Banana man

Hereford resident Dale White shows the bananas that are growing on his banana plant at his home, 102 N. Douglas. White is growing the tree inside house, in pool room. Bananas began growing around Thanksgiving and are still small and green. White said he has no idea how to tell when they are ripe or how to tend them. The tree flourishes in the warm, humid air beside his swimming pool. White also has an orange tree that had several fruits that fell off after he fertilized the plant.

Local man raising banana crop

Around Thanksgiving, Hereford resident Dale White noticed an unusual leaf growing on the banana plant he has inside his home.

The stalk lay on top of the top leaf of his tree, but when White climbed a ladder for a look, it appeared to be a strangely-shaped ear of corn.

Later, the stalk slid off the leaf and moved to hang down the side of the plant. Then, when small leaves on the side of it fell off, row upon row of miniature bananas were revealed.

White said the plant -- which is located in the warm, humid air of his enclosed swimming pool -- is the only producing banana plant he knows of in Hereford.

The little bananas are maturing slowly, he said. They are now shorter than normal length and are all bright green.

He said he did not know how to tell when they were ready to pick, but said he would just leave the plant alone for now.

There is the promise of more bananas in the future, as well.

One sucker grew from the roots of the main plant and White has moved it to a place of its own near the "mother" plant. Another sucker is growing now, but White said he will not remove it until the banana harvest is in, as he does not know what effect removing the sucker would have on his crop.

White has reason for concern about messing with exotic plants.

An orange tree he has growing near the banana plant put out blossoms, then formed several dozen tiny oranges.

But when White fertilized the plant to help it along, the fruit dropped and he lost his crop.

So for now, the sucker will remain and White will continue to monitor his unique crop and wait for it to be harvested.

Unfunded mandate bill may pass House today

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - House passage of a bill requiring Congress to pay for the regulations and laws it promulgates would give Republicans their second major legislative triumph in a week.

House approval was expected today on the "Unfunded Mandates Reform Act," which the Senate passed last Friday. It and the balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, which the House approved last Thursday, are essential elements of the Republican "Contract With America" agenda that promises to make Congress more fiscally responsible.

The Senate passed the mandates bill 86-10, and the two chambers are expected to move quickly to iron out differences. President Clinton has indicated he would sign a bill ending future unfunded mandates.

The nation's governors and mayors, as well as private sector groups such as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, have campaigned aggressively for the bill, saying health, safety and environmental regulations imposed by Congress cost them billions of dollars every year.

With passage today, the House moves onto another "Contract" item, giving the president line-item veto authority to cut specific spending programs from congressionally approved budgets. The Senate, meanwhile, is settling in for what could be a lengthy debate on the constitutional amendment to balance the budget by 2002.

On Tuesday, the House approved by voice vote an amendment saying people cannot use lawsuits over mandates to halt implementation of federal regulations.

Some lawmakers have been concerned that the private sector would sue federal agencies over alleged failures to carry out the bill's requirements in order to stop enforcement of anti-pollution, safety or other regulations.

Rep. James Moran, D-Va., the sponsor of the amendment, said allowing people to sue to block any federal mandates they thought might adversely affect them would "create substantial gridlock throughout the federal government."

Moran's amendment was a compromise between the Senate version, which restricts all judicial review of federal mandate legislation, and lawmakers who insisted that all regulations should be liable to suit.

"I feel very strongly that without it (judicial review) this is a worthless, toothless piece of legislation," said Bill Goodling, R-Pa.

Women want voting cases transferred to federal court

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Two women indicted on criminal charges for state voting irregularities want their cases heard in federal court, claiming civil rights violations.

Petitions of Removal, calling for transfer of the cases to the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas, were filed Tuesday.

Charged in indictments returned Dec. 15 by the Deaf Smith County Grand Jury are Grace Gonzales, 49, and Delia Griego, 39. They are free on bonds of $7,500.

A two-count indictment against Gonzales alleges that she made a false entry in a voter registration application that indicated the applicant was a naturalized citizen of the U.S., and that a signature was a false entry on a mail ballot.

Griego was indicted on three counts, including an erroneous address on a voter registration application, a false entry on voter registration application stating the applicant was a naturalized citizen and a false entry on the address of an applicant.

Deaf Smith Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul said Tuesday that several questions arise over the transfer of a criminal case from a state to a federal court.

He said the petition of removal in a criminal case is very unusual and that he and his staff will research the questions.

Asked who would prosecute the charges in federal court, Saul said, "I don't know."

After learning of the petitions filed to move the cases, Saul said, "All I know is we received the papers."

Cases against the two women were built by an investigation conducted by Saul's office and taken to the grand jury for action.

"The grand jury made the charges," Saul said.

In the court papers filed by Jeff Blackburn of Amarillo, attorney for the two women, background information notes that they were volunteer "deputy voter registrars" during 1993 and 1994.

The petitions claim that "considerable friction existed between Griego, Gonzales, and their supporters on one hand, and David Ruland (voter registrar) and other members of the Hereford and Deaf Smith County political establishment."

Further, the petitions claim that "during the 1993 primary elections Griego and Gonzales asked the secretary of state to monitor the election."

The petition errs in fact at that

Rich, poor districts decry Supreme Court's finance ruling

Small 'rich' districts claim sharing wealth with poor unfair tax burden

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

WHITEFACE, Texas (AP) - The uncurbed streets and abandoned businesses that line this dusty West Texas oil town don't suggest its status as home to a rich school.

Folks around here wonder why they have to pay higher taxes that get sent to their property-poor counterparts.

These residents aren't impressed with the Texas Supreme Court decision Monday that upheld the state's method of equalizing school finance.

The decision spurred a new chorus of protest from wealthy districts who contend they shouldn't be made to raise taxes that help fund low-wealth schools.

