Greenspan says more interest rate increases may be on the horizon

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan warned Congress today that interest rates may need to move higher to ensure that inflation remains in check. In May, the last time the central bank pushed rates up, it said it had substantially finished its course of monetary tightening. But, since then, it's become clear that economic growth has raced ahead at a pace appreciably faster than it can maintain without worsening inflation, Greenspan said in testimony prepared for the Senate Banking Committee. "It is an open question whether our actions to date have been sufficient to head off inflationary pressures and thus maintain favorable trends in the economy," he said. Greenspan carefully avoided saying rates definitely would rise, or when the move would occur, but he vowed to quash any "upsurge in inflationary instabilities." "We are determined to prevent such an outcome, and currently are monitoring economic and financial data carefully to assess whether additional (interest rate) adjustments are appropriate," he said. "The amount of slack in the economy, while difficult to judge, appears to have become relatively small," he said. Private economists say such a move could come as soon as next month. The central bank's policy-making Federal Open Market Committee next meets on Aug. 16. That would be an ideal time, politically, to increase interest rates, economists said. Both President Clinton and Congress are expected to be on vacation. "There will be less political heat because everyone's away," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

So far this year, the Fed has pushed up short-term interest rates by 1.25 percentage points, in four steps between February and May. In response, the prime rate at banks, which serves as a benchmark for many consumer rates, went from 6 percent to 7.25 percent. Economists say the Fed's goal is to keep growth from getting out of hand and creating shortages in factory capacity and in labor markets, developments that eventually would worsen inflation. In Greenspan's testimony today, part of the Fed's legally required twice-a-year report to Congress, he argued that allowing inflation to increase eventually would choke off growth, rather than enhance it. "An increase in inflation would come at considerable cost: We would lose hard-won ground that would be difficult to recapture later (and) our long-run economic performance would be impaired," he said.

Commission okays $200,000 in bids for new water wells

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer
Bids totaling $200,023 were awarded a Hereford firm Tuesday for drilling two new water supply wells for the city. Wall and Sons submitted the bid for the wells, in the Santa Rosa and Ogallala formations. Site of the new wells is in Buena Vista Park, in west Hereford. The City Commission awarded the contract at a special meeting, held at noon Tuesday. Joe Shehan of the engineering firm of McMorries and Associates, Inc., of Amarillo, reported that another bidder, Big T Pump, failed to submit a complete bid. Since the two wells will be drilled in close proximity, a single test hole will determine availability of water at two depths. The long-range plan for water development for the City of Hereford includes nine new wells into the Ogallala formation and three into the Santa Rosa formation. The water development program is being funded by proceeds of the sale of $3 million in water revenue bonds last fall. A new million-gallon water storage facility, costing $662,000; two wells drilled at a cost of approximately $189,000 and a supply line, $113,000, already have been completed in the program. In other business, the commission approved a zoning change, recommended by the planning and zoning board, to change designation of 711 N. Main from multi-family to restricted commercial retail. Speaking to the commission during the public comments portion of the meeting, Don Tardy, Hereford realtor, asked if the city is interested in a donation of an eight-acre tract for use as a park. He said the Burgess Estate owns the property between 14th and 15th, east of Avenue F. Mayor Pro Tem Roger Eades, presiding in the absence of Mayor Bob Josseland, thanked Tardy for the offer but told him that the commission would need time to study the proposal before making a decision.

Donna Gudgell given sentence at hearing

In a three-minute session in 22nd District Court Wednesday, a Deaf Smith County homemaker, Donna Gudgell, 48, convicted of the murder of her husband last September, was sentenced formally to 35 years in prison. A 22nd District Court jury found her guilty of murder in a verdict returned on June 28. The jury set punishment at 35 years in Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division and levied a $5,000 fine. District Judge David Wesley Gulley pronounced sentence Wednesday morning, after receiving a pre-sentencing investigation as required by law.

The defendant has 30 days in which to file notice of an appeal of the judgment. Gudgell must serve at least half of the sentence, with no time off for good behavior, before she is eligible for parole. Trial of Gudgell on the murder charge began with jury selection on June 20. She was accused of planning the murder of her husband, Bill Gudgell, 50, who died of a single gunshot wound on Sept. 12. Main witness against the defendant was Chris Don Barron, 24, who admitted he fired the shot into Gudgell's head late on Sept. 11. The victim died in an Amarillo hospital early on Sept. 12. Barron accepted a plea bargain agreement from Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul in return for his testimony against Donna Gudgell. He also was sentenced to 35 years in prison. Both defendants admitted to a sexual affair that began when Barron was in high school and lived with the Gudgell family in northwest Deaf Smith County. In his testimony during the trial, Barron insisted that he shot Bill Gudgell at the instigation of the victim's wife, Donna Gudgell claimed she had no part in planning the shooting.

Simpson to give $250,000 reward for information about 'real killer'

By ANNIE SHOOMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - O.J. Simpson will offer a $250,000 reward to help police locate "the real killer" of his ex-wife and her friend, according to TV reports. Today's New York Newsday reported that preliminary DNA tests of blood found on the door and inside Simpson's Ford Bronco show it is consistent with Simpson's blood, not that of the victims. Newsday quoted unidentified sources who also said that if the findings hold, that could make it much harder to convict Simpson. Simpson's reward will be offered for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the killings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, KNBC and NBC News reported Tuesday. The Associated Press' repeated calls to the offices, homes and cars of Simpson's lawyers were not returned. KNBC also reported that Goldman's family has hired a lawyer to prepare a wrongful death lawsuit against Simpson, 47, who has pleaded innocent to murder and is being held without bail. Meanwhile Tuesday, 15 leaders from the city's black community met with District Attorney Gil Garcetti to quell racial tensions arising from the case and urge Garcetti not to seek the death penalty if Simpson is convicted. "We don't need to add another human being to that already overcrowded (Death Row) line that is clearly a product of racism in this country and a product of classism in this country," said John Mack, president of the Urban League's Los Angeles chapter.

Garcetti is expected to announce sometime before the trial whether he'll ask the jury to recommend a death sentence if Simpson is convicted. He assured the leaders that Simpson would get a fair trial. "I am hopeful, I am confident, that we can indeed find white, black, brown, every color jury there is, who will indeed be fair and impartial," Garcetti said. Media reports over the weekend said the defense team was considering a claim that racism prompted Detective Mark Fuhrman - who like the victims is white - to plant a bloody glove at Simpson's mansion. Police say the glove matches another found near the bodies. Fuhrman denied planting the glove. Lead defense lawyer Robert Shapiro said he may argue that evidence was planted, but would not say racism was a motive. Questions about Fuhrman's racial attitudes are pertinent, said celebrity lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr., who attended the meeting with Garcetti. "As much as I don't want to see race brought into this case, if this person has a feeling against minorities, his credibility becomes very much at issue," he said. A new poll shows that Californians are divided along racial lines on the question of Simpson's guilt or innocence. Fifty-eight percent of adults of all races questioned by the Field Poll say it is "very likely or somewhat likely" that Simpson committed the slayings compared with 17 percent who feel it is "not too likely or not likely at all." But just 38 percent of blacks believe it is likely he committed the crimes compared to 62 percent of whites.

House subcommittee okays bill to sell Amarillo helium

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Government agencies would be freed from their obligation to buy helium exclusively from a reserve in the Texas Panhandle under legislation approved by a House subcommittee. The measure approved Tuesday by the House energy and mineral resources subcommittee would force the eventual sale of the 32 billion cubic feet of helium - valued at $1 billion or more - stored in an underground dome northwest of Amarillo. The proposal of subcommittee chairman Richard Lehman of California, a reserve critic, would have mandated that the sale of the helium reserve begin in 2014, ending in 2024. But under an amendment approved by the panel, sales would begin in 2004 and end in 2014. "This legislation stops the needless action of the federal government directly competing with the private helium industry, will save the taxpayers millions of dollars ... and puts an end to a wasteful government program that has long ceased its purpose once and for all," said Rep. Barbara Vucanovich, R-Nev., the amendment's author. A top aide to Rep. Bill Sarpalius, whose district includes the reserve, said the measure isn't likely to pass Congress this year because there isn't a companion version being considered in the Senate.

