Several Hundred Will Ride Special Train To Lubbock

The San Angelo high school Bobcats, champions of the Texas Interscholastic League football districts 3 and 4 returned to their training sessions Tuesday afternoon, this time in preparation for the state quarter-final bout with Pampa, sector 1 and 2 champion, Saturday in Lubbock.

The Concho corp is in comparatively good shape, a few of the boys bruised and Pete Castello, giant center, handicapped by a cut chin, injury received in the game at El Paso last Saturday.

The team is being worked at a stiff clip on Pampa plays. Tomto Coleman scouted the Pampa 27 to 7 conquest of the Abilene team last week.

Bobcat Rooters
There are 380 reserve seats for San Angelenos between the 35 and 47-yard markers in the south section of the stand on the west side of the Texas Tech playing field. Pampa has the same alignment in the north section of the stand. The west side holds 4,750. The bleachers on the east side hold 3,000. The bleacher admission for adults is to be 75 cents and for students 25 cents, purchasable only at the high schools in San Angelo, Lubbock and Pampa through Friday. The only student tickets to be sold at the gate will be to football players of districts 1, 2, 3, and 4 accompanied by coaches.

The center sections of the bleachers have been reserved for the school bands, pep squads and Pampa and San Angelo student bodies. Pampa has asked for a section seating 400. The game starts at 2 o'clock.

Special Train Arranged
It is planned to run a special train from San Angelo at about 7 o'clock Saturday morning to arrive in Lubbock about noon. The return jaunt would start at 6 o'clock, arriving in San Angelo at 11. The round trip fare will be Pampa officials say they expect 1,000 persons in Lubbock from Pampa. It was agreed between the rival schools, particularly upon insistence by Pampa, that no radio broadcasting of the game shall be permitted in Lubbock and was looked upon with disfavor for either Pampa or San Angelo to lease a wire for a broadcast in either city.

Game officials are Charley Richenstein (A. & M.) referee; Vic Payne, (Bethany), umpire; Weldon Chapman (Austin), head linesman; Les Cranfill (T. C. U.) field judge.

The game will be called promptly at 2 p. m.

Famous Poloist Will Play At Austin Sunday

AUSTIN—Cecil Smith, internationally famous polo star, will play here December 17 in a game against the University of Texas polo team. Smith and Rube Williams, an equally famous player, are members of George Miller's Austin polo team, which had its beginnings in the capital city a decade ago.

Captain Vernon Cook's group of poloists were signally honored when Smith accepted the University's teams invitation to appear in Austin. The University team, composed entirely of students and with but three years' experience, has developed a playing technique which has won the admiration of veterans.

Captain Sam Houston, III, grandson of the first president of the Texas republic and polo coach at Oklahoma Military Academy, said that "the University of Texas polo squad should be able to defeat any college team in the United States."

December 17 has been set as a home-coming date for Smith, Williams, and his former teammates. They learned to play the game here about ten years ago under the tutelage of George Miller and since that time have played all over the United States.

Pagan Ethics and Banking

In connection with the President's remarks about the "pagan ethics" of those in high places who seek to line their own nests with other people's money, it is interesting to look at some suggestions recently presented to the Pecora committee by Mr. Winthrop W. Aldrich of the Chase National Bank. Mr. Aldrich is the man who, since he became the executive of the bank in January, has been dealing with the mess of his predecessor, Mr. Albert H. Wiggin. He has been also the most conspicuous and articulate Wall Street figure who has publicly recognized that there have been gross evils in high finance and has tried to exercise moral leadership in regard to them.

His memorandum to the Senate committee covers many matters, but immediately the most interesting of these is that which constitutes what might be called an attempt to codify certain banking practices which should be "outlawed." Point Number One is that officers of a bank should be required to disclose all their personal loans, above a nominal amount, to the board of the bank. The purpose of this, of course, is to prevent bank officers from being influenced by their own private interests. Point Number Two is that bank officers should be prohibited from participating directly or indirectly in syndicates, trading accounts and pools. This is to prevent them from being influenced by personal considerations when, as officers, they have to consider loans to syndicates. Point Number Three is that officers should be compelled to disclose to their board all their outside business and financial connections. This is to prevent them from using the bank to favor outside interests.

