13 spending bills passed

By ALAN FRAM

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Like magicians, Senate leaders made a slew of amendments disappear and enabled Congress and the White House to achieve something not accomplished in 46 years - all spending bills signed before the new fiscal year.

After more than a week of debate and behind-the-scenes negotiations, the Senate completed the last of Congress' 13 annual appropriations bills Friday afternoon and shipped it to President Clinton.

His signature came more than five hours before the midnight start of fiscal 1995. It marked the first time since 1948 that all of the appropriations bills became law before the start of the government's new fiscal year.

It also avoided a shutdown of many services provided by the District of Columbia, because the final measure completed finances for its government. Had it not been signed, only police and public health services would have continued functioning.

Clinton quickly cast the event as a show of competence by his administration and Congress, mindful that voters go to the polls in five weeks frustrated at Washington in general and Democrats in particular.

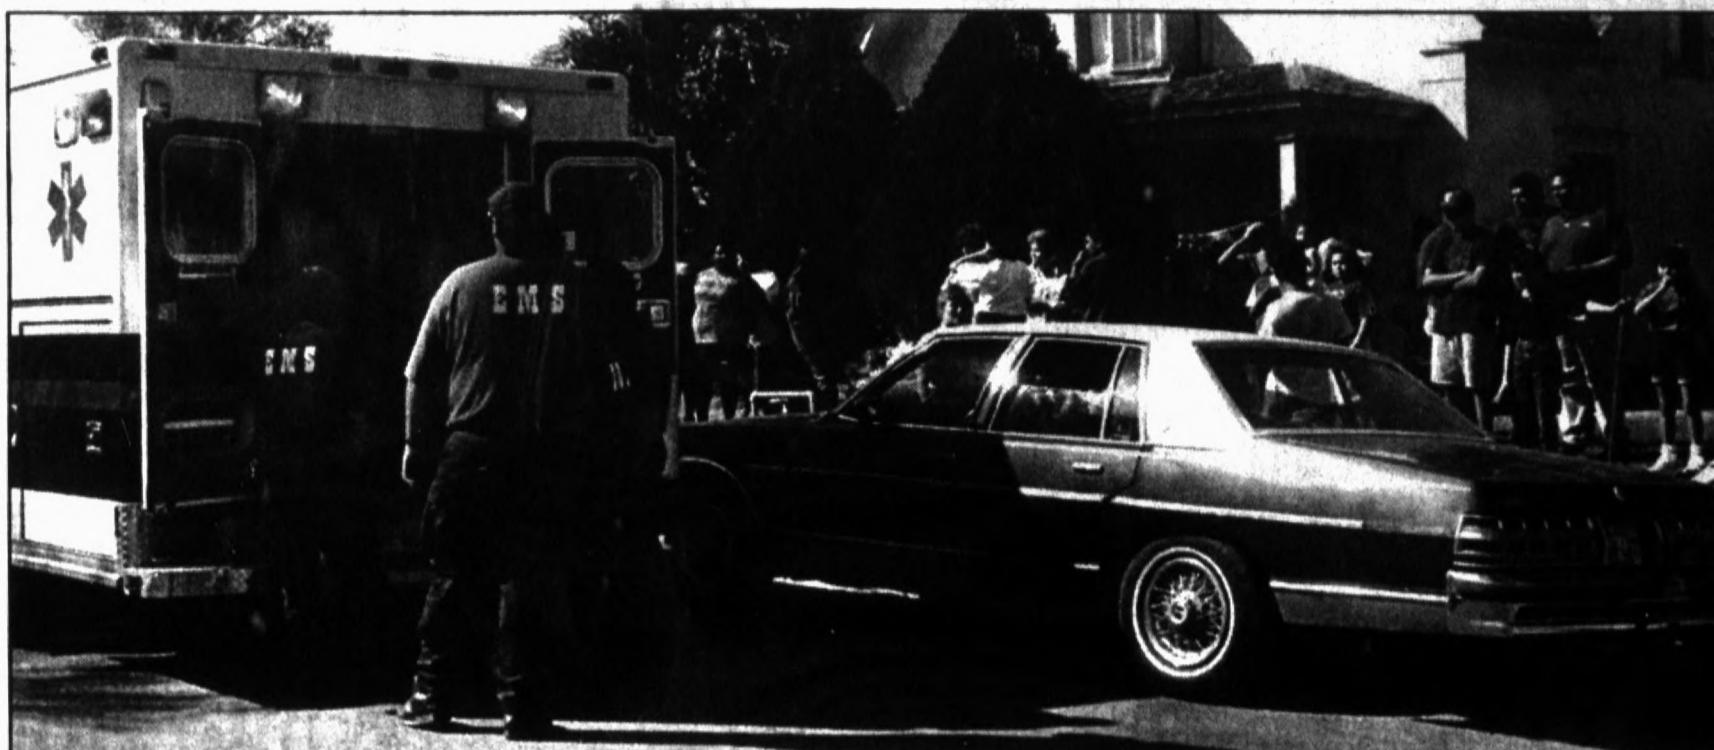

"All 13 bills, on time, within the rigid spending restraints required by our economic plan" of last year.

To get the final bill to the president took lots of prodding by Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The last measure provided the district government with a $712 million transfusion from federal taxpayers. The bill includes $660 million in a federal payment to the capital city and $52 million for its pension fund.

As one of the few remaining must-pass bills before Congress departs for the year, it became a target for unrelated amendments by senators, either to get pet legislation or to score political points.

At 4:50 p.m., the amendments were all withdrawn and the measure was shipped to Clinton. Senators were already making other plans for their provisions.

Accident scene

Hereford EMS personnel confer at the back of an ambulance Friday as a crowd of onlookers watch the scene of an accident that sent Ivan Montoya, 3, to Hereford Regional Medical Center with minor injuries. According to reports, a 1984 International school bus driven by David Lee Ricenbaw, 52, of Hereford, was traveling east on Grand Avenue at 3:52 p.m. when Montoya stepped into the street. The bus attempted to stop and avoid a collision, but struck Montoya. He was treated and released from the hospital. There were no other injuries reported, either to Ricenbaw or the 15 students -- ranging in age from 5 to 14 -- who were on the bus at the time. The accident occurred just west of Avenue E.

Stenholm seen as possible pick to be next Speaker of the House

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) - Conservative Democrats are considering an alliance with Republicans that could result in the elevation of a West Texas Democrat, Rep. Charles Stenholm, as the next Speaker of the House.

U.S. Rep. Ralph Hall of Rockwall says he isn't the only Democrat unhappy with the liberal and moderate direction provided by the Democratic leadership in recent years.

"I've said for over a year I intend to vote for Charlie Stenholm for Speaker if we could get the opportunity," Hall told the Longview News-Journal.

"I don't know how many dissident Democrats there are up here, but there are quite a few who don't like the direction the Democratic leadership is headed," he said.

Hall noted an attempt by liberal Democrats to remove him as chairman of the House Space Subcommittee.

"It leaves me free to vote for anyone I want to," he said.

Hall also referred to the leadership's treatment of then-Democratic Rep. Phil Gramm.

"They took Gramm off of (the) Budget Committee and mistreated him and elected him to the U.S. Senate," he said.

Hall referred to the early years of the first Reagan administration, when Stenholm was chairman of a conservative Democratic group known as the Conservative Democratic Forum, better known as the "Boll Weevils."

As a member of the Boll Weevils,

Gramm was the Democratic sponsor of the administration's budget legislation, which became known as the Gramm-Latta bill, while another Texan in the coalition, Kent Hance, was the Democratic sponsor of the administration's tax legislation, the Hance-Conable bill.

To the chagrin of moderate and liberal Democrats, the combined support of Republicans and the Conservative Democratic Forum succeeded in passing both major pieces of Reagan's legislative package.

To punish Gramm, whom Democrats accused of meeting with Republicans and revealing Democratic strategy, the leadership booted him off the prestigious Budget Committee.

Gramm responded by resigning his seat in Congress, changing parties, and then winning a special election as a Republican. Gramm then won election to the U.S. Senate in 1984 when Sen. John Tower decided not to run again. Now, Gramm is mulling a run for the presidency in 1996.

Stenholm confirmed that a conservative coalition of House Democrats and Republicans has been discussed.

"There's a lot of things going on, but I'm not ready to speak about them. First, you have to get elected," said Stenholm, who is from Stamford, about 50 miles northeast of Abilene.

His Republican opponent is Phil Boone of Abilene. Dawn Cole, a spokeswoman for Boone, said Democrats are just trying to distance themselves from President Clinton.

Deadline drawing near for voter registration

Friday is the last day to register, in person, to be eligible to vote in the Nov. 8 general election.

Since the official last day to register falls on Sunday and the next day is a legal holiday, mail registrations will be honored if postmarked no later than Oct. 11.

Prospective voters may register in the courthouse office of Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland, who also serves as voter registrar for the county. The office is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Voters in Deaf Smith County will decide two county races as well as casting ballots for candidates statewide.

Democratic incumbent Johnnie Turrentine is seeking re-election as justice of the peace. She is opposed by a Republic candidate, Dan Hall. Commissioner Lupe Chavez of Precinct 2, Democratic incumbent, is challenged by a GOP candidate, Conny Whitehorn.

Friendship begun here resumes in Ukraine for Eades

By GEORGIA TYLER

Staff Writer

Imagine carrying enough money in a pocket to buy a pair of tennis shoes that cost 2,580,000 "dollars" in local currency.

Alice Eades of Hereford still sounds appalled when she talks about the inflationary costs of ordinary items in one of the republics in the former Soviet Union.

She went to Poltava, in the Ukraine, in July to visit a young woman who spent last school year as an exchange student in Hereford.

The Eades family and Julie Klimenko developed a special relationship during the year. Alice Eades could hardly wait to visit the student in her hometown.

She may not have been prepared for some of the things she saw and experienced.

Money, for instance.

"The Ukraine money is the koupon," she said. "When they took independence from Russia, the exchange rate was about 300 to $1. Now, it's 43,000 to $1."

A pair of tennis shoes, not even of good quality, cost 2,580,000 koupons or 60 American dollars, she pointed out.

Pay scales are low and even professional people are poorly paid by American standards, Eades learned. Often $40 or $45 per month is good pay even for those with college training.

On the other hand, the Hereford woman cannot talk enough about the generosity of the people she met, especially Julie's parents, Sergei and Ludmila Klimenko.

"Julie told me they'd been planning my visit for weeks," laughed Alice Eades. She was especially impressed with the fresh vegetables that the Ukrainians produced.

Visiting friends of the Klimenkos one afternoon, she remarked on the beauty of a pitcher the hostess used.

"When we got ready to leave, she gave me the pitcher," reported Eades. "I tried to tell her that she shouldn't but she insisted."

Eades and her stepmother, Jane Cranford of Sadler, who traveled with her to Poltava, were treated to a visit to the countryside where they were guests at dacha.

The dacha belonged to friends of the Klimenkos. Gardens, both flower and vegetable, are grown on plots assigned to the people. But, there were no yards and lawns as Americans have.

"Nothing was mowed . . . I doubt there was a mower in the whole town," she laughed.

Interestingly, she said, the dacha was built in two stories with only bedrooms and a living room in the house. The kitchen and laundry were located in a separate building some little distance from the main house.

"I guess it's practical because there is no air conditioning and it keeps the heat out of the dacha itself," Eades continued.

Hospitality of the Klimenkos and their friends in Poltava was so generous, she continued, there were gifts for the Americans when they arrived.

By the same token, she took several items with her for the family.

"Julie fell in love with pizza when she was here," she noted, "so I took flour, spaghetti sauce, cheese, all the makings."

A request from the young Ukrainian was filled by Eades.

"She got used to our toothpaste when she was here and asked me to bring some," she laughed. "I took five big tubes to her."

Julie Klimenko is finishing her high school education this year in Poltava and seems undecided about her future studies.

"When she came over here, all she could talk about was being a veterinarian and having her own pet clinic," explained Eades.

She believes that with uncertain economic conditions in the Ukraine now, Julie is beginning to think that her dream may not be practical.

"She realizes that people are having a time just taking care of themselves and can't afford to take their pets to a private veterinarian," Eades continued.

Now 16, Julie is considering her future. Privately, Alice Eades and her husband, Roger, would like to see Julie come to Texas for college.

However, the government program that brought her to Hereford specifies that students are not to return for two years.

"We might see if the rule can be waived, if she wants to come to Texas," remarked Alice Eades.

Julie's mother is vice principal of a high school in Poltava and her father is a scientist with a petroleum institute.

A city of half-million inhabitants, Poltava is located five hours by car from the Ukraine's leading city, Kiev.

"The road was not very good, full of chugholes," Eades observed.

Roger Eades' parents, Bud and Helen Eades of Amarillo, met Alice and her stepmother in Kiev, a city she found fascinating, after she left Poltava.

Monasteries and churches once closed or abandoned during the Communist regime are being restored, she pointed out.

The most worrisome part of the visit to Kiev is related to the city's geographical location.

"It's right on the Dneiper River, only about 100 miles from Chernobyl," said Eades. "I don't think the people realize the danger of radiation."

She described Kiev as "beautiful" and has a stack of photographs to prove her point.

The American travelers learned that inflation is the bugaboo of the country.

"We talked with a man who is very nationalistic . . . he said they have the people and resources to do whatever

Happy couples?

