the moon.

To quote Garfield the cat: Big, fat, hairy deal.

I mean, watching TV about people walking on the moon was great fun when I was nine, but now that I am a taxpaying adult, I have begun wondering just what purpose all of that served.

I know I've talked about how useless and wasteful the space program is, but I think Apollo just reiterates just how useless and wasteful it really is.

Here was the United States spending millions and millions of dollars chunking men in small tin cans up into the sky to see what was on the moon.

They didn't do anything but hit a few golf balls, kick up some dust and bring back rocks that look suspiciously like those we have in abundance here on earth.

I wonder what the United States' financial situation would be today if the money poured into NASA all those years had been funneled into either lower budgets or deficit reduction packages.

At the same time, by focusing on getting our own financial house in order rather than playing "keeping up with the Stalins," we might we still be an economic power in the world today, rather than nothing more than a well-dressed third-world country without an honest dime to our names.

Look at it this way -- I get my paycheck and deposit it in the bank.

I then sit down and look at the balance in my checkbook and compare it with the number of bills due at that time.

I write the bills, then look at the balance after all that's done. If I have any money left, I can do other stuff like go out to eat and take trips.

If there isn't any money, I don't do extra stuff.

If requests for donations to Christian Childrens Fund, Save the Children, United Way, Boy Scouts, food banks, or other charitable entities come in, I have to regrettably decline to give, because it is not in my budget.

Seems like Congress could take the hint and just spend the money for the basics, being those things listed in the Preamble to the Constitution -- establishing justice, insuring domestic tranquility, providing for the common defense, promoting the general welfare and securing the blessings of liberty.

That means eliminating space exploration, foreign aid, many welfare programs, funds for the arts, AIDS research and just about everything else.

You see, when you or I run out of money, we stop spending and when our debt load gets too big, we have to cut back even further until the debt is repaid and our credit rating is restored.

So why can't the federal government be held to the same standard? Cut back everything unnecessary to the operation of the country until the bills are paid, then start looking at other obligations.

I know it's a radical idea, but it seems like Apollo should remind us that, in these days of tight finances and even tighter budgets, we need to be better stewards of our funds and only spend money on that which is truly necessary.

Anyway, enough of that.

I was all prepared to wind up the saga of my lawn mower with the good news that it was working perfectly, since I sat down last week and repaired the latest fault.

Unfortunately, it broke again -- this time for the last time.

It appears my association with the old family Sunbeam has come to an end and we will have to look for a new mower.

But you know, this whole episode has reminded me of something important about Hereford -- that this is really a caring town.

You see, we never really started mowing our yard regularly until we moved into our current house last August.

For the first several months we were in Hereford, our then-next door neighbor, Ben Greider, faithfully mowed our front yard every week -- not asking any money, just doing it as a good neighbor.

We really appreciated Mr. Greider's work and missed him when we moved.

Now, however, we have more good neighbors in Joe Gonzales and Audine Dettman who have loaned us lawn mowers several times. In fact, Joe once mowed the lawn for us while we were on vacation.

All these people are a credit to Hereford and we're so pleased to have them for neighbors. They are part of what makes Hereford a great place to live.

Well, that's it for this week. Have a good week and, remember, the best epitaph a man can have is, "He made a difference."

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

On Aug. 13, the residents of Hereford will once again have the opportunity to vote for progress.

On that date an election will be held to add a one-half percent Economic Development tax. Items which are now exempt from sales tax, such as groceries, medical services, prescription drugs, etc., will continue to be exempt from this additional half-cent sales tax.

The City of Hereford does not have the resources to compete with our neighboring Panhandle cities when we attempt to lure new business to our community. New jobs are created by new business which will also benefit those of us already doing business here in Hereford.

Unless we have something to offer which will attract a new company to our city, that company will look elsewhere. To compete in a meaningful manner will require funds. A small investment by each of us will give our city the ability to compete for new jobs and enable us to grow.

It has been estimated that a family with an annual income of $25,000 will only pay an additional tax of $40 per year.

One can look around our state and see economic growth has returned. New industry is relocating to our part of the country.

To attract new business to our city, we have to be able to offer the same incentives other cities are fulfilling, such as providing loan funds for expansion, capital purchases and other needs.

I urge all citizens of Hereford to join me in voting for Economic Development and Progress on Aug. 13, 1994.

Dear Editor:

The Hereford Beautification Alliance will be cleaning up the main highways through Hereford within the next few weeks. During our preparation for this effort, the question of how much traffic passes through Hereford on a daily basis was asked. We contacted the Texas Highway Department to answer this question and were amazed at the statistics concerning the traffic in Hereford.

In a 24-hour period, an average of 27,600 vehicles pass through the intersection of Highway 60 and 385. In the same 24-hour period, an average of 34,800 vehicles pass through the intersection of Park Avenue and U.S. 385. Of course, some of this is local traffic, but the Texas Highway Department estimated that at least 15 percent of this traffic is from out of state.

Thus, approximately 10,000 people from out of state pass through and/or stop in Hereford each day!

The Hereford Beautification Alliance hopes that this information serves as a wake-up call to our residents and business owners concerning the appearance of our city. We hope you will join us in cleaning up our fair city as soon as possible. With our Town and Country Jubilee approaching, please, help make our city look like we are "Hereford Proud."

Sincerely,
Wade Easley

Dear Editor:

We were awakened at 4:30 one morning this week by dogs barking and realized at least one of them was in our backyard. When we went to check, we found a large dog had broken into our rabbit cage and killed a beautiful black show rabbit and mangled the feet of another show rabbit.

These rabbits were a 4-H project -- an attempt to help teach two children responsibility. It is sad that they have to learn about the irresponsibility in this way. These animals were well cared for and deemed safe in their cages behind a six-foot fence.

This dog, as all dogs, should be kept in his own backyard. If your dog was out roaming Sunday night-Monday morning, you can feel responsible for the grief your dog has brought to a couple of children.

It seems that the hours from midnight to 6 a.m. are the peak hours for dogs to be roaming the streets. This would be the best time for the dog catcher to round up the strays, reaping several benefits:

1. Fees collected from owners who wish to save their pets would build city coffers; 2. Hereford yards would be free of droppings and trash deposited by loose dogs; 3. Diseases and unwanted pet pregnancies and births would decrease; 4. Early morning walkers could safely travel their neighborhoods; 5. Barking dogs could be traced to their owners, who could be required to quiet their dogs and/or pay a fine. In general, Hereford would be cleaner, safer and more attractive.

If consideration for others does not prompt you to secure your dog, consider this: Property and family must be protected. Any dog entering my yard uninvited may not leave under his own power.

Sincerely,
Joe and Linda Weaver

Cotton surviving heat, hail wilting with no rain

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
LAMESA, Texas (AP) - Day by scorching day on cotton farms across the South Plains, about the only thing growing is gloom.

The cotton - after enduring hail, 116-degree heat, high winds and the burns of blowing sand - faces yet another menace: Lack of rain.

Non-irrigated cotton across the region looks scrawny and wilted. Experts speculate at least half a million dryland acres already have failed.

Sometimes it rains in August, farmer Dave Nix pointed out.

"I don't know how much it's going to help," said Nix, who planted about 2,000 acres of cotton in Dawson and Gaines counties this spring. "I think a lot of this cotton is already through."

But Nix said folks around Lamesa, about 60 miles south of Lubbock, aren't abandoning their crops yet.

"You talk about it. You mention it, then you talk about something else. You can't just dwell on bad news."

Lack of rain also has hurt corn, sorghum, oats and peanuts in various parts of the state.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports very short moisture levels in parts of the South Plains, far West Texas, West Central Texas and Southeast Texas. Moisture conditions are short from the Panhandle to North Texas, East Texas, Central Texas and the coastal bend.

Around Lubbock, the world's largest cotton patch, with 3.5 million acres sown, fields were drier than normal at planting. Besides some spotty thunderstorms, it hasn't rained significantly since May.

"We're hurting," acknowledged Cochran County extension agent Sam Field.

Field said the areas near Morton, about 60 miles west of Lubbock, finally received almost 1 inch of rain last week.

"This little drink might help it survive, but I don't know how it's going to help out the yield," he said.

Thirsty cotton starts shedding bolls to survive.

Dan Krieg, professor of crop physiology at Texas Tech University, expects an average harvest of 100-150 pounds per acre on non-irrigated fields this year. Average is 250-280 pounds, Krieg said.

Irrigated cotton, meanwhile, should remain in good shape as long as water wells hold out through the summer, he said.

"If we don't get a rain real soon," Krieg said, "we won't have enough water to keep up."

Ethanol's pros, cons argued in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - An expected attack in the Senate next week on the government's plan to expand use of ethanol has drawn opposition from the Clinton administration and other supporters of the corn-based fuel additive.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., intends to offer an amendment to a spending bill from the Senate floor to block the Environmental Protection Agency's so-called ethanol mandate.

