Clinton returns from trip to Middle East

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Returning home from a week of shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East, President Clinton today pledged an ongoing U.S. commitment to fostering peace in the region, declaring, "the peacemakers are the future."

Clinton, who spoke briefly at a White House arrival ceremony, said the peace treaty signed between Israel and Jordan represented "a crucial step on the road to a comprehensive peace in the Middle East."
And looking ahead to what remains to be done, he added: "The United States will continue to stand shoulder to shoulder with those who seek the peace, with those who take risks for peace, with those who stand up for change in the face of terrorists and extremists who seek to destroy the peace by killing the innocent."

"They cannot, they must not, they will not succeed," he said. "They are the past. The peacemakers are the future."

After an overnight flight home from Saudi Arabia, the final stop of his grueling five-day diplomatic trek, Clinton added with a smile, "It's been an exciting trip but it's great to be home."

The president made no reference to the midterm elections coming up in little more than a week, but he clearly had them in mind as he spoke about the need to "continue to work for renewal at home."

"We've made a start in putting government on the side of ordinary Americans," he said, echoing a frequent Democratic theme from the campaign trail. "We must turn from the past and embrace the future."

In his weekly radio address, taped Friday before he left the Middle East, Clinton argued that new evidence of robust economic growth should convince Americans his policies represent "the path to the future." He delivered the address at the Tactical Assembly Area Liberty in the desert outside Kuwait City.

Early voting reaches 900-ballot milestone

Deputies in the Deaf Smith County Clerk's office expected the number of early voters in the Nov. 8 general election to surpass the 900 mark by closing time Friday.

By mid-afternoon, the count stood at 894. The early voting period began on Oct. 19.

Citizens have until 5 p.m. Friday to mark ballots prior to election day. Voters will decide on a number of statewide races, including governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general as well as judicial positions and other state offices in the general election.

Statewide attention has been focused on the race for governor, between the Democratic incumbent, Ann Richards, and the GOP opponent, George W. Bush.

Another contest drawing attention is for the seat now held by U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison, Republican. She is opposed by a Democrat, Richard Fisher.

In Deaf Smith County, voters will decide the contest between Johnnie Turrentine, Democratic justice of the peace incumbent, and her GOP challenger, Dan Hall.

The Precinct 2 commissioner's seat is contested by the incumbent on the Democratic ticket, Lupe Chavez, and Conny Whitehorn, Republican.

Kermit the Frog hits Oxford; first amphibian to speak there

By SUE LEEMAN
Associated Press Writer
OXFORD, England (AP) - This time, you couldn't blame the audience for turning green with envy.

With nary a frog in his throat, the imitable Kermit of Muppets fame arrived in triumph to the stately halls of Oxford University on Friday, becoming, yes, at last, the first amphibian ever to address that training ground of prime ministers and presidents, the Oxford Union debating society.

"I really am very honored," he declared, straightening his black bow tie and flicking his coat tails. "These are some very nicely hallowed halls."

The guest of honor wore his customary benign expression, and shared his thoughts on everything from mosquito hors d'oeuvres ("love 'em") to men's underwear ("I prefer being naked").

And, of course, he talked about his biggest problem, the amorous Miss Piggy.

To a generation of students raised on "Sesame Street" and "The Muppet Show," the goggle-eyed one is an object of admiration.

"He's an icon," said 19-year-old biology student Tom Walker as he waited in the cold outside the Oxford Union's 150-year-old debating chamber.

More than 900 students lined up to see their hero, some of them for as long as three hours.

And for 30 minutes Kermit wowed them with a string of outrageous quips and folksy homilies. Risking a backlash from the possessive Miss P., he flirted shamelessly with his interviewer, TV personality Mariella Frostrup, who was clad appropriately in Kermit-green leather.

For a frog, he showed a neat grasp of British current events.

How was the swamp from which he sprang?

"Damp, a lot like England, only fewer scandals."

Thundering applause.

Would he turn into a prince if kissed?

"Nah, the Windsors have enough problems without Miss Piggy hanging out around Buckingham Palace."

So what is it with Miss Piggy?

"Our relationship is purely professional. She's a pig, for crying out loud!"

Vocational department gives students educational options

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Gone are the days when high school students can while away their time in wood shop or auto mechanics, puttering around while waiting to graduate.

In fact, today's vocational education classes are geared toward high technology fields that involve computers, programming and the like.

For students at Hereford High School, there are a variety of vocational classes available and a course track that challenges the college preparatory classes for toughness.

Tech Prep is a fairly new offering at Hereford High, and vocational counselor Cliff Golden is trying to make sure as many students as possible hear about it.

Golden explains that the high school is like a spectrum -- at one end are the students who are committed to going to college, who are taking the harder academic courses necessary for college admission. At the other end are those students who have no desire to attend college, who do not want any further education and plan on working in unskilled or semi-skilled jobs.

In between "encompasses 60 percent, 70 percent of the student body," Golden said, students who may want to take some college classes eventually, or who want to pursue an associates degree or training certificate at a technological school or community college.

Tech Prep, he continued, simply gives students a way to pursue possible career opportunities while still in high school, which in turn gives them experience they will need as adults.

For some students enrolling in tech prep courses -- which include the same core academic courses as those required for the college prep track -- taking high school classes may lead to a head start in college.

Golden said HHS has agreements in place with four area colleges -- Amarillo College, Texas State Technical College, Clarendon College and Frank Phillips Junior College -- to grant college credit for some high school work.

If a student graduates from high school after having pursued a tech prep track in designated fields, he can declare a college major, enroll in classes at one of the colleges and be given as many as 31 college credit hours based on work done as a junior or senior.

Golden cautioned that the 31 hours credit is only for students pursuing the business and office track, while most others offer up to 18 hours credit.

Still, he said, a student could enroll in a college honoring high school credits, stay there for a semester and have the high school classes added as college credit, then transfer to any college desired and enter with much less time required to attain a degree.

Accident scene

Hereford rescue workers give emergency treatment to wreck victim Deborah K. Buck after a two-vehicle accident Friday morning. According to police reports Buck was driving her 1983 Buick Le Sabre east on 16th street at 10:19 a.m. when a 1980 Chevrolet pickup driven by Maricela Cervantez, 24, failed to yield the right of way while traveling north on Avenue H. The two vehicles collided at the intersection. Cervantez was uninjured while Buck was transported to Hereford Regional Medical Center with minor injuries. The investigation is continuing.

Cool front brings clouds, chance of showers to area

By The Associated Press

A cool front that was inching its way into the Panhandle was expected to stall along a line from west of Wichita Falls on Saturday night.

In North Texas, skies are expected to be mostly cloudy on Sunday with a chance of showers in the west and central portions of the region. Highs should range from 70 in the northwest to 79 in the southeast.

Sunday night should be mostly cloudy with a chance of showers and thunderstorms with lows from 55 to 60.

West Texans have already got of a taste of the cold front, which had pushed into the northwest Panhandle early Saturday with windy conditions behind it. Cloudy skies and some fog had covered a large portion of the region.

Areas of fog and drizzle were possible on Saturday night from the South Plains to the Edwards Plateau. On Sunday, those areas were expected to be mostly cloudy, while cloudy skies and a chance of rain were called for over the Panhandle. Sunny to mostly sunny skies are forecast for the western sections of West Texas on Sunday.

In South Texas, skies were expected to be cloudy Saturday night with areas of fog. Temperatures were expected to fall to near 60 Saturday night.

Early Saturday, Texas was rainfree with clear skies over the eastern half of the state, while clouds were on the increase along the Rio Grande. There was some patchy fog reported in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area and an area of low clouds from the Alpine-Fort Stockton area extending north into the Panhandle.

Temperatures ranged from the 40s to the 60s.

Don't forget to change clocks back one hour

WASHINGTON (AP) - America is back on standard time. The shift from Daylight to Standard time occurred at 2 a.m. Sunday, moving an hour of daylight from evening to morning and providing an extra hour of sleep to replace that lost in the spring. In addition to changing the clocks, public safety experts are again encouraging another change - put new batteries in the home smoke detector. The International Association of Fire Chiefs wants replacing smoke and fire detector batteries to become as common a ritual as changing the clocks, in an effort to reduce the nation's fire death toll.

Local Roundup

Freshmen set supper

The Hereford High School freshman class supper will be held on Friday in the Hereford Junior High School cafeteria. The dinner will be from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Cost is $4 for a bowl of chili. Carry-out orders also are available for an extra 50 cents.

Kiwanians to cook pancakes

The Hereford Kiwanis Club will hold its annual pancake supper on Tuesday, Nov. 8, in the HHS cafeteria. Cost to attend is $3 per person, with pre-schoolers admitted free. It will be from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. and admission entitles diners to eat all they can. Carry-out orders also are available for an extra 50 cents. Proceeds will go to benefit a variety of Kiwanis activities in Hereford.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The chief defense witness for a man accused of killing a police officer was arrested on four Harris County perjury warrants as he left the courtroom. The jury didn't see Friday's arrest. Dallas forensic scientist John Castle was arrested after his two hours of testimony in the trial of Eugene Standerford, who is accused of killing a Fort Worth police officer in an alcohol-related wreck. The judge barred jurors, who are being sequestered, from hearing anything about the perjury allegations. Tarrant County bailiffs ushered Castle, 46, into an empty courtroom and arrested him, officials said. A Harris County grand jury indicted Castle on Monday on four counts of aggravated perjury in connection with his defense testimony during a capital murder trial in October 1993, a Harris County assistant district attorney said.

treating often will bolt into the street in their pursuit of candy. They urge drivers to go slowly through residential areas, and to honk their horns when driving on dimly lit streets to let children know the cars are there. DALLAS (AP) - State meteorologists are too quick to predict smoggy days and cry ozone alert, according to a report by Texas Journal. New information about daily smog levels from May to October shows that meteorologists have a dreadful record predicting when ozone levels will exceed federal standards. Ozone is a gas that can build up when sunlight combines with automobile exhaust fumes. The excess ozone creates pollutants found in smog when it combines with auto exhaust and factory smoke. The Texas Journal, a weekly publication of The Wall Street Journal, reported last week that 80 advisories have been issued so far this year in the state. There were also six days when ozone surpassed federal standards, but no ozone warnings were issued. LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) - Michael Sonner, who faces death by lethal injection during the first week of January for gunning down a state trooper, told the judge who issued the sentence he wants to die as soon as possible.

AUSTIN (AP) - Lots of people head out on Halloween night looking for a good scare. But thousands find real ones, like traffic accidents or children harmed by unsafe costumes. This year, The Texas Insurance Advisory Association and the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office have offered several safety tips for Halloween. The groups say motorists should be extremely careful and remember that excited youngsters trick-or-you look at it," he said. Currently, Hereford High School offers a wide variety of vocational classes, including: ag science, home economics, parenting and child development, automotive technology, photography, graphic communications, co-op programs, health occupations, industrial technology, law enforcement, business, physical education/athletics, health, drivers education and teacher or library assistants. "As you can see, the basic core curriculum is the day-to-day realistic life skills," Golden said. Deciding to pursue courses in the tech prep track is not a one-way decision, Golden said. Because the core courses are the same between tech prep and college prep, there is no reason why a student cannot decide during high school to focus more on college and less on vocational classes, he said, or the other way around. However, he noted, "if the student is just trying to evaluate, to find their niche, it's up to the counselor to try to determine what the individual student's desires and interests are," then steer that student toward those courses. To help students decide what they want to do in life, interest inventory assessments are available. These are tests students take that give counselors an idea of where a student's career interests lie, thus providing a tool that will help plan career options.

However, Golden cautioned, "interest inventory is one thing, abilities is another and it's very, very difficult not to put your two cent's in, so to speak" and influence a student's answers.

Increasing technology combined with the development of programs such as tech prep to channel students toward careers in vocational or technological fields has changed the public perception of vocational programming. "Those that took the home ec, those that took the wood shop, those that

Tops for Halloween

Hereford Regional Medical Center on Friday held its annual costume and decorating contest, with top honors claimed by the business office. The business office won the overall prize for decorating and costumes, with employees shown in their 1950s outfits. Second prize was radiology, while medical records came in third. Mary Alaniz, shown at far right, won an individual prize for best in character. Most scary costumes were the black shrouds donned by radiology, while Crystal Bacucus' body repairman won for most original costume. Shown are business office employees: back, from left, Randy Talley, Jackie Mercer, Mary Ann Treviso, Sandra Allm, Jennifer Molina, Lucy Wheat, Kathy Rios, peggie Fox and Mary Alaniz; and front, from left, Camila Romero, Lupe Padilla, Kim Leonard, Margot Cortez, Esther Sanchez, Lydia Leal and Liz Torres.

Boothies renew claims that killer lived in Texas

DALLAS (AP) - With a renewed energy sparked by calls for the exhumation of the body buried in John Wilkes Booth's grave, the Boothies are on the march again in Granbury. The Boothies, as they call themselves in the Brazos River city 60 miles west of Dallas, do not believe that Union troops shot and killed Booth after he assassinated President Abraham Lincoln in 1865. Instead, they contend he escaped and came to Granbury in 1870 as saloon keeper John St. Helen. Last week, descendants of the famous actor and two historians petitioned a Maryland court last week to exhume the body buried in Booth's grave in Baltimore and identify it once and for all. "Katy bar the door if they find out it's not him," said Jo Ann Miller, a leader of the escape theorists. "It would pretty much rewrite history. Oliver Stone would come to Granbury and shoot a movie." An actress and playwright, Ms. Miller wrote a play to preserve the St. Helen story. It ran at the 100-year-old Granbury Opera House in 1986 and again in 1992. While mainstream historians say a Union soldier shot and killed Booth at a Virginia farm 12 days after Lincoln was killed, "escape-theory" historians contend that some people who identified Booth's body at the farm and at his autopsy later signed affidavits that they really didn't believe it was him. Some of Booth's family members also claimed that he lived on after 1865. Ms. Miller's play is based primarily on those affidavits, other historical inconsistencies and oral histories delivered by people who knew St. Helen in Texas. Local lore has it that St. Helen came to Granbury and ran the Lady Gay saloon on the town square. He also advised a fledgling theater group and introduced townspeople to a board game called backgammon. As the story goes, St. Helen became gravely ill in 1871 and, thinking he was about to die, confessed to some that he really was John Wilkes Booth. He told them that a hidden .44-caliber derringer, stashed behind some loose boards in his rooming house, was the pistol that killed Lincoln. Today, a Granbury family possesses the derringer, said Mary Kate Durham, whose family has lived in Hood County since 1859. "Since I was very young, I've always known the story of that gun," Ms. Durham is quoted as saying in Saturday's editions of The Dallas Morning News. "Why would anyone on his deathbed say he was Mr. Booth if he wasn't really?" Traditional historians contend the pistol was found in Ford's Theater the night of the assassination. The Boothies aren't sure where St. Helen went after departing from Granbury in 1871. In 1903, a man calling himself David George committed suicide by drinking arsenic in an Enid, Okla., hotel room. Before he died, he gave a deathbed confession saying he was John Wilkes Booth. Supposedly, the combination of arsenic and embalming formaldehyde mummified that man's body. Finis Bates, who was said to have heard St. Helen's 1871 admission, traveled to Oklahoma and identified the body as that of St. Helen. He bought the corpse and put it on display as John Wilkes Booth. No one seems to know where the mummy might be. Today, eyes are focused on the grave in Baltimore. If enough remains are left in the grave after 130 years, the petitioners want to use DNA testing to determine who is buried there.

Turrentine has training

Deaf Smith County Justice of the Peace recently completed a 20-hour training course conducted by the Texas Justice Court Training Center. The seminar in Lubbock was sponsored by the Justice of the Peace and Constables Association. At the conclusion of the seminar, Justice of the Peace Turrentine took part in an eight-hour course in medicolegal death investigations, conducted by the Lubbock sheriff's department. The Justice Court training offers Texas justices of the peace an opportunity to meet continuing judicial education requirements of the Texas Government Code. Topics covered included new penal code, juvenile law, forcible entry and detainer, inquests, small claims, contempt, bond setting, magistrate duties, criminal law issues and the Code of Judicial Conduct.

The Chamber and You

BY MIKE CARR
Executive Vice President

The next Sunday, Nov. 6, will be the kickoff of our holiday season. The Chamber, along with The Hereford Brand and KPAN and the many fine merchants of Hereford will host our "Open House" from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. with a theme of "A Bag Full of Christmas in Hereford." Participating merchants will be validating the special forms beginning next Sunday afternoon while you drop by and browse around and take advantage of the many fine bargains available. Validation of forms will continue all week with drawings to be held for five $100 shopping sprees. In addition to the shopping sprees, many other gifts will be offered as door prizes by merchants as a special appreciation for coming to the "Open House." The list of participating stores will be in next week's Hereford Brand and on KPAN. If your store would like to participate in this "Open House" promotion and you have not been contacted, you are invited to call the Chamber at 364-3333. We urge all merchants to join us in helping make this the biggest and best Holiday season ever.

This is always a fun and exciting time for everyone as we really get into the Holiday spirit. The Chamber of Commerce would like to welcome new Chamber members Steve and Virginia Mayer, the new owners of Anderson's Studio, now in their new location at 213 N. Main. The Mayers are new residents of Hereford, having moved here from Massachusetts. We welcome them and we wish them the very best... Congratulations to Dollar General on their opening this weekend at their location in North Gate Plaza... Opening Tuesday of next week will be the new Showcase Rental, also in North Gate Plaza... We will have ribbon cuttings scheduled for these stores this next week... Buddie's Supermarket which recently opened has closed, but the location will be used for another business to be announced in the very near future. Good things continue to happen as Hereford's newest businesses have created more than 100 new jobs. Let's keep up the good work!

Voter turnout seen as boon to Republicans

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Key Democratic constituencies - minorities, labor and the young - are likely to stay home in droves this Election Day, further depressing the party's prospects in House races, political analysts say.

At the same time, those who tend to favor Republican candidates, including conservative Christians, term-limits advocates and anti-immigration forces, are working overtime to turn out their voters.

"There is a more ideological electorate showing up than at any time since 1980," said Bill McInturff of Public Opinion Strategies, a GOP polling firm. That was the year Republicans made their last major inroads in the House, a 34-seat pickup.

A dozen political analysts interviewed recently view voter turnout as a major boon for the GOP this election, and the primary obstacle for Democrats.

In Kentucky's 2nd District, for example, Democrats are spending $25,000 or more in "soft" money to support state House and Senate candidates, and even a candidate for jailer in one key county.

If party faithful are disillusioned with national leaders, the reasoning goes, maybe they can be motivated to vote by capitalizing on the popularity of local candidates. That could indirectly help Democrat David Adkisson, the mayor of Owensboro who hopes to recapture a traditionally Democratic seat now held by Republican Rep. Ron Lewis.

"We are working from the ground up," said Tim Mulloy, Adkisson's campaign manager. "As these races generate enthusiasm and hard work, we believe it will be to our benefit."

In a Hart/Teeter poll of 1,203 registered voters nationwide Oct. 14-18, 65 percent of Republicans said they had a "great deal" of interest in the Nov. 8 elections. Just 55 percent of Democrats gave that answer.

For decades, voters have told pollsters that they preferred Democrats when asked which party's candidate they would vote for. Most recent national polls give Republicans a slight lead, the first time that's happened since the 1950s - which also is the last time the GOP controlled the House.

Republicans usually are better at turning out supporters in midterm elections, when a presidential election is not on the ballot, said Curtis Gans of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

"They tend to be those who vote more out of civic duty, those who are better educated, more upscale," Gans said.

Several factors are magnifying that trend, the analysts said.

President Clinton's approval ratings, although rebounding some following foreign policy successes in Haiti and the Middle East, remain low and discourage Democrats from voting.

In the South, where Democratic House candidates are hurting, Clinton's problems have triggered what Gans called "an accident that's been waiting to happen for 20 years ... the beginnings of a long-term realignment" of political power.

The president's unpopularity has been especially felt by endangered incumbents like Don Johnson, D-Ga., and Martin Lancaster, D-N.C., whose opponents have made support of Clinton an issue.

In states like Ohio and Michigan, Republican House candidates are getting top-of-the-ticket help from popular GOP governors who will draw voters to the polls. That hurts struggling Democrats like Reps. Eric Fingerhut and David Mann of Ohio, and Michigan's Rep. Sander Levin.