This is a rough summary of some of Mr. Aldrich's suggestions. There are others of a similar character. They are all variations on the same theme, and they amount to saying that as a general rule a man cannot faithfully serve two masters. This is the ethical principle which includes all the specific rules that Mr. Aldrich has come to think are necessary.

That he has come very close to the central evil of the banking trouble seems to me to be evident. It is often said, by way of extenuation for what happened in the banks, that the boom made every one a little crazy and that most of the ensuing trouble was due to mistakes of judgment rather than to immoral practices. The explanation does not go deep enough. It does not explain why so many terrible mistakes of judgment were made by men who now recognize that these mistakes consisted in ignoring the plainest and clearest traditions of sound banking.

What caused men to forget their traditions? The answer to that question is what we must seek. I think the answer is that men forgot the rule that you cannot serve two masters, engaged themselves in all sorts of dual and ambiguous relationships, and so the clarity of their judgment was destroyed. Think, for example, of an overbearing and forceful man like Mr. Charles Mitchell acting at one and the same time as a director of the Federal Reserve Bank and as the salesman of new security issues. What chance was there that he would favor a prudent credit policy when such a policy would make it more difficult to sell his stocks? Think of Mr. Wiggin drawing salaries from corporations that were borrowing from his bank. It is hard enough for any man to use his judgment when he has a single interest. But when he has two conflicting interests it is too much to hope that his personal bias will not prevail.

In the public service and in the professions it has long been recognized that interlocking and ambiguous personal relationships are immoral. In politics a man who is in the pay of a private interest which is in any way affected by his public actions is regarded as a crook. A lawyer who takes fees from two parties to a suit would be liable to be disbarred. A professor of economics who is on the payroll of a public utility loses the right to pretend that his observations on utilities are scholarly. All professions

Farmers Not Required To Pay License

When Farmers Sell Own Production City License Is Free

Farmers of this county are unduly alarmed over the city ordinances regulating peddling or sale of produce within the city limits. This opinion was voiced by the city commission in its regular session Tuesday evening.

The commissioners pointed out that some few farmers are laboring under the erroneous impression that they are compelled to pay a license fee in order to market their products to citizens of Big Spring.

Such is emphatically wrong, the commissioners declared. Farmers are not required to pay fee when they are marketing goods produced by themselves.

Quoting three sections from the ordinances as published in the November 3 issue of The Big Spring Herald:

"The provisions of this ordinance shall not apply to produce and growers of farm, dairy, poultry products, fruits, vegetables, livestock, animals meats or other horticultural or agricultural products, when the producers or grower, of such products are peddling only products grown or produced by them and nothing else."

"All persons offering for sale foods and, or, food products grown or produced by such persons shall not be required to pay the license fee provided for, but license shall be issued to such persons by the City Secretary upon satisfactory proof that they have produced or grown the products to be sold, and such license shall be so stated."

"Provided (referring to foregoing provisions of the ordinance requiring payment of a license fee) that compliance with the provisions of this ordinance shall not be required in sales and deliveries by any grower of producer of any fruits, berries vegetables or other similar products, where such sale is of products produced or grown by the seller and delivery is made from wagons direct to the purchaser."

In other words, the farmer is not men who have any sensitiveness and awareness know that they must scrupulously avoid the influence on their own minds of a dual interest. The other day, for example, I was talking with a friend of mine, a very good newspaper man, about what he ought to do about his own savings at a time like this. He writes a good deal about monetary policy. "What I have done," he said, "is to divide what I possess exactly in half. One part I have put in government bonds, the other in common stocks. As nearly as I have been able to arrange it, I won't stand to gain or lose if we have inflation or do not have it, and so I won't find myself wishing for one policy or the other. Then perhaps I'll be able to think clearly about them." That is, in substance, what every man has to try to do who has to exercise judgment affecting the interests of others. He has to put his personal relationships in such condition that he can be loyal and disinterested.

So Mr. Aldrich, in my belief, on the right track when he condemns the practices in banks which mean that officers are on two sides of transactions. His proposals are, of course only specific illustrations of a broad moral principle, and unless the moral principle itself is understood and generally upheld, particular rules will have little effect because they will easily be circumvented. My own view is that the capitalist system cannot be preserved unless the principle of disinterestedness governs the conscience of the leaders of that system. Unless bankers and corporate executives realize that these vast modern enterprises can be administered only by men whose judgment is not confused by ambiguous private interest, they will be unable to operate modern business and finance successfully, and some other form of collective operation will take its place.

