relentlessly toward confrontation in Haiti, a determined President Clinton tonight plans to argue the case for military invasion to Americans unconvinced that restoring democracy is worth the price.

"There is no point in going any further with the present policy,' Clinton declared Wednesday, displaying gruesome photographs of dead and disfigured victims of Haiti's military regime. "The time is at hand. They need to leave, and they're goingto leave, one way or the other."

In a meeting with a group of reporters, Clinton did not rule out setting a deadline by which Haiti's leaders must leave, promising "more to say" on that tonight. And he said if an invasion did occur, the operation could be over in a matter of months. ·Clinton held out the possibility of Haiti's military leaders leaving voluntarily, and the administration was prepared to give them safe passage.

With U.S. warships steaming toward Haiti, Pentagon officials said major portions of a potential invasion force would be in place as early as this weekend but important preparations still were under way.

"It looks like early next week to me," one senior military officer said of a possible invasion date. A senior administration official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said setting an invasion deadline was unlikely. There was some concern that a deadline might touch off a final wave of army persecution in Haiti.

Tonight's 9 p.m. EDT address to the nation, to be carried live by all the major television networks, is a belated attempt by Clinton to build support for a plan he acknowledged faces opposition from the public and within Congress.

WASHINGTON - When American troops go into foreign peril, the line between backing them and supporting the policy that put them there blurs, often to the vanishing point.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - Threatened with U.S. invasion and menaced by planes dropping U.S. propaganda leaflets, Haiti's military rulers stood their ground and refused to give up power.

Military-installed President Emile Jonassaint said Monday night that Washington's threat to Haiti's "survival" was politically motivated, with U.S. congressional elections less than two months away.

WASHINGTON - Bogus grocery stores are springing up around the country to launder food stamps for restaurants, wholesalers and drug dealers involved in lucrative trafficking schemes. It's costing tax payers an estimated $2 billion a year.

WASHINGTON - Providing education, emergency health care and prison cells for illegal aliens is costing states billions more than the immigrants pay in state and local taxes, according to a government-commissioned study.

KIBEHO, Rwanda - Lance Cpl. Richard Hibberd squeezed medication into the oozing pink eye of five-year-old Nsengimana, gently patched it with a gauze pad and swaddled the bandage to his head. Hibberd is part of Britain's 23 Parachute Field Ambulance, 150 men and women who spent the summer treating 20,000 ill Rwandans. In the post-Cold War era, its doctors and medics are more likely to deliver a refugee's baby than patch up a wounded soldier.

KEY WEST, Fla. - Jorge Garrido remembers huddling close to his mother on the deck of an overcrowded smuggler's boat - praying for freedom, praying the boat would not capsize, praying they'd be rescued.

Only 8 years old, he was frightened and confused. A storm tossed the shrimp boat violently as it crept across the Florida Straits from Mariel, Cuba, in 1980. Finally, he saw a white ship with a red stripe: the U.S. Coast Guard had arrived to tow the sinking ship into Key West.

Now Garrido, 22, is a member of the Coast Guard, helping rescue Cubans trying to cross the 90 miles to Florida.

Governor's record on environmental issues defended

AUSTIN (AP) - A spokesman for Caddo Lake in East Texas and Barton Ann Richards has defended the governor's record against criticism by environmental groups who contend Richards has sided against them on two issues in the past three months.

Richards' press secretary Bill Cryer said Wednesday the governor has taken positions, not against the environment, but against overregulation by the federal government.

'She is the strongest environmental governor this state has ever had period," Cryer said.

Richards Monday wrote a letter to Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt saying the federal government's Endangered Species Act "has become so overreaching that it undermines public support for protecting our wildlife.'

The governor said the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service should "abandon all plans" to set aside parts of 33 Central Texas counties as critical habitat for the endangered golden-cheeked warbler. The federal agency is studying the idea.

Richards withdrew her support in July for designating several waterways in Texas as "outstanding national resource waters." The proposal was aimed at curbing pollution of the waterways, including Springs in Central Texas.

The ONRW designation would lead to federal control of the lakes and take away their ability to develop property, landowners said. Last month, landowners rallied at the Capitol to denounce any federal action that would infringe on private property rights.

The director of the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club, which earlier endorsed Richards, said the governor's position on the warbler may affect support.

'I don't think it's going to make people in the environmental movement vote against her, but it might affect how many of them get out and actively campaign for her." said the director, Ken Kramer.

The chairman of the Austin Sierra Club, Dick Kallerman, said, "The ONRW was the first one. She appears to be taking a position against the environment. We're scratching our heads."

Said Helen Ballew, director of the Hill Country Foundation, an Austinbased environmental group: "I'm sorry to see the governor's office succumbing to the rhetoric and misinformation of the so-called property rights movement."

Fisher calls memo 'discriminatory'

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - A state treasury memo when U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison was treasurer is under attack from her Democratic opponent, Richard Fisher, as discriminatory against Hispanics.

Mrs. Hutchison's campaign said Wednesday she didn't know about the memo, which was meant to keep one employee from making personal calls on state time and was later withdrawn

The Feb. 10, 1993 memo was sent by Donna Reynolds, then-director of the Treasury's human resource division, to five employees.

The memo starts: "Subject: PEAK ENGLISH PLEASE," and

He said Spanish-speaking taxpayers with Treasury business should be able to speak their language to get information. He also criticized Mrs. Hutchison for voting against bilingual ballots in 1975, when she was a state legislator.

Mrs. Hutchison's spokesman, David Beckwith, called Fisher's comments "truly unfair."

Beckwith defended Mrs. Hutchison's record, saying she has the best rate of hiring minorities in state history.