Students in the seventh and eighth grade PACE gifted and talented English classes at Hereford Junior High on Friday were presented with "Monster Academy Awards" for their horrific -- and not-so-horrible -- creations done as a follow-up to the classes' reading of the book "Frankenstein." The students had to write their own horror stories, then build monsters of the main character in their stories. Teachers Margot Sims and Suzanne Allen awarded each student a certificate and small pack of chewing gum honoring aspects of the creatures. Shown are three class members with their monsters. Also listed is the award for the monster. They are, from left, Nelson Beville with "Yolanda," honored for "Most Likely To Succeed As A Monster"; Cathy Higgins, "Zordock," named "Monster With Ludicrous Limbs"; and Crissey Barrick, "Harry Swanson," named "Most Despicable Monster."

Potential Simpson jurors face intensive questioning

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Do you own any special knives? Did you ever want to beat up a loved one? Can you handle math?

The answers are being used to help decide who makes it on the jury in the O.J. Simpson case.

The questions are among 301 asked of prospective jurors in an 80-page form, released Friday by the court.

Would-be jurors were grilled on a wide range of issues, from their views on race, domestic violence and Simpson's media image, to their exposure to pretrial publicity in the case, the nature of any cutlery they might own and whether they ever called Simpson's 800-number hot line.

The questionnaire also seeks to determine how jurors will handle the vast amount of scientific evidence expected in the case, with questions on their views of DNA analysis and blood tests, and their grasp of "mathematical concepts."

And some questions flatly try to weed out people whose minds are already made up: "Do you think O.J. Simpson's celebrity status may make it very difficult for you to find him guilty or not guilty regardless of what the evidence shows?"

The questionnaires were filled out this week by 304 people who passed the first phase of jury selection, which began Monday.

Lawyers are reviewing the completed forms to prepare for the first round of in-person questioning of prospective jurors, set to begin Oct. 12.

The answers will help Superior Court Judge Lance Ito and lawyers choose 12 jurors and eight alternates and will help Ito decide whether to order the jury sequestered for the entire trial, which could last six months.

Some of the questions explore people's views on the former football star who appeared in commercials and movies, and worked as a sportscaster.

Several other questions asked about race. Simpson, 47, is black; the victims, ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and her friend Ronald Goldman, 25, were white.

"How do you feel about interracial marriage?" asked one question. "Have you ever dated a person of a different race?" asked another.

Other questions seemed off track: "Have you or anyone close to you undergone an amniocentesis?" Another question asked if the would-be juror felt it was "immoral" to undergo an amniocentesis to determine if a fetus had a genetic defect.

A common theme in the questionnaire was potential jurors' reactions to the vast publicity. It asks them to describe witnesses from the preliminary hearing and their impressions of the lawyers and victims.

The questionnaire also asks, "Have you seen, read or heard any portion of the 911 calls made by Nicole Brown?" and "If yes, what did you think about the calls?"

In addition, "Have you seen, read or heard any information regarding the 1989 incident between Nicole Brown and O.J. Simpson?" This is a reference to Simpson's alleged beating of his then-wife.

One question asked: "Have you ever asked a celebrity for an autograph?"

Jurors were asked about their views of University of Southern California and Buffalo Bills football - two programs in which Simpson starred - and whether they saw such Simpson-featured shows as TV's "Roots" and the "Naked Gun" movie series.

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark told reporters Friday that prosecutors will be seeking "jurors that can be fair and impartial and that are intelligent enough to understand what may be some very complicated evidence."

Defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. said the defense wanted the same kind of jurors. "We just want to get people who, in their hearts, can look us in the eye and say, 'I can be fair.'"

White House, State Department fellowships, internships offered

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Opportunity exists for area residents to experience working inside the White House or the U.S. State Department through either of two fellowships and internships, U.S. Rep. Larry Combest has announced.

Deadline to apply for the State Department Student Intern Program is Nov. 1 for the Summer 1995 term, March 1, 1995, for the Fall 1995 term and July 1, 1995, for the Spring 1996 term.

The White House Fellowship is a year-long full-time position, with a Dec. 1 application deadline.

"I wanted the people of our region to have the chance to come to Washington to make their own impact in the Executive Branch of the federal government, just as I have provided opportunities for working within the Legislative Branch in my congressional offices," said Combest, R-Texas.

The White House Fellowships are available to as many as 19 men and women from throughout the nation who serve for one year as special assistants to senior White House officials and Cabinet-level officers.

They write speeches, draft legislation, conduct meetings and propose policy. Employees of the federal government -- except career military officers -- are not eligible to participate.

Both paid and unpaid State Department internships are offered to highly qualified college and university junior, senior and graduate students. Applicants must be U.S. citizens and have completed some academic studies relevant to the work requested in the State Department.

In addition, students may be either full- or part-time, but must continue their formal studies immediately following their internship. State Department interns gain first-hand knowledge of how U.S. diplomacy works and develop relationships with professionals in the field.

Both White House and State Department positions are offered and applicants are chosen solely by the White House and State Department, not by Combest.

Application materials for either position are available at each of Combest's district offices.

Guns reverse side of U.S.-Mexico smuggling

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

McALLEN, Texas (AP) - Drugs coming north is certainly one side of the smuggling equation between Mexico and the United States.

But as the assassinations of two top officials in Mexico's ruling party have shown, another side is guns going south.

Guns smuggled from the United States are believed to have been used in the March 23 killing of presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio and the shooting Wednesday of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, the No. 2 official in the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

The U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms confirmed Friday that the Mexican government had requested a trace of the TEC-9 semiautomatic pistol that police say was used to kill Ruiz Massieu in Mexico City.

ATF spokeswoman Susan McCarron said the agency won't comment further until it hands the results of its investigation over to Mexican police. The San Antonio Express-News, without naming its source, reported Friday that the TEC-9 had been purchased in McAllen.

The TEC-9, a 9mm pistol with a large magazine, is manufactured in Miami.

The disk-shaped phonograph record was invented by Emile Berliner around 1887.

Joseph Vince, chief of ATF's Firearms Division, said simple economics explained the illegal flow of drugs northward and guns southward.

The United States, which produces some 4 million firearms a year and imports nearly the same amount, is Mexico's nearest and biggest market for guns, he said.

"We don't have a lot of narcotics-growing areas in the United States, and likewise, they don't have a lot of firearms manufacturing and they have very restrictive firearms laws in Mexico," Vince said.

Guns command a high price on the Mexican black market and often are used as barter among the country's powerful drug gangs, Vince said.

Vince said more than 90 percent of the guns that the ATF tracks for the Mexican police turn out to have originated in the United States.

He added that the most common form of gun smuggling occurs through "straw purchases" - when a person buys guns in the United States for someone who cannot legally do so.

An ATF study for fiscal year 1993 concluded that most guns purchased along the border end up illegally in Mexico.

The ATF received 3,376 reports of U.S. guns being sent illegally to Mexico in 1993 - by far more than any other country. The Philippines was second, with 871.

Shortly after the Colosio shooting, the ATF traced the Brazilian-made, .38-caliber handgun reportedly fired by Mario Aburto to a now-defunct San Francisco store. The first retail purchase of that gun was in 1977 and it likely changed hands several times before the assassination, the ATF said.

Many Mexicans reject the theory that Aburto was the lone assassin, believing the Tijuana campaign rally shooting was part of a wider conspiracy.

Survey shows state colleges hit by high-risk investments

DALLAS (AP) - Several state colleges have seen the value of their investments in high-risk derivative securities plunge, but none has suffered as severely as Odessa College, a survey by The Dallas Morning News shows.

Odessa College's massive investment in derivatives has led to tax increases, hefty budget cuts and more than $12 million in new debt.

The survey, reported in Friday's editions of The News, shows that publicly funded Texas schools and agencies have put more than $3.5 billion into mortgage-backed derivatives. About 93 percent of the securities are part of major-agency portfolios with long-term investment strategies, said Assistant State Auditor Sharon Cobb.

Some have seen the value of their portfolios drop more than 30 percent this year, according to the survey.

Despite the ledger losses, the schools' financial officials insist the derivatives continue earning high returns, and they foresee no need to sell.

"They seem to be OK," Ms. Cobb said. "It's such a small percentage of the total portfolios in most of those agencies that it's not causing a problem. It's in those agencies where it's a large percentage of the portfolio that we have some concerns."

Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls, East Texas State University in Commerce, Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, Angelo State University in San Angelo and Sul Ross State University in Alpine are among the schools that have seen the value of their multimillion-dollar investments in mortgage-backed derivatives plummet by a third or more.

Mortgage-based derivatives are complex securities whose worth is tied to the value of pools of home mortgages. This year, such derivatives have been devastated by rising interest rates.

The declines have hit some of Wall Street's best-known investment firms hard, as well as a number of counties, schools and other small public investors across the country.

Odessa College's troubled $22 million derivatives portfolio, worth less than half its purchase price, has tied up not only long-term endowment money but also large amounts of daily operating funds.

State investigators still are trying to determine the extent of such investments made by publicly funded agencies statewide and what risks they pose.

Auditors are preparing a separate report on the Odessa College investment crisis as part of their ongoing probe, said Wardaleen Belvin, chief of staff for Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock.

The Texas Securities Commission also has begun a preliminary inquiry into the brokerages that sold derivatives to Odessa College and other public agencies, said Commissioner Denise Voigt Crawford.

"We have sent out requests to the brokerages to explain what happened," Ms. Crawford said. "Obviously, there are some concerns here."

Ms. Belvin said that ultimately, state lawmakers "would like to start drafting legislation with respect to tightening up investment practices." It would call for stricter reporting requirements and more uniform investment policies at state-supported schools and agencies.

Officials at schools and agencies that invested in derivatives said they don't expect the kinds of problems that plagued Odessa College. They invested only in long-term funds, such as endowment money and other reserves, in the derivatives market, they said.

"I think we're concerned, but our concern is based primarily on the fact that everybody's going to get lumped into the same boat," said Mickey C. Havens, vice president for business affairs at Sul Ross State University.

The market value of the school's $4.1 million derivative investment, which represents more than 40

Just by picking up this paper, you're in good company.

In fact, a recent national survey shows that 71 percent of the residents in non-metropolitan areas regularly read a community newspaper.

And 83 percent of community newspaper readers read every issue or almost every issue of their community newspaper.

Those are just a couple of the results from a survey conducted for the National Newspaper Association, of which The Hereford Brand is a member-by Pulse Research of Portland, Ore.

The first-ever national study of community newspaper readership shows that community newspapers are the dominant source of local news and advertising for households in their circulation area.

Here's just a sampling of the results of that survey:

*Sixty-four percent of community newspaper reader households state they use ads in their community newspaper to find local bargains.

*Fifty-two percent of community newspaper readers keep their newspaper for a week or longer.

*The average community newspaper reader picks up and reads the average issue 1.6 times.

*There are 2.26 readers per household.

Learning to drive a car nowadays is more complicated than it used to be.

Students sign up for driver education, pay a handsome fee, sit through several hours of classroom instruction, then spend more hours in a car equipped with dual controls.

In some school districts, there's another step, called simulator training, that requires several more clock hours.

If they pass the tests after finishing instruction, students don't have to go to the Department of Public Safety for a behind-the-wheel test. They have a photo made by the DPS and mail in their money to get a license.

Over-simplified, that's how it works.

When I learned to drive, my grandmother, then later my father, showed me how to shift gears and steer. Very elementary instruction.

The first time my grandmother let me drive was a near-disaster. I was about 11 years old and I could hardly see over the steering wheel. I forgot to straighten the wheels before shifting into gear and stomping the footbrake.

Because my body was so stretched from steering wheel to floorboard, I couldn't straighten the steering wheel and we made several circles in front of a cousin's house. Fortunately, the cousin's front yard was a cow pasture.

A few years later, after I had picked up a few inches in height and had nagged continuously, my father agreed to give me a lesson.

The vehicle he chose for the lesson was a war surplus pickup. In later years, a stick shift would become a status symbol but in the mid-1940s, it was just a nuisance.

My father had me sit in the driver's seat, push on the clutch and shift gears, while standing still. Then we drove across the pasture with him coaching on speeds for changing gears.

The scary part came next. Daddy got out of the pickup and told me to drive across the pasture, staying in the ruts that were worn from years of cars and trucks.

"If you can stay in the ruts, you can drive anywhere," he declared. I drove those ruts every chance I got.

Dear Editor:

Shouldn't we as citizens of Deaf Smith County expect our elected officials to obey simple traffic and parking laws?

Recently I observed one elected official parking in a clearly-marked handicapped parking space.

She parked, hopped out of her automobile and went about her errands.

I inspected her car and found no stickers indicating she was authorized to park in this restricted area. I would suggest to this official that she obeys the laws she is bound by oath to administer.

Maybe she should take a "hard" look at where she parks.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

Maybe I just don't understand the intricacies of foreign policy or whatever, but something's been bothering me lately.

I mean, here's Aldrich Ames sitting in prison for selling American CIA secrets to the Russian (not Soviet) government.

Then, in Washington D.C. is President Clinton, hobnobbing with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, showing him off like a new boyfriend.

During the same visit, Clinton throws a big fancy party for Yeltsin to help open the new Russian embassy in Washington, then hauls him across country to look over an aircraft plant that probably builds military planes.

Now, here's my problem.

How can we roll out the red carpet for someone who heads a nation that up till just a few months ago was paying a spy to steal American secrets to turn over to the Russians? (They probably still are buying secrets from someone, we just haven't found out who.)

Also, I recall hearing several years ago that there was a big furor over the construction of the new then-Soviet embassy, because it was located in the most strategic place possible in Washington, where it would be possible to electronically monitor just about everything going on in the U.S. Capitol.

So, what we have is the U.S. President buddy-buddying around with someone who ought not to have been let into the country in the first place, at least until some kind of reparations were made for the U.S. secrets that were stolen.