His amendment cleared a Senate Appropriations subcommittee by an 8-3 vote on July 14. But he withdrew it before a full committee vote later that day and is seeking clarification from the Congressional Budget Office on the amendment's cost.

The Senate could begin debate on the spending bill as early as Tuesday.

"I strongly oppose any attempts to interfere with the EPA's implementation or enforcement of the rule," President Clinton wrote Friday to Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine.

On Thursday, EPA Administrator Carol Browner sent a similar letter to Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa.

"Our actions are consistent with longstanding Congressional support for renewable motor fuels and this Administration's environmental and energy goals," she wrote.

Harkin, who takes the Johnston threat seriously, said the letter would add to support for ethanol. Harkin has been talking with some of the 47 senators who in March signed a letter opposing the ethanol proposal.

The EPA decided June 30 to require that part of the oxygen-boosting additive in cleaner-burning gasoline come from a renewable source - in effect ethanol.

The new fuel, with higher concentrations of oxygen, is required starting in January for nine cities with the worst air pollution. Meantime, 11 Northeastern states, and Texas, Kentucky and the District of Columbia, have agreed to require the gasoline in areas of severe air pollution.

In 1995, 15 percent of the oxygenate in the cleaner fuel must come from renewable sources, the EPA said. The level rises to 30 percent after that. In the near term, ethanol is the only renewable source that can be produced in the volumes needed to meet the clean gasoline goals.

Texas Warriors hope experience helps at national AAU basketball tournament

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

A year older and a year wiser, four Hereford boys hope to do some damage at the 12-and-under boys National AAU Basketball Tournament this week in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Eric McNutt, Cody Hodges, Slade Hodges and James Miller were part of a team that went to the 11-under tournament last summer in Florida. This year, they are joined by Daniel Carnahan, Steven Northern and Chayse Rives, all of Hereford, and Fronia's Nathan King and Landon

Martin. The nine boys make up the Texas Warriors.

Last year in Florida, the four boys played for the Sharks. At times, though, they were the ones that were eaten alive--by much taller boys, by loose officiating, and maybe by the newness of it all. This year, they'll be better prepared.

"We're better than we were last year," Cody Hodges said. "We're older and we know what's going to take to compete. We worked harder this year because we wanted it more."

"This year I think we have a better chance," said Slade Hodges, Cody's twin. "We know what to expect, and we know how to win ballgames."

They won ballgames, all right, 35 of them against only five losses. They won eight of the ten tournaments they entered, including the regional tournament in mid-May in Amarillo. That earned them the right to play in Salt Lake City.

They've outscored opponents by 25 points a game. Two of their five losses were by one or two points to nationally ranked teams, said coach Amy Noyes.

"We pretty well dominated," said Noyes, a P.E. teacher at St. Anthony's School in Hereford. "We beat everybody in the area."

They weren't dominating immediately though, Noyes said, adding that early on the Warriors were "pretty shoddy."

"It took awhile. Two months into the season we picked up a couple of boys from Fronia, and that made us better. It's unbelievable how far they've come."

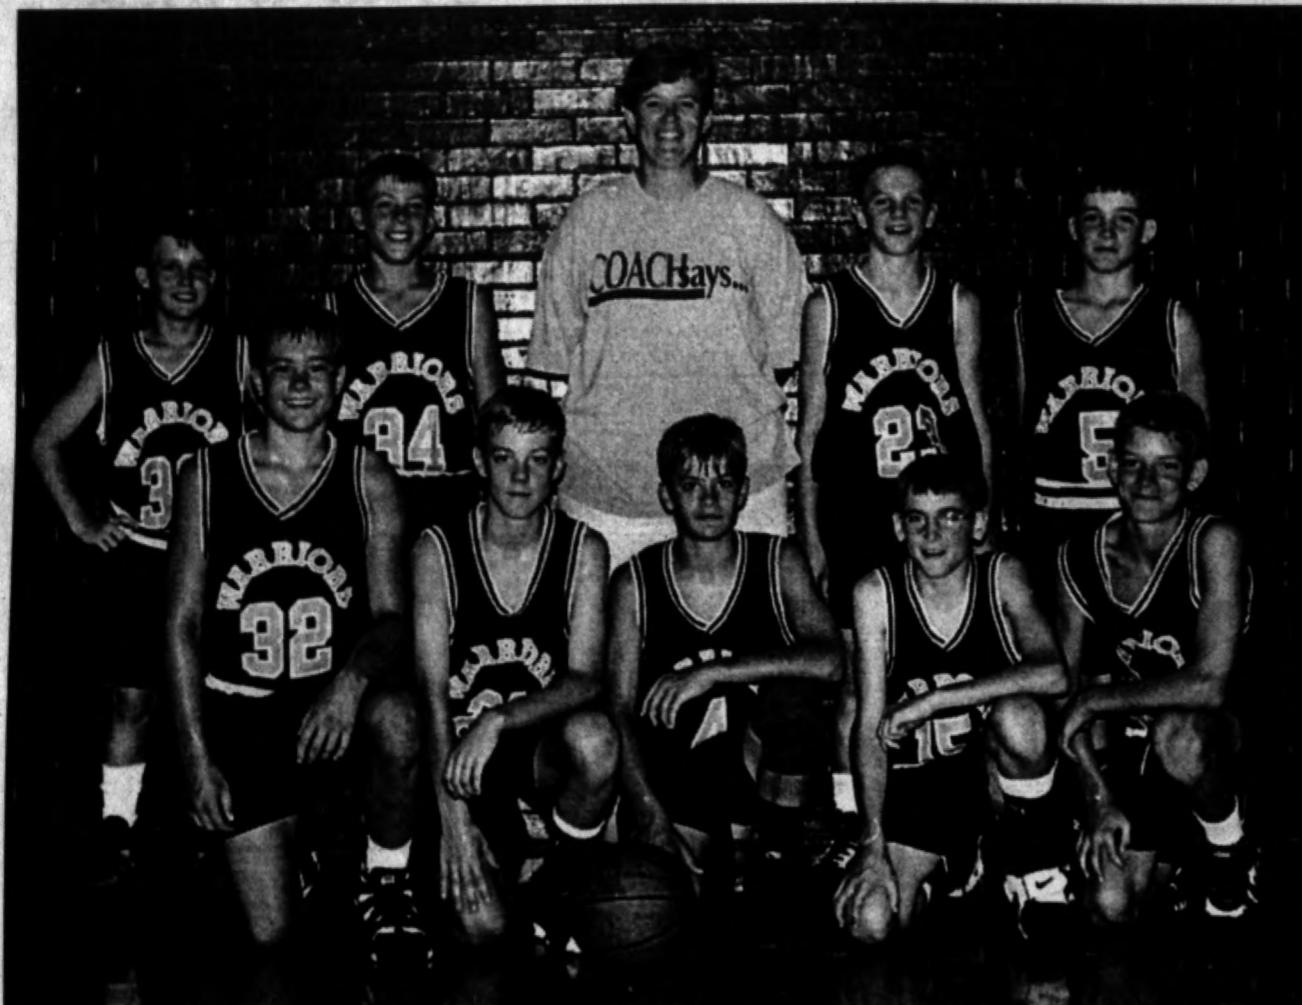

The other players blended quickly, some from familiarity with the four from the Sharks.

"I've known them for long time," Rives said. "When they went to nationals last year, I scrimmaged against them. I felt like when I got on the team, I knew them."

"This was my first year playing organized basketball," Northern said. "It feels good going to nationals my first year playing with this team."

Since winning the regional tournament in May, the Warriors kept

Kuper hits big time in all-star football game

In the Houston Astrodome Tuesday, Hereford's Mark Kuper starts playing with the big boys.

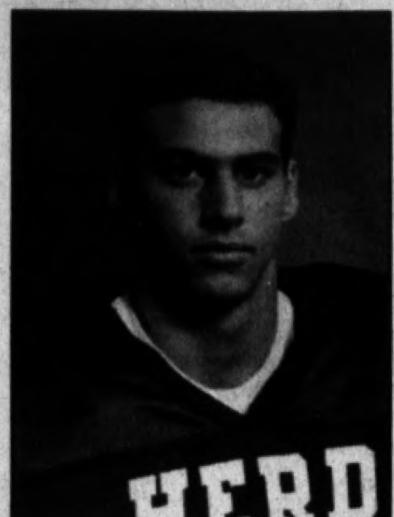

Kuper, who'll report to football practice at the University of Texas on Aug. 9, was one of about 70 graduated high school seniors from Texas to be selected to play in the 1994 McDonald's All Star football game. The game, set for 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Astrodome, coincides with the Texas High School Coaches Association's coaching clinics going on this week in Houston.