Beckwith described Ms. Hernandez-Maddox as someone who was trying to cause trouble for Mrs. Hutchison because Mrs. Hutchison wouldn't give her a job in her Washington office.

In another memo, dated March 23, 1993, Mrs. Hutchison's former scheduler, Leslie Rawl, complained to Ms. Reynolds about receiving two phone calls for Ms. Hernandez-Maddox in two days, including one from "a man with a VERY HEAVY spanish (sic) accent (i (sic) could hardly understand him).

Her regular walk to Handley Middle School ended tragically five years ago, when a preacher's son paroled from prison only nine months earlier dragged her into his car and sped away. My grandfather died in 1963, when I was 11. Demonstrating a total inability to care for herself, Grandma came to live with us. At the time, she was 63. From the day she moved in, our family life was changed forever.

For the rest of her life until her death at 82, Grandma played the role of the pathetic, helpless widow. She destroyed every vestige of joy in our for whatever works, and apparently, home. Her depression and grief, the toothpicks do the job. Please say outbursts, lake neart attacks, suicide threats and total helplessness were more than we could stand. She created constant tension among all of us. Within four years, my parents were divorced. I used to believe that Grandma was weak and helpless, and I felt sorry for her, but thanks to therapy, I learned that she was the most powerful person I had ever known. We were all sucked in and manipulated by this clever woman. I discovered that this sort of behavior is called "passive-aggressiveness." By making others feel guilty and sorry for her, she did not have to take responsibility for anything she said or did. I cannot describe the pain and agony this woman put our family through. Coronado boasts good backs; Brown returns for Whitefaces

By JAY PEDEN Sports Editor

The Coronado Mustangs seem to have this offensive backfield thing backwards. They have a 183-pound blocking back, and their 256-pound running back gets most of the carries.

The big one is Yabrodrick Ward, and though he's the fullback, he is Coronado's leading rusher with 178 yards. The smaller one is Inyang Udo Ima and he's got 91 yards.

They are two of the problems the when the Mustangs (1-1) come to Whiteface Stadium. Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. Friday.

"Both of those are real good players," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "It seems a little funny: the little one's used for blocking, and he's a good blocker. And we're going to have to get lots of people on that (Ward).

While Coronado's backfield might look wrong, Hereford's will look like it was originally intended: Marquise Brown will return Friday. The junior tailback rushed for 1,116 yards last year but sprained his ankle on the first play of the season opener.

"Marquise worked out all week. He was tender Monday, but (Tuesday) he got into the swing of it. He looked real good," Haney said.

Armando Zambrano, who filled in truly special. In two games-a 32-6 for Brown at tailback, will take his win over El Paso Eastwood and a 35-269 rushing yards to middle linebacker, though Haney said Zambrano would get some time at fullback this year.

Lubbock High at Canyon

The Herd offensive line also will get a piece back in Josh Gamboa, a team captain and 275-pound offensive guard. He will start Friday after missing the first two games with a knee sprain.

Haney called the 250-pound Ward the "main asset" of Coronado's Hereford Whitefaces (1-1) will face offense. He's very similar, Haney said, to a 250-pound Palo Duro fullback from two years ago named Gary Brown. Herd fans may remember him carrying piles of would-be Whiteface tacklers down the field for 130 yards and two scores in a 44-19 PD win in Hereford.

> In addition to Ward and Udo Ema, the Ponies' offense consists of guarterback Rex Henderson (13-of-30 for 214 yards), a quick offensive line and a wide receiver, Bobby Vaughn, > with sprinter's speed, Haney said. Coronado's defense is big: the four-man front averages 250-pounds. The top defensive players are 253pound tackle Tremaine Farris and middle linebacker Ryon Price, who weighs 192.

The Mustangs special teams are 29 loss to Odessa High--the special teams have scored three times: on a punt return, a kickoff return and a fumble return on a kicking play.

Hereford has a 15-3 advantage in the series with Coronado. That includes 13 wins and three losses when the two schools were in the same district from 1970-85. Hereford holds a five-game winning streak, including non-district games in 1990 (21-9) and 1991 (19-7).

The 1991 game, the most recent in the series, was played at Jones Stadium, the Texas Tech facility, because of flooding around L.I.S.D.'s Lowrey Field.

Players of the Week: Zambrano; with 161 yards rushing Thursday against Palo Duro, is the offensive player of the week. Tackle Michael Kriegshauser got the award on defense for his 10 tackles and a fumble recovery. On special teams, Homer Hamilton was honored for his touchdown-saving tackles on two long PD kickoff returns.

The junior varsity player of the week was quarterback Joseph Artho, and tailback/defensive back Anthony Guillen was honored from the sophomore team.

It's official: Owners call off World Series

By BEN WALKER

AP Baseball Writer NEW YORK (AP) - By the time Bud Selig stepped to the microphone and began talking about it being a sad day, everyone knew what was coming.

Baseball was done for 1994. The exciting pennant races, the expanded playoffs, even the World Series, finished.

Yet when Selig announced Wednesday that the season was canceled, not even he could answer the big question: What's next?

Maybe spring training starting next year with replacement players. Maybe an entirely new league made up of major leaguers. Maybe no baseball at all.

"Baseball, as I knew it growing up, is gone," Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Curt Schilling said.

Selig, the acting commissioner, called off what was remaining of an extraordinary season on Day 34 of the players' strike. "When people think back to what the final image of the 1994 season will be, it may be Bud Selig at a press conference protesting pain and gnashing his teeth but nevertheless going ahead and dashing the hopes and dreams of many people," union head Donald Fehr charged. Twenty-six of the 28 teams voted to cancel. Baltimore owner Peter Angelos agreed with idea, but wanted to reword the resolution; Cincinnati owner Marge Schott said minor leaguers should be used to continue the season, Selig said. "This is a sad day," Selig said in a statement sent by fax. "Nobody wanted this to happen, but the continuing player strike leaves us no choice but to take this action."

