Rewrite of lobbying laws on in Congress

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is headed toward a major rewrite of lobbying laws that includes a virtual ban on meals, entertainment, travel and other gifts to lawmakers. But its most cherished reform goal, changes in campaign finance laws, is in serious jeopardy.

On Thursday, the House voted after an acrimonious debate to shut down one of Washington's oldest, and most caricatured, institutions: the high-priced lobbyist lunch.

The ban on meals and other gifts for lawmakers was part of a revamping of federal laws covering how lobbyists register and report their activities, the first overhaul in half a century.

"This bill says no to the freebie-seeking members of the House of Representatives ... a small minority of this House that create a bad impression for the rest of us," said Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, the measure's primary sponsor.

President Clinton, who had made the bill a priority on his reform agenda, called it "a major step toward changing the culture of the capital."

But the lobbying measure appeared to be the only major survivor on a list of changes that had led hopeful Democrats to label this two-year session "the reform Congress."

The showcase issue on the list - reform of the financing of political campaigns - was delayed for a year by a dispute between House and Senate Democrats over how much political action committees should be permitted to give candidates, then beset by a Senate Republican filibuster.

A make-or-break vote on the campaign finance reform bill was scheduled for today, with Democrats still short of the 60 votes they needed to overcome GOP delay tactics. Opposition leader Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said: "I'm very confident we're going to win."

Earlier in the week, Democrats had resolved their internal debate by setting the PAC giving limit at $6,000 per election cycle.

Other provisions in the bill would establish a system of voluntary spending limits and reward candidates who abide by them with cut-rate TV time, reduced mailing rates and federal matching money.

The bill was intended to limit the increasing amounts of special-interest money flowing into political campaigns and ease public fears that Congress is more responsive to wealthy lobbying groups than to its constituents.

The House approved the lobby reform bill on a vote of 306-112 and sent it to the Senate, where sponsor Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said he was unaware of major opposition.

But the vote belied the difficulty of steering the bill to passage. The measure barely survived an earlier procedural vote, 216-205, after an attack led by Republicans.

In approving the reform bill,

Ferry's bow door reported gone before fatal accident

By FRANK BAJAK
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - The bow door was missing on the ferry Estonia before it sank in the Baltic Sea, the head of Sweden's maritime safety division said today.

Bengt Erik Stenmark told a news conference that two witnesses on board reported the door was gone, presumably ripped off Wednesday by the raging storm. As a result, water quickly poured into the vessel and caused it to sink.

More than 900 died in the disaster, Scandinavia's worst maritime accident.

Stenmark called the damage to the bow door the "main cause" of the accident.

Investigators will now have to determine why the door flew off the 14-year-old ferry. A crew member has already said he watched water pouring into the ship at the door.

Stenmark said there was also a witness who watched water quickly build up to 12 inches to 20 inches in the car deck.

"In such a situation, everything is already lost," Stenmark said.

Shaken by reports of safety problems that emerged after Wednesday's disaster, Swedish investigators fanned out to popular passenger ferries today to have a look at bow doors and other ship features.

On Thursday, Stenmark said shipping companies had called to report earlier incidents in which bow gates came loose or didn't close properly, letting water onto vehicle decks. Cars and trucks are loaded on or off ferries through bow doors.

In the worst case, Stenmark said without specifics, a ship was saved only through a very intelligent maneuver by its captain that got the water out.

A leaking bow door is suspected of letting water rush into the hold of the ferry Estonia off southwestern Finland early Wednesday, causing it to capsize and sink within half an hour.

The death toll on Thursday stood at 909, with 140 rescued. Search teams were still picking up bodies bobbing up from the wreck. There were conflicting reports on how many people had been aboard the 515-foot ship, which flew the Estonian flag.

Salvage crews were hoping for calmer Baltic Sea waters today so they could find the six-deck ship with sonar. They then plan to send a camera-equipped robot into the hull, primarily to try to determine the accident's cause.

Ferry traffic is a lifeline in seafaring Scandinavia and for the newly independent Baltic states, so the disaster Wednesday came as a profound shock to the hundreds of thousands who ride ferries regularly.

Stenmark, the maritime safety director, said the catastrophe might have been avoided "if the ship owners had followed the law and reported earlier close calls."

He sent inspectors out immediately to check all Sweden's so-called roll-on, roll-off ferries and said he was considering new restrictions that would bar ferries from sailing in heavy weather without closer inspection.