Kuper was a two-year all-district selection at both tight end and defensive end as a member of the Herd. He doesn't know which position he'll play in the game.

"We don't know for sure who's going to start until we get down there and start practicing," Kuper said, adding that he's not exactly looking forward to the Houston humidity. He is anxious, though, to see how he stacks up against the other All-Stars.

"There's lots of competition," he said. "A lot of blue chip prospects are going to be down there. It's going to be tough."

The rosters include stars from all over Texas, in all five classes. Their chosen colleges are listed, including Oklahoma, Tennessee, Southern Cal, Louisiana State and Stanford. A total of 30 are headed to the Southwest Conference, with all eight SWC schools represented. Blue chip prospects litter the rosters.

Kuper, despite his 6-foot-5, 220-pound frame, isn't a blue chip. Anyone who has a scholarship to play football at Texas shouldn't have to take a back seat to anybody, though. He's banking on his experience in the All-Star game to give him the confidence he needs to succeed in Austin.

"I'm a little bit scared about how I'll do at UT," he said. "This game will help me understand what I'll have to do to get ready for UT...This game will assure me I can play with these guys--if I bust my butt hard enough."

Thank You

The Texas Warriors

would like to thank these businesses for their donations to help sponsor this team to the AAU National in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Former rivals Canseco, Clark spark Rangers

By BARRY HORN

The Dallas Morning News

ARLINGTON, Texas - "The Jerk" and the "Three-Toed Sloth" appear to be getting along famously now that they live on opposite sides of the same clubhouse.

For Jose Canseco and Will Clark, fierce rivals for seven seasons when they lived on opposite sides of San Francisco Bay, familiarity has bred contentment.

Manager Kevin Kennedy speculates that Clark's first season with Texas may even have nudged the No. 3 and No. 4 hitters in the Rangers' lineup toward what each believes has been the best first half of his career.

For whatever success the Rangers enjoyed during the season's first three months, they can thank the two Bay Area refugees who carried the team to first place in the American League West with their bats.

Never before has a Ranger hit 24 home runs by July 12, as Canseco had when the team retired for the All-Star break. Never before has a Ranger hit as high as .353, as clean-up hitter Clark did before going off to play in the All-Star game.

To be sure, reason No. 1 for Canseco and Clark bouncing back from disappointing 1993 seasons has been good health.

Clark's knees are fine. Canseco's right elbow is healed.

Clark already has driven in more runs (78) than he did in his final season with the San Francisco Giants (.73). One more home run and he will equal last season's total of 14. Canseco had more home runs (24) and RBI (75) in 85 games than he produced in an injury-shortened 1993, during which he produced 10 home runs and 46 RBI in 60 games.

"Among other things, what we have here is a positive rivalry between two guys who thrive on competition," Kennedy said. "Each guy is pushing just a little to show the other what he's got."

Like on the first Sunday in June, when Canseco went 3-for-5, hit a home run and drove in three runs in a 10-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Clark went 3-for-4 with four RBIs.

"It's like Sandy Koufax told me when he was pitching for the Dodgers and Don Drysdale was on the same staff," Kennedy said. "One guy would pitch a two-hitter and the other would want to go out and throw a one-hitter."

Back on that Sunday in June in the steamy, cramped visitor's Fenway Park clubhouse, Canseco, a.k.a. "The Jerk," shouted above the media swarm, "Not bad for a three-toed sloth."

And then he laughed.

From the other side of the room, Clark, a.k.a. "The Three-Toed Sloth," replied with a wide grin.

More than a month later, Canseco and Clark smile when reminded of the moment. It was, after all, Canseco who referred to Clark as the slow-moving, tree-dwelling edentate mammal during the 1990 season. And it was Clark, who responded by referring to Canseco as contemptible sort, motivated by foolish behavior.

From their lockers on opposite sides of the Rangers' clubhouse, separated only by a red sea of carpet, each expresses nothing but professional admiration for the other.

"He's concentrating on baseball, keeping his life simple and basic, coming to the ballpark and showing what a great player he is," says Clark about a player he once knew only through box scores and newspaper stories.

"He seems to be a nice guy," is the Canseco assessment of Clark.

The clubhouse view is all that each can offer about the other. They seldom see each other out of uniform.

Though each is 30 years old, each played his first full season in 1986, each has a baseball resume filled with highlights, they have little in common outside the game.

"You know how it is," says Canseco, who makes pit stops in the clubhouse while Clark makes it a second home, "once players leave the ballpark, they have families and business to attend to."

Some days, interaction in the on-deck circle is as close as they get.

Their mere places in the batting order affect each other's performances and statistics. Canseco hits third, Clark fourth.

"He has a great on-base percentage," said Clark. "He's there on base quite a bit for me."

"Give Will Clark a lot of credit," said Canseco. "His performance dictates what pitches I see. I'm third in the league in runs scored because someone behind me is driving me in."

To hear Canseco and Clark tell their story today, their name-calling was just good clean fun from the start. Only the media, which often doesn't know a good joke when it hears one, has blown it out of proportion, they claim.

Some background:

Before Canseco and Clark arrived in Texas amid whispers that each already had entered the twilight of his career, they had been considered among the best in baseball.

In 1988, Canseco batted .307, hit 42 home runs and drove in 124 runs for the Oakland A's. He also stole 40 bases. No other player has ever hit at least 40 home runs and stolen 40 bases in the same season.

The next year, Clark batted .333 with 23 home runs and 111 RBIs.

By 1990, Giants management rewarded Clark with a contract that paid him $3.7 million a season. For a fleeting moment, Clark was the highest-paid player in baseball. In baseball, highest paid often translates into best player.

A reporter asked Canseco about Clark's contract and about who deserved to be recognized as baseball's best. The then-Oakland right fielder paused, sought the right words, remembered back to a favorite show he saw on the Discovery Channel and mentioned that he thought Clark, a first baseman who had not stolen 40 bases in his career was, "an overrated, slow, three-toed sloth with no arm."

Soon after the A's gave Canseco a new $4.7 million contract. Someone asked Clark for a comment. "I don't care," he said. "Let that jerk have all the fun over there he wants."

The media in the San Francisco-Oakland area had field days with the quotes. Reporters dutifully traveled from one side of the Bay to the other looking for reaction.

"There was never really animosity in what Jose was saying about Will," says Ray Ratto, sports columnist for the San Francisco Examiner. "Jose said he believed that there was no way the best player in baseball could be a first baseman. Jose can be very thoughtful in baseball discussions. Will's name came up. Jose was having fun. It became one of those deals where all Will heard was the punch line and the sound bites. They were the biggest baseball players in the Bay Area. Context stopped mattering."

Rangers general manager Tom Grieve, who traded for Canseco on Aug. 31, 1992, had heard stories about the Canseco-Clark non-relationship.

When it became evident after last season that the Rangers would not re-sign free-agent first baseman Rafael Palmeiro, the team's attention turned to Clark. Grieve remembered the stories.

worrying about it."

Grieve and Kennedy are quick to volunteer that on the November day when the Rangers introduced Clark as their five-year, $26.5 million first baseman, Canseco voluntarily attended the news conference.

"There is friction between a lot of players when they don't know each other well," said Grieve. "Put them on the same team, and perceptions change when they see each other a daily basis."

Said Canseco, "To tell the truth, I just wanted to see what he looked like up close. It's been awhile since I've seen a three-toed sloth in person."

"We basically went there to play nationally-ranked teams," Noyes said. "It gave us more experience versus what we're going to come up against in Salt Lake City."

In Oklahoma, the Warriors lost to the No. 6 team in the nation by 20 points. Noyes said she thinks that if they meet again, the result could be different.

"(Losing to the No. 6 team) really opened our eyes about what we need to do, and we'll be better prepared," she said.

Indians chase Bere, beat Sox

By ADAM NAZIMOWITZ

AP Sports Writer

The way the Cleveland Indians are hitting, opposing pitchers aren't long for the game.

The Indians hit six more home runs Friday night as White Sox starter Jason Bere lasted just two-thirds of an inning in Cleveland's 9-8 victory which snapped Chicago's five-game winning streak as the Indians moved within two games of AL Central lead.

Jim Thome led the way by homering in each of his first three at bats as the Indians have totaled 17 home runs in their last four games, one shy of the major league four-game record of 18 set by Boston in 1977. The six homers were one shy of the club record.

Albert Belle has homered in each of the four, and on Friday night he became the first Cleveland player ever to hit 30 home runs in three consecutive seasons.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Detroit 5, Kansas City 2; Seattle 6, Boston 3; Minnesota 6, Milwaukee 5 in 13 innings; Toronto 5, Texas 2; New York 12, California 3; and Baltimore 5, Oakland 4.