President Clinton, meanwhile, said maybe it was time for government to take some action and consider taking away baseball's antitrust exemption. In the meantime, the game may soon start taking a new shape.

Owners can declare an impasse in bargaining and impose a salary cap, which was the sticking point in these recent talks between Fehr and owners' negotiator Richard Ravitch.

Then, teams might see who shows up to play.

"Kansas City's going to have professional baseball next year if I have anything to do with it," Royals CEO David Glass said.

"I know Mr. (general manager Herk) Robinson will take the best 25 players available to him from whatever source," he said. "I think most everyone feels that way. But what we really want is to have the Royals players back playing up to their abilities. It will have to be an industry decision."

Agent Dick Moss, however, is trying to organize the first new major. league since the Federal League started in 1914. Moss was Fehr's predecessor as the union's general counsel.

"The goal is to field teams in April, so you would have to be pretty far along by January," Moss said.

Normally, January would be smack in the middle of the fans' Hot Stove League. But with so much uncertainty, teams are not sure what kind of moves they might make in the offseason. "Are we able to sign any of our players? What about free agents? I don't know," New York Mets general manager Joe McIlvaine said.

Paul O'Neill, who wound up winning this year's AL batting title, Jack McDowell, Orel Hershiser and Gregg Jefferies were among the top players eligible to file for free agency at the end of the season.

Although the season was shortened, all of this year's statistics count

That means Tony Gwynn finished at .394, the highest batting average since Ted Williams hit .406 in 1941 and the best in the NL since Bill Terry batted .401 in 1930.

Matt Williams, who was on a pace to threaten Roger Maris' record of 61 home runs, finished with a major league-leading 43. Frank Thomas and Albert Belle both were among the AL leaders in average, homers and RBIs, but neither got a last chance to win the Triple Crown.

There will be postseason honors, just like always. Greg Maddux, with a 1.56 ERA and a 16-6 record, is almost certain to become the first pitcher to win three straight Cy Young Awards when voting is announced in October.

October, however, usually means the World Series. For the first time since 1904, when it was only a year old, there will be no World Series.

"Everyone wants to have the chance to play in the World Series," Chicago White Sox manager Gene Lamont said. We thought we had a good chance."

"It's hard on us, it's hard on the Indians, and Yankees. It's tough on everybody but it's even tougher on teams that thought they had a chance," he said.

'94 baseball season ends without proper goodbyes or Andre Dawson play one more game, forget it. Both have announced their retirements.

If you wanted to see a baseball game amid a throng of 70,000 fans at Mile High Stadium, too bad. The Rockies won't be playing there anymore.

If you wanted to see Tony Gwynn hit .400, you'll have to wait until this sport is put back together, if it ever

The cancellation of the remainder of the season Wednesday was the antithesis of the way baseball is supposed to end. Just last year, for instance, the World Series ended with a game-winning home run by Joe Carter of the Toronto Blue Javs.

Nothing like that will happen this October.

Don Mattingly in a playoff game? Nope. Not this year anyway.

The Texas Rangers in the postseason? Uh-uh.

Roger Maris' home run record but it's forgotten, basically. I really don't have any joy from this year at all," Rogers said Wednesday.

If you wanted to see Kent Hrbek riveting subplots that made this such a great season are now mostly forgotten.

No one will remember for long that Ray Lankford opened the season with a home run and Johnson threw the final pitch on Aug. 11, striking out Ernie Young.

Instead, the defining moment of the 1994 baseball season will be remembered as taking place in a VIP lounge at Milwaukee County Stadium, where Bud Selig addressed a hushed crowd and a national television audience and told everybody what they expected to hear, but dreaded nonetheless.

The great accomplishments and threatened? Sorry. The list goes on and on, would've beens and could've beens that ought've been but won't be.

Such is the case in 1994, baseball's lost season.

"Tragic is what it is," Phillies pitcher Curt Schilling said. "Baseball, as I knew it growing up, is gone."

For the record, though, there will be postseason awards like Most Valuable Player, the Cy Young Award, etc. Ballots go out this weekend and the announcements will come in mid-October.

And like it or not, the Texas Rangers, Chicago White Sox, New York Yankees, Montreal Expos, Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers can call themselves division champions if they want to.

"I think there would be some skeptics if we did, for sure," said Marty Conway, the Rangers' head of marketing.

There also are batting champions (Tony Gwynn, .394 and Paul O'Neill, .359), home run champions (Matt Williams, 43, and Ken Griffey Jr., 40) and strikeout leaders (Andy Benes, 189, and Randy Johnson, 204).

You feel terrible about Tony, losing his shot at .400. It was probably one of the best years for baseball in a long time, until August. Now it tarnishes everything for the year," Padres general manager Randy Smith said.

There were Lee Smith's 33 saves, Jimmy Key's 17-4 record, Jeff Bagwell's 116 RBIs, Greg Maddux's 1.56 ERA.

None of it really matters, but all of it counts.

There were so many memorable moments, too, this season, from Gwynn's game-ending slide into home plate at the All-Star game to the no-hitters pitched by Kent Mercker and Scott Erickson and Kenny Rogers' perfect game.

"It was great to throw that game,

Astros' Bagwell mourns loss of chance at winning division

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

AP Sports Writer HOUSTON (AP) - Jeff Bagwell had the most to lose, yet complained the least.

Instead of feeling sorry for himself over the lost season, Bagwell lamented the lost opportunity for the Houston Astros, who were one-half game behind Cincinnati in the NL Central division when the players struck on Aug. 12.