Stenmark said today that he was ready to keep ships in port if inspectors find problems with the cargo doors.

Inspectors reached some ships late Thursday night in Stockholm and headed to others today. Swedish news media were predicting possible delays on the crowded runs to Finland, which are popular with foreign tourists.

Finnish authorities said they, too, would inspect all ferries that fly their flag, focusing on "cargo doors, front and back, and alarm and monitoring systems."

A ship's engineer who survived the Estonia's sinking said water began pouring through its bow door about a half hour before the ferry went down in stormy seas.

More than 30 ferries of similar construction use Swedish ports. Such ships came into service after World War II and daily ply the waters of northern Europe by the dozens.

Their design has been called into question after recent disasters, especially the 1987 sinking of the British ferry Herald of Free Enterprise that killed nearly 200 people. That ship's bow doors were left open as it departed the Belgian port of Zeebrugge.

The main complaint about such roll-on, roll-off ferries is that once even a relatively small amount of water gets in, the vessel becomes unstable.

And if the cargo - as in the Estonia's case - breaks loose and shifts, the boat can easily sink. News reports Thursday said the Estonia's crew only strapped trucks on the cargo deck "when necessary."

News flash! Elvis is still dead!

By WOODY BAIRD

Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Elvis is still dead. The cause is still heart disease.

The Tennessee health department announced Thursday that it found no evidence of lying on Elvis Presley's death certificate. But even that probably won't satisfy suspicious minds, said the coroner who presided over Presley's autopsy in 1977.

"We haven't buried John F. Kennedy yet. Haven't buried Martin Luther King. Why should we bury Elvis?" said medical examiner Jerry Francisco.

State officials said they found no reason to dispute Francisco's conclusion that the king of rock 'n' roll died of heart disease.

The state's 1-1/2-page statement made no mention of drugs and did not say whether heart disease was the best diagnosis. It just said there was no evidence that Francisco lied.

The state refused to release its full report, citing confidentiality laws.

"I thought I was right then. I think I'm right now," said Francisco, the chief medical examiner for Memphis and Shelby County.

There has long been speculation that Presley's death at age 42 was caused, or at least hastened, by his abuse of prescription drugs.

His former personal physician was acquitted in 1981 of charges he prescribed too many drugs for Presley and other patients. Testimony at the doctor's trial said traces of a dozen drugs, including depressants, were found in Presley's body.

The record review, which involved only material available at the time of Presley's death, was conducted for the state by Joseph Davis, chief medical examiner for Dade County, Fla.

Davis declined to discuss his findings.

Presley's full autopsy report has never been made public. Authorities say it is the property of Presley's family, which requested the autopsy.

The review of Presley's medical records was requested by the Shelby County Commission, which wanted to determine if Francisco's ruling was part of a coverup of Presley's drug abuse.

Vasco Smith, a recently retired county commissioner and longtime critic of Francisco, led the push for the review, saying it might call into question other rulings by the medical examiner. Calls to Smith's office after the state released its statement were not returned.

Libertarians say GOP, Democrats don't leave time, space for them

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's campaign criticized Richard Fisher, George W. Bush's business associates chastised Gov. Ann Richards, and the GOP's David Hartman blasted state Treasurer Martha Whitehead.

Meanwhile, the Libertarian Party complained Thursday that it can't get a word in edgewise between the two major political parties.

Libertarians said their candidate for U.S. Senate, Pierre Blondeau, should be allowed to participate in a televised debate.

"The Libertarian Party is on the ballot in Texas," said Gary E. Johnson, party press secretary. "Pierre Blondeau is a serious, bona fide candidate for U.S. senator. There is no valid excuse to exclude him."

The debate between Mrs. Hutchison and Fisher is at 6 p.m. Sunday on C-SPAN.

Officials of the organizing League of Women Voters said Blondeau doesn't meet their debate criteria because he wasn't nominated in a primary election.

Johnson, however, said Libertarians offer an alternative to Republicans and Democrats and should be heard.

In other political developments:

- Hutchinson spokesman David Beckwith said Fisher broke his promise not to accept political action committee contributions by receiving a donation from the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, which is funded in part by PAC donations.

On another front in the war over campaign contributions, Fisher, campaigning at a pharmacy in Dallas, criticized Mrs. Hutchinson for taking more than $50,000 from the pharmaceutical industry and voting for a tax loophole that benefited drug companies in Puerto Rico.