Drive on urging people to kindness

By LESLIE DREYFOUS

AP National Writer

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - Gavin Whitsett is a sort of secret operative in what he considers a guerrilla war. Partisans execute their ambushes stealthily. You may never know who paid the bridge toll for you. Or who sowed nickels in the playground sandbox, swept your elderly neighbor's sidewalk, left a bundle of blankets outside the Salvation Army, sent flowers to the convalescent home, or put doughnuts by the coffee urn.

Gavin Whitsett is only one member of a sly band, one of a growing group of people committed to contributing in some small way to making their communities better places to live.

Their call their offensive, loosely, "Random Acts of Kindness."

"It doesn't have to culminate in something, lead to something, support something," said Whitsett, a communications professor who has written a whimsical purple handbook called "Guerrilla Kindness."

It's not about much, as the author himself will tell you. He's not proposing a plan for international peace or an end to hunger. He does not hope to redefine good citizenship or remedy what ails America.

"I'm not out to evangelize," said Whitsett, a kind of overgrown flower child in comfortable sandals and a beard. "My aim is only to remind people of the kind impulses that all of us have, remind people of something they already know, which is that it feels good to act on those impulses."

Around the world, every day, great horrors are easy to find. And so, in the face of it, random acts of kindness seem to mean nothing at all.

But in capital letters, Random Acts of Kindness somehow begin to add up.

It's pretty basic stuff. Do unto others. Turn the other cheek. Or, as an online wordsmith reminded friends in cyberspace not long ago, "Good is the most contagious virus. ... one person's good behavior spawns more good."

Fine. But what does this really have to do with anything important?

Well, for whatever reasons, the idea has caught on.

Whitsett's manual, a silly sort of book that will fit in your hip pocket, is only one of several such efforts, a piece of something bigger. Oprah Winfrey has devoted a show to the idea. Citizens have written letters to their editors, and editors have assigned reporters to the story.

Anne Herbert, a San Francisco-area writer, is generally credited with coining the slogan "Practice random acts of kindness and senseless acts of beauty" in the early 1990s. A response to constant news of another "random act of violence," it has appeared on thousands of bumper stickers, one of which inspired Whitsett to join in.

A Bakersfield, Calif., college professor asked his class to commit such acts. Billboards have appeared along highways. Reader's Digest told 20 million readers, "Here's one underground movement you'll want to join."

William Damon, a psychologist and professor at Brown University in Providence, R.I., does not dismiss the call. "It's only symbolic," he said, "but we are a symbol-creating, symbol-consuming culture."

It is in small ways, through small messages, that larger strides forward sometimes begin. In a world of overwhelming troubles, guerrilla do-gooders perhaps feel they are at least taking a stand, however modest.

"These little things that remind you that people care ... are uplifting rather than degrading," said Damon, co-author with his wife of "Some Do Care: Contemporary Lives of Moral Commitment."

"It's an expression of something people feel has been diminishing in modern times - the sense that as a natural part of your everyday social life, you contribute to other people's welfare. You don't have to have a reason. ... Making another person's life better is good in and of itself."

Undertaken in that spirit, Whitsett explained, his book simply offers "some fun, neat things you can do to surprise people and feel good at the same time. That's all."

For example, among his book's suggestions:

- Write an article about opportunities for kindness in your area.
- If a friend has bad breath, buy your friend a pack of mints or gum.
- Tell your best friends that they're your best friends.

- Send flowers to your partner at his or her workplace.

- Return anything you borrow in better shape than when you received it.

- Consider leaving your body to a regional medical school.

- Wave to kids in school buses, folks sitting on their front porches, police officers, firemen, truck drivers, school crossing guards, people in other cars, hot-air balloons, on trains, and on boats.

- Buy at least $25 worth of greeting cards ... so that you'll always have the right card to send someone you care for, whatever the circumstance, as soon as you get news of the occasion.

Statistics indicate that, at best, about 45 percent of Americans volunteer their time.

Princeton sociologist Robert

Wuthnow examined questions of commitment in his book "Acts of Compassion," and found the pool of antipathy deep.

According to his research, many Americans are held back from good works by a me-against-them approach to life. The focus is on individual gain, personal success. When he asked whether people in general "are genuinely concerned about helping the needy or mostly concerned about their own activities and interests," a clear majority cast their lot with the latter.

What's the moral? To those who see things the way Whitsett does, it's a question of cynicism. And stemming the tide. Don't bite off too much of this troubled world, he advises.

"But start," he said. "The idea is to start somewhere."

Here Are A Few Choice Words From Proponents of Economic Development

We Need It!

Nancy Griego
Quality Control Mgr., HRMC

"Economic development will give Hereford the resources to attract industry and the jobs that follow expansion. In my opinion, the 1/2¢ sales tax provides the most equitable way for every individual to share in this endeavor to help our community grow."

Shirley Garrison
Hereford Businessman

"The 1/2¢ sales tax is the most feasible and fairest way to fund economic development. And we need economic development because we are forced, in today's business climate, to compete with cities which already have and use substantial tax revenues to attract new industry and new jobs."

Bob Josserand
Hereford Mayor and Businessman

"More jobs, a level playing field, more even support for accomplishing the job, moving Hereford forward, broadening the tax base; all of these things can be promoted by the passage of the Economic Development Tax."

Lajean Henry
Hereford Retailer, 24 years

"From a taxpayer's point of view, I think this tax is fair. Everyone will share in its cost and the benefits it may bring, and I think the potential rewards of the 1/2¢ sales tax far outweigh its cost."

With passage of the tax, we would then be able to afford the full-time technical assistance and aggressive industry search capabilities which are difficult to fund from business and private sectors now.

And from a retail business perspective, I don't think I have ever really perceived that Amarillo's 1/2¢ sales tax has inhibited shopping from either this market or others not having an economic development tax of their own. I don't think the tax affects consumer's shopping patterns or buying decisions."

Tom Simons
County Judge

Director, Hereford Senior Citizen's Center

Join these and other community leaders in support of economic development!

THIS ELECTION IS ABOUT:

Jobs, growth, expanding our tax base, and getting Hereford on the move.

A vote FOR THE 1/2¢ SALES TAX ON AUGUST 13TH will allow Hereford to compete, and help secure a brighter future that will benefit us all!

"The passage of an economic development tax for Hereford would allow each of us, in a small way, to contribute and participate in the process of strengthening our community's competitive ability to attract and locate new industry here. I believe the economic development tax is the best tool available to us for accomplishing our primary goal, which is not only to add new jobs for Hereford and Deaf Smith County, but also to secure the jobs we have now."

Spinks, Bode vows spoken in Arlington

Stacy Carol Spinks of Duncanville and Brandon Kurt Bode of Arlington exchanged wedding vows Saturday evening, July 16, in First Presbyterian Church in Arlington. Rev. Betsy Pense of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Louie and Janice Spinks of Duncanville. Mrs. Helen Spinks of Hereford is her maternal grandmother and her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey E. Fife of Junction. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bode of San Angelo.

The church was decorated with three large mixed-colored bouquets of pink roses, white gladioli, rubrum lilies, and two tapered candelabra with large bows and greenery which flanked the pews. The traditional unity candle was also placed at the altar.

The bride was presented in marriage by her parents.

Robin Ormand was mad of honor and best man was Joey Haddix.

Bridesmaids included Liz Smith, Jade Dean, Marisha Cooper and Monica Horton. Groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Byron and Burt Bode; Eddie Puckett; and Bill Yates.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, Brad Spinks; the groom's brother, Byron Bode; and Kevin Loveless.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Readers: Several months ago we printed one of many letters warning readers to cut yarn to no more than 2 inches in length to put out for birds to use as nesting material.

Recently, we received a letter from Stella Ventola from Edison, N.J. She writes, "Short or long yarn is hazardous to baby birds. A mother bird had a nest under the eaves of our home and a baby fell out. We made a nest for the little one using yarn and hoped the mother would feed it. We checked it periodically. Apparently the baby was hungry and, thinking the yarn was a worm, it had swallowed it. It was a long piece and in trying to pull it out, it most likely injured the bird and it died."

Stella, thanks for your letter, but it's probably not a good idea to have made a nest totally out of yarn.

It is an old wives' tale that if you handle baby bird, the mother will not return to the nest. Next time you find one, pick it up and put it back in the nest. Nine out of 10 times the mother will return to care for it. — Heloise

TRASH CAN ODORS

Dear Heloise: I thought of a great way to hide the awful smells that are known to emanate from trash cans.

All you need to do is put an auto air freshener in the bottom of the can. The little trees work great and last a long time. If you use liners in your trash cans, the air freshener can lie in the bottom under the liner and remain hidden yet still freshen the air. — Mary, Gettysburg, Pa.