"It's Robin Hood all over again," said Lynn Ellison, the mother of three Whiteface students. "Robin Hood didn't work and it wasn't right."

Ms. Ellison and others called share-the-wealth an unfair taxpayer burden that would diminish education standards and endanger small schools.

"They're trying to turn our country communistic," Ms. Ellison said over lunch Tuesday at the town hot spot, M&M Grocery. "Because that's what this is, is... socialism."

Whiteface Consolidated Independent School District spans 378 square miles of derrick-dotted landscape in three counties west of Lubbock.

The district offers its 400 students an indoor swimming pool for gym class and computers by first grade.

But the district lost 35 percent of its tax base this year when oil values and drilling dropped. Taxes have soared from 46 cents per $100 property valuation in 1990 to $1.45 as the district complied with the state's formula for reducing wealth per student.

Whiteface school officials sent $4.1 million, or about 60 percent of the taxes they collected last year, to six neighboring school districts.

"There are probably a lot of people in Austin who probably think we're wealthy," said school business manager Delbert Dodds. "There's a misconception that because you live in a wealthy school district that you have money."

"They feel like all the 16-year-olds drive Corvettes to school," added city manager Syd Albus.

Residents say they're not wealthy personally. They resent what many see as an unconstitutional state property tax that has forced some to freeze teacher salaries and drop programs.

Low-wealth districts, meanwhile, don't like the law either. They say it leaves too big a gap between them and the 96 districts that must share this school year.

The Jayton-Girard school district, about 75 miles northwest of Abilene, last year surrendered $7.3 million - 80 percent of the taxes collected.

That money paid for new buildings and equipment at districts the state classifies as property-poor.

"When your taxes go up 500 percent in three years and your income doesn't go up with it, it's pretty difficult," said Jayton trustee Buddy Baldrige.

Baldrige said Jayton can't afford to replace employees who quit. Budget constraints also forced officials to let Kent County take over the school swimming pool.

"I'm afraid we've only scratched the surface if this thing goes to full implementation," he said.

Monday's decision makes closure a "distinct possibility" for the school in Allison, about 60 miles east of Pampa, said trustee Garland Dukes. The district, rich in natural gas and home to about 65 students, gave up about $1.5 million last year, Dukes said.

"I don't think there's anybody who feels there's any reason we should lose our little school or have it put at risk just to fund someone else," he said. "We'd like to have enough left over for ourselves."

Residents complained that they shouldn't be penalized just because oil and gas seep from the land in their districts. Other parts of the state don't get similarly taxed for their natural resources, they said.

"Are they being taxed on their lakes and recreation areas?" Albus asked.

"Here in West Texas we don't have a whole lot of scenery to look at," Ms. Ellison said. "The money comes from the oil."

Low wealth districts say state tax, other 'unthinkable' options needed

By DAN CALDERON
San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO - The Texas Supreme Court's decision to uphold Senate Bill 7, the state school finance law, has left a bad taste in the mouths of local trustees and superintendents.

Leonard Gaines, school board vice president in the low-wealth South San Antonio School District, said a state income tax and similar "unthinkable" options are the only way to seriously address equal funding for schools.

"When Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock started floating rumors of a state income tax five or six years ago, I thought he was nuts," Gaines said. "Now, I think we have to do something like that."

The major sticking point for low-wealth districts is that the Supreme Court's 5-4 decision Monday overturned a lower court's ruling that would have required the Legislature to come up with an equitable facilities plan.

Building funds are a key issue for poor districts such as Edgewood, said school board president John Noriega. The court's ruling means they'll have to find another solution.

"Edgewood High School had been without heat for 30 years" before small, sometimes ineffective window units were purchased, Noriega said. He said schools have leaky roofs; air conditioners are outdated; and campuses are overcrowded.

Ray Fenley, interim superintendent of the Harlandale School District, said the ruling leaves his schools facing the same dilemma.

"Any building or any repair we do comes out of local funds or general operating funds," Fenley said. "That takes salary raises or teaching positions away." It also means schools do without computers and other needed technologies.

Added Noriega: "Inadequate facilities do affect the learning process. It's going to hurt us because we won't be able to do the things we need to do."

"The members of the Legislature historically have shown that they are not going to do anything unless they have a gun to their heads."

Noriega said the board would meet with the school district's attorney in the next week or two to determine their options.

The battle over school funding in Texas dates back 26 years when Edgewood parents filed a class-action lawsuit in federal court claiming the public school funding system was unconstitutional.

The case has since wound its way through the state's legal system, resulting in various funding plans that have been found constitutional and unconstitutional at different times.

The latest court decision was as hard to swallow as previous rulings for Charles Slater, superintendent of the property-rich Alamo Heights School District.

"The state continues to have an extreme over-reliance on property taxes," Slater said. "The state has not paid its share. I am hopeful the new governor will make this a priority."

Alamo Heights forked over $3.5 million of its money to nine districts this year, and they estimate that figure will jump to $5 million next year about 25 percent of their property tax money.

They face continued budget cuts and frozen teacher salaries that would be unnecessary without SB 7, he said.

The school board and a special legislative committee made up of residents will examine the district's options.

San Antonio School District trustee Tom Lopez said a state income tax probably would be an unfair burden. Nevertheless, he thinks state lawmakers should have been forced to readdress the issue.

"The Legislature definitely should have had another view of the whole process of how schools are supported and financed by tax efforts," Lopez said. "There is no alternative but to revamp the process, and the Legislature will have to be the catalyst in doing that."

He said schools should not go back through the courts to seek changes.

"A lawsuit would only be detrimental at this point and cause us to be more divisive, and we ought not to be," Lopez said. "We need to work through the Legislature and have change come through that avenue."

