Sugar industry a $weet deal for Hereford

Raw product enters processing plant

Sugar beets right from the fields of Deaf Smith County and surrounding counties enter the Holly Sugar beet processing plant through giant bins. From this point, the beets are washed and sent on through the steps required to produce sugar for the dinner table.

Area growers to reap 26,000 acres of beets

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Just a spoonful of sugar makes the medicine go down -- or helps keep the economy of Deaf Smith County perking.

And, it's the time of year when sugar takes a front seat -- sugar beet growers in Deaf Smith and surrounding counties are digging up the mature beets as fast as they can.

Because of adverse weather conditions in a couple recent years, growers eye the weather forecasts with wary interest.

"We have good conditions now," said Dennis Printz, the agricultural manager for Holly Sugar Corporation's Hereford plant, during a media field day.

Holly Sugar and the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association, Inc., provided some facts that can't help but impress those unfamiliar with the sugar industry.

For instance:

-- Growers expect to harvest approximately 26,000 acres of sugar beets this fall. Most of those acres are in Deaf Smith County.

-- Yields in early harvesting are averaging more than 23 tons per acre. Sugar content and quality are said to be "the highest we've seen."

-- The only beet processing plant in Texas is operated by Holly Sugar in Hereford.

-- The company's payroll in Hereford is more than $5 million annually, for a force of 120 fulltime workers and a peak of about 300 during harvest.

-- Holly Sugar pumps another $4 million to $5 million into the economy through goods and services purchased from area businesses.

-- One ton of beets will produce 210 to 220 pounds of sugar.

-- Beet-loaded semi-trailer trucks unload at the Holly plant at the rate of one every 12 minutes.

-- The sweetener industry in Texas is a combination of beet, cane and corn products, the only state that boasts all three.

-- Economy of the state is $875 million better off because of the sweetener industry.

While "sugar beet" conjures up the image of a plant that turns up in finished form primarily as a cooking and baking ingredient, there is virtually no waste in the product.

Harvesting equipment first cuts the tops and crowns off beet plants, leaving them in the field. The digger scoops the mature beets out of the soil and off-loads to a truck.

The leavings in the fields don't go to waste. In most cases, cattle are turned in and consume the beets missed by the digger as well as the leaves.

When the beets reach the processing plant, the first step is to clean them thoroughly with pure water. From that moment on, the beet is on the way to the consumer. Byproducts, such as molasses and other residues go to feedyards.

A four-step process converts the beet to sugar: extraction of sugar, purification of juice, evaporation of excess water, crystallization.

This year's Texas crop has been augmented by a small crop planted in New Mexico, at Artesia and Roswell.

The addition of these acres to the Hereford plant's program allows growers in this part of Texas to wait until the first of October to begin harvest, said Printz.

The beet crop from 400 acres in New Mexico has been shipped to Hereford by rail and started through processing before Texas growers began their harvest.

Bill Cleavinger, president of Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association, during the media briefing pointed out that the federal farm bill now in effect includes a "no cost to taxpayers" provision for the sugar industry.

"There are 40 sugar-producing countries besides the U.S.," observed Cleavinger. "Only a certain amount may be imported from other countries."

Cleavinger said that neither NAFTA nor GATT should have an unfavorable impact on the sugar industry.

Both Printz and Cleavinger said they expect acreage in this area to increase from this year's 26,000 acres.

"It's a matter of crop rotation," said Cleavinger. "But, beets are one of the best cash-flow crops we have."

Finished product comes off line

Refined sugar in five-pound bags moves along the conveyor belt at the end of the refining process at the Holly Sugar plant in Hereford. The plant can package one million pounds of sugar in five-pound bags in a month. (Turn to Page 7B for a photo of beet harvest equipment in use.)

CSF program will get underway soon

The application period for assistance from the 1994 Christmas Stocking Fund program for needy residents in Hereford and Deaf Smith County will be getting underway soon.

Applications will be accepted Nov.

Probation given seven persons in district court

Seven defendants in 222nd District Court Friday were sentenced to probated terms after entering guilty pleas to the charges against them.

Judge David Wesley Gully presided during the court session.

Carl Paiz, 25, charged with indecency with a child must serve an eight-year probation on deferred adjudication and pay a $1,500 fine.

An eight-year deferred adjudication probation also was given Robert Saucedo, 19, who entered a plea of guilty to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

On a plea of guilty to sexual assault of a child, Robert Leal, 24, was ordered to serve 10 years on deferred adjudication probation. He also was fined $1,500.

Five-year probated sentences were assessed two defendants, Oran Leroy Morrison, 56, and Seniado Tena, 38, also known as Seniado Mediano, who entered guilty pleas to felony driving while intoxicated. Morrison also was fined $500 and Tena, $1,500.

Martin Rubio Jr., 20, entered a plea of guilty to burglary of a building and was given an eight-year probated sentence. He also was fined $1,500.

After pleading guilty to forgery by making, Roberto G. Ordonez, 24, was sentenced to five years' probation and fined $500.

7 through Nov. 11, from 1:30 to 5 p.m. daily, at the Hereford Community Center.

Those applying for assistance should bring some form of identification in order to verify that they are a resident of Hereford or Deaf Smith County. If applicants plan to ask for help with utilities or medical expenses, they should bring a receipt or some other form of documentation that will provide their account number.

The Deaf Smith County chapter of the American Red Cross is not affiliated with CSF, but will once again be helping to take applications.

CSF is administered by a committee of anonymous volunteers who represent a broad cross-section of the community. The CSF committee is not affiliated with any other organization, and all CSF monies come strictly from the donations of individuals and businesses who wish to help the less fortunate during the holiday season.

Again this year, CSF is operating on an early schedule so that filing and processing of applications and delivery of assistance packages can be completed before Christmas. This also allows volunteers to help those in need and still have time to enjoy the holidays with their families.

CSF volunteers have already begun meeting to plan for this year's effort, and will begin processing applications shortly after the filing period starts.

The Hereford Brand will again head up the fundraising effort for CSF and donations will be accepted anytime. Starting Nov. 6, or after, a list of contributors will be published occasionally, along with a running total of funds raised for the holiday campaign.

Early voting for general election off to brisk start

Early voting for the Nov. 8 general election got off to a brisk start.

From opening of early voting Wednesday morning until mid-afternoon Friday, 267 residents had marked ballots in the election.

Voters may take advantage of the no-excuse early voting period which ends Nov. 4 in the Deaf Smith County courthouse office of County Clerk David Ruland.

Mail ballots for disabled persons may be requested at the office. Voters who will be out of the county on election day may request a mail ballot but they are required to provide an out-of-county address, reminded Ruland.

A total of 8,541 Deaf Smith County residents are registered and eligible to vote in the election.

Statewide, voters will decide on races for governor, U.S. Senator and other offices.

At the county level, two posts are contested. Democrat justice of the peace incumbent Johnnie Turrentine is challenged by Republican Dan Hall. Incumbent Commissioner Lupe Chavez of Precinct 2, a Democrat, also has a GOP opponent, Conny Whitehorn.

Congressman Combest to host meeting here Tuesday

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, will host area residents in a Hereford Town Hall meeting, to be held at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Oct. 25 in the Community Center.

The meeting is a rescheduling of a previous session planned for Aug. 22 that had to be postponed due to legislative votes in Congress. "These regular face-to-face conversations as well as letters and phone calls from folks back home keep us in touch regarding your concerns and my votes on your behalf in Washington," said Combest. "This town hall is my chance to listen and your opportunity to speak."

With Congress in recess, Combest will devote several weeks of the coming months to individual and group meetings with constituents, traveling the vast 19th Congressional District, which stretches from the Panhandle, through the South Plains and to the Permian Basin.

Richards, Bush clash in debate

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, locked in a tight re-election fight with Republican George W. Bush, Friday night slammed Bush's business record and questioned whether he is qualified to be governor.

"There are serious questions to be raised whether or not George Bush is qualified to be governor," Richards said. "You've got to have had some experience in the public sector before you get the chief executive's job."

Bush, 48, managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, bristled, branding the governor's remarks as "an attempt to smear my business record" and a diversion from real issues.

"If Texans want someone who has spent her entire adult life in politics they should not vote for me," he said, referring to Richards having held county and state offices since 1976. Richards, 61, said companies on whose boards Bush served had lost $371 million. Bush strongly disputed her assessment and said he was proud of his record. He invited viewers of their televised debate to "come and see The Ballpark at Arlington as an example of entrepreneurship."

A Texas Poll released earlier this week showed Bush holding a one percentage point lead, 45 percent to 44 percent, over Richards.

The governor said her administration has much to brag about. She also said there's much left to do.

"For the first time since 1976, crime is down in every category - but it's not enough," Richards said. "For the first time in 14 years, our kids are (doing) better on their SAT scores ... but it's not enough."

Bush sounded several familiar campaign themes -- placing a higher priority on public education spending, reducing welfare spending and getting tougher on juvenile criminals. He said he would bring a fresh perspective to the job.

"I proudly proclaim I've never held office. I have been in the business world all my adult life. I have met a payroll. I know what it means to risk capital," Bush said.

In the debate's final minutes, Bush tried to link Richards to President Clinton, who lost Texas to Bush's father in the 1992 election.

"I am the conservative candidate. She is the liberal candidate," he said. "One difference we didn't discuss tonight, of course, is President Clinton. She'll work hard ... to see him re-elected in 1996. I, of course, will not."

Richards touted her record of balancing the state budget without resorting to an income tax. She noted that the state ended the most recent fiscal year with a $2.2 billion surplus. She said Texas leads the nation in job creation and that during a second term "we must do everything we can to make Texas a leader" in international commerce.

"It's going to take a very assertive, aggressive chief executive officer who knows how to go out and sell Texas," she said. "The business of running government, for good or (See GOVERNOR, Page 2A)

Roadwork set at 15th and Irving

Motorists traveling through the intersection of E. 15th and Irving will find progress slowed next week by work on concrete culverts.

City Manager Chester Nolen said half of the intersection will be closed, then re-opened and the other half closed, while work proceeds.

He expects the contractor, Rick Garcia, to begin work Monday morning and spend two to three days reworking the drainage system.

The intersection should be smoother when work is completed, said Nolen.

WASHINGTON - Irked by Republican efforts to portray him as out of the political mainstream and as a tax-and-spend liberal, President Clinton insists his administration has posted accomplishments in the economy, crime-fighting and other areas that most Americans sought.

WASHINGTON - The Democratic Party may be drifting on a stormy sea of voter distrust and disgust, but New York's senior senator, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, is soundly at anchor in a rare safe harbor as Election Day approaches. "He's an intellect, he brings a great sense of history to the job and people just enjoy hearing him and seeing him," says one Republican lawmaker.

Printz said that the bad seasons in recent years discouraged some growers. Early freeze and rain reduced the season appreciably in at least two years.

"We've had only three bad years in 30, though, and that's good," he added.

The processing plant operated by Holly in Hereford was opened in 1964 after civic leaders actively pursued construction of a plant here.

Officials of Holly, based in Colorado Springs, Colo., chose to build their newest plant in Hereford and broke ground in 1963.

The present Imperial Holly Corporation was formed by the merger in 1988 of Holly and Imperial Sugar, founded in 1843 and one of the oldest existing businesses in Texas.

Beet producers bank an estimated 35 million to $40 million annually. Only the livestock industry generates more total dollars in the county.

Holly Sugar is a major taxpayer in Deaf Smith County, paying more than a third of a million dollars each year in taxes.

Celebration lunch

Employees of First National Bank on Friday were treated to homemade hamburgers as they celebrated the successful completion of the bank's employee campaign for the United Way of Deaf Smith County. Overall, the bank raised $8,667.92, which exceeded the goal of $7,200. Last year the bank raised $8,412.20. Sheri Jones, standing at left, was employee campaign chairman this year. With her is Sally Nolen, standing, executive director of the United Way. Joining the meal are, seated from left, Karen Wright, Janet Coleman, Steve Wright, Sandra Bartels, Karen Smith and John Sherrod.

Flood still threatens Houston as rivers, creeks keep rising

HOUSTON (AP) - Swollen creeks and rivers are receding across much of soggy Southeast Texas, but more flooding could still be ahead for those living along rivers still rising east and southwest of Houston.

The Neches and Trinity rivers east of Houston and the Brazos River southwest of the city were expected to crest Saturday, causing more problems for areas already inundated by flood waters.

The Trinity on Friday was 7 feet above flood stage and 6 inches above a 1990 record level of 30.5 feet. The river ravaged Liberty, a town of about 8,000 residents about 30 miles east of Houston.

"Everything's flooded downtown. It's waist deep," said Liberty County Judge Dempsey Henley. "Everything's soaking wet and it's draining out. But no one went hungry, no one missed a meal and we didn't lose any lives."

Southwest of Houston, the Brazos was 2 feet over flood stage at Richmond and moving toward Brazoria County, a coastal county where some roads remain flooded.

At least 17 people have been killed in the Southeast Texas flooding spawned by three days of torrential rains that sent lakes, rivers and creeks surging over their banks.

In North Texas, more than 3 inches of rain fell on the Dallas area Friday, triggering flooding that left more than a dozen cars submerged up to their roofs in water in some suburbs.

In the suburb of Balch Springs, Jason Boner, 11, drowned when he fell into an uncovered manhole while playing in a flooded street.

In a nearby portion of southeast Dallas, a 35-year-old woman was missing after slipped into a swollen concrete-line drainage ditch while walking in a day-care center to pick up her son, witnesses said. The woman, whose identity has been withheld, has not been located, police said.

More than 1,400 people were left without electricity for at least part of the day.

Meanwhile, the Coast Guard is struggling to deal with as many as four broken pipelines that spewed a variety of petroleum products into the swollen San Jacinto River, near the Houston Ship Channel.

Two Colonial Pipeline Co. lines, one carrying gasoline and the other diesel fuel, ruptured at the river early Thursday. The floating fuel spill erupted into a massive orange inferno that was still burning in small patches early today. At least 120 people suffered minor injuries from the fumes.

Officials on Friday determined that a Texaco Inc. pipeline also had ruptured and was leaking Arabian light crude oil, and that a Valero Energy Corp. natural gas line had broken at the river.

ill, is different than running a private business. Government cannot go to the bank for a loan. Government does not get to write off losses" for tax purposes.

The candidates answered questions from Dallas-Fort Worth citizens, along with news reporters, in a town hall forum televised live on a number of public television stations.

Bush said he was proud of his service as a Vietnam-era fighter pilot for the Texas National Guard and that his then-congressman father played no part in his being able to join that unit.

Richards said she would make getting a pay raise for teachers her top priority if re-elected. Bush said she promised that four years ago.

Bush said Texans were misled into believing lottery profits would be dedicated to schools. Richards said that promise never was made because she didn't want children "depending on what really is a game of chance for their education."

Bush said he opposed legalizing casino gambling. Richards called it "kind of a cheesy way to make money" but said that should a pending lawsuit eventually allow casinos on Indian reservations, "I am not going to say that no other Texan can do that." However, she said, she doubted the Legislature would OK it.

Senate candidates hold debate

DALLAS (AP) - Republican U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison and Democratic challenger Richard Fisher debated numerous issues Friday night, ranging from crime to health care and the environment.

The two top of the Nov. 8 general election ballot. Under questioning from a panel of citizens and journalists, the candidates traded verbal jabs in a forum held at the Loews Anatole Hotel and carried live on public broadcast stations statewide.

Mrs. Hutchison said Fisher flip-flopped on issues, while Fisher accused the senator of partisan gridlock.

"I stand on principle. Mr. Fisher has changed his position on just about every major issue," Mrs. Hutchison said.

Fisher retorted, "If you took the word 'No' out of Kay Bailey Hutchison's vocabulary, she would be speechless."

Fisher criticized Mrs. Hutchison for voting against the crime bill, opposing a ban on assault weapons, and her views on health care.

He said Mrs. Hutchison's statement that poor people have access to coverage at charity hospitals was the "Marie Antoinette" approach.

Mrs. Hutchison criticized President Clinton's proposals, saying they would have cost too much and created a massive bureaucracy. Fisher said he didn't support Clinton's proposal.

"We do have access to everyone into our system. It may not be the best and we need to work on that," she said.

Mrs. Hutchison said she opposed the crime bill because it added to the deficit and became pork-barrel legislation.

She also attacked the federal government for over-regulation, specifically environmental laws. "We have gone overboard," she said.

Fisher said he would oppose attacks on reasonable environmental laws. "I don't want to just throw the baby out with the bath water," he said.

Fisher said he opposed the sale of assault weapons, while Mrs. Hutchison said, "I am not for banning guns from law abiding citizens."

The two also tangled over illegal immigration.

Fisher criticized Mrs. Hutchison for supporting more barriers on the border with Mexico. Mrs. Hutchison said illegal aliens take services away from legal residents and that building walls in heavy crossing areas has proven effective.

In a lighter moment, both candidates indicated their support for free trade with Fisher saying, "I would like to see Lone Star beer from Texas exported to Germany."

Mrs. Hutchison said she supported an experiment of vouchers in public schools, which would allow tax dollars to be used for students to go to private school.

Los Alamos may have released more radiation than 1st thought

WASHINGTON (AP) - A presidential panel charged that Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico and other federal labs did more Cold War radiation releases and human radiation experiments than previously reported.

The Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments said in an interim report Friday it documented at least 400 cases of human medical experiments involving radiation and had "fragmentary indications" of 1,000 more.

The committee also said it found hundreds of intentional releases of radiation - many more than previously suspected - during the country's nuclear programs between the 1940s and 1975. It was not clear from information provided how many releases involved exposure of the general public or what levels of exposure were involved.

It said only four intentional radiation releases had been acknowledged at Los Alamos, where implosion tests involving radioactive materials were conducted for years. DOE documents now show "the number of such tests approximate 250," the report said.

But Los Alamos lab spokesman John Gustafson said "it's flat-out false" only four tests were previously made public.

"The committee obviously doesn't have complete information to come to that conclusion," Gustafson said.

Some 254 high-explosive tests were conducted in Los Alamos' Bayo

Canyon between 1944 and 1961, he said. The experiments, to study implosion physics, used a radioactive lanthanum source, about the size of a quarter, to track the implosion process, he said.

Details of the study results remain classified because they're relevant to nuclear weapon design, but the tests themselves have been widely publicized, he said.

"They were not a secret at the time, they were not a secret in 1963 at the time of the first major cleanup, which was covered by the news media; they were not a secret in 1982 when follow-up environmental studies were done, they were discussed in great detail" by the lab's Human Studies Project Team in January, he said.

And, Gustafson said, "It's our contention these are not human experiments or radiation release experiments."

"The release of radiation was incidental to purpose of experiment," just as experiments at the Los Alamos Meson Physics Facility today release radiation as a byproduct of the accelerator's operation, he said.

The report said there were eight Los Alamos radiation warfare experiments previously acknowledged, although "the number is at least 53" according to recently uncovered documents. Gustafson said those apparently were Department of Defense experiments.