SPLINTER REMOVER

Dear Heloise: I just read the suggestion to remove cactus spines from fingers and hands using mailing tape. I think my remedy is better and less painful. It was passed on to me by a construction worker and is also great for wood splinters.

Dab a small amount of school glue onto the splinter or cactus spine. Allow glue to set and then gently pull the glue away from the skin. It works great and all the tiny stickers are usually removed with one application. — Becky Myers, Savannah, Georgia

PLASTIC FUNNEL

Dear Heloise: The top third of a plastic 2-liter soda bottle works great as a funnel. I use one to put birdseed into plastic milk jugs for storage and have used one to pour leftover punch into such a jug. — Sue Aleshire, Troutville, Va.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Darryl Strawberry is going, going, gone. Strawberry has moved out of his native Los Angeles and into a $1.2 million desert retreat in Rancho Mirage.

His lawyer, Robert Shapiro, said the troubled baseball player needed to leave Los Angeles because "some people from his past may not support the new direction he is trying to take."

Strawberry, a former New York Met and Los Angeles Dodger, recently underwent treatment for substance abuse at the Betty Ford Center. He now plays for the San Francisco Giants.

Explore city with kids

If your travel plans this summer include visiting a big city, here's an idea that will make "getting there" half the fun. It's almost like a scavenger hunt that will not only take your family to exciting and sometimes exotic places, but will also help your kids learn how to read a map, street signs, and follow directions. Practicing survival skills on a family trip is a practical way for kids to put their reading, math and geography skills to use.

Before you go, get a street map of the metropolitan area you'll be exploring. Write to the Chamber of Commerce or Tourist Information Center in that area and get a "walking tour map" or street map. Many cities now have a toll-free "800" number you can call to order brochures, maps and transportation schedules, or check the map section of local bookstores.

Freeze your jam for later

Biting into the season's juicy sweet cherries and golden apricots is hard to beat. Unless, of course, you put them together in this freezer jam. Stash a jar of this rosy spread in the refrigerator for your family to enjoy right now, then freeze the rest. Months from today, you can still savor sweet spoonfuls of summer.

Cherry-Apricot Freezer Jam
1 pound fully ripe apricots, halved and pitted (2 cups)
1/2 pound dark sweet cherries, pitted (1-1/4 cups)
4 cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon almond extract
3/4 cup water
One 1-3/4-ounce package regular powdered fruit pectin

Wash apricot halves and cherries; drain thoroughly in a colander. Finely chop the fruit. (You should have a total of about 2-1/2 cups chopped fruit.) In a medium mixing bowl stir together the chopped fruit, sugar, lemon juice and almond extract. Cover loosely; let the mixture stand for 10 minutes.

In a small saucepan stir together the water and powdered fruit pectin. Heat and stir over high heat until the mixture reaches a full rolling boil. Boil, uncovered, for 1 minute. Immediately pour the hot pectin mixture over the fruit; stir constantly for 3 minutes.

Ladle the fruit mixture into hot, clean half-pint jars or freezer containers, leaving a half-inch headspace at the top of each container. Seal the containers tightly. Wipe the containers and the lids. Label each with the recipe name and the date. Let the containers stand at room temperature about 24 hours or until the jam is set. Store for up to 3 weeks in the refrigerator or for up to 1 year in the freezer. Makes 6 half-pints.

Cavender, Evans wed in Albuquerque July 9

The Rio Rancho Presbyterian Church in Albuquerque, N.M., was the site of the marriage of Phoenix, Ariz. residents, Karen Renée Cavender and Douglas Lee Evans. The wedding was performed by the Rev. Jack Strickland of Albuquerque Saturday afternoon, July 9.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cavender of Alamogordo, N.M. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Evans of Hereford and is the grandson of Hack and Alta Stephens and Ethel Riley all of Hereford.

The church was decorated by a candelabrum accented with greenery and star gazer lilies. Baskets of spring flowers further enhanced the wedding setting.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father.

Sharon Cavender Lozano of San Antonio served as her twin sister's matron of honor. Best man was the groom's brother, Dennis Eugene Evans of Albuquerque.

Laurie Brown Williams of Albuquerque was bridesmaid and groomsman was Samuel Boren, also of Albuquerque.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, Mark Cavender of San Antonio. Candles were lit by Dennis Evans and Samuel Boren.

Mrs. Elwyn Hall of Alamogordo accompanied Kae Bacon of Albuquerque as she sang "The Wedding Song," "Walk Hand in Hand With Me" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was attired in a white silk shantung wedding gown with a sweetheart neckline and puffed short sleeves. It also featured a sheath skirt with a chapel-length train.

In her hair, the bride wore a pouf lace veil attached to a pearl wreath. She carried a hand-tied bouquet of spring flowers: fuschia roses, star gazer lilies and purple snapdragons.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length fuschia dresses fashioned with sweetheart necklines. They carried bouquets similar to the bridal bouquet.

Martha Cavender of San Antonio invited guests to register at the reception held at the Rio Rancho Country club.

The bridal couple cut the wedding cake which was served by the country club staff. Punch and coffee were also served.

The three-tiered white wedding cake was created with strawberries and whipped cream filling and was decorated with fresh flowers on top.

Following their honeymoon to the Bahamas and a three-day stay at Disney World, the couple resides in Phoenix, Ariz.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of Alamogordo High School. She graduated from New Mexico State University in 1991 with a bachelor's degree in accounting and a bachelor's degree in business administration. She is currently employed by KPMG Peat Marwick in Phoenix, Ariz. as a certified public accountant and supervising senior accountant.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents Friday evening before the wedding ceremony at El Pinto Restaurant in Albuquerque. Following the event, guests were invited to the home of Dennis Evans for dessert and coffee.

Harder places in contest

Deaf Smith County 4-H'er Karen Harder was named as a finalist in the Texas Beef Ambassador Contest held recently in College Station. It was sponsored by the National and Texas Cattlemen's Association and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Harder gave a promotional demonstration on "Beef--The Total Picture" and presented a recipe featuring beef. Twelve 4-H members from the state were invited to participate in the final competition with six finalists named. Harder is available to civic clubs or other groups through the summer months to present this demonstration as a public service program.

Health reform essential

Michael, now 15 years old, started "acting out" when he was in grade school and it became progressively worse.

By the time he reached junior high, he was fighting in school, swearing at teachers, disrupting classes and skipping school. Some of this aggression is now uncontrolled and is spilling into his home life. He is even becoming more physical with his mother.

He is one of up to 12 million children nationally who require mental health assistance. Unfortunately, Michael is unable to obtain the care he needs. The reason: His mother is a single parent who has lost her job and thus, her health insurance.

"It's frustrating to know that there may be a program out there--that I can't get to--that may help him become that happy child that I used to see everyday," says his mother.

Jimmy Middlebrook, Ph.D., a psychologist from Atlanta, speaks about his daily frustrations in trying to deal with obstacles that are preventing him from treating children that are in need of help.

"The worst part is when you have a highly motivated parent whose has need for treatment and wants to get it for their child, but can't get reimbursed for it and can't afford it on their own," says Dr. Middlebrook.

Even those parents who do have insurance find that getting appropriate care for their children is difficult.

"The irony of these situations is," explains Dr. Middlebrook, "if these parents have insurance for mental health care, the insurance companies may be willing to reimburse them for costly inpatient care but won't for less costly, outpatient care that may be even more appropriate for their child."

How common is Michael's case? According to Russ Newman, Ph.D., J.D., of the American Psychological Association (APA), too common. "These unfortunate situations are documented all the time in a mental health system that is failing its patients," says Dr. Newman. "This is why it is absolutely essential that the health care reform legislation mandates coverage for all Americans and it must contain appropriate mental health benefits."

The American Psychological Association and other health care providers and consumers are binding together to work in helping congress understand what's at stake as they prepare to make difficult and important decisions about health care reform.

"Definitely, being an athlete," he says. "There's nothing inherently good in being famous."

Shue was a soccer standout at Dartmouth, played professionally in Zimbabwe and played last year on the L.A. United professional indoor soccer team. He was playing two nights recently with the Splash of the indoor league.

The games benefit Do Something, Shue's non-profit organization which provides grants to individuals to enact change in their communities.

"He can play," said Splash defender Doug Neely. "He takes his soccer pretty seriously."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a manicurist and nail care consultant. The letter signed "Fed Up in California" infuriated me. "Fed" made several derogatory remarks about long fingernails, which I found personally insulting.

Each one of my nails is now over 14 inches long. Yes, that's right—over a foot long. My nails are not dirt catchers, and neither are they monstrosities. They pose no hazard to others.

It has taken five years for my nails to get this long, and I plan to let them grow indefinitely. I'd love to have nails in the 18 to 20-inch range. Some people don't like my nails, but I like them, and that's all that matters.—San Francisco

DEAR SAN FRAN: The concept of 14-inch fingernails is more than I can grasp. How do you button a blouse? Put on pantyhose? Thread a needle? The list of questions is endless.