Victorian Luncheons canceled for this year

The Victorian Luncheons traditionally held at the E.B. Black House in April have been canceled for this year. Carmen Flood, spokesperson for the board of directors of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society reported the board's decision.

Flood said, "We have been most gratified by your support over the years. This year, however, we will be unable to extend this amenity due to illness on the part of some of our board members and staff."

The luncheons were offered to the community in order to provide a taste of gracious entertaining from the past and display the historic home and gardens, she observed.

The Historical Society will sponsor an open house on April 24 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. with coffee and donuts. The spring bulbs will be in bloom at this time and members will be there for tours and to share information about the gardens and plants.

"Bring a camera and your lunch if you like and allow time to soak up all the beauty," Flood said.

Phipps is appointed head of WorkSmart program

Gary Phipps was recently appointed to head WorkSmart, the occupational and industrial medicine service at Hereford Regional Medical Center, according to Jim Robinson, HRMC administrator.

Phipps, a certified Emergency Medical Technician, has lived in Hereford for several years. He received his EMT training through classes held in Hereford, under the direction of Amarillo College. He has worked part time for Hereford EMS for several years. He also trained as a mortician and funeral director, and has worked for Sanders Funeral Home in Lubbock, Smith and Company Funeral Home and Rix Funeral Home in Hereford.

"Gary understands the goals of the WorkSmart service, and is committed to increasing the awareness of this service in the community," Robinson said. "We're delighted to have someone who understands our community so well working in this capacity."

Phipps said he is committed to letting every business in Hereford know the many services WorkSmart has available. "We already serve about 60 businesses in some form or fashion with the WorkSmart program," he said. "I have been out in the community visiting with these businesses to evaluate their individual health and safety needs and find ways WorkSmart can further assist."

Phipps explained that WorkSmart provides wellness education, safety training, and health screening, including DOT physicals. "We have a new service which is a breath analyzer," he said. "This is valuable especially in the trucking industry. We just signed a contract with a Wichita, Kansas, firm to provide this service for their truckers who pass through Hereford."

Hospital services like WorkSmart are the wave of the future in health care, Robinson added. "As health care continues to change, we feel that HRMC is in the right position with WorkSmart to fill our goals as a hospital."

Youth worship scheduled today

The San Jose Church TYM group will host Charice Nesbitt at its Youth Worship at 7 p.m. today in the church.

Nesbitt, who is involved with the Amarillo Area Crisis Pregnancy Center and is director of abstinence programs, will talk on chastity and abstinence and the risks that premarital sex can bring.

The presentation is open to all local teens and young adults, and parents are also welcome.

The church is located at 735 Brevard.

Students will participate in jump rope for heart

Local students will be asking friends, family and neighbors to sponsor them in the Jump Rope for Heart on Feb. 11.

Northwest, West Central, Tierra Blanca, Shirley, Aikman and Bluebonnet students will jump rope from 10 a.m. till 12 p.m. at Hereford Junior High School.

The event is sponsored by the American Heart Association as part of the observance of February as American Heart Month. In 1963 Congress mandated that the President issue a proclamation annually designating February as American Heart Month.

The purpose is for American Heart Association volunteers across the country to visit their neighbors and provide educational information about cardiovascular disease and stroke, as well as solicit funds to help support the AHA's ongoing research and education initiatives.

AHA-funded research has resulted in medical discoveries like linking dietary fat with cholesterol, long-term successful mitral valve replacement surgery, proof that high blood pressure can decrease life expectancy and use of medication to lower cholesterol in the blood.

The AHA spent more than $226 million during fiscal year 1992-93 for research support, public and professional education and community programs. They are the largest voluntary health organization fighting heart disease and stroke.

Flame Fellowship meets Thursday

The Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

The guest speaker will be Noreen Carson of Sweetwater.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have been wanting to ask you if you would repeat the recipe for your Chinese Beets. — H.C. Wichman, Houston, Texas

Sure! I don't often print recipes, but so many readers request it, I'd be happy to. Here's the list of ingredients you'll need.

6 cups cooked, sliced beets or 3 (16-ounce) cans sliced beets
1 cup sugar
1 cup vinegar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
24 whole cloves
3 tablespoons ketchup
3 tablespoons cooking oil (optional)
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash of salt

Drain all the liquid off the beets except 1 1/2 cups. Pour the liquid in a medium saucepan, add all the ingredients except the beets, and mix well.

Add the beets and cook over medium heat for 3 minutes or until it thickens. Allow it to cool, then store in the fridge.

CLEAN RACKS
Dear Heloise: A good way to clean oven racks is to take them out and put them in a kitchen garbage bag and pour in about 1/2 cup of household ammonia. Put a twist-tie on and let it stand over night. The next day it washes right off. — Ilene Baldwin, Kirksville, Mo.

Yes, it's a great hint. For stubborn stains, scrub with some steel wool, then rinse well or take them outside and use the garden hose. — Heloise

Whitefaces rout Demons, 68-46

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor
The Hereford Whitefaces outscored Dumas 53-19 in the second and third quarters combined, then cruised on to a 68-46 win Tuesday in Whiteface Gym.

The win let Hereford stay in second place in District 1-4A with a 6-2 record, 17-8 overall. Pampa defeated Canyon 90-81 Tuesday in Pampa leaving Pampa in first at 7-1 and dropping Canyon to third at 5-3.

In the first game of Tuesday's doubleheader, a Lady Whitefaces comeback fell short, and Dumas won 46-41.

The boys' game was close for about nine minutes, until consecutive 3-pointers by Michael Brown launched the rout. Dumas actually led 13-10 after one quarter, but Hereford pulled off a 20-1 run to start the second. Hereford led 36-21 at halftime.

"We put a more defensive-minded team on the floor," coach Randy Dean said of the second quarter burst. "The press really started taking effect."