Also hurting Democrats are organized groups of evangelical Christians, term-limits supporters, gun owners and those who oppose immigration.

Anti-abortion forces are heavily behind Republican state Rep. Tad Jude in the northern suburbs of Minneapolis, while the National Rifle Association is working hard for Gary Revier, the GOP nominee in southwest Minnesota's 2nd District.

"The outsiders are motivated, people who are angry at the system," said Democratic pollster Tom King.

Federal Reserve member says regulations can hurt

WASHINGTON (AP) - Government regulations can do more harm than good in poor neighborhoods by imposing crushing burdens, a Federal Reserve board member said today.

"The chief obstacle to economic development in distressed neighborhoods is often government itself," said Lawrence Lindsey. "Maybe we should try getting government out of the way of the private sector instead."

Lindsey's remarks were in a speech to be delivered to a meeting of the Financial Institutions' Joint Housing Conference in Detroit.

The Federal Reserve member cited local zoning and tax rules, federal labor laws that he said drive up housing rehabilitation costs, and Housing and Urban Development rules that add red tape to loan applications.

For example, Lindsey said, there are federal lending rules requiring minimum downpayments for mortgages in poor neighborhoods that can be crippling.

"Often, a mortgage payment on a rehabilitated property is less than the current monthly rent payment the potential homeowner is now paying," Lindsey said. "But, because of the high rent, it is virtually impossible for the family to save enough for a downpayment."

He also singled out the Depression-era Glass Steagall Act that limits bank investments in some enterprises.

The law bars banks from taking equity positions when making some higher-risk loans, and that limits investment capital for the inner cities, he said.

Senate candidate had illegal nanny

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - Senate candidate Michael Huffington flew an illegal immigrant employee to Washington, D.C., at the same time he was co-sponsoring legislation forbidding such transportation across state lines.

The disclosure Friday came a day after Huffington admitted he hired the illegal immigrant as a nanny.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says there is no satisfactory substitute for brains, but—in some cases—silence does pretty well.

After all these years, I see that I was mistaken about Eve in the beginning; it is better to live outside the Garden with her than inside without her...I should be sorry to have that voice fall silent and pass out of my life." --Mark Twain

Lavon and I quietly observed our 43rd wedding anniversary Thursday. "Quietly" is an appropriate definition, I think, because I worked late at the office and she attended a study club meeting.

The wonder of the event, of course, is that she has put up with me for that long. Well, maybe it's really not that much of a mystery. We both worked at making our marriage a success. It took a lot of give and take, with her doing most of the giving.

There's not a doubt in my mind that she has made me a better person. Those who know us can attest to that fact. And, she did it with love and concern, not by nagging.

When you live with someone for so many years, you get to know them pretty well. When I went home for lunch Thursday, I eased to her side to give her a kiss and wish her a happy anniversary. She turned—and before I could say a word—planted a kiss on me and said, "Happy Anniversary!"

She beat me to the punch, again! Examples of the ridiculous costs burden which government regulations sometimes place on businesses and individuals were recently noted in a column by Gene Dow, Seminole Sentinel.

Several examples: --A small weekly newspaper in another state was fined $3,700 by a federal fair housing agency. It was imposed because the paper ran a customer's classified "for rent" ad with the words "adults only" and "no children." That's unfair discrimination against potential tenants, according to federal rules.

--A Southern California dry cleaner was fined $250 for posting the number of employees injured on the job in the previous 12 months. There were no injuries, thus the business was fined for not posting a blank sheet of paper.

--The Environmental Protection Agency fined a North Carolina company $5,000 for inadvertently writing the company's name on line 17 rather than line 18 on a form. The same company was fined $600,000 for failing to fill out a federal form, even though the company complied with an identical state law.

--The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers fined a Minnesota farmer $45,000 for filling in a one-acre glacial pothole that was making farming difficult on his property. Having fined him, the Corps made him dig out the fill.

--A Maryland couple suffered devastating financial losses when the endangered puritan tiger beetle was found on their property. Because of the beetle, the couple was prohibited from taking action to halt the soil erosion that was jeopardizing their home. Later, 22 feet of their property plunged into Chesapeake Bay. (Wonder if the tiger beetle can swim?)

--A Vietnam refugee, T. Ming Lin, faces one year in prison and a $300,000 fine for running over five suspected kangaroo rats (another "endangered species") while tilling his small farm in Bakersville, CA. Federal agents have already seized his $50,000 tractor.

--Again because of the kangaroo rat, a California man broke the law when he built a firebreak around his house. His house was saved while most of the neighbors lost theirs in the fires that erupted in California last year.

These examples show why people are becoming so sensitive about private property rights!

UNFORTUNATELY FOR JOHN, HIS ASSAILANTS HAD NOT READ THE CRIME BILL...

OUT OF THE BLUE

By Garry Wesner

As you know by now, I get stuff in the mail all the time that groups, etc., want to publish, and most of these "news" releases have absolutely nothing to do with Hereford, or they are just veiled attempts by a company to get some free advertising.

Well such a thing came in the other day that I really thought was funny. It was a news release from the Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas, announcing a new regional office to service rural Texas.

First off, it seems strange to me that a company would only have one regional office for rural Texas, because there is so much rural Texas out there. I mean, we're rural Texas, but we're not anywhere near rural South Texas, rural North Texas or rural East Texas.

Anyway, I got reading this thing and had to laugh. The special office set up to serve rural Texas will be located in Richardson! Yeah, sure, there's a real good rural area for you -- right in the middle of the Metroplex.

Seems like these people haven't been outside the city in a while, to think Richardson is rural!

The other day I read a sports story in another city's newspaper that gave me a chuckle and showed how careful you have to be in writing a story. This was a story about the automobile accident that Dallas Cowboy Erik Williams had last Monday.

The story was telling all about what happened and mentioned his injuries. It said Williams suffered "a damaged right knee, broken rib, torn ligaments in his left thumb and facial lacerations that required plastic surgery during the early-morning accident."

Seems like we now know the cause of the wreck. After all, if he hadn't been undergoing plastic surgery while driving down a street in the early morning hours, he probably wouldn't have hit that concrete barrier in the first place!

(Course, the proper way to have worded it would have been to say that, in the early-morning accident, he suffered ...)

Proper writing was something that was beat into our heads, not only in high school, but when I was in journalism school back in the early 1980s in Las Cruces, N.M. I don't remember the proper terms and definitions for all the parts of writing, but I do remember the rules and how to apply them.

For example: -- The sentence was, "The Boy Scouts found a dead deer hiking through the woods," which gave the impression a dead animal could hike. The correct sentence is, "While hiking through the woods, the Boy Scouts found a dead deer."

-- The non sequitur was a particular sticking point when I worked in Lubbock. "An avid bicyclist, Mr. Smith joined the Methodist Church at an early age." Jurgen constantly railed against this type of sentence.

In this sentence, he would tell us, the phrase "Because he was ..." would be understood at the beginning of the sentence, giving the impression that it said "Because he was an avid bicyclist, Mrs. Smith joined the Methodist Church at an early age," or, the only people who could join the Methodist Church are those who are avid bicyclists.

-- In journalism school, the mantra of everyday life was "KISS -- Keep It Simple Stupid," referring, of course, to the notion that complicated sentences lead your readers to turn to the comics.

Anyway, I don't know where all that came from, but at least I learned SOMETHING in school, which my parents (both of whom are educators) will be relieved to know.

Well, that's it for this week. Have a good week and, remember, please get out and vote. If you don't, you have no business complaining about government.

Oct. 27
The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on voters and values:
In a recent poll, 32 percent of 1,002 registered voters agreed with the notion of returning to traditional moral values.

Twenty-nine percent wanted to encourage stronger personal values and 18 percent supported community values. Another 20 percent gave equal weight to all three statements.

Not surprisingly, Americans of all ages and political stripes agree with at least one of the following statements:
-- "What we need to do in America today is to encourage a return to our traditional moral values, like religion and the traditional family."
-- "What we need to do in America today is encourage stronger personal values, like individual responsibility and hard work."
-- "What we need to do in America today is encourage stronger community values, like contributing to the good of the community and respect for others."

Conducted by Peter D. Hart Research Associates Inc. for People for the American Way, a First Amendment issues advocacy group, the margin of error is +/- 3 percent.

We won't know until after Election Day if the survey's results translate to support for mainstream candidates. But poll or no poll, it's clear that most voters today still want what they've wanted in the past: conscientious political leaders, regardless of party label, willing to work toward finding common-sense solutions to our most pressing problems.

Our choice is...

Last week we made a brief analysis of candidates for appeal court positions and made recommendations on those offices. This week we offer our views on some of the top-of-the-ticket offices:

U.S. Senate--Incumbent Kay Bailey Hutchison is a rational conservative who represents the state well. She deserves a full six-year term. In contrast to her opponent, Richard Fisher, she deals in issues, not slick, deceptive television campaigning.

Governor--Speaking of mudslinging, we give Gov. Ann Richards a "F" and George W. Bush a "D" for their TV commercials. Gov. Richards was lucky to get the governor's job. The state budget has increased 46 percent under her liberal tax and spend policies. Bush is our choice. He knows there is more to Texas government than pleasing the Austin bureaucrats and bowing to special interest groups.

LT. Governor--In his campaign, Bob Bullock is wise to avoid ties to Richards or Clinton, as well he should, and that he can work with Republicans. He's done a good job and we think he deserves another term.

State Comptroller--John Sharp is another Democrat with a fine record of accomplishments. We recommend him for another term.

Treasurer--Current treasurer Martha Whitehead should be a clear choice. She is in favor of abolishing her office and Republican challenger David Hartman wants to expand the role of the office. Her idea of transferring the functions of the office to the Comptroller makes good sense.

Ag Commissioner--Rick Perry is one of the state's brightest young office holders. He restored respect and credibility to this office when he took over. An easy pick for a second term.

General Land Office--We need to stop the recurring political abuse of the General Land Office, such as Gary Mauro's use of this office to run Bill Clinton's 1992 presidential race in Texas. We recommend a vote for Marta Greytok for commissioner of the General Land Office.

Understand

Suffering was everywhere after the crash of the stock market in 1929. The guys who jumped from their windows into the middle of Wall Street were out of their misery. The rest of the country had to stick it out.

A trickle-down from Black Tuesday eventually reached into West Texas and adjacent lands, coinciding with dust storms and drought in the 1930s.

The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse couldn't have wreaked more havoc. The era introduced America to a piece of remarkable literature from John Steinbeck, "The Grapes of Wrath."

But out of that period came some pretty tough people who taught their children to respect their elders, study their lessons and be honest.

I'm happy to say I'm one of those kids. Nothing was more important to my family than for the children to be a credit to themselves and, by extension, to their parents.

Education was very important. My uncle wanted to go to college. He stayed home a year to earn money and to give his parents a chance to bring some order into their financial lives.

He went on to succeed beyond anyone's imagination -- the nation's space program, from the X-15 to the shuttle, was partly his doing. He was a West Texas farm boy who went to the right place at the right time after finishing college.

Even when I was a small child, there was never any question about whether I would go to college. The only issue was which one. Once that was settled, we set about to do the job.

In the middle of my four-year higher education, though, a drought struck. Seven years drove cattlemen to sell off their herds, even the cows. The pasture grass looked like a blowtorch had been waved over the land.

To get me through the last couple years of college my sister and I had to divest ourselves of our modest holdings in cattle. Sell a cow; pay a semester's fees. (Remember this was in the 1950s when a college education didn't cost as much as it does today.)

By the time my sister finished high school and was ready for college, the drought had really taken a toll. But, she went. After a year in one college, she transferred to one closer to home. She got married but finished her degree.

My mother heaved a sigh of relief but couldn't help but look at her youngest and wonder if her dream would hold up with all three daughters earning that precious college diploma.

The "baby" was a rebel. She didn't intend to do anything the way her sisters did. She would go her own way.

She started college, got married and moved out of the state. A couple years later, they came back to Texas and she entered college, again.

Starting with a summer class, she had all the enthusiasm of a new student. But it didn't last long. The teacher assigned a paper. She didn't understand what he wanted and she flunked the assignment.

Then, the teacher (he was one of those people, I believe, who give teachers a bad name), in essence, told her she didn't have any business going to college. "You'll never pass this course," he declared.

My sister was crushed (wouldn't you be?). She was ready to drop out and find some work that required no more education.

Taking the positive side, I encouraged her to stick it out. Show him she could do it. Or, drop the course and take a different teacher in the fall. I felt certain, I told her, that she could do it.

The other girl in the family was not as kind as I. "I don't know why you're going, either. You never did like school," she barked.

Uh oh! Whether it was a bit of armchair psychology or her own idea on the subject, I'll never know. But, the remark served a purpose: the whole family came to appreciate.

Baby sister apparently adopted the "I'll show you" approach, was spurred on to get her degree, later earned an advanced degree and other certification in education.

But, that first one was the most important. My mother stood watching, almost in tears, as her youngest crossed the stage with a new diploma.

"I never thought I'd see the day," she said quietly.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:
The Sophomore Class of Hereford High School extends a special "thank you" to all of the people of our community who supported our very successful class supper by purchasing tickets and making donations to us.

We especially thank all of the businesses and persons who always share so generously with donations and publicity: The Hereford Brand, KPAN, AgriPro, Barrett Produce, Bear's Seed, Cabochon, Custom Cleaners, First Printing, Bezner Seed, Gibson's, Homeland, Hereford Country Club, High Plains Fire Extinguishers, Janie's, K-Bob's, McDonald's, Mr. Burger, Mrs. Abalos, Panchita's, Pizza Mill, Sirloin Stockade, Spam Farms, Subway, Taylor & Sons, Thriftway West & East.

Music by Texas Country was great! What super entertainment...we thank you!

Thanks go to all of our sponsor teachers and class coordinators Mr. Gerlich and Mrs. Paetzold. Their enthusiasm, patience and dedication teach much beyond the classroom. The sophomores also acknowledge and appreciate all sophomore parents who give continually. Thank You!!

timé frame. This allows the student to seek help from the teacher and extra help from the parents before the six weeks is over.

A high school teacher made such a mistake. Because the student had a failing grade average(65) at three weeks and the teacher did not inform either the student or his parents, the student is now facing the UIL "no pass, no play" rule. At the end of the fifth week, the teacher decided to inform the parents of the problem. In a parent conference, the teacher said it was too late to do anything about the situation.

Who is paying the price for the teacher's mistake? Right now it is the student, but the administration tells me that nothing can be done. What do you think?

Sincerely,
Eric & Janette Fowler

Dear Editor:
I am a fifth grade student and it is a tradition for the class to write a state report. I chose Texas as my state. I am writing to ask you to publish my letter in hope that I might receive a response from your readers.

I am interested in learning all there is about Hereford. I know I can learn a lot from books, but to hear it from the people is the best kind of learning. Any letters with stories, experiences, feeling, etc., would be very helpful.

I'd like to hear about when people first moved to Hereford, and I would like to hear from some who were born there. Children could explain to me what it is like to live there and what they do in school for fun, chores and on holidays. I would appreciate it if people in Hereford would help me experience a typical day, month, season or year.

By printing this letter, I hope to receive information about Texas and Hereford to help complete my report. And, who knows, I might be lucky enough to make a few friends.

Please send letters and information to the following address:

Brian Kissel,
24171 Pavilion,
Mission Viejo, CA. 92692

I am addressing this letter to the attention of parents and students.

We all know that the Hereford Independent School District has written policies that are to be followed by all students and teachers. When a student gets into trouble at school, there are punishment policies that have to be followed in order for the student to go back to class, school, or to participate in extra-curricular activities.

What happens when a teacher does not follow written policy and a student suffers because of it?

There is a policy for HISD that requires the teacher to send a progress report to the parents of a student if the student does not have a passing grade average at three weeks in a six-week

Trucking violations will go up with NAFTA

AUSTIN (AP) - Nearly 1 million trucks crossing the border from Mexico this year have violated Texas safety, insurance or registration rules, the Railroad Commission chairman reported Friday.

Chairman Jim Nugent said that number will greatly increase under the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"It's an astonishing figure - almost 1 million vehicles operating illegally over Texas highways, subjecting others to danger from overweight, uninsured, ill-equipped or hazardous vehicles," Nugent said in remarks prepared for delivery to a meeting of freight brokers and forwarders in Laredo.

"We can only estimate the threat because the commission and the Department of Public Safety have only been able to inspect one-fourth of 1 percent of all truck traffic crossing the border," Nugent added.

He said NAFTA will increase truck traffic dramatically, along with the danger to other motorists, unless border enforcement efforts are beefed up.

"We have 1 million violators already and NAFTA hasn't really kicked in. Wait until the year 2000, when eight to 12 million trucks a year will be entering the U.S.," Nugent said.

At the present rate, he said, between 5 million and 8 million of those will have overweight loads, faulty brakes, no insurance or other problems.

While the Texas limit on trucks is 80,000 pounds, Nugent said the Mexican limit is 100,000 pounds and it's poorly enforced. Texas inspectors frequently find Mexican trucks topping 120,000 pounds, he said.

Nugent said he wants to add three district offices in Laredo, El Paso and the Rio Grande Valley to boost enforcement. He also said he wants to increase the agency's partnership with the DPS in enforcing registration, insurance, safety and hazardous materials regulations.

Friday hearing postponed in Cisneros case

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Attorneys postponed a hearing on Henry Cisneros' motion to quash his former mistress' attempts to view certain documents.

The hearing, originally ordered for Friday morning, has not been rescheduled.

The U.S. Housing Secretary claimed in his court motion that producing the documents would be unreasonable and cumbersome. Those documents in question include payroll and telephone records, flight logs and appointment books.

Linda Medlar is suing Cisneros for breach of contract and fraud. Ms. Medlar claims the former San Antonio mayor broke an oral agreement to pay her $4,000 a month for damages she suffered when news of their romance became public in 1988.

Cisneros has denied that a contract existed.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - John Denver wishes people would pay more attention to his newest songs and less to his old hits - and his recent lows.

"I'm writing and singing better now than I ever have. My voice has matured, and I write melodically for that," Denver said in Thursday's Evansville Courier. "But radio plays the old ones and continues to break in new artists."

He said he's also frustrated that his recent drunken driving arrest in Colorado is making more news than his singing and his environmental activism.

TCFA Fed Beef Challenge has local winners

Eight Hereford 4-H and FFA students were recognized by the Texas Cattle Feeders Association as winners in the Junior Fed Beef Challenge contest in Amarillo.

Wade Johnson, top photo, captured first place in the senior division live evaluation contest and second in the written exam. Mark Shaw, superintendent of the contest, is shown presenting the awards.

Joanna Brumley (center) won first place in the senior division pen of three contest and third in the individual carcass contest.

Tyler Keeling (bottom) took first place overall in the junior division. He won first in the written exam, first in the oral interview, and was named first-place top rookie.

Other winners, not pictured, were Garrett Hyatt, third place overall in the junior division with a first in individual carcass, second in pen of three, second in written exam, and second place as top rookie; and Caleb Brumley, third place in the senior division oral interview.

Moriah Olson, Sy Olson and Brent Huseman were presented certificates for competing in the events.

The challenge contest allows 4-H and FFA students to gain practical experience in the commercial cattle feeding industry. Students feed a pen of three steers, then compete on the carcass merit of the cattle, plus the student's ability in live animal evaluation, a written test, oral interview, and record keeping.

Bentsen's nephew takes aim at Congress

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer
DEER PARK, Texas (AP) - Either big money or a big name will attract voters in Texas' 25th Congressional District.

The big name belongs to Democrat Ken Bentsen, nephew of Lloyd Bentsen, the former U.S. senator from Texas and current treasury secretary. The big money comes from Republican Gene Fontenot, a physician and hospital owner who has pumped more than $2 million of his own money into the campaign. His expenditures, which outpace Bentsen's by 3-1, may wind up the largest in the country for a House race this year.

Officials of both parties agree that the match-up represents the GOP's best chance in Texas of wresting a seat from the Democratic column.

At stake is the seat held for the past 12 years by Democrat Mike Andrews, who gave up his safe congressional job for an unsuccessful primary run for his party's Senate nomination.

"This will probably end up being the most expensive House seat in the history of Texas and I think it's ludicrous," Bentsen said of his opponent's spending.