You cannot make private capitalism work if the mentality and the morality of men like Mitchell and Wiggin govern at the points of vital decision. Nor with men who are personally more upright but inclined to say "Poor old Charlie" and "Poor old Al, it really is too bad," and let it go at that. Nor can you make capitalism work by proliciting it from the outside. There will have to be a revolutionary change of heart from within, a change of ethical standards comparable with the change in the political life of mankind which began in England in the eighteenth century when the conception of office as a public trust began to supplant the conception of it as a private hereditary possession. required to pay the license fee, but must have the license which is furnished him free of charge when he advances satisfactory proof that he is the producer of that which he seeks to market.

Commissioners invited all farmers not familiar with the ordinance to call at the city hall where they will be given an opportunity to study it and have it explained.

Milk shed

Another point on which the commissioners said there was an understanding is the proposed milk shed organized by dairymen.

The shed is an organization formed by the dairymen working under a provision of the agricultural adjustment act of the federal government.

The city is in no wise connected with it, said the officials.

Texas Orange And White Cagers To Open Season In San Marcos Tonight

AUSTIN — Coach Ed Olie's Champion Orange and White quintet open their basketball season in San Marcos Thursday night when they engage the Southwest Texas State Teachers' College Bobcats in a pair of games—the first between the reserves of the two teams.

The Bobcats come to Austin Saturday night for a return game which will ring up the curtain in Gregory Gymnasium, the spacious fieldhouse of the University of Texas.

Following the opener with the Bobcats the Longhorns swing into a grueling schedule which includes such teams as Brown Paper Mill in Monroe, La.; Hunt Oilers at Tullos, Louisiana; Texas A. and L.; and Olsen's Terrible Swedes as well as a 12 game conference schedule.

The Longhorn schedule follows:
December 14 —San Marcos Teachers at San Marcos.
December 16—San Marcos Teachers at Austin.
December 21 and 22—Brown Paper Mill at Monroe, La.
December 23—Hunt Oilers at Tullos, Louisiana.
December 28, 29 and 30—Texas A. and L. at Austin.
January 6—T. C. U. at Fort Worth.
January 8—S. M. U. at Dallas.
January 13—Baylor at Austin.
December 18—A. and M. at Austin.
December 20—Rice at Austin.
February 5—Olsen's Terrible Swedes at Austin.
February 9 and 10—Arkansas at Fayetteville.

February 14—Baylor at Waco.
February 20—Rice at Houston.
February 23—T. C. U. at Austin.
February 26—S. M. U. at Austin.
March 3—A. and M. at College Station.

As the squad shapes up at present Jack Gray and Glenn Thompson are at the forward posts with Jean Francis at center and Captain Ronald Fagan and Bennie Rundell at guards. All are lettermen. Francis, however, is suffering with a cut eye and Rundell is on the bench with a sprained ankle. DeMoy Paulk will probably fill in for Francis at the pivot post with Marshall Pennington and Claude Harris alternating at Rundell's position.

An epidemic of ankle injuries has slowed up the early practices, but Coach Ed Olie expressed the belief that his squad would be in top shape for the conference opener against the Horned Frogs in Ft. Worth.

Bill Allen and Glenn Thompson, forwards, have been bothered with weak ankles as well as Paulk, center, and Rundell and Harris, guards.

Daily intra-squad scrimmage sessions have revealed a number of capable reserve material. At forward Richard Prigmore and Jack Taylor, both sophomores, have given Bill Allen a run for his money while Paul Wittman, Gordon Wellborn, and Marshall Pennington have been making strong bids for a regular starting position over the veteran Rundell and the flash-have been "covering" the Wall Street disclosures. Ship subsidies and contracts have been left to their assistants.

This blistering story is getting the treatment you might expect.

change in the capital gains and losses provision of the income tax.

The proposal provides that the tax shall apply at its full rate on transactions less than a year old tapering down to 20 per cent if the transactions are five years old. See what happens. Financial big shots who have been saving stocks they bought in 1929 to sell for tax purposes would only be able to claim one-fifth as much loss as they thought they could. This angle hasn't been played up but it's mighty important hereabouts.

Dozens of Wall Street strong boxes are loaded to the lids with '29 boom babies currently selling around a nickel to the dollar. Their owners have counted on them to offset future profits at Uncle Sam's expense. If the new proposal goes through all bets will be off—and are the boys distressed at the prospect!