Clinton clarifies remarks on 'universal coverage'

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton insisted today he still supports national health care for everybody and that his willingness to compromise may have been overstated. He said he would never accept a law that spells out coverage of 95 percent as equivalent to "universal coverage." Clinton sought to clarify comments from Tuesday, when he told the nation's governors in Boston that coverage of "95 (percent) or upwards" might be satisfactory. The remarks sowed confusion on Capitol Hill, with opponents of mandatory health coverage calling it a major concession to their side, liberal lawmakers expressing irritation and White House allies insisting nothing had changed. A team of administration officials insisted Tuesday that Clinton had not really changed his position. Today, the administration stepped up what was turning into a major damage-control operation, with both Clinton and Vice President Al Gore weighing in. "Nothing has changed when it comes to the commitment to ensure that all Americans have health care coverage that can never be taken away," Gore said today. He appeared on network news shows this morning to insist that Clinton was only agreeing to compromise on the process. "What the president said yesterday was, if someone has a better idea about how to reach that goal, we are willing to talk about the best way to get to that goal. But every American must have health care coverage." "What the debate is not about is whether all Americans will have health care coverage that can never be taken away," Gore said. As Clinton began a meeting with congressional leaders at the White House today, he said: "I'm sorry that after all my skills and efforts at communicating, the point I really made yesterday somehow didn't get through."

"He's singing our song, and we think that's great," Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said after Clinton spoke to the National Governors' Association in Boston. "I would hope that he would recognize that 95 percent is tremendous coverage." "I think the president is indicating some flexibility here and that's encouraging," added Sen. John Breaux, D-La., who along with Chafee helped draft legislation that cleared the Senate Finance Committee last month. The bill is designed to achieve 95 percent coverage by 2002, and shuns the so-called employer mandates, relying instead on insurance changes and subsidies for the poor to expand coverage. "He's inching in our direction," said Senate GOP leader Bob Dole, who preceded Clinton to the governors' podium. Clinton always has indicated a willingness to compromise on the details of his plan - including making employers pay - as long as another way could be found to expand coverage to all. He vowed last winter to veto any bill that didn't guarantee "every American" insurance that couldn't be canceled. On Tuesday, he said: "I don't think we should do something that will not work, but I would not rule out a health bill that didn't have an employer mandate if we knew we were moving toward full coverage and we had some evidence that it would work." That point, he said, was that alternative bills that do not require universal coverage "will not work. That is the issue. We must do something that works." As to the 95 percent figure, "no one ever talked about a law which would set that as a goal," Clinton said. Instead, he said he was using it in a statistical sense - suggesting that Social Security and mandatory school attendance laws also call for full coverage, but that some people fall through the cracks. Legislation passed by the Senate Finance Committee does not require employers to furnish workers with insurance - but sets a goal of 95 percent coverage by the year 2,000. White House aides said that Clinton used the 95 percent figure because it was the "trigger" in that bill. Clinton said he had always been flexible on how to get to universal coverage, and could accept some way of doing it other than requiring all employers to insure their workers - if someone could come up with a plan that would work. "My goal is universal coverage. It is the only goal that works for ordinary Americans," he said. "I am willing to compromise on how to get that. ... Let's not do something that doesn't work," Clinton said.

Toddler hurt by garage door

A 2-year-old Hereford boy was injured on Tuesday night when a garage door closed on his chest, trapping him on the ground. Police and firefighters were called to the home in the 400 block of Avenue G at about 7:55 p.m. On arrival, Sgt. Bennie Barrick and Officer Richard Bachus found the child trapped under the door. They were able to free him by lifting up the door. He was then transported to Hereford Regional Medical Center by EMS. Fire Marshal Jay Spain said the child was not breathing when he arrived. However, the child was revived. He was listed in stable condition Wednesday morning in HRMC. According to police reports, an older boy pushed the button to close the garage door, not realizing the child was in the way.

Cooler weather coming

After the 98 degrees recorded Tuesday, Hereford can look forward to a cooling off in the next few days. Low Wednesday morning was 66. A 50 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms is on the menu for Wednesday night with a low in the lower 60s and east to northeast winds at 10-15 mph. Chance of rain Thursday is 40 percent with a high in the lower 80s. Winds should shift to east and southeast, 10-15 mph.

News Digest

World/Nation

WASHINGTON - President Clinton's conciliatory comments on health care increase the chances for enactment of a bipartisan bill this fall, say key lawmakers in both parties, although such a measure would fall well short of the White House's initial demand for coverage for all.

BOSTON - President Clinton was talking about state health care reform and California's efforts to lower insurance costs when he peered around the roomful of governors and asked: "Is Governor Wilson here?" No, sir. Absent also: Texas Gov. Ann Richards, Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo. "The big four," as a White House official put it, "have a lot more to worry about than this." Like getting re-elected.

WASHINGTON - Twenty-five years ago today, two men from Earth bundled like space aliens set foot on another planet for the first time, planted the American flag and received the congratulations of their awe-struck president.

Now, old enough to qualify for Social Security, the Apollo 11 astronauts bask again in the plaudits of another U.S. president.

WASHINGTON - More states should be able to experiment with giving poor people cash or wage subsidies instead of food stamps, the Senate said, rejecting arguments that children would go hungry as a result.

SEOUL, South Korea - With mass rallies and flowery statements, North Koreans pledge fealty to their leader-apparent, Kim Jong Il. Meanwhile, clues emerge about a possible realignment in the secretive state's political hierarchy.

BALTIMORE - A study that found 40 percent of all U.S. medical specialists could be unnecessary by the year 2000 underscores the need for medical schools to push students into family and community medicine, its author said.

GOMA, Zaire - With nearly half Rwanda's population having fled the country or heading toward the border, victorious rebel forces install a new government and urge a halt to the desperate refugee flight.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - Paul-Luc Toussaint fled his home on Haiti's south coast dressed in woman's clothing to evade the paramilitary group chasing him because of his support for deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

He's been in hiding ever since, slipping from house to house, sometimes sleeping in places fit only for animals.

Toussaint is among several hundred thousand Haitians afraid to go home or even show their faces because of military repression.

HERMAN, Minn. - Betty Harrigill doesn't harbor illusions of bagging a bachelor in a few days' visit to the Minnesota prairie - but it can't hurt to look.

And Herman, population 474, is expecting plenty of women to be looking during the Grant County Fair. Starting today, the town 150 miles northwest of Minneapolis is showcasing itself as a good place for female entrepreneurs - partly because of its bumper crop of bachelor farmers and agribusinessmen.

American to stop jets to Lubbock

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - American Airlines plans to cut jet service to Lubbock International Airport, the carrier has notified city officials.

Mayor David Langston said Monday that American informed him of its plans to serve the city mostly through its American Eagle fleet of smaller, propeller-driven aircraft.

American Airlines issued a statement today saying it would discontinue jet service Dec. 15.

Dallas bronze cattle herd raises Cowtown eyebrows

By TERRY WALLACE

Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Cattle rarely held much appeal for Dallas before appearing on a sizzling platter. The city has always been more interested in oil, money, cotton and fashion. To Dallasites, stock was something bought on paper, not on the hoof.

So imagine the surprise of some when a new downtown park featured a bronze cattle drive to celebrate Dallas' pioneer heritage.

Many of the eyebrow-raisers live in nearby Fort Worth, a city built on cattle and a rival to Dallas for most of its 145-year history.

The self-styled "Cowtown" was everything Dallas wasn't: a stop on the fabled Chisholm Trail and one-time home to a cattle processing and packing complex that was among the nation's biggest.

Nevertheless, 20 bronze steers, herded by a bronze cowpoke on a bronze cow pony, fill the expanses of Pioneer Plaza, across from Dallas City Hall. There will be 70 steers in the park when it is completed next year.

"I've seen pictures of them," said Sue McCafferty, president of the North Fort Worth Historical Society. "I just always figured they were passing through on their way to Fort Worth."

The bronzes are the work of sculptor Robert Summers of Glen Rose, about 65 miles southwest of Dallas.

Cattle drives were part of the first big business to flourish in Texas during the mid-19th century, Summers said. Although Dallas was never a "cowtown," it was a Texas city and shared in the state's heritage, he said.

Cattle were herded north through Dallas to the railheads of Texas along the Shawnee Trail in 1866-67, Summers said.

"That was the earliest big business in Texas," he said.

Dallas-based developer Trammell Crow proposed the park, and private contributions are paying for its development on city-donated land.

Some of Dallas' own art officials have criticized the cattle drive array, saying it better depicts the history of Fort Worth, 36 miles to the west.

But Nancy Nelson, interim executive director of the Dallas Historical Society, insists that cattle are part of the city's 152-year heritage.

Dallas sat at the end of a Chisholm Trail spur, and an early settler operated a stockyard during the city's early years.

A meatpacking plant operated near downtown at the turn of the century, Swift & Co., which owned an immense meatpacking operation in Fort Worth, bought the Dallas plant out and shut it down in 1928.

Accounts also record the 19th century existence of a buffalo-hide pit near what is now downtown, Ms. Nelson said.

Yes, emphatically yes, cattle were part of Dallas' history, if not its culture, Ms. Nelson said.

"It is ridiculous to say they didn't come through here," she said.