Then, on top of that, we give these people -- who are known for wanting to steal critical American government information -- the single most strategic ground in Washington and a big party to welcome them to the place!

I mean, why don't we just hang a big sign on the Capitol building that says "Kremlin West" and let Boris and his cronies move in?

Finally, Billy lets Buddy Boris poke around an aircraft manufacturing plant that likely makes planes used in our national defense.

Just great. First, we know they want American government secrets, then we take them to a place where those secrets are lying around in the open.

You know, it really bothers me that no public outcry was made when Aldrich Ames was arrested for selling state secrets.

There were no demands that Russia turn the information back over, nobody in the federal government took action to expel Russian diplomats from this country, or did anything at all to show the displeasure of the United States that Russia bought off one of our people and used him to weaken our national defenses.

Oh, sure, Aldrich knew what he was doing, but there had to be someone at the other end offering the money and picking up the material.

Like I said, I just guess I don't understand foreign policy.

On the home front, I read a story the other day that got my attention. Seems students at Rowe High School in McAllen have been issued identification cards.

While students are not required to wear them, students at Sharyland High School in Mission does and says that having students openly identified helps keep the campus safe.

Unfortunately, some students, obviously thinking that they know more about World War II and civil rights than adults, have taken to wearing the Star of David on their ID badges in protest, saying the action is just like the requirement that Jews in Nazi Germany wear identification.

First off, seems to me that the students really don't have much say in the matter (and if they do, then the school board needs to be impeached, because they should be running the district, not the students).

Second, I can understand in a bigger city with several schools how name badges would be necessary -- after all, kids from other schools (or dropouts) could wander at will throughout the campus, selling drugs, harassing students and generally causing trouble.

With name badges, only those students enrolled in the school can be there and those without badges are thrown off the property or arrested for trespassing.

I don't think this is something that is needed at Hereford High School at this time, because we are a small enough town that people who obviously don't belong on campus will be spotted fairly easily and quickly and dealt with.

But it sounds like a good idea in other areas.

Well, that's it for this week. Have a good week and remember, liberals are people too.

An AP news analysis

Clinton-speak: old is just like new

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - From now on, the most talkative of presidents said, he's going to go out and talk up his achievements because people don't realize how much the Democratic administration has done.

President Clinton's new communications strategy sounds a lot like his old ones.

On his economic program and on trade legislation, which he got through Congress successfully, and on the health care reform, which he did not, Clinton maintained that if people only understood what he was proposing, they'd be for it. That's his explanation now for the sour ratings that have worsened Democratic worries about the Nov. 8 congressional elections.

It would be nice to report that I sailed through the test without error, but I can't.

In my excitement, I forgot to make but one hand signal (no turning lights in those days, remember?) during the test. Automatic failure.

Since getting a license, I've driven on all kinds of roads and streets -- from Fifth Avenue in New York to the bumpiest country lane.

When my turn came, the examiner smiled wryly and asked, "How's the new deputy?"

It would be nice to report that I sailed through the test without error, but I can't.

In my excitement, I forgot to make but one hand signal (no turning lights in those days, remember?) during the test. Automatic failure.

They've got six weeks, and nothing, really, to add to the list Clinton and his allies have been advertising for months: deficit reduction, an improved economy, trade agreements, a crime bill and more.

"But a lot of people may not have felt it yet," he lamented, sounding not unlike George Bush did in unsuccessful defense of his administration two years ago.

"We find a situation in which the people may actually go out and vote for the very things that they are against because they don't know what has happened in the last 20 months," Clinton said. And if the voters knew all that's been achieved, he said, the Democrats would gain seats in Congress, instead of facing losses they now fear could be heavier than usual for the party of a president at midterm.

I inspected her car and found no stickers indicating she was authorized to park in this restricted area. I would suggest to this official that she obeys the laws she is bound by oath to administer.

Like Daddy said, if you can stay in the ruts you can steer a steady course anywhere.

naysaying Republicans, on a cynical mood, on special interests bent on barring change. People close to the president see more to it, claiming there is a right-wing conspiracy to discredit him in order to prevent his programs.

Another factor, to Clinton's thinking, is a relentless, round-the-clock media machine that emphasizes what's gone wrong instead of what's done right.

Implicit in all of this is the conviction that perceptions, not proposals or performance, are the behind the Democrats' campaign problems. Clinton said the mood is to throw the rascals out without deciding who the rascals are.

Blaming messages, and often the messengers, isn't unusual, for politicians in or out of the White House. That avoids conceding that the voters may not want what they're offering.

Clinton ascribes some of his political problems to fear of change, which he said is not right and not rational. That assumes his changes are the ones most people want, which, in turn, gets back to the task of communicating them.

It is a concern in any White House; the place is an unmatched pulpit for telling the president's story, but that also makes it uncomfortable obvious when things go wrong.

That concern with perceptions has been a factor in each of the successive shakeups in the Clinton White House staff, although the latest, the fourth in less than two years, turned out to be more tuneup than overhaul.

There have been two directors of communications, a job that now is being shelved in favor of a broader strategic planning assignment. Leon Panetta, the chief of staff, had planned to replace Dee Dee Myers as press secretary, but she not only got a reprieve from Clinton, she's getting a raise, the big office with the fireplace and more access to the president.

That's probably going to be temporary, until about the end of the year, when she has told people she plans to leave the White House. Panetta said as far as he and the president are concerned, it's permanent. So the first woman to serve as press secretary will be able to go on her own terms.

In a way, the medium and the message blurred when Clinton agreed to that arrangement at a meeting with Myers on Sept. 22. Critics have accused him of wavering on policy decisions, and the late shift fits that perception.

Still, that's a side question. "The bottom line is the record," Panetta said. "Any president, any White House, has set ultimately be judged by the record."

Walt Disney failure latest setback for theme park giant

By E. SCOTT RECKARD
AP Business Writer

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) - The demise of Walt Disney Co.'s plan for a tourist attraction near Civil War battlefields in Virginia is the latest setback for its theme park division.

Troubles range from sluggish attendance at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., and Disney World in Orlando, Fla., to the huge losses of Euro Disney near Paris.

While Disney's profits rose 3 percent to $267.5 million in the quarter ending June 30, the performance of its theme parks fell 9 percent. Booming filmed entertainment and consumer products divisions kept Disney growing.

The $625 million Disney's America - a modest park by Disney standards - fell prey to objections by environmentalists, residents and historians. They said the project near Haymarket, Va., would encroach on the Manassas battlefield and potentially trivialize history.

"Implicit in our vision for the park is the hope that it will be a source of pride and unity for all Americans. We certainly cannot let a particular site undermine that goal by becoming a source of divisiveness," said Peter S. Rummell, president of Disney Design and Development Co.

The company would prefer another Virginia site within an easy day's trip of Washington, D.C. The flag at Town Hall in Haymarket was lowered to half-staff after the announcement.

"We have a lot of supporters here," said Dana Nottingham, president of Disney's America. "A lot of people welcome us."

The governors of Maryland and West Virginia on Thursday offered their states as alternatives. "I don't want to be optimistic, but at the same time we have to make a pitch," said Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer.

Disney's decision surprised most people involved with the project. In June, Disney chairman Michael D. Eisner had vowed to stand firm. "If people think we will back off, they are mistaken," he said.

The company's theme park frustrations stem mainly from its inability to duplicate the smash successes of its parks in Tokyo and Florida.

Tokyo Disneyland enjoys the best attendance of all the parks. But Disney planners failed to take an ownership stake in that venture, and the company has collected only management and licensing fees while equity holder Oriental Land Co. made big money.

Not wanting to make the same mistake, Disney set up Euro Disney with a lot of debt and a 49 percent ownership stake. But when the park buckled from low attendance and the debt burden, half the losses fell to Disney.

Euro Disney got a $1 billion capital infusion this year, backed by Saudi investor Prince Al-Waleed Bin Talal Bin Abdulaziz Al Saud, who wound up owning 9 percent.

Disney's original theme park, Disneyland in Anaheim, was so successful that by the late 1950s company officials were suggesting building a second park nearby to capture more tourist dollars.

But Disney had trouble getting land and government approvals in a rapidly urbanizing Southern California and Disneyland became surrounded by tacky commercial strips.

That lesson caused Disney to buy up some 27,000 acres near Orlando when it decided to expand to the East Coast in the 1960s. Disney, which now operates three Florida theme parks, wound up controlling nearly every aspect of development through a quasi-city government that critics said sometimes overrode environmental concerns.

Attempts so far to have another park going in southern California have been fruitless.

An ocean-themed park in Long Beach announced in 1990 was stymied by environmental problems. And a version of Epcot Center to go by Disneyland has been hurt by squabbles over who will pay for road and other improvements.

The thermos bottle was invented by Sir James Dewar, a British chemist, in 1892.

Raiders survive Herd rally, win district opener

By JAY PEDEN

Sports Editor

A late, frantic Hereford rally was not enough to overcome three second-quarter touchdowns by Randall, and the Herd fell to the Raiders 21-16 Friday night in a packed Whiteface Stadium.

While Randall stayed perfect at 5-0, Hereford fell to 2-3 in the District 1-4A football opener for both. It was only the first of several district showdowns both teams will face.

"This thing's not fatal by any means," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "It doesn't kill our aspirations. It'll set you back a little, but we could very easily win out and be district champions."

Friday's game followed the pattern established in the previous three games between the two schools: wild. The game featured three touchdown plays of more than 45 yards, as well as seven turnovers.

Each team had a fumble by its star tailback inside the opponent's two-yard line which went into the end zone and was covered by the defense. Both came when the runner appeared to be down.

Randall's goaline fumble, by D'mitri McFarland, came early in the fourth quarter when a touchdown and kick would have put the Raiders up by 25 points.

Hereford's goaline fumble, by Marquise Brown, came with five minutes left in the game; a touchdown would have completed the Herd's comeback and put the Herd ahead 22-21 even without the extra point.

Brown's fumble came on the next play after a huge break for the Herd. Penalties had Randall pinned deep in its own territory when Herd linebacker Martin Martinez forced a fumble from McFarland, and tackle Dion Reyna fell on the ball at the Randall six-yard line.

Brown took a pitch right but was stopped at the two-yard line. He said he felt he was down before the ball came out.

"I was on the ground. I hit the ground and it came out," he said. "It was just a tough break, that's all."

Hereford got the ball back once more, but couldn't get past midfield. Hereford lost 18 yards on a combination sack/intentional grounding penalty on quarterback Michael Brown. Passes on third-and-28 and fourth-and-28 fell incomplete, and Randall ran out the final minute.

The Herd, down 21-3 at halftime, got back into the game with two long touchdown plays early in the fourth quarter: a 76-yard pass from quarterback Michael Brown to tight end Raymond Gonzales and a 55-yard run by Michael Brown.

Three plays after Randall's fumble into the end zone, Brown found Gonzales sprinting straight down the middle of the field, with one step on the Randall cornerback. Brown got the ball to Gonzales in stride and Gonzales outran the defenders over the final 30 yards.

"Right before, in the huddle, Michael winked at me and let me know it was going deep," Gonzales said. "All I had on my mind was getting by that guy."

The TD and High's extra point kick cut Randall's lead to 21-16. Hereford forced a Randall punt and quickly cut the lead further on a 55-yard run by Brown.

"It was just a quarterback draw," Brown said. "They left a wide-open seam on the right side."

He got good blocks at the line of scrimmage, plus a key block downfield, by Jeb Skiles, Brown said.

That cut the lead to 21-16 with 5:44 left. Hereford went for two points to pull with three, but Randall stuffed the toss left.

Randall hasn't been known in the past for its defense, but that they may be changing under third-year coach Alan Cornelius, who got his first win against his alma mater.

"They were getting to the ball—and getting a lot of people to the ball also," Marquise Brown said.

"They're a better defense," Haney said. "We had a hard time blocking them. The things we did and the way they were playing was conducive to big plays, and we were able to take advantage (in the fourth quarter). We struggled blocking them all night. They did a great job against us in terms of what they were doing. You know, the basis of any win is blocking and tackling."

Hereford scored first in the game, going up 3-0 on a 35-yard field goal by Terance High on the Herd's first possession. On the second possession Hereford penetrated to the Randall 15-yard line, but on fourth-and-10, Michael Brown was stopped at the nine-yard line—a yard short of a first down.

Hereford's offense struggled for the rest of the half, while Randall's offense, along with McFarland, started to heat up.

"Missed tackles and missed assignments got us in a bind," Haney said. "We lost field position after the first quarter (which was played entirely in Randall territory). I'll tell you, penalties on offense just killed us. We had two drives in the first half which were stopped after major penalties put Hereford in deep holes."

McFarland put Randall ahead 7-3 on the second play of the second quarter with a 48-yard touchdown run. He took an option pitch to the right, then raced down the sideline for about 20 yards before making a cut and scoring at the left corner of the end zone. Mark Ladd tacked on the extra-point kick.

Next came the two Herd offensive drives Haney referred to which were hurt by penalties. Those drives ended in Randall interceptions when Michael Brown was forced to throw in third and long situations. On the second of those drives, a 15-yard clipping penalty turned an apparent 35-yard run by Marquise Brown into a net loss of seven yards.

Randall converted both of those interceptions into touchdown drives. After a spectacular, one-handed interception by Kelly Coryell at the Randall 27, Randall went 73 yards in eight plays. Warren McCarty, one of two quarterbacks Randall alternated, hit Marcus Quesenberry three times for 65 yards on the drive, and McFarland capped it off with a one-yard plunge.

The second interception was by Luke White at the Randall 47. On the next play, the other Raider QB, Jud Moller, hit Jason Richardson over the middle for 41 yards down to the Hereford 12.