- Several business associates of Bush, the GOP candidate for governor, criticized a commercial by Gov. Richards that says Bush is a business failure.

The Richards' campaign has cited several companies that lost more than $371 million while Bush was affiliated with them.

The chiefs of two of those companies - Tom Brown Inc., a Midland oil and gas company, and Caterair International, a Maryland airline caterer - said their businesses shouldn't become part of the campaign.

Caterair's problems were caused by losses in the airline industry, said Daniel J. Altobello, the company's board chairman and president. "We've always heard that Texas politics are nasty but this sets a new low-water mark," he said.

Donald Evans of Midland, board chairman of Tom Brown Inc., said his company is a success story.

Legislature to decide on paying judgment to former DHS worker

AUSTIN (AP) - A government whistleblower has lost an effort to have the Texas Supreme Court order the state comptroller to pay him a multimillion-dollar court judgment.

George Green, who was fired from the Department of Human Services in 1989, went to the Supreme Court after he was unable to secure state payment of $13.6 million he won in a lawsuit under the Texas Whistleblower Act. The act gives safeguards to government employees who report wrongdoing.

But the state's highest civil court, without a written opinion, on Thursday denied Green's motion that the court force the state comptroller to pay him.

State Attorney General Dan Morales' office says the Legislature, which doesn't meet until January, must approve the expenditure before Green gets the money.

The head of the budget-writing House Appropriations Committee, state Rep. Robert Junell, said after Thursday's ruling that while he thinks Green deserves some money, he was awarded too much.

DHS investigated him, finding a questionable 13-cent long-distance call on his state bill and accusing him of missing a physical therapy session when on sick leave, according to court documents.

He was fired by the agency in 1989 and later indicted, records show, but the charges were dismissed.

Green, meanwhile, won his civil lawsuit against the state.

Suzy Woodford, executive director of the government watchdog group Common Cause, said lawmakers shouldn't set themselves up as a "super-jury" to overrule a court decision.

"It's a dark day for employees who might have been considering blowing the whistle on waste, fraud and abuse that is costing the taxpayers a lot more than what George Green was awarded," she said.

State Sen. John Montford, head of the Senate Finance Committee, said he disagrees with the whistleblower law's damage provisions. But he said, "If we're going to authorize a statute and then not stand behind it, I think that's conduct unbecoming to the legislative body."

Montford, D-Lubbock, said he'd like to see the state try to reach a settlement with Green.

"Obviously, if we can save some money, we need to. But I think we're going to have stand good for this thing at some point," said Montford, expressing concern about the interest accruing on the award.

Green said in court documents that "the final judgment is a debt which is required by law to be paid by the state of Texas from the Treasury."

He said that Comptroller John Sharp's "refusal to issue a warrant to pay this money is a violation of his duty as comptroller of public accounts."

The state responded, "Upon advice of legal counsel, Comptroller Sharp determined there is no legal authority to pay this judgment."

CENTRAL CHURCH OF CHRIST

Fall is in the air. The sounds of the band marching on the field and helmets knocking together make us smile with joy. This is a great time of the year. It is also a busy time. There are many demands on our time. We need to be there and children need to be here. We meet ourselves coming and going. I want to scream time out. I thank God that he set a time for us to take a time out for the hustle and bustle of life. It's called worship.

Come join us at the Central Church of Christ as we slow down to worship God. We meet for Bible study Sunday at 9:30 a.m. and worship at 10:25 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Don't forget the after game fellowships at the Bailey's for the teens and at the Jackson's for the adults.

The elders honored the Bible class teachers with a meal prepared by them. Believe it or not, it was great!

Sunday, we will begin a series of lessons entitled "The Church of Christ, Who Are These People?"

Watch for the "Amazing Grace Bible Class" Sunday at 7:30 a.m. on Channel 4.

Too Many People Suffer Back Problems

Back problems are the most commonly suffered maladies in our society and there is a reason! Modern society has become highly complex, not only in the workplace, but in every area of the human environment. Technological changes and their effects on the human being have created new stresses, many of them related to body and structure. At its best, this results in discomfort, dissatisfaction and limited performance; at its worst, it results in serious health problems. You can do something about that back problem. The doctor of chiropractic is a physician who considers the human as an integrated being, but gives special attention to spinal mechanics and neurological, muscular and vascular relationships.

October is Spinal Health Month. Take care of your Back!