My readers had a lot to say on this subject. Take a look:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Fed Up in California" barely scratched the surface of the problem of long fingernails. I once had a female intern with long claws. Her attempt to examine me was cut short when I walked out. Even rubber gloves would not have protected me. There is no way she could have performed a competent exam with such long nails.

When I see mothers with extra-long nails, I think of the tasks they have to perform and wonder how they manage. I also think of the scratches that are inevitable on their precious little babies.

How can employers allow long nails, I think of the tasks they have to perform and wonder how they manage.

How can employers allow long nails in the health care and food preparation industries? They are definitely a hazard, and rubber gloves won't fit over the talons. Sign me—Short and Sweet

DEAR S and S: I, too, am mystified. Keep reading:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to add to the letter from "Fed Up," who said long fingernails don't belong in the workplace.

When I needed extra money, I took a job at a nursing home near the hospital where I worked as a nurse. There were several practical nurses working at this home. Two of these women had extraordinarily long nails with fake gems imbedded in or glued onto them.

Part of the nurses' job entailed putting their fingers in some rather delicate places. I can't imagine anything more uncomfortable or more unsanitary.—Ocean Springs, Miss.

DEAR OCEAN SPRINGS: Neither can I. Where were their supervisors?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 31-year-old male who has been reading your column since I was in high school—and I don't hide it under the sports page.

That letter on long fingernails brought back some memories. When I was in college, I was very much taken with a girl who had unusually long nails. I suggested one evening that she file them down to "normal" length. To spite me, she let them grow much longer.

Finally, I got fed up and told her it was me or the nails. She chose the nails. The following week, I met a beautiful young woman who played the harp at my cousin's wedding. The first thing I noticed was her lovely short nails. You guessed it. We fell in love, and I married her the following year.—FoxRiver, Ill.

DEAR FOX: How delightful. You might say she nailed you!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 34-year-old man who has spent the last eight years incarcerated in the New York correctional system.

I started drinking and doing drugs as a teenager. For those young people who read your column and think this cannot happen to them, let me assure them that it can. If they continue drinking and using drugs, sooner or later, it will catch up with them.

My worst pain was being locked up in prison when my parents needed me. My mother was dying in the hospital, and I was given a pass so I could see her for the last time. I was shackled like an animal and brought to her bedside for a final farewell.

Four years later, again shackled, I was taken to see my father on his deathbed. He died the next week, and I was not permitted to attend his funeral.

I can't describe the feelings I live with daily. My wife has stood by me, and I am grateful. I will be released soon and will go directly to the cemetery to visit my parents' graves and ask them to forgive me. The bigger question is: How do I forgive myself for bringing such disgrace to my family?

I hope every teenager who reads this will realize that they run the risk of being in my place if they continue to mess with drugs. I, too, thought it could never happen to me.—Staten Island, N.Y.

DEAR NEW YORK: Here's your plea. I hope somebody listens.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Once again, a total stranger knocked on the window of my car to ask if I knew I was parked in a space reserved for the handicapped. I replied, "Of course I know. If you'll look, you'll see that I have handicapped license plates."

This stranger's response was "I didn't know there were special plates for handicapped people." Then, the idiot had the nerve to ask, "What is wrong with you?" I told him it was none of his business.

Please, Ann, let people know that in some states, the car owner may opt for license plates instead of a window placard. And tell them, too, that it is extremely rude to demand that a total stranger reveal his or her medical history.

Thanks for letting me blow off steam.—Sycamore, Ill.

DEAR SYCAMORE: Thanks for blowing the steam in this direction. Your letter is another reminder that the only exercise some people get is running their mouths and jumping to conclusions.

Youth is honored

Jessica Reyes, 8-year-old granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe S. Soliz, exhibits her bookmark design that was chosen as one of two from Deaf Smith County Library to be represented on bookmarks distributed in the Texas Panhandle. Jessica is visiting Hereford this summer from Roswell, N.M.

Pleated, crinkled look 'hot' for this fall

Donna Karan crunched silk jacquard resort wear in a microwave. Issey Miyake created Pleats Please, a collection of micro-pleated polyester, and Han Feng, who started with pleated and crinkled scarves five years ago, has expanded into ready-to-wear.

Are all of these wrinkles an extension of deconstruction, the unkempt look top designers were determined to de-create a couple of seasons back? Or is the idea an attempt to appeal to a generation that doesn't give a hanger about a well-pressed wardrobe?

Valerie Steele, professor at New York's Fashion Institute of Technology, says it's not that complex. It's just a case of looking for something new.

"The tendency has always been to press clothing smooth," Steele says. "Any kind of surface flaw, as it were, has been frowned on. But no longer."

While designers have found beauty in imperfection, consumers have found a practical element, particularly for traveling. Just roll it up into a ball, throw it into the suitcase, unpack it and wear it.

"The wrinkle trend started with all the sheer fabrics and soft, fluid, gauzy dressing," says David Nutterfield, fashion director for I. Magnin in San Francisco. "It's a whole texture story in synthetics such as polyester and acetate that help hold onto the wrinkles."

New York designer Mary McFadden some years ago staked her fashion business on little pleats. But Donna Karan's foray into pleats last winter was short-lived. She found the microwave oven impractical for finishing fabrics.

Because these permanent wrinkles and mini pleats don't cling, they're body-friendly and work on almost any silhouette, from long floral dresses to pull-on skirts, tank tops and pajama pants.

They work not only in synthetics but in washed silks and linens. For fall, there'll be wrinkled wool and nubby knits and, from Tokyo and Comme des Garcons, a disheveled velvet.

Nutterfield says Issey Miyake is currently I. Magnin's No. 1 source for pleats. Other sources are Giorgio Armani, Comme des Garcons and Romeo Gigli.

From Han Feng, tiny folds of polyester georgette give new personality to simple silhouettes such as tank tops, slip dresses, long slim skirts, miniskirts, bicycle shorts and sheer coats.

"It's great for summer because it's so easy to wear," says the New York designer by way of China. "It's all based on textural interest, and you don't need to have a perfect body. It's as easy as taking a pleated long skirt and adding a Gap T-shirt for day and a silk top for evening."

Modern though they may look, pleats are anything but new.

Broomstick skirt... popular for square dancing in the 1940s, got their name from the way they were pleated. Made of lightweight cotton, often a calico print, they were washed, wrapped around a broomstick while still wet and tied tightly with string to create vertical wrinkles like tiny pleats.

The oldest extant piece of clothing is a pleated linen Egyptian shirt, which is several thousand years old, Steele says.

"People have always loved the way pleats are carefully and architecturally imposed on cloth," she says.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Did you happen to watch the Summer Freedom Celebration, a patriotic musical on ACTS IV? It was an excellent show, involving all ages, which emphasized our nation being founded on God's principles. I say nothing in it that would prevent it being a good teaching aid.

Sherry Walker went to Austin in Ginger Wallace's place who was to go in my place! Sherry, like Ginger, was an excellent choice. She is a very innovative teacher in the art department at HJH. We'll report on their trip within the next two weeks.

A reminder—materials and supply lists for junior high students will be available as students register. If a course does not have a listing, it would be wise to wait until going to class and get the information from the individual teacher. You can save yourself some money by waiting for this information as many times students bring materials that they do not need and some that we prefer they not have at school at all.

Jim Moudy, who moved to Breckenridge with his family in January, called last week from happy where he is working this summer. He was anxious to catch up on all the news from Hereford and reported that they are beginning to feel at home there. We really miss them, especially in the area of History Fair and Junior Historians.

Since there have been some more changes in the faculty for the 1994-1995 school year, we will wait for a more complete list before reporting on this area. We do know that the math department will have at least two new teachers and there are changes in the history, reading and English departments.

Seventh grade athletes should have their physicals BEFORE school starts. Please don't fail to take care of this, as you should not miss classes for physicals after school begins.

Probably one of the main reasons that our country was founded on God's principles is that 52 of the 55 founders of this nation were professing Christians and were active in their churches. Some schools, public schools—if you will notice, are adopting resolutions that morals, manners, citizenship and patriotism will be taught throughout the system. Since this seems necessary in so many areas, it is easy to see that the greatest battle for this country is happening today.

We must remember that our youth are our country's future. Let's train them well and set the examples that will ensure a bright future for all!

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: During the Vietnam War, I was vaccinated against hepatitis. I have never been jaundiced or been terribly sick. However, during a recent blood test, I was told I showed positive to hepatitis B (core antibodies). The doctor assured me the test result was due to the vaccine I got back then. Is this correct? Is there danger of my transmitting the core antibody? — S.C.