Two plays later, McFarland ran 13 yards for the score, Ladd kicked his third extra point of the night for a 21-3 lead with 1:27 left in the half.

McFarland totaled 195 yards on 27 carries, with three touchdowns. He leads the district with 897 yards in five games, and he's scored 11 touchdowns.

"He was awesome," said Herd defensive end Richard Hicks. "He made most of his cuts cutting back. The backside ends and linebackers were told to stay there, but we pursued too fast and he outran us. But I think we did a pretty good job of shutting him down in the second half."

Friday's game was the second in a row the Herd gave up 21 points in the first half and had a second half comeback fall short. The difference between the loss to Randall and the 28-27 loss to Frenship the previous Friday is that the Randall loss counts. Hereford is now in district play.

"We're not going to let it happen again," Michael Brown said, in a threatening whisper. "I think everybody's finally realized that nobody's going to bow down just because we're the Herd. We've got to go out and play every down."

Humble ties MacArthur; Cooper could take No. 1

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

After two weeks of stability, it looks like the top 10 teams in Class 5A are going to be shaken up again.

Aldine MacArthur, which has been No. 1 in 5A since the preseason, tied Humble 14-14 Friday night, likely dropping the Generals from the top when the new poll comes out Monday.

Their two closest pursuers put in solid claims for the vacancy as No. 2 Abilene Cooper beat Midland 38-3 and No. 3 Austin Westlake crushed Austin High 56-0.

Fourth-ranked Deer Park also made a case with a 24-6 victory over Lamar Consolidated, the ninth-ranked team in Class 4A.

MacArthur may not fall any lower than fifth, though, as current No. 5 Converse Judson fell 32-31 to San Antonio MacArthur.

Judson (3-1), the two-time defending 5A Division I champion, had not lost a regular-season game since the fourth week of the 1992 season when it fell 37-21 to Temple.

Yet another ranked team to fall in Class 5A was No. 6 Mesquite, a 42-25 loser to North Mesquite.

Rounding out 5A, No. 7 Plano East slammed Richardson Pearce 35-0, No. 8 Grapevine beat Keller 24-7, No. 9 Houston Cypress Creek stumped the state's leading rusher Darrell Bush and stopped Jersey Village 28-7, and No. 10 Arlington Lamar edged Irving 24-21.

The first four polls of the regular season saw five teams enter the 5A rankings. That dipped to three schools, then only two new teams in the poll released last Monday.

Now with a tie and two losses by the top six teams, the 5A ranking should again get a new look.

In the other four classes, only three ranked teams lost and two of them were 4A schools that fell to other ranked teams. The other ranked loser was a shocker as George West upset Class 2A's second-ranked Refugio 15-14.

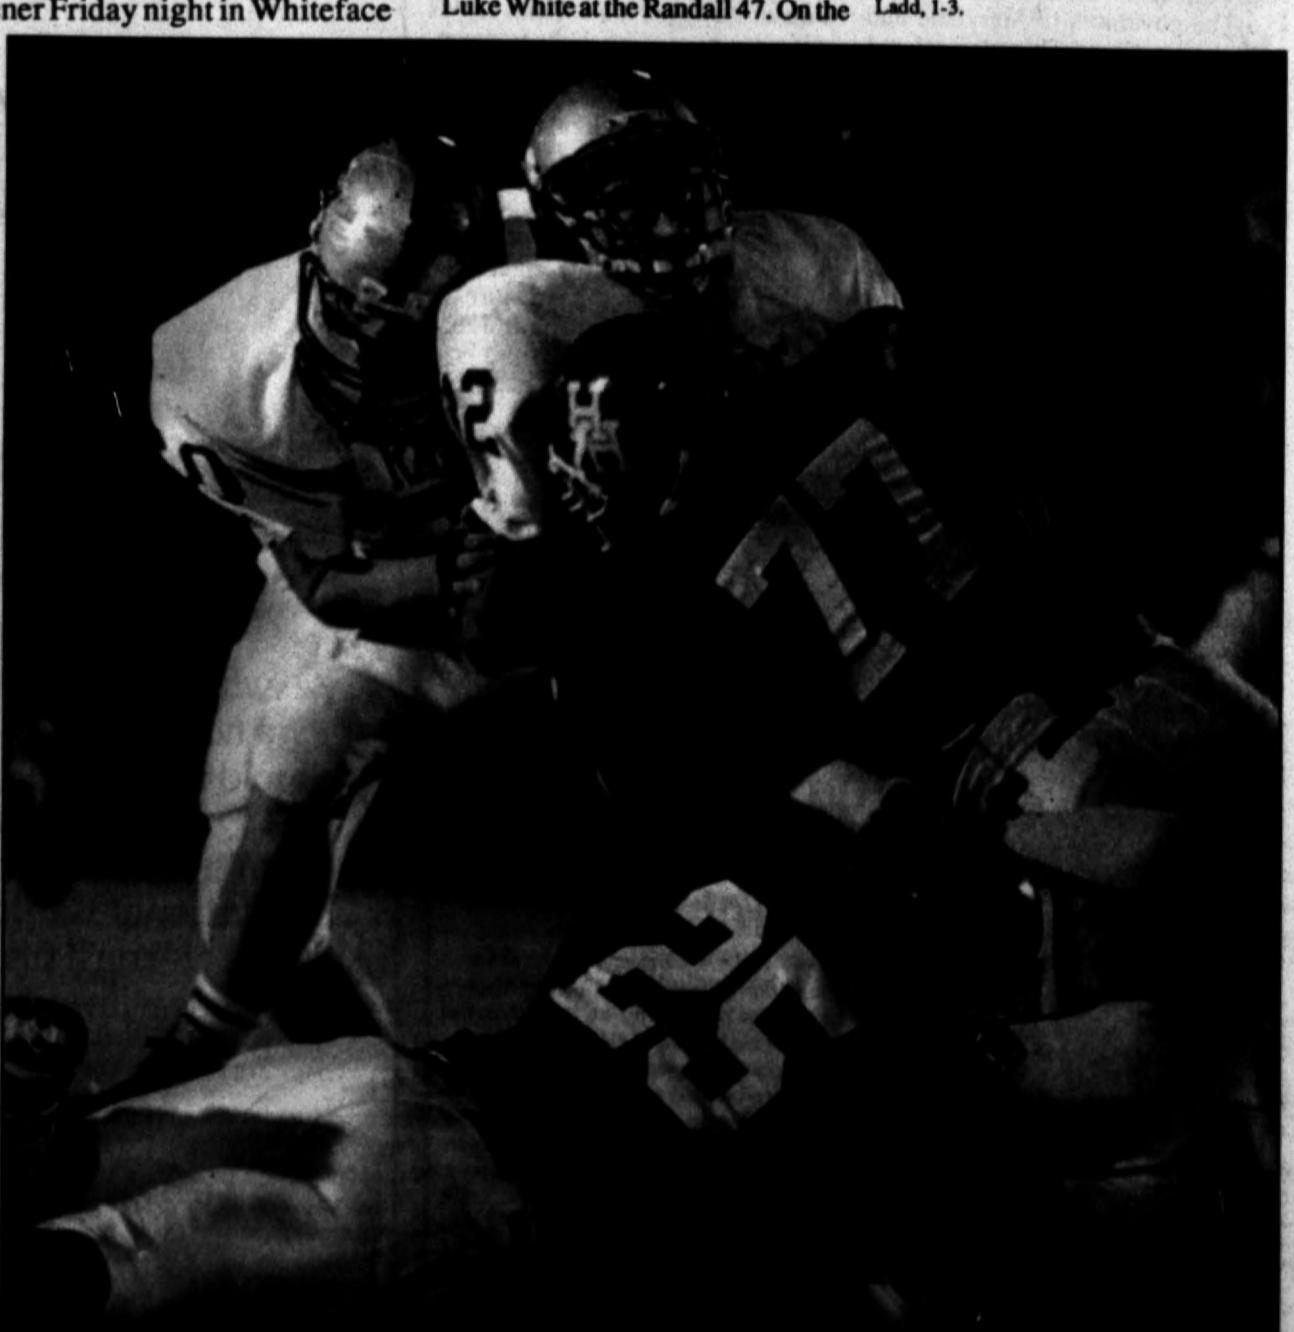

The big 4A game was No. 5 Gregory-Portland knocking off nearby district rival No. 6 Corpus Christi Calallen 31-13 to keep up their tradition of G-P having won-in each of the last three even-numbered years.

In other 4A action, top-ranked Stephenville increased the state's longest winning streak to 20 straight by pounding Grand Prairie 44-19, and No. 3 La Marque missed a shot at three straight shutouts, yet still beat Crosby 41-24.

Second-ranked Waxahachie was idle, No. 4 Sulphur Springs beat Whitehouse 58-28, No. 7 Sherman embarrassed Wilmer-Hutchins 49-0, No. 8 Austin Reagan downed Hays Consolidated 31-14 and No. 10 Bay City beat Pasadena 32-19.

Half the ranked 3A teams shut out their opponents and none of the other five allowed more than seven points.

Among the top teams, No. 1 Cuero beat Victoria Stroman 61-6, No. 2 Sealy beat Rice Consolidated 60-6 and No. 3 Jefferson beat Omaha Paul Pewitt 20-0.

'Bullet' Bob Hayes reflects on life's highs, lows

By KEVIN SHERRINGTON
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS - Bob Hayes is sunk in a black chair, one knee up, one down. In the morning light knifing through the blinds, illuminating the haze, he looks older than his 51 years.

His hair seems grayer, his eyes darker. He seems almost frail, probably because of his legs. The magnificent legs that carried him from a Jacksonville, Fla., ghetto to the Olympics and the NFL are spindly and scarred.

Looking at them, it is hard to believe what they once managed. They move fastest now when he is at rest. As he talks, his right leg is rocking side to side, a metronome, 40 beats to the minute.

His conversation is a stream of consciousness. He is floating on the words and thoughts, over memories and emotions and the occasional aggravation of a question.

He has a story to tell, as friend and former Dallas Cowboys' teammate Drew Pearson likes to say. A Japanese film crew came to hear it last month. The Japanese were interested in a chapter 30 years old, when Hayes won the 100 meters and anchored the gold-medal 400-meter relay in the Tokyo Olympics.

ESPN's Roy Firestone flew him out to California a couple of weeks ago for a chat. Ebony, Jet, The Sporting News and countless newspapers carried stories about Hayes going back to Florida A&M this summer to complete his degree in elementary education. The New York Times called, Hayes says; he must remember to call back.

Hayes is smiling, talking about his degree, recalling the university president's response as he walked forward for his diploma.

"The president looks down," Hayes says, "and sees all these cameras and says, 'Is this commencement or the Academy Awards?'

"I'm so grateful, people love me, which I know. I've gotten just as much for getting my degree as the Olympic gold medals."

He pops his left hand on the arm of his chair. The right leg is working.

For a moment, his story seems a happy one, of a once-great athlete who finishes his schooling on the anniversary of his greatest triumph. But the story is not nearly so simple or neat. Like the title of his 1990 autobiography, "Run, Bullet, Run: The Rise, Fall and Recovery of Bob Hayes," it does not quite cover the subject, at least not the last portion.

Hayes is talking as if he were at peace, though. Without prompting, he moves on to his Cowboys' teammates. Pearson, Don Meredith, Craig Morton. In his autobiography, Hayes ripped Morton, alluding that he was racist, among other things. But, now, in this temporary reverie, Hayes has no enemies. Jethro Pugh, Roger Staubach. "One of my BEST friends," he says.

He weaves from the Cowboys to his family: his son, Robert Jr., and three daughters and two wives, both exes. Adrienne, he notes, recently made him a grandfather.

"So they call me 'Gramps,'" Drew and all them," he says, and a coarse laugh sputters from him.

And, just like that, the part of Bob Hayes that Staubach once described to a judge as "the sunny side," clouds over.

"Then what I don't understand," Hayes says, out of nowhere, "since I got in that trouble and my secretary's boyfriend got me arrested. I can't get a job. John Kennedy said, 'Ask not what your country can do for you...' So I go out and win two gold medals and represent my country. I go out and play for Tom Landry and with all my teammates, all those Hall of Famers, and here I am in Dallas in one of the corporate capitals of the world, and I'm not qualified for a job?"

"I'm not a dumb person. But I can't get anyone to pick up the phone. It is a shame."

This is how most of Bob Hayes' friends and former associates describe his life: a shame. Not so much because he hasn't had a real job in more than a decade, or that he spent 10 months in prison on a drug conviction 15 years ago. Or that he isn't in the NFL Hall of Fame or Cowboys' Ring of Honor, though they consider the snub unfair.

The shame is that he came out of Florida unequipped to deal with the fame that would come to him, and he would leave the NFL unprepared to live without it. That he would become an alcoholic and drug abuser and would go through three rehabilitation treatment centers - the latest within the past year - did not surprise friends, either.

Hayes came from five generations of alcoholics. It is a legacy he has not outrun, 30 years after his Olympic glory and 20 after his last season with the Cowboys, when he was the first No. 22, The Bullet.

People still want to talk to him about the Olympics and how his speed revolutionized the NFL. But there the interest generally ends.

"People said, 'Sure he was great. He represented his country and won in the Olympics. Thank you. Period,'" Tex Schramm says. He pauses, the words hanging in dead air. Schramm, the Cowboys' general manager when Hayes played from 1965-74, still talks to Hayes on occasion, still tries to keep in touch. "That was the sad part, because he needed guidance. Once he did the prison stint, then he wasn't of value to anyone."