Dr. Ruth Faden, committee chairwoman, said detailed information about many cases nationwide may never be known because of scant or missing documents. She also complained of "significant roadblocks" still being erected by government officials who are refusing to declassify information about many of the radiation releases involving nuclear weapons programs.

"In a lot of cases we may never have the kind of detailed information for drawing moral evaluations," said Faden, a professor of bio-ethics at Johns Hopkins University.

The committee, charged by President Clinton last December to examine the extent of human radiation testing during the Cold War, will issue its final findings in six months, including recommendations on whether the government should compensate victims of improper or unethical actions.

Faden said it's clear some of the 400 biomedical experiments involving human subjects documented so far may have had therapeutic goals while others were aimed simply at learning more about radiation's effects on the body - something that was largely a mystery early in the nuclear age.

It remains unclear whether subjects had given proper consent in many of the experiments, she said.

There were clear policies to safeguard subjects "but in some instances these policies were not followed," Faden said.

NASA learning to operate, save money at same time

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - In the old days, NASA only had to ask for what it wanted. Congress was only too willing to oblige. Today, the space agency has a shrinking budget and new ways of doing business.

Here's the new NASA, looking to save a million here and a million there:

- Want to launch? Better settle for a weekday to avoid hundreds of thousands of dollars in weekend overtime pay.
- Weather lousy? Then call off liftoff before fueling and save $400,000 in tanking costs.

The coupon-clipping crowd has gotten hold of NASA's space shuttle program. Shuttle funding dropped to $3.15 billion in the new fiscal year that began this month, $360 million less than the year before. NASA's total budget for the new fiscal year is $14.4 billion, down about $130 million.

NASA expected less for shuttle operations, but not that much less considering all the previous cutbacks. The shuttle budget has shrunk nearly $1 billion since 1992, or 21 percent.

To cope with the latest shortfall and what lies beyond, NASA is scrutinizing every shuttle-related job to see where more money can be saved without jeopardizing flight safety.

Fifteen teams, comprised of nearly 100 NASA employees, are assessing the jobs at Kennedy Space Center, Johnson Space Center in Houston, Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., and Stennis Space Center in Mississippi. The study is supposed to be completed by January.

"We've been coming down the last three years about 5 percent a year in operations in the shuttle, and we all felt like this is the time when we need to take a snapshot and see where we are," said Bryan O'Connor, shuttle director and a former shuttle commander.

"Have we gone too far in some areas? Are there some other areas where we can reduce even more?"

Just the thought of more cuts distresses the head of the Aerospace Safety Advisory Panel, an independent group created by Congress.

More than 1,400 shuttle-processing jobs have been scrapped at Kennedy in the past three years, and numerous shuttle improvements have been deferred.

"They're right on the ragged edge now," said panel chairman Norman Parmet, a retired TWA executive. "As this thing squeezes to the point where they can't do what's necessary, the only answer is you have to cut down the schedule."

"Something's going to give," Parmet said. Shuttle officials insist that safety will remain the No. 1 priority. They acknowledge, however, that they'll lose flexibility as positions and parts dwindle. And that means launch delays.

However, none of the four space shuttles will be mothballed, and neither of the two launch pads will be closed, O'Connor said.

Besides, he said, NASA will need three shuttles and seven shuttle flights a year when it comes time to build the international space station. The fourth shuttle - Columbia, the oldest and heaviest - will be dedicated to non-station missions.

NASA will launch the first U.S. station component in December 1997, said Jeremiah Pearson III, head of NASA's space flight office. He won't guarantee the launch dates of any shuttle missions before or after that, especially if the budget continues to shrivel.

Also sacrosanct are engine improvements and anything having to do with safety, Pearson said.

"If there's a safety issue, it will be funded," he promised.

Shuttle workers can expect less overtime, though, and managers will be asked to find additional ways to do the job "cheaper, faster and better" - the motto of NASA's administrator of 2-1/2 years, Daniel Goldin.

More job cuts are inevitable. NASA currently is replacing only about half of those who retire or quit.

This continual streamlining challenges "all our traditional ways of doing things," O'Connor said. For instance, NASA last spring called off Columbia's launch the day before because of dismal weather forecasts - a first in 13 years of space shuttle flight.

"We said, 'Hey, look, what's the point of this? We know it's going to be bad tomorrow,'" Pearson recalled. "But we've always done it this way. But we didn't (this time). We didn't tank. Four hundred thousand bucks."

Columbia soared the following day, a Friday, into a clear sky.

"We look to launch on Thursdays instead of Sundays," Pearson added. "Why? It costs less money."

Countdowns begin three days before launch, thus the penchant for Thursdays. Start the countdown on Monday and try to launch on Thursday or, failing that, on Friday - no weekend overtime. Or if Monday is a holiday, start the countdown on Tuesday and launch on Friday.

Five of the six space shuttle launches so far this year were on a Thursday or Friday; the exception was a twice-delayed flight.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The O.J. Simpson trial judge reopened jury selection to the media Friday after defense attorneys changed their minds and said reporters wouldn't keep prospective jurors from being candid.

"We were mistaken," defense attorney Robert Shapiro said. "We are candid enough to admit that."

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito allowed three reporters to listen Friday as he and attorneys questioned prospective jurors about whether publicity in the case has hampered their ability to be fair.

Ito said the media couldn't report the badge numbers of the potential jurors as they are quizzed one-on-one by the judge and attorneys.

On Thursday, Ito suggested the defense and prosecution make a motion to kick reporters out of his courtroom for the publicity portion of questioning, and he then barred the media from a day of private questioning.

But this morning, Shapiro said he and other defense attorneys had become so caught up in protecting Simpson from publicity in the double-murder case that their request had gone too far. They asked the judge to reverse his ruling.

Shapiro said lawyers found that potential jurors questioned Thursday in private were more candid because they were being questioned individually and not because reporters were shut out.

"It was only because we were so concerned with O.J.'s right to a fair trial that we agreed to such an extreme measure," Shapiro told reporters as he walked into court.

"We reflected upon it, we discussed it, and we (want) to return to the same procedures that we followed in the past and have the press and public hear everything that takes place," he said.

Court spokeswoman Jerrienne Hayslett said the judge agreed that the potential jurors weren't necessarily more candid because reporters were excluded from the courtroom.

Prosecutors said they would agree with whatever decision the judge made, and didn't object to reopening questioning.

In his extraordinary ruling to close jury selection Thursday, Ito had expressed fears about the widespread nature of the publicity from the case, noting that he learned of people even in Tibet watching Simpson coverage on TV.

"I find it amazing the people in Tibet would be interested in this case," Ito said.

In his written ruling, he said: "The court finds that the circumstances and the media attention to this case warrants that (part of questioning) be conducted in a closed setting."

Ito's ruling had only applied to what he called the "sequestered voir dire," or portion of questioning in which panelists are quizzed individually on whether they had been tainted by publicity.

After prospective jurors are questioned about publicity, general questioning will resume Oct. 26. At that time, potential jurors are asked about their backgrounds, beliefs and biases.

Simpson is accused of killing his ex-wife Nicole and her friend.

Earlier this week, two media organizations turned down Ito's request to postpone plans to interview Faye Resnick, co-author of "Nicole Brown Simpson: The Private Diary of a Life Interrupted." In her book, Ms. Resnick alleges that Simpson stalked his ex-wife and threatened to kill her.

During the first day of the closed session, 18 prospective jurors were questioned and five were released for cause, defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. said.

Normally, excuses for cause come when a prospective juror indicates overt bias either toward the defendant or toward the prosecution.

One other woman was released because her employer wouldn't pay her for the time she might serve on the trial, expected to last up to six months.

Cochran said prospects were asked about the book and other "hot-button issues ... that might impact upon their ability to be fair and impartial."

"There have been some that have some knowledge of the book," Cochran said.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says if worrying doesn't cause gray hair, then how come it's so common among the parents of teenagers?

There are so many labor-saving devices on the market today that people have to work all their lives to pay for them.

It will soon be time to recapture that hour you lost back on April 13. Daylight Savings Time officially ends at midnight on Oct. 29. At that time, we'll set our clocks back one hour to CST.

Angry driver to pedestrian: "Some of you people walk around like you own the street!" Pedestrian: "Oh, yeah? Well, some of you motorists drive around like owned your cars!"

If you can take the time, don't forget the Town Hall meeting in Hereford Community Center Tuesday at 9 a.m. with Congressman Larry Combest.

The stated purpose of these meetings is for our 19th Congressional District representative to hear your concerns and discuss his votes in Washington, D.C. Combest was originally to be here in August and rescheduled due to an important vote.

You've probably read reports about how wonderful GATT, the giant trade treaty, will be, but not everyone is jumping on the bandwagon.

I haven't studied the treaty, but for the opposing view, we offer some thoughts from a recent column by Patrick Buchanan.

The Fortune 500 companies, the National Foreign Trade Council, President Bill Clinton, and the Council on Foreign Relations crowd in both parties are unhappy with Sen. Ernest Hollings (D-S. Carolina), says the nationally syndicated columnist.

GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, was Buchanan's topic, and he lavishes praise on Sen. Hollings for "not allowing the giant GATT trade treaty to be rammed through his Commerce Committee without full and open hearings on GATT's impact on America's freedom and America's future."

In the Sept. 30 column, Buchanan adds: "We have been given a glorious opportunity. We have 45 days to make the case for a new economics of American patriotism." Since the GATT treaty does not have to be ratified until next summer, why are these people so terrified of 45 days of hearings? asks the columnist.

His answer: "They are afraid the American people will wake up to what is at stake in GATT. And what is at stake is nothing less than the destiny of their country."

Buchanan claims that, in the World Trade Organization (WTO) established by GATT, America would surrender her national sovereignty, and her freedom of action to defend her own economic vital interests.

"And, if we are outraged by WTO's decisions, we have just one vote out of 123 to challenge them. The Europeans, who dreamed up WTO, have 30 votes, and the U.S. has no veto power."

Buchanan asks another question: "Why would the most powerful country on Earth, which controls access to the greatest market on Earth, surrender such power to a foreign-dominated institution headed by a Third-World bureaucrat?"

His answer: "Because the politicians who negotiate these treaties, and the Corporate Elite who slaver for them, have a different agenda than the national interest of the U.S.A. They want to move America into a new World Order, where the World Court decides quarrels between nations; the WTO writes the rules for trade and settles all disputes; the International Monetary Fund and World Bank order wealth transfers from continent to continent; the Law of the Sea Treaty tells us what we may and may not do on the high seas; and the UN decides where military forces may and may not intervene."

The heads of multinational corporations are wild about GATT, writes Buchanan, because "to men whose highest loyalty is the bottom line of a balance sheet, and whose passionate love is the stock option exercised at the end of the year, GATT is the closest to heaven they will ever come."

And, finally, Buchanan poses this question: "Do we want to go gently into that New World Order, or do we want to start taking our country back? It's enough to make you wonder about GATT, isn't it?"

Appeals court judges

The Nov. 8 General Election ballot will have three races for places on courts of appeals—extremely important judicial positions but not highly-publicized races which attract voter attention. One of those races is for the 7th Court of Appeals, also known as the Amarillo Court of Appeals, while the other two are Places 1 and 2 of the Court of Criminal Appeals.

The Court of Criminal Appeals has the final jurisdiction over all criminal cases in the state, especially death penalty convictions.

The Amarillo Court of Appeals is one of 14 in Texas and comprises 46 Panhandle and South Plains counties. Each district has at three justices or judges. These justices sit in panels of three and review decisions rendered by district and county court cases. They do not hold trials, do not receive evidence, do not have witnesses, do not empanel juries, nor levy sentences. The judges read legal briefs submitted by the parties, listen to the oral arguments of legal counsel, research the law, determine whether the lower courts committed error, and write legal opinions.

Following is our analysis and recommendation in each race.

7th District Court of Appeals
The Democratic candidate is H. Bryan Poff from Canyon, who has been on the Court of Appeals since 1988. Before that, he was district court judge in Amarillo for 12 years. With almost 600 opinions written, he has been overturned by a higher court only nine times. He has earned a reputation as a conservative judge and has imposed the death penalty.

The Republican challenger is Brian Quinn of Lubbock, making his first try at the bench. He has been in private appellate practice in Lubbock since 1983. He is a law school honor graduate who clerked for a federal judge before going into private practice. He has experience at all levels of state and federal courts, and is a strong believer in judicial restraint, wherein judges apply the law and leave "making the law" to the legislature.

By a margin of personally visiting with Quinn and his taking the trouble to visit Hereford during the campaign, a vote is recommended for Quinn.

Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 1
There is a big difference between the two candidates in this race. Incumbent Justice Charles F. Campbell, a Democrat, has been on the court for 12 years. Most lawyers who have appeared before his bench consider him one of the most intelligent jurists around. He was a prosecutor for 13 years before sitting on the court.

The Republican candidate is a Houston lawyer, Steve Mansfield. He had no experience as a judge and Texas Lawyer, a newspaper, has questioned his stated credentials. He claimed he was born in Houston but, in fact, he was born in Brookline, Mass. He claimed to have handled over 100 cases of various types, but Texas Lawyer discovered those cases were mostly in-house insurance company law and a few misdemeanor offenses. No contest—Campbell should be returned to the court.

Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2
On the other hand, there is little difference between the two candidates seeking the Place 2 seat. No matter who wins, the election will place the first woman justice on the court.

The Republican candidate is Sharon Keller, who has 16 years of experience practicing criminal law, family law, juvenile law and some appellate work. She worked in the appellate section of the Dallas County district attorney's office until she resigned to campaign for the court.

The Democratic candidate is Betty Marshall, who has spent her career in the appellate area of the law. She works as an appellate lawyer for the Fort Worth 2nd Court of Appeals, then as co-chief of the appellate division of the Tarrant County district attorney's office. Her husband, Chris Marshall, an assistant D.A., was killed in the shooting rampage at the Tarrant County courthouse in 1992.

Both claim they deplore judicial activism and support the death penalty. You can't go wrong. We'll vote for Marshall.

OUT BLUE By Garry Wesner

You know, I think I found one reason our society is having trouble lowering the crime rate.

The other day I got a one-page fax newsletter put out by CrimeStrike, a division of the National Rifle Association.

This publication regularly sends out something called "CrimeStrike News," which has information about crime from the NRA point of view.

In this issue, the NRA is railing against a new women's prison in Connecticut that features such things as an indoor gymnasium, softball field, shuffleboard court, campus-like decor and facilities for conjugal visits.

This newsletter quotes one Larry Meachum, a Correction Commissioner, as saying the women "residents" need "an environment conducive to safety and love."

I join the NRA in giving a snort of disgust at this idiocy. The first problem is that this guy (and others like him) forget their definitions. These people are not "residents" they are "inmates" and "criminals." "Residents" live in residences. A prison is not a residence.

Secondly, it seems to me that crime victims are the ones who need an environment conducive to safety and love -- criminals need punishment.

I am not intimately familiar with Texas prisons, having never spent time in any of them, but many years ago I got the opportunity to tour a medium security penitentiary in New Mexico.

This pen had small cell blocks, with cells opening out onto a common room featuring a television, game table and other stuff.

Maybe I'm just naive, but it seems to me that the purpose of prison is to keep bad people away from good people.

What we need to do to put some unpleasantness back into crime is to make prison a place people don't want to visit, not make prison a resting-ground for criminals.

Now I know that liberals say that's cruel, but it just isn't fair that a family who loses all their possessions to a burglar, a woman whose husband is shot down during a robbery, or a girl who will never have a normal life because of being raped should have to live with the knowledge that the people who ruined their lives are living in comfort and ease in prison while they cover behind locked doors and barred windows.

What ever happened to the old chain gangs that spent 12 hours a day busting rocks in a quarry, shackled together, a shotgun-armed jailer with a hair trigger standing guard?

What about the notion that the prisoners spend their days in hard labor, making life easier for those of us on the outside? (Remember the license plate factories?)

I recall a case years ago in my career where a man accused of a double murder was finally captured and jailed. When he was caught, he was thin, sickly and suffering from having been on the run with nothing much to eat for an extended period of time.

When he went to trial, this man's hair had been trimmed neatly and he had filled out considerably on three square meals a day.

We are spending millions of dollars a year to house the scum of the earth in places where they can sit around all day without lifting a finger to help.

We are paying more millions to hire prison guards to bring these people their meals, watch over them night and day, protect them from harm and keep them safe from the elements.

To that we add free medical care (heaven forbid that one of them gets a pimple on his butt and sues the prison system!) and, in cases, a classroom education -- all for even more millions of dollars.

If we really want to put "justice" back in our justice system, we need to make prison something to be feared.

Putting prisoners in tents? Sure! Overcrowding? The more the merrier!

A bowl of hot cereal for breakfast, a plain lunch and supper and no junk food for snacks? Suits me!

No prison stores where inmates can buy candy, magazines and other conveniences of life? They don't deserve them!

I know there are people in prison who are basically good, but who just "made a mistake," but they comprise a very small percentage of the whole. Until we make prison into something people don't want to experience, they will never have the motivation to learn how to get along on the outside.

(Of course, when it comes to local jails, there's not much that can be done, because jail officials are bound by existing laws and must build and operate those jails according to specific standards or face serious penalties. I'm talking about action that needs to be taken on a state or federal level, accompanied by societal change.)

Finally, if we combine prison reform with putting teeth in existing laws to increase terms and reduce "good time" and parole opportunities, and strengthen capital punishment laws -- i.e., greatly expanding the scope of capital crimes and speeding the execution process drastically -- we might make a difference in the crime rate.

Otherwise, I think revolving prison doors will be with us for a long time to come and we will live in fear that we will be crime victims ourselves one day.

A question recently from a friend jerked my mind around -- why haven't I written about the dust storms of the 1930s, I was asked.

Let me answer this way: I'm old but not old enough to remember dust storms very well. Some memorabilia snow and ice storms are much fresher in my mind.

The small house where my family lived was like thousands of others in the Dust Bowl -- there was no weatherstripping that could keep the fine dust out of the house.

Folks knew the difference between rain clouds and dust clouds, when the sky turned dark in the middle of the day. Blowing dirt could obscure the house across the street, as surely as if a fog had descended.

The only dust storm I can remember is vivid. My mother stuffed damp cuptowels around window frames. Bath towels were wet and laid at the door sills.

And still the dust filtered into the house. To this day, I can feel the grit on my teeth from the dust. And, I can see the mounds of dirt that accumulated at the doors.

Many years later, I lived in the Permian Basin, where I could look out my kitchen window and see the red dirt of Seminole or the sandy soil of Lamesa heading toward Midland, but it was never like that 1930s experience.

Modern tillage on cropland seems to have reduced the incidence of dust storms in the Panhandle of Texas and Oklahoma and West Texas, but every once in a while, a north wind kicks up the dust but there's no comparison to those earlier years.