The press was so effective, the Demons failed to get the ball over halfcourt on five straight possessions, leading directly to the last 10 points of that 20-1 run.

"Pressure has bothered Dumas all year long," Dean said. "In the first quarter, we didn't really get up and challenge them."

Isaac Walker scored 18 of the Herd's 36 points in the first half. He scored off offensive rebounds; he scored on layups created by the press; and he scored when he got the ball on the baseline against the Dumas zone.

"In the second quarter, we changed the offense," Dean said. "We put him running along the baseline, and he shoots that shot really well."

The scoring focus shifted to Brown in the third quarter, when Hereford outscored Dumas 27-11. Brown scored 13 points in the quarter, including three 3-pointers.

During one stretch late in the third, Brown hit two straight treys. After nailing the second one from the wing, he raced to the far corner to save a ball from going out of bounds, passing it straight to Walker for an easy layup.

Brown finished the game with 19 points (with five treys) and Walker led the team with 22 points. Both could have had more, but Dean used the opportunity to play some of his little-used players. Subs played the entire fourth quarter, to the delight of the crowd that nearly filled the home side of Whiteface Gym.

"We needed a game like this. We've had so many close ones," Dean said.

The girls' game was tied 8-8 at the end of the first quarter. Dumas' Meredith Stephenson, who led all scorers with 17 points, started the second quarter with a three-point play, and Dumas never trailed again.

Dumas led 25-20 at the half and 33-27 at the end of the third quarter.

Hereford coach Eddie Fortenberry tried to use a zone to stop the taller Demonettes from scoring inside, saying that's what hurt Hereford in its 51-40 loss in Dumas.

"We came out in a zone thinking they couldn't shoot from outside, but they did," Fortenberry said. "It's tough for us to play man-to-man when they're 6-foot-2 on one side (Jenny Robinson) and 6-0 (Stephenson) on the other side."

Bridgette Murphy was Dumas' main outside weapon, scoring 10 points—all from 15 feet and beyond.

The Demonettes scored the first four points of the fourth quarter and led 37-27 before Hereford started its comeback. Misti Davis hit a trey, then after a Dumas basket, Catie Betzen led a 6-0 Hereford run. She hit a couple of buckets off a rebound and a steal, then stole another ball to set Davis up for two free throws, cutting the lead to 39-36.

"We started the full-court press, and their little guard couldn't see other us," Fortenberry said, referring to Amy McLain, who is shorter than five feet tall. "We hit a couple of threes, and that had a way of getting the crowd back into it."

After another Dumas basket, Davis hit another trey to make it 41-39, but Hereford didn't get any closer. A Mindi Davis shot made it 43-41 with 2:48 left, but Hereford just couldn't get it tied despite several defensive stops.

"We had two (shots) that just rolled in and out," Fortenberry said. "We had some great shots at point blank range that didn't go in. That's happened so many times to us this year."

Dumas' Rachel Artho hit 3-of-4 free throws in the final minute to keep

Shot-blocker

Hereford's Jason Eades (50) goes up to try to block a shot by a Dumas player during the Herd's 68-46 rout of the Demons Tuesday in Whiteface Gym. Helping defend on the play is Keith Barrett (12) as Terance High (52) looks on.

Swarming defense

A trio of Lady Whitefaces--Julie Rampley (30), Tarabeth Holmes (center) and Misti Davis (32)--prevent a Demonette from passing the ball. Dumas won, 46-41, Tuesday in Whiteface Gym.

The Chicago Bears set on NFL team record for quarterback sacks with 172 in 1984.

Broncs hire Shanahan

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) - Mike Shanahan, architect of the offense that carried the San Francisco 49ers to victory in the Super Bowl, was hired Tuesday night as coach of the Denver Broncos.

Shanahan, who emerged as the hottest coaching prospect in the league during the 49ers' Super Bowl drive, arrived in Denver by private jet late Tuesday afternoon and was promptly whisked to Broncos headquarters. He spent three hours talking with team owner Pat Bowlen, during which an agreement was reached.

Broncos spokesman Jim Saccomano said a press conference was scheduled "within the hour" to make the official announcement and introduce Shanahan to the media.

Spurs wrap up good January

By The Associated Press
For the Charlotte Hornets and San Antonio Spurs, it was a month to remember. For the Golden State Warriors, it was one to forget.

A 97-88 victory over Washington on Tuesday night gave the Hornets an 11-4 record in January, the best month since the franchise started play in 1988. Their previous best was 10-4 last April. With a 97-96 win at Sacramento, the Spurs also finished the month 11-4.

In other games, it was Milwaukee 107, Dallas 105; Houston 86, Denver 74; and Chicago 119, the Los Angeles Lakers 115.

Aggies harvest top crop

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

Paint this year's recruiting picture maroon. Texas A&M maroon.

The Aggies got faxes today from more of the state's best players than any other school and may have the one of the nation's best recruiting classes.

Today is the first day high school students can sign letters of intent that make their nonbinding verbal pledges official.

In a year where no specific players stood out as class makers or breakers, the Aggies won the recruiting race with quantity.

The Aggies signed three quality quarterbacks today, including Shane Lechler of East Bernard, Randy McCown of Jacksonville and Kevin Colin of Deer Park. Coach R.C. Slocum also signed Tennessee transfer Brannon Stewart of Stephenville, who along with Colin enrolled for the spring semester.

Blue chip wide receiver Matt Bumbardner of Luling also signed with A&M as did Class 2A player of the year Toya Jones of Refugio, a Parade magazine All-America who will likely play defensive back.

The Aggies were expected to sign another highly touted running back in D'Andre Hardeman of Galena Park North Shore, another Parade magazine All-America pick.