Schramm considers the thought for a moment. He decides it probably doesn't tell Bob Hayes' story, either. "His whole life is sad," Schramm says.

Born into a Jacksonville ghetto known as "Hell's Hole," Bob Hayes probably should have been Bob Sanders. His mother's husband was away at the war when Bob was conceived. In his autobiography, Hayes told Robert Pack that when anyone would ask him if Hayes was his son, George Sanders would respond, "That's what his mother says." Sanders, a numbers runner, would bet on Hayes in neighborhood match races. He bragged that Hayes could beat anyone, even after drinking whiskey the night before.

At the time, Bob Hayes was 12.

By the time he got to Florida A&M, Hayes already was a star in track and football. At A&M, he ran a world-record 9.1 100-yard dash. In 1964 at Tokyo, he ran an Olympic-record 10.0 in the 100 meters.

But his greatest performance came in the anchor of the 400-meter relay. Taking the baton in fifth place, he won the gold medal with a split of 8.6. Nearly 20 years later, a panel of track experts surveyed by the Los Angeles Times would rank it "the most astonishing sprint of all time."

"What he did in Tokyo," Gil

Brandt says, "was like a team winning the pennant after being down 11 games with 12 to go."

Brandt and the Cowboys took Hayes as a "future" choice in the seventh round of the 1964 draft. In his first three years in the league, Hayes was named to the Pro Bowl three times. He holds 17 Cowboys' receiving and punt-return records, including career average per catch (20.0) and touchdowns (71).

But what he did to the NFL transcended numbers. Players and coaches say he changed the game. Until Bob Hayes came along, teams generally played man-to-man defense.

"Bob's speed made people do other things," Roger Staubach says. "People began doubling him, which, in effect, made it a zone. He had another gear, though. His speed was overwhelming. Plus, he was a good football player, too. Bob had the instincts and the hands for it. He was a tremendous football player."

This is how his friends and associates are most comfortable in talking about Hayes, a man for whom they feel deep loyalty. It is easier to talk about what he was.

"Until they started playing a zone," Tom Landry says, chuckling at the memory of Hayes' speed. "he was a real weapon, he and (Don) Meredith."

Defenses got better and Hayes' effectiveness waned. He still was faster than anyone, but his contribution to the offense grew smaller.

Landry benched him in 1969 and again in 1970 for what he called a lackadaisical attitude.

Hayes still averaged a Cowboys record 26.1 yards per catch in 1970, and a league-leading 24 yards a catch in 1971. But he was fast becoming a controversial figure, at least in an era when black players were expected to be good and quiet. Hayes talked about racial problems. He also played out his option, protesting his $40,000 salary. He re-signed for $85,000, his highest annual salary, but not before he received phone calls, both threatening and supportive.

In 1975, the Cowboys traded him to San Francisco, where he caught six passes. The 49ers released him late in the season.

As with most NFL players, Hayes returned to where he had been successful. Living in Dallas, he thought, would pay off.

"As far as endorsements, the market was virtually dead for black athletes back then," says Sonny Margolis, Hayes' agent at the time.

Hayes had worked for Braniff and Royal Crown Cola while he was a player, but those jobs ended when his career did. He had nothing on which to fall back. For this, friends point fingers. They blame the people who educated him or the Cowboys, for taking care of him without making him face responsibilities. Hayes takes part of the blame. In his book, he admits he never studied in school. "I always got help because I was the fastest guy around, and I always got pats on the back no matter what I did."

Jobs aren't easy to come by, even for players with impeccable pasts. When injuries from an automobile accident forced him to retire after the 1983 season, Drew Pearson worked for CBS-TV, HBO, as a weekend sports anchor in San Antonio and on Landry's staff. "None of those things panned out," Pearson says.

Outside of Hayes and Michael Irvin, no receiver made a bigger impact in Cowboys' history than Pearson. The club's all-time leading receiver, he made famous the "Hail Mary" catch against Minnesota in 1975.

"Once you leave the game, though, people forget about you quite quickly," Pearson says. "No matter how many passes you've caught or touchdowns you've thrown, that's nice, but it doesn't mean anything in the real world."

Corporations are "very skeptical" about athletes, he says.

"Athletes who had some troubles kind of hurt the market," Pearson says.

Hayes was one of those athletes. In April 1979, a district court judge sentenced Hayes to two five-year terms, to run concurrently, after he pleaded guilty to three charges of delivering narcotics to an undercover police officer in suburban Addison, Texas. He served 10 months in Huntsville before being paroled.

Nearly 15 years later, few friends seem reconciled to Hayes' case. Schramm and Frank Jackson, a former Southern Methodist University and NFL player who served as Hayes' attorney in the 1980s, say Hayes was a victim of con men and racist authorities. Defending Hayes, Jackson talked of his "relative naivete." Schramm called Hayes "gullible."

"If Bobby Hayes had been a white athlete," says Jackson, who is white, "I guarantee the (expletive) police wouldn't have gone after him as hard as they did. They focused on him. If he'd been a white athlete, they could have cut a slick deal."

Schramm says the prosecutor on the case told him he had to make an example of Hayes.

Richard Zadina left the district attorney's office in 1986 for private practice and now works for a finance company. When first asked about Hayes' case, he said he remembered little about it. But Schramm's allegation rustles his memory. Hayes' pleaded guilty because of a prior conviction. He received 10 years' probation while at Florida A&M after a man he was accompanying held up a classmate. Had he been convicted by a jury in the drug case, Hayes might have faced a much stiffer sentence.

A host of friends and Cowboys' players and officials testified on Hayes' behalf at the trial. They called him a good but naive man, deserving of probation.

"I had him on tape trying to arrange a $50,000 heroin deal," Zadina says. "Give a guy probation who has tried something like that? I brought Landry and Schramm in and let them listen to the tapes before the trial. Landry was sick about it. He was not enthusiastic about going down and testifying. But he was the coach of the team, and he had to do it."

Zadina played the tape for Staubach during his testimony.

"Roger," Zadina says, "he turned white."

Watching his friends and mentors - Landry, Schramm, Pearson, Pettis Norman, Olympic teammate Ulis Williams and Jake Gaither, his coach at Florida A&M - testify on his behalf worked on Hayes, Zadina says. He looked out at the courtroom while he was testifying, Zadina says, and decided he couldn't disappoint them.

"He started trying to deny it," Zadina says. "He tried to get himself out of it. And that's what cooked his goose."

"Going to prison destroyed my life," Hayes told Pack in his autobiography, "and I really got on drugs and alcohol in 1980 after I got out of jail. I couldn't find a good job, my self-esteem was low, and a lot of people had turned their backs on me. ..."

"I was just a vegetable at the time, walking around in a daze."

Some of Hayes' friends were as good as their word when he got out of prison. Meredith loaned him money, Schramm tried to get him a job with Cowboys' owner Clint Murchison's real estate firm until they learned that Hayes' drug conviction precluded him from getting a license. Staubach gave Hayes a job in his management company.

"When he learned of Hayes' drug

Some coaches find time to spend with families

By KEN BERGER

Associated Press Writer

Barry Switzer's view that football and family can mix has struck a chord with coaches who find themselves spending more time with other people's kids than with their own.

Bobby Bowden, for one, said he admires someone willing to put family ahead of football, mainly because he regrets not having been to many of his sons' games.

"All my sons played high school football, and I don't guess I ever saw over six games," the coach of national champion Florida State said with a tinge of regret. "I think (Switzer) ought to put his family first. It's taken him a long time to realize that."

Switzer, coach of the Dallas Cowboys, slipped away to Arkansas the night before a game against the Houston Oilers, missing a team meeting to watch his son play quarterback for Missouri Southern.

and alcohol abuse in the spring of 1985, Staubach put him in a Dallas rehabilitation clinic. It didn't take. Staubach sent him back for a 10-day detoxification before shipping him to rehab in a New Jersey clinic, where Hayes stayed three months. The bill came to $25,000; Staubach paid it.

Despite what was done for him, Hayes came to resent what he called a snub on the part of other friends, as well as corporate Dallas.

"You can't ride that celebrity for the rest of your life," Frank Jackson says. "When Bobby retired, the immediate attention was there. I think he thought it would be there forever. That's why he stayed here. But it was short-circuited by the criminal problems."

Hayes is convinced his drug record is keeping him from getting a job and out of the Hall of Fame. He called a news conference in 1991 to say he was petitioning the governor to pardon the remaining conviction on his record. An appeals court overturned two convictions because of faulty wording. As of yet, the governor has taken no action on his request. "I'm crossing my fingers," he says.

So what does Bob Hayes do now, besides wait?

"I'm not sure as to where his capabilities lie, what he could or couldn't do," says Margolis, who no longer works as an agent.

"I've got to go on what's happened the last seven or eight years. Right now, I can't be optimistic. People may change their minds since he went back and got his degree. I keep hoping. But I just can't say his chances are real strong."

In the best years of his life, Bob Hayes' world was 100 yards long. On a track or a football field, it didn't matter. No one was faster. NO ONE. In 1983, a panel of track experts voted him the greatest sprinter ever. He didn't just run a track, a writer once noted, he beat it to death: head bobbing, feet pounding. "A big piece of muscle," Hayes once called himself.

Super Events

ATLANTA (AP) — The Super Bowl is the biggest event on the pro football calendar but there are always side shows, often benefiting charitable organizations.

The 1994 Super Bowl, won by Dallas, 30-13, over Buffalo, featured a number of events for charity in the week before the game.

Included were the establishment of an NFL Education Town, the NFL-sponsored building of four homes for needy families.

And, for icing on the cake, a "Taste of the NFL" culinary skills to benefit a number of charitable organizations.

Jimmy Johnson, who won two Super Bowls doing Switzer's job, questioned his successor's commitment to the team.

The Cowboys won the game, 20-17.

In the debate about family values, Switzer appears to be way ahead in the court of public opinion. It's hard to find a coach who's not singing Switzer's praises, even though last season Houston Oilers tackle David Williams was fined for missing a game to stay home with his wife and newborn.

"There's nothing in this life more important than your family," said Kansas City Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer, who knows all about the demands of trying to be a coach, husband and father.

He tells of a hectic journey in 1991, when he flew through a snowstorm on a private plane to watch his son play for the state football championship in Manhattan, Kan., just hours before a game in Cleveland against the Browns. His son, Brian, now a backup quarterback at Florida, won the title that day with Blue Valley High School.

"There was a major blizzard when we took off from the downtown airport — this good friend of mine flying his plane — and we landed on an ice-covered runway at Manhattan," Schottenheimer said. "It was a bad, icy runway. When the game ended we got right back on the runway, flew to Kansas City International. I got on the team plane and left."

The Chiefs lost to the Browns, 20-15. Schottenheimer had no regrets. "If I had it to do over again, I'd do exactly what I did," he said. "I don't care who you are, where you start or where you finish. The only thing that matters in this life is your family."

It was "God's work. These kids respect me, and I wanted to complete what I started."

Hayes had a lot to say in his book, in which he told Pack he hadn't had any drugs or "a drop of liquor" since his 1985 rehab stints. But any veteran of a 12-step program would argue with the subtitle, "The Rise, Fall and Recovery of Bob Hayes."

Veterans of a 12-step program are recovering alcoholics, it teaches, not recovered ones.

"Even though you go through the process," Pearson says of recovering addicts, "you have a tendency to slip. I've told Bob, 'If you ever feel that way, call me, and we'll talk.' I could help. He knows if he's ever in trouble, he can call me or stay with me."

"I wouldn't do it if he were heavily involved in drugs. I don't want to be an enabler. The times I've been around him since the Lucas center, he's seemed fine."

Sitting in Hayes' North Dallas condominium, listening to him talk of good times and bad, it is difficult to tell his state of mind. He is not immersed in his former life, at least not in mementos. Most of his trophies, he says, are in storage. His money comes from working jobs "here and there, nothing I want. I want my own company, so I can make it better for my son."

His autobiography did fairly well, though not as well as he had hoped. The book came out the same time as Landry's autobiography and sports writer Skip Bayless' biography of Landry, "God's Coach."

"You think they're gonna buy Bob Hayes' book or Tom Landry's book or a controversial book?" he says, disgust rising in his voice. "So this had to be my luck."

And so it goes. One moment his luck is bad, the next ...

"I talk to people," he says, "and they say, 'Bob Hayes, you don't have the monies you should have, you don't have the cars you should have, you don't have the houses you should have.' I got principle, that's what I have. You give me my health, my security, that's what I want."

A job, that's what he wants. A good job. A job befitting the only man to own an Olympic gold medal and a Super Bowl ring.

He wears the ring, a constant reminder of what he was. People always ask to see it. In the dim light of his den, Hayes holds it closer for the inspection of a stranger.

What year was it?

"There it is," Hayes says, "right there. Nineteen-seventy."

He points to the side of the ring. The dull metal reads, "1971."

Distributed by The Associated Press

Another coach who must have taken notice of Switzer's decision was Norv Turner, Johnson's assistant last year in Dallas and now coach of the Washington Redskins. Turner, who has three young children with his wife Nancy, went to see their 12-year-old son Scott play Pop Warner football last weekend, the day before the Redskins lost to Atlanta, 27-20.

"It's part of the deal, and it's been part of the deal for a lot of years," said Turner, who didn't miss any meetings.

While in Dallas, Turner also tried to attend as many of his daughter's ice skating shows as he could. "I don't think it kept me from being focused for the football game on Sunday," he said.

Detroit Lions coach Wayne Fontes said he learned from the start that coaching wasn't like other jobs. John McKay, who hired him to be assistant at Southern California years ago, warned him that his time would not be his own anymore.

"John McKay called my wife before he hired me," Fontes said. "He told her our lives would be different from now on. Wives have to be special people."