Redskins' Coleman takes leadership job seriously

By JONATHAN MOORE
Associated Press Writer

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) - Monte Coleman takes his role as a leader seriously, and that includes his job of educating younger players about the importance of the Dallas-Washington rivalry.

"There's a lot of guys here don't know about the rivalry between the Cowboys and the Redskins," the linebacker said. "But we as veterans that's been through it, been through the battles, that's won games against them, that's lost games against them, that's seen the stadium literally rock because the Cowboys were coming - we're going to be talking about that. It's going to be up to us to explain to them that this is a very, very big football game."

When Washington takes the field at RFK Stadium in its 68th game against the Cowboys, Coleman will tie Art Monk's team record for most games played, 205.

"My wife's excited, she's really excited," Coleman said. "I think family members are more excited for us about statistics than we are as players. They remind me every now and again that the record is actually going to be broken the game against Philly (Oct. 9)."

Coleman was drafted by the Redskins in 1979, an 11th-round pick from Central Arkansas. In that year, rookie quarterback Heath Shuler - who starts his first game Sunday - was 6.

"Just playing 16 years, I guess, is amazing," Coleman said. "Not on my behalf, but just hearing from the other guys in the locker room. You tell them how many years you played, they just look at you with their mouth kind of open. For me it's gone real fast. It doesn't even feel like 16 years."

At 36, Coleman broke quarterback Sammy Baugh's record, set in 1952, for longest tenure with the team.

Coleman thinks he's as much into the rivalry as the fans are, "probably more. I'm on the field playing against them," he said. But then again, he remembers what RFK was like Jan.

22, 1982, when the Redskins defeated the Cowboys 31-17 for the NFC championship.

"I was just amazed. I mean I'm sitting here, I'm watching it. You talk about stadiums rocking, I mean, the stands were actually moving. I just got chill bumps, I'm probably getting them now just thinking about it. It was unreal."

Last year, he had 82 tackles and six sacks, his second-best season for sacks; in 1984 he had 10.5. His biggest game last year was Dec. 19 against Atlanta, with 15 tackles, a 29-yard fumble recovery touchdown, two sacks, one interception and one forced fumble.

Coach Norv Turner likes to talk about Coleman's longevity as pointing the way for younger players.

"The biggest thing about this week is Monte Coleman's situation," Turner said. "It's phenomenal what he's done and there are not that many guys that can accomplish what he's accomplished and play at a high level for that long a period of time."

Coleman knows what that responsibility entails.

"You try to lead by experience or by work ethics, and mine is no different than any other player," he said. "I try to go out on the field, I try to hustle when I have to. I try to learn my stuff I need to learn. There's some cheerleading, that's a part of it too, because a lot of things that they're going through you've been through it before. And you can share things with them."

Coleman never expected to hang on so long. It just kind of crept up on him.

"I really hadn't thought about it much," he said. "There's other things that are more important right now ... getting on a winning roll."

He has no plans to retire after this season.

"The guy himself is a special guy, and I have tons of respect for him," fellow linebacker Ken Harvey said. "I asked him one time about this, and I don't think it was so much the numbers, but he just really enjoys playing the game."

Shulas to face each other for first time in Cincinnati

By The Associated Press

There's no doubt which team Don Shula will be rooting for Sunday night. Same goes for David Shula.

The Shula daughters, though, are caught in the middle. Who will they be cheering for in the first father-son coaching matchup in major league sports history?

"All three have dropped subtle hints: 'Dad, I hope you understand, we're going to be pulling for Dave,'" Don Shula said. "And I understand."

Don's Miami Dolphins (3-1) may not need the win as much as Dave's Cincinnati Bengals (1-3). That helps explain which side the daughters will be on at Riverfront Stadium.

"They're sitting in seats I'm giving them, so they'd better be pulling for us," Dave said.

In other games Sunday, it will be Dallas at Washington; Detroit at Tampa Bay; Green Bay at New England; the New York Jets at Cleveland; Seattle at Indianapolis; Atlanta at the Los Angeles Rams; Buffalo at Chicago; Minnesota at Arizona; the New York Giants at New Orleans; and Philadelphia at San Francisco.

Houston is at Pittsburgh on Monday night; Denver, Kansas City, the Los Angeles Raiders and unbeaten San Diego have byes.

Other than the Shulas, the NFL has had just one father-son coaching combination - Wade Phillips, now with Denver, and his dad, Bum.