"I saw the guys that they were getting and I wanted to come," said Rex Tucker, an offensive lineman from Midland Lee, who was a late commitment to A&M. "These guys are going to be great."

Hardeman, who gained 1,700 yards and led North Shore to the playoffs for the first time in school history, could be the heir to Leeland McElroy in A&M's always-stocked backfield.

Stewart's transfer, which will force him to sit out the 1995 season, didn't cause any of the other quarterbacks to waver and it even helped sway former Stephenville teammate Jason Bragg to A&M.

Bragg can play running back, wide receiver or defensive back and is the prototypical special-teams player. He could play in the defensive backfield with Refugio's Jones, who also is a top track star.

Other SWC schools look to have hauls dotted with talent, with Cotton Bowl blowout victim Texas Tech probably getting the best of the rest. Two of their biggest signers, in every sense, will be offensive linemen Curtis Lowery of Stephenville and Micky Anderson of Abilene Cooper.

Baylor did well in the early signings when it landed quarterback Jermaine Alfred of Baytown Lee.

Sign on the dotted line

Brown signs with ENMU

Hereford's Michael Brown signed a national letter of intent today to play football at Eastern New Mexico University.

"Their offense is based around the option," said Brown, who played quarterback for Hereford last season. "That made me feel at home, because that was what we ran all year."

"The coach said I could play quarterback, and if things didn't work out at quarterback I could play receiver or defensive back."

Brown was the Herd's starting safety as a junior, and he also played some wingback that season.

Other factors in choosing ENMU, Brown said, was that he enjoyed his visit to the campus in Portales, N.M. and that his mother, Rose, went there. His parents, Rose and Lester, attended the morning signing ceremony, as did ENMU defensive coordinator Glenn Johnson.

As a quarterback, Brown is a threat passing and running. During the 1994 season, he threw for 1,049 yards and nine touchdowns and rushed for 834 yards and seven TDs. He was named the first-team all-district quarterback in District 1-4A.

Today was the first day for high school players to sign the binding letters of intent. ENMU was also set to sign two top running backs from the area: Randall's D'mitri McFarland, who ran for more than 1,600 yards in 1994, and Amarillo High's T.J. Jones, who topped 1,000 yards.

ENMU competes in the NCAA's Division II and is a member of the Lone Star Conference.

Weekend retreat to help widowed and divorced

The "Beginning Experience", a weekend retreat for separated, widowed or divorced individuals, is scheduled for Feb. 3-5 at the DeFalco Retreat Center in Amarillo. "Beginning Experience" is non-denominational in its ministry.

The purpose of the weekend is to help widowed, divorced or separated people to start over, to help wounds to heal and make a new beginning in life. It is planned to emphasize self discovery and to help people come to terms with their loss.

A specially trained team of peers lead the participants through a simple program of presentation, private reflection and group dialogue. The weekend is structured in such a way that if a person likes to talk and can discuss things freely with others, they may do so. However, if a person prefers to be quiet, no one will intrude on their privacy.

The program begins on Feb. 3 at 8 p.m. It closes around 4 p.m. on Feb. 5.

To register or for additional information, contact Carla in Lubbock at (806)792-3918 or Ginny in Amarillo at (806)359-8314.

Spring season program set for Amarillo opera

The Amarillo Opera has planned a two-part series for Feb. 3 and 4 based on the drama of Negro spirituals and traditional opera.

The opera's spring season production, "La Traviata", will be performed April 1 at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium. Area Amarillo Opera coordinators Nancy and Bob Josseland made the announcements today.

Dr. Bernardine Oliphant, performer of both spirituals and opera and the voice/opera teacher at Texas Southern University, will lecture on Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Sam Houston Middle School in Amarillo.

Tenor G. Carlton Hines will appear in concert the following night at Sam Houston Middle School. He will sing both spirituals and opera.

The major Amarillo Opera production of "La Traviata" will feature soprano Diana Syrcle of Dallas (former student at Amarillo College and WTAMU), tenor Joseph Evans and guest conductor David Stockton of Boston. Local singers will also appear in the production and have already begun rehearsals.

Spokespersons for BRAVO!, the Amarillo Opera support group, say that the mission of the opera is "to provide live, community-based opera to the Texas Panhandle, to encourage and nurture local talent and to provide opera education to all the citizens of the Panhandle."

"Canyon City, Texas" is a photography exhibit recently opened at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum. The exhibit, located in the Alexander Gallery on the first floor, visually portrays life in Canyon in the early part of this century.

Founded in 1889 by L.G. Conner and his wife, Victoria Conner, the town of Canyon was originally known as Canyon City. By 1910, Canyon City had developed into a prosperous town, with railroad lines to the north, south and southwest. The county seat for Randall County, it was also home to the newly established West Texas State Normal College.

The black and white photographs include city buildings, railroad construction, residential buildings, area farms and scenes from Palo Duro Canyon when it was proposed as a national park. The photographs are from the L.G. Conner Collection, which is part of the vast holdings of the Museum's Research Center.

The Research Center collects, preserves and provides access to the documentary heritage of the Texas Panhandle through collections of photographs, manuscripts, maps and books. The Center is open to the public Monday-Friday 9-12 a.m. and 1-5 p.m.

STIRLING TRENT

Performer is grandson of local couple

Stirling Trent, of Colleyville, was the Grand Prize winner of the Amarillo Symphony Guild's recent Young Performer's Competition.

He is the grandson of Mrs. L.W. (Pete) Denton, of Hereford, and the son of Jana Denton and Stan Trent of Colleyville.

Trent, a 12-year-old violinist, competed with 36 other musicians, mostly high school students. The judges awarded cash prizes for voice, winds and percussion, piano, and strings.