"If you look at the expenditures people have made over their terms, you will see it's about right," Fontenot said, defending the funding. Bentsen, 35, and Fontenot, 58, both are married and have two children. Their similarities end about there.

Bentsen, an investment banker and former aide to U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, moves easily on the stump and confidently ticks off a 15-point political-fiscal reform package he proposes.

"In business, if things aren't working, you make a change," Bentsen said. "Government should act the same way."

Fontenot, a former Vietnam battlefield surgeon, speaks softly, often measuring or hunting for his words. He is wearing out his second pair of shoes as he canvasses the district literally door-to-door, driven around in a motor home emblazoned with two Rush Limbaugh bumper stickers.

"Are you a Republican or Democrat?" one woman asked him during a recent tour through Deer Park, a suburb southeast of Houston. "I'm a conservative," Fontenot replied.

Bentsen's campaign has sought to paint Fontenot as an extremist with ties to the religious right, a candidate who wants to abolish the Education Department and the separation between church and state.

Fontenot counters that Bentsen is a liberal who does not reflect the views of the district that includes parts of southwest, south and southeast Houston, along with suburban areas like Deer Park, Pasadena and Baytown.

"The things that concerns folks are the issues I'm running on," Fontenot said. "They're afraid the streets are not safe. ... They're concerned about gangs and juvenile crime."

Fontenot sees Congress as having jurisdiction over courts and would push for total state control of state prisons and limits to prevent appeals by convicts.

"Most important is to use my position as congressman to help stiffen some of the penal code in Texas," he said.

Bentsen, a self-described "moderate Democrat coming out of the private sector," agrees that crime is on people's minds, but has a broader outlook.

"I think they're concerned about crime, about their future economic well being," he said. "I think they are extremely upset about the partisan bickering they see in Washington. I think they're angry at both sides."

Bentsen sees the federal government dealing with local crime problems by providing more money to state and local authorities and by beefing up border security. He would pay for that with funds currently used to defend U.S. allies in Western Europe and Japan.

The issue of abortion also has become a campaign point, with Fontenot - who counts anti-abortion backers among his financial supporters - opposed to abortion in all instances, including endangerment of the woman's life.

Bentsen favors a woman's freedom of choice. Fontenot says his differences with Bentsen are simple: "The difference is between the conservative and the liberal - less government regulation, less government interference with their lives."

Bentsen, whose uncle has made infrequent appearances on his behalf, says he hopes to take some of the ideas he's learned in business and apply them to government.

"I think I have a well-rounded background for this job," he said. "I'm putting my career on hold to take this job because I think I can make a difference."

Texas move would loosen ties with national Baptist convention

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - A Texas Baptist organization is rallying support for a vote that could loosen ties with the national Southern Baptist Convention.

"If this doesn't pass, it would be a step toward allowing fundamentalists to take control of Texas," said David Currie, coordinator of the San Angelo-headquartered Texas Baptists Committee.

Fundamentalists have controlled the Southern Baptist Convention for some 15 years. The Texas body - made up of 5,500 congregations and 2.6 million members - is the largest in the SBC and is dominated by moderates.

The vote will be an agenda highlight Monday and Tuesday at the annual Baptist General Convention of Texas in Amarillo.

The vote would allow churches to contribute to non-SBC approved ministries while still being a part of the "Cooperative Program." Currently, Cooperative Program giving is funneled through the SBC's executive board.

Jerold McBride, pastor of San Angelo's First Baptist Church and president of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, supports the change in policy.

But the change is strongly opposed by conservative-fundamentalists, who suspect that Texas Baptist contributions would be diverted to groups controlled by moderates.

"I'm cautiously optimistic about the vote," Currie said, "although there is a misconception that it would be a vote against missions. Instead; it's a vote to try to keep missions alive in Texas."

Some conservatives reportedly have discussed contingency plans for seceding from the Baptist General Convention of Texas if they lose the vote on how church contributions are handled.

Currently, one third of the contributions from Southern Baptist Churches in Texas is sent to the national level; the rest stays in Texas.

Currie said forming a rival convention would be an overreaction.

"That's unfortunate and totally unnecessary," he said. The proposed change in funding "simply grants the freedom to those who want to give to other Baptist causes."

Whitefaces ground Eagles for 19-0 victory

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Canyon Eagles fans got to cheer once very early in Friday's football game against the Hereford Whitefaces, but even that turned sour, as a 43-yard Canyon pass play turned into a fumble recovered by Hereford.

That one play—or half a play—was just about all Canyon could cheer about, as the Hereford defense shut down the Eagles' wishbone and shut out Canyon 19-0 in Kimbrough Stadium in Canyon.

"The shutout was something the defense really wanted," Hereford coach Danny Haney said after his team improved to 4-4 overall and 2-2 in District 1-4A play. Canyon fell to 5-4 and 2-3, and Hereford moved into fourth place in the district.

"We talked about it, and they figured it was within reach," Haney said of the shutout. "They set themselves a goal and accomplished it."

The Herd defense limited Canyon to 96 yards rushing and 92 yards passing. Canyon completed only 3-of-16 passes; two completions in the first quarter accounted for 79 of those yards.

Senior linebacker Jacob Lopez explained the defensive effort.

"We got down, this week, back to our reads, back to basics," Lopez said. "We started getting physical on them. We hadn't done that in a long time. The main thing was getting physical."

Added Haney: "That was as physical as I'd seen us, on both sides of the ball."

The offense did its part, rolling up 316 yards on the ground and 103 through the air. Tailbacks Marquise Brown and Armando Zambrano combined for three short touchdown runs, two in the second quarter, providing all the points the Herd needed.

Brown ran for 79 yards, and Zambrano added 61 yards rushing. Fullback Josh Urbanczyk had a season-high 38 yards on the ground.

Quarterback Michael Brown topped all rushers with 107 yards and throw for 87 yards.

"They were really concerned about the inside game," Michael Brown said of the Canyon defense. "They let us go outside, and that's why the offense worked so well."

"This was our best game as far as blocking and executing," Haney said. "We established the run for the first time as a total package."

The score could have been worse, but for three lost fumbles, including one at the Canyon one-yard line on the Herd's first drive.

In retrospect, that wasn't the biggest turnover of the game. Canyons fumble on the third play of the game was.

The Eagles faced a third-down-and-11 situation at their own 28. Canyon receiver Heath Wilson sprinted past Herd cornerback Michael Marquez and hauled in a pass. Marquez made up for the error by catching up with Wilson at the Herd 29-yard line, stripping the ball from him and even recovering the fumble after another Eagle tried and failed to pick the ball up on the run. Hereford drove 70 yards in seven plays down to the Canyon one-yard line, where a pitch bounced off Marquise Brown and into the end zone. Canyon safety Joe De Dawson recovered.

The Herd finally go on the scoreboard after an exchange of punts, driving 61 yards in 10 plays. Key plays were Marquise Brown's 15-yard run on fourth-down-and-1, an 11-yard pass from Michael Brown to Wade Backus to the Canyon 14, and Marquise Brown's seven-yard up the middle to the end zone.

Terence High kicked wide right into the wind on the extra point, but Hereford led 6-0 with 10:38 left in the second quarter.

Hereford forced a Canyon punt and soon scored again, going 67 yards in nine plays. An illegal block in the back penalty wiped out a 55-yard touchdown run by Michael Brown, but it only delayed the touchdown. Six plays later, Zambrano took a handoff left and scooted seven yards untouched into the end zone.

This time, High's kick hit the right upright and bounced back, but Hereford led 12-0 with 5:19 left in the half.

Canyon's Larry Brown returned the ensuing kickoff to the Hereford 49-yard line, where Homer Hamilton made a touchdown saving tackle. Canyon got no further, though. Wilson ran on a fake punt, but he was stopped a yard short of a first down.

The first half ended with Hereford on the Canyon 21-yard line.

The Herd put the game away with a touchdown on the opening drive of the second half. Backus, an up-man on the kickoff return team, took the kick 19 yards to the Hereford 41. Michael Brown then hit Marc Haney with a 29-yard pass to the Canyon 21. Four plays later, Marquise Brown ran seven yards on a wingback reverse for an apparent touchdown, but a holding penalty brought it back. After a third-down pass from Michael Brown to Backus went for 11 yards to the six-yard line, Marquise Brown repeated the reverse, and this time the score counted.

High's kick provided the final score with 7:58 left in the third quarter, as the Herd defense held Canyon to 67

Which way did he go?

It's hard to tell who the Canyon defenders at left are tackling, but whoever he is, he doesn't have the ball. Hereford fullback Josh Urbanczyk has the ball as he breaks through the line for a sizable gain.

Spikers may play Dumas on Tuesday

The Hereford and Dumas volleyball teams will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Amarillo High Activity Center. Hereford coach Brenda Reeh announced Friday afternoon, if the two ended up tied in the District 1-4 standings.

Both teams went into their final regular-season matches, which were to be played Saturday, with 10-1 district records.

Tuesday's match would determine which of the district's two playoff representatives would be the top seed. It would not determine the district champion; by a district committee ruling, teams that finish the regular season tied are co-champions.

The match was reported in Friday's Brand to be planned for Monday at Amarillo Tascosa

Hereford tennis team in regional semifinals

The Hereford tennis team made the semifinals of the Region I-4A Tennis Tournament by defeating Cleburne 10-2 and Burkburnett 10-8 Friday in Lubbock.

The Herd was to take on Big Spring in a semifinal match Saturday. Big Spring received a first-round bye, then shut out Levelland, 11-0.

Hereford coach Ed Coplen, with the team in Lubbock, could not be reached for comment.

District 1-4A champion Borger was to play Wichita Falls in the other semifinal. Borger beat Sweetwater, 11-7, after a first-round bye.

Schulenberg downs East Bernard

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer
Give East Bernard some credit. The Brahmas were the first team this season to hold the Schulenberg offense from a yardage-and-scoring frenzy by containing quarterback Steven Sartain and his main target, Jamie Jackson.

But give Friday night's game to the Shorthorns because of Jason

Houston, the bulldozing senior running back who had two second-quarter touchdowns in No. 1 Schulenberg's 12-0 victory over No. 4 East Bernard.

It was the only game between ranked teams in the second-to-last full weekend of the regular-season and the Brahmas (8-1) were the only ranked team to lose, although they likely still will make the playoffs.

Schulenberg gained only 269 yards, or nearly 182 below its average through the first eight games, yet it was enough to keep the Shorthorns undefeated as they seek their third state title in four years.

It also kept alive their winning streak against their nearby rival that dates to the first-round of the 1987

Wartes enshrined in HSU Athletic Hall of Fame

Larry Wartes, a basketball star at Hardin-Simmons University in the early 1950s who went on to coach football at Stamford and Hereford, was inducted into the Hardin-Simmons University Athletic Hall of Fame Friday in Abilene.

Wartes, who still resides in Hereford, coached Stamford to state football championships in 1958 and 1959. Before that, he was an assistant to the legendary Gordon Wood at Stamford, helping win two other state championships. Wartes came to Hereford from Stamford and coached the Herd from 1967-70, leading the 1968 squad to the playoffs.

Wartes listed this latest honor among others he's received. In 1975, he was inducted into the Hall of Honor of the Texas High School Coaches Association (THSCA), an organization for which Wartes served as director twice. More recently, he was named Hereford Citizen of the Year for 1992.

He accepts the HSU Hall of Fame enshrinement with humility.

"Certainly, you're thrilled to know that you've going to be honored for something like this," he said before leaving for Abilene. "(But) the greatest accomplishments are not made by oneself, but by the people around you. I was a good basketball player--for that time--but you're only as good as your teammates."

Wartes played basketball and baseball at Hardin-Simmons from 1947-51, graduating in 1951.

He played baseball his freshman and sophomore years, but it was at basketball that he really excelled, starting for four years. As a guard, he was the Cowboys' leading scorer during both his junior and senior years, he said, earning second-team all-conference honors after his junior year.

During the years Wartes played at Hardin-Simmons, it had a higher-profile athletic program than it does today. HSU competed in the Border Conference with Texas Tech, West Texas State, Arizona, Arizona State, New Mexico, New Mexico State and Texas Western (now UT-El Paso).

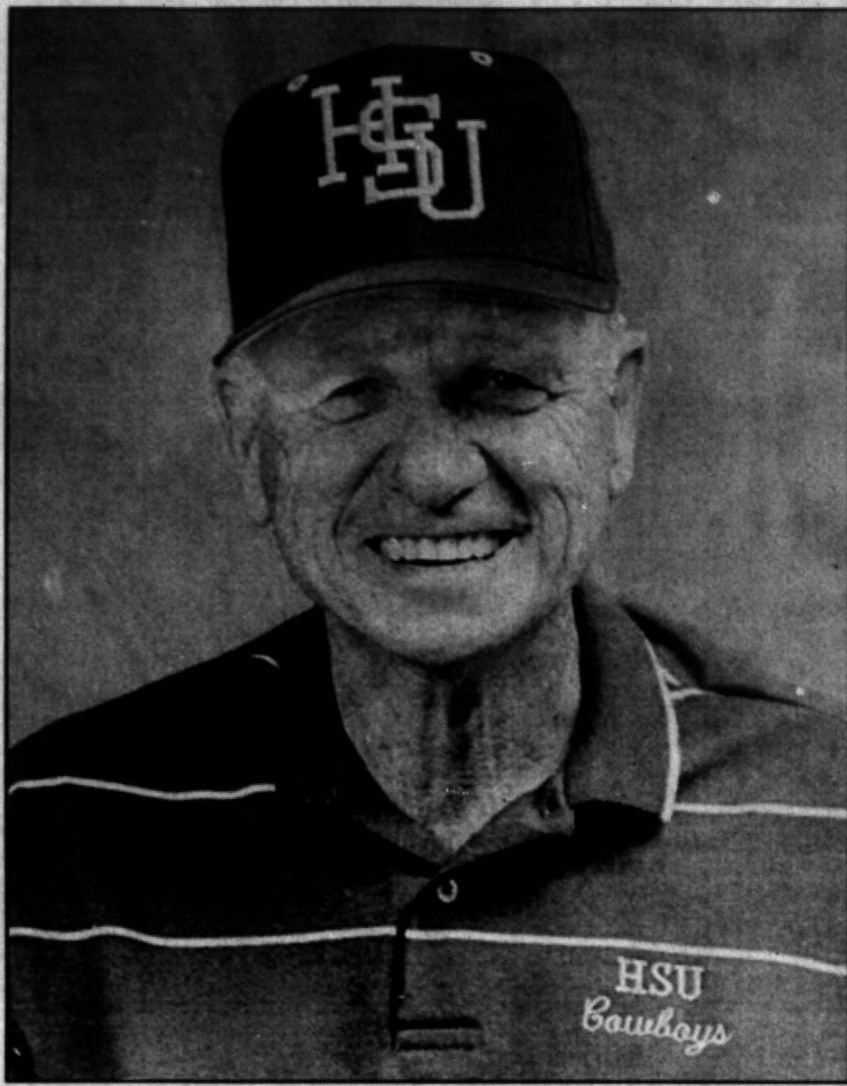

"It was one of the better conferences in the nation--better than the Southwest Conference (in basketball)," Wartes said, adding that HSU finished second in basketball during his junior year. "The reason we never did win was because Arizona always won."

Wartes is a 1947 graduate of Amarillo High School, where he played several sports. He was a member of the '47 Sandie squad that went as far as the state semifinals, he said, losing to a Dallas Jefferson team led by Kyle Rote.

Successful coaches can often be traced from other successful coaches, like in a family tree. While at Stamford, Wartes worked with Larry Dippel and brought him with him to Hereford.

Dippel took over the Herd in 1971 and stayed through the 1974 season, leaving after two playoff appearances. He moved on to Amarillo High, and this season is enjoying an undefeated record. In turn, Dippel coached at least two players in Hereford who have gone on to coaching success in the area: Alan Cornelius at Randall and Keith Kitchens at Shallowater.

Rockets aim to repeat as NBA champions

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Can the Houston Rockets repeat as NBA champions?
That depends.
Can all the conditions that helped them win the title repeat, too?
That's doubtful.
Those questions are among the reasons the Rockets are finding respect an elusive commodity as they begin defense of the crown they arm-wrestled away from the New York Knicks in an NBA Finals last spring dubbed "Ugly Ball."
If the Rockets repeat, one side will say they still have the luck and the best player on the planet in Hakeem Olajuwon, so no big deal. If they self-destruct, a larger group will say it almost happened last season.

Coach Rudy Tomjanovich doesn't care about the talk but he is looking for answers.
"I respect the league and I know it's going to be tough," Tomjanovich said. "Look at last year, we started out 22-1 and late in the year, San Antonio caught up and passed us. I can't worry about what people say and do. I do know we have to get better."
The Rockets played all the parts last season from goat to hero and many stops between. That was their personality: thrill the fans one night, send them for the exits the next.
They were the unbeatables who opened the season with 15 straight victories, tying an NBA record.
They almost faded in the stretch before pushing back the Spurs for the Midwest Division title. They became the team from Choke City when they blew a 20-point lead to Phoenix with 10:04 to play to fall behind 0-2 in the Western Conference semifinals.

Seattle, with a better record last year than the Rockets, doesn't anticipate doling out the home court advantage to the Rockets again by losing in the first round of this year's playoffs.
Phoenix would like another shot at holding its 2-0 lead over Houston and the Knicks surely would like to have another 3-2 lead in the NBA Finals and a hot hand from John Starks in just one of the two remaining games.
Those are some of the benchmarks that tell the Rockets it's going to be a difficult climb back to the title.
"At least people in the league respect us," forward Robert Horry said. "It's going to be extremely hard to repeat. This year, we come out as the champion Houston Rockets, so everyone will want to see how they measure up."

Last year, the Rockets were able to climb out of whatever valley they fell into and rewarded Houston with its first major, pro sports championship. The title allowed the city to shed its choker reputation and 500,000 jubilant Houstonians jammed the downtown streets for a victory parade.
This year, one man - Olajuwon - is the key to a repeat. There's no doubt why Houston is known to some as "Team Hakeem" if he goes out, the Rockets go down.
"So much of what we do goes through Hakeem," guard Kenny Smith said.

Olajuwon put it all in one package last season when he became the first player in NBA history to become the league's Most Valuable Player, the NBA Defensive Player of the Year and the NBA Finals MVP, all in the same season.
He was second in the NBA in blocked shots (3.71 per game), third in scoring (27.3), fourth in rebounding (11.9). He enters the season third on the NBA blocked shots list with 2,741.
Olajuwon is glad the Rockets kept the team together.
"We are all making it easy for one another," he said. "Everybody has had another year together and we're playing as a team."
To get better this season, Tomjanovich wants Horry to become more of an offensive rebounder, for Maxwell to improve his shooting percentage and for the team to play even better defense.

"Our defense is the only way we win," Tomjanovich said. "We're not going to outscore anybody. We may have to look at rotations and analyze what works and what doesn't with the new 3-point line. How you play the pick-and-roll and other plays now becomes more important because guys can pull up and they're already behind the 3-point line."
Olajuwon can't repeat alone and he'll have the same supporting cast as last season: forwards Horry and Otis Thorpe, guards Smith and Maxwell and Sam Cassell, Mario Elie and Carl Herrera off the bench.
"We've still got a nice little eight-man rotation that will work," Elie said. "There's no reason to change something that's working."
Maxwell enjoys his reputation as a mad bomber from the 3-point range and that's one of the reasons the Rockets survived last season. He made 120 3-pointers. He also hopes to lower his short fuse and raise his shooting percentage, which dipped to 38 percent last season.
"I told my mom I'd try to handle my temper a little better," Maxwell said. "I'm going to help the team any way I can. If I'm not hitting, I'll do it with defense."
Cassell performed well above most expectations last season and is valued as the future point guard, possibly this season if he continues to improve and Smith's inconsistent shooting performances continue.

PREP

playoffs, when they avenged a regular-season loss.
The latest Shorthorn victory was decided in the second quarter when Houston ran for a 24-yard touchdown early in the period and added a 1-yard dive just 31 seconds before halftime.
Second-ranked Archer City was led to a 38-6 victory over Quanah by quarterback Cory Campbell, who ran 10 times for 201 yards and scored on a pair of 62-yard runs and was 9-of-16 passing for 107 yards and a touchdown.
Third-ranked Goldthwaite defeated Bangs 56-6, No. 5 Pilot Point pounded Aubrey 46-18, No. 6 Hubbard downed Riesel 21-7 and No. 7 Springlake-Earth erupted for a 62-6 victory over New Deal.