Besides, she added, the statues look nice.

"I always thought it was a marvelous thing. It gave focus to the open spaces," Ms. Nelson said.

Ms. McCafferty doesn't deny that some cattle might have passed through Dallas.

"Cattle did come through from East Texas on their way to the Chisholm Trail. They had to go somewhere," she said. "But I don't think Dallas was known for its cattle drives."

Indeed, in Dallas, image means a lot.

"I have to confess to you, being a native Dallasite, that Dallas was never a cattle town," Dallas City Council member Paul Fielding told The Dallas Morning News. "But now, that's what you're going to see on television."

But however little Dallas celebrates the cattle industry as part of its culture, Summers says it's an undeniable part of its history worthy of celebration in his work.

"The people who say it's not historical don't know their history," he said.

Prison officials claim hunt coming to end for new jail director

By CHIP BROWN

Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Prison officials say they will have a director for a new system of state jails by the end of the month.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock convened an emergency meeting of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee on Tuesday to look into reports that the first state jail, a 2,000-bed facility in Beaumont, won't be ready by a Sept. 1 deadline.

Bullock had expressed concern that in 14 months since the state jail system was approved, no director for the program had been hired by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

State leaders say the launch of the state jail system is critical because it is a first-time approach to housing and rehabilitating nonviolent offenders through intensive educational and behavioral programs.

J.B. Cole, who oversees construction for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said rain delays had pushed the completion date for the Beaumont facility to Nov. 18.

Texas Board of Criminal Justice Chairman Carol Vance said enough of the facility would be completed to begin accepting prisoners in October.

The Senate committee and prison officials are to collaborate on ways to house the prisoners during the delay.

State Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, chairman of the committee, said he hopes the prisoners will be placed in county correctional programs, such as local boot camps, until the state jails come on line.

Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, a member of the committee, said he was concerned about the lack of a state jail director and urged the TDCJ to fill the position as soon as possible.

"This should be a top priority for the TDCJ and I hope they got that message loud and clear today," Sibley said.

TDCJ Executive Director Andy Collins said he has been interviewing people and hopes to have the position filled by early next week.

Following the meeting, Vance said prison officials have canceled an Aug. 5 party that was planned as a celebration of the on-time completion of 15,000 regular prison beds.

The party had been criticized by Whitmire.

The celebration was planned for a clubhouse near the Goree Unit in Huntsville, and inmates were scheduled to cook barbecue as part of a thank-you for contractors who helped build the prisons. He said state employees themselves were to pay the costs.

"This was an innovative party that wasn't going to cost the state anything," Vance said. "But we canceled the party. Maybe it's not proper to be celebrating even a small victory when we have so many problems before us."

"They were going to have a couple of the inmates cooking barbecue, but somebody else was paying for the barbecue," Vance said.

Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush blamed the state jail delays on a lack of leadership by the nine-member criminal justice board, which includes several members appointed by Democratic Gov. Ann Richards.

"It is an unfortunate commentary on the lack of leadership and initiative by Gov. Richards that her fellow Democrats are forced to call an emergency legislative hearings to address problems her criminal justice board should be handling especially in an area so critical to the safety of the citizens of Texas," Bush said.

Richards said, "Here are the facts. We are building 75,000 prison beds. We are doubling the size of the prison system. We have stopped the early release of prisoners, cutting the parole rate by two-thirds. I commend the Senate Criminal Justice Committee and TDCJ for making sure the state jail program stays on track."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I recently read in your column about finding the day of the week on which someone was born by using a perpetual calendar.

What is this and where can I find one to check some days for my family? — Avery Golden, Washington, D.C.

A perpetual calendar is a table for finding the day of the week for any one of a wide range of dates. Using one you can find the day of the week you were born, married or any other special event.

Larger libraries may look up a single day for you or you can go to the library yourself to check. You may be able to find a perpetual calendar in certain reference books or calendars or you may want to call your favorite book store to see if they carry them.

I saved one from an old calendar and really use it a lot. — Heloise

Help victims of violence

Bringing new hope to victims of violent crime - and bringing billions of dollars in savings to our economy. Those are the benefits that come from medical rehabilitation services across the country.

Medical rehabilitation services are increasingly essential because of these alarming trends:

-There is one severe head injury ever 15 seconds and one death and permanent disability every five minutes.

-Nationally, acts of violence account for 12 percent of all head injuries and 16 percent of all spinal cord injuries.

-At least $1 billion is spent annually on hospital costs associated with the treatment of individuals with firearm injuries.

-Firearm injuries, fatal and non-fatal combined, are the third most costly type of injury overall, resulting in $14.4 billion in life time costs - medical costs and loss of productivity.

Medical rehabilitation, for the victims of violent crime and others, must remain an essential part of our health care system, say experts at the Medical Rehabilitation Education Foundation (MREF), which represents rehabilitation facilities throughout the country that deal with the aftermath of crime and serious injury or disability.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Don't sound the wedding-bell blues for singers Marilyn McCoo and Billy Davis Jr. They celebrate their 25th anniversary this month.

"We are fortunate that we began our relationship as friends, and that same friendship has brought us through many challenges," McCoo said Thursday in a statement.

The two planned to renew their vows July 26 in Beverly Hills.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read your response to "Need Breathing Space in London, Ont.," the 16-year-old girl who wanted out of a relationship with "Bob." She felt he was smothering her. She was concerned, however, that if she dropped him, he would be devastated. She asked for your advice. You told her to let him down gently and not cut him off altogether because it would be too destructive.

That answer was not one of your better ones. I am a public educator on issues of violence against women and am convinced that Bob shows signs of becoming extremely abusive. The first clue was his charm when she met him. Second is the fact that he came from an abusive home. Third was his possessiveness--smothering her and being a constant presence in her life. He also displays manipulative behavior--crying and saying she doesn't love him. These are all danger signs.

Too often women are expected to be nurturers and fixers in a relationship. It is not the responsibility of a 16-year-old girl to fix Bob's emotional problems. He needs counseling. She should feel free to put an end to this sick relationship and date whomever she chooses. Please, Ann, expand on your advice before Bob becomes a permanent fixture in her life. If he does, she will certainly regret it.--Linda in Toronto

DEAR LINDA: You are right. I'm afraid I was overly concerned with Bob's feelings when I should have been in the girl's corner.

Thanks for cleaning up after me. DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have some information for the millions of Americans who suffer from panic attacks.

Symptoms may differ greatly. Some people have difficulty breathing and fear they may choke to death. Others have palpitations so strong that they are sure they are having a heart attack.

Nervous symptoms may include dizziness, sweats, depression, fatigue, headaches, numbness, tremors and difficulty sleeping. Often there is a fear of being alone or going out in crowds. Some people are agoraphobic, afraid to leave the house.

Your readers who see themselves in any of the above descriptions should have a complete physical examination to rule out health problems. If the doctor finds nothing wrong, chances are, the problem is caused by severe anxiety.

This is where Recovery Inc. comes in. The Recovery method is a system for controlling temperamental behavior and changing attitudes toward nervous system and fears. The technique is simple but not easy. Nevertheless, it really works if the patient learns the method and applies it.

Recovery Inc. does not supplant doctors. As a matter of fact, doctors and Recovery work well together. Please tell your readers to contact a chapter of Recovery Inc. in their area if they are experiencing any of the symptoms listed. It's in the phone book. Helplessness is not hopelessness. San Antonio, Texas

DEAR TEXAS: I've been a longtime advocate of Recovery Inc. It's one of the best self-help groups afloat, and it's worldwide. The national headquarters is in Chicago. If you can't find your local chapter, write to: Recovery Inc., 802 N. Dearborn, Chicago Ill. 60610. You'll be glad you did.

Gem of the Day: Contentment isn't getting what we want but being happy with what we have.

Ann Landers' latest booklet, "Nuggets and Doozies," has everything from the outrageously funny to the poignantly insightful. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5 (this includes postage and handling) to: Nuggets, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Spurs trade to get Elliott back

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Sean Elliott was an All-Star two seasons ago when he played for the San Antonio Spurs. He was a disappointment last season when he played for the Detroit Pistons.

It remains to be seen what kind of year Elliott will have next season, but this much is certain: Elliott will be back in the uniform in which he played his best pro ball.

The Spurs re-acquired the 6-foot-8 forward from Detroit on Tuesday in exchange for the rights to first-round draft pick Bill Curley and the Spurs' 1997 second-round draft pick.

San Antonio also received the option to flip-flop No. 1 picks with the Pistons next year if the pick isn't a lottery selection. If the pick is among the first eight, the Spurs will get the Pistons' 1996 first-round pick instead, with no lottery protection.