As the overall Grand Prize winner, Trent will have the additional honor of being featured soloist with the Randel Chamber Orchestra at their March 3 concert in Amarillo, performing "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso" by Saint-Saens.

Trent is the student of Jan Mark Sloman, associate concertmaster of the Dallas Symphony and concertmaster of the Dallas Pops.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) - Is Elisabeth Kubler-Ross deconstructing her life's work on death? Or is she just in denial?

The doctor became a pioneer 25 years ago with the publication of "Death and Dying: What the Dying Have to Teach Doctors, Nurses, Clergy and Their Own Families," which focused on the needs of the terminally ill.

Readers may get a jolt from her latest book, "On Life After Death," in which she says death does not exist.

Kubler-Ross devised the now-famous stages of dying: denial, anger, bargaining, depression and acceptance.

But she said in an interview in Sunday's New York Times Magazine that, even as she was molding attitudes towards death, her own thinking quietly evolved as she heard the life after death experiences of her patients.

She was afraid then to write about her mysticism. And though she hasn't published much on the subject, she has lectured to thousands.

"Everyone knows what I believe," says Kubler-Ross, 68.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's a new one for you. First, let me say I am divorced and the father of three wonderful children. I love them very much, and I try to spend as much time with them as possible. At present, I am with them about three days a week.

Recently, my ex-wife asked that my present wife, "Babette," watch the children every day after school while she works. This means until 6:30 in the evening. It seemed like a great idea to me since the children get along very well with Babette, and our home is a pleasant and familiar place to them.

The problem is that Babette believes that she should be paid the same as any other child-care provider, since she is performing a service for which my former wife has paid others in the past.

My former wife feels that Babette is obligated to watch the children for free since they are, after all, my children and she is now my wife.

Babette says it's not so much the money but the idea that my ex-wife is just trying to take advantage of her.

I love my children and am in the middle of a battle between these two women who are not crazy about each other to begin with. Do you have a solution?--Between a Rock and a Boulder in Colorado

DEAR ROCK OR BOULDER, whichever seems more comfortable: I can understand Babette's resentment because she feels your ex-wife is taking advantage of her. However, in my opinion, she should be willing to take care of the children without being paid. After all, they are your kids, and she is their stepmother, not just a person sent by an employment agency.

I suspect this may be Babette's way of sticking it to your first wife. Not only is her behavior ungenerous, but if she loves you, such mean-spiritedness will not do much to enhance the relationship. Is there an unbiased third party who can talk to Babette?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I had never heard of rubbing an onion on a mosquito bite to take the itch out until I read it in your column. I have had some experience, however, with other treatments that have been highly effective. Perhaps you would like to share them with your readers.

Meat tenderizer works if you moisten the welt and rub the tenderizer in firmly and let it dry. Ordinary table salt will work the same way, although it is not quite as effective. The styptic pencil used to stop bleeding from small shaving nicks is the best of all. Of course, when you bathe, you will have to repeat the treatment. And, incidentally, this treatment works for flea bites as well as mosquito bites.

I hope that you will print my letter and that some of your readers will find my suggestions helpful.--Jasper in Denver.

DEAR JASPER: Thank you and hundreds of others who wrote to share their home remedies to stop the itching caused by mosquito bites.

The most unusual suggestion came from a reader in Grand Island, Neb., who wrote: "A drop of hot candle wax will stop the itching, but it will cause a small blister that is less annoying than the itching." I do NOT recommend this.

Gem of the Day (Credit Johnny Carson, who is still missed by millions): If it weren't for Philo T. Farnsworth, inventor of television, we would still be eating frozen radio dinners.

An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love: "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. Armani fashions make way to theater stage

By KARIN DAVIES
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP)—Some fashion designers turn their catwalk parades into theater with splashy costumes rather than clothes—but never Giorgio Armani, whose shows reflect his classy and subtle designs.

So Armani was an ironic choice to design costumes for Jonathan Miller's production of Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" at London's Royal Opera House.

Normally, grand opera is synonymous with lavish, brocaded-and heavy—costumes.

But for his fifth rendition of "Cosi Fan Tutte," which opened Jan. 18, Miller decided to abandon the traditional 18th century look and opt for modern understatement.

"I truly think the lack of 'theatricality' of my fashions was the special touch that made the staging of this opera so unusual, realistic and modern," Armani wrote in response to questions submitted by The Associated Press.

"It seems that inside my clothes the singers felt free, lissome, unhindered by weighty costumes and comfortable. Even their behavior favorably influenced the critics."

Inspired by Armani's clean designs, Miller said his first inclination was to buy them off the peg at Emporio Armani, the designer's ready-to-wear collection, around the corner from the Royal Opera House.

"I want the look to be abstract and modern and those clothes are discreet, tasteful and contemporary without emphasizing the modernity," Miller said.

Miller set the opera on the barest of sets, bringing it up to date with the introduction of a TV camera crew, mobile phones and electronic medical equipment.

Armani dressed the singers in designs from his spring-summer 1995 collections. The fluid designs meshed perfectly with Miller's no-nonsense set.

"Cosi Fan Tutte," or "Women Are Like That," is the story of two sisters whose boyfriends disguise themselves and swap places in order to test the women's fidelity.

Amanda Roccoft and Susan Graham wore a succession of elegant trouser suits from Armani's ready-to-wear collection for most of the opera, changing to the Italian designer's lustrous beaded wedding dresses and glittering diaphanous veils for their marriages.

"I can easily imagine wearing them in everyday life," Roccoft said of the pastel trouser suits. "Being on stage in these clothes feels more like a rehearsal than an actual performance."

Their lovers, played by Simon Keenlyside and Bruce Ford, wore Armani's softly tailored suits, except when they pretended to go off to battle. Then, they donned military uniforms and U.N. blue berets.