"The main thing is we were only one-half game out of first place and had a chance to win it," Bagwell said. "It's never been the personal side for me. Yeah, that is something, but it's more about what happened to our team."

Any hope of resuming the season ended on Wednesday when the owners scrapped the rest of the season, including the playoffs and World Series.

Bagwell led the major leagues with 116 RBI and .750 slugging percent-age, second with a .368 batting average and third with 39 home runs.

"I'm very sad right now, kind of embarrassed," Bagwell said. "Because the players and the owners have worked their way into not having a World Series for the first time since 1904, and that's kind of embarrassing to be a part of that." Bagwell said the failure of the two sides to resolve their differences in 34 days leaves him pessimistic about the game's future.

"This is only going to get worse, the way I see it," he predicted.

"If baseball comes back, we'll have a hard enough time getting people to watch us (major leaguers) play," Bagwell said. "Playing with minor leaguers will just not work. You're telling me people in Chicago, in Houston, will come out and pay $15 to see that? The problems have just begun."

Terry Collins, the Astros' rookie

Rangers fire GM Grieve

By JAIME ARON Associated Press Writer ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - When Tom Grieve became general manager of the Texas Rangers in 1984, one of his first moves was hiring Sandy about the team's future.

"We're in second place, I can't imagine how Cincinnati must feel," Collins said. "Who knows what will happen next year? Will Jeff Bagwell have the same kind of year? I hope so. Will Jeff Bagwell even be here? I certainly hope so."

Collins played question and answer with himself Wednesday. He had no idea what the future will bring, he said, but he is aware of the possibilities.

"I'm a guy in the trenches, I only know baseball and I know that you never know when you'll get another chance," Collins said, "We could struggle the next couple of seasons and I could be fired. That's the nature of the beast."

But Astros General Manager Bob Watson - a part of baseball as a player, coach and administrator - said the system has to change.

"Baseball has been a part of my life for 40 years, and I've seen the pendulum swing from the owners' side to the players' side," Watson said. "It has to swing back to somewhere in the middle. The system has to change. I'm saying this to players, owners and fans.'

The Astros had hoped to move into first place in the NL Central Division manager, also said he is worried They failed in the final game, however.

Now it doesn't matter. Astros owner Drayton McLane has been in baseball less than two years, but said he is suffering too because the players apparently misjudged the owners resolve.

"We certainly were aware of the players' stance," McLane said. "They didn't camouflage it.

"In fact, they've misjudged the owners. The owners have changed. I've heard a lot of people say in jest that the owners' record since the 1970s is 0-7. The union said it, and the owners would concede that."

But the owners are determined to change the financial structure of the game to make all 28 teams competitive, McLane said.

"Baseball financially is in such a difficult situation, there's not much leeway," McLane said. "Over 20 teams, if we'd played the full season, would have lost money." McLane said something has to be done about the haves and have-nots. When Atlanta pays out $52 million to its players and San Diego pays $14 million to its players, there is no hope in San Diego," McLane saiud.

"There's not a lot of hope in a lot of major league cities when their teams are paying a half to one-third for their

Under Grieve, Johnson oversaw a farm system that produced Wilson Alvarez, Sammy Sosa, Ruben Sierra, Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez.

But Grieve traded away the first three and the other two have yet to bring Texas a division title, although the Rangers were in first place when the season was wiped out Wednesday. It wasn't enough, though, and Grieve was fired Wednesday.

Johnson was temporarily given the job and became the first candidate in what Rangers president Tom Schieffer says will be an all-out search for a new GM.

"We've got to bring in a winner," Schieffer said.

Ultimately, that was the bum rap on Grieve: he didn't win.

Grieve was the third-longest tenured GM in baseball behind Oakland's Sandy Alderson and Toronto's Pat Gillick, each of whom had won at least one World Series.

Grieve did a nice job of making the Rangers competitive soon after becoming the youngest GM in baseball at age 36. Texas fought for the American League West title by 1986 before slipping back toward the mack pack.

The Rangers always had solid lineups under Grieve; it was the pitching and defense that held them

H&RMANUFACTURING CELEBRATES 25TH ANNVERSARY N BUSNESS

GRASS ROOTS BUSINESS -- present home of H & R Manufacturing located at 210 Ross St.

QUICK FACTS

THE BEGINNING: Started June 1969 in the family garage located at 1524 Brevard St. The company initially employed five -- a family affair that included Herschel & Ruth Black and their three children, Greg, Carey and Tonja. Start-up capital for the young company was $500 (cash).

CLAIM TO FAME: Produced a condensed version of the modern-day sleeping bag and successfully marketed it locally to football fans as the famous "SNUG BUG" stadium bag (kept fans lower extremities warm in football weather).

MOVING UP IN THE WORLD: Following the success of the stadium bags, the company then began producing a lightweight vest and eventually expanded its operation to its present location at 210 Ross St.

NOTE: The following excerpts are taken from a story published earlier by the Hereford Brand as part of a special series called 'Hustle Hereford'. The series featured businesses and industry which have had a unique impact on Hereford and the surrounding area.