"I'm really pleased, really excited to have him back with the Spurs. It adds an element to our team that we've lacked. He fills a huge hole," said Gregg Popovich, the Spurs' vice president for basketball operations.

"He gives us a small forward. He gives us an athletic person that can run the floor and finish the break. He should really fit in well with David Robinson and Dennis Rodman," Popovich said.

The 6-foot-9 Curley was the 22nd pick in the June draft after finishing second on Boston College's career scoring list with 2,102 points and second in rebounding with 996. He averaged 20 points and nine rebounds as a senior as the Eagles reached the NCAA East Regional finals, losing to Florida.

Elliott, the third-overall pick in the 1989 draft, played four seasons for the Spurs and set a club record by appearing in 246 straight games.

San Antonio traded Elliott to the Pistons last Oct. 1 for Rodman, who led the NBA in rebounding at 17.3 per game. The Pistons later tried to trade Elliott to the Houston Rockets for Robert Horry and Matt Bullard, but the deal was called off when Elliott failed a physical because of a kidney problem.

A restricted free agent, Elliott is expected to sign a multiyear deal with the Spurs for $1.35 million but with an opt-out clause that would allow him to become a free agent after one season.

Elliott started in 73 games for the Pistons last season and averaged 12.1 points. He has a 14.3 scoring average for his five seasons in the NBA. His best season with the Spurs was 1992-93, when he averaged 17.2 points.

The Spurs have yet to hire a coach. John Lucas resigned earlier this summer and then took over as coach and general manager of the Philadelphia 76ers.

The Spurs, 55-27 last season, were eliminated from the Western Conference playoffs in the first round by the Utah Jazz.

Greg Black 10-K set for Aug. 13

It's time to get in shape; the Greg Black Memorial 10-K Run will be held Aug. 13.

The event, which also will include a two-mile fun run and a two-mile walk, starts at 8 a.m. Anyone can sign up for one of these races in advance at the Hereford YMCA or on the day of the race--from 7-7:45 a.m.--at the YMCA. The entry fees are $8 in advance or $10 the day of the race.

The 10-K has six age divisions for both men and women. For more information, call the Y at 364-6990.

West Texas Heat results unknown

Results are not available for the West Texas Heat, a basketball team including Hereford girls which is playing in the national AAU 13-under tournament in Kenner, La.

The Heat went 2-1 in pool play over the weekend and advanced to the championship bracket. The Heat was to play a game Tuesday, but no results were reported.

Switzer expects Hennings to excel

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Barry Switzer is predicting that Chad Hennings will step forward this year and become a major force in the Dallas Cowboys defense, and Hennings says he's ready to live up to expectations.

"I'm in the best shape of my life. And I'm ready for the pressure. It's what I've worked hard for," Hennings says.

Hennings was voted one of the top players in training camp workouts. He can power lift 515 pounds and run the 40 in 4.65.

"I could never run a 4.6 even when I was in the Air Force," says Hennings, who won the Outland Trophy in 1987.

Hennings was even named the captain of the kickoff return special teams.

"That's kind of like being named the captain of the troops who is going to lead invading troops on shore," Hennings says. "I'm not sure I needed that honor. But I guess it's fun hitting 300-pound guys going as fast as you can. Clears your head out."

Of course, Hennings has looked good in training camp before.

They call him "Mr. July." In July of past years, Chad Hennings has looked like a certain Pro Bowl defensive tackle.

Then the heroics of St. Edward's training camp fade away and Hennings becomes a reserve and special teams player.

No more, he says.

"It's time to prove I'm legit. I'm on the last year of my contract. It's time to produce and show what I can do," Hennings says.

The 6-6, 286-pound Hennings is expected to give the Dallas Cowboys the kind of tackle play they need to replace Tony Casillas, who took the free agent road for bigger bucks to Kansas City.

"It's time for Chad Hennings to be a premier player," Switzer says. "He's got great talent and has been looking tremendous. He needs to step in there where Tony was and help beef up our defensive line."

Hennings says he's learned a lot playing behind Casillas.

"I've had to be patient, and I've never given up. I just got hungrier and hungrier watching him play. "Now Switzer is going to throw me in the fire. He says he is counting on me. I accept the challenge."

Hennings has two Super Bowl rings, but he still has a hollow feeling for his three seasons in the NFL.

"Those Super Bowl rings are because I've got some great teammates, some great players, not because I was a starter and made a big contribution," Hennings says. "With Tony gone, it's time for me to make a mark. It's time to step up."

Hennings came to the Cowboys after a five-year career in the Air Force flying jets. He flew his last mission in May 1992 in Europe on a practice bombing run in an A10 Intruder.

Dorsett, White to join Ring of Honor

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys have invited Tony Dorsett and Randy White to be inducted this year into the team's Ring of Honor, a newspaper reported today, quoting sources close to the players.

Both have accepted, and indications are they will travel to Austin this week, perhaps Friday, for the formal announcement, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Induction during the regular upcoming season would make theirs the ninth and tenth names immortalized on the facade of Texas Stadium.

Club owner Jerry Jones, the one-man selection committee for the Ring of Honor, said Tuesday he has decided on this year's inductees, but would not confirm the names of Dorsett and White.

However, he noted the two are to be inducted on July 30 into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, and said that makes their selection into the Ring of Honor a logical one.

Both players have an agreement with the Cowboys to avoid talking about their Ring induction until this week's news conference, the newspaper said.

White, a nine-time Pro Bowler, is recognized as one of the greatest defenders in NFL history. He played 209 games in 14 Cowboys seasons, both the second-longest marks in franchise history. The defensive tackle, a No. 1 pick from Maryland in 1975, recorded 111 sacks during a career that ended in 1988.

Dorsett is the team's all-time leading rusher with 12,036 yards, a figure that places him fourth in National Football League history.

The club's No. 1 draft pick out of Pittsburgh in 1977, Dorsett is among the club leaders in touchdowns (first), scoring (second) and receptions (third). A four-time Pro Bowler who was featured in Super Bowls in his first two seasons, he led the team in rushing nine times during the 10 years he spent with the Cowboys.

Already in the Ring of Honor are defensive lineman Bob Lilly (inducted in 1975), quarterback Don Meredith (1976), running back Don Perkins (1976), linebacker Chuck Howley (1977), defensive back Mel Renfro (1981), quarterback Roger Staubach (1983), linebacker Lee Roy Jordan (1989) and coach Tom Landry (1993).

Jordan and Landry are the only inductees during the Jones regime.

Jones said he wants to keep the Ring of Honor exclusive, but said he also is sensitive to the number of ex-Cowboys greats who preceded Dorsett and White in contributing to the franchise but still are not in the Ring.

"I don't think any players who don't go in this year will be hurt by chronology," Jones said.

"I think players from 15 and 20 and 30 years ago are still remembered around here. The memories of their contributions aren't going to fade. They are very much under consideration and have been since I came to the Cowboys (in 1989)."

Conti captures climbing stage

L'ALPE D'HUEZ, France (AP) - Although it has been dominated by European riders, American cyclists have had their moments in the l'Alpe d'Huez stage of the Tour de France.

In 1986, Greg LeMond gave the Tour one of its most memorable moments when he and five-time winner Bernard Hinault came up the mountain together far ahead of the pack. And in 1992, Andy Hampsten became the first American to win the stage.

This year, the stage returned to the Europeans.

Italy's Roberto Conti captured Tuesday's stage which ended with the famed climb to l'Alpe d'Huez. He took control of a small group that broke away from the main pack at the bottom of the final 6,100-foot ascent.

He went out on his own with about six miles left and won by more than two minutes over Hernan Buenahora of Colombia.

Through it all, Miguel Indurain remained confidently on his way to his fourth consecutive title.

Indurain reacted quickly when his lead was challenged Tuesday as the Tour de France entered the Alps.

France's Richard Virenque, second in the overall standings, took off alone on the final mountain and tried to build up time against Indurain.

But the three-time defending champion decided to take control of things when Virenque had about a 90-second edge. With less than two miles left, Indurain increased the pace, and ended up finishing only 35 seconds behind Virenque in 11th.

Virenque now trails Indurain in the overall standings by 7:21.

Two other French riders, Luc Leblanc and Armand De Las Cuevas, are third and fourth after the stage 144 miles.

There are three more days left in the Alps, including a individual time trial Friday.

Belle bashes Rangers with new bat

By The Associated Press
Cork or no cork, Albert Belle can still hit.

Belle, facing a 10-day suspension for using a corked bat, homered and tripled Tuesday night as the Cleveland Indians beat the Texas Rangers 12-3.

Paul Sorrento homered twice and drove in a career-high five runs, and Jim Thome and Wayne Kirby also homered for Cleveland, which improved to 25-5 in its last 30 games at Jacobs Field.