The Daily Telegraph's Geoffrey Norris said Armani "had dressed this production and he has done it beautifully, tastefully, smartly, wittily, but in his own unmistakable buff, grays and muted, pale colors, with lines that flow, fit and drift."

But The Times' Rodney Milnes found the modern costumes at odds with the women's archaic behavior.

"... to imagine that these smart sophisticates in their Armani frocks would strike the attitudes demanded by the plot of the opera requires suspension of disbelief on an epic scale," Milnes wrote.

Fashion and art are being united more often these days.

Gianni Versace provided the wardrobe for a production of Richard Strauss's "Capriccio" in 1991; Jasper Conran designed splendid hats for "My Fair Lady" in 1992; the husband-and-wife team of Missoni dressed the cast for Donizetti's

"Lucia Di Lammermoor" in 1982. Long before, Coco Chanel collaborated with Cocteau and Dali in the 1930s.

Armani's previous opera experience was limited to a small La Scala production of Schoenberg's "Erwartung" in 1980.

"I love my work, I love opera, the theater and the cinema. Therefore, it's relatively easy for me to be enthusiastic about this type of project, as long as it doesn't become a job!" Armani wrote. "I hope other wonderful occasions such as this one will come about. If so, I'd gladly accept."

Sarah Dallas, a course leader at the Royal College of Arts, said she expected more collaborations in future.

"I think designers as a whole are being recognized as more intelligent creatures than they were before," Dallas said. "Producers and directors are realizing that and enabling them to do more."

Producer Miller believes the Armani look worked—despite a few boos that mingled with cheers and applause at the final curtain of opening night.

"You have to remember this is a largely Jurassic audience here. They're used to 18th century frills and furbelows," he said.

Latest spring fashions from Italy feature daring numbers that (almost) bare all

By DANIELA PETROFF
AP Fashion Writer

ROME (AP)—Rather than what do I wear, the big question for fashionable dressing this summer is, do I dare?

The Italian spring-summer 1995 is an ode to sexy dressing from the corsets and bra tops to the little slip dresses and sheer fabric hot pants.

In short, the designers have turned underwear into outerwear.

Quite often fashion is a reflection of the world it lives in, turning light when things get heavy.

For the past three years Italy has been suffering the aftershocks of a corruption scandal which has turned the political leadership inside out and crippled the economy.

"There's a lot of crisis out there, and we're lifting spirits," said Stefano Gabbano, who with his partner Domenico Dolce are pioneers of the sexy runway.

However, spirits is not all some women will have to lift to do justice to the bosom-bursting styles. Breasts are the center of attraction in the Moda Milanese summer styles, from the high-waisted empire style baby doll dresses to plunging necklines and sheer tops and blouses.

Moreover, as high as your spirits might be, you can't float into an office in nothing but a bra and panties. Nor can you shop at the supermarket in a negligee.

When emphasis is not on the breasts, the accent moves to other curves. Stretch fabric in shiny plastic and even rubber leave little to the imagination in the many hip- and rump-hugging styles. Waistlines usually slither down to the navel.

The veiled effect is another sexy proposal, with sheer silk gauze fabric used for everything from tunic tops over bathing suits, to leg-revealing trousers, to jackets, worn-of course-with nothing underneath.

Colors for the spring and summer of 1995 range from quiet tones of beige and rainbow pastels, to bright shades of lime green, sunflower yellow and shocking pink.

In contrast to the racy styles, designers go out of their way to ooze innocence in pretty nature prints. Stencil prints stolen from a child's coloring book are another demure diversion.

The hottest summer make-up news is the return of ruby red lips and heavy eye make-up. Stiletto heels are also back. Jewelry, except for large drop earrings, is much too dressy for the bare minimum look.

Given the raunchy climate, those who cannot afford to spend the summer between the bedroom and the beach and who do not want to make a radical career switch to the world's oldest profession, must pick and choose carefully among the designers to make up a wardrobe which is both sexy and sensible.

For office dressing the best place to shop is at Genny's. Here the daytime suits with small jacket and knee-length skirt in fruit and flower shades are very presentable, and the slip dress, focal point of 1995 summer fashion, is veiled under a gauzy silk T-shirt.

German designer Jil Sander, who shows in Milan, has the most chastely seductive evening wear in pant suits and tunic dresses fashioned out of futuristic metallic chiffon.

Gianni Versace goes all out for the sexy baby doll look in his second-line Istante collection. But the label collection offers the most stylish summer suit in navy blue with a gold-buttoned military jacket and discreet knee-length skirt. His laced corset for day and night is superb.

When it comes to jackets, there's never a better place to look than Giorgio Armani. This season's is so soft it is more of a cardigan than a jacket.

The surprise at Armani's comes in the series of boudoir items he offers for this summer. The staid designer is into bras, hot pants, and high heels! But alla Armani his outfits feel most at home in the luxury lingerie department.

The correct address for red light garb is Dolce and Gabbana, who have all the hot items, from bustier dresses, to stretch fabric hot pants and baby doll slip dresses. They also offer a seductive power suit, with long pin-striped jacket and matching cuffed hot pants.

For those in a vacationing mood, the best place to look is Fendi for bathing suits and Gucci for yachting styles, including the revival of Capri pants, made famous by the late Jacqueline Kennedy in the 1960s.

In the demure department, Byblos with his rose-pink ball gowns and Laura Biagiotti with her white cashmere bambola dresses have the best offers.

The most daring jacket of the season is see-through and found at Ferre, who also stretches rubber fabric across every curve of the female body.

But there is a sure seduction stopper for those who opt not to bare: the black linen suit with long jacket and skirt, by Prada, so drab it would take the likes of Demi Moore to make it sexy.

Accessories used to create individual look

By The Associated Press

It's not what you wear but what you wear with it that gives your outfit its individual look.