With little more than a lot of grit and guts in marketing, H & R Manufacturing expanded a garage stiching room into a family factory that is now shipping garments across the nation and to many foreign countries... the turning point for the Blacks came in 1969 when Ruth Black used some scrap material left over from the stadium bags to make some vest for her two sons to wear to school stadium bags to make some vest for her two sons to wear to school and to FFA activities. As it turned out, the boys became walking showcases for a new line of garment--every kid in the showrings wanted one of the vests. The vests were seen at regional stock shows, then Herschel took samples and hit the road in the spring of 1969. He traveled from school to school, showing his wife's hand-stiched vests, with the selling point that they could be custom made for school colors, emblems and mascot drawings. The vests became the hit of the 1970s. By the mid-1970s, anyone who was anyone in Southwest livestock youth shows wore a Hereford-made vest made vest

In 1978, the company moved to its present location at 210 Ross St. The 8,000 sq. ft. facility, now managed by Carey Black, houses sewing, cutting, silk-screening and computer embroidery equipment in an operation that produces a wide variety of caps, Today, H & R ships merchandise, mostly embroidered jackets and caps, to 48 states, Mexico and some other foreign countries. The growing business, which employs 12 to 14 people currently, will produce more than 15,000 personalized jackets, caps and t-shirts this year for a clientele that includes schools, farm and ranch organizations, clubs and the cattle feeding industry. Mayor Bob Josserand has proclaimed today, Thursday, Sept. 15, as "Herschel and Ruth Black Day" in Hereford. H & R was presented an Industry award plaque at the Chamber Fun Breakfast this morning.

one-year deal.

He declined to discuss details of the proposal, which still must be approved and signed by Sanders and reviewed by the NFL Management Council to ensure it complies with salary cap regulations.

"I think finally at the end of the day what we've submitted should be approved," Policy said. "Will Deion accept it? That's what it boils down to.

A free-agent cornerback and Cincinnati Reds outfielder, Sanders shopped his services to several NFL teams while idled by the month-long baseball players strike.

Owners on Wednesday called off the season, and with his baseball job wiped out, Sanders turned his attention to football, particularly the 49ers.

Sanders told an Atlanta television station he had decided against rejoining the Atlanta Falcons and intended to sign with the 49ers.

"I have a very, very good feeling about this but it's not done 'til it's done," Policy said. "I think they know we've gone as far as we can go (financially). We've done all we could do in the framework of a one-year deal. Everything has been put on the table."

and badly needing a reinforcement. "I'm disappointed," coach Don Shula said. "I thought we were in it and had a good chance. We pursued it hard these last few days.'

In their bid to sign Sanders, the 49ers freed $1.3 million under the salary cap by restructuring the contracts of linebackers Gary Plummer and Ken Norton and safety Tim McDonald.

Just two weeks ago, Policy said the 49ers couldn't afford Sanders because of salary-cap constraints. Now he was optimistic the two sides could come to terms. However, he was wary of competing offers.

We're not in there alone," Policy said. "If I was to stand here and tell you it was done, I would be really acting foolhardy. I don't know what's going on behind the scenes. His coming out here may be nothing more than priming the pump to get Atlanta to really come through with a final offer.'

Falcons president Taylor Smith said the team still assumed Sanders would give Atlanta a chance to match the best offer from another club. "If the (money) is what it's rumored to be ... then I know we can Sanders rejected a more lucrative be competitive with that kind of offer," Atlanta coach June Jones

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer HOUSTON (AP) - Bruce Matthews is on the move again on the Houston Oilers offensive line. He's started every position on the line in his 12-year pro career and now he's moving from center, where he earned All-Pro honors, back to left tackle, a problem area in Sunday's 20-17 loss to Dallas.

"We're getting the quarterback hit too many times," line coach Bob Young said Wednesday. "Brad (Hopkins) played good at times, then he'd get lax and get the quarterback killed. I hate to make the change two weeks into the season."

Hopkins, the Oilers' No. 1 pick last year, will become the No. 1 backup off the bench. Erik Norgard will beome the starting center for Sunday's home opener against the Buffalo Bills.

Matthews is making the switch in time to play against Buffalo defensive end Bruce Smith. Making the move earlier wouldn't have made any difference, Matthews said.

The '33 Pirates wore bright yellow jerseys with a black "V" descending from the shoulders into vertical stripes. On the chest was a shield in the form of a castle representing Fort Duquesne and Fort Pitt, the two main Pennsylvania revolutionary forts - a logo that was on the official City of Pittsburgh shield in the 1930s.

"They're awful," Eric Green said. "They're going to look funny."

cornerback Tim McKyer said. "I'm glad we've got to wear them only twice," Rod Woodson said.

"They're ugly." Offensive tackle John Jackson is one of the uniforms' few proponents. "I like them," he said. "You're always going to have your skeptics, but it's not like we're going to wear them every week of the season. I think they're neat. If you don't like them, take a chill.

"They're going to be nice souvenirs. Do we get to keep them?"

uniforms that really haven't changed that much over the years.

"There's really not a whole lot to say about our uniforms," safety Darren Perry said. "I guess as soon as the game starts, we'll forget we're wearing them. Maybe the old uniforms will create some new excitement."

At least the NFL isn't requiring players to wear the leather helmets of the 1930s.

"I've got all my teeth," Green said. "And I want to keep them."

"You couldn't wear a leather helmet today," Woodson said. "You The opposing Colts won't look so didn't have 280-pound guys who

Strawberries, melons make refreshing chilled soup

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor Better Homes and Gardens Magazine

For AP Special Features

Purced fresh strawberries and melon make a luscious spring duet in this refreshing chilled soup. Serve it as an appetizer for a special brunch or dinner, or as a creamy fruit dessert. To make the preparation extra easy on yourself, purce the soup and soak the melon balls in their zesty ginger syrup the night before. At serving time, simply top each bowl with a few melon balls and edible carnation petals, if you like.

strawberries

8-ounce carton vanilla yogurt 8-ounce carton dairy sour cream

2 cups milk Carnation petals (optional)

Using a small melon baller, scoop half of the cantaloupe and the honeydew half into balls, or use a knife to cut melon into cubes. (You should have about 4 cups cantaloupe and 2 cups honcydew.) Set aside 2 cups of the cantaloupe.