ANSWER: Let me try to reconstruct your story and the history of hepatitis B vaccine to see if they match.

The vaccine was first licensed in 1981, but was not generally available until 1982. I am assuming that you were in Vietnam earlier than 1981. Before then, soldiers were given gamma globulin preventive shots, not a vaccine. The globulin was to prevent hepatitis A.

That's one point. The other is complex. It is that the B vaccine, if you got that, would have caused a rise in the hepatitis "s" (surface) antibodies, not the "c" (core) kind, the kind your test found. Almost always, it's the "c" antibody finding that indicates past infection. Rarely, it can indicate that the person tested is a carrier.

To settle these matters, you need other tests. My bet is that you will find that you had a hepatitis B infection, which is over and done with, needs no treatment and does not mean you are a carrier. But with the meager information in your note, I cannot be dogmatic. Get the tests.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My wife has cluster headaches. We would like to know more about this. She has headaches for about two or three weeks, then they go away for a week or so, with no pain. — H.P.

ANSWER: It's a bit unusual for a woman to have cluster headaches, which happen chiefly to men.

Patients have one or more attacks a day, often an explosive pain behind an eye, quickly reaching a crescendo, then lasting 30 minutes to a few hours. The pain-side eye tears, and the nasal passage might get plugged up—all in all a devastating experience.

Breathing pure oxygen can help some patients, and medicines used for migraines might be useful. The new migraine drug sumatriptan is an example. Lidocaine, a numbing agent, can be helpful in nose-drop form.

Between waves of attacks, preventive medicines such as lithium, verapamil or prednisone can be used.

Allergy sufferers can still enjoy outdoors

When allergies become unbearable at home, hit the road—take off and leave allergies in the dust! One way to avoid the source of your allergy is to literally leave it behind and travel to a region with better conditions. Since it usually takes about two years to develop allergies indigenous to any region, even short trips can be a step in the right direction. And, don't forget to pack an over-the-counter antihistamine/decongestant, or the medication prescribed by your doctor.

If traveling by car, keep the windows closed. Select a model of transportation that has air-conditioning; it filters irritants and pollens from the air.

A beach anywhere is one of the best places to visit, especially along the Caribbean and American coastlines.

In the United States, try to plan your destination in hot and dry areas. Among the best choices is rural Arizona.

Areas of high elevation (over 5,000 feet) are good, as the altitude and relative cold reduce pollens and airborne allergens. Mountain ranges and areas in Northern California are recommended vacation spots.

Avoid camping and hiking in the woods, where mold growth on rotted logs and other vegetation is high. If camping is in your plans, make sure to wash your sleeping bags in very hot water before leaving.

Clean beach houses and cabins early in the season, as mold and house dust mite levels increase during the off-season.

At a spa, avoid the steam room, another "hot spot" for mold.

Hotel rooms should be cleaned daily to prevent mold and dust buildup, and always request smoke-free hotel rooms.

When shopping, avoid antique shops, where dust and mold can literally have hundreds of years to accumulate.

Inventor Dr. Peter Goldmark of CBS Laboratories demonstrated the first long-playing record in 1948.

SADDLING A NIGHTMARE

(Last of two parts)

Government growth and the ever-increasing avalanche of regulations and regulatory agencies is the single biggest threat to the health of our economy. Last week, we cited some government regulations that would not pass a stupidity test. We also provided examples of how industries are overrun with bureaucratic rules written and enforced by unnecessary agencies.

We pointed out how the additional rules and regulations provided job security for government employees. Nearly every new government job is nonproductive. Though many government workers are diligent, and work long hours, we should never confuse activity with productivity.

Let me illustrate this concept with a true story from my farm days. Once we had a cow that was barren. The cow worked as hard as the other cow eating grass, digesting it and producing a proper amount of waste. (I hope you're following the analogy here.) The cost of care and feeding continued, but no calf was born. Without hope of profit or added value, the farm could not support the cow. So, we ate it.

Over regulation

Good examples of pervasive government regulations are found in the areas of protecting our environment and increasing the safety of workers. Both are worthy objectives. No small business owner I know wants to foul the air or see his or her employees injured. However, the rules written to ensure employee's safety contain some pretty stupid aspects.

For example, companies are required to provide "Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS)" on all hazardous materials used in the business. These lists include harmful substances such as acids and poisonous materials. However, they also include some pretty silly things.

I have a copy of a four-page form one company uses to meet federal requirements for hazardous materials. The form I have is for sand - crystalline silica. You probably never suspected that when you're walking barefoot on the beach enjoying the cool ocean breeze that you're exposing your feet to a "hazardous materials" covered by government regulations.

Sand is pretty safe. It has no boiling point, does not evaporate, is not soluble in water and is not toxic. It is stable and compatible with all other materials, is not flammable and won't explode. So what is the hazard? From what I can tell, you shouldn't eat large quantities or suck it up your nose.

What else does government protect us from? Dishwashing soap. Yes, it's on the list. You should not put Joy liquid detergent in your eyes according to the Procter and Gamble's MSDS. It may cause stinging, tearing, itching and redness. The company also recommends against ingestion. That's right, drinking Joy may cause "transient gastrointestinal irritation." (The upside is you'll have really clean bowels.)

Reining in the nightmare

How do we slow the growth of bureaucracy and stop the nightmare? Four easy steps.

First, become informed. Learn about specific laws and have a negative impact on your business and future.

Second, join organizations like your local Chamber of Commerce or the National Federation of Independent Business and get active in the process. Many silly rules and regulations are swept through Congress because no one cares enough to stop them.

Third, write to your elected officials. Be specific about the laws that need revision. Most want to help, but they need our direction. Let them know you've had enough. It won't hurt to let them know you're registered to vote.

Fourth, be an informed voter and vote. Get the voting records of your elected officials. If they have a history of "going along to get along," help them get along. Get a long vacation, that is.

We can still run the government. But to do so we must move from passive to active mode.

Dryland cotton feels drought effects

LUBBOCK - Scattered mid-July showers have been welcomed by area cotton farmers of the Texas High and Rolling Plains even though most places have received only a trace of rain.

County extension agents around the area said that most of their counties had not seen rain since May and that with the recent showers, there has been high wind and some hail.

"Hardeman County in the last couple of weeks received two to three inches of rain, except with the rain was lots of high winds which burned some cotton," said Douglas Wilson, county agent.

A cotton agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Kater Hake, said, "The survival instinct of High Plains dryland cotton has astounded everybody. Cotton plants are still alive two months after planting into dust-dry soil with only two inches of rain."

Hake observed, though, that at this time of the year, the plant needs to do more than just stay alive, it needs to retain squares, blooms and bolls." He said yield prospects will decline unless July brings rain to the dryland crop.

Another agent, Richard Spencer of Fisher County, reported, "The dryland cotton is in pretty bad shape because we have not had a rain since May."

And, John Farris, Dawson County agent, emphasizes that dryland cotton needs rain in the next two weeks to stay alive.

While irrigated cotton seems to be doing well despite temperatures reaching above the 100-degree mark, dryland fields are feeling the stress of the heat.

Hake noted that subsoil moisture is lacking and if July does not bring rain, fields will suffer water stress during peak bloom.

"During the next month, irrigated cotton will pass through the most critical stage for moisture, because two factors collide during this period: the plant's greatest sensitivity to fruit shedding water stress and the plant's greatest daily water use," said Hake.

High temperatures have been rough on the plants, but there is an upside to the cotton crop -- there's been a slowdown of insects.

Boll weevils have not been bad in most counties, although some treatments will be needed when rains return, said Dr. Jim Leser, extension entomologist.

Progress seen in south's crop

By KIMBERLY A.C. WILSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 1994 cotton crop is progressing well despite recent flooding in Georgia and Alabama and prices showed a decline, the Agriculture Department says.

Current estimates place the 1994 cotton production at 18 million bales.

Two new reports by USDA's Economic Research Service said 82 percent of the domestic crop was usable, compared with 78 percent in 1993 and a five-year average of 71 percent.

"In mid-July, 74 percent of the crop was rated good or excellent, compared with 62 percent last year," the report said. "Although some acreage has been affected by flooding ... these early season conditions support favorable crop prospects."

U.S. crop production was highest in Louisiana, Arizona, New Mexico and Mississippi, followed by Georgia, with the highest yield of its five-year average. Alabama cotton progress was somewhat lower than its five-year average.

The Commerce Department forecast May cotton mill use at 951,000 bales, up about 7.5 percent from April and up 9 percent from May 1993.

"Mill business is reported continuing well, especially for denim, with mills operating near full capacity," the report said. "Despite the dramatic rise in domestic cotton consumption, the share of fiber use on the cotton system has remained relatively stable."

Daily domestic mill use averaged more than 43,000 bales during May, the highest use since 1950.