Snow and ice are another matter. An icestorm that occurred when my family lived in the same house prompted us to evacuate our home because of a danger that arose. A "highline" -- actually there were three high voltage lines strung on the poles -- was encased in a thick ice sheath. Electric company officials feared the weight would cause the poles to snap.

All over town, telephone lines were in the same shape and, indeed, many lines fell to the ground when the poles broke off. The result was a home-owned telephone company on the verge of bankruptcy.

The icy conditions came from a rain, freezing mist and snow. As a layer of ice built on the utility lines, another was forming. When the storm ended, everyone hoped the ice would just melt off.

But, below-freezing temperatures kept the ice in place. A new fear came then -- if the wind started blowing before the ice melted, the damage could be catastrophic in our small town.

And, in the case of the line alongside my family's home, a little swing and sway surely could pop the poles.

We went to my grandparents' house, at least for a night, while utility folks prepared for the worst. But, as the old saying, "if you don't like the weather, wait a minute," suggests, a warming trend replaced sub-freezing temperatures and ice started falling from the lines.

Then, everyone worried that one of the big chunks were strike someone in the head. It didn't happen.

To the best of my memory, school didn't even dismiss for a day. The electric company kept the power going and we had to go to school, despite the weather.

That first home I remember was not much better, or worse, than others in town. I remember when it was modernized -- Daddy put in a bathroom.

And, I remember when they brought my baby sister home from the hospital.

Daddy had left a ladder leaning against the back of the house and they found their five-year-old sitting on the roof.

I was irate that I had a sister. I had ordered a baby brother.

And, I was further infuriated when they told me that she couldn't be exchanged.

Model for character a Charlotte 'landmark'

EDITOR'S NOTE - He was the model for actor Nick Nolte's character in the 1985 movie "Down and Out in Beverly Hills," a hairy street person scrounging through garbage bins for recyclable cans and bottles. But he never asks for handouts and he doesn't drink, police say, and in Charleston, W.Va, he's become something of a celebrity.

By JENNIFER BUNDY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W.Va. - He's known as "Aqualung," Charleston's soiled, smelly, scruffy street person, as forbidding as they come. But downtown office workers look out for him and worry when they don't see him pushing his world around in his shopping cart.

Few know his real name, but Bill Dunn is well-known and a friend to all, in his own way.

Even Police Chief Dallas Staples fondly calls him "one of Charleston's originals ... part of the landscape." No one is sure where Dunn sleeps, or what he eats, or even what he looks like under all the hair and beard and overcoats. But downtown clothier Anthony Paranzino insists, "He's not a bum."

Dunn, 58, was the model for actor Nick Nolte's character in the 1985 movie "Down and Out in Beverly Hills."

Police credit him with helping solve a murder in 1978 when he turned in evidence - a wallet - he found in a Dumpster.

He also has been featured in paintings displayed at the state Capitol.

And when Dunn recently was arrested in a distant county, jailed, then sent to a psychiatric hospital, his downfall was documented on local television newscasts and on the front pages of newspapers.

He got the nickname "Aqualung" because he resembles a character on a Jethro Tull album cover.

Despite the celebrity he has gained during his 20 years on Charleston's streets, Dunn once told a friend he just wants to be left alone. He gets angry when news photographers occasionally try to take his picture.

Staples says Dunn is popular because he's not a transient, he doesn't ask for money, he doesn't drink, and he's a loner.

"I've never known him to bother anybody," Staples says.

And he's hard to miss. "He does attract attention," Paranzino said. "He should sell billboard space. Everybody looks at him."

A jail barber trimmed his long hair and beard, and his overcoat is gone, at least until cold weather returns. But he still has his supermarket cart, filled with plastic grocery bags stuffed with cans, cloth and junk and, he says, a sleeping bag and tools "for work."

"You'll see the cart get to the point he can barely move it, then a week later, he's started over," says Dan Combs, manager of a downtown silk florist.

In "Down and Out in Beverly Hills," Nolte's homeless man also wore a heavy overcoat and pushed an overflowing grocery cart.

Nolte, a former Charleston resident, never met Dunn. He just followed him around, his publicist says.

Rumors about Dunn abound. Various people say he was a stockbroker, a lawyer, an undercover drug agent, an FBI agent, a professor, or a millionaire.

Others say he took to the streets after his wife took his children and left with his best friend.

Dunn just says he came on the Chicago bus to look for work.

Although he'll smile at anyone who says hello to him, Dunn rarely talks and rarely completes a sentence when he does. Sometimes he refers to himself as "I," and sometimes as "we."

"I think New York I was born, school in California or school in New York," he says. He has a cousin in New Jersey, he says.

Dunn says he has never been married, never had children and never had a well-paying job.

He has been an elevator operator in an apartment building, pumped gas and sold popcorn at a baseball park. He told a reporter he once worked on a horse farm near Kansas City.

Now he makes money recycling items he digs out of the trash for his cart. If he finds valuables, he turns them in to the police.

Dunn was arrested on July 5 when a man said he found him going through trash in his garage in Friendly. When the man asked Dunn what he was doing, Dunn allegedly pulled a knife and ran.

A police officer said he found Dunn hiding under a truck a half-mile away and they struggled. Dunn went to jail, but bit another inmate and was sent to a state psychiatric hospital.

Charges of trespassing and resisting arrest later were dropped.

Dunn says it took him 15 days to walk 85 miles from Charleston to Friendly "to take a vacation."

His out-of-town excursions are usually noticed.

In 1985, he went to Washington, D.C., to see what winter was like in another city, he told Staples, then a patrol officer. He had left his shopping cart on the street and people worried he had been the victim of foul play. Police looked for him for months.

Staples told him to please let police know the next time he left town. And, when he returned to Washington the next year, he checked in before he left.

On his way back to Charleston in the spring of 1986, Dunn was arrested in Cumberland, Md., after police found him in a state Department of Highways building. He was charged with breaking and entering, trespassing and carrying a concealed weapon, a handgun he said he found.

He was put on a bus to Charleston three days later, part of a plea agreement. His return, like the year before, made front-page news.

Dunn's daily life is almost as much a mystery as his past.

Dunn used to hide in the library at night to sleep, says the Rev. Jim Thomas, a Baptist minister who retired as the Kanawha County Public Library's building superintendent in 1982.

Dunn seemed well-educated and read the library's scientific and law books and newspapers, particularly The Wall Street Journal, Thomas says.

Dunn often sits on a riverside bench below Staples' City Hall office. Staples often sees people give Dunn food or money.

He often huddles over his small transistor radio, listening to baseball games. For years, he was a regular at Charleston's minor league ballpark.

Two winters ago, Dunn spent a lot of time in a small mall below a city parking garage. He often stationed himself by the door, opening it for passers-by, said Lee Anne Kenney, manager of The Computer Store.

"I noticed how people would not take his offer. I thought that was unfortunate," she said. "I don't feel sorry for him. I feel sorry when people don't appreciate his effort to take a social interest."

"I have always wondered if this is his choice, the way he wants to live," she said. "He seems to be perfectly content with it. I always have the sense of a peaceful, content person. I've never had any sense of hostility or anger from him at all."

Dunn says he began living on the streets because "we just couldn't get the money together, the welfare or Social Security, to survive."

He said street life is "very difficult, but you get through. Not too bad, except the rats."

Thomas says Dunn once told him, "There's one great thing I wish people would do, and that's leave me alone."

Q. With a F.H.A. (Federal Housing Authority) loan, does the Federal Government actually provide the mortgage money?

A. No, a local lending institution lends the money and the Federal Housing Authority guarantees the loan for them. F.H.A. loans take about 3 to 5 weeks to arrange and cost points to place, but a 80% mortgage with a lower interest rate makes an attractive financial package to resell, should you wish to. Bulldogs hold off Whitefaces for 28-18 win

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Borger Bulldogs stopped Hereford three times inside the Borger 25-yard line in the first half and held on for a 28-18 win Friday night in Whiteface Stadium.

Hereford fell to 1-2 in District 1-4A and 3-4 overall. The loss most likely ended the Herd's playoff hopes.

Borger improved the 3-1 and 6-2 and kept its playoff possibilities alive. The Bulldogs end the regular season at Pampa, and a playoff spot could be the victor's spoils.

Borger led the Herd all the way, helped by two first-half touchdowns by tailback Cornell Jones. Hereford got within two points with touchdowns just before halftime and midway through the fourth quarter, but two-point conversions failed both times.

Shortly after Hereford cut the lead to 20-18 in the fourth quarter, Borger capitalized on an interception and 35-yard return by safety Chad Rives. Quarterback Toby Guest ran 28 yards for a touchdown with 1:45 left. A two-point conversion, a gadget-pass from tailback Jones to Guest, sealed the win for the Bulldogs.

Hereford came up with four big plays in the first half but capitalized on only one of them. On separate possessions, the Herd got a 51-yard

Marquise Brown kickoff return, a 43-yard pass play from Michael Brown to Marc Haney, and punt returns of 47 and 37 yards by Ronald Torres. Each time, Hereford got inside the Borger 22-yard line, but the Herd got only six points: a touchdown on the fourth opportunity.

Hereford coach Danny Haney was frustrated by the Herd's lack of success on its first four possessions:

"In the first half, the lost opportunities inside the 20, we just couldn't get it in," Haney said. "We knew Borger had a good defense; they held Randall to six points, and Randall was lucky to get those."

Marquise Brown returned the opening kickoff 51 yards to the Borger 41-yard line, but penalties on the Herd killed the drive. After a first down at the 31, a 15-yard illegal chop block penalty put the Herd in a first-down-and-25 hole. A 16-yard scramble by quarterback Michael Brown brought up a fourth-and-inches situation, but two consecutive illegal procedure penalties pushed the ball back 10 yards. An incomplete pass gave Borger the ball on downs.

Haney was frustrated by some of the penalties, flabbergasted by others. "I really don't know," Haney said. "That chop block, I don't know. We jumped offsides on the first drive. We were at fourth-and-inches, and we jumped offsides."

Hereford was flagged for nine penalties for 80 yards in the game--five for 45 yards in the first seven minutes alone. Borger got its share of flags, too: seven for 60 yards.

After Hereford's first series, the Bulldogs drove 69 yards in 10 plays for their first score. They were aided by a 15-yard pass interference call and a five-yard face mask penalty.

From the Herd 27-yard line, Bulldog quarterback Toby Guest hit a wide-open Jones for a touchdown pass. Josh McKinney missed the kick, but Borger led 6-0 with 4:03 left in the first quarter.

On the fourth play after the ensuing kickoff, Marquise Brown fumbled and Borger recovered at the Hereford 27-yard line. Borger needed only seven plays, and on the first play of the second quarter, Jones scampered four yards for the score. Guest passed to Jones for a two-point conversion, and Borger led 14-0.

"We turned the ball over to them on offense the (second) series, and they put it in," Haney said. "That's a situation where the offense needs to drive the ball, but we turned it over, and they were able to get good field position."

The 43-yard pass to Marc Haney from Michael Brown followed the kickoff and set the Herd up at the Borger 20. Three runs put the ball at the 6, but then the offense stopped. Tight end Scott Parker dropped a pass in the end zone, and Michael Brown was sacked by McKinney for an 11-yard loss. Following another incomplete pass, Terance High tried a 34-yard field goal, but it was wide right.

Hereford stopped Borger cold, and Torres returned the punt 37 yards to the Borger 22, but an illegal procedure penalty helped stop the Herd. The ball went over on downs, and again Borger went nowhere and punted.

This time, Torres returned the punt 58 yards for an apparent touchdown, but a flag was thrown for an illegal block in the back, and the ball came back to the Borger 21. The infraction occurred ten yards away from Torres as he was crossing the five-yard line with no one near him. Coach Haney called it a "real cheap call."

Ironically, Hereford scored anyway. On the fourth play, Armando Zambrano dove one yard for the touchdown. High's extra point kick was blocked, leaving the score 14-6 with 3:26 left in the half.

Hereford scored again with four seconds left before halftime, going 77 yards in 10 plays. Michael Brown ran for 15 yards and threw for 47--three times for 32 yards to Wade Backus, who also drew a late hit penalty which tacked on 15 yards. Finally, Brown hit Marc Haney for a two-yard TD pass.

Michael Brown was stopped on a run for two points, making Borger's halftime lead 14-12.

The teams traded punts to start the second half, but Borger got untracked for a 10-play, 70-yard scoring drive, ending with Jones' 21 yard run. The kick was wide and Borger led 20-12 at the end of the third quarter.

After another exchange of punts, Hereford got going. Michael Brown hit Marc Haney with two passes, a 38-yarder, then a 16-yarder to the Borger 24. Marquise Brown then took a pitch left, dashed through a huge hole and scored untouched.

Hereford went for two points to tie it (the Herd was ahead on penetrations), but Backus bobbled Michael Brown's pass and dropped it. Borger still led, 20-18, with 5:56 left.

The Herd defense stopped Borger after a 24-yard pass put the Bulldogs at the Herd 36. Borger punted away from Torres, and it rolled out of bounds at the four-yard line.

Michael Brown went 29 yards on a quarterback draw, but three plays later, he went for Torres deep and Borger's Rives made the interception. Rives returned it 35 yards to the Herd 37, setting Borger's final touchdown and sealing two-point conversion.

The loss spoiled a pretty good defensive effort by the Herd, which held Borger to 287 yards of offense--well under its average of 397 yards per game. Jones, Guest and receiver Tim Baker all came into the game among the Class 4A leaders in rushing, passing and receiving, respectively.

Guest passed for 162 yards Friday after coming in averaging 184 yards per game. To his credit five of his nine completions (on 20 attempts) came on third down, and four netted first downs.

Baker caught four passes for 67 yards, after averaging 90 yards per game, and he had no touchdowns. Herd cornerback Homer Hamilton drew coverage on Baker and broke up two deep passes.

"Homer did a good job; we had him on Baker man-to-man all night," Herd safety Tanner Murphey said. "The linebackers did a good job on the backs out, and we had a good pass rush most of the time. We just needed a big play tonight, and we didn't get it."

Borger committed no turnovers, covering its own fumble once.

Although Jones scored three touchdowns, one receiving, he ran for only 81 yards. He came in with 851 yards despite missing a game and a half. He ran for 271 yards and four touchdowns last year against Hereford. Friday, he was stopped several times for losses.

"(The coaches were) telling us all week not to go to him; to corral him," said Herd end David Hicks, who was in on several tackles-for-losses. "The tackles and linebackers, when we (ends) had him contained, they came up and finished him off."

"That was the best game defensively we've had all year long," Hicks said. "We just came up a little short."

Rain hits high school football; Sherman trips Denison in mud

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

Weeklong bad weather that cancelled high school classes and disrupted practice schedules lasted into the weekend, turning many football fields into mud pits and forcing postponement of at least a dozen games.

Among the games affected by the elements was the "Battle of the Ax" game between Class 4A's No. 6 Sherman and No. 8 Denison.

The game was on schedule, but in bog-like conditions.

"I didn't run, I slid most of the game," said Sherman running back Jerwayne Parker, who cruised for 90 yards and two touchdowns as the Bearcats and the slick turf stopped the Yellow Jackets 21-0.

Denison made only two first downs (one off a penalty) and lost three fumbles, which led to 14 Sherman points.

"We just couldn't get started offensively on this field," said Denison quarterback Brandon Powell, who completed only one of nine passes for nine yards.

In the only other game pitting ranked teams, Class 3A's second-ranked Sealy defeated No. 9 Columbus 35-14 behind Fred Smith's 192 yards rushing and two touchdowns.

Other notable results included easy victories by the top-ranked teams in all five classes, an 84-0 victory by 5A's No. 2 Austin Westlake over Austin Johnson, a 33-27 loss by 1A's No. 9 Roscoe to Sterling City and 5A's No. 5 Aldine MacArthur tying Spring 28-28.

Among the games called off because of bad weather was 5A's No. 10 Humble at Humble Kingwood. Kerens, ranked No. 10 in 2A, trailed Cayuga 14-0 when their game was suspended at the half.

At Sherman's Bearcat Stadium, things began slowly with neither team able to get going in the slop.

But Parker got Sherman going with two touchdowns in the second quarter. Michael Reddick's 5-yard scoring run in the third quarter sealed the Bearcats' third win in a row against Denison, meaning they get to keep the weather-beaten "Ax" trophy for yet another year. Their rivalry is one of the oldest in the state, dating to 1912. Sherman leads the series 50-22-6.

In other 4A action, top-ranked Stephenville rolled to its state-best 24th consecutive victory by crushing Cleburne 52-0 and No. 2 Waxahachie blasted Midlothian 44-0.

Third-ranked La Marque disappointed those who expected a Clear Brook upset by posting its 35th straight district victory, 24-0.

"We felt like we were underrated and the underdogs in this game," said La Marque coach Alan Weddell, who recorded his 100th career victory. "But we played like champions tonight."

Fourth-ranked Sulphur Springs punted Texarkana Liberty-Eylau 48-0. No. 5 Gregory-Portland beat Robstown 56-20 and No. 7 Austin Reagan topped Austin McCallum 31-15.

No. 9 Corpus Christi Calallen followed a 54-0 victory over Rockport-Fulton with a 51-0 victory over Corpus Christi Flour Bluff, and No. 10 Bay City defeated Lamar Consolidated 29-14.

In the other game pitting ranked teams, Sealy led only 14-7 in the fourth quarter until Brad Burttschell threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to Jarred Novicki and Smith scored on a 22-yard run.

Columbus got 160 yards rushing and a touchdown from John Morris. Cuero quarterback Clint Finley threw for three TDs and ran for another as the No. 1 Gobblers beat Gonzales 48-14.

Third-ranked Jefferson beat Pittsburg 13-6. No. 4 Sweeny downed Hitchcock 36-8. No. 5 Gainesville defeated Sanger 21-7 and No. 6 Alvarado squeaked past Kennedale 14-13.

Seventh-ranked Marlin had another nice defensive night with a 54-3 victory over China Spring. No. 8 Ballinger punted Merkel 64-0 and Linden-Kildare enjoyed its first week at No. 10 by defeating Winnsboro 41-6.

Westlake's tremendous victory was sparked by the return of junior running back Ryan Nunez, who hadn't played since breaking his foot in the season opener.

Nunez, a 1,000-yard rusher as a sophomore, scored the first four times he touched the ball as the Chaparrals scored the most points in school history, breaking the previous mark by 14.

Aldine MacArthur suffered its second tie in four weeks as Spring's Lorenz Leon scored on a 5-yard run with 3:45 remaining and Mike Gingrich kicked the tying point.

Top-ranked Abilene Cooper clinched its third straight playoff berth behind a career-best 215 yards rushing from Gaber King in a 43-26 victory over San Angelo Central.

In the rest of 5A, No. 4 Plano East beat Carrollton Smith 55-7. No. 7 Arlington Lamar defeated Arlington Bowie 49-7 and No. 9 Tyler John Tyler snuck past Lufkin 31-30.