"It'll be a special day, and it'll be a proud day knowing it's never been done before," Don Shula said. "I'll be a proud father."

But, that doesn't mean the man who has won more games than any other NFL coach will let up on his son.

"I just can't let that enter into my thinking," Don said. "Everything I do has got to be objective as far as my responsibilities to this football team."

"I think when you first go onto the field, it will be different and there will be some emotion. And afterward," he said. "During the game, your responsibility to the football team is so great and there's so much to think about that I'm sure that's the last thing you'll be thinking about, who's on the other sideline."

Bell, (and seated) Randy Mason, Jeremiah Baros, Greg Reinart, Carlos Mendez, Justin Griffith, Keith Riley, Cody Sargent, Heath Henderson, Jennifer Phipps, Lindsay Ward, Kristin Calkins, Jacque Beznar, Amy Killingsworth, Jana Baird, Karen Manchee, Katie Bone and Deanna Redelsperger. Hereford will host teams from nine other schools for fall golf matches on Saturday.

UT Longhorns to host No. 5 miracle Buffaloes

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

Call it bad timing for the Texas Longhorns.

The No. 5-ranked Colorado Buffaloes, one week after beating No. 7 Michigan on the game's final incredible play, will continue their national championship dreams against the No. 16 Longhorns in Memorial Stadium.

"They don't need any more confidence to come play us," Texas coach John Mackovic said. "They know they can play with anybody in the country. Any time you win on the last play of the game, it's special."

The Longhorns are a seven-point underdog against the Buffaloes, who beat Michigan 27-26 on a hail Mary pass that went about 70 yards before it bounced off one receiver but was caught by another player for a touchdown.

Now Mackovic is hoping the Longhorns won't be trampled by Colorado's championship charge.

In other games: Baylor (3-1) is a three-point favorite at Texas Christian (2-2); No. 18 North Carolina is a 16-point favorite at Southern Methodist (1-3) and No. 10 Texas A&M (3-0) is favored by 19 points as it puts its 22-game home winning streak on the line against Texas Tech (2-2).

The Rice Owls (1-2) take the week off after their first victory of the season, and the woeful Houston Cougars (0-4) also will take an open date, trying to recuperate from last week's 52-0 loss to Ohio State.

Colorado defeated Texas 36-14 at Boulder, Colo., last year after turning three of six Longhorn turnovers into touchdowns.

"We can't have those kinds of mistakes this year," Mackovic said. Colorado is averaging 536 yards and 43 points per game.

"We can not assume they will score only seven or 10 points," Mackovic said. "We can't give them a lot of big plays. They are not easy to keep up with."

we've lost is the chance to win the national championship."

Injuries are affecting SMU's preparations for North Carolina.

Ramon Flanigan was leading the SWC in passing when he suffered a hamstring injury last weekend against the Red Raiders. Injuries to wide receivers also have caused coach Tom Rossley to shake up that area.

Rice is trying to live up to its preseason hopes of reaching a bowl game this season.

"We're a team trying to get to know each other," coach Ken Hatfield said. "We really wanted to take these first three non-conference games to get to know one another as a team and as a coaching staff."

After a week off, the Owls will get acquainted with Texas Tech in Rice Stadium in the SWC opener.

Houston coach Kim Helton will get a week off from game preparation, but it won't be an easy time for the Cougars, who must replace quarterback Chuck Clements, who underwent surgery this week for a broken bone in his throwing hand. The hand will be in a cast for three weeks, and it'll be a while after that before he starts throwing again.

Helton, so far, has retained his sense of humor too.

Apologizing for being late to answer a conference call on Wednesday, he explained: "Sorry I'm late gentlemen, I was trying to make a first down."

Count Fleet in 1943 and Citation in 1948 each paid $2.80 in winning the Kentucky Derby, the shortest payoffs ever.

She is a college graduate and was a former director of prison fellowship that was started by Chuck Colson. She will also be the guest speaker at the ladies retreat scheduled Oct. 7-8.

Come and join Pastor Carol Haile to see if your children get to shave Mike's mustache off this "necktie" Sunday. All kids are encouraged to wear one of dad's weird neckties.

NEW YORK (AP) — It took a lot of persistence — and a heckuva big ring — but Riccardo Mazzucchelli finally persuaded Ivana Trump to say yes.