"It's nice to see Albert hit the ball hard," Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove said. "Albert's pretty strong mentally. When he gets to the ballpark, he focuses on what he has to do. He is really able to have tunnel vision and not have outside things bother him."

That's especially important these days because of the corked bat controversy that began last weekend in Chicago. Belle was suspended Monday, but he is appealing and can keep playing pending a hearing.

Charles Nagy (8-6) allowed seven hits, walked one and struck out six in eight innings before leaving when a ball hit his left knee.

Rangers rookie Hector Fajardo (5-6) gave up seven runs and seven hits in five innings for the loss.

"They hit the pitches out that they should have hit out," Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said. "We made a lot of bad pitches, and they didn't miss them. He (Fajardo) got the ball up and didn't have good arm speed."

Belle's fifth-inning home run, his 27th, was his first homer and only his fourth hit in 19 at-bats since his bat was seized Friday night.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Toronto 4, Minnesota 2; Chicago 10, Detroit 5; Milwaukee 4, Kansas City 3 in 14 innings; California 6, Boston 4, and Oakland 6, New York 2.

The game between Baltimore and Seattle was postponed because of falling ceiling tiles at the Kingdome.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 2

At Toronto, Paul Molitor tripled in the go-ahead run in the eighth.

Roberto Alomar reached on a one-out walk and scored on Molitor's single. Joe Carter followed with a run-scoring single.

Tony Castillo (5-1) won with two innings of scoreless relief. Darren

Hall pitched the ninth for his 11th save. Kevin Tapani (9-6) gave up four runs on five hits over 7 1-3 innings.

White Sox 10, Tigers 5

At Chicago, Julio Franco went 4-for-5 and drove in three runs, and Alex Fernandez struck out 11 in seven innings.

Fernandez (9-7) walked four and scattered five hits for his fourth straight victory. Tim Belcher (7-11) worked into the fourth inning, giving up eight runs, 11 hits and two walks.

Lance Johnson had three hits and Tim Raines scored three runs and drove in two.

Brewers 4, Royals 3, 14 innings

At Milwaukee, Jeff Cirillo hit his second major-league homer in the 12th inning and scored the winning run on Kevin Seitzer's bases-loaded single in the 14th.

Cirillo was hit by a pitch from Hipolito Pichardo (3-3) leading off the 14th, advanced on a wild pitch and sacrifice and scored as Seitzer bounced a single up the middle off second baseman Jose Lind's glove.

Jose Mercedes (2-0), the seventh Brewers pitcher, pitched one inning for the win.

Angels 6, Red Sox 4

At Anaheim, Calif., Mark Langston outpitched Roger Clemens for the first time in his career and Chad Curtis drove in three runs.

Curtis and Chili Davis each hit two-run homers to power the Angels. Langston (6-6) allowed three runs and four hits over seven innings.

Clemens (8-5) allowed five runs and seven hits over 6 2-3 innings, struck out eight and walked five. His ERA rose from 2.73 to 2.86 to put him behind Kansas City's David Cone for the top mark in the AL.

Athletics 6, Yankees 2

At Oakland, Calif., Mark McGwire's three-run homer in the fifth inning helped end the Yankees' five-game winning streak.

The Athletics, who had dropped four of their previous five games, scored four in the fifth off Jim Abbott (7-7), who has won only once since May 25. He allowed seven hits in six innings.

Pitching for the first time in 11 days, Bobby Witt (8-8) threw five scoreless innings, allowing seven hits. The right-hander, who had been sidelined with a strained rib cage muscle, struck out five and walked three.

Phillies, Jackson stop Giants' streak

By The Associated Press

Barry Bonds had just singled home a run and Matt Williams and Darryl Strawberry were due up after him. The San Francisco Giants were ahead 2-0 in the first inning and looked ready to roll again.

That's when Danny Jackson and the Philadelphia Phillies got in the way.

Jackson allowed only one hit after the opening inning and pitched the Phillies to a 5-2 victory Tuesday night that ended the Giants' nine-game winning streak.

The Giants had been 9-0 since Strawberry joined them. But a day after he left the game early because of a sore left hamstring, he went 0-for-4 with two strikeouts.

"We were bound to lose one game. We'll just have to start another one (streak) tomorrow," Giants manager Dusty Baker said.

Strawberry would not start this afternoon's game in Philadelphia so he could rest, Baker said.

In other games, St. Louis stopped Houston 10-0, Pittsburgh outlasted Atlanta 13-10, New York beat Los Angeles 7-4, Cincinnati trounced Florida 13-5, Montreal defeated San Diego 4-3 and Chicago beat Colorado 6-1.

Jackson (12-4) gave up four hits in eight innings, striking out five and walking three. Doug Jones worked the ninth for his 24th save.

The Giants put Jackson in trouble quickly as Darren Lewis led off the game with a triple, Steve Scarsone doubled and Bonds singled. Bonds has 10 RBIs in his last six games.

The Phillies started the sixth inning with three straight singles, chasing Bud Black (3-1). Dave Burba relieved and Pete Incaviglia hit his 13th home run, and his second three-run homer in two days.

Cardinals 10, Astros 0

Vicente Palacios pitched a one-hitter, retiring the final 21 batters after Andujar Cedeno's leadoff single in the third inning at Houston.

Palacios (2-7), pitching on his 31st birthday, struck out eight and walked one.

Mark Whiten homered and doubled drove in three runs and scored three. Darryl Kile (6-5) lasted only 4 1-3 innings.

Pirates 13, Braves 10

Jay Bell hit a three-run double in the seventh inning and Pittsburgh seasawed past Atlanta at Three Rivers Stadium.

The Pirates blew a five-run lead, then rallied to beat the Braves for the eighth time in 11 games this year. Three errors by Atlanta fueled the comeback.

Lance Parrish homered and Midre Cummings went 3-for-5 with two doubles for the Pirates. Rookie Jose Oliva hit his 10th homer for the Braves.

Dan Miceli (1-0) pitched two hitless innings for his first win in the majors. Reliever Gregg Olson (0-2) gave up three runs in one inning.

Mets 7, Dodgers 4

Ryan Thompson grounded a three-run double, capping a five-run rally in the eighth inning.

Relievers Jim Gott (5-3), Omar Daal and Roger McDowell could not hold a 4-2 lead.

Kevin McReynolds hit a two-run single that tied it at 4 in the eighth. He later slid home on a forceout to break up a possible double play, then Thompson followed with his hit down the third-base line.

Josias Manzanillo (3-1) retired the only batter he faced, getting Mike Piazza on a grounder with the bases loaded to end the eighth. John Franco worked the ninth for his 21st save.

Reds 13, Marlins 5

Eddie Taubensee hit a two-run single that highlighted Cincinnati's six-run first inning at Riverfront Stadium.

Jacob Brumfield and Hal Morris later homered for the Reds. Gary Sheffield hit his 20th homer for the Marlins.

John Smiley (10-9) went 6 1-3 innings for the win. Mark Gardner (3-3) has beaten every NL team except the Reds, going 0-4 in eight career starts against them.

Expos 4, Padres 3

Montreal improved to 11-0 this season against San Diego, taking advantage of four errors to win at Olympic Stadium.

Shortstop Luis Lopez made a throwing error that set up two unearned runs, and a wild throw by first baseman Eddie Williams enabled another run to score.

Pedro Martinez (7-5) won for the first time in six starts and John Wetteland got his 15th save in 23 tries.

Andy Ashby (4-9) got little support.

Cubs 6, Rockies 1

Rookie Steve Trachsel improved to 8-0 on the road, winning for the second time this season in Colorado.

Trachsel (9-6) gave up five hits in eight innings. He left because of a blister on the middle finger of his right hand.

Sammy Sosa had three hits and drove in two runs. He connected off David Nied (9-5) for his 21st homer.

17-year-old golfer to play in US Women's Open

By JEFF RUDE
The Dallas Morning News
 DALLAS - Kelli Kuehne, 17, is undefeated in high school golf. She has won all 17 of her tournaments and three state 4A championships at Highland Park. But this week she moves to a new level. The 5-3 senior will try to pick on people bigger than her own size in the U.S. Women's Open.

These are heady times for perhaps the country's best junior female golfer. Less than two weeks ago, she ramed in a 20-foot birdie putt on the last hole to qualify for the Women's Open. Last Saturday, she won the U.S. Junior Girls in Montana. She'll be on the next cover of Golf for Women magazine. And this week she's off to the U.S. Women's Open in Lake Orion, Mich., near Detroit, for her first competition against pros.

Kuehne is the second-youngest contestant in this year's Open. The youngest is 14-year-old Rae Anna Staples of Miami Beach, whom Kuehne beat Friday in a U.S. Junior semifinal.