Also, No. 8 Refugio bested Three Rivers, No. 9 Alto defeated Timpson 45-7 and No. 10 Celina stopped S&S Consolidated 48-0.
The other four top-ranked teams had less trouble in their games, even 5A's Abilene Cooper, which ended a 10-game losing streak against tough district foe Midland Lee.
Cooper beat Lee 21-0 to set up a Week Ten matchup against Odessa Permian with the District 4-5A title going to the winner of that game for the third straight year. Both teams are 5-0 in district play.

"With about a minute left in the game I was walking along the sidelines telling the guys it was a good win, but that it was over," Cooper quarterback Zac Allen said. "Now it's time for the showdown."
Elsewhere in 5A, No. 2 Austin Westlake remained hot and crushed Pflugerville 45-14, No. 3 Plano East pounded Richardson Berkner 48-7 and No. 4 Deer Park struggled to outlast Houston Smiley 34-26.
Sixth-ranked Arlington Lamar defeated Arlington Sam Houston 35-22, No. 7 A&M Consolidated beat Tomball 34-22, No. 8 Tyler John Tyler topped Longview 19-7 and No. 9 Humble defeated Houston Eisenhower 31-6.

Class 4A's top-ranked Stephenville also was one step away from a final-weekend showdown for a district title.
The Yellowjackets kept up their end of the deal by rumbing past Brownwood 42-6, but Granbury stopped Mineral Wells 28-7 to take some of the luster off next weekend's finale.
Stephenville's state-best 25th straight victory included 591 yards of offense and a big night by Jason Bragg, who ran for a game-high 230 yards on 10 carries and scored four times.

Second-ranked Waxahachie beat Red Oak 52-21 for its 35th straight regular-season victory behind three Adrian Overton touchdown passes and three rushing scores by Brandon Hawkins.

FOOTBALL

total yards in the entire second half.
Hereford lost two fumbles in Canyon territory, preventing a blowout.
The late fourth quarter provided some fun for the Whitefaces, who have been involved mostly in close games this season. Many backups got in the game late.
"It's great to be able to play them," Haneey said. "The backups work as hard as the other players."
Jacob Lopez and Homer Hamilton, starters on defense but deep backups on offense, lined up at fullback and tailback, respectively. With hungry backups in the offensive line, both had gains in double digits.

Backup quarterback Todd Dudley went 2-for-3 for 16 yards. Wide receiver Jared Artho caught his first pass of the season, a nine-yarder for a first down.
"I was just glad the team executed so well," Artho said, "so we secret players got a chance to play."

DUMAS

High, but that was a preliminary agreement between Reeh and Dumas coach Jack Wilson. Although Reeh also serves as girls' athletic director in Hereford, Wilson has no such authority in Dumas. An assistant AD in Dumas overruled Wilson, Reeh said.
Hereford was 25-5 overall going into Saturday's match against Caprock (12-13) in Amarillo. Dumas was 21-6 going into its match against Canyon (5-18) in Dumas.
If Tuesday's match is played, it would be the fourth meeting this year for the intense rivals. Hereford won the first district match Oct. 1 in Dumas. The Demonettes defeated the Herd in the finals of the Lubbock Invitational Sept. 20, then again in the second district match Tuesday in Hereford.

Reeh wants to play down Tuesday's meeting, which is relatively unimportant compared to the playoffs. No matter which wins, both will have a playoff match to prepare for this weekend.
Reeh was asked if playing Dumas again at this point—one week after Hereford's emotional loss to the Demonettes—would help or hurt the Lady Whitefaces.
"I think it all depends upon the way you approach the match," Reeh said. "We could put all our focus on this match and it would hurt us, win or lose...Our focus is on success in the playoffs."
Hereford and Dumas have byes in the first round of the playoffs because District 2-4A is vacant. The top seed from 1-4A will face either District 3 champion El Paso Parkland (12-17) or District 4 runner-up Andrews (19-12). Parkland and Andrews will meet in a bi-district match on Monday, Reeh said.
The second seed from 1-4A will face either District 3 runner-up El Paso High (12-17) or District 4 champion Monahans (16-12). El Paso High and Monahans will meet Tuesday, Reeh said.
The records given for those four teams are their records on Oct. 21. Hereford's first playoff match would most likely be played Saturday, Reeh said.

Quality pumpkins come from Texas fields

AUSTIN - When Linus starts looking for the most sincere pumpkin patch for the imaginary Great Pumpkin, he should start with Texas for some of the best quality pumpkins this fall.

"Whether it's that perfect pumpkin for carving or one that you'll use in grandmother's made-from-scratch pumpkin pie recipe, if it's a Texas pumpkin, then it's going to be the best," said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry.

And pumpkin pundits agree with Perry, since quality of the Texas High Plains crop is exceptionally good this year.

The High Plains is well suited for pumpkin growth with a warm, sunny climate during the growing season and cool fall weather which is good for ripening. Pumpkins from the area are noted for their good orange color, size and thick outer rind.

Floyd, Hale, Lamb, Bailey and Lubbock Counties are the state's top pumpkin-producing counties.

Producers planted approximately 1,500 acres to 2,000 acres last spring, but because of problems with pollination and fruit set, may harvest from 1,000 to 1,200. Although there are no production estimates for pumpkins, the High Plains crop may be down from last year.

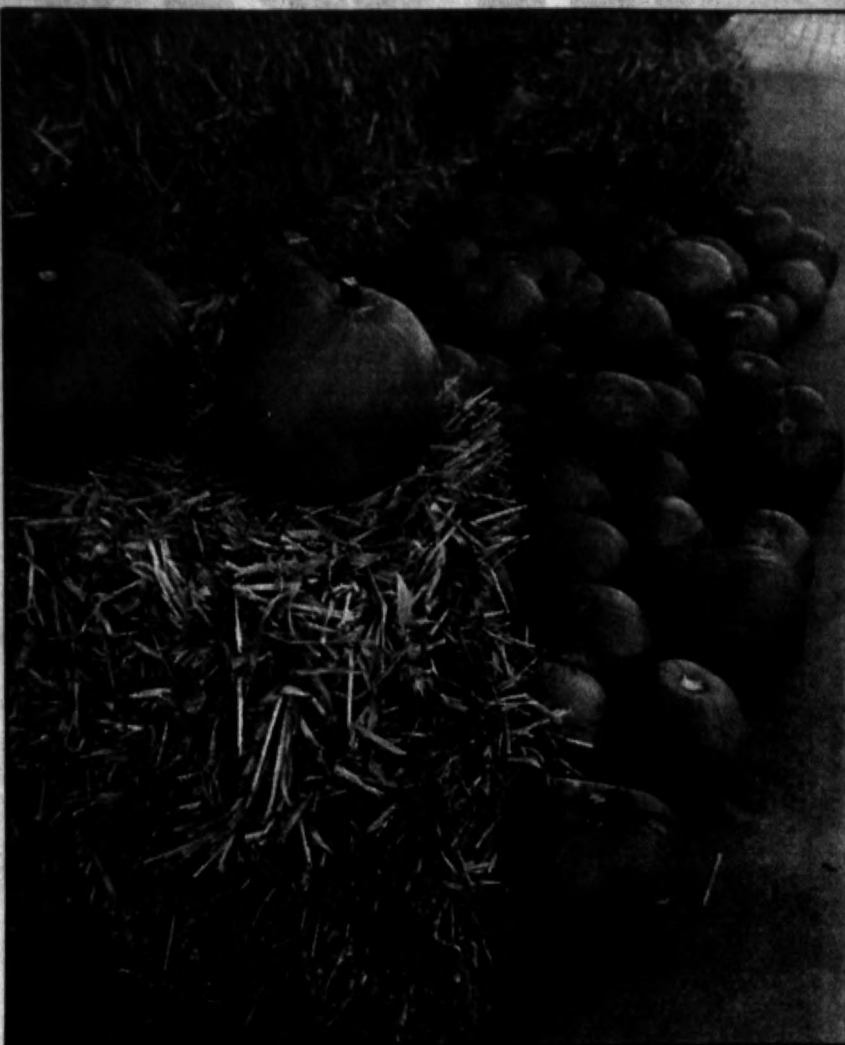

Dr. Roland Roberts of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Lubbock said this summer's prolonged hot weather may have contributed to pollination problems. "There have been fruit set problems on hundreds of acres," Roberts said. "But while production may be down, quality of the Texas High Plains crop will be good this year."

Growers around the state also offer consumers the chance to pick that special pumpkin from local pick-your-own patches.

"And while your pumpkin may come from a local grower, Texas pumpkins have been shipped as far away as New York and Philadelphia," Perry said. "Some have been exported to foreign markets."

Linus shouldn't be surprised if the Great Pumpkin has a Texas drawl this year

Jack o'lantern material

Pumpkins like these are becoming a valued cash crop in several counties of the Texas Panhandle and South Plains. Texas Department of Agriculture reports pumpkins from the state are shipped to other parts of the U.S., as well as exported to other countries.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Pumpkin patch poundage increases

The 1994 Texas pumpkin crop may be the largest of recent years, weighing in at an estimated 70 million pounds.

Pumpkin farmers have received on average 5 cents a pound for their orange crop; this fall, Texans are paying from 7 cents up to 40 cents a pound for their pumpkins.

Top awards in competition earned by Lubbock winery

AUSTIN - A 1993 Cellar Select chardonnay and a 1992 High Plains cabernet sauvignon from the Llano Estacado winery in Lubbock won Star of Texas Grand Awards in the 1994 Lone Star Wine Competition.

Announced by Rick Perry, Texas Agriculture Commissioner, the Star of Texas Grand Awards were for white and red wine categories during the competition, held during the State Fair of Texas.

"Wine production is a vital part of Texas agriculture," Perry said. "It's impossible to see the whole picture of Texas agriculture unless you know that we produce some of the best wines in the country and the world."

"Over the years, Texas vintages have achieved such high quality they can compete with wine from other states and countries that have a much longer history than ours."

Commercial wineries competed in 11 categories during the Oct. 12 judging in the Texas Department of Agriculture's Food and Fiber Pavilion at the fair.

The categories included varieties of red and white wines as well as sparkling, fortified and private stock wines.

Llano Estacado winery captured a Gold Medal, also, for a 1993 Cellar Select chardonnay. Gold Medals also were awarded Messina Hof's 1993 Angel Late Harvest J. Riesling and Hill Country Cellars' 1993 sauvignon blanc.

Silver and bronze medals also were awarded a number of wineries.

Extension News

By Beverly Harder CEA-HE
PUMPKIN TALE

Pumpkin is among the most celebrated of farm-grown foods. This fruit-of-the-vine, marketed as a vegetable, is rich with legend and lore. There are mythical mentions of pumpkin in fairy tales, short stories and rhymes. Cinderella was chauffeured to the ball in a pumpkin-turned-coach. The horseman in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" used a pumpkin propped under his arm as proof of his headless condition. And then there was "Peter-Peter the Pumpkin Eater" of the celebrated Mother Goose rhyme.

Pumpkin has also been held in high esteem in many cultures. In ancient China, for example, the pumpkin was a symbol of success and wealth.

Here in the United States, pumpkin played a starring role in the first Thanksgiving celebration and to this day, it remains a main attraction of the traditional banquet.

The Halloween practice of carving Jack-o-Lanterns is actually an old English custom. It was said that the

The word telegraph comes from the Greek words, tele which means "afar" and graphein, meaning "to write."

ecerie light cast off by these hollowed, lighted pumpkins would ward off evil spirits. The Jack-o-Lantern's name was derived from "Jack with a Lantern," the nickname for an imaginary light that hovered over swamps misleading unwary travelers.

Of course, the pumpkin is not without its share of tall tales. Residents of Morton, Ill. boast of a pumpkin so large it toppled the silo under which it grew. Not to be outdone, folks around a rival pumpkin-growing town talk of pumpkin shells big enough to use as three-and-four man fishing boats.

But in any event, yarns like these make it easy to see the tremendous feeling of pride that the pumpkin evoke among the folks. Thus, it's easier to understand the friendly feud between the towns of Morton, Ill. and Circleville, Oh. over bragging rights to the title of "Pumpkin Capital of the U.S."

The beautiful golden globe is a favorite of holiday decorating. Whole pumpkins can be preserved by washing and spraying with clear plastic spray. Carved Jack-o-Lanterns can be sprayed inside and out to retard mold.

Whatever your mode of decorating, for harvest celebration or Halloween, remember to watch for little children as they trick or treat.

Seven clubs represented at Monday council meeting

Seven clubs were presented with six having 100 percent attendance when members of the Deaf Smith County Family Community Education Council met Oct. 24 at the Deaf Smith County Library.

Chairman Jo Lec called the meeting to order which was hosted by the North Hereford FCE Club. Edith Higgins led the pledges to the flags and the FCE prayer. She also read a poem "The World Greatest Need."

Virgie Duncan was welcomed as a visitor.

During the meeting, the secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting which were approved and the treasurer's report was given.

Plans were made for the upcoming Westway Bazaar to have a concession booth. Council members will also have a booth for the quilt that will be given away at the Spring Sweet Bee. Tickets will be available at the booth for $1 each or six for $5.

A nominating committee was appointed to select council officers for 1995. Serving on the committee are Kate Bradley, Perry Keyes and Tonie Vaughn.

The next meeting will be held Nov. 28.

Create 'instant lawn'

By LEE REICH
For AP Special Features

You can purchase strips of sod, which is lawngrass with an inch or so of attached soil, to create an "instant lawn" to cover bare ground or to repair existing lawn. The cool, moist weather that will descend on much of the country over the next few weeks is ideal for establishing sod.

Sod is sold in strips of a few feet long and 12- to 24-inches-wide. Quality sod should be free of weeds and pests, and be of a type of grass adapted to your site.

Arrange for delivery no more than a couple of days or so before you are going to lay sod. Cool, cloudy weather is ideal for sodding. Occasionally sprinkle stored sod strips with enough water to keep them moist, but not saturated.

You cannot expect sod simply placed upon the ground to grow - the site must first be prepared. Before you begin working the soil, pick up a clump and squeeze it to make sure that it is at the correct moisture level.

The clump should crumble with slight pressure. If the soil wads up, it is too wet, so wait for it to dry out a bit. If the clump is rock hard, it is too dry; sprinkle it the day before you begin. If the ground is covered with heavy weed growth or existing lawn, strip it off with a shovel or a rented sod stripper to make subsequent rototilling easier.

Before tilling, also cover the ground with any lime or sulfur needed to adjust the soil pH, and a 3-inch layer of some organic material such as rotted manure, spent mushroom soil, compost, or peat moss. Also spread a high phosphorus fertilizer, such as 10-20-20 or 5-15-15, at the rate of 25 pounds per thousand square feet.

Rototill the area lengthwise and crosswise, loosening the soil to a depth of 6 inches. Do not overtilt; your objective is to leave the soil in pea-sized granules, not dust. Next, rake the surface smooth, discarding rocks and other debris. Roll the surface lightly with an empty lawn roller and you are ready to lay down the strips of sod.

Lay the first row of sod along a straight line in such a way that the sod strip is not buckled or stretched at any point. Use your driveway or a path as a guide. Otherwise, use a string stretched tightly between two stakes. Unroll each sod strip, taking care to avoid tearing, and press it firmly into position.

Sod will shrink slightly after it has been laid, so do not stretch it as you put it down, especially where edges meet. If the weather is hot, periodically sprinkle the sod with water.

Lay a plank on the first row to distribute your weight as you begin on the next row. Snug the next row, once again to allow for shrinkage. To avoid concentrating breaks in the sod in one area, stagger the joints between the pieces in the row so that they do not align with those in the first row.

Continue subsequent rows similarly, standing on a plank as you work, staggering joints, and sprinkling with water if the weather is hot. When you reach an edge of your lawn, cut the sod to size either with a sharp spade or a serrated knife, such as a bread knife.

Once the whole ground is covered with sod, go over it with a roller weighted just enough to get rid of air pockets and to ensure good contact between the sod and the underlying soil. Roll first at right angles to the strips, then in the direction of the strips. After rolling, gently fluff up the grass blades with a bamboo rake. You are finished laying down the sod.

Wait! Don't just walk away from your new lawn after giving it an admiring look.

The top inch of sod must never dry out until the roots knit to the underlying ground, so set up your sprinkler and apply enough water to wet the soil 6 inches deep.

Kiwanis project continues

As part of an ongoing Hereford Kiwanis Club project, "Young Children Priority Theme," children ages four through 12 are receiving coloring books and crayons from the civic organization. Kiwanis members distribute the books and crayons to children that are patients at the Hereford Regional Medical Center. Omar Martinez, a four-year-old hospital patient, receives his gifts from Kiwanians Nancy Griego and President Dave Kimmel.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Since we expect our students "to grow" we try to help them set up goals and something to strive for. We want to get them pointed in the right direction just as the tulip bulb needs to be planted with the growing side up. The difference is that the tulip, and sometimes the student, is not bothered about when it will bloom. Early or late, the tulip, or the child, responds just as fast as it can to the nurturing of the gardener of the teacher-whichever the case may be.

HJH faculty and students observed Red Ribbon Week with emphasis daily on a drug free school and community.

This week, we will be observing Homecoming Spirit Week with dress-up days as follows: Monday-costume day, but no masks or any costumes with death or violence suggested; Tuesday-Twinkle Day; Wednesday-College T-Shirt Day; Thursday-Grungie Day and Friday-Pride Day. We encourage students to be cautious in the way that they observe these dress-up days so as to not have to have more clothes brought to school for them!

Due to hard work by Mrs. Wallace and the cheerleaders, the band and twirler Misty Tice, HJH observed one of the very best Pep Rallies in the history of the school. Students participated and enjoyed the cheers and skits of the cheerleaders and the great performance of our lone twirler, Miss Misty Tice. Way to go, Misty! Cheerleaders Leann Bivens, Tasha Bradford, Julie Dodson, Kristin Fangman, Tara Mays, Elisha Sessions, Diana Detten and Jessica Mejia prepared well and it really "paid off."

Students who toured the Borger recycling plant visited the "Moving Wall," koalas at Dawn and the animals at Hereford By-Products on the way home. They reported a full day of fun and learning!

Nine staff members visited Coronado High School in Lubbock about their block-scheduling program. Those making the trip were Rodney Allen, David Vincent, DeeDee Drake, Elizabeth Witkowski, Charlie Garza, Billie Reiter, Julie Scott, Maria Eck and "Yours Truly."

Congratulations to Terry and Mary Zimmerman on the birth of a daughter, Brittany Lee. They hope to bring her home from Tech Medical Center within the next two weeks. We stopped by to see them on the way home from the visit to CHS. (Terry teaches Industrial Arts at HJH).

Students and teachers have started a fund to help offset medical expenses. An account has also been set up at Hereford State Bank for anyone in the community that would like to help with this fund.

Just as the gardener does not worry because the late tulips do not bloom with the early ones, we should remember that all students will not "bloom" at the same age or time. We need to work with them, nurture them and keep them pointed in the right direction and to work to the best of their ability.

The kaleidoscope was invented by Sir David Brewster in 1817.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As a fire chief in a large metro area, I am continually dismayed by the disproportionately high number of needless home fire deaths in the African-American community. In fact, African-Americans are THREE TIMES more likely to die in a home fire than any other demographic group. This is three times too many.

The most common evidence found in the rubble of a home fire is a smoke detector with dead batteries.

As the first vice president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs and an African-American, I urge all residents nationwide to adopt a simple, potentially lifesaving habit: changing the batteries in their smoke detectors when they change their clocks back to standard time in October.

Ann, please help us by reminding your readers to change their smoke detector batteries during the fall time change weekend, Oct. 29-30. Thank you for helping us save lives. Sincerely—Chief Lamont Ewell, first vice president, International Association of Fire Chiefs, Oakland Fire Department.

DEAR CHIEF EWELL: I am grateful to you for a message that could save countless lives, not only in the United States but in other countries where my column appears. On behalf of my readers who will immediately change their smoke detector batteries, I say thank you, thank you.