The lowest two classes had their usual share of one-sided games, although the wet conditions may have kept results from becoming even more lopsided.

Class 2A's top-ranked Schulenburg got key contributions from all of its stars in a 37-0 victory over Shiner, and second-ranked Archer City ran for 331 yards in its 41-7 victory over Holliday.

Third-ranked Goldthwaite beat San Saba 40-15. No. 4 East Bernard slammed Brazos Consolidated 64-7 and No. 5 Pilot Point defeated S&S Consolidated 42-0.

Thorndale showed why it is the top team in 1A, gaining 280 yards on nine rushes and getting touchdowns on the opening kickoff and a first-half punt return en route to a 73-0 pasting of Holland. The Bulldogs had 60 points at halftime.

Second-ranked Sudan was half as good, getting 30 first-half points in a 41-0 victory over Anton. Third-ranked Crawford slammed Meridian 54-0. No. 4 Burkeville cruised by Apple Springs 44-6 and No. 5 Iola blanked Burton 60-0.

Cowboys expect Cards to be tough

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys have every reason to believe they will beat the Arizona Cardinals for the ninth straight time - and every reason to expect an ambush.

The Cowboys (5-1) aren't looking for the combination of breaks that allowed them to beat the Cardinals 38-3 two weeks ago in Buddy Ryan's worst coaching defeat. Dallas marched for its first touchdown, then intercepted three of Jay Schroeder's passes and ran up a 28-0 halftime lead by scoring on drives of 23, 18 and 26 yards.

"Their offense turned the ball over quite a bit and gave us great field position, and we were able to take advantage of that," Emmitt Smith said.

This week, Ryan has shown a wild mistrust in the forward pass, even though Steve Beuerlein hit six during a fourth-quarter drive last week that allowed the Cardinals to tie Washington and eventually beat the Redskins 19-16 in overtime.

"I expect them to run the ball at least 40 times and to play a very conservative offense," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said.

Ryan said Switzer has figured things out correctly. Ryan has had his 2-4 squad working on a low-risk offense featuring runs by Ronald Moore and short screens to fullback Larry Centers, who leads Arizona with 29 catches.

Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin has 29 catches, too. But Irvin, the star of a big-play passing game, is averaging 15.1 yards per grab to Centers' 8.5 yards.

Alvin Harper's average - an NFL-leading 25.4 yards - is even better, but he has only 13 receptions for the Cowboys.

Beuerlein, benched after the first two losses and reinstated as a starter for the Redskins, wasn't overjoyed about the game plan. But he said it was understandable, given the fact he, Schroeder and Jim McMahon have thrown 16 interceptions.

"I'm not going to sit here and hypothesize and try to figure it all out," said Beuerlein, who left Dallas for the Cardinals in 1993. "The bottom line is I'm going to go with the game plan and make the most of it, and when I get a chance to make plays, I'd better make plays."

The Cowboys, who won their third in a row by beating Philadelphia 24-13 last Sunday, never turned over the ball against the Cardinals. Dallas' five interceptions against Arizona went a long way toward making it the best in the NFL in turnover ratio (plus-9) and in team defense (244.8 yards a game).

Compared with the week before the Oct. 9 game, when Ryan said his team would take the Cowboys to the woodshed for "an old-fashioned butt-kicking," pregame talk was relatively low-key. The Cowboys know the losing team can feed off the humiliation of a blowout, and the Cardinals didn't want to have to eat their words again.

Ryan, as usual, said his fourth-ranked defense is the best in football, but he spoke about the Cowboys with uncharacteristic respect.

"You don't need a motivational factor to play the world champions," he said.

Linebacker Eric Hill said the victory over Washington, Arizona's second in three games, restored the team's belief in itself.

"Dallas is the best team in the league right now, but they're not 35 points better than the Cardinals," Hill said.

Smith hasn't had a 100-yard game against the Cardinals since he ran for 112 on Sept. 20, 1992. He was slowed by a hamstring pull two weeks ago and gained only 22 yards, but he scored twice.

He echoed Hill's belief that the rematch will be closer.

"I'm not thinking about another 38-3 blowout," Smith said. "I didn't even think about a 38-3 blowout the first time we met, but I do expect a very tough and physical ballgame."

Spurs hope big fine will rein in Rodman

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Gregg Popovich perhaps can hope that his tough stance on Dennis Rodman will bring the forward more in line with the San Antonio Spurs' team concept.

The Spurs' executive vice president for basketball operations fined Rodman $15,000 Thursday night when the NBA's top rebounder failed to appear on the team bench for a preseason game against the Milwaukee Bucks. Rodman was not scheduled to play because of back spasms.

The size of the fine means it could be taken to arbitration. Rodman did not comment on the matter Friday, and his agent could not be reached for comment.

"He was directed to be on the bench," Popovich said Friday afternoon. "No, he did not ask to be let out."

"The fine depends on the circumstances. There are specific fines listed in the players' books for specific infractions, but different actions can be taken according to conduct," Popovich said.

"You have to gauge it by past behavior: Is this the first, second or fourth time? You have to consider your objective, the message that you want to deliver. It's very subjective."

Valentine takes challenge of managing in Japan

By JIM REEVES

Fort Worth Star-Telegram
ARLINGTON, Texas - Bobby Valentine has always dreamed big dreams. Some have come true. Some haven't. That hasn't stopped him from dreaming, or from following the sun.

Or in the case of his latest adventure, the Rising Sun.

Valentine is about to tread where no American has ever stepped before: Into the dugout as manager of the Chiba Lotte Marines in the Japanese Baseball League.

"Konichiwa," Bobby-san. Welcome to the Land of the Rising Sun.

Valentine will sign a lucrative two-year contract with an option for a third year at the end of the month, in effect forming a partnership with former Japanese baseball star Tetsuro Hirooka.

Hirooka, currently the color analyst covering the Japanese World Series, will become the team's new general manager. Hirooka, who spent a year in the United States studying major-league baseball after his playing career ended in the '70s, accepted the challenge of leading the Marines under the condition that he be able to incorporate American baseball concepts and hire an American manager. His choice was Valentine. The two had met during one of Valentine's four previous trips as one of the big-league's baseball ambassadors to that country.

Hirooka, who had yet to agree to take the job that the ownership of the Lotte Marines was offering, flew to Norfolk, Va., where Valentine was managing the Mets' Triple-A team, and spent five days with him. His offer was unique: "I'll take the job they're offering me, if you'll take the one I'm offering you."

"I thought about it all of July," Valentine said over breakfast the other day. "He wanted to talk about it in August again. I talked to (Mets general manager) Joe McLivaine. I talked to Steve Phillips, the Mets' minor-league director. I got their input and advice, and it's just too good an opportunity to turn down. It just seems like one of those situations, if you pass this one up, it might never come down the road again."

Hirooka, a contemporary and All-Star with the great Japanese home-run champion Sadaharu Oh, and the challenge of doing something no American has ever done before are the magnets for Valentine.

"By the end of the season, I had basically committed to it," Valentine said. "If everything works out contractually the way we've talked about it, if it gets down on paper that way, I'm going to go for it. I'm going there with a commitment to do this thing because they're making a major commitment to me."

The team hasn't finished higher than fifth place in 20 years, which is why ownership has agreed to such radical changes. Its best asset is "the Japanese Nolan Ryan," Valentine said, a strikeout pitcher with a fastball that has been clocked at almost 100 mph. Each Japanese team is allowed three American players, two hitters and one pitcher. Former Rangers Pete Incaviglia and Bobby Witt have contacted Valentine about the possibility of going to Japan with him. Valentine has already signed up former Rangers coach Tom Robson as his hitting coach.

You know Bobby. He listens to Japanese language tapes every day in his car. He learned Spanish quickly, but Japanese, he says, is a much more difficult challenge.

"Still, baseball is baseball there, and I'll be in uniform the majority of the time," he said. "The players speak 'baseballese,' even though they don't speak much English. There will be two interpreters in the dugout, one for the players and one for the manager."

Yes, when Valentine confronts an umpire, his interpreter will be right there with him. But no shouting, please. Some Japanese customs won't change. Umpire-san may be blind, but you must tell him so politely.

Chiba, home of Disneyland in Japan and the new international airport, is a suburb of Tokyo. The teams play in colorful, clean 45,000-seat stadiums and travel across the country by bullet train. No trip is longer than three hours. Valentine will live in a comfortable three-bedroom condominium only minutes from the Marines' ballpark.

"I don't know where this is going to take me," Valentine said, "but I firmly believe that one of the ways baseball is going to get out of its jam is by breaking down that international door."

"When you see basketball being played in Barcelona, football games in Mexico before 100,000 people and NFL exhibition games in Europe; when baseball's championship trophy has been in another country (Canada) for two years ... the way to keep baseball viable is to kick down that international door, and I've always had the vision of being a front man for that."

"It seems to me that with a little imagination in one winter meetings, major-league owners could decide that they would go to divisional play with a wild card. What if those wild-card teams were the winners of the Central (National League) and Pacific (AL) in the Japanese League? Now imagine the economic rewards of Coca-Cola's commercial, or Chevron's commercial, going around the world."

Think about it: a true "World Series. It is, Valentine pointed out, a virtually untapped resource that American baseball can no longer afford to ignore.

"That's how players can make $10 million a year," Valentine said. "It's not the owners breaking the union. It's finding new sources of revenue. I hate to think that we're going to stop growth in one of the greatest industries in this country. Baseball can knock down that international door and find a treasure trove."

And when that door finally opens, not surprisingly, baseball will find Valentine already there.

Foreman still chasing boxing title

PAUL WALLEN JR.

Marshall News Messenger
MARSHALL, Texas - Nobody argues with George Foreman about his ability to land the big punch. But Foreman thinks his ability to avoid the powerful swings of Michael Moorer will decide their heavyweight title bout in November.

The 45-year-old Foreman hasn't been in the ring since a June 1993 loss to Tommy Morrison, but will get a shot at the World Boxing Association (WBA) and International Boxing Federation (IBF) belts against Moorer, who stunned 2-to-1 favorite Evander Holyfield in April with a 12-round majority decision in Las Vegas.

Moorer's power has helped him register 30 knockouts in his 35 professional bouts - all wins. Foreman has no desire to be drawn into a macho punching match, and plans to show the world his fancy footwork.

"I am a boxer," Foreman said between training sessions at his ranch in Marshall last week. "A lot of times people don't see that. I can hit, but I also stay out of the way of a lot of harm. It's not like I'm going out there searching to take a punch. I can hit, but then also avoid getting hit."

The matchup is viewed by many boxing analysts as an easy title defense for Moorer, while he waits for former champ Mike Tyson's expected release from prison this spring. But Foreman promises that underestimating his desire to become heavyweight champion of the world would be a mistake.

"Michael Moorer is young, of course, and people think that's just the crowning glory for somebody to be younger," Foreman said. "So his age is supposed to be a threat to me, and he's had some knockouts, which means he's regarded as a true puncher. He's everything you'd want in a champion. But this fight is ideal for me, because it will truly be a challenge."

Foreman was nearly barred from fighting Moorer by the WBA, which initially refused to sanction him. He was forced to undergo retina examinations by doctors in Houston and New York, then go to court, before the WBA finally gave way.

"That was strange, but we took them to court and battled," Foreman said. "They had to give me my chance. You have to fight for yourself. This is a country in which the system is there for you, if you want to use it. The courts wouldn't allow them to ban me from the ring." Moorer has been criticizing Foreman as a "fake" for years, and publicly lambasted him for insinuating the win over Holyfield was fixed during comments as a Home Box Office commentator. Foreman refused to say anything negative about Moorer, but admitted his remarks on TV may have provided the heavyweight champ with extra motivation.

"I'm a hybrid of sorts. I go out as a reporter on television and talk about other fighters, then come back in the ring as a boxer," Foreman said. "Then they've got me where they want me. When people read stuff they don't like from the average reporter, they don't try to hit the reporter. But when they see me climbing into the ring, they're anxious to take a shot at me."

The winner between Moorer and Foreman will have several opportunities for big-money fights. There is a possible title unification bout with 29-year-old World Boxing Council champion Oliver McCall (24-5), who recently earned a surprising second-round TKO over Lennox Lewis. And whoever holds the title when Tyson is released will be in line for one of the biggest paydays in boxing history. But Foreman insists his mission is about more than money.

"It's important for me to do something now, at the age of 45, so people will understand that getting older is not a death sentence as an athlete," Foreman said. "There's no reason to stop just because of age, you can still pursue and attack any dream you want. That was something I decided to prove when I originally came back to boxing, and this fight will be a great opportunity to make that point again."

Foreman sees himself as a trailblazer for older athletes. Defeating Moorer would land the world's most prestigious sports title in the lap of a man approaching 50, and nothing would make him happier.

"There are athletes signing contracts now past the age of 35, and it's no coincidence that it wasn't happening until I got back into boxing. In basketball, football, anything ... it comes from what I did in boxing. If I can go in there and do something to really make a dent in this heavyweight title match, I'll always be able to sit back and say, 'I made a contribution to the world.' Some day, age is not going to mean anything as far as athletic accomplishment."

Win or lose against Moorer, Foreman has no regrets about his long boxing career.

"The profession has been around for a long time, it's as original as the dinosaurs. Boxing is hand-to-hand combat between two people. It's the granddaddy of every sport ... even sports like Ping-Pong and tennis are watered-down boxing. To be part of something as ancient as boxing has been a great thrill for me."

Future looks good as North Texas prepares for Big West Conference

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Forgive Matt Simon his exuberance when his North Texas University Eagles upset the fifth best team in second-division NCAA football last Saturday.

The North Texas coach crowed: "College football is back in the Metroplex!"

Well, Matt, it's already been here, kinda, over at Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, but everyone certainly applauds the can-do attitude of the Eagles athletic department headed by Craig Helwig.

The 38-17 victory over favored McNeese State signals some fast-improvement of the football program under Simon, who is in his first season.

There was a double victory of sorts for the Eagles. A homecoming crowd of 20,653 braved a steady drizzle to drive to Fouts Field in Denton to see crackerjack senior quarterback Mitch Maher hit 19 of 28 passes for 228 yards and three touchdowns.

The crowd satisfied the Eagles' final NCAA Division 1-A requirement of averaging 17,000 fans in their four home games.

UNT is 9,158 fans short of its target total of 68,000 but the NCAA allows season tickets sold to count toward total attendance. The school sold 10,600 season tickets.

North Texas has one home game left against Sam Houston on Oct. 29. The Eagles will be back into bigtime top division football next year and it won't be as an independent. The Eagles are leaving the Southland Conference to join the Big West Conference which has such schools as Idaho, New Mexico State, Nevada, Long Beach, Louisiana Tech, Pacific, Utah State, and Boise State in it. The winner of the Big West regular season receives an automatic bid to the Las Vegas Bowl where it plays the Mid-American Conference champion. The game is televised by ESPN.

Simon said it's good to be in a conference.

"I like the idea of competing for a championship and competing in a league that has a bowl game on television," Simon said. "Being an independent you don't know what you're going for."

Helwig said the Big West is strong in basketball and "has had several teams at the same time in the NCAA Tournament."

Basketball coach Tim Jankovich said "it's just as big a step for us in basketball as it is in football."

ESPN televises some Big West basketball games. The move certainly should help North Texas basketball recruiting.

North Texas doesn't plan any cupcake schedules when it gets into NCAA Division 1-A football.

The Eagles could possibly be playing Alabama, Oklahoma, and Texas A&M next year. Also, a home game with Kansas is on the books while the Eagles play an independent schedule for one year. The Eagles play in the Big West for the first time 1996.

It's good to see the Eagles making big plans while SMU still walks around in a daze trying to figure out if it should leave Ownby Stadium for either the Cotton Bowl or Texas Stadium which should be the obvious answer except to a handful of hardline alumni.

Saturday's attendance in the Cotton Bowl for the Houston game should give SMU a clue. The announced figures were about 11,000 but those in attendance said it was less than 5,000.

TCU has upgraded its home attendance dramatically this year with an aggressive marketing program, averaging some 35,000 per game. But let's all applaud the North Texas jump back to the bigtime. It could be fun to watch.

Only one question: When do they start calling themselves the "Mean Green" again?

Baseball Marathon

BOSTON (AP) - It was a marathon in baseball uniforms.

The longest game in the history of the sport was played here on May 1, 1920, with the Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves finishing in a 1-1 tie. The game was called because of darkness after 26 innings.

Both starting pitchers, Leon Cadore for Brooklyn and Joe Oeschger for Boston, went the distance.

It was a swiftly-played game, lasting only three hours and 50 minutes. On a basis of a nine-inning game, it would have been played in one hour and 20 minutes three times.

Fiery divorce case a high-stakes Texas thriller

"Heaven has no rage like love to hatred turned, nor hell a fury like a woman scorned"--William Congreve, 1670-1729.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Home-bound motorists that day saw a blonde in a silky black dress ram her red Mercedes convertible into the rear of a green Ford Explorer.

At the four-way stop sign, a younger, dark-haired woman in shorts and ankle socks jumped from the Explorer and confronted the driver of the offending convertible.

They exchanged words. Then they tore into one another.

It was, said witness Debbie Price, "an honest-to-goodness, hair-pulling, biting, scratching girl fight."

The date was Sept. 9, 1992. And though no one realized it, the public was getting its first glimpse of a calamitous and convoluted marital dispute styled Walker vs. Walker.

Ms. Price, then a columnist at the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, didn't know the combatants' identities, but had no problem recognizing a bizarre story.

"The blonde was slapping at the brunette, who seemed to be trying unsuccessfully to get her into a headlock," she wrote. "They were both kicking away...."

Ms. Price eyed the cars and the women rolling around on the asphalt road and concluded that "there's more to this than a smashed fender."

True. Revising a familiar quotation, Jim Lovelless, a lawyer in the tangled legal web, would later summarize it succinctly. "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," he sighed.

"Every day the heat turns up another notch," added Lovelless, who represents insurance wizard Jimmy Walker, 57, in the high stakes divorce case.

Alleging multiple adulterous acts, Wanda Walker, 56, wants at least a $45-million chunk of her husband's estate, valued as high as $60 million.

With a Nov. 7 trial date looming, the principals, according to court documents and sworn depositions, are millions of dollars apart in their legal claims.

The warring parties aren't talking in public, and the lawyers are reluctant to discuss the proceedings.

"But if you're gonna play, you gotta pay," said Jerry Loftin, Mrs.

Walker's attorney. "This is an extraordinary case with extraordinary rancor."

Insiders compare the saga of marital discord to "The War of the Roses," a darkly humorous Hollywood movie starring Michael Douglas and Kathleen Turner.

They refer to the Texas version as "The War of the Walkers."

Perhaps a city called "Cowntown" should expect wild and woolly divorce cases with megabucks on the line. And Fort Worth has had its share, the most infamous involving Cullen and Priscilla Davis.