The 5-8, 170-pound Staples, who turned 14 in March, started golfing at age 2 and has played in the U.S. Junior since 11. She lead the Open qualifying in Haines City, Fla., with a 74. Still, she's not the youngest ever in an Open. Beverly Klass competed at age 10 in 1967, back when her father took her out on tour in what became something of a circus sideshow.

As for Kuehne, this week she'll be among her idols, Nancy Lopez and Jan Stephenson. One of her priorities is to make the 36-hole cut at the Indianwood Golf and Country Club. One goal is to play in front of large galleries. Another is to learn.

"I want to see what the LPGA tour is all about," said Kuehne, winner of about a dozen American Junior Golf Association tournaments and owner of women's low-score records at four courses. "I want to see if I like the environment and see if that's what I want to do as a profession."

Her teacher, Hank Haney of McKinney, says she could make a living playing golf. Right now.

"She's good enough to play on the LPGA tour now," Haney said. "I don't think she'd, by any stretch of the imagination, dominate, but she's only 17. She's a great, great junior."

But first she will complete her senior year at Highland Park, then comes college. She's considering Arizona State, Tulsa and Oklahoma State. If she chose OSU, she would overlap a year there with older brothers Trip and Hank. Trip won two state individual titles and three team titles at Highland Park, and Hank, three years younger, won three team titles.

Kelli had played tennis competitively as a child, but got into golf at 10 because she wanted to be with her brothers, so the family could travel together. Some of her best matches have come against her brothers in casual rounds.

"I have beaten them, but they've killed me a lot more times," she said. "It gets pretty intense. We definitely push each other."

Kelli also has to contend with diabetes. She gives herself two insulin shots daily. But being diabetic

"is probably a blessing," she said. "It keeps me in good shape because it makes me take care of my body and work out and eat healthier than most kids my age."

Kuehne excels in golf because of a solid swing, her 230-yard driving distance that belies her small size, and the mental strength to avoid mistakes. She's focused, mature and modest, Haney said, and a tireless practitioner who believes in herself.

"In ball-striking, there aren't many touring pros that would be intimidating to her," Haney said. "I think she can be a special player."

Take the state high school tournament. She was nine under par through 27 holes when the rain came. "How's that?" Haney asked. "A high school player? A girl? Nine-under for 27? You've got to be kidding me."

To accomplish so much, she and her family have made time and financial commitments. She has spent her teens hitting golf balls. She exercises five days a week - three times at 6 a.m. - and spends up to eight hours a day playing or practicing golf. And for an elite junior player to travel to 10 tournaments a summer, the estimated cost runs $7,000 to $10,000.

"She has a tremendous inner drive to be a great player," said her father, Ernie. "A kid has to want to do it."

Kidd's absence upsets Motta

DALLAS (AP) - First-round draft pick Jason Kidd is already in the doghouse of Dallas Mavericks coach Dick Motta, who is upset that the second pick overall in this year's NBA draft is sitting out the team's mini-camp this week.

"Jason looked me in the eye after the draft and said, 'If I have to crawl on my belly for free to get there (mini-camp), I'll be there. I took it as a point guard's word. I don't want this to affect our relationship, but I'm very upset,'" Motta said before a team dinner Tuesday night.

Kidd is still unsigned, but the Mavericks offered him a $36 million insurance policy to attend the four-day camp. But Aaron Goodwin, Kidd's agent, said the Mavericks' offer was unacceptable.

Every other Mavericks' rookie, veteran and free agent, with the exception of forward Lorenzo Williams, who had an illness in the family, reported to the voluntary camp. Two-a-days began today.

"We had talked about this. We told Kidd if he was really interested in polishing up his tarnished image, he should do blank and blank and blank. One of those things was to come to mini-camp. That idea was endorsed by him, his family and his agent," Motta said.

"I can honestly look anyone in the eye and say him not being here will have no bearing on how he's treated once he does get here. But what a great opportunity to get a jump start on next season. Now, he's deprived himself of that."

"But I'm not going to let Jason not being here tarnish that everyone else is here, Jason is just going to miss some great coaching," Motta said.

Motta said Roy Tarpley, a former Mavericks star who was banned from the NBA in October of 1991 after refusing to take a drug test, was an unexpected visitor to club offices on Monday.

Tarpley is awaiting word from the league on whether he will be reinstated.

"He just walked into my office," Motta said. "You could have knocked me over with a feather. It was a nice visit, a social thing. We shook hands and talked about old times. I told him how lousy he looked with his earring. He enjoyed himself, and I did, too."

Decorate your home with 'old' furniture

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Edition
Having recycled Grandma's quilts, Mom's china and Aunt Hannah's highboy, Americans are scouring the flea markets and thrift shops to stock up on furnishings that belonged to someone else's relatives.

Recycling is the fashionable new name for a practice as old as the hills - namely, filling a home with good used stuff.

Can you find valuable items in a thrift shop or flea market? You bet, says Terry Kovel of Shaker Heights, Ohio. Not long ago Kovel, co-author of Kovel's Antiques & Collectibles Price List 1994 (Crown, $13) and many other books about antiques and collectibles, was asked by a local charity to value a donated plate.

"It was a rare Nippon plate, worth $900," she says.

The moral of her story is that the knowledgeable shopper can find great buys at second-hand outlets.

"For the best buys, go to places that are off the beaten track, such as farm auctions in rural areas and rummage sales held by church and school groups," says Kovel. "The problem is that you need to be persistent since you can't count on finding something all the time. The edges of the country are more expensive than the middle, and there are better pickings in the Midwest."

Even without special knowledge, it's possible to furnish a home at a fraction of the cost of new items. The rewards may be furniture to hand down to your kids - who may well dispose of it at some future yard sale.

"We are still using the Sheraton-style furniture we bought at house sales in the 1950s," says Kovel, a second-hand shopper from way back.

Decades ago, classic 18th century and early 19th century style pieces were prominent; then came the great period for Victorian items. Old mission pieces came next. Available today are 1950s items, some Victoriana and some Mission, and lots of accessories and collectibles.

Early one weekend morning, Kovel shopped a flea market in the parking lot of her Louisville hotel, where she bought a small tin toy for 50 cents, worth $5 to $10, and a pair of Russel Wright salt and pepper shakers for $1, worth about $15.

"The interesting part," says Kovel, "is that five people who must have been dealers were grabbing stuff right and left."

Shopping for second-hand items is much more competitive than it used to be, with many more knowledgeable collectors and dealers after the same items.

"For weekend sales, be there early and find out which days the thrift shops put new stuff out, or go in every day," says Kovel.

As for the Salvation Army, "go in every day to see what they have."

Though it's far from the only source, the Salvation Army is probably the most common recycling station in the country. There are 1,480 thrift stores throughout the United States and all of them stock used furniture and other items for the home. They are patronized not only by people who can't afford to buy new but by Senators' wives and suburbanites who could, says Col. Leon Ferraez, national communications director at Salvation Army headquarters in Alexandria, Va.

Since the charity organization will take virtually anything, what's for sale at any one store varies from time to time. Each store strives to have on hand a basic stock that includes living room, dining room and bedroom furniture as well as lamps, bookshelves and knickknacks.

The good news is that everything donated that's deemed usable is available in the stores. Nothing - not even an obvious antique - is siphoned off and sold separately to antique dealers. The thrift stores that draw their stock from wealthy neighborhoods are more likely to have better merchandise, admits Ferraez. For example, stores in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the Washington area and Stamford, Conn., have a reputation for good buys.

Although prices are related to actual value, some estimators are more conversant with the market than others, so it's not impossible for a real bargain to turn up. Tales of items of great worth bought for a song are part of the folklore of the Salvation Army. Some of the stories are even true, says Ferraez.

One that Ferraez can vouch for concerns a unique item of folk art - a handmade American flag patchwork quilt that turned up in a collection drop box in Minneapolis. The quilt, authenticated by a museum curator, was sold for $500 at a Minneapolis thrift store.

A less reliable tale that has been told for years is about a piano that was sold for $25 because it didn't work. The buyer is supposed to have discovered that the keys were blocked by a Stradivarius violin stored in its cavity.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been having very bad pain in my shoulders, and cannot sleep at night because of it. I thought it was arthritis, but my doctor did blood tests and said it was polymyalgia rheumatica, a muscle inflammation condition. He put me on a low dose of cortisone for several months. I don't like taking medicine for that long. What are your ideas on polymyalgia rheumatica? What is it? I've never heard of it. — Mrs. W.B.

ANSWER: Regular readers of this column know all about polymyalgia rheumatica, a frequent topic in this space over the years. And not a week goes by without a bundle of letters on the subject arriving in my mail.

We hardly ever see PMR in those younger than 50, and it favors women over men, 2 to 1.