Another effect would be to penalize in-and-out speculation by taxing short term profits at a higher rate than long term. Some experts think that would do more to curb the speculative mania as recovery progresses than any other measure that has been proposed.

Sniping—

Sniping at members of the President's entourage will get hotter from now on. The New ork opposition will urge a Congressional investigation of the extra income activities of Cabinet members, secretaries and what not. The volume of such activities is locally reported as much greater than in any preceding administration.

Shifts—

The actions of European big business as reported to their New York contacts show skepticism about disarmament talks. Siemens—the great German electrical concern—has quietly disposed of its Polish subsidiaries. What you don't own can't be confiscated in case of war.

Radio Corporation of America, which at one time employed over 3,000 people in Germany, has transferred those particular departments to England. This may be coincidence.

Recruits—

On the day the United States recognized Russia the Nazis established a Storm Troop regiment consisting entirely of White Russians. This fully-armed unit is under the command of General von Golowachew and Baron Meller-Sakomel-ski. German newspapers were not permitted to report the incident.

Arson—

The Reichstag arson trial is causing Doctor Goebbels sleepless nights. His propaganda val' has long since reached zero and is justly being near becoming a minus quantity.

Taylor's straightforwardness has won him more sympathy—even in Nazi circles—than the German authorities like. Dimitroff's aggressive defense methods have made him the idol of the masses out of sympathy with the Hitler regime. As a direct result of this public attitude German newspapers have been ordered to discontinue lengthy reports of the trial and foreign newspaper correspondents received similar hints. The daily broadcasts from the court room have been cancelled.

Nanking—

New York hears that Britain is planning a loan to the Nanking government. Authorities understand that T. V. Soong—Nanking finance minister who resigned because he was unsuccessful in raising money in London—is due to be reinstated. It is believed that he is having better luck now in British financial quarters.

Firestone Radio Artist

This picture of Richard Crooks stepping from the world's largest radio to the stage was taken when the great tenor appeared before a private audience of 1200 during his visit to "A Century of Progress." He emerged from the huge radio just after it had been announced that his radio contract had been renewed by Firestone. The audience had been led to believe it was listening to a special broadcast from New York, received through the towering radio receiving set—which was hooked up for such reception. But Crooks was within the cabinet, singing "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," with accompaniment by a piano concealed backstage. At the climax of this song—for which he is famous the world over—he stepped out into the floodlight. Applause interrupted for fully ten minutes—then the song was begun to show you can raise lots of stuff Texas soils.

Into the chasm of economic misfortune created by drought, low prices of crude oil and cattle, has been thrown in recent months the unusually large Cooden Oil Corporation payroll, along with the Texas & Pacific train and engine service payrolls and this has enabled the community to hold itself together pretty well from a business standpoint.

Along with the had there is always some good. If the price of farm and crude petroleum products pans out next season as the pre-war, and we have a reasonable amount of rainfall at the proper intervals you won't know the old town a year from now.

HOME TOWN—

With a set-up calling for an Austin staff of 300, the State and Federal relief agencies and correlated bodies are hunting for adequate offices. They now are scattered among legislative committee rooms, the Governor's reception suite at the state capitol, and various state office buildings.

One plan proposes to move the entire "outfit" to Camp Mabry, the old camp grounds of the National Guards of Texas, which has various buildings erected during the World War.

Negotiations have progressed far enough to secure an agreement for regular bus service between the camp and downtown Austin if the concentration is made there.

Negotiations have been closed by the State Board of Control for a farm near Austin for occupancy by a number of inmates of the state institution for feeble minded.

An experiment with outdoor occupations at the Wichita Falls State Hospital for insane resulted so successfully that the state proposes to expand the outdoor plan. A golf course at the Wichita Falls hospital brought astonishing results. Officials believe light farming will be equally beneficial. Small farm and dairy now are operated in connection with the Austin State Hospital.

Speaker Calk Stevenson of the Texas House of Representatives, during a recent visit to the state capitol, was besieged by inquirers to know whether he would run for governor. One person suggested that he was standing beneath a capitol corridor picture of Sam Houston—an appropriate place to announce.

Stevenson, in reply, looked straight across the corridor where hangs a portrait of Davy Crockett. "Be sure you are right, then go ahead," he muttered.

Burglar proofing the state treasury's walls has been proposed as a civil works project, although it is