DEAR READERS: This has run before, but it merits a repeat because Halloween is just around the corner. Before you know it, your children will be out trick-or-treating. Your doorbell will ring, and you will be confronted by the neighborhood kids with their hands out. That's the fun part. The dark side of this holiday is that hundreds of children will be injured and some may be killed.

No longer can you allow your youngsters to roam around and knock on strangers' doors in search of goodies. The world has changed since you and I went trick-or-treating. In recent years, people with twisted minds have been known to put razor blades and poison in taffy apples and Halloween candy. It is no longer safe to let your child eat treats that come from strangers.

And there are other dangers. Children love to put on costumes for Halloween. Some costumes are made of paper or materials that catch fire easily. The candles inside carved pumpkins are always a source of fascination. In a matter of seconds, they can set fire to a witch's cloak or an angel's wings.

Many Halloween costumes are long, easy to trip over and dark in color, not visible to a motorist. Accidents involving drivers who didn't see the child "until it was too late" are reported all over the country.

So what's a parent to do? Here are some suggestions: Have a Halloween party in your home. Invite the neighborhood kids and ask some of the parents to come along and help chaperone. If you aren't much of a partygiver, go trick-or-treating with your children to make sure they ring only the doorbells of people they know.

Holidays invariably end in tragedy for someone. Pay attention: to what I have written today so that you aren't among the sick at heart on Nov. 1.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why is it that whenever a woman writes to say her husband doesn't want to have sex, you tell her either he is having an affair or he's probably impotent?

My wife and I (we've been married for 33 years) have not had sex for at least 10 years, and it doesn't have anything to do with the way we get alone. The reason I am living a celibate life is because "Sally" chooses food over sex. She is 5 foot 2 and weighs at least 200 pounds.

Sally is not only depriving me of great sex, which we once had, but I have lost a wonderful companion. We don't go to the movies or to ballgames any more because she cannot fit into the seats. She has been on at least a dozen diets and can't seem to stick with any of them.

I am a healthy, normal man in my middle 50s and have resigned myself to a life of celibacy. How does this sound to you?—Yuma, Ariz.

DEAR YUMA: It sounds strange. I have yet to see a seat in a theater or a sports stadium that would not accommodate a 200-pound person.

I strongly recommend joint counseling. It seems as if you and Sally have a problem that is much more of a handicap than her weight. I hear from a lot of men who are crazy about their fat wives.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently printed a letter from a woman who found out that a recent flu shot had caused her to test positive for HIV. There are many reasons a person may receive a false positive when testing for AIDS. A recent vaccination is just one of them. Rheumatoid arthritis and pregnancy (if you've been pregnant before) may also result in a false positive.

More importantly, Ann, please tell your readers that influenza is a dangerous but preventable disease. Warn them not to confuse it with stomach flu. Influenza is a respiratory disease. For high-risk members (the elderly or anyone with a history of cardiovascular, respiratory or chronic

Take precautions with kids' costumes

By DR. JEFFREY FINE
For AP Special Features

Taking a few precautions outside the home and with children's costumes can help make for happy haunting this Halloween.

The majority of accidents on Halloween result from falls, so it is important to be careful in the design and fit of a child's costume. All costumes should fit comfortably without being too tight or too loose.

Keep costumes short to prevent children from tripping. If necessary, hems can be taped in place for the evening. Material can be pleated out under the arms to shorten long costumes.

Selecting costumes that are light or brightly colored will help increase a child's visibility when they are outdoors. Parents can attach reflective tape to the costume to make the child more clearly visible to motorists.

Masks tend to narrow a child's sight lines, making it difficult to see obstacles. As an alternative, use face paints or cosmetics, but be sure to test first for allergies. Use cosmetics sparingly around the eyes.

If only a mask will do, enlarge the eyeholes to widen the child's line of sight. Make sure that it fits the child comfortably and securely.

Also for safety's sake avoid long, dangling accessories. These props may look good but they can cause accidents by getting snagged or caught in doors.

Before children venture out, check their footwear. Be sure that they are wearing sneakers or comfortable walking shoes. Appropriate footwear can help keep children's feet more comfortable while on their appointed rounds, and may also help prevent falls.

Those who are expecting trick or treaters should take a careful look around the exterior of their home. Remove any obstacles, such as lawn mowers or tools from paths that children might use.

Jack-o'-lanterns are a fun and frightening part of Halloween. These pumpkins are often lit by candles and can pose a fire hazard. Be sure that they are not placed on porches or paths that children will use. Or, as an alternative, use flashlights to light the pumpkins.

As an alternative to taking a child trick or treating, consider hosting a neighborhood Halloween party.

However, if children are going out on the street, be sure that they are accompanied on their travels by a parent or baby sitter.

Instruct children to walk only in a familiar area and on a prior established route. Emphasize that they are to stop only at houses that have a light on, and should never go into a house unless the resident is a friend of the family.

Tainted treats tend to be a relatively infrequent occurrence, but as a precaution, do not let children eat treats before they return home. Examine all treats carefully, and throw out any candy with broken seals or any fruit that shows signs of tampering.

Finally, motorists should be especially cautious on Halloween night because children may be too excited about trick or treating to consider traffic safety.

Festive Foods Cooking School is open to the public Nov. 8

Festive Foods Cooking School will be held Tuesday, Nov. 8, at the Southwestern Public Service Co. Reddy Room.

There will be two sessions offered. The first will be at 1:30 p.m. and the second one will begin at 6:30 p.m. Reservations are requested and may be made by calling the County Extension Office at 364-3573 or Southwestern Public Service Co. at 364-3121. This will be the only day that the program will be offered in the community.

Connie Moyers, SWP home economist, will present the hour-long program. Each participant will receive the Festive Foods recipes for 1994. The event is sponsored by Southwestern Public Service and the Deaf Smith County Extension Office.

Writer Mark Twain died in 1910. One of his bits of advice was: "Always do right. This will gratify some people and astonish the rest."

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - When frightened, confused Americans needed reassurance after President Kennedy was assassinated, the media provided, newsman David Brinkley says.

These days, he said, they still provide - sometimes a bit too much.

Immediately after the assassination, rumors swirled that the government would dissolve and that other politicians were next on the hit list, the host of ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" recalled Wednesday at a Norfolk State University communications conference.

"We told them the truth ... to contradict the nutty lies," he said. "They knew us - they had known us for years - and so they believed us."

He said reporters these days have gone overboard in covering the O.J. Simpson case, but it's hard to avoid.

Pilot Club hears program

"Operations of the Juvenile Justice System" was the program presented recently to members of the Hereford Pilot Club. Lou Serrano, local chief juvenile probation office, spoke at the breakfast meeting. The Pilot Club meets at 7 a.m. the second and fourth Tuesday each month at the Hereford Community Center.

Miewes selected as chapter sweetheart for Alpha Iota Mu

Jane Miewes was selected as the Valentine Sweetheart for the Alpha Iota Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority. The announcement was made during the recent meeting held in Dr. Stan Fry's office.

President Wanda Huseman called the meeting to order with the opening ritual. Roll call was taken and answered by Wanda Huseman, Jaime Brorman, Jane Miewes, Pattie Urbanczyk, Mary Bob Ward, Carmen Gonzales, Gwen Betzen and Advisor Peggy Hyer.

It was announced that Sheryl Welch will be taking a leave of absence. Miewes will take her place as the recording secretary. Also, committees were discussed in the business order.

Members voted to make a donation to the Yvonne Miewes Scholarship Fund and also discussed various fundraisers for the holidays.

Huseman thanked members for assisting with meals for Marybeth Messer and Jane Miewes.

The president led members in the closing ritual.

The next meeting, planned Nov. 3, will be hosted by Carmen Gonzales and Wanda Huseman. The program will be presented by Pattie Urbanczyk.

Don't throw dog hair away; make something to wear

EDITOR'S NOTE - Dog hair on one's clothes has always been a pesky problem. Now comes a solution. Make the hair of the dog into something you can wear, as well as drink. Think of all the minks and other furry creatures that might be saved from premature extermination.

By DEBORAH BAKER
Associated Press Writer
SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - Thanks to a Santa Fe weaver, fashion mavens are literally putting on the dog.

Yes, that long, fluffy white coat with the elegant drape and luxurious feel is woven of silk, wool and Samoyed.

A handsome, patchwork-style jacket with blocks of rich tans and browns is woven of wool, silk and chow.

And that soft, lovely-to-touch scarf in shades of white, cream and beige is made of silk and collie.

There is nothing ordinary about the creations of weaver Nancy Paap, who spins dog hair into yarn and weaves it with hand-dyed silks, wools or cottons for one-of-a-kind garments.

Eye-catching for their textures and use of colors, Paap's finely detailed coats and jackets also feature silk linings, unusual buttons - often elk horn - and cuffs crocheted of dog hair.

Eye-catching, too, are the prices, ranging from $1,050 for short jackets to $1,750 for some long coats - although a chow-and-Samoyed beret can be had for $115.

"She creates garments that sell for a lot of money to people for whom this is their fur of choice," says Jill Heppenheimer, co-owner of Santa Fe Weaving Gallery, the main outlet for Paap's work.

Paap's customers are largely upscale visitors to Santa Fe who are struck by the unusual work and often come back for more.

"Sophisticated, confident people wear these pieces," Heppenheimer says.

Occasionally a customer is turned off when she learns what the fabric is, Heppenheimer says. She may dislike dogs, mistakenly believe it's a dog pelt or be afraid she'll attract a canine following as she walks down the street.

That fear is baseless, Heppenheimer says.

"My chow walks in here and lies down and has no interest in the dog hair coats," she says.

But those allergic to dogs, beware: These coats are not for you. Paap says she once had a customer with allergies who loved a jacket enough to buy it anyway. She returned it after she developed breathing problems.

Paap's customers occasionally include dog owners who provide their own animals' hair for the garment - a way to recycle the hair into an item with sentimental value.

It takes about 4 pounds of hair to make a coat, 2 pounds for a jacket and a half-pound for a scarf or shawl, Heppenheimer says. That's a lot of dog hair, so owners may have to save brushings for years.

All of the hair Paap uses is brushed from living dogs. Groomers and show-dog owners provide most of it. She advertises in dog breeding magazines and pays $10 a pound.

"I'm low on chow," Paap says during an interview in her studio at her home in Tesuque, north of Santa Fe.

The adobe studio is dominated by three looms. Skeins of dog-hair yarn hang to the ceiling on one wall.

Sitting by a spinning wheel is a bag of white, fluffy hair, the brushings of a Samoyed. Paap will spin the hair on a cotton or silk core strand for strength, wash the resulting yarn with dish detergent and ammonia, let it dry, then weave it with other fibers on one of the looms.

The resulting fabric will be washed, then the garment will be cut, sewn and lined, and the final product dry-cleaned.

Paap doesn't dye the dog-hair yarn, preferring its natural colors. Chow hair, for example, ranges from creamy to dark brown. Paap uses other yarn she dyes herself to add touches of turquoise or magenta or copper.

A weaver for more than two decades, Paap first tried spinning dog hair in 1972. She made pillows initially, and, by 1976, clothing.

"It was free yarn," and exotic fibers such as Angora goat were expensive, she says. "And if you're a weaver, you spin up anything. That's what I had, that's what I spun, that's what I used."

While it's not unusual for weavers to experiment with and use dog hair, Heppenheimer says Paap has a singular place in the dog-hair weaving realm.

"Nancy as far as we know is the only one who is doing it commercially and successfully and building a long-term customer base," Heppenheimer says.

Spinning teacher Peggy Meyer of Minneapolis, who recently coordinated a fashion show for the Handweavers Guild of America's international conference, says other dog-hair weavers she knows do it as a hobby.

"I've run into a lot of people that like to spin dog hair, and have their own pooches," Meyer says. "But they don't sell their work. It's very rare to find somebody that actually sells what she makes, and makes a living from it - especially with dog hair."

Paap favors Samoyed, chow and collie because of the texture and length of the hair. Some other breeds, such as German shepherds or huskies, have hair that is too short and stiff.

Dog-hair coat devotees say the garments are lighter than other fur - but still warm - and get fluffier and better-looking with age.

Paap says that while they may shed a little bit, they don't wear out.

VERMILLION, S.D. (AP) - Pat O'Brien knows his job as a sports broadcaster means very little in the grand scheme of things. And he doesn't mind.

"I don't take this all too seriously," the Sioux Falls native told students at the University of South Dakota on Tuesday. "It's sports. There's a score at the end of the day, and there are better things to do."

The CBS broadcaster visited his alma mater to speak with journalism and political science students.

He told them that in sports, people sometimes assume wrongly that a person can be a role model just because he or she is a celebrity.

"We make a big mistake, I think, in putting athletes on the pedestal that we do," O'Brien said.

YOUR EYES

MACULAR DEGENERATION

Think of your eyes as a camera; the retina at the back part acts like the film in the camera, registering the picture. Right in the center of the retina, its most sensitive part is the macula. This is what enables us to see fine detail when we look at something and to do close tasks like reading or sewing. The outer rings of the macula are less sensitive and can make only coarse visual distinctions.

In time, the macula may degenerate, usually late in life. Vision changes. There may be blurring or distortion—or an actual blind spot. Colors may seem faded. The condition is now the leading cause of legal blindness in the U.S., affecting 20 percent of the people over 75.

Most often, the early symptoms of macular degeneration are not obvious. That's yet another reason why annual examinations by a professional are so important. Your optometrist, examining the retina, can spot signs of the disorder in time for prompt treatment of the more serious "wet" form of the disease.

Revival of glamour new look

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Features
Get ready this winter for glamour with a capital "G." Designers are cutting curves into clothing. Three-inch heels are hot, and chunks of ice, real or not, are cool.
Think of Jessica Rabbit in a bias-cut "Butterfield 8" slip dress, her body under construction in a waistcincher or a push-up bra. She's stepping out in black fishnet stockings and stiletto heels. And she adores fabulous fakes, such as faux mink coats and ooh-la-la leopard. For the face, the painted look is back, with Kohl-rimmed eyes and crimson lips that require regular retouching. Hair is permed or marcelled. Nails are short and square and red.

All this artifice, designers say, is post-grunge revenge.
"It's a human craving to want to be glamorous," says Isaac Mizrahi, the New York designer. "It doesn't seem like clothes have been very glamorous for the past couple of years, since fashion has been into grunge and waifs. So this is something entirely different."

And it's wearable in small doses.
"Fashion always takes a spin, so we see almost the opposite of what came before," says Nancy Husted, fashion director for Neiman Marcus in Denver. "So, of course we're seeing beautiful Hollywood evening gowns."
But, she says, the career woman can translate this glamour with a mohair sweater, a velvet dress; a push-up bra or makeup such as bright lips, a more defined eye.
Dress shoes don't have to be the 4- and 5-inch spikes that staggered down fashion runways. Husted says to look for Donna Karan, Walter Steiger and Stuart Weitzman styles, for example, with slender 2- to 3-inch heels.
"Last season there really were not many pumps," she says, "but this season, black high heel pumps are part of the picture."
Valerie Steele, who teaches fashion history at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York, says the look isn't necessarily anti-feminist.

What's real? What's not?

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Features
Fake fur used to be for people who couldn't afford the real thing. Today it offers glamour without guilt, and the distinction between real and faux is increasingly fuzzy.
Fake fur, from look-alike ranch mink to high-fashion hot pink, has been worked into outerwear, accessories and sportswear by top designers. It's showing up in posh salons at prices that are anything but budget.

While some are hard to tell from the real thing, others are so novel they'd never pass for anything other than fake.
Coat prices range from around $159 for a three-quarter-length style in black wool and nylon with "jaguar" trim on hood and cuffs by Lorovi for J.C. Penney to $2,200 for Todd Oldham's long white "bear-hug" coat. It's available at Oldham's new boutique in New York City and the Street of Shops at the Mirage in Las Vegas.
Beyond outerwear is a snowball white minidress from Claude Montana. From Anna Sui comes a powder-puff pink suit with a fuzzy miniskirt and matching hat. Her faux includes feathers such as a purple jacket of fake ostrich feathers.
Accessory counters are warming up to fakes, too. Look for Russian trapper hats and Davy Crockett coonskin caps; fuzzy details on gloves and high-heeled boots.
"We're offering faux embellishments on everything from microfiber parkas to cuffs of gloves, boots, and hat bands," says Hope Brick, fashion director of Foley's in Houston.
Klein says J.C. Penney likes trim because it's more figure-flattering. "In an overall garment, sometimes fake fur gets too bulky," she says.
So whether they go whole-hog or add a little accent, fake fur seems to cater to every designer's need.
"It is extremely important to Karl Lagerfeld because he found that there are so many ways to show it," says Arlette Thebaud, director of public relations for Chanel in New York. "We have in this collection a wide range of uses of no-fur fur." And a lot of it is pure fun because Lagerfeld, she says, "is saying that fake does not imitate real anymore."
Randy Kemper is among designers who hope that synthetics will ultimately supplant skins.
"Fur is a glorious thing that comes from nature," he says, "and it's great that we can reproduce it and have some fun with it."
"Fake fur is now a tremendous luxury."

There are two types of faux furs, and one is meant to look just like the real thing, be it mink, ocelot, sheared beaver or raccoon," says Lucille Klein, Dallas-based fashion director of J.C. Penney Co. Inc. "And the other kind of faux fur is really fun. It's colored, it's printed, and it was all over the Paris runways."
Karl Lagerfeld calls the plush fabric at Chanel "the no-fur fur," while Isaac Mizrahi talks of "chinchillene," "coyote-ette" and "beast." These faux furs and others are meant to appeal to a chic clientele that wants to appease its conscience.
Ralph Lauren and Carolina Herrera offer the quiet sophistication of Persian lamb look-alikes for collars and cuffs. Others opt for the crayon brights of plush toys. Todd Oldham, for instance, created "teddy bear" and "powder puff" coats and Mizrahi made a "snowman" coat in bright orange.
"They've mastered the art of making the fabric, the texture and the color of fake fur," says New York designer Randy Kemper, who offers faux fur cocoon coats, as well as trim on pea jackets, twin sweater sets and trench coats.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

WHAT IT REALLY MEANS

Warning: This column may offend someone. It contains material that is intended to be humorous. However, some dour, misanthropic individuals may deem its content cynical or caustic. Please read at your own risk.

I think most of you know me well enough by now to know that I love life, and that I enjoy humor. However, I've learned through the years that some folks have never learned the joy of laughing at themselves. Others just have a low tolerance for humor in general. That is why I opened the column with a warning. I would never intentionally offend anyone - even an old sourpuss.

For you faithful readers who are still reading, I'd like to share a humorous look at what some business words and phrases really mean. These are common words and slogans that you'll read in newspaper and magazine ads, hear in radio spots and see in television commercials every day. My question is: Does the word or phrase really mean what it implies?

For example, in real estate does "great little fixer upper" mean "with a little tender loving care this house would be perfect" or "this heap needs a ton of work to be liveable?" In the automobile business does "pre-owned" mean "nearly new" or "very used?" In the computer industry does "user friendly" mean "this is an easy-to-use, well thought-out design for a beginner" or "with luck you may be able to find the on switch?"

If the corners of your mouth twitched a little in the preceding paragraph, read on. If you're already offended, you'd better stop now. Business definitions

Here are several common words and phrases and what we think they really mean. See if you agree.

- New and improved. The manufacturer has found a way to make this product at a much lower cost. They don't think you can tell the difference.
- Proven. My wife and mother-in-law tried it, and they both thought it was ok.
- Safe. No one can prove that all the rats died because they ate this product.
- Free. A word that is supposed to make you rush in for something at no cost.

- Free. (Alternative meaning) There are significant strings attached to this offer.
- It pays. You pay for it.
- Available only at... These folks would like for you to believe no one else has a product or service like this.
- At last. We didn't think we'd ever get this to the market.
- Limited supply. We've got a bunch of this stuff to sell, and if we can make you believe there may be a shortage, you may come in and buy some even if you don't need it.
- Limited edition. One of 10 to 12 million.
- Save. Spend.
- Today only. Today will be yesterday tomorrow. Tomorrow "today only" will be today, too.
- Secret formula. No one can remember exactly what we put into this batch.
- New, lower price. We didn't sell very many at the old price.
- 25 percent off. We bought quite a lot of this stuff and evidently paid too much for it. You wouldn't buy it at full price, so let's see if we can move it this way.
- 50 percent off. We're desperate to sell this stuff. Please buy some.
- Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. If we aren't completely satisfied with you money, we'll give it back.
- Special sale. We couldn't come up with a legitimate reason to have a sale. Isn't that special?