That dispute turned murderous in August 1976 when a man dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig invaded the $6 million Davis mansion and gunned down four people, killing two.

Mrs. Davis, though critically wounded, survived. She identified her oil heir husband as the gunman, but he was acquitted after a trial that in 1977 was the longest and costliest in Texas history.

Decidedly less volatile, but still commanding headlines, was the divorce of Sid Bass, one of the billionaire Bass boys, and his wife Anne. That case involved hundreds of millions of dollars, and attempts to keep it under wraps were so stringent that the order sealing the court records was itself sealed.

Likewise, the breakup of Bass confidante Richard Rainwater, a co-owner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, and his wife also was conducted largely in private.

But published reports afterward put the settlement with Karen, his high school sweetheart, in excess of $350 million.

In a divorce with a twist, the romantic disentanglement of tennis star Martina Navratilova and onetime Cotton Bowl beauty Judy Nelson also unfolded in a Fort Worth courtroom.

That noisy melodrama brought the British press to town in droves.

Trigger-tempered Jerry Loftin represented Judy Nelson and, before her, Priscilla Davis. Jim Lovelless, who spends many weekends riding his sleek Harley motorcycle, was a key player in both the Bass and Rainwater cases.

Now the two are going head-to-head in Cowntown's latest big bucks spousal dispute - just one of 11,108 divorce cases pending in Tarrant County courts.

Given the money, the acrimony, the claims, counterclaims and high profile lawyers, it is little wonder that this is called the "case from hell."

Jimmy Walker grew up in Fort Worth and worked part time at his father's gas station while attending Technical High School. He and Wanda, a Paschal student, began dating at age 16 and were still teen-agers when they ran off to Oklahoma in August 1956 to get married.

By then, Jimmy had enlisted in the Air Force and was stationed in Fort Worth. With financial help from Wanda's parents, he later attended college but never graduated.

After leaving the military, Jimmy landed a job with General Dynamics. To make ends meet, he resumed working nights and weekends at his dad's service station.

In those lean years, Wanda did her part. While raising two children, Jimmy Jr. and Mindy, she worked for a time at an investment company and also sold real estate.

Walker himself decided to try insurance, selling policies door-to-door. This eventually became full time, and involved extensive travel. Often he would leave home on Sunday and return on Friday.

In the mid-1970s, he began making money, friends say, and moved his family to a larger and nicer home. Soon he was building his own insurance agency, American Service Life.

In a series of moves described by friends as brilliant, he expanded his empire dramatically. By the time he sold American Service Life in the late 1980s, for $37 million cash, he and Wanda had acquired many of the trappings of success.

Their worldly goods included furs, jewelry, fancy cars, an airplane and a sprawling, elegant home south of Texas Christian University and Colonial Country Club.

Walker poured money into a pool, cabana, high-tech security devices and a weight room with more floor space than most three-bedroom homes. Forever the dedicated fitness buff, he packed the room with the finest custom-made equipment.

And in early 1991 he hired landscaping artist Sabrina Patterson to do the yard.

A former hairdresser, a striking brunette and 29 years old at the time, Ms. Patterson allegedly would become the foremost in a succession of Jimmy Walker's lovers.

Less than two months ago, nine lawyers trooped into state District Judge Sean O'Reilly's courtroom to debate claims in the 30-month-old divorce dispute and related cases.

A participant at the Sept. 8 hearing estimated the day's proceedings cost Walker $2,000 an hour.

"He's got more lawyers than O.J. Simpson," the participant said, neglecting to add that the legal bills might be comparable, too.

The lawsuits:
- Walker vs. Walker.
Citing her husband's multiple affairs, which he has admitted, Wanda Walker seeks more than half the marital estate plus actual and punitive damages. For all Walker's purported transgressions, she demands at least $300 million.

- Sabrina Patterson vs. Wanda Walker.
In a countersuit related to the car episode, Ms. Patterson accuses Mrs. Walker of "general harassment." That harassment allegedly included death threats, physical attacks, pre-dawn telephone calls and spying by private eyes and Mrs. Walker herself.

- Mindy Ringnald vs. Sabrina Patterson.
Mrs. Ringnald, the Walkers' married daughter and Mrs. Walker's ally, maintains that Ms. Patterson "stalked" her from a shopping center to her home and slugged her in July 1992. This caused Mrs. Ringnald "physical pain, mental anguish, embarrassment and humiliation," for which she now wants an unspecified amount for assault, plus punitive damages.

- Wanda Walker vs. Jimmy Walker and Sabrina Patterson.
In this suit, since consolidated with the divorce action, Mrs. Walker alleged that the defendants exposed her, if not to the HIV virus, at least to the "reasonable fear of contracting AIDS."

Mrs. Walker claimed that Ms. Patterson once shared her home, but not her affections, with a gay, male hairdresser. Her friend died of AIDS-related causes, according to the suit.

After court-ordered examinations, none of the parties reported being HIV positive. But that didn't end matters.

Attorney Dwain Dent amended the suit with a novel claim: Mrs. Walker deserved compensation for the "severe emotional stress" of possibly being exposed to the fatal disease.

Dent suggested $10 million would compensate for such "reasonable fear."

Walker's attorney, David Evans, asked Judge O'Reilly to dismiss the "AIDS phobia" claim, which she recently did. But that order is being challenged through the Texas Court of Appeals.

The appellate action could freeze all the proceedings, which seem to add new layers of lawyers at each turn.

And it might be worse. After Ms. Patterson purportedly hit her, Mindy Ringnald threatened to take her complaint to the district attorney, but decided against it.

That would have added a contingent of criminal attorneys to what civil lawyers already call "The Tarrant County Lawyer Relief Act of 1994."

In her divorce petition, Wanda Walker alleges her husband spent thousands on clothes, jewelry and gifts for Sabrina Patterson and paid off a $45,000 bank loan for her.

Accusing her husband of fraud, she declared: "Respondent has squandered and wasted community assets by making such grossly excessive gifts...."

Furthermore, she said, Walker took Ms. Patterson to California, Hawaii, New York, Atlanta, Mexico, the Caribbean and Las Vegas, where he once gambled away $400,000.

For his part, Walker complained that his wife had one of his two highly trained attack dogs put to sleep and that she "domesticated" the other. He maintained also that he was

DIVORCE CASE

"stalked" by her private investigators. Worse still, he said, his wife once pointed a pistol at him and then attacked him with a fireplace poker. "It was the same incident," Mrs. Walker said under oath. "And he had his dog right in my face, so what would you have done?" "... And what did this dog do to you?" "Nothing. It still scared me."

According to legal documents, eyewitnesses, sworn statements and friends of the combative parties, this is how the case evolved:

After learning of her husband's philandering in July 1991, Mrs. Walker had a private detective serve Walker with a restraining order barring him from his $3 million home.

The gate was locked that day, and armed guards roamed the grounds. Mrs. Walker sent his clothes, stuffed in garbage sacks, to a hotel where he took refuge.

Later in 1991, Mrs. Walker was told by a household employee that her husband and Ms. Patterson had slept in her marital bed. That night, she summarily loaded the mattress in a pickup truck, hauled it to Sabrina's house and dumped it in a flower bed. Then the mattress was set ablaze.

Asked under oath if she considered that episode to be "outrageous conduct," Wanda Walker snapped: "Not when she was sleeping in my bed on my pillow with my husband."

In court papers filed last April by attorney Walker Friedman, Ms. Patterson alleged Mrs. Walker "began a bizarre course of conduct" in mid-1991 and continued for a long but unspecified time.

On several occasions, she said, Wanda Walker kept her and her home under surveillance, simply parking her car in the Patterson driveway "for lengthy periods of time."

At other times, she alleged, Mrs. Walker would telephone at all hours of the night and threaten to kill her.

And not all the alleged transgressions found their way into the court's file. A very dirty word once was burned into Ms. Patterson's manicured and terraced lawn and many of her treasured plants mysteriously died.

Despite the animosity, the Walkers attempted a reconciliation after the divorce suit was filed in March 1992. But that interlude ended pretty much in unison with the car wreck six months later.

"That wasn't an accident, was it?" Wanda Walker was asked under oath.

"Yes, it was an accident," she replied.

"It was an accident when you grabbed this woman by the hair and pulled her to the ground?"

"No," she replied. "That wasn't an accident."

Offering her version of Sept. 9, 1992, to police, Ms. Patterson said she jumped from her car, confronted Mrs. Walker and demanded that she leave her alone. Instead, she said, Mrs. Walker grabbed her by the hair and threw her down in the middle of the street, screaming obscenities.

According to Mrs. Walker, Ms. Patterson called her a "crazy woman" and appeared on the verge of striking her.

"What are you going to do, try to hit me like you did my daughter?" Mrs. Walker recalled saying.

"And what happened next?" she was asked.

"And then I said, 'You damn bitch, you better never touch my daughter again. And I jerked her down and kind of drug her a little bit. And she started to get up, and I jerked her again.'"

In her column on the brawl, Debbie Price wrote:

"Evander Holyfield would not have wanted to mix it up with these two. ... Both of them had high-dollar manicures, so it is a wonder that they didn't draw more blood."

A passenger in Ms. Patterson's car finally pried the women apart, and Mrs. Walker drove off in her crippled Mercedes.

Summoning police from her car phone, Ms. Patterson complained of back pains and said her assailant literally pulled hair from her head. In his report, the officer said Ms. Patterson mentioned her affair with Walker but insisted the dalliance had ended a year earlier.

As Ms. Patterson and the police talked, Walker himself arrived. An argument ensued, and the officer threatened to arrest him for interfering with the investigation.

Walker left.

As the divorce case began to heat up again, Walker allegedly drove to the lake, climbed aboard his 46-foot cabin cruiser and steered it from the slip. Then, the huge engines grinding in reverse, he smashed it into the dock.

That destroyed the stem and the foot-tall, 14-carat gold script lettering: "Wanda's Choice."

As the story goes, Walker told the harbor master to repair his boat and change the name to "Free at Last," which was a bit premature.

"It tickled me to death," Mrs. Walker said sarcastically, "that he was that kind of man."

With the divorce case now approaching a late autumn showdown, the two sides are hotly debating the extent of Walker's current fortune, principally a holding company called Walker Financial Corp.

On that issue, opposing lawyers concede they are nearly $30 million apart and there's no end in sight on the other disputes.

"I would rather spend every dime we have on attorneys' fees than see Sabrina Patterson get a nickel," Mrs. Walker told her husband, according to court papers.

"And you feel that way, don't you?" she was asked.

"I certainly do."

Frito-Lay tests low-fat chip

PLANO, Texas (AP) - Hoping waist-watchers won't Lay off, Frito-Lay Inc. has announced it is testing a new low-fat potato chip and plans a nationwide rollout next year.

The company is using Iowa as a test market for Baked Lay's Potato Chips, a version of its Lay's Potato Chips.

A national launch of the chip is expected late next year in original and barbecue flavors, the company said on Thursday.

The new chip is 94 percent fat-free and has less than 2 grams of fat per ounce, compared with 10 grams of fat for regular potato chips.

It has been tested in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, since April, where Baked Lay's have represented nearly 15 percent of total Lay's potato chip sales. The snack also has been introduced in Des Moines, Iowa.

"Baked Lay's was created for the growing number of consumers who are looking for low-fat alternatives to traditional salty snacks," Steve Reinemund, Frito-Lay's President and Chief Executive Officer, said in a news release.

The company said it now has a $450 million line of low and no-fat snacks, making up more than 10 percent of its total snack mix.

"With our low and no-fat products now on shelf and with those currently in development, we're hopeful that this segment will represent nearly one-third of Frito-Lay's business over the next four years with an estimated $2 billion in retail sales," Reinemund said.

The Lay's brand has more than $1 billion in retail sales.

Plano-based Frito-Lay is the U.S. snack division of PepsiCo Inc.

That's what Britain's Fleet Street crowd had to resort to Thursday as they waited ... and waited ... and waited for a glimpse of the princess at the Carlyle Hotel.

When Williams ducked out of the hotel, the crowd perked up. "Did you see the princess?" one person shouted. He didn't.

Diana is trying to keep a low profile during her visit to the states, while the publication of her likely-to-be-ex-husband's authorized biography creates a frenzy back home in England.

When she finally emerged in the afternoon, Diana only paused long enough to accept a bouquet of pink roses from a 10-year-old boy.

"Thanks a lot," the smiling princess told Teddy Gordon before ducking into a waiting car.

Oscar-winner Lancaster dies

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Burt Lancaster, the rugged one-time circus acrobat who became a star in physical, intelligent roles that earned him the description "thinking man's tough guy," has died. He was 80.

He died Thursday night, his wife, Susie, said today. Lancaster had suffered a stroke four years ago that left him partially paralyzed, but Mrs. Lancaster said it was a heart attack, not another stroke, that killed him.

"He went very, very peacefully. We were together, thank God," she said. "This last week he's been better than ever. It came as a complete surprise."

"He was patting my hair and touching my face and he took a sigh and that was it."

In a career that included more than 70 motion pictures, Lancaster was frequently cast in strong, angry roles but excelled in sensitive roles, too.

He won an Oscar for the 1960 film "Elmer Gantry." Among other memorable films: "The Birdman of Alcatraz," "From Here to Eternity," "Judgment at Nuremberg," "The Rose Tattoo," "The Swimmer" and "Sweet Smell of Success."

He used his athletic skills in such films as "Trapeze," "Ten Tall Men," "The Flame and the Arrow" and "The Crimson Pirate."

Lancaster remained active well into his 70s, starring in 1989's "Field of Dreams" and 1990's television miniseries "Voyage of Terror." He drew wide praise and his fourth Oscar nomination for his skilled depiction of a hard-luck petty criminal in 1980's "Atlantic City" and also starred in the acclaimed 1983 comedy "Local Hero."

The actor supported a variety of political causes and was a former president of the American Civil Liberties Union. A lifelong liberal, he often chose to act in films with social significance: "Buffalo Bill and the Indians," about the myths of Western history, and "A Child Is Waiting," about a school for mentally handicapped children. He made two anti-war films, "Twilight's Last Gleaming" and "Go Tell the Spartans."

An introduction to a 1992 series of Lancaster films at New York's American Museum of the Moving Image called him "a thinking man's tough guy."

"Whether he was masterminding a prison break, conspiring to overthrow the government, or leading a band of ragtag mercenaries across the Mexican border, Lancaster always gave his characters a believable emotional core," the museum commentary said. "More often than not, it was their moral or emotional shortcomings which made them memorable."

Lancaster arrived in Hollywood after serving in World War II with brief acting experience and three weeks on Broadway. His first film role, as a doomed Swede in 1946's explosive-crime drama "The Killers," brought him instant stardom.

He quickly followed that performance with "Brute Force," "All My Sons," "Sorry, Wrong Number" and "Jim Thorpe - All American."

He collected the first of four Academy Award nominations in 1953 as 1st Sgt. Milt Warden in "From Here to Eternity," based on James Jones' passionate novel about vengeance in pre-war Pearl Harbor. His surf-drenched love scene with Deborah Kerr still stands as a symbol of screen romance.

As the studio star system waned, Lancaster formed his own production company with filmmaker Harold Hecht. The company produced 1955's "Marty," which won the best picture Oscar.

"Elmer Gantry," in which he starred as a salesman turned evangelist, was also his own production. Based on the novel by Sinclair Lewis, the screenplay for "Elmer Gantry" had collected dust on Hollywood shelves before Lancaster and director Richard Brooks brought it to the screen.

Burton Stephen Lancaster was born the son of a postal clerk on Nov. 2, 1913, and grew up in the tough East Harlem neighborhood of New York. He said he might have become a juvenile delinquent had it not been for a local library.

He attended New York University on a basketball scholarship. In his second year of school, he traded in his high-tops for a pair of second-hand acrobatic shorts and left school soon thereafter.

With a childhood friend, Nick Cravat (who went on to collect bit parts in several Lancaster films), he formed the acrobatic team Lang and Cravat. For several years they toured with circuses, vaudeville and nightclubs.

In 1935, he married another circus performer, June Ernst, but the marriage broke up a year later. He left the circus in 1939 following a serious hand injury.

Lancaster held a variety of jobs during and after his circus days - including a stint in the lingerie and haberdashery departments of Marshall Field & Co. department store in Chicago.

Drafted during World War II, he spent much of his tour of duty entertaining troops in North Africa, Austria and Italy.

Others honored were: Bluebonnet and West Central schools; KPAN Radio, for assistance with advertising; and Hereford Regional Medical Center for participating in the "Cool and Casual" fundraiser.

Want a new taste? Try a bite of 'gator

By KIMBERLY A.C. WILSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Looking for a dish with some bite? How about Cajun gator gumbo? Or maybe alligator stir-fry is more to your liking.

High in protein and low in fat, cholesterol and calories, the once-endangered alligator is both a gourmet's and dieter's dream, contends Jack Montoucet, who has run a gator farm in Scott, La., since 1986.

"You can substitute alligator meat for veal or chicken meat in any kind of dish," Montoucet said in a telephone interview Thursday. "It substitutes real well in Italian, Japanese, Chinese and, of course, Cajun" recipes like spicy gumbo soup.

"The smoked tastes like smoked salmon, plain tastes like chicken or tuna. It's got whitish pink meat and it's firm like chicken. The flavor kind of floats around," he said trying to describe the taste. "But if you've eaten it, once you eat it again you'll recognize it."

Since the alligator came off the endangered species list in the mid-1970s, production of the reptiles has become a big industry in Louisiana. There are now 85 gator farmers in the state, where farm-raised skins sell for $19 a foot, and farmers produce a quarter-million skins a year.

Most of the skins are sold for leather goods, mainly in Europe or the Far East. But demand has fallen off in recent years, so producers are promoting gator meat.

"The primary reason we harvest them is for the skins, but in the last few years, since the market dropped out, the meat has kind of taken first place in my book because skin is no longer where it's at," said Montoucet.

Before 1991, frozen alligator meat was only sporadically available and fresh meat was sold during the fall harvest season. Now, fresh frozen alligator meat, which is regulated by the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries, sells year-round, for about $5 a pound.

The department is even circulating a pamphlet on alligators that contains a tasty recipe or two for cooking them up right.

Montoucet's farm, Jacques' Croc's and Farm Pride Processing, exports about 2,000 skins a year and a large amount of gator meat to Britain, Taiwan, Singapore and Russia. His canned smoked and plain gator sell in markets where the lack of refrigeration makes frozen meat impractical.

The number of alligators in the wild has stabilized since they were nearly hunted to extinction. Farmers, who return 17 percent of the reptiles they take from marshes and bayous, play a part in keeping the ecological balance.

"The rest are what would have died in the marsh," Montoucet said. "They are actually a resource that would have been wasted in the marsh, would have never hatched, would have never survived."

Center to be built for TPWD

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department announced plans today to build a $750,000 center that would launch the agency's attempt at consolidation.