In a small saucepan combine incapple juice, sugar and gingerroot. Bring to boiling, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Reduce heat; simmer, uncovered, over medium heat for 5 to 7 minutes or until the mixture is the consistency of a thin syrup. Remove from heat; cool. Transfer syrup to a storage container. Add the 2 cups cantaloupe pieces and 2 cups honeydew pieces. Cover and chill overnight.

Meanwhile, in a blender container or food processor bowl cover and blend or process strawberries until smooth; remove and set aside. Cover and blend or process reserved 2 cups cubed cantaloupe until smooth. In a large mixing bowl stir together yogurt and sour cream. Add strawberries, blended melon and milk; stir until combined. Cover and chill overnight.

To serve, drain melon balls, reserving syrup; stir reserved syrup into chilled soup. Ladle soup into bowls; top with melon balls. If desired, garnish with carnation petals. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I work in menopause, and you don't address a health-care facility. We all must this specific aspect. When a woman get hepatitis shots. A few of the workers had the series twice, because lab results indicated they didn't react correctly the first time. How common is this? Do you have any explanation for it? What is the usual schedule for the shots? — L.H.

ANSWER: Hepatitis vaccine shots are given in three stages over six months. A second shot is given one month after the first one, and a third and last shot five months later.

About 90 percent of those getting the series react successfully by developing antibodies, and they are con-sidered protected. The 10 percent who do not respond go through a repeat series of three shots. Half of them do respond to the second series.

Why some recipients never respond to the vaccine is pretty involved, but it can be related in large part to aging. As people grow older they may find a slackening in their ability to produce antibodies

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 63year-old woman in good health. However, recently I was told that I have polymyalgia rheumatica. This strange malady crept up on me, with gradually worsening stiffness and muscle soreness in both hips and shoulders as well as the upper back. It took several weeks of doctor visits and numerous tests with anti-inflammation and pain medicines before diagnosis was arrived at. I am happy to say that the prescribed prednisone has been very effective. What is the long-range prognosis? How long must I remain on medi-cine? - V.T.R.

ANSWER: You have described polymyalgia rheumatica as succinctly and as well as I could have, even on a good day.

The prognosis with PMR, a wideranging problem, is good - especially for you, since you apparently responded so well to the prednisone. Many patients need to take the medicine for from two to four years.

A few need to remain on it for life. I don't anticipate residual problems for you.

For a fuller explanation of the malady, see my "Polymyalgia Rheumatica and Its Companion Ills" pamphlet. Readers can order it by writing: Dr. Donohue - No. 45, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539, Enhas had a hysterectomy in which the uterus is removed but ovaries left intact, how does she know when she has started menopause? Do you still get the other signs, such as hot flashes? - B.B.

ANSWER: True, without the uterus, the woman cannot rely upon slackening and loss of monthly periods to indicate onset of menopause. Periods are, after all, part of the monthly process of shedding the uterine lining for its monthly renewal during reproductive years.

But other menopause signs also stem from ovarian estrogen decline. Thus the woman in your example would still have other menopause signs, including the flushes, fatigue and irritability.

It's wise to recognize the nonmenstrual menopause signs, since underlying them may be the lessening of the bone's ability to absorb minerals. That process also hinges on the presence of estrogen. post-menopausal osteoporosis, so often mentioned here.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What can you tell me about polycythemia vera? What are its symptoms? Is it a form of sickle-cell anemia? Is it inherited? - Mrs. L.L.

ANSWER: Polycythemia (POL-isigh-THEE-me-uh) vera is overproduction of red blood cells. Other blood components, including white cells and platelets, also increase in number. But the red-cell increase is the most marked. It's way out of line. Blood thickens as a result.

The condition, also called erythremia," happens most often in late middle life.

Because of the blood thickening, cannot be altered. the person complains of headache, dizziness and blurred vision. Ease of bruising also occurs, and there is often an itching.

It is not sickle-cell anemia or any form of that hereditary blood ailment. Heredity rarely plays a role in polycythemia vera.

Periodic blood removal is the most favored treatment. It keeps the blood thinned. Medicines, such as hydroxyurea, are also tried. On the disease frequency scale, polycythemia vera would fit into the not uncommon" categor

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please explain the difference between Alzheimer's disease and the condition known as senile dementia. I mean with respect to symptoms and long-term effects. - K.F.S.

ANSWER: Dementia is a sudden diminution of intellectual functions. such as recall of events, absorption of new knowledge or exercise of good judgment.

"Senile dementia" is an old term And that lack brings the threat of hardly ever used today. It came to mean dementia as a function of aging only. We now know that doesn't really square with reality. Growing older does not cause intellectual decline; specific physical changes do, and Alzheimer's disease is one of the more well-known of those changes.

Many illnesses, such as depression, have similar effects. A series of tiny, perhaps unreported strokes can bring gradual or incremental decline. And faltering thyroid gland can lie behind certain signs of intellectual decline.

DEARDR. DONOHUE: Would you please explain what a fibroid uterus is? My friend has been told she has this problem, but does not get much information from her doctor on it. Your column has helped our family many times before. - L.S.

ANSWER: A fibroid, also called a fibroma," is a common benign tumor of the muscular uterine wall. Atleast a third, and maybe as many as half of all women have one, their tumor growing during reproductive years and shrinking with menopause.

If fibroids cause no trouble, no pain or abnormal bleeding, they can be left alone.

Sometimes, a fibroid impinges on structures adjacent to the uterus or leads to sterility or other problems. When it becomes a troublemaker, the tumor can be removed. There are many ways to do that.