Patients can easily dismiss PMR distress initially as some form of arthritis, while in fact the pain is not from joints, but from muscle stiffness and inflammation. The blood test you had was undoubtedly to measure the blood sedimentation rate, which is quite high in PMR patients. That test is one of the standard indicators of the problem.

Your cortisone therapy is standard treatment for bringing the inflammation under control. Many patients take the drug for two or more years, and some take it for life. But the dosage is usually quite low and not enough to cause great problems.

Don't paint the PMR picture in quite such bleak tones. I think you can continue your drug therapy and rest easy. Your doctor will be watching for undue effects. In fact, only high dosages of cortisone cause the trouble - thinning skin, weight gain, easy bruising and bone weakening.

For a more complete discussion, send for a copy of my PMR booklet. Write to: Dr. Donohue - No. 45, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have aortic stenosis. A doctor told me about it after he heard a heart murmur. That was years back. Until recently, I was not bothered by it. Lately, I have been getting out of breath. An echocardiogram showed I had a valve narrowing. My doctor says I need a valve replacement. He also wants heart catheterization before the surgery. Like lots of people, I wonder if all this is necessary. — H.L.

ANSWER: I'm afraid it is necessary. The aortic valve prevents blood from flowing back into the heart after the heart has pumped it out into the aorta, the largest artery. When that control valve narrows - stenosis - the heart has to pump very hard to get blood out. In time, the heart enlarges and weakens from the greater effort.

A mild stenosis might not cause symptoms, but if the narrowing progresses, respiratory distress, chest pain and fainting might occur as warnings. Surgery should be done as soon as possible after such signs, for left on its own, the heart can go off on a path of eventual failure.

The doctor needs catheterization to check out your heart arteries. An echocardiogram tells much about heart valves, but little about the complete artery status.

Incidentally, vessels clogging can also be corrected at the time of the valve-replacement surgery.

FOR R.R.: Hair thinning at menopause is explained by hormonal changes. Women produce both male and female hormones, with female hormones dominant. At menopause, female hormone production tapers off, permitting the male counterpart to take over a bit. One sign of that is hair thinning.

Minoxidil, which your doctor recommends, can help. It comes as a spray. Spironolactone is another drug, an oral one, that can be used for the problem.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband had surgery for nonmalignant polyp removal. His doctor wants him to have a repeat colonoscopy in a year. Another doctor said the repeat colonoscopy should be done within three years. Who's right? — M.H.

ANSWER: Doctors usually consider it safe to wait three years for the repeat colonoscopic examination after removal of a polyp. If no polyp is found at that three-year check, then it's all right to wait five years for the next colon examination.

Those guidelines might be altered by circumstances surrounding each case. If there are multiple polyps or if the patient has a family history of cancer, more frequent checkups would be in order.

Your husband's doctor has a pretty good reason, I'm sure, for wanting a checkup on a shorter schedule. Ask him.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Sometimes I blush for no reason and get blotchy, especially in the neck area. I work with the public, so it can be frustrating. Sometimes, just worrying about this makes things worse. Is there something to do to correct this? My pharmacist has no idea what I am anxiously awaiting your answer. — W.M.

ANSWER: A sudden dilation of facial blood vessels causes a blush. That dilation is controlled by nerves and by chemicals the body makes in response to emotional distress, as in embarrassment.

Some say the production of those body chemicals can be controlled by cutting down on foods that favor it. The idea merits a try, although I cannot vouch for its effectiveness. You would avoid suspect foods such as tomatoes, spinach, eggplant, cheese, red wine, chicken liver and beefsteak.

The beta blocker drug nadolol has been used when the blushing episodes become frequent and distressing to the patient. Judicious use of tranquilizing drugs can be tried when nothing else works.

At the risk of alarming readers unnecessarily, I must mention that there are a few rare but serious illnesses associated with uncontrolled flushing. Carcinoid tumor is an example. Despite the rarity of that connection, I deem it worthwhile to mention the situation to the doctor.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read a recent discussion of fiber, and the percentage of it in various foods. Would you please discuss percentages in foods. I believe this knowledge might start lots of people off on good eating habits for health. Older readers might benefit especially. — P.J.

ANSWER: I think you are right; fiber consciousness would not hurt any of us, no matter our age.

First of all, let's acknowledge the fact that anyone who eats any good mix of fruits, vegetables, whole grains and nuts has nothing to worry about as far as fiber is concerned. Most of us don't get those fiber sources regularly, though.

The authorities now recommend a minimum 35 grams of fiber daily for health. Most of us get only a third of that.

Here are some typical food fiber contents (all numbers in grams): three-quarters of a cup of kidney beans, 9.3; one-third cup of all-bran cereal, 8.5; three figs, 7.2; three prunes, 4.7; a potato with skin, 4; an apple or pear, 4; a banana, 2.5; a half-cup of baked beans, 8.8; three cups of popcorn, 15.5; a half-cup of broccoli, 4.1.

These are typical foods on most diets. For a more complete listing, see a nutrition text in your library.

IN RESPONSE to reader requests, Dr. Donohue has compiled a list of his pamphlets on various medical problems. Readers who want one should send their request to Dr. Donohue - List, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - Howard Stern's "Private Parts" may be available to millions, but he says his bank account is nobody's business. Stern, the radio shock jock who is running for governor, sued the state Ethics Commission on Thursday, seeking to strike down the law that requires candidates for public office to disclose their finances.

"While this requirement is intrusive and onerous to every citizen, it is especially invasive to someone like me who lives a highly visible life," Stern said in an affidavit filed in state Supreme Court.

Stern has until Aug. 30 to submit forms detailing his and his family's assets and liabilities.

Stern, the Libertarian Party candidate, is running on just three promises: to reinstate the death penalty, streamline toll collections and require road crews to work at night. He says once those goals are complete he would resign.

His book "Private Parts" is a best-seller.

CLASSIFIED ADS
 Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	5.00
2 days per word	.20	5.50
3 days per word	.27	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.80
5 days per word	.50	11.80

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
 Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines-those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing; all capital letters. Rates are 4.25 per column inch; 3.05 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALS
 Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS
 Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers an additional insertion will be published.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Some days, I change weight more than I do on other days. I am not fooling. In fact, my doctor understands the problem. He says I have what is called "cyclic edema." Have you encountered this? Put another way, I mean I can put on pounds some days while eating my normal diet. Then it goes away the next day. I'm at a loss to explain this to friends. Are water pills the answer? — Mrs. V.K.J.

ANSWER: Edema is swelling from fluid retention. Cyclic edema is a daily fluctuation in fluid weight. The variation can be explained by changes in daily activity. For people like you, just being up and about a lot can cause a sharp daily change in weight from retained fluid.

Also, for some reason, the person with cyclic edema experiences greater than normal sodium retention in the erect position, and that extra sodium causes even greater fluid retention. It shows up as erratic weight from day to day.

If you lie down for a couple of hours during the day, you might balance out the fluid retention factor. Or you might put on elastic stockings on arising in the morning. That discourages swellings.

Another kind of cyclic edema happens to some women at the time of menstruation. Hormonal changes at such times encourage leakage of blood fluid into tissues. Again, weight gain follows.

For some, water pills — diuretics — help in either form of cyclic edema. However, diuretics tend to lose effectiveness over time. At such times, actually going off the pills for a month or so helps coax fluid out of tissue. Cutting back on sodium intake helps in either type of cyclic edema.

Cantaloupe crop thrives despite drought

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers using a new irrigating technology are harvesting a bumper cantaloupe crop despite drought-like conditions, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Dr. Frank Dainello, Extension horticulturist in Bryan, said 10 to 15 large cantaloupe producers and over a hundred small producers are using a new technique called plasticulture. Statewide, some 10,000 acres of melons are irrigating in this way.

The technique incorporates drip irrigation and plastic mulch to reduce the amount of water needed to produce cantaloupe and watermelon crops.

"Tubes run under the plastic mulch covering the soil and keep the soil wet," Dainello said. "The plastic is used as a barrier so we don't lose water through evaporation."

"The conventional way of irrigating, which involves flooding on specific plots, loses water to evaporation and runoff," he said.

Larry Stein, Extension horticulturist in Uvalde, said areas of South Texas need to store more water to help carry them through the hot, dry conditions.

"The plastic mulch, used on cantaloupes and watermelons, allow producers to catch and utilize what would become rain runoff," Stein said. "With moisture so scarce, it is important to capture what rain runoff we can and benefit from it."

Allen Matthies, Extension agent in Pecos County, said areas of Far West Texas have made an earlier cantaloupe crop using the plasticulture methods.

"Our cantaloupe was harvested 15 days ahead of schedule because of the new irrigation system using plastic mulch," Matthies said. "We finally hit the July 4th market, which is something that we haven't been able to do before."