Andy Sansom, executive director of the department, said the new regional complex is the flagship project of a statewide attempt to cut the number of parks and wildlife offices from about 30 to about 10.

The new complex would serve the Panhandle and Northwest Texas regions.

Construction on the 7,500-square-foot facility should begin next summer at the state-owned Lubbock Lake Landmark Historical Park, Sansom said.

State Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said the center should save tax dollars because the state is paying rent for several locations in Abilene and Lubbock.

Officials said the regional concept will make services more convenient for citizens and make the agency more efficient.

Too Many People Suffer Back Problems

Back problems are the most commonly suffered maladies in our society and there is a reason! Modern society has become highly complex, not only in the workplace, but in every area of the human environment. Technological changes and their effects on the human being have created new stresses, many of them related to body and structure. At its best, this results in discomfort, dissatisfaction and limited performance; at its worst, it results in serious health problems. You can do something about that back problem. The doctor of chiropractic is a physician who considers the human as an integrated being, but gives special attention to spinal mechanics and neurological, muscular and vascular relationships.

YOUR EYES

HOW VISION TRAINING HELPS

Do you like to read? Many people-intelligent children and adults, too-never learn to enjoy it. They find reading takes great effort and physical discomfort: their eyes get tired and they get headaches.

This doesn't have to happen. Vision training can often help many people learn or strengthen vision skills and to improve the eye movements, focusing and coordination necessary for reading-and at any age. Ideally, vision training should be started early, as soon as a reading problem is noted. But it may be the stepped-up reading demands of college that first make reading problems obvious, or a parent may note the improvement in the reading ability of a child receiving vision-training treatment and relate it to her own problems.

Generally, it takes longer to improve an adult's visual skills than a child's. After all, the adult has had "bad habits" longer. But the length of treatment is also affected by the patient's motivation as well as the nature of the individual's condition.

Physical therapy plays vital role in good health

"Posture Yourself for Good Health" is this year's theme for the physical therapy department at Hereford Regional Medical Center, according to Jim Robinson, administrator and CEO.

"The theme expresses the important role that physical therapy plays in the overall good health of individuals," Robinson said. "While the physical therapy department at HRMC primarily works with patients who have suffered an illness or a trauma, an important function of the department is helping persons stay healthy."

Crystal Backus, physical therapist and department manager, offers several tips for improving posture.

"Support your arms and keep your shoulders level while sitting," she said. "Change positions when doing an activity for a prolonged period of time. Pull in your stomach muscles and keep your car seat upright so that your hips are at a 90-degree angle."

"Most importantly, use your stomach muscles to brace your spine in a strong neutral position. These are simple steps anyone can take that will improve posture and improve the way they feel," said Backus.

She explained that the physical therapy department works with the patient's physician to decide on a treatment plan that will return the patient to the highest level of function. "A doctor's order is required for any physical therapy," Backus said.

Physical therapy is the treatment of disorders or injuries with physical methods. The therapist may use three types of exercise—passive, active or resistive. Passive exercise means the therapist moves parts of the patient's body. In active exercise, the patient is taught to contract and to relax certain muscle groups or to perform certain movements. The addition of resistance, either manual, mechanical or with weights, changes active exercise to resistive exercise.

Therapy may also be used to prevent or reduce joint stiffness, restore muscle strength in the treatment of arthritis or after a fracture has healed. It is also used to reduce pain, swelling, and muscle spasms.

Specific treatments in the department might include heat packs, cold packs, traction, massage, electrical stimulation, ultrasound, exercise and stretching. "We work with a wide variety of conditions," Backus said.

Physical therapy also encompasses the treatment of wounds, ulcers, and burns. "We stress wellness issues, such as body posture and body mechanics. We offer speakers for businesses to instruct employees in back safety and safe ways to exercise," she said.

Backus said her department also provides physical therapy to home bound patients through the hospital district's home health agency. This service, which also requires a physician's order, is a real benefit to these patients, she added.

Backus, originally from Stalon, has been the department manager since 1993. She has a BS degree in physical therapy from Texas Tech University health Science Center. Working with Backus is Vickie Piercy, a licensed physical therapy assistant. She has worked at HRMC since 1992.

Cattlemen membership is discussed at luncheon

"Accent the Positive!" was the program presented by Anita Brown of Wheeler when members of the Hereford Cattlemen met Tuesday at the Hereford Country Club with President Leslie Easley presiding.

Brown, who is the current president of the Texas Cattlemen's Association, spoke on membership and how important each and every person is to the beef industry. Texas membership is one of five states to have a 100 percent membership and has increased its membership.

The speaker also told of the American National Cattlemen's membership; it had dropped from approximately 10,000 to 6,000 in the early 1990s. She asked that the organization stay united, alert and ready for action. She pointed out the different groups that produced negativity with the cattle industry. Brown encouraged and challenged the group to increase local membership to 50 and to keep active with the current issues, but mainly to keep positive and active.

Brenda Johnson read the minutes of the previous meeting which were approved and Leslie Easley read the treasurer's report.

Easley also thanked all the Cattlemen who brought appetizers for the Taste of the Southwest benefit and reported that the event was very successful.

Members voted to donate $100 to the United Way of Deaf Smith County.

Easley reported the current nominations of officers for the coming year. They included Jackie Murphey, second vice president; Jan Page, treasurer; and Brenda Johnson, secretary. The first vice president position is still open. Connie Banks will be the incoming president.

Banks reminded everyone of the casserole sale planned at 10 a.m. Oct. 29 at Homeland. Everyone was asked to participate in providing casseroles for the beef promotional sale.

The next Cattlemen meeting is set for Nov. 8.

Welcomed as guests were Jerri Schake, Judy Myers, Sally Nolen and Anita Brown.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

While instructing students to make the most of their time, we try to stress to them that time lost can never be regained. It makes one wonder if today's parents realize that there is no way to make up for the time they should have spent with their children. Thank goodness for those who do spend quality time with their children! (It surely shows!).

Hopefully, those students who went on the field trip last Saturday have shared the knowledge gained with family and friends. They were very attentive during each lecture session and I am proud of each of them. They represented HISD well.

The eighth grade band will be marching in the homecoming parade and HJH will have at least two floats, representing Builders Club and Junior Historians, in the parade.

Mrs. Cicero's class will be traveling to Borger to tour the re-cycling plant as they continue their unit on conservation.

Indians of Texas is the unit of study presently in Mr. Garza's classes. Students are learning about Texas' first citizens and their important role in the history of Texas.

Having nothing else to do in our "spare time", Myrna Buckley, Angie Wilhelm and I have been involved in a signing class taught by Jody Ingham who teaches fifth grade at Shirley. Although I've had to miss a couple of classes due to "circumstances beyond my control," this is an interesting and useful study.

At least eight HJH facility members will be traveling to Lubbock on Wednesday to visit Coronado High and learn about their scheduling process and gain insight on some of their methods of teaching.

Take time this week to enjoy some of life's simple pleasures with your family. How long has it been since you stopped for an ice cream, laughed together, played a game...or just talked? At least these activities can be enjoyed for a while yet in "October's Bright Blue Weather"

Westbrooks, Webster wed in Richardson

Amid the soft glow of candlelight, Amy Denise Westbrooks of Dallas became the bride of Philip Todd Webster of Schaumburg, Ill. during an early evening ceremony Saturday in the First Baptist Church of Richardson. Officiating at the marriage was Dr. Gene Wilkes of Legacy Drive Baptist Church in Plano.

The bride is the daughter of James and Nancy Westbrooks of Dallas and the bridegroom is the son of Loyd and Delores Webster of Hereford.

The church was decorated with candelabra, wild smilax, ferns and palms. Candles lined the pews.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father.

Shannon Morrison Sheppard served as matron of honor and the groom's father was best man.

Bridesmaids included Suzette Faulconer, Stacy Harper, Courtney Phelps, Suzanne Ross, Ondria Westbrooks and Shelly Webster.

Groomsmen were Neal Scarborough, Derek de Sola, Bobby Cogburn, Greg Hackney, Kyle Mach and Stefan Hacker.

Guests were ushered by Michael Westbrooks and Tim Foley. They also lit candles.

Rice bags were distributed by Emily Smith and Katie Wilhoit.

Patrick Ross was the featured vocalist; Barry Germany played the organ; Steven Fittz played the trumpet; Rob Flickinger played the violin; and Douglas McNee performed on the bag pipes.

The bride was attired in a white Italian satin designer's gown fashioned with a fitted beaded applique bodice, a basque waistline and an off-the-shoulder neckline. The full skirt swept into a cathedral-length train.

The three-tiered bridal illusion veil, accented with scattered pearls, was attached to satin petals and lace appliques. She carried a nosegay of white roses, white freesia, stephanotis and white tulle streamers in a silver Tussy Mussy. She also carried her great-grandmother's heirloom handkerchief.

Bridal attendants wore black crepe dresses with Soutache bodices. To complete their ensembles, they wore long white gloves and carried red and pink roses with tulle streamers.

Melanie Morgan invited guests to register at the reception held in the First Baptist Church. Guests were entertained by Barbara Circhhoff who played the harp.

Cake was served by Janice Dveirin, Johnnie Luscombe, Lyn Brand and Meghan Goforth. Punch and coffee were poured by Betsy Clark, Devin Luscombe and Rhonda Brand. Nancy McNee also assisted.

The reception was decorated with topiaries, candles, white columns and tulle. The white shaved chocolate bride's cake featured raspberry cream cheese filling. The groom's chocolate cake was filled with sour cream and covered with chocolate icing and strawberries.

Following a wedding trip to Dunnes River, Jamaica, the couple will make their home in Chicago, Ill.

The bride received a bachelor of science degree in early childhood education from the University of Texas in Austin. She is a flight attendant for American Airlines.

The groom received a bachelor of business administration degree in marketing from Texas Tech University. He is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Social Fraternity and is a manager of market specialist at Sterling Plumbing Group in Rolling Meadows, Ill.

Out of town guests included the Ronald Lambeth family, the Troy Brand Jr. family, Ed and Maxine Smith, the Brian Goforth family, the Jim McNee family and the Smith Sims family.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, was held at the Quarter J. Ranch in Plano.

Several pre-nuptial parties were held: a shower and brunch in Richardson; showers in Hereford and Richardson; a personal shower; and a bridal brunch the day before the wedding hosted by Mrs. S.L. Sims.

INNOVATIONS IN LOW-FAT FOODS

With fat contributing about 37 percent of total calories in the average diet, Americans have yet to meet dietary recommendations regarding fat. But with nutrition education and a variety of lower fat choices, consumers should be able to make progress in achieving dietary recommendations.

In fact, more choices of foods lower in fat are available in the supermarket than ever before. Experts see the trend continuing with low-fat and low-calorie foods dominating new products introductions throughout the nineties.

The trend is also apparent in meat and dairy foods. Closer fat trimming by butchers has resulted in a 27 percent reduction in separable fat on retail cuts of beef, and the fat content of ground beef is 10 percent lower than 40 years ago, according to the national Research Council report, Designing Foods.

Producers are also selecting longer, leaner animals from breeds they raise and are cross-breeding to achieve leaner, meatier animals that are brought to market at an earlier age.

In the dairy case, low-fat and skim milk now out sell whole milk and choices abound in reduced fat cheese, cottage cheese, sour cream, spreadable butter, margarine and yogurt. In the processed food area, sales of salad dressings with less oil are increasing rapidly and cracker and snack products using the lowest amount and least-saturated oils possible are being formulated to achieve quality and taste.

A number of fat-free products such as pastries, cookies, yogurt, salad dressings, processed cheeses and frozen desserts have been developed by combining familiar ingredients such as milk and egg proteins, skim milk, water and/or a variety of carbohydrates in a process of heating, acidifying and blending to simulate the textural properties of fat.

Educational programs of the Texas Agricultural Extension service are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age or national origin.

Hereford Bucks presented

Patsy Giles was the recipient of Hereford Bucks for her regular attendance at the Hereford Pilot Club's meetings. The organization meets on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at the Hereford Community Center.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I respond to the reader from Arizona who was annoyed because the Social Security Administration spent $32 million on employee bonuses last year "while some of the elderly are trying to survive on less than $600 a month." Here is the explanation your readers deserve, and it is right from the top. It is important that you print it.

Out of every dollar collected in Social Security taxes, less than one penny goes to pay the administrative expenses (including salaries and awards) necessary to run the largest social insurance program in the world. This is a remarkable and enviable record of achievement.

Despite the numbers and percentages, the crux of the issue is the answer to this question, "Did the Social Security Administration employees deserve the awards they received? My answer is a resounding "Yes!"

While SSA's work force declined 20 percent in the 1980s, our workloads increased by more than 70 percent. One of the reasons we have been able to continue to provide the high level of quality service that is our hallmark is because of the productivity and versatility of SSA's talented and dedicated employees.

I am proud of each and every one of them, and I would be grateful if you would give them the public praise they deserve.—Shirley S. Chater, Commissioner of Social Security

DEAR SHIRLEY CHATER: Here's your letter, which is sure to open a lot of eyes—including mine. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm the mother of two children in their teens. I taught my kids early how important it is to send a thank-you card or just pick up the phone and express appreciation for any gift that was received. My mom taught my brothers and me to do this, and we are carrying on the tradition by teaching our children. Incidentally, Ann, the best time to teach kids this is when they are very young.

I recently sent a graduation card with money to my girlfriend's daughter. When six weeks passed and I didn't hear anything, I called to make sure "Sue" had received it. The girl acted dumb and said, "I'm sure it arrived." I later called her mother, who said Sue did indeed receive my gift, but she hadn't gotten around to sending out her thank-you notes.

That was two weeks ago. If someone takes the trouble to send a gift, the least the receiver can do is say, "Thank you." Should I say anything more to my girlfriend?—Steamed in Kalamazoo

DEAR STEAMED: No. Phone SUE and tell her you are waiting for her thank-you note. If you don't receive it within five days, phone her again. A little embarrassment can be a very good teacher.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please print the following 19th century Cree Indian saying. I read it in the Dick E. Bird News. Thanks—Georgette in Orlando

DEAR GEORGETTE: Here it is. I'm glad you tossed it my way: "Only when the last tree has died "And the last river been poisoned "And the last fish been caught "Will we realize that we cannot eat money."

Kids can make Italian nachos

By The Associated Press
Italian nachos make a delicious snack for kids. And since they're cooked in a microwave oven, older kids can assemble them safely on their own. The nachos are made with tortilla chips, shredded mozzarella cheese and sliced pepperoni. Instead of traditional salsa, dip the nachos in pizza sauce.

- Italian Nachos
- 12 tortilla chips
 - 1/2 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
 - 5 thin slices pepperoni
 - 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese
 - 2 sliced green or ripe olives (optional)
 - 1/4 cup prepared pizza sauce
- Place tortilla chips in a single layer on a paper plate. Top with mozzarella cheese, pepperoni, grated Parmesan cheese and sliced olives, if using. Place pizza sauce in a custard cup or small microwave-safe bowl; cover. Place custard cup and paper plate in a microwave oven. Cook on high (100 percent power) until cheese melts and sauce is hot, about 45 to 60 seconds. Carefully remove cover; serve pizza sauce as a dip for nachos. Makes 1 serving.

Oprah leaves interview

CHICAGO (AP) - This was one interview that gave Oprah Winfrey the creeps - and she wasn't even conducting it.

Winfrey says she walked out of a Los Angeles screening of "Interview With The Vampire" because it was so gory, and even considered canceling an interview with star Tom Cruise. She said about 30 other people also walked out before the end.

"I believe there are forces of light and darkness in the world, and I don't want to be a contributor to the force of darkness," Winfrey said Tuesday.

Cruise told Winfrey that he wasn't surprised. "The movie is not for everyone," he said during an appearance on Winfrey's talk show.

Cooperation assists youth's education

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) - When communication between parents and school is a two-way street, both can reach their shared goal of giving each child a good education, according to a Purdue University professor.

Judith Myers-Walls, an associate professor of child development and family studies, says parents and teachers need to work together to find ways to appreciate one another's goals - or to set new ones.

For example, the parents' main goal may be to have their child treated as an individual, while the teacher's primary aim may be to have the child arrive at school on time, follow the rules and do the assigned homework. So it's important that parents and teachers share their knowledge or expectations for the child, Myers-Walls said.

Communication is also important if parents fear that a change in the child's life, such as a death or divorce, might affect schoolwork or socialization.

Myers-Walls says parents should contact the teacher directly, rather than going to the school principal or having their child carry messages to school. "Don't expect a child to manage an issue," she says.

It's also important for parents to talk about projects or policies that meet their approval, not just their problems and concerns. "If possible, contact the teacher the first time with something you feel good about, or combine the problem with something positive," she says.

Some examples might be if the child likes the way the teacher does something, if his or her grades are improving, or if there's a helpful classroom newsletter.

Reasons for concern might include a child suddenly complaining about school or performing poorly, a policy parents are uncomfortable with, or an out-of-character discipline problem.

"If a teacher calls with a problem, look at it as a partnership and work together," Myers-Walls says.

A note from school or a call to request a conference are typical ways parents are approached, says Jerry Miller, superintendent of the Southwest School Corp. in southwestern Indiana.

Miller says teachers become concerned when children fail to turn in homework, act up in class or are doing poorly in their classroom assignments.

At the elementary school level, regular parent-teacher conferences are held to discuss students' progress. At the high school level, there's an open house.

In Chicago public schools, local school advisory councils meet monthly to organize and set policies for safety, discipline, curriculum and budget, says Joseph Ruiz, director of the Division of Student Support.

Ruiz says the councils are made up of six parents, two teachers, two community members and one principal. In addition, open houses and parent-teacher conferences are offered to involve all parents.

"Our doors are open to parents any time we're open for business," he says. "We continue to encourage more students and parents to become involved with teachers and principals so we can continue to move forward. We hope all parents visit school at one time or another."

The Friends of the Library have started a new project this year called the "Friends Store." Beginning November 1, 1994, the "Friends Store" will be open in the library on Mondays from 10:00 to 12:00 and 4:00 to 8:00. They will be selling canvas book bags with the Friends logo on it, greeting cards, and photo coupons for Family Portraits. Elite Photographics will be coming to the Deaf Smith County Library for the photo shoots on November 19th and the portraits will be ready for Christmas. One 10x13 color family portrait will only cost $15.00. If you want to take advantage of this photo opportunity please call: Rhonda Matheny at 364-0305; Linda Weaver at 364-4242; Rebecca Walls at 364-1206 or come by the "Friends Store." The proceeds of the "Friends Store" will go toward the purchase of videos, talking books, and a popcorn popper to be used for special library activities such as Family film night, Summer Reading Club, National Children's Book Week, National Library Week, and other special projects.