Town died when oil wells played out Rejuvenation of field isn't rebuilding Clemville

By PAUL POWELL The Victoria Advocate

CLEMVILLE, Texas - Black gold built Clemville, but as the oil played out in the late 1930s, so did the town.

But 36-year-old James Hunt of Edna, owner of Spill Response Inc. and co-owner of Wm. W. Hunt Contractor Inc., both of Edna, is not so sure that all the oil is gone.

The closing of the post office in 1982 seemed to secure the town's demise. That's when Clemville disappeared from the map altogether.

The town, located off Texas 71 just north of Midfield in Matagorda County, sprung up in the early 1900s to support the Clemville Oil Field.

The field sits atop a large salt dome. Old-timers describe it as the state's third oldest producing field behind the likes of Spindletop.

Shallow well production began in the field in 1905 and gradually increased. Interest peaked when the late Ellis Hamill completed his Poor Boy Well on the flank of the salt dome in 1930-31, about 1.5 miles from the crown.

At optimum production, 4,000 barrels of oil a day flowed from Hamill's well - a stark contrast to the 100 barrel-a-day production from the best of the field's shallow wells.

Rycade Oil Co., the Texas Co. (the forerunner of Texaco) and numerous wildcatters worked the field.

Annie Posey Sparks moved to Clemville from Nixon at age 5. She came here with her family by covered wagon in 1917.

At the time, she said the town boasted a population of about 4,500 people and had its own bank, clan over the top was the Arab Oil drugstore, rooming house and feed stores.

"We also had a three-room school in Clemville, and when I registered there in 1918 the school had a 12-grade enrollment of 125 students," she said.

Deede Cowger, 64, another longtime resident and former lease holder and operator here, also retains fond memories of a busier time.

Cowger still lives in the shadows of the Clemville Field in the comfortably shaded brick home she and her late husband, Harry, built in the mid-1970s. They purchased the home after buying out Texaco production rights to a portion of the field in 1969.

The Cowgers thrived on grit, determination and hard work. Deede bought a small cafe in 1968 to support the family, while Harry plowed their oil profits back into the field, at which he had begun working at the tender age of 14.

Production was rising, and things were looking up for the Cowgers. That was until Harry died of cancer in 1975, leaving Deede with three teen-age daughters and a mountain of debt.

Deede was determined to follow in her husband's footsteps. She continued serving lunches at the cafe, and along with her daughters, worked the family lease. They pulled pipe and reworked wells in the afternoons and evenings to maintain production. The cafe business was good.

"It was nothing for us to serve 150 lunches a day," she said. But what really put the Cowger Embargo of the late 1970s. The it's currently averaging between 80 embargo propelled the price of oil from $6.75 to $36 a barrel.

Deede fondly recalls that, to Harry, $6.75 a barrel oil was a pretty good price. She once told Houston Chronicle columnist Leon Hale that he'd be thrilled to live to see the day when oil might sell for as much as $15 a barrel.

With her daughters grown and married, the demands of a growing family persuaded Deede to sell the cafe in 1982. But she continued to operate the family lease with her children until eventually selling out in 1990.

Production of 1,400 barrels of oil a month dipped to 700 barrels a month following Harry's death, and by the time Deede sold the lease in 1990, it was only producing about 550 to 600 barrels a month.

Deede retains a 3 percent royalty guy to break even." interest in the lease and is pleased that James Hunt, along with brothers Bill and Jesse, all of Edna, have acquired the lease.

Hunt said that when he and his brothers took over the field in January, 1993, it was only producing about eight barrels of oil a day.

He bought an old tripod drilling rig at auction in West Texas and overhauled it. To that, he added lots of new production equipment, tank batteries and a vacuum truck.

Hunt then set out to rework and repair as many of the old wells as possible - beginning with the marginal producers.

In the 18 months he's been active seriously these days. in the field, Hunt has seen production rise to over 200 barrels a day, although to 90 barrels a day.

"We tried some new production techniques on some of the old wells that didn't work out as well as we expected, so we're currently having to regroup a little right now," he said.

"My brothers and I are still operating at a loss on this deal, but we expected it to take a while before becoming a paying proposition," he said.

Hunt says that his family's years of experience in the oilfield lease service business played a pivotal role in their decision to buy the lease.

Being in the lease service end of the business, we had a pretty good idea what was involved," he said. "We already had most of the necessary equipment and manpower to operate, so we knew our costs would not require near as much production as the next

Hunt agrees with old-timers who believe there's probably a large, and virtually untapped, pool of oil lying somewhere beneath the salt dome caprock that is feeding the fissures currently tapped by the producing wells. But, he adds, finding that pool is not really a high priority with him.

The first thing we want to do is et the most out of what's already here. After we do that, then we'll worry about large untapped pools of oil." It's doubtful Hunt's efforts will ever result in a return to the field's frenzied days of the past, but Decde Cowger is certainly beginning to take her monthly royalty mail call much more

Jobless filings decline

WASHINGTON (AP) - The number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits fell by 3,000 last week to the lowest level in three weeks, the government said today.

The Labor Department said 327,000 people filed jobless claims in the week ending Sept. 10. It marked the second straight weekly decline. Claims had also fallen by 3,000 the previous week to 330,000. All the figures are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

The improvement was slightly better than economists had been expecting. Unemployment claims are closely watched by economists for early signals they can send about labor market conditions.

The 327.000 claims for last week was the lowest since claims totaled 323,000 for the week ending Aug. 20.

Many analysts prefer to track the four-week moving average, which smooths out some of the volatility in the weekly numbers. That average rose slightly to 328,250, up from 327,750 in the previous week.

That was the highest level since the four-week average was 339,750 in the week ending Aug. 6.