Mrs. Trump, 45, announced Tuesday that she planned to marry the 51-year-old Italian businessman, probably in March.

"Riccardo asked me the first time very early in the relationship and he asked me many times in between and I loved every single time," Mrs. Trump said Tuesday. "But I had to be sure, I had to be comfortable with the idea of getting married."

Mazzucchelli owns engineering consulting companies in South Africa, Saudi Arabia and the United Kingdom. As an engagement ring, he gave Mrs. Trump a flawless oval Burmese sapphire flanked by heart-shaped diamonds.

She still wears the 10-carat Tiffany yellow diamond that her ex-husband Donald Trump gave her — but as a friendship ring only.

"We are very good friends," she said.

Nonetheless, The Donald won't be attending the wedding. "It wouldn't be appropriate," his ex said.

SPEAKERS: Rev. Ron Garland - Rev. Woody Wiggins & other Preachers from across the country.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My family and I are in a quandary and quite certain that you have never had a letter like this before.

Our neighbors are wonderful people and very, very good friends. We wouldn't hurt their feelings for the world. But, Ann, they have a habit of putting mothballs everywhere in their home. It's the first thing you smell when you open the door. When I say "everywhere," I mean even in the refrigerator.

To compound the problem, they are always sending over various "treats" — everything from baked goods to casseroles. Everything that comes out of their kitchen tastes and smells like mothballs, and nobody will eat it.

We feel very bad about this not only because it's a terrible waste of money but because we were brought up to believe it's morally wrong to throw food away. My husband says I should just tell Mrs. X, but I'm afraid I will hurt her feelings. These people are like family. Please give me some advice.

O.J. Simpson now facing most important role of life

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (AP) - His life has been lived on camera, first as football star, then as sportscaster, commercial pitchman and actor. Yet O.J. Simpson has never tackled a role more important than the one confronting him now.

If he decides to testify, his demeanor will have a powerful impact on his most important audience - the jury.

"It's the biggest role he's ever been given and you can't yell, 'Cut' and redo it," Loyola University Law School Professor Laurie Levenson. "All eyes will be on him every minute.... If he overplays this role the results could be devastating."

This week, Simpson had his first chance to confront those who will judge him. They were seated among hundreds who responded to jury subpoenas, and have been filling out 75-page questionnaires expressing their views about Simpson, publicity and the challenge of keeping an open mind.

Simpson, 47, has pleaded innocent in the slashing murders of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman.

Simpson appeared confident and pleasant Thursday, occasionally smiling and seeking eye contact with the jury prospects.

His brief comments during sessions with the judge and lawyers

- humming a song from the musical "Cats" that he said reminded him of the pain he feels about being separated from his children - indicate he wants to talk about his ordeal behind bars and may want to testify.

To testify or not - the question haunts most defense attorneys.

In the Simpson case it could make or break the defense.

"It's a great problem for a lawyer," said Harland Braun, who defended one of the officers acquitted in the Rodney King beating case. "If you put him on and he doesn't do well, people will say you shouldn't have let him testify. If he doesn't testify and he's convicted, they'll say, what harm could it have done if he took the stand."

The prosecution must worry about Simpson's impact on the jury. He has the charm that made him a charismatic pitchman in Hertz rental car television commercials and a warm, comedic presence in the "Naked Gun" film comedies.

Meanwhile, the defense must concentrate on sending messages through body language of the defendant.

"His behavior must be consistent with innocence," Levenson said. "In this case that would mean someone devastated by the loss of an ex-wife, angry that he's falsely accused and intent on being vindicated."

Beyond that, "He's got to be O.J. Simpson, the beloved superstar."

Levenson said, and not project the persona of a criminal defendant. Even the rush to trial by his attorneys seems designed to get a verdict while he is remembered as a hero, not as a prisoner.

His expensively tailored suits in subdued colors emphasize the image of a man of substance with respect for the court system, lawyers say.

During one court session this week, Simpson doffed his suit jacket in favor of a white cardigan golf sweater, a move he probably won't repeat in front of jurors. Too casual for court, say the fashion observers.

The ultimate test would come under cross-examination. A single misstep could disable the defense.

"There is no script for cross-examination. It's just him and the prosecutor," Levenson said.

Braun said the decision of whether to put Simpson on the stand may hinge on his own personality. Known as jovial and happy-go-lucky in the past, he would have to adopt a much more serious demeanor.