Some of the new books available this week include Everville by Clive Barker "promises to take its readers ona journey that will awe, arouse, and terrify." The deepest yearnings of the human heart; love, hope and understanding, are being threatened by the forces that lie just beyond an open door located on a mountain peak, high above the city of Everville. The door leads to a "dream-sea Quiddity" where monsters wearing human faces come and go at will. Phoebe Cobb is about to forget her old life and go looking for her lost lover in the world on the other side of the door. Harry D'Amour, who has tracked the evil across America will find it in the sunlit streets of Everville. Tesla Bombeck, knowing the horrors found through the door, works to solve the cities past mysteries to keep those horrors in check. Step into the streets of Everville and enter a world like no other.

Janet Dailey's new book The Proud and the Free features vivacious, sassy black-haired Temple Gordon, the belle of Georgia's "Gordon Glen." Temple's father Will was educated in the finest eastern schools; but no matter how well educated, mannered or how beautiful Temple is the Gordons are still a mix of Scot and Native American. With the arrival of Georgia vigilantes, the Gordons soon find their graceful life of parties and parlor games coming to an end. Challenged by tragedy and hardship, Temple loses everything and everyone she knows as the Cherokees are forced westward by the government. Temple's future lies at the end of a journey that many will not survive to a wild and turbulent land.

It's easy to have a cheese party

Arranging a tray of cheese and crackers is just about the easiest way to entertain. It's also fun for guests to sample cheeses they may not have tried before. The terms below will help you purchase cheeses that satisfy a broad range of tastes, from mild to full-flavored.

Aged: Cheeses that have been cured six months or more. The aging process develops a fuller, sharper flavor in the cheese.

Blue-veined: Cheeses that develop blue or green streaks of harmless, flavor-producing mold throughout the interior. Generally, veining gives cheese an assertive and piquant flavor.

Chèvres: Originally, this term referred to cheeses made only from French goat's milk, but it now commonly includes all goat cheeses.

Creans, single, double or triple: Rich cheeses that have a high amount of butterfat. Single creams contain at least 50 percent butterfat; double creams contain at least 60 percent butterfat; and triple creams contain at least 70 percent butterfat.

Fresh: Uncured cheeses, such as mascarpone, cottage cheese, cream cheese or ricotta. Some cheeses that have been cured for very short periods, such as feta, may also be considered fresh.

Hard: Cheeses that hold their shape and do not yield when pressed. Parmesan is a hard cheese.

Part-skim: Part-skim milk is used to make cheese, such as mozzarella. Skim milk yields lower-fat cheeses than those made with whole milk.

Pickled cheese: Cheese that is stored and packed in a pickling brine. Feta is a pickled cheese.

Semifirm: Cheeses that hold their shape, yet yield to gentle pressure. Edam and Gouda are semifirm cheeses.

Sharp: The flavor description for fully developed, aged cheeses. Sharp cheese should have biting, but not too sour, taste. Cheddar, provolone and some blue varieties may have a sharp flavor.

Smoked cheese: Cheese that is treated with liquid smoke or smoked over wood chips. Cheddar, mozzarella, Swiss and provolone are common varieties that are available smoked.

Soft-ripened: Cheeses that soften as they ripen inside a rind. Brie and Camembert are soft-ripened cheeses.

Net farm income expected to increase from '93 level

By MICHAEL LANDWEBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Net farm income for 1994 is expected to increase to between $47 billion and $51 billion, helped in part by a buildup in inventory, the Agriculture Department says.

Net farm income totaled $43 billion last year. The figure is the difference between cash receipts and expenditures.

Another measure, net cash income from farming, reflects inventories and allowances for depreciation and the rental value of farm buildings. USDA estimated net cash income from farming this year will range between $53 billion and $57 billion. Over the past five years, the average has been $56 billion.

The department also forecast an increase in the average income for farm operator households in 1994.

Improving on last year's weather-beaten levels, crop receipts are expected to rise by 6 percent to 8 percent in 1994. Increased production should bring lower prices, but farmers likely will be able to restock inventories depleted by the 1993 weather-related disasters.

Expected major production increases of feed grain and soybeans are forecast to produce rises of 4 percent to 6 percent in feed-grain receipts and 9 percent to 11 percent for oilseed cash receipts in 1994.

Total receipts for dairy and livestock are forecast to remain fairly steady with 1993 levels, with the potential increase no more than 2 percent. Despite higher livestock production, USDA expects that lower prices will keep receipts the same or lower in 1994. Dairy and broiler receipts should both see increases, it says.

The overall increase in crop and livestock marketings also has led to a prediction of an increase in gross farm income for 1994.

Government payments are expected to fall from last year, mostly due to the 40 percent gain in the feed grain crop, which has led to reduced deficiency payments. Disaster payments account for major portions of both 1993 and 1994 totals.

An increase of 2 percent to 3 percent is expected in farm production expenses in 1994, with the costs of most items rising slightly. Other factors expected to affect expenses include higher interest rates, increased petroleum prices and a rise in the number of acres planted. However, livestock expenses may fall with lower prices for calves and feed pigs.

Farm assets are forecast to rise 2 percent to 3 percent in value above 1993, staying just ahead of the rate of inflation. Farm debt is expected to increase 1 percent, as farmers maintain their reluctance to borrow money.

The range of farm equity will be between $771 billion and $781 billion in 1994. Farm equity has been relatively stable since 1985.

WTAMU ag division names advisory board members

Two Deaf Smith County men have been named to the West Texas A&M University agricultural advisory board.

Robert D. Josseland, president of AzTx Cattle Company of Hereford, and Bill Cleavinger, president of the Hereford-based Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association, are among the 17 persons appointed to the board.

Dr. James Clark, head of the WTAMU division of agriculture nominated the board members. They were appointed by the university's interim president, Dr. Russell Young.

Members of the advisory board will make recommendations that will strengthen the quality of teaching, research and service programs and improve visibility and availability of programs in the division of agriculture.

Clark said the board members also may make suggestions for curriculum and help improve the probability for external support of programs.

A purpose of the board, also, is to help update curriculum as changes occur in the agriculture field.

Research seeks wheat varieties preferred in other parts of world

By KIMBERLY A.C. WILSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department scientists are scrambling to develop new domestic varieties of a wheat preferred in many parts of the world.

Researchers are tailoring a variety of hard white winter wheat that can grow in the Great Plains to meet export demands for the grain, according to an article in USDA's Agricultural Research magazine.

The wheat is lighter in color, texture and taste than the hardy hard red wheats grown widely in the United States. Products made from its whole-grain flour are preferred in the Middle East for flat breads, in South America for French-loaf style bread and in Southeast Asia and Korea for Asian noodles, the article said.

"We're collaborating with breeders in other states and directing our research at winter wheat," USDA agronomist C. James Peterson said.

The hard white wheat varieties currently available don't fare well in the climate of the Great Plains region of the country, and don't resist pests indigenous to the area, which spans northward from the Texas Panhandle to central South Dakota and eastward from the Rocky Mountains to the Missouri River.

"The market is wide open," Peterson said in an interview Monday. "We're trying to tailor our grains for the end use needs of our market."

"We envision two types of hard white wheats in production to meet marketing opportunities: one for baking breads and another for making Asian noodles," Peterson said.

Peterson acknowledged a risk associated with growing white wheat that does not exist for red wheat crops. The tendency of hard white wheat to sprout in areas with heavy year-round rainfall or rain and humidity at harvest makes growing the wheat more perilous. Tannins in red wheat kernels prevent sprouting.

So the Agricultural Research Service is targeting the high plains, where white wheat sprouting is less likely to occur.

"White wheat does have some genetic resistance to sprouting but not the same level that a red grain would. To have a true white wheat you have to remove all three of the genes" that make red wheat immune from sprouting and other hazards, he said.

"It's not really an alternative to red wheat as much as a marketing opportunity. We have two goals: to develop a hard white wheat for the domestic market that can compete on the world market against Australian wheat."

While both grains have similar fiber and protein levels, white wheat has several advantages over red wheat, Peterson said.

The tannins and phenolic compounds that give it its darker color and protect it from sprouting in the field can make red wheat whole-grain breads somewhat more bitter than white wheat products.

TCFA to meet in San Antonio

Texas Cattle Feeders Association will meet Nov. 13-15, in San Antonio, in a convention geared toward a look into the future.

Theme for the convention is "Bride to Tomorrow."

Speakers include the TCFA president, Les McNeill, at the opening general session; Russ Wolfe, who will talk about beef in the retail market, and Hugh Sidey, a columnist who will talk about the political scene.

A feature of the convention will be panel discussion on how NAFTA is affecting cattle and beef trade.

Former president of TCFA and NCA, Bob Josseland of Hereford, will be moderator of the panel.

Joining in the discussion will be Homero Recio of the U.S. Meat Export Federation; Don Butler, past NCA president and export consultant; Robert J. Whetten, El Paso banker and export financing expert, and Isidro Carrillo, president of the Chihuahua Cattlemen's Union.

Jim Webb, chairman of the industry's oversight committee, will report to cattle feeders on the move to consolidate the major industry organizations. Also addressing the convention will be Capt. Gerald Coffee, a former POW in Vietnam. His topic will be "The Hero in All of Us."

S&WCD offers tree seedlings

Windbreak tree seedlings will be offered by Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District again this year.

Orders will be taken until mid-March 1995. Early ordering should ensure availability of varieties desired.

More than 30 varieties are provided by the Texas Forest Service and Colorado State Forest Service.

Shrubs, hardwoods and evergreen seedlings will arrive here in late March.

Planting trees in two or more rows will provide cover for wildlife and shelter homes, cattle and roads from wind and snow.

Information about ordering the seedlings may be obtained by calling the SCS office, 364-6995, or going to the office at 315 W. Third.

FEATURE HOMES

Fewer offsets in the perimeter wall structure will inevitably result in a more economical construction cost. Dollars saved in simplicity of construction can then be utilized toward more luxurious interior amenities.

A comfortably sized front porch is trimmed out by a wood rail and square wood columns. It will accommodate several rocking chairs and a front porch swing, if you like. It leads to the great room that is also sized for comfort and which includes a towering 12 foot ceiling height. The adjoining dining room and kitchen are shown with eight foot ceilings and passage to either the terrace or combined laundry and car port access.

There are three bedrooms and two full baths in the quiet zone of the home plan, the master bedroom bath featuring a garden tub, separate commode and shower area, twin lavatories and a vaulted ceiling over the tub and vanity area.

The exterior is cottage style, and is drawn for horizontal wood frame construction. A high pitched gable roof features arch top windows in two dormers, and the same arch top is carried out above the main entrance door.

The plan is Number Z-101 and includes a total heated square footage of only 1,183. The plan is drawn for either a slab or crawl space foundation and is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans are drawn in compliance with FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

Question/Answer

Q: I have a 4-zone, gas-fired, forced hot-water heating system. The water heater has started making a low moaning noise intermittently, almost a groan. The system is 26 years old and has had minimal maintenance. How can I stop the noise?

A: It sounds like the bearings are failing on the circulator pump. Over the years, the bearings wear - especially if they have not been adequately lubricated. Worn bearings get hot, overheat and develop a scraping noise, which is transmitted through the piping and can be heard in some sections of the house. If the sounds are coming from the circulator bearings, replace the circulator.

Circulator pump bearings should be lubricated at least once a year with motor oil, typically sold at hardware stores. Newer circulator pump motors, however, are usually permanently lubricated.

Question/Answer

Q: For several years, utility companies have recommended installing insulation blankets on our electric water heaters. Some even do it free for customers. I installed one on my own, but I was told that the blanket will drastically reduce the life of my heater by trapping condensation and causing it to rust. I was advised to remove the blanket and use the escaping heat to prevent my laundry room pipes from freezing. Whom do I believe?

A: All tank type water heaters are insulated by the manufacturer between the storage tank and the outer casing. Even with this insulation, the surface of the outer casing becomes warm to the touch, and as a result it gives up some heat to the room in which it's located. You can reduce this heat loss by covering the heat casing with an insulated blanket, as was recommended by your utility company.

Condensation is not a problem you have to worry about. For the water vapor in the air to condense, it must contact a surface that's cooler than the room's temperature. Since the temperature of the water heater casing will be either the same as the room temperature or above, moisture in the air will never condense on it, regardless of whether or not the casing is insulated.

If you are concerned about the pipes freezing in the laundry room, install a thermostatically controlled space heater, rather than depending on the water heater. This way you can regulate the room temperature to suit your needs and the time of the year.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

MARRIED OR JUST DATING?

There was a time when people got married and stayed that way. There was a time when people found a brand of product and kept buying it. There was a time when people bought from the same business again and again. Times are changing.

Several years ago, I had a relative who bought a new Chevrolet pickup every year or two. There might be some question as to which dealer he would select, but the truck would be a Chevy. Today, this strong brand loyalty is diminishing. National research indicates that most consumers are quite willing to change brands.

To the small-business owner, this apparent fickleness on the part of the customers well. They experience frustration when customers jump to competitors because of a slightly lower price or, in some cases, for no apparent reason.

One business owner summed it up with this statement. She said, "Customers don't want to get married to your business, they just want to date."

Creating customer commitment

Nearly half of all marriages today end in divorce. Though solemn vows are spoken in the marriage ceremony, real commitment often doesn't last very long.

How can we as business owners expect to build lasting relationships with our customers who take no vows and make no promises? Here are some suggestions:

- Stay focused on satisfying the customer. Know as much as you can about each customer and treat them with respect. Remember that your business exists solely because of that customer. When you know your customer well and make every effort to please them, your customers may surprise you with their loyalty.
- Recently, I was writing this column in the quiet corner of an automobile dealership. I had taken our nearly new car in for a warranty adjustment. While I was working, the owner of the dealership came over and introduced himself. He told me how the work on my car was progressing, and offered the use of a private office for me to write in. I was pleased by the personal contact and impressed that the owner cared enough to check on the work. The service manager promised to complete the work in 2 hours, but actually finished 30 minutes ahead of schedule. This is the type of personal attention and service - satisfaction - that helps keep customers loyal.
- Give your customers a benefit they can't get any where else. If your products aren't unique, if your service isn't outstanding and if you can't offer your customer an advantage by doing business with you, don't expect loyalty.

Your benefit may be your product assortment. It could be your product knowledge or experience. It might be an outlandish level of customer care. Whatever it is, it must be visible to your customer. Tell 'em and tell 'em again.

• Use your integrity to build trust and loyalty. It's a fact that most folks are reluctant to forge lasting relationships with businesses they don't trust. I'm a believer in the theory that honesty is the only policy. Marriages often fail when trust is broken. In the same manner, customers won't return to businesses who have cheated them.

• Be a problem solver. There is an old business saying that people buy only two things: Solutions to problems and good feelings. My experience has shown that if I can help someone solve a problem, I'll always create good feelings.

Don't shy away from a customer's problem. Put your energy and effort into solving problems instead of avoiding them. Then watch your loyal customer base grow.

It is still possible to form lasting relationships with customers. If you will use these suggestions you can improve the commitment you get from yours.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Two months ago, I had a minor accident. I twisted my ankle while stepping off a curb. It swelled. I thought I had sprained it, but it turns out that the bone was broken. I was put in a cast. That was some months ago, but my troubles are far from over. I have had a terrible pain in the ankle. My doctor tells me it is reflex sympathetic dystrophy, which I hear from others who've had it is a real toughie of a problem. Just what do you know about this? — T.O.

ANSWER: Reflex sympathetic dystrophy (RSD) is a phrase that strikes fear in every doctor who deals with broken bones. It happens after an injury, and it need not be a severe injury to the bone in question. There need not even be a break, but what follows can be a nightmare of pain.

The RSD syndrome is pain, tenderness and skin change in the affected area. What's happening here has to do with the sympathetic nervous system, the control network for such automatic bodily functions as the dilation and constriction of blood vessels in response to needs. In RSD, this system has gone berserk. Pain and swelling occur, the sensation being more of an intense burning.

If things don't right themselves soon, a second RSD stage begins, with the skin thinning and taking on a shiny appearance. In time, stiffness of the affected limb occurs, culminating in immobility. RSD can be a most difficult problem for physician and patient. Nerve blocks are often tried to control the pain. Meanwhile, physiotherapy is important. Hot and cold packs are used. Exercise is essential to preserve joint motion and flexibility. You are getting some treatment for this, aren't you?

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My complaint is of severe burning and pain of my feet and the back of my legs. My doctor diagnosed it as pernicious anemia. What causes the burning? — P.S.

ANSWER: Pernicious anemia arises from a deficiency of a substance (the intrinsic factor) in the stomach. That factor normally permits vitamin B-12 absorption, allowing it entry, first to the blood, then to bone marrow, where red blood cells are made. Red cell deficiency is what anemia means.

In addition to red blood cells, nerves and the spinal cord also need B-12 to stay healthy, and without it, nerve and spine insulation fray. That causes the shooting, burning pain you report. There may also be a weakness and an unsteadiness.

Treatment of the pernicious anemia itself involves regular injections of the B-12 vitamin. That takes care of the red blood cell deficiency fairly promptly. The neural burning and pain part of the problem is something else. It may improve, but, I must add, it may linger on and on. In the latter eventuality, the only good news is that the pain does not worsen.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please put in a word for handicappers who must park with stickers. We get dirty looks from people just because we don't look handicapped. I have a severe heart defect from transposition of the great vessels. I also have pulmonary hypertension and an extra bonus, polycythemia. I am only 39, and when I don't have my portable oxygen equipment with me, I look normal. But walking distances is impossible, so I use handicap spaces. Even a short distance is an ordeal for me. — J.K.

ANSWER: I can't make the case better than you have, J.K.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I love mixed nuts. But I want to watch and limit my cholesterol intake. Can you tell me which nuts are the good nuts and which the bad, so far as cholesterol is concerned? I like cashews, hazel nuts, walnuts, Brazil nuts, pecans and almonds. — E.B.

ANSWER: The most important point for you is that nuts have no cholesterol in them. The second important point is that they do contain fat. Otherwise, the nut story is an interesting one. I know of two studies.

One study was on nuteaters. The nuts involved were varied, and the researchers concluded that eating nuts offered a reduced risk of heart attack. A second study zeroed in on walnuts specifically. Eating walnuts, the researchers concluded, might help lower cholesterol, interesting given the fact that nuts have no cholesterol in them. (They suggested that other nut types might have yielded similar results.) Not too much to go on, really. The overriding concern in all this is that, while nuts have no cholesterol, they do contain other fats. Fortunately, nut fat is the polyunsaturated kind, the kind that does not increase blood cholesterol. Good news.

The bad news is that you still have to stay within limits for total daily fat consumption, and so nuts have to be taken into account. Your daily diet should not have greater than 30 percent of its calories in the form of fats, whatever their source or kind. So you cannot gorge on nuts or make nuts a major part of your diet.

I wonder, after having read all this if you, as a nut fancier, are happier or sadder. You might be interested in the cholesterol report, which tells the full story. Other readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 5, Box 5539, Riverton, N.J. 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 75-year-old lady with a familial tremor. I have tried the beta blocker medicine, Inderal, to help it, but I got terrible headaches from it. Please, doctor, are there other beta blockers I can try that might not cause headache reaction? — E.K.