Average cotton prices fell to 60.77 cents per pound in June from the previous month's average of 69.3 cents per pound.

"Although the first decline since last September, the mid-June average remains over 7 cents above a year ago. Spot prices also fell slightly in June," the report said. "Despite the first drop this season, spot prices remain more than 20 cents above last June."

Producers are taking advantage of the relatively higher prices, it said. By July, 30 percent of the 1994 crop had been contracted, compared with only 5 percent from the same time last year.

Mill-delivered cotton prices also dropped by 3 cents per pound in June to an average of 82.6 cents per pound. But rayon and polyester staple prices remained steady at $1.11 and 76 cents per pound, respectively.

The adjusted world price remained lower than the May's season-high of 72.42 per pound. The adjusted world price fell for four weeks in June and early July to about 66.09 cents per pound.

Prices also declined in northern Europe. The so-called Cotlook A Index averaged a penny lower during June than in May to 85.1 cents per pound.

In 1565, a Spanish expedition landed at what is now St. Augustine, Fla., and established the first permanent European settlement in North America.

'Northern Exposure' still lighting up Monday nights

Rob Morrow plays Dr. Joel Fleischman, a native New Yorker forced to practice medicine in tiny Cicely, Alaska, in "Northern Exposure," airing Mondays on CBS. The show is about to begin its sixth season on the air after debuting as a summer replacement series and returning the following spring.

BY SUZANNE GILL

"Northern Exposure" and "Twin Peaks" came to television within three months of one another in 1990. Both productions had set up shop in rural Washington state, less than 50 miles apart. Their remote settings and unpredictable characters seemed to embody the possibilities the new decade held.

"Northern Exposure," airing Mondays on CBS, is preparing for a sixth season with its original ensemble cast intact. "Twin Peaks" rode the bubble only as far as the spring of 1991.

The difference, it seems, has to do with the mixture of individuality and community in "Northern Exposure." Folks in Cicely, Alaska, where the series is set, are generally both tolerant and loyal. Consequently, town physician Joel Fleischman (Rob Morrow) and air taxi pilot Maggie O'Connell (Janine Turner) recently declared a truce in their sexually tense feuding.

"It was time to have some growth in their relationship," executive producer Andrew Schneider says.

"We felt we could bring them closer together, maintaining some of the edge in their relationship, but have them grow as people."

In fact, Morrow and Turner requested the change. "We were all feeling that the bickering had gone far enough," says David Chase, who, with Schneider and Diane Frolov, heads up the show's creative team.

Perhaps the key to the series' success is its sense of humor. If the coincidence of the shows' origins piqued the "Peaks" producers at all, they didn't say so. But "Exposure" creators Joshua Brand and John Falsey took an early opportunity to put Joel in a ranger station with a pair of binoculars, with which he espied a piece of cherry pie and several other telltale talmans of the other show.

On the other hand, it might be the spirit of adventure the characters possess into their 40s, 50s and 60s.

Take Maurice Minnifield (Barry Corbin). Retired from NASA, Maurice seems to view Alaska as the final frontier on Earth.

"I think," Corbin says, "that Maurice is an astronaut sort of parenthetically. He likes to think of himself as one of the original astronauts, but in his temperament he's more of a test pilot, more of a buccaneer."

"There's a very strong pull (in all of us) to test the limits of human possibility. It has to do with immortality."

"Northern Exposure" may not be immortal, but it is going into syndication this fall.

As for the direction of the series, Schneider says, "To tell you the truth we really are very much up in the air about story ideas for next season."

"I think we need new challenges," Corbin says, "or it's gonna get stale. My new challenge as an actor is to make whatever they come up with work."

One episode that is planned will take the cast back to 1920s Cicely and feature a visit from Vladimir Lenin. "It's a little-known fact," Schneider says, "that he visited Cicely in the '20s, about a year before he died."

Despite the change in Joel and Maggie's relationship, the producers say they rarely consult the actors. Corbin, the author of several plays, puts it this way:

"They don't much want to hear from me about the writing. I do (comment), but more times than not it's more of an argument than a collaboration."

"Whatever it is, it seems to work pretty well, so I don't think we need to mess with it a whole lot."

How was it invented?

We didn't always have refrigerators, TVs and microwaves. All of these were invented by imaginative people. Find out below how many everyday items and activities came about.

* Tires: Invented by John Boyd Dunlop in 1888. He was a horse vet and discovered the tire by accident when he tried to attach air-inflated rubber tires to the wheels of his son's bicycle.
* Duplicating machine: James Watt wanted to increase his business correspondence. In 1773 he invented a machine that reproduced several copies of one document.

* Ball-point pen: Invented in 1938 by H. Biro. This Hungarian journalist was impressed that ink dried so quickly and decided to try a prototype. He patented this now-essential item in 1943.

* Volleyball: William G.

Morgan, an American YMCA athletic instructor, first called the game "Mimonette" when he invented it in 1895.

* Thermometer: In 1612 the famous astronomer and physicist, Galileo, invented this necessary item. The medical thermometer, however, was invented in 1626 by an Italian physician, Santorius.

* Chiropractic: In 1897, an American hypnotist, Daniel David Palmer, founded the first school after having cured patients by putting pressure on their backs.

* Antibiotics: The moldy curd of soy beans appears to have been the first crude antibiotic; it was used by the Chinese about 500 B.C. for treating carbuncles, boils and related infections. The first modern antibiotic, penicillin, was discovered in 1928 by the Scottish bacteriologist Sir Alexander Fleming.

LET'S TALKLisa Hartman Black is bewitching; line dancing enthusiasts spout off

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: About a month ago, I thought "Entertainment Tonight" briefly mentioned that the little girl who played Tabitha on "Bewitched" was Lisa Hartman Black. Could you please confirm or deny this story for me? -Kristi Pointer, Oregon City, Ore.

A: The role of Tabitha Stephens as an infant was originally played by identical twins Heidi and Laura Gentry, and then by Tamar and Julie Young.

In the fall of 1966, 2-year-old twins Erin and Diane Murphy took over the role, with Erin later handling the role solo.

Hartman Black starred in a short-lived, late 1970s spin-off of "Bewitched" titled "Tabitha." She played the nose-twitching, grown-up daughter of Darrin and Samantha Stephens.

Q: Could you please tell me the name of the actress who plays Billy on "Days of Our Lives" and give me an address where I can write to her? -J.B., Plainview, Texas.

A: Lisa Rinna is the name you're looking for. You can write to her C/O "Days" at NBC TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

Q: I would like an address where I can write to Geraldo Rivera and Sally Jesse Raphael. -Marie Shaner, Neponset, Ill.

A: Write to Rivera at 555 W. 57th St., 11th Floor, New York, N.Y. 10019.

You can reach Raphael at 510 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q: How can I write to The Nashville Network and ask them if they would show more line dancing? We are tired of watching couples dance on "Club Dance." More line dancing! -(Name withheld, Beaumont, Texas.)

A: Voice your yearnings for line dancing by writing to The Nashville Network, 2806 Opryland Drive, Nashville, Tenn. 37214.

Q: Could you please tell me if the ABC series "Thea," "George" and "Sister, Sister" will be back on the air? -S.C., Natchitoches, La

Armchair audiences can relish Rudnick and his priceless 'Addams Family Values'

BY JOHN CROOK

Video fans have a chance to catch up on "Addams Family Values," one of the hippest comedies of the 1993-94 movie year.

Unlike recent TV-spawned movies "The Flintstones" and "Maverick," racking up considerable box office grosses, "Values" didn't do as well in theaters as it should have last year.

In fact, some critics fretted that "Values," written by Paul Rudnick, one of the funniest men writing today, was too hip for the mass audience. (Premiere magazine readers may not realize that Rudnick is the fictitious Libby Gelman-Waxner, the defiantly Jewish wife and mother who writes the column "If You Ask Me.")

Unlike the 1991 hit "The Addams Family," which was an almost plotless series of gags lifted directly from Charles Addams' New Yorker cartoons, "Addams Family Values" has a witty and genuinely satiric screenplay that follows two principal story lines. In one, Uncle Fester (Christopher

"It is all still kind of weird to me. It is hard to get used to people making a fuss over who I am, but they do," he says. "I've been lucky. Most all of the fans I've come across have been respectful of my privacy. They are very nice. To be honest I have trouble saying no to anyone who wants my autograph, because I'm like, 'You want my autograph?' It is really flattering, because when you are here working day to day you don't have any idea what people think of you."

Dattilo has grown to appreciate his time off.

"I enjoy doing the things that I used to do too much of, like watching TV, hanging out with my friends and playing basketball," he says.

Unmarried, Dattilo says he used to have an image of the perfect woman.

"Now I'm looking for someone who is nice and that I am comfortable spending time with. I don't have all those expectations anymore."