Is it just pro coaches who get stuck in a dark office in the wee hours of the morning watching film, chugging coffee and pulling hair out?

"Actually, I spent more time away from my family when I was a college coach than now," said New Orleans Saints coach Jim Mora, who once coached at Occidental (Calif.) College.

"In college, you had to take care of recruiting in the offseason, so you were away from your family for long periods almost all year."

"I've done it, we've all done it," Mora said. "You stay at the office even when you don't have much to do, just hanging around."

"I never neglected my job for my family, but I have neglected my family for my job. I don't know many coaches who haven't."

Nick Hyder, head coach at nationally acclaimed Valdosta (Ga.) High School, the winningest prep program in America, said he faces demands that rival some coaches at higher levels. Like giving speeches in 40 states.

"To me, if you're a good person, you're a better athlete, or a better coach," said Hyder, in his 30th year of marriage with no children. "Some day, Jimmy Johnson is going to have to walk into a room and purchase a casket for someone very close to him, and it might change his thinking. Your family has to be a priority."

Bobby Bowden said the nature of the job often makes that impossible.

"You see, one thing about coaches is that all their lives they spend working with somebody else's children, while their children are at home," he said. "A coach has to scramble for any time he gets with his family."

Terry Bowden said he's learned that sometimes he has to put football second, even if only for a little while.

"When you say you're going to win whatever it takes, you don't really mean that," he said. "If winning means not keeping your family complete, then you're not going to win."

But, what happened to Vince Lombardi's famous refrain, "Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing"?

Hyder answers a question with another question.

"If our family values drop down to nothing," he asks, "where's Jimmy Johnson going to get all his players?"

YOUR EYES

IS 20/20 PERFECT VISION?

To qualify for pilot training, Air Force candidates have to have 20/20 vision, we are told. Does that mean that 20/20 signifies perfect vision? Not necessarily. All that 20/20 measures is visual acuity: that the individual can see clearly, at a distance of 20 feet, the objects or letters on a chart that most people with normal vision can. But there are other visual skills that are needed as well. For example:

- Can you see clearly and comfortably holding reading matter at the usual distance, 14 to 20 inches away?
- Can you change focus quickly from distance to near vision?
- How's your depth perception?
- Can your eyes "track" a moving object?

Many children who test 20/20 have vision-related learning problems. There are deficiencies in other visual skills that can be corrected if they are properly identified by an eye professional.

Ag trade surplus increases in July

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. agricultural trade surplus for July was $1.2 billion, up $69 million from June but $79 million below the level of July 1993, the Agriculture Department says.

The combined agricultural trade surplus for fiscal 1994, which began in October 1993, totaled $14.7 billion through July, down $1.1 billion from the corresponding period in 1993.

U.S. exports fell $150 million in July from the previous month, to $3.1 billion, still slightly up from a year ago. Imports, meanwhile, fell 10 percent from June to July, to $2 billion, up 8 percent from July 1993. The estimate of a $1.2 billion surplus results from rounding of the figures for imports and exports.

Exports of live animals increased by 3,400 head over June, with cattle shipments from Canada helping to push the value 58 percent higher than in July 1993.

Although poultry shipments dropped 15 percent from June, the total for the year to date still topped the 1993 period by 38 percent, at $1.2 billion. Much of the gain resulted from shipments to Hong Kong, which have amounted to 235,000 tons so far this year.

Shipments of fruit also declined for the month, though the total for the year to date still remained strong at $2.1 billion. Exports of fruit juices rose 7 percent.

Vegetable exports were 7 percent higher than the previous year, despite a drop in July from the previous month. For the year so far, fresh vegetable exports are down 5 percent, though the balance has been helped by stronger frozen vegetable sales, up 15 percent from 1993 due in part to more purchases from Mexico and Japan.

July wheat exports, at 1.8 million tons, were 9 percent below the previous month and 35 percent below 1993. The decline was partly due to new import restrictions in the former Soviet republics, which imported 124,000 tons this year, 61 percent less than last year. So far, wheat shipments are down 18 percent from 1993.

Corn exports held steady with 1993 at 2.4 million tons. Japan accounted for the majority of the sales, followed by Taiwan, Egypt and Korea. Still, the October-July mark falls 9 million tons short of the previous year.

Hitting a record low for July, soybean exports plunged 36 percent to 465,000 tons in July, a record low for the month. Shipments were 60 percent below the previous year, and the year-to-date total of 14.1 million tons was off 25 percent from 1993.

Cotton exports, while maintaining unusually high levels, were off slightly from June, at 136,000 tons, but still 74,000 tons above the July 1993 level. China bought 64,000 tons in July, keeping up its record summer purchases. To date, cotton sales have exceeded 1993 by 375,000 tons for a total of 1.4 million tons.

Overseas promotion of products planned

AUSTIN -- Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry on Thursday announced that 25 Texas companies -- including one Hereford firm -- have received more than $1.6 million to promote their brand-name products overseas.

The Hereford company is Arrowhead Mills.

The grants, totaling $1,649,228, were awarded through the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Market Promotion Program, which is administered by the Southern United States Trade Association in cooperation with the Texas Department of Agriculture.

The grants will aid in developing foreign markets for products that range from pasta to pet food.

In addition to Arrowhead Mills, companies receiving grants are:

Agri-West International, Allied Feeds Inc., Associated Milk Producers Inc., Big Tex Grain Co., Billy Blues Food Corp., Organotech Inc., Pace Foods Inc. and Pioneer

Flour Mills, all of San Antonio. Blue Bell Creameries Inc. of Brenham; Brice Foods Inc./"I Can't Believe It's Yogurt" of Dallas; Campbell Coup Co. of Paris; Collin Street Bakery of Corsicana; Conroe Cresington Co. of Conroe; Cool Inc. of Richardson; Daisy Brand Inc. of Dallas; Gandy's Dairies Inc. of San Angelo.

Also, H&H of Mercedes; Hygeia Dairy of Harlingen; Messina Hof Wine Cellars Inc. of Bryan; Navarro pecan Co. of Corsicana; O.B. Macaroni Co. of Fort Worth; Pet Inc. of El Paso; Richland Beverage of Dallas; and Tri City Sales of El Paso.

In addition to funding for brand-name products, Texas received almost $800,000 in MPP funding to promote the following generic products in European, Middle East and Asian markets: 1015 onions, grapefruit, pecans, sweet potatoes, alligator hides, processed foods, horticulture and livestock.

New identity given to extension agents

COLLEGE STATION - A new identity has been placed on Texas Agricultural Extension Service home economics agents.

On Sept. 1, TAES switched designation to Family and Consumer Sciences Agents.

In announcing the change, Dr. Zerle Carpenter, extension director, said, "The change is the result of a careful study and consideration by home economics professionals within the extension service. "The home economics program provides innovative leadership for strong local and statewide educational programs that strengthen families, increase economic security, improve health and well-being and support environmental stewardship."

The organization of women that started life as Texas Home Demonstration Association in 1926 now is called Texas Association for Family and Community Education. From 1979 until 1993, the organization was Texas Extension Homemakers Association.

During the convention of TAFCE in Lubbock in mid-September, a Friend of Texas A&M Agriculture Award was presented to the group.

S&W District sets election of directors

Directors representing zones one and two of the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District will be elected Tuesday.

The election for Zone 1, which covers the western third of Deaf Smith County, will be conducted Tuesday at Walcott School at 7 p.m.

The Zone 2 election will be held at 8 a.m. Tuesday at Ford elevator. The area covered by Zone 2 is in the north central part of the county.

To be eligible to vote in the election, persons must own agricultural land within the district, live in the county all or any part of which is in the district and be 18 years of age.

Candidates for director must own land in the zone represented, be actively engaged in farming and ranching and live in a county all or part of which is in the district.

Bill Walden currently serves as chairman of the Tierra Blanca SWCD. Jerry Homfeld is vice president and Carl Strafuss, secretary. Other board members are Carl Kleuskens and Nick Yosten.

The Japanese cities of Tokyo and Yokohama were devastated in 1923 by an earthquake that claimed some 150,000 lives.

Less sugar is expected worldwide

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department is revising its estimate of world sugar production for 1994-95 to 114 million metric tons, down 2.3 million from its June forecast.

The new forecast predicts a sharp decline in Cuban production, reflecting that nation's deteriorating economy. It also foresees a drop in beet sugar production from Central Europe, Russia and the Ukraine due to a widespread drought.

Additionally, 1993-94 and 1994-95 estimates for China have been revised downward for both beet and cane sugar output, mainly because of a shift in acreage allocation away from sugar to more lucrative crops.

These downturns are offset in part by an improved sugar outlook for the United States, South Africa, Pakistan, Thailand and Australia.

Even with the downward revision, however, the 1994-95 estimate tops the previous year by 3.4 million metric tons. A metric ton equals about 2,200 pounds.

Former pastor recalls descent from the top

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

The Rev. Joel Gregory reached the pinnacle of Southern Baptist life: the pastorate of the prestigious First Baptist Church of Dallas, a lavish home overlooking a country club, luxury box seats to Cowboy games and his own radio station.

Today, four years later, Gregory travels through Fort Worth neighborhoods selling cemetery plots. The former preacher to presidents knocks on 50 doors a day, hoping to be invited back to one or two homes in the evening.

What brought Gregory from the power and glory of the nation's most prominent Protestant pulpit to the humble existence of a door-to-door funeral salesman has mystified Southern Baptists since September 1992, when he suddenly announced his resignation from First Baptist.

In a new book "Too Great A Temptation" due out in October from The Summit Group, Gregory emerges from his self-imposed exile to tell his story of the rise and fall of a superchurch pastor. At first a willing partner in his own seduction to big-time ministry, Gregory said an ensuing power struggle with the church's senior pastor - the Rev. W.A. Criswell - forced him to lose faith in a model of ministry that proclaims bigger is always better.

"I've learned anew that the whole zoo of human ambition, and power and ego ... is the fabric of some superchurches," he said in an interview.

It was a rude awakening for Gregory, whose ministerial career up until First Baptist had been an almost uninterrupted string of successes. As a junior at Baylor University, he became pastor of Waco's Edgefield Baptist Church, nearly tripling its membership before going off to Southwestern Seminary in Fort Worth.

At Gambrell Street Baptist Church in Fort Worth, attendance rose from 400 to 1,200 during his five years there. In 1985, he moved to the Travis Avenue Baptist Church in Fort Worth, where membership increased from 6,500 to more than 8,000.

Then came his crowning achievement: He was asked in 1990 to pastor First Baptist Church in Dallas. Only two men had pastored the church since 1897 - the Rev. George W. Truett and Criswell, both extraordinary orators and revered figures in Southern Baptist life.

First Baptist Church occupies five blocks of downtown Dallas. Claiming a membership of nearly 30,000, the church also oversees a thousand-student elementary and secondary school, a 300-student college, a 500-bed shelter, 30 mission congregations and a radio station.

In a city where money and power are taken for granted, Gregory writes, "The church is Dallas. Dallas is the church."

And it was a church that knew how to take care of its pastor, Gregory readily admits. Memberships in the city's most exclusive clubs, fine dining, and front-row seats to sporting events are just some of the many perquisites of being pastor of First Baptist.

So what went wrong?

Gregory said he was misled to believe that Criswell would relinquish his pastoral role in the church within a few months. But it quickly became clear that Criswell had no plans to retire, and there was no room for two pastors.

Using a football analogy, he said it was as if the new owner of the Cowboys would hire a head coach and at the same time keep the legendary Tom Landry as "senior coach."

"Leadership of any sort became impossible because of an incumbent who couldn't bring himself to leave," he said.

The root of the problem, Gregory says, is tied to the philosophy of the superchurch, where success in numbers and buildings is believed to be tied to God's blessings. In First Baptist's case, there was "almost a quasi-divination" of Criswell, Gregory said.

Criswell, who is celebrating his 50th anniversary as pastor of First Baptist this week, did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

But some church members have indicated Gregory's resignation was tied to his own overreaching ambition and ego that would leave no role for Criswell in the church he had devoted his life to building.

No promises were made to Gregory as to when Criswell would retire, they said. In fact, one church official said, a leading candidate who asked for assurances of Criswell's retirement date in writing was scratched off the search committee's list.

Jack Pogue, a church member and close friend of Criswell, said the senior pastor was a strong supporter of Gregory, and even agreed to move his offices out of the church and cut back his preaching schedule at Gregory's request.

Curtis Baker, a church deacon, said he thinks the reasons for Gregory's departure are more complicated than the former pastor has admitted.

"When you covet something, it's human nature to tend to believe what you want to believe," Baker said of Gregory.

What is undeniable in Gregory's saga is the lifestyle change of almost biblical proportions in his life. Since leaving First Baptist, he has divorced and remarried, and a year ago took a job to support himself as a "memorial estate counselor," selling cemetery plots door to door.

After living like a king for a decade, his travails of the past two years are teaching him a different kind of spirituality. Have enough doors closed in your face, and it doesn't take long to earn "a tremendous admiration" for people who have to struggle to make a living, Gregory said.

"For the first time in my life, at 46, I'm learning about serving God as a layman," Gregory said. "It gives me a different view of Christ and a different view of the real needs of human beings."

Bonnie Campbell, curator of the Texas Capitol, and Project Manager David Stauch review progress on the restoration of the Historic Treasurer's Business Office in the Texas Capitol. Funds raised through the Capitol Fund Drive will help finance restoration of historically significant places in the Capitol, as well as facilitate educational programming, funding for the Capitol Complex Visitors Center, grounds restoration and an endowment for future preservation. Wal-Mart company will hold a fundraiser for the Capitol Fund Drive on Oct. 1-8, with the company pledging $300,000 to the drive.