"The quality and quantity of the melon has also increased," he said. "We are producing more, and our melons have the highest sugar content anywhere in Texas."

While cantaloupe producers are reaping the benefits from a successful harvest, corn producers may be seeing a less successful crop.

James Blalock, Extension agronomist in Dallas, said North Texas producers started cutting corn for silage because the long dry spell killed most of it.

"Last week the northern part of Texas received between 10 to 20 inches of rain," Blalock said, "but it came too late to save our corn crop."

Jon Zeitler, meteorologist at the National Weather Service Agricultural Service Center in College Station, said hot and dry conditions will continue across Texas this week.

"A large ridge of high pressure will bring above-normal temperatures across Texas," he said.

"Rain is expected for the High Plains, Low Rolling Plains, Northern Blacklands and parts of East Texas," Zeitler said. "Dry conditions will continue to persist in South Central areas of Texas."

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture adequate to short. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Corn tasseling, some disease problems. Sorghum benefitting from rain. Harvesting onions, potatoes. Cattle in good condition.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture short to very short. Dry, hot conditions damaged pastures, ranges. Irrigated cotton, corn, sorghum, peanuts, vegetables in good condition. Cattle in good condition.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture adequate. Pastures, ranges improved with rains. Cotton squaring, setting bolls. Peanuts, sorghum progressing. Livestock in good condition.

NORTH TEXAS: Soil moisture surplus to short. Pastures, ranges benefited from rain. Cotton 75 percent squaring. Sorghum heading, 10 percent turning color. Harvesting wheat, watermelons, cantaloupes, tomatoes. Peach harvest completed.

EAST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in fair condition. Cutting hay. Harvesting peaches, vegetables. Corn denting. Spraying for pecan pests.

FAR WEST TEXAS: Soil moisture very short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in fair condition. Cotton, sorghum need rain. Cultivating crops. Harvesting onions, cantaloupes, peaches. Baling hay. Gardens progressing. Livestock fair to good.

WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture very short to adequate. Pastures, ranges improved with rains. Oats, dryland peanuts in poor condition. Sorghum needs moisture. Harvesting peaches. Livestock in good condition.

CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture short. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Harvesting sorghum. Cotton blooming, good fruit load. Spraying for pecan pests. Cattle in fair condition, losing weight.

SOUTHEAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate to very short. Pastures, ranges need moisture. Harvesting watermelons, corn, vegetables, sorghum, hay. Irrigating cotton. Gardens showing drought stress. Spraying pecans for pests.

SOUTHWEST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Harvesting hay, sorghum. Corn in fair condition. Cotton progressing. Vegetables need moisture.

COASTAL BEND: Soil moisture short. Pastures, ranges need rain. Harvesting corn, cotton, rice, sorghum, soybeans. Early planted cotton defoliating. Pecan crop fair. Livestock in good condition.

SOUTH TEXAS: Soil moisture short. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Harvesting cotton, sorghum, peppers. Corn denting, harvesting. Irrigating peaches, sugarcane.

Apollo 11 CAPCOM remembers next-best assignment in 1969

By JIM HUTTON
San Antonio Express-News
SAN ANTONIO — Former astronaut Charles Duke Jr. wanted to be the first American to walk on the moon.

He came close: His voice linked the moon lander to Earth.

Now a New Braunfels businessman, Duke served as one of three capsule communicators (CAPCOMs) at Mission Control in Houston during Apollo 11's heroic lunar landing 25 years ago.

Requested by Mission Commander Neil Armstrong, the first man to walk on the moon, to be a CAPCOM, Duke also had worked in that role on Apollo 10.

"I was very excited and honored to be selected because we all knew it was the first landing on the moon," said Duke, a driver of the second Moon Rover vehicle across the lunar surface on Apollo 16 in April 1972.

"I was the most qualified of the astronauts not in training for a mission at that time. I think the (Apollo 11) crew looked at me as an experienced person not in training," added Duke, who owns Charlie Duke Enterprises, an investment company, and works in a Christian lay ministry.

He had been among 19 men chosen by NASA as astronauts in April 1966. "It was a rigorous process from September 1965 to April 1966. I was told 3,500 people applied and out of them, 350 probably were contenders," Duke recalled.

"When we reported in, we were objective. We were rookies and qualified folks were above us," the 58-year-old former astronaut added.

Leading into the Apollo 11 mission, three teams, each with a CAPCOM, worked eight-hour shifts "in the trench," as Duke called the front row of consoles in the Mission Control Room.

"I was on the team for the landing and that's the way we trained," Duke said. "While the crew was training in Florida, we committed the Gold Team to training for the landing."

However, the landing turned into a nail-biting, suspense-packed ordeal for Duke at the CAPCOM console and other personnel monitoring Apollo 11 from Houston.

Duke remembered saying: "Eagle, (this is) Houston. If you read, you're 'go' for powered descent (to the lunar surface). Over."

But suddenly, during the descent, a program alarm on the Lunar Module Eagle's computer signaled a "Twelve-oh-two" (1202).

A 1202 was an "executive overflow on a fixed computer cycle that prioritized each job" on the lunar module, Duke said.

"The first job perhaps was the control of the vehicle (lunar module), then navigation and so on," he added.

"I was shocked when I heard a 1202," Duke admitted. "We had not seen it (1202) in simulation. We had trained on many computer overloads. We also ran all the tests of the software.

"Normally, a computer alarm was significant. In simulation, it always required abort or fly manually."

Duke said he was looking in a book for information on a 1202 when finally, officials agreed "it (1202) meant the vehicle still was in control and all systems were go," he remembered.

"Then the alarm went off again a 1201 this time just as I was listening to the debate about what to do," Duke said.

A 1201 was another type of "executive overflow."

Finally, Duke said: "Eagle, you're go for landing."

"Whether they responded to the call I gave was up to the crew (Armstrong and Lunar Module Pilot Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr.), which could obey or disobey and abort," Duke added.

"They (Armstrong and Aldrin) had more display (information) on board and knew more about the workings of the spacecraft. It would be a lot easier being there seeing dust come up (from the lunar surface) than at Mission Control where we'd see numbers 1 second delayed."

Another problem was that the Eagle had little descent fuel remaining as the astronauts tried to find a suitable landing spot amid decreasing altitude and the possibility of crashing because the ascent engine couldn't be engaged in time, Duke recalled.

"I made a 30-second call (meaning only 30 seconds of fuel remained) and Neil still was flying over the surface."

"It's a trite phrase 'You could hear a pin drop' but it was dead silence (in Mission Control Room)," Duke said.

"They were running out of gas."

"When Buzz said they made contact, I said: 'We copy you down, Eagle.' Still, there was dead silence. Then when Neil said, 'Houston, (Sea of) Tranquility Base here. The Eagle has landed,' I said, 'Roger Tranquility, we copy you on the ground. You've got a bunch of guys about to turn blue. We're breathing again. Thanks a lot.'"

"I've never experienced such suspense in my life," Duke said. Immediately after the landing, a fresh team took over in the Mission Control Room.

Duke went home to sleep and later viewed the moonwalks on television.

"When I saw Neil step down on the surface I had pride in America, my friends and NASA," Duke said.

"Everyone had that desire to say, 'Gosh, I wish I could have done it.'"

"I was hoping to get to do it. Whether you're the first or the 10,000th person to do it, it's the experience that counts."

When Less Is More

Each year, every American uses about 190 pounds of plastic. Of that, about 60 pounds is packaging that gets thrown away after opening purchases. In fact, plastic used for packaging consumes some 33-percent of the limited space available in landfills. Reducing this waste starts in the store. Look for packages that offer more contents, and LESS waste. Buy potatoes, carrots and other vegetables loose, whenever you can. Besides cutting waste, you'll help send manufacturers the message that smart shoppers know less is more!

Shopping? Bring Along a Bag

American shoppers use billions of bags annually. But, if we all use just one less a month, we'll cut that use by hundreds of millions a year. That adds up to a BIG BONUS, because one 20-year old tree makes only 700 or so brown grocery bags. If your purchase is small, think twice about taking a bag. Or, bring a bag from home to use one more time before it's recycled. Washable canvas shopping bags are inexpensive and last for years.

Sign of the Times

Concerned manufacturers and retailers now label products and shelves to help consumers choose products that are GOOD for the environment. Look for symbols or copy advising which boxes and bags are made from "recycled" paper. Other packages may say "recyclable". These use new raw materials, but at least they are suitable for recycling. So-called "biodegradable" plastics never really break down to more than smaller plastic bits under the ideal conditions. Other bags and bottles may use plastics reclaimed through recycling, consuming no new petroleum products.