Baking mix makes variety of treats

By The Associated Press
Imagine the delight of a child coming home from school to a house filled with the aroma of fresh-baked chocolate cookies and cakes! All it takes is one basic mix, made from a blend of cocoa and other pantry staples.

The recipe for the baking mix yields 8 cups. When stored in an airtight container in a cool, dry place, the baking mix will keep for months.

Basic Cocoa Baking Mix
4-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
2-3/4 cups sugar
1-1/4 cups cocoa
1 tablespoon plus 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1-1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1-3/4 teaspoons salt

In a large bowl, stir together all ingredients. Store in a tightly covered container in a cool, dry place. Stir before using. Makes 8 cups mix.

Double Chocolate Sugar Cookies
2 egg whites, slightly beaten
1/4 cup light corn oil spread, melted
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2-1/2 cups Basic Cocoa Baking Mix
1/4 cup sugar
Chocolate Glaze (recipe below)
Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Lightly coat cookie sheet with vegetable cooking spray.

In medium bowl, stir together egg whites, corn oil spread, water and vanilla. Stir in baking mix until well blended. Shape dough into 1-inch balls. Roll balls in sugar to coat. Place 2 inches apart on cookie sheet. Press balls flat with bottom of glass. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 6 to 8 minutes. Cool 5 minutes. Remove from cookie sheet to wire rack. Cool completely. Drizzle with chocolate glaze. Makes 2-1/2 dozen cookies.

Chocolate Glaze: In a small, microwave-safe bowl, place 1/4 cup semisweet chocolate chips and 1/2 teaspoon shortening. Cook on high (100 percent power) for 30 seconds; stir. If necessary, cook on high an additional 30 seconds or until chocolate is melted and mixture is smooth when stirred.

Nutrition facts per serving: 70 cal., 1 g pro., 13 g carbo, 2 g fat, 0 mg chol., 75 mg sodium, 5 mg calcium.

Chocolate Cinnamon Snacking Cake
1 egg white, slightly beaten
1/2 cup evaporated skim milk
7 tablespoons light corn oil spread, melted
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1-1/4 cups Basic Cocoa Baking Mix
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/1 cup raisins
Powdered Sugar Glaze (recipe below)
Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Lightly spray an 8-inch square baking pan with vegetable cooking spray.

In a large mixer bowl, stir together egg white, evaporated skim milk, corn-oil spread and vanilla. Add baking mix and cinnamon. Beat on low speed of electric mixer until well blended. Stir in raisins. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake in a 350-degree F 20 to 25 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool completely in pan on wire rack. Drizzle with powdered sugar glaze. Makes 12 servings.

Powdered Sugar Glaze: In a small bowl, stir together 1/4 cup powdered sugar and 1-1/2 teaspoons water.

Nutrition facts per serving: 140 cal., 2 g pro., 21 g carbo, 5 g fat, 0 mg chol., 135 mg sodium, 40 mg calcium.

Chocolate Cupcakes
2 egg whites, slightly beaten
3/4 cup water
1/2 cup light corn oil spread, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2-1/4 cups Basic Cocoa Baking Mix
Powdered sugar
Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Paper-line 16 muffin cups (2 1/2 inches in diameter).

In a large mixer bowl, stir together egg whites, water, corn oil spread and vanilla. Add baking mix; beat on low speed of electric mixer until blended. Fill muffin cups about two-thirds full. Bake in a 350-degree F 20 to 25 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Remove from pan to wire rack. Cool completely. Sift lightly with powdered sugar. Makes 16 cupcakes.

Nutrition facts per serving: 110 cal., 2 g pro., 17 g carbo, 4 g fat, 0 mg chol., 150 mg sodium, 10 mg calcium.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

Tomorrow is Halloween and the big Crimestoppers carnival. The Friends of the Library will be there with a bean bag toss and selling bags. All the money made there goes for good causes, and it's a fun, safe thing to do on Halloween, so we hope we'll see you there!

There is quite a mixed bag, as usual, on the new book shelf this week. Fern Michaels' new work is there. Desperate Measures is the "spellbinding story of a love triangle, and the heartbreak and elation that come with the search for true love."

Westway Bazaar set

The public is invited to attend the Westway Family and Community Education Club's annual Country Christmas Bazaar from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, at the Hereford Community Center.

There is no admission charge. All proceeds from the event will be used for community projects including assisting the local 4-H organization.

A number of local exhibitors will be displaying all kinds of crafts and baked goods and photo buttons with Santa will also be available.

A few booth spaces remain. For more information, call Carolyn Evers at 364-4739 and leave your name, address and phone number.

Thanksgiving meal is planned

Plans for the annual Thanksgiving supper was the topic of discussion Tuesday evening when the Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 met in regular session. Guests of members are invited to the meal which will be served Nov. 15.

Noble Grand Dorothy Lundry presided at the business session when the following was recorded: 23 visits to the sick, 45 cheer cards, six dishes of food and one flower.

It was noted that the group will meet at 7:30 p.m. each Tuesday following the time change.

Ily Inman sent refreshments which were served by Peggy Lemons. Others present were Ben and Anna Conklin, Leona Sowell, Jessie Matthews, Rosalie Northcutt, Susie Curtsinger, Nelma Sowell, Lucille Lindeman, Mary Lou Weatherford, Ocie Bolton, Ursalee Jacobsen and Frankie Ruland.

Hyer makes visit to college

Sue Hyer of Hereford joined close to 600 parents, friends and relatives visiting Austin College for the annual Parents' Weekend activities recently.

Activities focused on the theme "What's New?," giving parents the opportunity to meet college administrators and faculty, tour the campus and attend a full schedule of special events.

To kick-off the weekend's activities, parents met faculty members during continental breakfast gatherings. Later, college president Dr. Oscar Page and alumni and parent relations director Dr. Randy Hudson officially welcomed the parents to the campus. Dr. Page followed the welcome with comments about his expectations for the school year.

Throughout the weekend, parents were able to enjoy Kangaroo soccer, swimming and football team competitions.

If that sounds a little too sweet, then how about Pearl in the Mist by V.C. Andrews? Continuing the series begun with Ruby, Ruby Landry's Cajun legacy threatens to be her undoing.

In a lighter vein, we also have The Best of the Old Farmer's Almanac. This is one of those books that is highly informative to read thoroughly, and highly entertaining to scan lightly, relating the 200 year history of one of America's most enduring institutions.

There's new help for asthma

When asthma strikes, it can feel like you are breathing through a tiny straw, as though a crushing weight is bearing down on your chest or like you're drowning on dry land. The 12 million people who suffer from this disease describe an asthma attack in many ways, but it all adds up to the fear and panic of not being able to breathe.

"It can be scary," said Christine Howard, an asthma sufferer from Raleigh, N.C. "Sometimes, I feel like I'm suffocating. You never know when an asthma attack might happen."

To help asthma sufferers get through the day - and night - without troublesome symptoms, a new medication might be just what the doctor orders. Serevent (salmeterol xinafoate) Inhalation Aerosol, the first long-acting inhaled bronchodilator effective in preventing asthma symptoms for 12 hours, is now available by prescription.

Two puffs of Serevent taken morning and evening approximately 12 hours apart can provide convenient protection from asthma symptoms around the clock. Since currently available inhaled bronchodilators usually require dosing every four to six hours, people with asthma often have no protection during the night. Nocturnal asthma is a problem for many asthmatics - one study showed that even patients with mild to moderate asthma report awakening due to asthma symptoms an average one out of every three weeks.

"Serevent will prevent the peaks and valleys of breathing difficulty, so asthma sufferers won't have to live from symptom to symptom anymore," said Gilbert E. D'Alonzo, D.O., of the Pulmonary Disease Section of Temple University School of Medicine. "In addition, the greater convenience of twice-daily dosing may lead more people to use their medication as prescribed." In studies of Serevent, patients experienced headaches, tremor and cough as the most common drug-related side effects.

Serevent is indicated for long term twice daily use in the maintenance treatment of asthma and prevention of bronchospasm (constriction of the airways associated with asthma) in people 12 years and older with reversible obstructive airway disease. Serevent is intended for patients who require regular treatment with inhaled short-acting bronchodilators, including patients with symptoms of nocturnal asthma. It is important to remember that Serevent should not be used to relieve acute asthma symptoms. In addition, Serevent is indicated for the prevention of exercise-induced asthma in patients 12 years of age and older.

The only fence against the world is a thorough knowledge of it.

Favorite apple recipes are shared

By NANCY BYAL

For AP Special Features
This time of year, my other job fills my weekends and evenings. We are busy harvesting apples and pressing cider in our own family orchard. Needless to say, over the years I've built up quite a collection of favorite apple recipes. Gourmet presentations may come and go, but one of my family's tried-and-true favorites are plain baked apples. I vary this easy dessert by switching the filling. Be sure to use a cooking apple that will hold its shape. I'd recommend Cortland, Golden Delicious, Granny Smith, Newtown Pippin or Rome Beauty apples.

Choose-a-Filling Baked Apples
4 large baking apples (about 1-3/4 pounds)

Desired filling
1/3 cup apple juice, cider or dry white wine
Sweetened whipped cream, light cream, vanilla yogurt or frozen vanilla yogurt

Ground nutmeg
Prepare the desired filling. To core each apple, use an apple corer or the rounded tip of a vegetable peeler. Push the corer or peeler most of the way through the apple center, but do not cut through the other end; turn the corer or peeler to loosen the upper part of the core. Remove and discard core. Enlarge the hole slightly at top of the apple for the filling.

Using vegetable peeler or paring knife, remove the peel from the top half of each apple. If desired, with the tines of a fork, score the peeled part of the apple.

Place apples in a 2-quart square baking dish. Spoon the filling into the center of each apple. Add cider, juice or wine to the dish. Bake, covered, in a 350-degree F oven about 45 minutes or until fork-tender. Transfer apples to dessert dishes; spoon liquid in dish over apples. Serve warm with whipped cream, yogurt, cream or frozen yogurt; sprinkle with nutmeg. Makes 4 servings.

Dried-Fruit Filling: Combine 2/3 cup raisins, currants or mixed dried fruit bits; 2 tablespoons brown sugar; and 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon.

Ginger-Almond Filling: Stir together 1/4 cup slivered almonds or pinenuts, 2 tablespoons apricot preserves and 1 tablespoon chopped crystallized ginger.

Orange-Macaron Filling: Toss 2/3 cup crumbled soft coconut macaroon cookies with 2 tablespoons orange marmalade.

Peanut Butter Filling: Mix 1/3 cup coconut with 1/3 cup chunky peanut butter.

Apple-Walnut Filling: Blend 1/3 cup apple butter with 1/4 cup chopped walnuts.

Writer recalls experiences during jury duty

EDITOR'S NOTE - Judges and legal scholars have long debated the ultimate wisdom of the jury system. It is creaky and expensive, wasteful of time and energy. Still, when all is over, they marvel that 12 disparate men and women could agree on whether a defendant was guilty or not. Here one recent juror recalls her weeklong ordeal.

By SHEILA NORMAN-CULP
Associated Press Writer
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - Two minutes into her opening statement on the first day of a rape trial, the defense attorney abruptly broke off. "Judge, I need a sidebar," she said. She, the judge and the prosecutor moved out of earshot to talk while we, the jury, were sent back into a yellow, windowless room. To wait. To read. To do anything but talk about why we were here. "Nice start," said one elderly woman. For more than 200 years, the U.S. Constitution has given every American the right to be tried by a jury. The question of who should be on that jury has been debated ever since, but the jury system remains. In 10 minutes, a ruling was issued. The elderly woman who had been snoring next to me was politely excused after the judge determined she could remember little of the first 20 minutes of the trial.

Lawyers deem jury selection to be a crucial aspect of a criminal trial. Books have been written on it, law courses offered.

As jurors, we were herded into courtrooms, dismissed, sent to other courtrooms, questioned, sent back to jury control, or selected.

In the beginning, we were questioned by a judge. Do we know anyone involved in the case? Have we - or our family - ever been victim of a crime? Have we or our family ever been charged or convicted of a crime? Do we believe police more than ordinary citizens?

More than a third of the jury pool was excused by their answers.

Next the two women and 12 men selected by a random drawing, were in for the final gleaning. From now on the rejections were personal. Jurors were asked name and occupation, their spouse's occupation, their children's ages and occupations. One semi-retired carpenter grew flustered while trying to list the ages, sexes and occupations of his eight grown children in order.

One man wore a brightly colored shirt remarkably similar to that worn by the defendant. "With our thanks, we excuse Juror 11," the prosecutor intoned.

"It was the shirt. I knew it was the shirt," the juror said later.

An Hispanic newspaper columnist didn't have time to warm the seat before he was bounced, again by the prosecution. The defense excused several white men.

Pressed to arrive the next morning, promptly at 9 a.m., we did, only to be dismissed until 10:30 a.m. After a brief flurry to pick the last juror, we were sworn in - five men and nine women - just in time to be dismissed for lunch.

The trial began, but frustrations did not end. This was not television justice. Loose ends were not tied up, contradictory testimony was not clarified. At times, both the defendant and the victim said no when they apparently meant yes, or appeared to contradict their own testimony.

And none of us could ask questions. Not of the person testifying, not of the defense, not of the prosecution. Only of the judge, after all testimony was over, and only on legal issues.

After two days of testimony, one juror was picked at random to be an alternate. The rest of us trooped back into the now-familiar room.

Could we bear to live in a motel for six months with each other, as we might have to? Not on your life.

But now it was our turn. Was this man guilty in what passed for a date rape case in one of Newark's rougher neighborhoods?

To reach a verdict, 12 strangers ranging from about 20 years old to past 65 had to discuss graphically the intricacies of human sexual relations and exchange opinions on whether a rape occurred.

When the victim said no, did she mean no to sex or no to what he was doing at the moment. Was rubbing her breasts foreplay or sexual assault? He stopped making love after she said no, but did he stop in time? Did she say no in time? Are awkward sexual relations a crime?

The first vote: four guilty on two counts, nine not guilty, one pass.

A beefy salesman with a booming voice - the main spokesman for the guilty side - dominated the debate. He talked about how tiny "that young girl" was, how a physical deformity limited her mobility, how she was not educated beyond special classes in high school.

"She's no girl, she's 26!" a black grandmother retorted. "Why didn't she just get up and go?"

"He conned her, he coerced her," said an older man who voted guilty.

"Persuading someone to sleep with you is not a crime," said another woman. "There was no force here!"

When the competing voices grew too loud, the foreman, who earned his post by being the juror in seat No. 1, raised his arms. "Quiet! Everyone will be heard," he promised.

The second vote: two guilty votes on two counts, one not guilty on the fondling charge but guilty on assault, nine not guilty.

To avoid turning more harshly upon each other, we berated the absent prosecution, which had the burden of proving "beyond a reasonable doubt" that the crime occurred.

The defendant said he and the alleged victim chatted on the phone for 20 minutes several hours after their encounter. Where were the phone records?

Where was the brother, who brought his sister to the hospital to be examined that night? Why did the police check the "unclear if crime was committed" box when they first interviewed the woman? Why didn't she mention anything about screaming until she was on the witness stand?

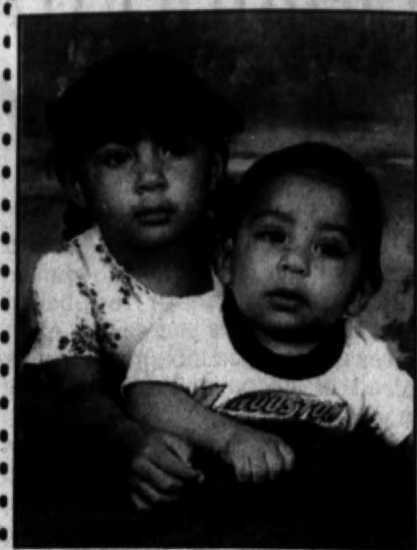

"The prosecution blew it," one of the two holdouts said, shaking his head. Reasonable doubt.

A third vote was taken. Twelve unanimous votes: Not guilty on both counts. Relief mingled with elation as we told the court our verdict.

Afterwards, the judge came back to the jury room to thank us.

"The jury system is a marvelous invention, I am in awe of it," he said. "You should be proud of how you conducted yourselves."

Funny thing was, we were.

Thoughts of singing, dancing remote for Vereen after wreck

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS (AP) - Forget the dreams of singing and dancing, of Broadway and Vegas, of footlights and fame.

Ben Vereen just wanted to walk again.

"I never thought about returning to the stage," Vereen said softly, recalling the nightmare that began June 9, 1992, when he was struck and nearly killed by a truck as he walked along the Pacific Coast Highway in Malibu. "I just wanted to get up, to be able to walk again."

Singing and dancing had been Vereen's life, from Las Vegas lounges to the city's glitzy showrooms; from Broadway shows such as "Pippin," "Sweet Charity," "Hair" and "Jesus Christ Superstar," to films such as "All That Jazz" and "Funny Lady."

All that came crashing down in one terrifying moment.

Vereen says the months of painful rehabilitation gave him a new outlook.

"It was not about whether I'd be on stage again, but what I would do with my life," he recounted recently while in Las Vegas headlining at the Sheraton Desert Inn. "I never thought about returning; I thought about getting up."

"Being back on stage is a blessing, this is one of the perks of life."

A badly broken leg and severe head and internal injuries meant months of rehabilitation, struggling with such simple tasks as feeding himself.

The road back provided him with some heroes he won't forget, and a dream he's now pursuing.

There was the occupational therapist at the Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation in West Orange, N.J., who gave him a children's book with an ageless message - "The Little Engine That Could."

And the therapist who promised him she'd use aerobics to help him dance again - at a time he was wearing a neck brace and leaning on two canes.

By the spring of 1993 he was back on Broadway as Chimney Man in the musical "Jelly's Last Jam." His singing and dancing earned him a 5-minute standing ovation, and provided a giant step on the road back.

On the Desert Inn stage, Vereen shows no trace of the crippling injuries or the trauma of his brush with death.

But his songs and his footwork speak volumes:

- His opening number, "Yes I Can."

- Sitting on the edge of the stage, singing "I've got to find my corner of the sky ..."

- A haunting rendition of "Memory."

- A warm tribute to an old friend, the late Sammy Davis Jr., singing "Candy Man," "What Kind of Fool Am I"; singing and dancing "Mr. Bojangles."

- Dancing through the audience and atop a table, singing a rocking version of "Stand by Me."