NEW YORK (AP) - Nobody gets the best of Sylvester Stallone. Not on film anyway.

Stallone plays a bomb expert who defuses a renegade ex-CIA agent played by James Woods in the "The Specialist," due out Oct. 7. But test audiences who saw an early cut said Sly's co-star made him look like a dud.

Woods' character "gets all the good jokes, all the good lines," film editor Jack Hofstra says in the Sept. 30 issue of Entertainment Weekly.

So the filmmakers reshotted one slugfest to show Stallone beating Woods, and added a scene where Stallone roughs up thugs who refuse to give their bus seat to a pregnant woman.

Director Luis Llosa says he made the changes because audiences expect to see Stallone beat the bad guy. "It wasn't to neutralize one character or enhance another."

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) - Someday, Bella Abzug promises, women won't need a room of their own.

"We won't have to have a Hall of Fame. Every woman's mirror in the home will be the Hall of Fame," said the former congresswoman who helped launch the National Women's Political Caucus and now runs the nonprofit Women USA Fund.

Abzug and 24 others were inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame Saturday, including 1984 vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro; Dr. Antonia Novello, the first woman and first Hispanic-American to serve as U.S. surgeon general; philanthropist Helen Hunt; talk show host Oprah Winfrey and Olympic champion Wilma Rudolph, who couldn't attend because she's seriously ill with cancer.

HJH Roundup

By Carolyn Waters

If you were asked to tell the Middle School Story while your listeners stood on one foot, you could simply say that it means a square deal for pupils of the awkward age!

Is it any wonder that HHS always has a great band? Just look where they get their start--sixth grade and in HJH! Didn't the seventh and eighth grade bands look and sound impressive Friday night? Good job, directors and band members!

The yearbook staff had a poster contest as they prepared for their yearbook sales campaign. First place winner is Amanda Perez; second place, April Whitehorn; and third place went to Rachel Valdovinos. These posters, along with the other entries, are displayed in HJH halls.

Junior Historians who are running for office have campaign speeches on Tuesday to encourage voters to elect them to office. The election, by secret ballot, will be held October 6th.

In addition to elections, the Junior Historians have several activities planned for the near future. These include installation of officers, a field trip, "Adopt-A-Building" program and making application to the Secretary of Defense to become a Commemorative Community School group to observe the anniversary of WW II. (More on this later).

A team of teachers from Friona visited our campus last week and a group from Fritch will be here next week. This is in conjunction with our being a Mentor School. Teams will be visiting us throughout the school year.

Each team has displays of student's work in the showcases in the front hall. As you enter the building for "before the game" dinners, to vote later in the fall, or just to visit, do take a few minutes to view this example of our student's abilities and interests.

Some of the Texas history classes are beginning a study of Texas government. This will include how the government works, the Bill of Rights and citizenship. Hands on activities will help to understand this phase of Texas history studies.

Maybe we should paraphrase the advice that Forrest Cump's mother gave him as we survey our students, or our children...Junior High students are like a box of chocolates...you never know what you'll get. Looks like our job will be to make them the best "chocolates" possible.

Breast cancer screening clinic planned Oct. 28

The Women's Center of the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center and High Plains Baptist Hospital will again conduct a Breast Cancer Screening Clinic at Hereford Regional Medical Center, 801 E. 3rd, Oct. 28 from 10 to 2:30 p.m.

Breast cancer affects one in nine women. The key to boosting your chances of winning the battle against cancer is early detection by having an annual breast exam, mammogram and performing breast self-exam each month.

Each participant at our screening will receive a breast exam and one-to-one instruction in breast self-examination by a registered nurse specially trained in breast cancer detection, and a mammogram by a mammography technician. Our mammography machine is certified by the American College of Radiology ensuring a quality film.

The American Cancer Society urges all women to have their first mammogram by age 40. Those who have a close relative with breast cancer or other risk factors may be asked by their doctor to have a mammogram at an earlier age.

The total cost of the screening is $70. Ask about funding that is available for free breast screenings.

Please call the Women's Center at Harrington Cancer Center at 1-800-377-HOPE (4673) or (806) 359-4673 today for more information or to schedule an appointment.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

Will autumn ever get here to stay for a while. I love these cooler nights, but I'm ready for cooler days, too. Personally, if the temp never gets above 80, it's OK with me. In Your Wildest Dreams is our feature Family Film for October. Coincidentally, our feature Family Film is a "Feature Film for Families" a company known for producing quality entertainment for...well, families. Show time is October 20 at 7 p.m.

October usually brings thoughts of Halloween, and with that comes thoughts of scary movies. Now, we here at the library are not really into promoting scary movies, but most of the horror flicks of the '50s and early '60s, while scary at the time, are laughable today. That's why, for our Halloween Specials, we like to show the old thrillers, that now look more like comedies. This year our special is Comedy of Terrors, a spoof of a lot of the old thrillers. The movie stars Vincent Price, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff and Basil Rathbone. The Halloween Special will be Thursday, October 27 at 7pm.

The really BIG item for October is the annual Book Sale, sponsored by the friends of the Library. The pre-sale (for members only) is on Friday evening, October 14, with the open sale the following day. We'll be telling you a little more about it next week.

And speaking of next week...we will be closed Saturday and Monday for Columbus Day.

Lots of folks have been asking for Sidney Sheldon's Nothing Lasts Forever and not it's here! If you have your name on the list, be expecting a call pretty soon. If not, better get it there.

We are beginning to put out Christmas craft books, now. This week Christmas Is Coming! 1994 and 1994 Christmas with Southern Living are being released. This is a good time to start on projects, so you're not too rushed when the season gets here (less than three months from now).

And now for a personal note...

You may have surmised that we don't actually read all of the books we review in this column. Frequently what you get is a distilled version of the jacket notes, if that. Sometimes it's because we're not interested in the book, but more often it's because there simply isn't time to get them read before you want them on the shelves. Sometimes, though, I read a book after it has been released. I rarely comment then, but I'm going to today.

The book, of course, details Campbell's hard times, both materially and spiritually, and his prosperity in both fields. I expected to find all of that, but the insight into the music that I cut my teeth on was revealing and saddening, and I thought it might spark some interest in other who may be uninterested in the rest of what Campbell says.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Jon Voight has retracted his allegations that a former business associate refused to finance a film venture because he wouldn't have sex with her.

Voight's change of heart, announced Tuesday, should end a yearlong legal squabble between Voight and Laura Pels, who were partners in a movie production company.

The battle began when Pels sued Voight for embezzlement. Voight then sued Pels for breach of contract, saying she backed out of a multimillion-dollar deal. Pels denied the allegations and sued Voight for libel.

Pels' attorney would not elaborate on the settlement, but said he expected it to be approved by a federal judge this week. Voight's attorney did not return a message.

Extension News

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Many Americans would love to cut the fat in their diets, but need a little more help than others.

Researchers are now investigating how long it takes for people to adjust to eating foods that are lower in fat. It seems that preference for high-fat foods is learned in childhood. Researchers want to know if people are capable of unlearning this habit as in the case with salty foods.

Studies show that it takes one or two months for a person to adjust to eating less salt. In the beginning, the person misses the salty taste of food and thinks that the food tastes "too bland." However, after a period of weeks, the individual will begin to prefer this "blander" taste of food, and will find that salted foods are too salty.

Some believe that it might take as long as three months for an individual to adapt to a lower fat intake. This is a fairly long time, and it may mean that some people will need to be patient and persistent in their attempts to become accustomed to eating less fat.

High school juniors whose families belong to Community Concerts are eligible to join Concert Teens.

Young women interested in becoming a part of the service group are encouraged to call Susan Perrin, 289-5965, or Pat Fisher, 364-0294.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS Don Taylor

QUALITY IS TIMELESS

It was a sight that gladdened this old farm boy's heart. The sun was a bright red ball slowly sinking into the western Kansas horizon. The tractor was a vintage John Deere, and it was crawling slowly across the field with a chisel plow in tow. I stopped the car on the wide shoulder, and stepped out to enjoy the scene.

I listened intently to the distinctive sound the tractor made. There is no sound like it. Anyone who has ever spent even a few hours on a two-cylinder John Deere will never confuse its exhaust rhythm with any other tractor.

The driver was a seasoned farmer with a sun-lined face and a friendly smile. He waved as he neared my end of the field. I waved back. He expertly turned the rig and headed back the other way. As he sank the plow back into the soil, I heard the governor open as the engine surged to find equilibrium with the load. The smell of the freshly turned earth took me back about 30 years.

As the sun disappeared, I got back into the car. I savored the quality experience and tucked it in my memory. For a moment I returned to my roots.

I took note of the farmer's fence as I pulled back onto the highway. The fence row was clean, the posts were straight and the barbed wire was tight.

I also noticed that the line the plow was drawing across the field was straight and true. The tractor, though nearly 50 years old, was obviously well-maintained and still working flawlessly. Everything I saw indicated quality.

If you can judge a man by the quality of his work, I'd guess that Kansas farmer is a loving husband, father and grandfather. I'll bet he lives in a comfortable, but unpretentious house. I'd guess his children are hardworking and well-educated. I'm sure it brings him satisfaction to know that the wheat he raised helps feed dozens of other families.

As I drove into the darkening night, I realized that I'd discovered another quality theory. Suddenly, I knew how the Japanese discovered quality.

How the Japanese learned

Many presume that it was W. Edwards Deming who taught the Japanese all about quality. I propose that the Japanese had already learned many quality lessons prior to Deming's efforts.

Afforded, Deming taught the Japanese all about statistical process control. However, the Japanese had already discovered this key quality principle: If you want to be the best, you study the best.

The Japanese studied America. They observed our way of life - our culture. They experienced our steel making, car building, electronics production and chemical processing. They learned about quality from the greatest country in the world.

Absolute proof

You want evidence to support my theory? Here it is. Who makes better film than Eastman Kodak? Who builds better tractors than John Deere and Case IH? Who sews better jeans than Levi Strauss? Who makes better heating controls than Honeywell?

Still not convinced? Consider these products and services: Locomotives by General Motors, aluminum foil by Reynolds Metals, copper by Asarco, movies and theme parks by Walt Disney, soft drinks by Coca-Cola, supercomputers by Cray, Teflon by DuPont, pianos by Steinway and Sons, washers by Maytag, Post-it notes by 3-M, computer chips by Intel, crystal by Steuben Glass, and copiers by Xerox. There are scores of other examples.

Yes, in America we have quality all the way back to our roots. Think about that the next time you see a working antique tractor, sit in a 100-year-old rocking chair or read a vintage book. Quality is timeless.

Make your own salsa preserves

By The Associated Press

If your garden or local farm stand is bright red with a plentitude of ripe tomatoes, here's a spicy idea: Make your own salsa preserves. It's a simple combination of tomatoes, sweet bell peppers, lime juice and sugar, flavored with cumin and ground red pepper. Serve the salsa with chips, on toast or as a topping for burgers.

Spicy Salsa Preserves

3 pounds tomatoes, peeled and coarsely chopped (about 7 cups)
2 cups sugar
1-1/2 cups chopped green bell peppers

1/2 cup fresh lime juice
1 teaspoon grated lime peel
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon ground red pepper
Combine all ingredients in a large saucepan. Bring to a boil; reduce heat to medium. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally until thickened, about 1-1/4 hours. Refrigerate in a covered container up to 2 months, or ladle into canning jars and process according to manufacturer's directions. Makes 3-1/2 cups.

Note: To test for thickness, spoon about 1 tablespoon of the mixture in a cup; place in the freezer for 5 minutes. The mixture should be the consistency of jam. If not, cook longer and repeat test.

Public invited to hear 'Taste of Broadway'

"A Taste of Broadway," a choral musical tribute to Broadway musicals, will be presented by the Hereford Chamber Singers at 7 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 8, and at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 9, in the Hereford Senior Center auditorium.

In addition to a delightful musical treat, there will be a taste of delicious dessert served to the audience during the intermission. Charge of admission will be $5 for adults and $2 for children 12 years of age and under.

This October marks the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Chamber Singers who have made a name for themselves globally. Begun in 1974 by community adults who love to sing for enjoyment and for the pleasure of others, the group has presented varieties of programs for Hereford and the surrounding area. They have entertained local audiences with two or three annual concerts ever since their founding. Smaller groups and clubs have also enjoyed their choral renditions for these past 20 years.

Bill Devers, the original director of the group, is directing the music for this concert, and Dee Anne Trotter is the piano accompanist. Katie Claypool, Linda Gilbert, and Mrs. Trotter serve presently as the music committee. Bobby Boyd is the current president of the board of directors.

Selections from well-known, favorite Broadway musicals will be sung by the group in four medley arrangements. They include numbers from Lerner's and Lowe's "Camelot," "My Fair Lady," and "Paint Your Wagon;" favorites from Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Jesus Christ Superstar," "Cats," "Evita," and others; songs from Bernstein's "West Side Story;" and selections from Rogers' and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma," "The King and I," "Carousel," "South Pacific," and "The Sound of Music."

Featured on the program will also be solo and ensemble selections by members of the choir. Among those who will perform are Suzan Schriber singing "Climb Every Mountain," Duffy McBrayer singing "Bring Him Home," Gene Streun singing "Oh What A Beautiful Morning," Bera and Bobby Boyd singing "One," Linda Gilbert and Jan Walser playing a piano duet of "Tonight," and a ladies ensemble singing "My Favorite Things."

This concert is sure to have many favorite songs from well-loved musicals familiar to all members of the family and will be a good time of entertainment.