The government had reported sizable increases in jobless claims in the first weeks of July. While that first raised concerns that the labor market was beginning to turn down again, the claims figure plunged in the following weeks as summer hiring reached its peak.

The largest increases were reported in California, up 3,612; Ohio, up 1,749; Michigan, up 1,558; Pennsylvania, up 1,156; Wisconsin, up 1,151, and Illinois, up 1,075.

The big jump in California claims was attributed to layoffs in the construction and service industries while Michigan officials blamed their increase on scattered layoffs throughout the state.

The largest decreases in claims were recorded by Tennessee, down 832; New York, down 445; North Carolina, down 395; Mississippi, down 351, and Alaska, down 333.

Services for illegals carry high price tag

By KIM I. MILLS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Providing education, emergency health care and prison cells for illegal aliens is costing states billions more than the immigrants pay in state and local taxes, according to a governmentcommissioned study.

The study, by the Urban Institute think tank, found that the seven states with the largest numbers of undocumented aliens will spend $471 million alone this year to imprison those convicted of felonies.

Those states also spent an estimated $3.1 billion to educate undocumented aliens in fiscal 1993, and $422 million for their emergency medical care under Medicaid, according to the analysis released Wednesday. Illegal immigrants paid $1.9 billion in state and local taxes in 1992 to the seven states with the highest numbers of undocumented aliens, according to the study. However, the share of tax revenues paid by illegal aliens was far less than their share of the population in each state, the study found.

The report did not calculate the net cost of undocumented immigrants to state budgets.

The analysis was undertaken in response to complaints by the states that the federal government should pay some of the costs of education, imprisonment and emergency health care for undocumented aliens.

Five of the seven states in the study - Texas, California, Arizona, Florida and New Jersey - have sued the federal government to recover some of this money. The other states in the study were New York and Illinois.

"The responsibilities for dealing aliens are worth far more than the taxes they pay.

"To cover the cost of services they receive in California, the average illegal immigrant household would have to earn $100,000 a year," said Phillip J. Romero, chief economist in the state's Office of Planning and Research.

The Urban Institute study, titled "Fiscal Impacts of Undocumented Aliens: Selected Estimates for Seven States," was narrow in scope and made no attempt to measure undocumented aliens' contributions to the states' economies as workers. business owners or consumers. It was based on official government data, including Immigration and Naturalization Service estimates that 3.4 million undocumented aliens lived in the United States in October 1992. Of that number, 2.9 million, or 86 percent, lived in the seven states that were the focus of the study. The report found that 21,395 illegal aliens were in prisons in the seven states in March 1994. California had a disproportionate share, and its cost of imprisoning them was much larger than the other states' - $368 million, the report found. The next highest state was New York, $45 million.

The report estimated that 641,000 undocumented alien children were enrolled in public schools in the seven states in 1993-94. Of the $3.1 billion spent by the seven states to educate these children, California accounted for $1.3 billion, according to the study. This was 40 percent less than the state's The states that have sued the federal government maintain it's Washington's job to control the country's borders. But the institute found that between 55 percent and 60 percent of illegal aliens in the United States are people who overstayed their visas, many of them tourists.

with illegal immigration must be shared between the states and Washington," said Alice Rivlin, acting director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Bill Cryer, spokesman for Texas Gov. Ann Richards, said the numbers in the institute report sounded in line with Texas' estimates.

California conducted its own analysis of current studies on illegal immigration and determined that the services received by undocumented

Photographs provide basis for writer's book

By SARAH WESTBROOK The Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas - For Frank Samponaro, old photographs are more than just snapshots.

Samponaro, professor of history and chairman of the department of humanities and fine arts at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, is using photos to tell the story of ordinary people at the turn of the century.

The professor, who is writing his third book based on historical photographs, said pictures can be used to define society. "(The books) involve the use of photographs that document how we interpret social history," Samponaro said.

"It tells us how people lived and gives us insights into the way people lived their lives."

His first two books, "Border Fury" and "War Scare on the Rio Grande," deal with how people lived during the Mexican Revolution along the Texas/Mexico border. Paul Vanderguard cowrote the two books with Samponaro.

The new book will include historical photographs of the time period from the end of the Spanish-American War in 1898 to the beginning of World War I in 1917. Four chapters will focus on the cities of New Haven, Conn.; San Diego, Calif.; Waco; and a fourth city that Calif.; Waco; and a fourth city that has not been selected. "We're looking at the lives of ordinary people through four geographically diverse American cities," he said. "I haven't pinned down the fourth city yet." The pictures provide a perspective unlike that of a history book. "If you looked at the photos of how they worked, of how they worshipped, of their recreation time, of how they went to school ... you get an idea that can only be provided by a photograph," he said. The particular cities were chosen because they had extensive collections of photos available.

For example, Samponaro used Baylor University's Texas Collection Library to find photographs of Waco.

"This is a town which was a marketing center for cotton production farmers," he said. Samponaro pointed out the importance of the ALICO Building, a Waco landmark, which was originally an insurance company.

"Because of this building, which at one time was the highest building west of the Mississippi, we first saw women being hired to work in offices. This was an early example of women beginning to assume nontraditional roles."

In addition, the San Diego photos came from the San Diego Historical Society, which owns more than 2 million pictures, Samponaro said. "The goal is the same - to give people an opportunity to understand (history) in a different way," he added

Many of the photos that are compiled in the book will not merely include a caption at the bottom, but an explainer paragraph to tell the story behind the photo.

"Whenever we use a photograph, there may be a long paragraph to explain the photo and its value ... which helps people understand something about the history of this particular area," he said. Samponaro said he is hoping to receive a grant to help produce the book, which does not yet have a