- And the finale, "This Is the Moment":

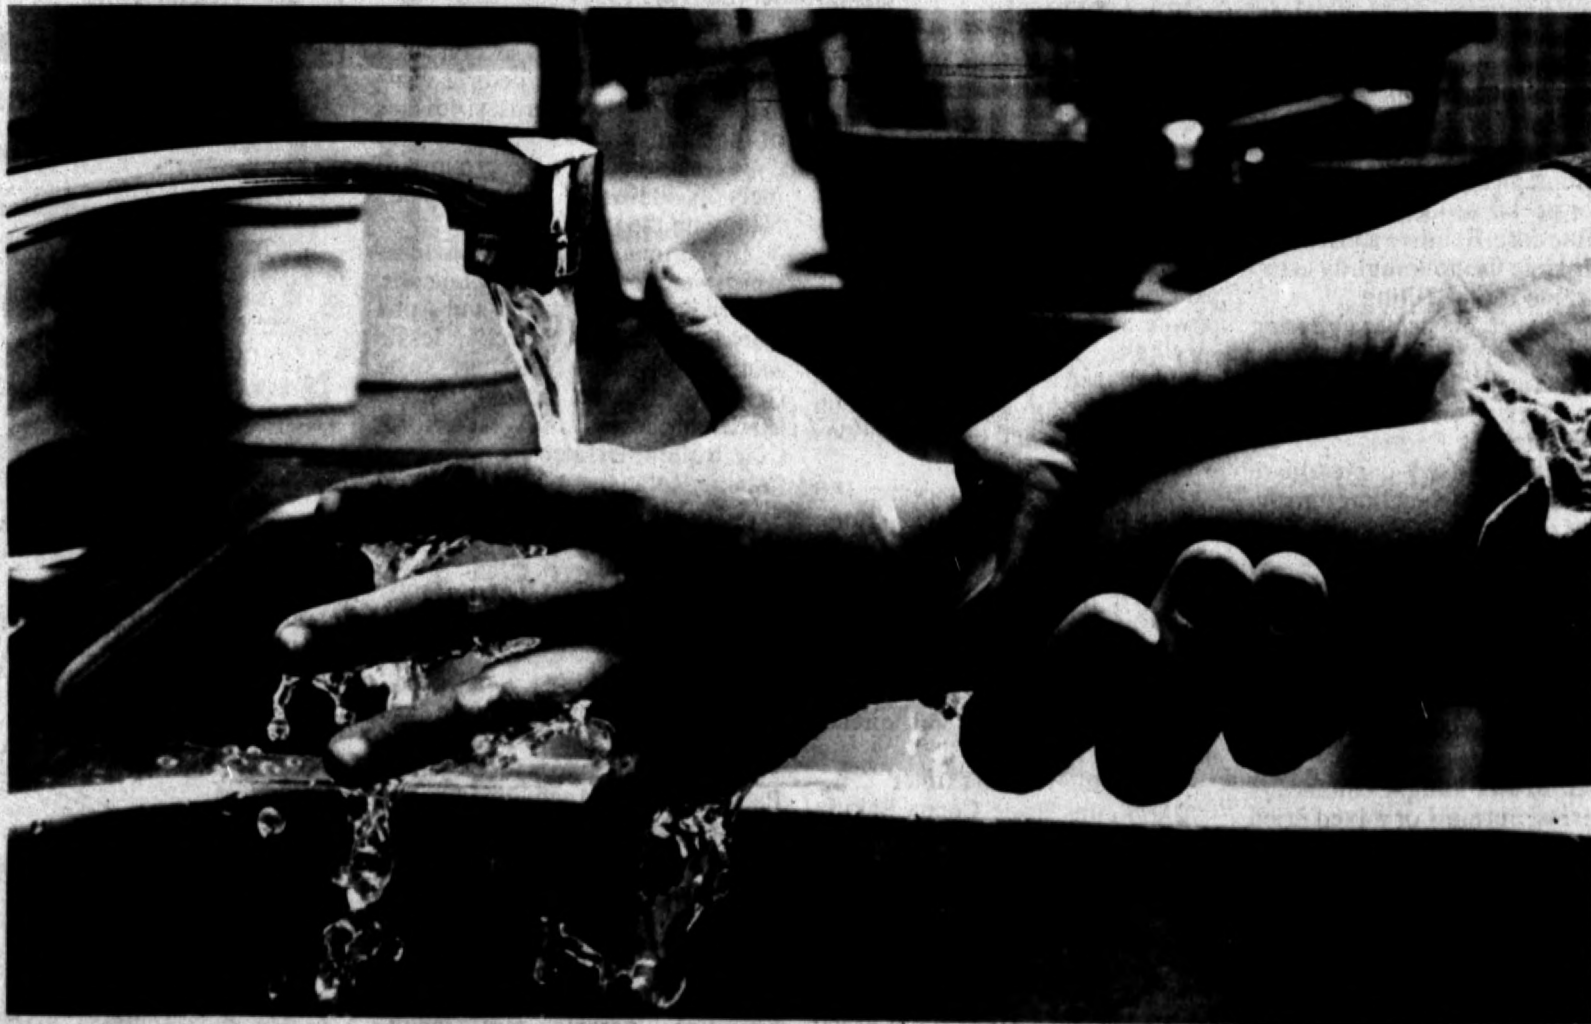

"Sammy was always there for me. He was a beacon in a time of the storm. For us Afro Americans, he was one of the ones who was there, who was taking the blows," Vereen said.

"When I was out of work, Sammy would find work for me. He was there in every way."

Giving something back is important to Vereen, now more than ever.

Enter his consuming dream - the Ben Vereen School for the Performing Arts, now nearing completion in Chicago.

The school will teach both the able-bodied and the physically challenged singing, dancing and acting, and will provide tutoring services.

Door problems can be solved easily

By READER'S DIGEST BOOKS
For AP Special Features

Troublesome doors that spring open or refuse to shut often need only simple adjustments. Accumulated paint and loose or misaligned hinges are behind many of these common problems.

Rubbing
If a door rubs, check it and the door frame thoroughly for paint buildup. Sand or chisel away any excess paint. If necessary, strip it off with paint remover, following all precautions on the paint remover. Prime and repaint the bare wood.

If accumulated paint is not the cause and rubbing occurs at the top or bottom of a door's latch side, try tightening the hinge opposite the area that rubs. Open the door and turn each hinge screw clockwise using a long screwdriver for maximum leverage. Turning the screws a quarter to half a turn may be all that is necessary.

If the door rubs along the hinge side, remove the screws holding the hinge to the door frame. Cut a shim, a thin piece of cardboard the same size as the hinge leaf, slide it behind the leaf and then reinstall the screws. Test the door; if it still rubs you may have to add another shim or place a shim behind the lower hinge as well. When hinges are correctly positioned, you should be able to close the door and slide a credit card easily between its edges and the door frame on all sides.

Springing Open
A door that springs open by itself may do so because the hinges are not aligned vertically or because their leaves are set into the door frame at an angle. Check the vertical alignment of the hinges with a plumb bob; if the hinges are out of line, remove and reset the lower one. To correct a hinge leaf set into the frame at an angle, cut a cardboard shim half as wide as the leaf and place it behind the part of the leaf set deepest into the door frame.

Sometimes you cannot tighten loose hinge screws because their holes have become enlarged. If this affects only one or two screws, simply remove them, drill a small pilot hole that extends each screw hole into the wall stud beside the door frame and then replace the original screws with longer ones. If all the hinge screws are loose, remove them and the hinge leaf and plug the holes with glue-coated dowels. When the glue dries, trim the plugs flush, then use the hinge leaf as a guide for drilling pilot holes for the screws.

Not Latching
If a door will not latch because the latch bolt does not engage the strike plate on the frame, remove the strike plate and either add a shim beneath or file the opening in the plate to enlarge it. If the latch and strike plate are severely misaligned, plug the screw holes and reposition the plate higher or lower on the door frame. This is easier than repairing a slightly warped door or frame and usually is as effective.

Q: Here in Northern Minnesota, our water is colored by iron ore deposits. What do you recommend to use for removing rust from bathroom fixtures?

A: One product that works well to solve your problem is Iron Out. Used as directed, it will not damage the surface of any bathroom fixture, as some powder cleansers do. Added to the laundry water, it helps keep white clothes white. According to Iron Out, Inc., an 18-ounce bottle of the company's product costs about $4 at hardware stores. Write Iron Out, 1515 Dividend Rd., Fort Wayne, Ind. 46808, or call (800) 654-0791.

Another product, Iron Care, is supposed to be an all-purpose rust remover as well. It's sold at hardware stores and home centers, and an 18-ounce can costs about $3.50. Write Enforcer Products, P.O. Box 1068, Cartersville, Ga. 30120.

The Festival of Trees marks the beginning of the holiday season at the center.

The main feature of the event is the display of beautifully decorated trees for residents of the community and visitors to the area to enjoy during four days of entertainment and activities for people of all ages.

This display, within a festival setting, is a major community involvement and fund raising project for the Hereford Senior Citizens Association. In 1993, approximately 5,000 people attended the display and took part in festival activities.

The event is made possible by business organizations, institutions and individuals through advertising sponsorship of tree display and festival costs, voluntary tree designing and decoration, and donated entertainment and time.

Margie's Notes

I am always amazed at the beauty of our area. As I drove to work in the fog one morning and saw the beautiful colors of the trees and such beautiful flowers blooming, I thought how many times we overlook our autumn scenery and travel miles to see sights less impressive. Of course, I realize our United States of America have places we all like to see and of which we are very proud.

We are busy at the Center getting ready for the Festival of Trees. This is our major fund raiser and also a time for our community to get together as a group. We can't wait to see the children from the schools and their responses to the trees and the Lionel Train display. The Hensons from Happy, who own the trains, said there will be a lot of new buildings and a new Coca Cola train in the display. Be sure to watch for the scheduling for new activities and the time schedule in The Hereford Brand and listen to KPAN.

We need more volunteers to help in different areas of the Festival of Trees. If you can, whether a senior citizen or not, we would appreciate your help. The crafts area needs more handmade crafts, and the bake sale project needs more people to sign up to bring goodies.

We want to wish everyone a Happy Thanksgiving! This is the best time of the year. We want to tell everyone in our town how much we appreciate you and the help you provide. We realize all of us need to help each other to have a balanced community. We are thankful for our City and County officials, Hereford-Independent School District, our hospital and the staff and physicians, and all our churches. We all want to thank our news media—KPAN and The Brand. We could not do without you!

See you at the Festival of Trees!

Social Security

Q. I'll be 62 next year. When should I file for Social Security retirement benefits?

A. We recommend that you talk to a Social Security representative in the year before the year you plan to retire. In any case, you should contact SSA about three months before you turn 62. To file for benefits or to get information, you can call the Amarillo Social Security office at 1-376-2241.

Q. What documents will I need to apply for retirement benefits?

A. We will need to see a certified copy of your birth certificate and your last W-2 form (or tax return if you're self-employed). If you have a spouse or dependents who will also be applying you will need your wedding certificate and the children's birth certificates. You should call first and the office will tell you exactly what you need.

Q. How does Social Security figure my benefit amount?

A. Your Social Security benefit is a percentage of your earnings averaged over your working lifetime. A worker with average earnings can expect a retirement benefit that represents about 42 percent of his or her preretirement earnings. You get a free estimate of your benefits, call our office.

Q. How do I apply for Medicare?

A. If you're already getting Social Security retirement or disability benefits or railroad retirement checks, we'll contact you a few months before you become eligible for Medicare and give you the information you need to sign up. If you aren't already getting checks, you should contact us about three months before your 65th birthday to sign up for Medicare. You can sign up for Medicare even if you don't plan to retire at 65.

Q. What percent of my salary goes towards Social Security taxes?

A. In 1994, you and your employer each pay 7.65 percent of your gross salary, up to $60,600. If you're self-employed, you pay 15.3 percent of your taxable income into Social Security, up to $60,600. If you make more than $60,600 in 1994, you continue to pay the Medicare portion of the Social Security tax on the rest of your earnings. The Medicare portion of the tax is 1.45 percent for employers and employees each, and 2.9 percent for self-employed people.

Q. What's the average monthly Social Security retirement benefit?

A. The average monthly Social Security benefit in 1994 for a retired individual is $674. The average monthly Social Security benefit amount for a retired couple is $1,140.

Q. I understand that I can have some income and still receive Supplemental Security Income payments. About how much income am I allowed?

A. Generally, a person who has unearned income of less than $466 may qualify for a federal SSI payment. Because a larger portion of earned income is disregarded, a person who earns up to $977 a month may receive a federal payment.

Q. Is it true that I can keep my home if I apply for SSI?

A. Social Security doesn't count everything you own when you apply for SSI. For example, the home you live in and the land it's on; your personal and household goods and life insurance policies, depending on their value; your car usually does not count; burial plots for members of your immediate family; up to $1,500 in burial funds for you and up to $1,500 in burial funds for your wife, may not count. In addition, you may own items worth up to $2,000 as an individual, or $3,000 as a couple and still receive SSI benefits.

Q. I understand that if I can qualify for SSI, I will also be eligible for other assistance, like Medicaid. How does this work?

A. In Texas, SSI recipients qualify for Medicaid. SSI recipients are also generally eligible for social services provided by the state, city or county where they live. These may include homemaker services, arrangements for meals or transportation. More information is available at the Texas Department of Human Services. Texas SSI recipients may also qualify for food stamps.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I always thought that the retirement age for Social Security was 65 years old but a friend of mine said that a person has to be 67 years old to retire. Who's correct?

A: It depends -- if you were born before January 2, 1938, you will be eligible for your full Social Security benefit at the age of 65. However, because of longer life expectancies, the full retirement age will be increased in gradual steps until it reaches age 67 by 2027. This change starts in the year 2000 and affects people born in 1938 and later. No matter what your "full" retirement age is, you may start receiving a reduced retirement benefit as early as 62. For more information, call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213, or the local office at 376-2241, and ask for the booklet, "Retirement."

Q: I'm divorced. Will I be eligible for any Social Security benefits on my ex-husband's Social Security record?

A: If you and your ex-husband were married for at least 10 years and if you are at least 62 years of age and currently unmarried, you will be eligible to receive divorced wife's benefits based on his Social Security work record. If your ex-husband is at least 62, you can receive divorced wife's benefits even if he is still working and not yet drawing his own Social Security retirement benefit if you've been divorced from him at least two years.

Q: Are my Social Security retirement benefits figured on my last five years of earnings?

A: No. Retirement benefits are calculated on total earnings during a lifetime of work under the Social Security system. Years of high earnings will increase the amount of the benefit, but no group of years counts more than another group. However, the lowest five years of earnings on record are not used in the calculation.

Q: I heard that IRS may delay tax refunds that have incorrect Social Security numbers. Is this true?

A: Beginning with 1994 Federal income tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will delay processing of returns with missing or incorrect Social Security numbers (SSN) of taxpayers, spouses or dependents. A Social Security number is incorrect when the name and number on the tax return does not match the name and number in IRS records. People who expect refunds will be particularly impacted by this policy. If the return does not include the correct Social Security numbers, IRS must have the correct information before issuing a refund. If you are not sure your current name matches your SSN record, we recommend that you contact us and let us verify the information. This should avoid any unplanned delays when your tax returns are filed in 1995 and in the years that follow.

October birthdays celebrated

The Senior Citizens had their monthly Birthday Social on Oct. 13 and welcomed the Senior Citizens Choir and their director, former Hereford resident Steve Paul, from Parkridge Baptist Church of Moore, OK., as special guests.

The guest choir combined with our Senior Citizens "Young at Heart" Choir and the First Baptist "Golden Tones" Choir for an evening of entertainment. We had a very large turnout and lots of good food for everyone to share.

Thanks, again, to everyone who made it possible and to everyone who came together in fellowship to celebrate the October birthdays!

Scientists at Moulis, in the Pyrenees, have determined that an average-size man walking in a cave for an hour produces 20 to 25 liters of carbon dioxide, 30 grams of water and a heat flow equivalent to a 175-watt light bulb.

Newsworthy trends

It is common knowledge that women live longer than men. But women's longer lives come at a price. Those extra years increase the likelihood of becoming widowed, poor, and in need of professional long term care for diseases of old age such as Alzheimer's and osteoporosis. Although only 5 percent of the elderly live in nursing homes, 75 percent of nursing home residents over age 65 are women, according to the National Center on Health Statistics.

Unfortunately, women are financially unprepared for living longer. With older women's median income at only 56 percent that of older men's income, women are even more likely to be forced onto the welfare rolls to pay for their care. Currently, almost 70 percent of all nursing home residents rely on the Medicaid welfare program to pay the majority of their nursing home bills, according to the federal government.

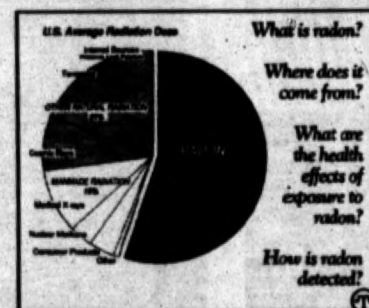

Nevertheless, in all the talk about health care reform, long term care and its costs do not appear to be a priority. And long term care is being ignored despite a recent Gallup poll that found that 45 percent of Americans consider nursing home care to be one of the most important benefits a health care bill should have.

According to American Health Care Association Executive Vice President Paul R. Willging, "Congress has placed long term care on the back burner by doing little or nothing to help women meet their long term care needs. That inaction will continue to leave women unprepared for the later years of life. Our mothers, grandmothers, wives and daughters deserve better."

Willging said he believes that Congress must make private resources - like private long term care insurance - a more viable option for individuals and employers in order to fix the problem facing older women. "By passing laws that help Americans prepare financially for the later years of life, Congress can help women avoid impoverishment when faced with the need for long term care," Willging said.

Americans of all ages are asking their legislators to pass laws that help people prepare financially for their long term care needs. Anyone concerned about Congress's failure to end reliance on the government for long term care or other issues can write Congress at the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510 and the U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

FIG. 1. The Food Guide Pyramid

A Guide to Daily Food Choices

Source: U. S. Department of Agriculture

Food Guide Pyramid has fat, sugar content for different groups

BY CHARLOTTE CLARK MS RD/LD

Teaching the general public the use of the Food Guide Pyramid can be effective if clear, consistent and compassionate instructions are given.

To increase clarity, we, the health professional, must teach one step at a time with each step connecting and building on the previous step. Remember that the Pyramid's steps, or building blocks, are predetermined. Begin at the base and add one food group at a time.

Be clear and precise when talking about each food group; timing and the length of each session is most important to the individual's learning and understanding of the material.

The fat and sugar symbols are not obvious to most consumer's when they look at the Food Guide Pyramid. The different concentration of symbols in each food group represents the relative amount of fat (or sugar) that is found in one food group compared with another food group.

The foods that go in each food group can be identified in figure 2.

included with this article. List No. 2 is a sample list that shows the variety of choices within the vegetable group.

Figure No. 3 is a listing of hard-to-place foods. Changes in the eating habits of the consumers must be considered and must respect their belief system, their food preferences, their ethnic heritage and their lifestyles.

With the input of representative foods from different cultures, Pyramids are being developed to illustrate the foods of different cultures. One must understand and appreciate the customs and food practices and respond to the age and knowledge level of the target audience.

Figure No. 4 is an example of the Food Guide Pyramid which is important for the cultural group that is present in this area.

Figures included in this article were illustrated in an article from the Journal of the American Dietetic Association, September, 1994.

Post stroke relab care at home

Taking a healthy interest in these facts about stroke could mean a better quality of life for you or someone you care about:

-Stroke is the major cause of long-term neurological disability in individuals 65 years of age or older.

-The burden and expense of long-term care for stroke victims is enormous. These costs are expected to increase as the "baby boom" generation ages and as more people survive stroke, thanks to medical advances. Medical rehabilitation programs are designed to address the needs of stroke patients, and help them become more independent.

-To help stroke survivors stay healthier after leaving facility based rehab, there is now a system of extended care that often supports the stroke survivor and family up to one year after leaving a care facility.

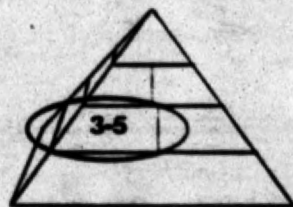

-Working closely with the patient and family, this system helps people adapt to life after stroke, limits recurring medical problems, limits stress-related illnesses and helps improve the patient's and family's overall quality of life.

-Such follow-up care of elderly stroke patients after leaving medical rehabilitation facilities can help ease care and returns people to health and to the home setting with fewer problems. Stroke survivors and their families are happier- and their health care costs are lower which benefits our economy as well

Male Drivers More Likely to Ignore Sleep's Warning Signs

Percentage of Drivers Who Continue to Drive When Rest is Needed:

Men are twice as likely as women to stay behind the wheel when they know they should stop and rest.

Four in ten drivers, a survey found, run the dangerous risk of continuing to drive when they know they need to rest. Substantially more men (58 percent) than women (28 percent) drive on despite feeling tired.

Make a living trust kit

You can save yourself and your family a lot of money, time and trouble with the help of a Living Trust.

More than a will, it's set up by you to control your estate. You name yourself as trustee and maintain full control over your assets as you've always done. The trust only becomes effective when you die or become incapacitated. The person you would designate as beneficiary for the trust (your spouse, say, or your child) is called the "successor trustee." That person takes over the estate without it going through probate and terminates the trust. You can abolish the trust or alter its terms or change the beneficiaries at any time you wish.

A Living Trust offers another benefit. A growing number of older

When traveling always carry a variety of payment methods—Travelers Cheques, credit cards and a limited amount of cash.

Americans are putting their assets into Living Trusts because they want to avoid being placed under a court-appointed guardian if they become unable to manage their affairs. With a Living Trust, you can specify in advance whom you want to manage your affairs if you ever become incompetent.