New activities are suggested at meeting

The Hereford Regional Medical Center Auxiliary met recently for a luncheon meeting at the hospital.

The group welcomed Sylvia Khuri who suggested some new activities which the members might conduct for the aid of the in-hospital patients and their visitors. A magazine cart was also suggested. Also, discussed was the disbursement of funds for sprucing up some areas of the hospital including the waiting room in the OB area.

Khuri presented auxiliary members with coffee mugs.

Margarette Daniels called the meeting to order and Theda Seiver led the prayer. Nell Culpepper read the minutes of the previous meeting and Lupe Cerdá corrected the balance of the treasurer's report in the minutes.

Under old business, a discussion took place concerning the hours to be counted in the volunteer efforts.

It was announced that a jewelry sale will be held Oct. 28 at the hospital. It will be conducted by auxiliary members. It was also noted that the new hospital administrator will be asked to speak about the hospital's future plans during the next auxiliary meeting.

Bonnie Sublett gave the current treasurer's report and it was announced that 134 hours had been volunteered in August.

Grace Covington accounted for 24 baby books which had been distributed in August.

Members attending were Elizabeth Fowler, Lupe Cerdá, Margarette Daniels, Nell Culpepper, Irene Reinart, Baxter London, Bonnie Sublett, Jo Lee, Theda Seiver and Mary Jane Burris.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Help! What do you pour on the cracks between concrete or bricks so the grass and weeds don't grow? — Fran, Chester, N.Y.

Plain old table salt should do the trick. It's cheap, safe to have around the house and environmentally friendly. Just sprinkle it in the cracks and it should kill everything it comes in contact with.

Be sure not to get it near flowers and grass you wish to keep or it will kill them also. — Heloise

REMODELING HINT

Dear Heloise: When we had our kitchen remodeled, we bought 1-foot-square self-adhesive floor tiles and used them to line all the shelves and drawers.

They are easy to cut and fit, easy to clean, and still look like new 20 years later. They are much more serviceable than shelf paper and easier to fit precisely.

Measure and cut to fit before removing the protective sheet on the adhesive. Then remove the protective sheet and slip the tile into place. Presto! A perfect fit. — Gordon Walker, Anaheim, Calif.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Dear Heloise: I rinsed out an empty 4-ounce glass jar for recycling. It fell into the disposal, bottom up. Fortunately, the motor was not running.

I could not get my hands into the disposal far enough to pull it out and went to my husband with the problem. He asked for a suction cup. I had one with a small hook on it, dried it off thoroughly and stuck it to the glass. With the help of the hook to grasp, it was out. — Helen and Dan Page, Kihei, Hawaii

ADDITIONAL SPACE

Dear Heloise: Most of us, due to the time and expense, probably never have that much-needed additional room or work area added to our homes.

With just a little careful rearranging of a few items, such as furniture and wall decorations, with perhaps the correct placement of a small carpet section or throw rug, it can become quite easy, as well as inexpensive, to create a small den or reading area, play area or sewing niche in a little-used nook or corner of a room.

Many home-decorating magazines and books can help provide many quick, easy and inexpensive design ideas to help you get the most out of every room and space in your home. — Wilma Wesley Dye, Logan County, Ohio

You are so right! One of my favorite nooks was created in a corner with a big, comfy chair, an ottoman for my feet (and to hide my sewing box), a small table for my books and a good reading lamp. Give a good look around for spaces you can use. — Heloise

Under Suspicion brings 'noir' to prime-time TV

Karen Sillas portrays Rose "Phil" Phillips, a female detective who's trying to make a name for herself and survive the pressures of working in an all-male squad, in Under Suspicion. The stylish mystery series airs Fridays on CBS.

BY JOHN CROOK

A policewoman in the Pacific Northwest tries to walk a fine line between professional and personal concerns in Under Suspicion, a stylish mystery series airing Fridays on CBS.

The series focuses on Rose "Phil" Phillips (stunning newcomer Karen Sillas), the only female detective in the squad room where much of the action is set. In the series opener, her partner and best friend, Frank Fusco (guest star Peter Onorati from Civil Wars), inexplicably disappears. In trying to solve this case, Phil finds herself increasingly drawn into the lives of Frank's family.

Meanwhile, the local police chief (Ray Baker) appoints Phil to be the department's new women's coordinator for handling grievances from female staff members — driving still another wedge between Phil and her male colleagues.

Comparisons are, perhaps, inevitable between Under Suspicion and the critically acclaimed Prime Suspect, the PBS series of movies starring Helen Mirren as a strong, intelligent chief of detectives in England. Suspicion executive producers Jacqueline Zambrano and Robert Lieberman acknowledge the similarities but insist their show stands alone.

"I think when I saw Prime Suspect I was very affected by it. There have been other shows that have had women stars, but I felt that often those shows really went out of their way to make a woman likable, much more than show who she really was," Zambrano says. "And a lot of women in television to me seem like they're either liked by men or women. They'll say, 'It's a women's show' or 'It's a men's show.'"

"For me, I think that Prime Suspect was a real inspiration. At the same time, I felt that that show could not be taken and 'plopped down' and have it be as successful to such a large audience," she says, "because in Prime Suspect they basically hate her just because she's a woman, and I just don't think that flies here."

"Prime Suspect portrayed a specific woman with a great deal of intelligence," Lieberman says. "It put her in a man's world, and I think we respected that a great deal. That's, I think, where the similarities start and end. In terms of the presentation of Prime Suspect, I think its presentation is much more British and a bit more staid than we're used to in prime-time domestic television here."

Filmed in Portland, Under Suspicion gets much of its juice from the stylish "film noir" genre in which most scenes are shot.

"One of the problems I had with Prime Suspect is that I felt it, visually, wasn't all that engaging," Lieberman says. "It was very flat-lit to me. It just looked like very mundane footage. So for the American audience, we deemed it necessary to come up with something (striking)."

Even more important to the series is the mesmerizing performance by Sillas, a charismatic Jessica Lange look-a-like who automatically goes to the top of next year's probable Emmy nominees list. Zambrano says she had despaired of casting the challenging role of Phil until CBS casting chief Lisa Freiberger attended the Sundance Film Festival and saw Sillas' acclaimed performance in the independent film What Happened Was.

"She came in and read for us," Zambrano says. "And we talked for a few minutes, then we showed her outside. Then we said 'She's fantastic.'"

LET'S TALK

Full House returns this fall;
Gump's Sinise was in The Stand

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: I work for a sheriff's department in Oregon and I collect law enforcement stuff. One of my favorite shows is In the Heat of the Night with Carroll O'Connor. I am hoping he will be able to send me a picture of himself and everyone else in uniform and a Sparta Police patch (both new and old) and, now that he plays the sheriff, a patch from that department. I wouldn't mind even getting the badge and name tag from his show. —Jerry Silver, Multnomah County, Ore.

A: As you may not have heard, Heat will be on this year only as three or four TV movies. I have no idea what your chances are for getting all these props, but try writing to O'Connor C/O the show at MGM Worldwide TV, MGM Plaza, 2500 Broadway St., Santa Monica, Calif. 90404-3061.

Q: I am a big fan of Emilio Estevez. Could you please give me an address to write to him? —Christina Evans, Kingsville, Ohio.

A: Relax, Christina. Full House returns for its eighth season this fall.

Q: Can you please tell me where I have seen Gary Sinise from Forrest Gump before? —Eliissa Gilmer, Avella, Pa.

A: I can only guess that you were among the gazillions who saw Sinise in the lead role of Stephen King's The Stand on TV last spring.

Q: I am a big fan of Jose Canseco,

ABC's Blue Skies needs more wind under its wings to soar

BY AMY HIBBERT

Take two male business partners, mix with one female accountant and give it a half-hour to create conflict. The result: Blue Skies, a new ABC sitcom airing Mondays.

The love triangle is definitely not a new idea, but with the right actors, new twists and good humor, it can be successful.

"In Blue Skies, the woman coming on board with the two guys is really a catalyst to explore how three people become friends and run this business, and how it affects a partnership and a friendship," says Judd Pillot, co-executive producer for the show.

Russell Evans, played by Matt Roth (Roseanne), is the calm charmer and marketing expert of the two.

His partner, Joel Goodman, played by Corey Parker (Biloxi Blues), is the creative and excitable part of the team.

The two men are partners in a back-to-nature catalogue business called Blue Skies. This concept, along with the set for the show, seems to have been heavily influenced by an L.L. Bean catalogue.

Both the fledgling trading company and the partners' friendship are tested by the arrival of Ellie Baskin, played by Julia Campbell of Herman's Head.

Ellie is an attractive Harvard MBA who is hired to straighten out the books after the previous accountant steals from the company.

Ellie's ideas earn Joel and Russell's trust, and after some persuading, the men agree to make her a partner. The three embark on a mission to push Blue Skies to the major leagues.

"We use their attraction to her as a way for them to bring her in as a partner, because we wanted the three of them to be equals," says John Peaslee, co-executive producer.

With Ellie having an equal voice in business decisions, there is an opportunity for more conflict and humor.

This is not an original story and the conflicts have been dealt with over and over again.

Yet, while the story is old, the humor is fresh. But it's sparse and may not be enough to carry the show.

One can only hope that creative story lines will develop to give this show the boost it needs to be a success.

Pssst: Murmurs from CBS' fall lineup include the possible replacement of Touched by an Angel with the return of Christy, starring Kelie Martin, in time for a two-hour Thanksgiving episode already being filmed in the Smoky Mountains of Tennessee.

Also, producer Diane English's Double Rush, starring Robert Pastorelli (Murphy Brown) as the owner of a bicycle delivery service in New York, is primed to join the CBS lineup on the double as soon as another half-hour series falters.

And Northern Exposure's Rob Morrow, who has never seemed much happier in Cicely, Alaska, than his character, is rumored to be restive. But with a contract that runs through July 1995, he's definitely on the set this fall, says CBS spokeswoman Brooks Cantini. But she doesn't say how many episodes Morrow may be written out of.

Gary Coleman (Diff'rent Strokes) may be returning to television in a series titled Looking Up. The show, currently in development, is to be set in a British actor Anthony Hopkins turned lion tracker for an episode of PBS' Nature to air this Sunday, Oct. 2 (check local listings).

After a close encounter on Tanzania's Serengeti plain, Hopkins said getting to know a lioness was "like looking, touching and admiring the fast and powerful car one has always dreamt of owning. Everything about her is supercharged."

Alan Alda has traded wisecracking Army doctor Hawkeye Pierce of *M*A*S*H* for a role as himself when he serves as host of PBS' monthly series Scientific American Frontiers.

Asked recently to comment on the changes in commercial television, Alda quipped, "I don't have any thoughts on the current state of network TV ... why should I if they don't?"

SOAP WORLD

Williams returns to daytime fold

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Dear Candace: I was so excited to see that Darnell Williams is back on the soaps. I have really missed him. I used to watch him on All My Children years ago and have often wondered what he did after leaving the show.

He and Debbie Morgan, who played Angie, were my all-time favorite soap opera couple. I actually cried the day his character was killed. Could you please tell me any information you might have on him? -Judy in Missouri.

Dear Reader: Darnell Williams recently joined As The World Turns in the role of journalist Jack Durban.

The character is someone out of Shannon's past, and producers say he will play an important part in the Jessica/Duncan/Shannon story line.

Fans were surprised when Williams made a guest appearance as Jesse on AMC. When Tad was severely injured in the Pine Valley tornado, Jesse was one of the people who helped to convince Tad (Michael E. Knight) that he needed to continue living. It was ironic that the show aired only weeks before Williams' first airdate on ATWT.

You are not the only one who is excited that Williams has returned to daytime. Tamara Tunie, who plays Jessica on ATWT, says she used to watch him on AMC and he was always one of her favorites. They later became friends, and she is excited about working with him on a daily basis.

Williams won two Emmy Awards for his portrayal of Jesse Hubbard on All My Children.

During his time away from daytime, Williams was featured in two movies of the week, Boy Meets Girl and Stompin' at the Savoy.

His other television credits include guest spots on In the Heat of the Night, True Blue, Hunter, Rich Man, Poor Man, Reasonable Doubts, The Trials of Rosie O'Neill and Gideon Oliver.

Williams' film credits include Short Cuts (directed by Robert Altman), True Identity, Sidewalk Stories and How U Like Me Now. He appeared on Broadway in Checkmates and Angels in America.

STAR NOTES

Ford, Levees were Hollywood odd couple

BY JOHN CROOK

Faith Ford of Murphy Brown and Jane Levees of Frasier are two of the most beautiful actresses working in television today.

But things sometimes got pretty ugly when the duo, best friends in real life, lived together for several years. There was the cat thing, for instance.

"I would talk to her cats," Ford laughs. "I drove 'em crazy, actually. I would, you know, 'MRAOW, MRAOW,' really loud, you know, like cats in heat do? It would drive Jane batty. Eventually she would storm in and scream, 'Faith, stop it!'" (this delivered in an uncanny duplication of Levees' elegant British accent).

The twosome became friends when they met in acting class several years before either really had a major success. Although Ford is married now, she and Levees remain close.

"We live, like, 10 blocks from each other, which is really great," Ford says. "Whenever we have anything to go to, we're always exchanging clothes. For the most part we're the same size, even the shoes. It saves a lot of money, because we're always having things to go to. I was so happy to hear she got Frasier for that reason alone. Now she has money to buy clothes, too. So if I don't feel like spending whatever on a new outfit to wear to some function, I'll just go over and see what Jane has."

TRIVIA

To keep up with her still-heavy touring schedule, singer Martha Reeves employs two sets of singing Vandellas.