ANSWER: There are 14 different beta blocker drugs. They are all quite similar in chemical makeup, so I cannot guarantee that any one would be more helpful than another or that all might not cause the same undesired side effect for you.

However, the beta blocker, nadolol, does not get into the brain. It might be worth trying. The only way to test the idea is to ask your doctor to prescribe it, and see if it works for you.

Familial tremor is the kind that occurs with purposeful use of the hand, as in holding an object. There are other things to do: avoid stressful situations and get enough sleep. Some coffee drinkers find improvement by staying away from it or other caffeine sources. The International Tremor Foundation, 833 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago IL 60607 offers helpful information.

Bank drafts are good idea, but keep track of amounts

By PAMELA YIP
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON - The concept is relatively simple: Have your insurance and car payments, utility bills, investment contributions and other deductions automatically taken out of your bank account each month.

It's a promising idea. That will make sure that your bills will be paid, and make sure you invest money consistently. It's also faster than sending a check.

But remember these programs don't automatically keep enough money in the account. You could find your account in shambles if you don't keep track of the money being taken out.

"Make sure you reconcile your bank statement every month so you know where you stand," says Christine Courtnage, head of the personal financial planning practice at the Houston office of Price Waterhouse, an accounting firm. "Make sure you have a complete list of everybody who would use automatic payments for an estimate of the amounts."

And don't forget to record the amounts in your account book. You may not physically have written a check, but it's still money coming out of your account.

How you time the deduction is crucial. Make sure your paycheck clears before money's taken out.

"If you have an automatic draft coming into the account on the first of the month, your automatic debit may not clear if it arrived at the bank before your electronic deposit arrives at the bank," says Carl Vincent, a financial planner at IDS Financial Services in Houston.

He recommends that you have your deductions occur around the fifth and the 25th of each month, because that should give your paychecks time to clear.

"The first of the month is not the best time because that's when one of your (pay) checks is going to hit your account," Vincent says.

Arkansas produces more rice than any other state.

Vincent says you should allow five days between the time the money actually gets into your account and the time it's deducted to give the funds enough time to be deposited into your account.

Also, be careful that you don't time your automatic deduction to coincide with when a big bill is due, such as for rent or the mortgage. If you haven't accounted for that by stashing away extra cash in your account, you will find yourself bouncing a payment.

Don't let the convenience of automatic deductions make you lose sight of how much money you are spending.

"Much like a credit card, it doesn't feel quite as real when you're having the money deducted from the account," says Michael Booker, president of the Houston chapter of the International Association for Financial Planning. "If the air conditioning bill jumps up, most people would make that adjustment (and turn up the thermostat). If you're actually writing out the check, it becomes a lot more real."

You'd better get used to this system, because financial experts say it's the wave of the future.

"I think 10 years from now there will be very few checks for these types of routine transactions," says Bruce Fredrikson, a finance professor at Syracuse University's School of Management. "We are heading toward a cashless society."

Here's an added incentive to do it: Your bank may give you a discount off interest on a consumer loan.

"We don't have to process any paper, and there is a cost with each step in passing paper through the system," says Ken Preston, spokesman for First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles, parent company of Houston-based First Interstate Bank of Texas.

Curiosity doesn't just kill cats.

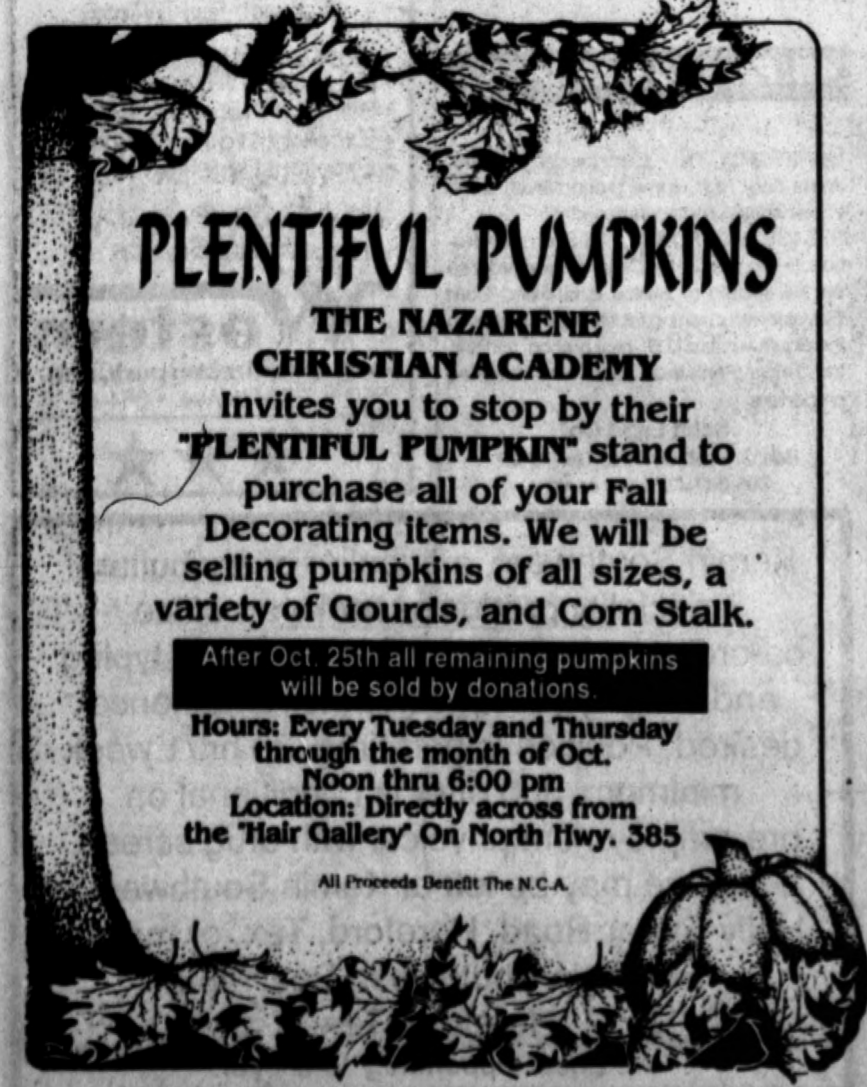

Every child is curious. But being curious about matches and lighters can be deadly. Teach your child the dangers of playing with matches and lighters.

- Keep all matches, gasoline, lighters and other flammable materials out of the reach of young children.
- Teach your children that matches and lighters are dangers—not toys—and are safe only in the hands of an adult.
- Find out whether your child's school offers any education on fire safety. If nothing is provided, find out why not and contact your local fire department for assistance in developing fire safety programs.

Remember, the child who plays with matches and lighters may never grow up.

Your local fire department.

Burnett back in form for Men, Movies & Carol

Michael Jeter (Evening Shade) joins Carol Burnett in song and spoof in Men, Movies & Carol, a special airing Monday on CBS. Also appearing are Scott Bakula, Barry Bostwick and Tony Bennett. The show includes humorous take-offs on famous movies, a Burnett-Bennett duet, and a production-number finale.

BY SUZANNE GILL

"I haven't had this much fun since the old show," says Carol Burnett of her latest CBS special, Men, Movies & Carol, airing Monday, Oct. 24. "It's like going to school and it's recess all day."

Burnett, whose hit variety series, The Carol Burnett Show, ran 11 seasons, is back on that Emmy-winning pace in an hour crammed with energy and wit. With a quartet of co-stars — Scott Bakula, Barry Bostwick, Michael Jeter and Tony Bennett — Burnett taped the special in a series of vignettes before a studio audience. The format allowed the performers only enough time for costume changes between acts.

"What was wonderful for me," Burnett says, "was to have three men whom the public knows from other venues. They don't know that Barry and Scott and Michael have their roots in musical comedy and theater. There are no more shows that can show people off (like that)."

"And then to have the opportunity to work with Tony Bennett, which I never had before, was icing on the cake."

"It was a little more risqué than anything I had done before," Burnett says, "but this is the '90s. It was fun to be able to get a little more brazen."

Bostwick, a Tony nominee for Grease and a winner for The Robber Bridegroom, joins Burnett in two parodies of cinema sublimation: a Ginger Rogers-Fred Astaire scene in which he'd rather dance than make love and a tale of titillating housekeeping dubbed "The Reminders of the Day."

Bakula (Quantum Leap, Murphy Brown) helps Burnett open the show with a pastiche of passionate double indemnity, then returns to send up Dustin Hoffman and Anne Bancroft in a sketch titled "Graduate Student."

Burnett says Bakula had his character down cold from the first reading.

"He was absolutely fantastic. We watched the scene (from 1967's The Graduate) once and then we went down to the rehearsal hall and started rehearsing it. We knew how talented he is, but we didn't know he'd nail it that great."

With Jeter (Evening Shade) Burnett spoofs Cher's 1987 romance Moons-truck. Their comic pas de deux ends with Burnett grating parmesan cheese on the cringing Jeter's chest as she prepares to devour him in holy matrimony. Then the camera cuts to the audience, which gets an additional chuckle as they rise to take their bow.

"I just picked up some of that cream stuff and slapped his face again with it," Burnett recalls.

"I didn't even know the cameras were running," she says. "But we saw it in the editing room and we said, 'You know, it gives it the true feeling,' because what we were doing was a live show."

"That's the way I like to work and have always liked to work. If the audience laughs, and you keep them entertained, you're going to be better."

The show changes pace when Bennett takes the stage for a set of songs made famous by Fred Astaire. Burnett joins him for a duet of "They Can't Take That Away From Me."

The special closes with a 12-minute finale of movie tunes. Like the other segments, it was shot without stopping, and there is no voice dubbing. Even Jeter's incredible falsetto of "Hi-lili, hi-lili, hi-lo" is for real.

Add great musical direction and Bob Mackey costumes (he made an exact copy of Bancroft's dress for the "Graduate" scene), and Men, Movies & Carol is a smash.

Playful Proverbs

Proverbs are familiar sayings. In direct translation, they don't really make sense. But since we're so used to hearing them, we can easily use them in our daily vocabulary. Below are some proverbs and their meanings:

- Rome wasn't built in a day*: Good things take time.
- Haste makes waste*: Doing things in a hurried fashion usually leads to mistakes and wasted time.
- Actions speak louder than words*: It's not what you say, but what you do, that shows how much you care.
- Birds of a feather flock together*: People like to be around those who have the same interests and backgrounds.
- Don't cry over spilt milk*: There's no use getting upset over something that has already happened.
- Easy come, easy go*: Things that are easy to attain are just as easy to lose hold of.
- Look before you leap*: Shop around before you invest your time and/or money into something.
- Practice what you preach*: If you tell others how to live, you should follow those rules, too.
- Better safe than sorry*: It's better to take the safe route than to risk danger or failure.
- If there's a will, there's a way*: If you really, really want something, you'll find a way to get it.
- All for one and one for all*: Each member of the team is equally important.

LET'S TALK

Are there any real X-Files?

Last call for Power Rangers address

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: I heard that The X-Files is based on true stories. Are they? I recently saw a story on CNN that reminded me of something I had seen earlier on X-Files. --Harry Bales Jr., Augusta, Ga.

A: Producer Chris Carter is always coy when asked this question, so the best answer I can give you is "probably not," in the sense that no one is perusing a real-life set of something called "the X-Files" and turning them into weekly scripts. Certain story lines, however, have been adapted from news reports and other accounts of what appear to be paranormal phenomena.

Q: Could you possibly tell me how to write to the Power Rangers? My kids are wild about them. If you can only give me one, I would like Tommy's (the Green Ranger). It would really mean a lot to my kids. Thanks. --Linda Faye of Mississippi.

A: Parents and kids, please make a note of this address, which has appeared more than half a dozen times this year. For the last time in 1994: Write to any of the Rangers C/O Fox Broadcasting Co., 10201 W. Pico Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90035.

Q: I am a huge fan of MacGyver. What is Richard Dean Anderson doing now? Where can I contact a fan club? --J.S., Granville, Tenn.

A: Anderson has appeared in at least two TV movies in the past year. Doubtless he will do more. He took a physical battering from the demands of MacGyver and is said not to be too eager to jump back into a series anytime soon. I have no firm fan club information, but you can write to the actor himself C/O his agency, Wolf-Kastler, 1033 Gayley Ave., Suite 208, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

Q: I am a very big fan of Bette Midler. Do you have an address where I can write to her? --Katie Scheffel, New London, Minn.

A: Write to the Divine Bette C/O CAA, 9830 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Q: The Four Seasons and Gidget Goes Hawaiian are two of my favorite movies. Can you tell me if they are available on home video and how or where I could get a copy? --Kim Brown, Peru, Ind.

A: Seasons is available from

Richard Dean Anderson

MCA/Universal Home Video. Gidget Goes Hawaiian is available from Columbia TriStar Home Video. Both are mainstream labels, and any decent video store should be able to order them for you with no trouble.

Q: Sometime during the mid-to-late 1970s, I watched a TV show starring Karl Malden as a factory worker and/or union leader. Could you please tell me the name of this weekly drama series? Nobody I asked can place it. --Renee Kovach, Morenci, Ariz.

A: Stag starred Malden as Pete "Skag" Skagska, a union foreman at a Pittsburgh steel mill. Despite an impressive cast that also included Piper Laurie, Peter Gallagher and Powers Boothe, the drama ran on NBC only from Jan. 6 to Feb. 21, 1980.

Q: Can you give me an address to write regarding the cancellation of a wonderful show on The Family Channel? It is very important. --N.P., North Carolina.

A: Sure. Write to Viewer Services, The Family Channel, P.O. Box 64549, Virginia Beach, Va. 23467-4549.

CONFIDENTIAL to J.S. in North Carolina: Apparently someone at your newspaper deleted the answer to your question due to space limits. Again, the movie you are seeking is available from Columbia-TriStar Home Video, 3400 Riverside Drive, Burbank, Calif. 91505.

Send questions to Let's Talk, Features Dept. TV Data Technologies, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12904. Because of the volume of mail received, personal replies cannot be sent.

ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

HBO talks comedy; Grodin talks talk; The Indian in the Cupboard, & The Hunchback of Notre Dame due on the big screen

Charles Grodin

Festival held each summer and will be bigger and better than ever in 1995.

"This festival will focus on both the art and the business of comedy," says HBO's Chris Albrecht. "We hope that it will do for comedy what the Sundance Festival has done for film."

Rumor has it that Charles Grodin, a hit in the Beethoven movies, is a candidate for host of a new syndicated late-night talk show. It could be offered to Fox, Paramount and Warner Bros. affiliates. In other rumors, Wilson Phillips' Carnie Wilson is considered a contender for a daytime talk slot.

Dan Cortese and Jonathan Silverman are currently filming Two Guys Talking About Girls in Los Angeles. And an animated remake of The Hunchback of Notre Dame is in full swing (pardon the pun) at Disney. Voice talent includes Kevin Kline, Tom Hulce and Demi Moore.

More good news for kids: A live-action version of the popular mystery-fantasy The Indian in the Cupboard began production last month in Los Angeles. Frank Oz is directing, and Steven Spielberg protegee Kathleen Kennedy is a producer.

British mystery writer Lynda LaPlante, who penned the three Prime Suspect yarns starring Helen Mirren, has signed a deal with Scripps Howard Productions to create, adapt, develop and produce prime-time series and movies for TV. The first, Seekers, will air on CBS.

Since wowing crowds in Los Angeles when he sang the title role in Phantom of the Opera and thrilling kids with his performance as the sage Raffiki in Disney's summer blockbuster The Lion King, Robert Guillaume has taken his act on the road. He's in concert this week in Atlantic City, N.J.

TV FOR KIDS

Three thumbs up for new Nick Jr. series

Amid all of TV's sorry excuses for quality children's programming, Nickelodeon is offering three of the best new series in many years.

Allegra's Window, Gullah Gullah Island and a collection of two-minute wiggly breaks titled Muppet Time! join the weekday Nick Jr. lineup for preschoolers on Monday, Oct. 24. Busy parents can catch them again in a special Nick at Nite airing that evening.

Allegra centers on a winsome 3-year-old puppet and her musically inspired puppet family and human friends, including Rondo, Sonata, Clef, Melody and Riff. The puppets, created by Martin Robinson (Sesame Street, Spitting Image) are expressive and charming, and the catchy songs that dot the show are written by a team of Broadway composers and lyricists.

Husband-and-wife performers Ron and Natalie Daise welcome viewers to their loving household on the culturally rich Carolina coast in Gullah Gullah Island, filling their daily half-hour with song, activity and exploration. The show is the first children's series built around a black family.

Muppet Time!, featuring the Frog Scouts, We-Did-It-Ourselves Piggies, operatic aliens The Extremes and a monster with a human "imaginary friend," are a genuine delight, recapturing Jim Henson's humor better than any Henson venture since his death.

SOAP WORLD

Culliton named head writer for AW

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Another World has had trouble in the ratings for a few years now, and there have been constant writing and production changes. It seemed as though things had settled down in the last few months.

But now the executives at AW have made another change in their writing staff. Carolyn Culliton has been signed, as the new head writer. Culliton replaces Peggy Sloane, who had held the position since October 1992.

Under Sloane's leadership, the writing team was honored this year with an Emmy nomination as well as a Soap Opera Digest nomination for outstanding writing. There was no explanation given as to why Sloane had been let go.

Terri Guarnieri, executive producer for AW, says Sloane's efforts were appreciated, but they are looking forward to the fresh ideas of Culliton.

"Carolyn has a solid history in daytime," Guarnieri says. "She first joined AW in 1978, and she has worked in various writing and production positions with several serials since then. She rejoined AW in April as associate head writer. She has a wonderful creative energy that will spark many exciting stories for the future."

Prior to joining AW, Culliton spent two years on the head writing team of All My Children, beginning in 1992.

From 1984-1991 she wrote for AW and was a script editor. She also worked on Guiding Light and the now-defunct Texas.

Culliton worked her way up through the ranks, beginning in daytime as secretary to executive producer Paul Rauch on AW. She later became a production assistant for the show. Her first writing job was on Texas.

The writer is a graduate of Northwestern University with a bachelor of science degree in speech. Culliton received a master's of fine arts degree at Northwestern and was a doctoral candidate at the University of Minnesota.

Culliton is married to Richard Culliton, one of the head writers for As the World Turns. The couple has two daughters, Emily and Kathleen, and the family resides in Brooklyn.

What you should know about our Pricing Policy: Not all items in this publication are on sale. Percent and dollar savings are off regular prices on in-stock items. Selection may vary by showroom; some items may not be available through Mail Order. An item's reference retail price, indicated by the † symbol, is your guide to its regular selling price at department stores and similar retailers. It is not our present or former selling price. It is either the retail price suggested by the mfr. in this publication's distribution area or our own determination of full retail price based on customary retailer markups for similar merchandise. Best Values are exceptional regular prices.