Such a trust can be particularly useful if you own a business. Many businesses come to a grinding halt while the owner's will is being probated. However, under a Living Trust, the successor can continue to run the business.

Use of a Living Trust is valid in all fifty states. You can set one up with the help of an attorney, or you can get a Living Trust Kit from the Mass Enterprise Company. It includes ready-to-use forms, step-by-step instructions, actual examples and explanations of various terms. It shows you how to prepare the trust document, how to implement the trust by transferring title to the property to the trust, and how our beneficiary can distribute the assets and dissolve the trust. The kit costs $29.95 plus $3 for shipping and handling and comes with a 90 day full guarantee. You can even get the kit on a diskette for IBM-compatible computers for $49.95 plus $3 for shipping and handling.

Protect your hearing health

More than 21 million Americans are hearing impaired, and noise levels in our high tech society imperil many more. This public service information is provided to help you protect your hearing health.

Hearing is one of the most precious of our five senses and it is important to protect our listening ability.

Should a hearing problem occur, it is advisable to see a doctor to receive a thorough examination. If an impairment is found, there are three types of hearing professionals available for help.

They are:
-An otologist/otolaryngologist (ear, nose and throat doctor) who has specialized training in diagnosing and treating diseases of the ear.

-An audiologist, who is a non medical expert with a minimum of a master's degree and trained in identifying, assessing and rehabilitation hearing loss, and

-A hearing instrument specialist, who is trained in the identification and evaluation of hearing loss for the purpose of selecting and fitting hearing instruments.

The Boston News Letter, the first American newspaper printed on a regular basis, was published for the first time in 1704.

By NANCY BYAL
For AP Special Features

Stir-frying can be low in fat, especially if you use a minimum of oil and lean cuts of meat. For beef, that mean choosing such lean cuts as flank steak, round steak, top loin or sirloin. Trim away as much visible fat as possible before stir-frying the meat.

Beef-and-Noodle Stir-Fry

- 4 ounces fettuccine
  - 1 cup beef broth
  - 2 tablespoons soy sauce
  - 1 tablespoon cornstarch
  - 1 teaspoon grated gingerroot
  - Dash pepper
  - 1 teaspoon sesame oil
  - 1 medium summer squash, halved lengthwise and sliced 1/8-inch thick (1-1/4 cups)
  - 1 small green pepper, cut into bite-size pieces
  - 1/4 cup sliced green onion
  - 1 clove garlic, minced
  - 8 ounces cooked lean beef, thinly sliced into bite-size pieces
  - 1 cup quartered cherry tomatoes
  - Snipped fresh cilantro or parsley
- Cook fettuccine according to package directions; drain. Set aside. Meanwhile, for sauce, in a small mixing bowl stir together beef broth, soy sauce, cornstarch, gingerroot and pepper. Set aside.

In a large nonstick skillet, heat 1/2 teaspoon of the sesame oil until hot. Stir-fry the squash, green pepper, green onion and garlic in hot oil about 3 minutes or until squash is crisp-tender. Remove vegetables from skillet.

Add remaining oil to skillet. Stir-fry meat in hot oil until heated through. Push meat from center of skillet. Stir soy sauce mixture; add to center of skillet. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir for 1 minute more.

Add cooked pasta, vegetables and cherry tomatoes to skillet. Stir to coat with sauce. Cook and lightly stir until heated through. Sprinkle with cilantro or parsley before serving. Makes 3 or 4 main-dish servings.

News of nutrition

That forgotten mineral, magnesium, plays an important role in a balanced diet for all Americans, yet many of us aren't getting all that we need for optimal health, experts say.

About 60 percent of the magnesium in our body is in the bones, with most of the rest in the soft tissue. Magnesium plays a key role in heart and muscle function, energy metabolism and a host of other processes that make the human machine work.

Unfortunately, many of our diets are lacking magnesium, according to a survey conducted by The Gallup Organization—and that can be serious, as some studies suggest a link between magnesium deficiency, heart disease, osteoporosis and diabetes, among other conditions.

The Gallup survey found that 72 percent of adult Americans don't get enough of their recommended daily allowance (RDA) for magnesium from food. Fifty-five percent of us are eating less than three quarters of the RDA for magnesium!

The situation gets worse as we get older. Seventy-nine percent of adults aged 55 and over, the survey found, eat below their RDA of the mineral.

"A potential magnesium deficiency is a matter of concern for many individuals, but for the elderly, it could be particularly serious," warns Richard Rivlin, MD, chief of the Nutrition

Division at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. "The prevalence of heart disease, diabetes and even leg cramps increases among older persons, and these are all health conditions in which magnesium deficiency has been found."

In fact, a separate survey of 400 persons with diabetes, also conducted by Gallup, showed that an overwhelming majority (83 percent) fall short of their RDA for magnesium from food. This is of concern, since studies have shown a strong association between magnesium and the body's ability to use insulin properly.

What can you do to ensure you're getting all the magnesium you need for good health? You can eat a diet rich in whole-grain cereals; dried beans; green leafy vegetables; and bananas—all good sources of magnesium.

You can also take a daily magnesium supplement. In fact, an American Diabetes Association (ADA) consensus panel has recommended that all persons with diabetes who are at risk of a magnesium deficiency be tested. If a problem is found, a magnesium chloride supplement is recommended.

To obtain more information on magnesium, including how to be tested for a deficiency and the types of food and other sources that contain the mineral, call 1-800-MAG-1455.

Retirement figures examined

T. Rowe Price, which manages more than $54 billion for more than three million investor accounts, has received more than one million requests from investors for its acclaimed retirement planning kits. This includes 590,000 requests for its Retirement Planning Kit since it was introduced in 1989, and over 420,000 requests for the Retirees Financial Guide, which became available two years later. In addition, more than 85,000 orders have been received for the software version of the Retirement Planning Kit.

Both kits have been improved and updated for 1994 to reflect changes resulting from the 1993 Tax Act, including potentially higher tax rates on Social Security benefits, changes in health insurance programs, updated Social Security and Medicare benefits and more current and expanded investment information.

The T. Rowe Price Retirement Planning Kit, designed for those more than five years from retirement, consists of three parts: a workbook to determine what you need for retirement; facts that should be considered in developing a retirement investment strategy and model portfolios; and general guidance on using mutual funds to implement a retirement strategy. The PC version, which is designed for any IBM or IBM-compatible PC, does all financial calculations automatically.

The Retirees Financial Guide is also a three-part kit, specifically designed for those who are retired or nearing retirement. Part One reviews financial concerns such as Medicare, medigap, Social Security and working after retirement. Part Two is a detailed workbook to help retirees estimate what they can afford to spend in retirement. Part Three provides a detailed discussion of investing in retirement.

More progress being made

The latest news in the fight against Parkinson's, a disease that affects 1.5 million Americans, is about the DATATOP study. This multi-center, double-blind, controlled trial of deprenyl and tocopherol (Vitamin E) as protective therapy for Parkinson's disease, found that those taking deprenyl (Eldepryl) were able to delay the need for Sinemet by up to nine months longer than those not taking it. This study did not find any benefit from Vitamin E.

However, in another open study comparing those who had taken Vitamin E and C to patients who had not taken these antioxidants, it was found that the patients on antioxidants had not worsened as much as the patients who did not receive them. This is still an open question which clearly merits further investigation.

For more information about Parkinson's disease and how to live with it, write the Parkinson's Disease Foundation, Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, 650 West 168th Street, New York, NY 10032; or call 1-800-457-6676; or (212)923-4700

Emmy winner Hughes plays Blossom's new stepmother

Mayim Bialik, Jenna von Oy, Joey Lawrence, Ted Wass, Finola Hughes and Courtney Chase (clockwise from center) star in Blossom, an NBC sitcom airing Mondays. Hughes has joined the sitcom, now in its fifth season, as Nick's (Wass) second wife.

BY JOHN CROOK

Life hasn't exactly been a bowl of cherries for Blossom Russo (Mayim Bialik) on the NBC Monday sitcom that bears her first name.

Her parents (Ted Wass and occasional guest star Melissa Manchester) are divorced. Brother Anthony (Michael Stoyanov) is a recovering substance abuser. Another brother, Joey (Joey Lawrence), is a studly airhead. Best friend Six (Jenna von Oy) is battling to stay on top of a drinking problem.

Now, as Blossom enters its fifth season, a new challenge rears its head in the form of Carol (Finola Hughes), dad Nick's new bride, and her 6-year-old daughter, Kennedy (Courtney Chase). For the first time in years, Blossom is having to share chez Russo with other females.

It's a fairly radical shake-up for the top-rated sitcom, and the Emmy-winning Hughes (General Hospital) says she is enjoying her foray into a new genre.

"I just came in to an open call," she explains of how she came to join the cast last year. "They were looking for a girlfriend. And I came in on a Wednesday and read for them, and then I started the next day. It was just to be for a few shows, five, I think. Then they offered for me to come back for the whole season."

That decision was based on positive response from viewers to both the character and the natural warmth the actress brings to the role. Hughes says she finds Carol immensely likable and is looking forward to seeing what the writers have in store for her.

"(As Carol), I seem to be a bit of a neat freak: I like to keep things quite tidy," Hughes says. "I seem to have a lot of empathy for the situation, coming in as the new stepmother. They've made the character very warm, very generous and rather graceful in certain aspects of the problems that you have to address with teen-agers whose mother is absent and whose father is having to remarry. It's a nice character. I'm waiting for them to find some sort of stranger quirks about her."

A last name might be nice as well: All NBC press materials refer to the character only by her first name.

"They never have given me one," she muses. "That's rather weird, isn't it? I'm sure at one time they must have told me and I've probably got it written down somewhere, but it's rather remiss of me not to know it. Oh — don't say that, because it's very out of character for me," she adds with a big laugh.

One of the treats for the ballerina-turned-actress is a chance to work again before a studio audience.

"I love that, because I did a play during the summer called Habeas Corpus, and I just loved being in front of an audience again," she says. "It's great. So I'm really enjoying that. But there's lots and lots of little things working on a (sitcom) that you just have to wait and see whether you can learn them. So now, I'm just waiting," she laughs, "but slowly and surely it's sinking in."

One more bonus to her new job is even more personal for the London-born actress: Blossom is seen in England.

"I'm really excited about that," she says animatedly. "because none of my work has been shown over there for, oh God, years, I should think! I mean, I haven't actually worked in that country for 10, 11 years, almost. I think every now and then, little bits and pieces of what I've done have gone over there, but it'll really be nice that my relatives can actually see me."

LET'S TALK

Robby Benson is staying busy; No video release for Piazza

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Whatever happened to Robby Benson? You never see any movies or TV series by him. Could you give me a recent address? Is he still single or married? —Ms. P. Capps, Beaumont, Texas.

A: I'm sure you are aware that Benson, who turns 40 in January, provided the voice of the Beast in Disney's phenomenally successful animated feature Beauty and the Beast. He told me he still has mail forwarded to him from that studio. Write to him C/O Walt Disney Studios, 500 S. Buena Vista St., Burbank, Calif. 91521-2215.

Last year he took on a very dark role in Precious Victims, a CBS TV movie in which he starred with Park Overall (Empty Nest) and Richard Thomas. He also has been building extensive credentials as the director of episodes for a number of TV series, including Evening Shade, Thunder Alley and Family Album. In his spare time he also is a songwriter. He is married to singer Karla DeVito and has two children, Lyric and Zephyr.

Q: I once saw a movie called A Light in the Piazza, starring, I think, George Hamilton and Yvette Mimieux. It takes place in Italy. Yvette plays a woman who, at 26, has the emotions of a 13-year-old. During her marriage ceremony to Hamilton's character, a miracle happens in the church and she is healed. No one else remembers this movie. Did I dream it? —Katherine Pulzone, Elmwood Park, N.J.

A: Of course not. This 1962 film, based on a novel by Elizabeth Spencer, also starred Olivia DeHavilland as Yvette's mom. I am sad to report that it isn't on video.

Q: We enjoy Walker, Texas Ranger. I think I am related to Chuck Norris. Would you please send me his address? —Frank Carr, Sherman, Texas.

A: Again, I can't send individual responses, but you can write to any CBS star C/O CBS Inc., 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

Q: I just finished watching My Bodyguard on TV and noticed that there was an actor named Adam Baldwin in it. Is he related to the well-known Baldwin brothers? What other movies has he done?

Robby Benson

—Paige Johnson, Kalama, Wash.

A: Adam, who is not related to Alec, William and sibs, has made far too many movies to list here, but films on video include Full Metal Jacket, Next of Kin, Predator 2, Moment of Truth and Where the Day Takes You.

Q: I watch Roundhouse on Nickelodeon and would like to get autographs from the actors. Where should I write? —Matthew T., Heph, Ga.

A: You can write to any Nickelodeon cast member C/O Nickelodeon, 1775 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q: Are Saved By the Bell and In the Heat of the Night coming back this fall? —Angela Braxton, Nederland, Texas.

A: I've answered both of these several times already, but since people still keep asking: The Bell TV movie that aired earlier this month is the last of the series. Heat will be back only in the form of three or four TV movies.

Q: Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman is one of my favorite TV series. My husband makes mountain man coats on the side. We would like an address to send one of these coats for Joe Lando to wear on the series. Thanks! —Dixie Montgomery, Blackfoot, Idaho.

A: Write to any Dr. Quinn cast member C/O the show at 4024 Radford Ave., Building 1, Room 115, Studio City, Calif. 91604.

Send questions to Let's Talk, Features Dept. TV Data Technologies, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12864. Because of the volume of mail received, personal replies cannot be sent.

ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

Gross coincidence, Hudson up a river, Burstyn at work on small-screen projects

based film, called Follow the River, also stars Eric Schweig (The Last of the Mohicans) and Ellen Burstyn.

Burstyn can also be seen this season in Trick of the Eye, in which she plays a widow who commissions a mural in memory of her deceased daughter. Meg Tilly and Bernard Hughes also star in the upcoming CBS Sunday Afternoon Showcase presentation.

Paul Gross, who plays the courtly Mountie on CBS' Due South, has become one of the season's new heartthrobs. In fact he bears a strong resemblance to a young Larry Hagman.

(Ghostbusters), Tim Curry, Dylan Walsh (Betsy's Wedding) and Laura Linney (A Simple Twist of Fate). Oscar winner John Patrick Shanley (Moonstruck) adapted the story.

Imaginary care: Alan Thicke dresses up as Dracula for Lamb Chop in the Haunted Studio, a prime-time special airing Sunday, Oct. 30, on most PBS affiliates (check local listings). Since the show is meant to be viewed by young children, Thicke takes some of the bite out of his performance by playing the role without fangs. "In Transylvania we now have a dental plan!" he quipped to host Shari Lewis.

Fans of Robocop: The Series and Thunder in Paradise can look for plenty of action from these Rysher Entertainment series during the November sweeps rating period. Sources say the company is concerned that the series had become "too soft" due to pressure to reduce TV violence.

HIGHLIGHTS

The triumphs and struggles of a true American hero are brought to life in Frederick Douglass: When the Lion Wrote History, airing Wednesday on PBS (check local listings).

Story of famous abolitionist told in documentary for PBS

BY AMY HIBBERT

Nearly 100 years after his death, PBS explores the triumphs and struggles of an American hero in Frederick Douglass: When the Lion Wrote History, airing Wednesday, Nov. 2 (check local listings).

Born a slave in Maryland, Douglass went on to become one of the most outspoken advocates for equality for African Americans in the 19th century. He discovered the power of literacy, and he used that in fighting for changes for his people.

"Frederick Douglass was like the trunk of a large tree," says Orlando Bagwell, producer/director of the film, "and the branches are all these wonderful leaders that have emerged in the African-American community that kind of sprouted from this great seed which was Frederick Douglass."

His life spanned across many significant historical events and issues. In the film, Bagwell analyzes some of the events, including the black abolitionist movement and the beginning of the women's suffrage movement.

Frederick Douglass is a presentation about an influential abolitionist who played an important role in American history. According to Bagwell, he paved the way for prominent leaders like Booker T. Washington, Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X.

"You see so much of Douglass in them," Bagwell says. "You realize that he, in many ways inspired many people to continue the struggle."

Using actual photos from Douglass' collection, drawings and actual deeds, as well as places that were significant to his life, Bagwell is able to successfully re-enact the life of Douglass.

"Frederick Douglass was so concerned with preserving not only his life, but the history of his people through his life," Bagwell comments.

Bagwell is hoping that he can convey a few messages through this film, including the idea that there is power in the written and spoken word.

"There's something very wonderful about words, about reading, about writing, about expressing oneself through words," Bagwell says. "And there's a real power in that, and Frederick Douglass was a man who understood the power of language."

TRIVIA

Then working under the name of Charles Bushinsky, Charles Bronson had a small role in 1953's terrifying House of Wax.

TRIVIA

Best known for his portrayals of Hercules, bodybuilder Steve Reeves made his film debut in director Ed Wood's 1954 cheapie, Jail Bait.

HOME BIJOU

Third try at Body Snatchers not a charm; two older versions prove far better

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

Sometime early in the next century, movie-goers can expect another film version of Jack Finney's gripping novel The Body Snatchers. It's been done, so far, in 1956, 1978 and again in 1994. Just hope the 21st century edition is better than this year's model.

One can only wonder what attracted director Abel Ferrara (Bad Lieutenant, Dangerous Game) to the project in the first place. After all, it's not set amid urban decay, has no mention of Catholicism and Harvey Keitel's nowhere to be found. Maybe that explains Ferrara's listless handling of the material.

But the movie's problems are legion. In Don Seigel's brilliant 1956 gem, Invasion of the Body Snatchers, the "pod people" - botanical entities from outer space who took over human host bodies - were metaphors for Communists; soulless evildoers who looked, deceptively, just like decent folks. Philip Kaufman's 1978 version (same title) deleted the Red Scare subtext, opting instead to make an all-out chiller; he succeeded. Both versions were helped by edgy performances from their respective stars, including Kevin McCarthy and Carolyn Jones ('56), and Brooke Adams, Donald Sutherland and Leonard Nimoy ('78).

In Ferrara's Body Snatchers, the role of the-one-who-knows-the-truth falls on a talented Gabrielle Anwar, who plays a pouty teen-ager living on a military base because of her dad's job with the Environmental Protection Agency (leave logic at the door).

Unlike its predecessors, this version offers no slow buildup, no dawning horror on the parts of friends or loved ones about the strange changes in certain individuals. Just wham!, and it's off and limping with decaying skulls, frozen smiles and gelatinous tentacles that try to sap the life force of Anwar's character while she's taking a bubble bath.

Want the perfect Halloween video? Try the blooming horror of either older version of Finney's evergreen chiller; this new one's dead on the vine. f

Fan thinks Brooke,
Ridge belong together

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Dear Candace: I am a long-time fan of The Bold and the Beautiful and have watched the show since it began. I am glad Ridge and Brooke are married; They belong together. No matter what anyone says, Bridget is their child, and a child is one thing Taylor could never give Ridge — not to mention passion. They didn't have the chemistry that Ridge and Brooke have. I hope Taylor and Ridge divorce. She is just not right for him.

In the past Taylor has called Brooke names and given her a hard time about sleeping around. Well, what about Taylor? She slept with James. Ridge had several opportunities to make love to Brooke, but he never did until he thought Taylor was dead.

I was hoping Taylor would get pregnant by James when they slept together at the cabin. It would have served the dragon lady right. —A Fan in Tennessee.

Dear Reader: Fans are split on whom they would like to see Ridge end up with. Many agree with you that after seven years of an on-again, off-again relationship Ridge and Brooke belong together.

Other viewers enjoyed watching Taylor and Ridge together and thought there was great chemistry between them. One thing is for sure: Ridge's marriage to Brooke isn't valid because Taylor is alive and she is still Ridge's wife.

Dear Candace: I have watched Days of Our Lives for a really long time, but lately I have been getting fed up with it. This whole thing about John Black discovering his past has been going on for two years. And now this idea that he was a priest. Give me a break! The writers have to be kidding. I hope this story line ends very soon. I'm also ready to see Stefano get what he deserves.

Bo and Billie make a great couple and should be together, as should John and Kristen. The producers need to bring Roman back so that he and Marlena can be together. Jennifer needs to find out what Peter is really like. —Mary Natoli in North Jersey.

Dear Reader: Some of your wishes may come true, but not any time soon.