"You can't give a person a personality transplant," said Braun. "You have to work with what you have. On the stand, you really are who you are."

'Jerusalem Syndrome' affects visitors of all religious groups

JERUSALEM (AP) - Be it mountain air, mental disorders or messages from God - something is convincing hundreds of visitors to Jerusalem they are Jesus, John the Baptist or King David reborn.

Local experts have diagnosed the visitors to the holy city with the "Jerusalem Syndrome," first recognized 14 years ago.

Yair Bar-El, who has treated 470 tourists with the syndrome, thinks would-be prophets are a growth industry with the approach of the year 2000.

"We know that every millennium there is an increase in religious feelings," said Bar-El, director of the Kfar Shaul psychiatric hospital, the most common address for syndrome sufferers.

Another possible stimulant is the charged political atmosphere as peace talks veer toward the explosive issue of the future of a city holy to Jews, Muslims and Christians.

While the majority of his patients had a history of mental disorders, 42 were regular tourists who suddenly donned hotel sheets or other makeshift clothing and took to the streets, preaching repentance, forgiveness and peace. A religious upbringing was common.

Most arrived in tour groups but gradually became withdrawn, bathing obsessively to purify themselves and attempting to spread what they believed to be the suddenly revealed word of God, Bar-El said.

Usually patients recover in a week with medication and psychiatric care, he said.

Christians lean towards assuming the identities of Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary or John the Baptist. Jews prefer Hebrew heroes like Moses, Samson or King David. Muslims stick to saying they are the Messiah.

Police said disorientation is the key sign that something is amiss.

"They don't know where they are," said Victor Wadahakar, assistant head of Jerusalem's tourist police. "They don't have a proper explanation, like a normal person."

Wadahakar said a 65-year-old German woman wandered away from her husband while touring the Old City last year and was found the next day near Bethlehem, six miles south. She said a divine voice commanded her to walk in that direction.

Another woman, a New York City teacher, abandoned her tour group only to be discovered chanting spirituals in a toga as she headed toward the Via Dolorosa, the route Jesus trod with the cross to his crucifixion.

Rev. Colin Morton, of Jerusalem's St. Andrew's Scots Memorial Church, said he has met people who believed they were Elijah the Prophet, John the Baptist or Jesus.

Most experts believe the effect is sparked by the shock of seeing a bustling, modern city instead of the sanctity many expected.

"Even walking down the Via Dolorosa there are shops, people hawking their wares," said Clarence Wagner Jr., international director of Bridges for Peace, a group promoting Christian-Jewish understanding. "They can't put the two images together - what their expectations were and what they are actually seeing."

The interplay of mystical and mercantile was evident this week at the Western Wall, the holiest site in Judaism.

Telephone association notes 50th anniversary

The Independent Telephone Pioneers Association of Texas is marking its 50th anniversary.

In a proclamation signed by Gov. Ann Richards marking Independent Telephone Company Week, she noted that independent telephone companies provide state-of-the-art telecommunications service linking rural areas to the nation's public network.

In Hereford, West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative is a member of the association.

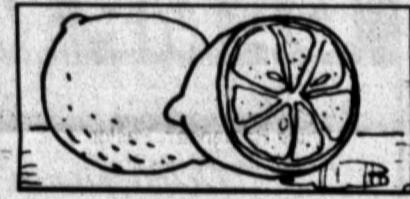

"The majority of these small, independent telephone companies are family-owned businesses or subscriber-owned cooperatives, thus demonstrating their close ties to and interest in their local communities. These companies provide jobs and leadership in their local communities and take an active role in rural development efforts," said Richards.

The nation has more than 1,000 small independent telephone companies that have been operating for more than a century.

Small independent telephone companies are good civic citizens and WTRT and its subsidiaries are an example of this quality.

They pay taxes to the county, city, school and hospital districts and support schools, academic and athletic programs, civic events and celebrations in Deaf Smith, Castro, Parmer, Oldham, Potter, Randall, Bailey, Hutchinson and Hale counties.

WTRT and WT Services Inc. contribute toward the support of emergency medical, fire department and law enforcement agencies in several communities.

GOV. ANN RICHARDS Long winning streak

By MICHAEL HOLMES

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Ann Richards' career as a public official began with her election as Travis County commissioner in 1976.

She hasn't lost one yet.

And that, the Democratic governor says, is the kind of preparation needed to hold the state's top job.

"You can't wake up one morning and stand there shaving, looking in the mirror, and say, 'Mmmmm, mmmmm, mmmmm, I think you're so cute you ought to run for governor,'" she told the state Democratic convention in a less-than-subtle shot at Republican challenger George W. Bush.

"What simply mystifies me is why we suddenly hear from people at election time who have actually filed to run for office when we've never heard an idea about government from them before. ... Running for public office is not some sort of beauty contest. You've got to go through a lot of living, you've got to have some experience with people."

But that may be a tough sell this year, as opinion pollsters find voter anger with government and incumbents.

Richards knows the numbers.

She won re-election as a county commissioner in 1980, was elected state treasurer in 1982 and 1986, and in 1990 won the costliest governor's race in Texas history.

"I think you find that (anti-government sentiment) every election," she says. "The people hope that change will bring about something new, something different."

But if you've done a good job, by and large, they reward you and want to keep you there."

It's the job she's done since taking office in January 1991 that she hopes will reap rewards for her on Nov. 8.

Richards took office on a promise of creating a "New Texas" - open to women and minorities, shaking off old ideas, shaking up the state bureaucracy.

Today, she says she has done just that.

Department of Public Safety statistics show that crime is down; Texas Education Agency reports that the dropout rate is falling and student test scores are rising; the state prison system is doubling in size; Texas leads the nation in new jobs created; taxes rose less than under any of the past three governors, she says.

Seeking to get out front of Bush on other issues, she has offered plans to overhaul the juvenile justice laws, permit a "charter schools" program to allow communities to design their own schools, and she's calling for welfare reform targeted at meaningful job training.

Richards wasn't an unknown when she first announced for governor, but today she's a genuine Democratic Party star.

She keynote the party's 1988 national convention and chaired its 1992 gathering. She has helped other Democrats raise funds. She's appeared on late night talk shows and at the White House. She's raised more than $12 million in campaign money since taking office.

AUSTIN (AP) - He's running on his own. But gubernatorial challenger George W. Bush can drop a mighty big name whenever he chooses.

As the eldest son of the former president, Bush gets a chuckle from audiences when he mentions his father.

"I knew I had a big job ahead of me when I first got going, because I had to show people in Texas there was another George Bush," he says.

"All the time my friends in the press are saying, 'What's it like to be George Bush's son in the Texas political arena?' I'll tell you what it's like. Starting off, I inherited every single one of his enemies and half his friends."

Bush is one of two former first sons on this year's ballots. Younger brother, Jeb, is the GOP nominee for governor in Florida.

In Texas, the elder Bush's appearances on behalf of George W. have been limited to fund-raising events. But the name gives him a leg up, and that's handy when challenging one of the nation's biggest Democratic stars - Ann Richards.

"I'm running against a well-liked person and I know how tough it will be," Bush says. "Our disagreement is not personal. It's with her views, her record, her liberal philosophy and her failure to lead."

Bush, 48, says his business background helped shape his philosophy that personal responsibility should guide the actions of all citizens.

After growing up in Midland and Houston, he attended Yale and Harvard. He served as a fighter pilot in the Texas Air National Guard. In 1975, he founded Bush Exploration, a Midland-based oil and gas company, and in 1978 he lost a bid for Congress.

His best-known enterprise is the Texas Rangers baseball team, of which he is managing general partner.

Besides giving him visibility, the job gives good stump speech material, including: "I'm one of those rare politicians - I've actually got a job at the end of this deal that I like."

Bush hopes the end won't come the night of Nov. 8.

He's counting on a platform of issues he believes strike a chord with Texans - tougher crime laws, more local control of public schools, welfare changes and slowing the growth of state government spending.

Richards has overseen a doubling of the state prison system, but Bush says that's not enough. He wants tougher penalties for juvenile criminals, no mandatory early release of convicted felons, no parole for sex offenders and promises to challenge the court settlement that ended an inmate lawsuit against the prisons.

He says the Texas Education Agency should be abolished and that "home rule education districts" created to give parents, teachers and local communities more control.

Bush proposes "to stop frivolous lawsuits" and says he will rein in the state budget, which has grown from $48 billion to $71 billion over the past four years.

He sums up his attitude in an oft-repeated campaign line: If you like things the way they are, don't vote for him.

"Texans are not willing to accept the status quo," Bush says. "Texans want change. Texans want action where there's been inaction. Texans want leadership from their governor."