Handbags

Bags that don't overwhelm the wearer are included in the soft nubuck Sonoma collection from Coach. An elegant but unassuming classic shoulder flap bag, a bucket zip, a drawstring and a backpack come in weather-resistant leathers which drape like fabric and are dyed in muted tawny colors called bramble, sage, sand, chamois and spruce.

Also hardy and classic are the waterproof Cedar collection bags from Timberland. The nubuck bags, many trimmed with contrasting smooth leather, feature backpack, drawstring and shoulder bag designs. Colors are muted: tan, chestnut, black, sand and antique loden.

Shoes

People who need shoes that are comfortable but dressy enough for most workplaces might choose skimmer flats in various designs and colors from Dexter. Both Meredith and Chris designs feature decorative topstitching; the latter also has leather weave. Dexter also has plenty of sandals for summer wear, including its versions of cross- and buckle-strap classics.

The evolution of the sandal has taken it into the realm of the athletic shoe. Flojos come in both closed and open-toe designs and feature heavy lugged rubber treads.

Eyewear

Almost 150 million American adults wear prescription eyewear, and of these, 81 percent wear glasses, according to the Vision Council of America.

Even with the ophthalmologist's prescription in hand, choosing eyeglasses can be a bewildering experience, especially since you'll expect to wear them every day. Dealers participating in VICA's "Envision Yourself" program can help you pick the right ones by analyzing facial shape, skin tone, hair color and lifestyle.

Nikon, best known for cameras and other optics, recently introduced a line of eyewear. Most of the frames are metal, in trendy and classic designs, and feature the company's borosilicate glass lenses—clear, tinted, and polarized for sun and sport.

For information about VICA's "Envision Yourself" program, call 1 (800) 424-VICA.

Designers blur boundaries between casual, dress attire

By The Associated Press

The line between casual and dress clothing becomes ever more indistinct, with makers usually associated with roughwear offering pieces that can pass muster as business wear and fashion lines drawing more from the sport-casual world.

Would you buy a linen-cotton blazer from Timberland, the people famous for their heavy roughwear boots? You might, for the company has a simple basic boxy jacket for women with a convertible collar, patch pockets and bound seams that works well over a summer dress or with separates. The line even includes a few of the summer dresses in question, such as a short A-line skimmer in a linen-cotton batik print. There also are dozens of shirt blouses, sweaters, T-tops and vests more likely to be found in school-room or office than on the trails.

Likewise, Sasson, known for its jeans, is marketing pretty dresses and jumpers, like a floral-print jumper-dress with tiers of ruffles. The line also includes a blue-and-white checked dress trimmed in white cyclet and a denim apron dress. Big little items on the agenda at Sasson are what it calls Tiny Tees, a collection of short-sleeved rib-knit T-shirts meant to be worn close to the body. Lengths are long or cropped, and the shirts are destined for pairing with overalls, jumpers or as layers over other pieces.

Coming from the other direction is Liz for Liz Claiborne, offering a knit pin-stripe vest and super-short wrap shirt in tiny checks, an outfit that would look quite at home on the tennis courts. The Liz Collection also has plenty of pantsuit separates, too, like the three-button jacket, matching double-breasted vest and cuffed, pleated pants, all in apricot chambray linen.

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams & Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Insurance Commissioner Rebecca Lightsey resigned Jan. 27, making way for former state Rep. Elton Bomer, who is Gov. George W. Bush's nominee for the post.

The day before her resignation, Lightsey postponed a hearing on auto insurance rates that she had scheduled against the wishes of Bush. Earlier this month, however — in defiance of Bush — Lightsey adopted rules that end "red-lining," a practice in which insurers discriminate against consumers based on where they live.

Bomer, a Montalba Democrat, once he is confirmed by the state Senate, will be responsible for balancing the interests of insurers and consumers in revising the benchmark rate for auto insurance.

A judicial panel has recommended that the benchmark be jacked up from 5 to 9.75 percent. Insurance companies base their individual rates from 30 percent below to 30 percent above the benchmark.

Meanwhile, Bomer said he wants to beef up fraud-fighting efforts in the Texas Department of Insurance. "Fraud is very definitely a major problem," Bomer told a Senate Finance Subcommittee.

Bomer also said he plans to meet Feb. 8 with a Travis County grand jury that accused the department of failing to investigate fraud and cited "undue influence from the insurance industry," in a letter to Bush.

TexPool: Live or Die?

Texas Treasurer Martha Whitehead says she will oppose legislative efforts to kill the state's Tex-Pool investment fund.

In December, depositors who likened TexPool to the bankrupt investment fund of Orange County, Calif., withdrew $2.3 billion from the $3.7 billion fund.

State Rep. Bill Siebert, R-San Antonio, said he is considering a bill that would shut down TexPool and privatize it.

Whitehead, who campaigned to abolish the Treasury and cede its functions to the comptroller's office, said TexPool should remain state-run, and pointed out that the fund has grown back to $2 billion since the December run by depositors.

Since December, however, competing private funds run by former state Treasury officials have swelled.

No More Laptop Games

Texas House members are just as likely as anyone else to suffer from human frailties.

And so, John Bender, House director of communications, ordered the Texas Legislative Council to remove all games from the laptop computers assigned to every state representative.

"It seemed somewhat of a distraction," Bender explained.

Speaker James E. "Pete" Laney told the Austin American-Statesman he never knew the games were loaded into his computer, and admitted that he hasn't yet learned to switch on the unit.

Bans on games in state computers already exist in Virginia, Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Ticket Scalping Targeted

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson has introduced a bill that would outlaw ticket scalping.

The measure would prohibit the resale of event tickets for a price higher than that offered to the general public by the event sponsor.

This is the sixth time such a bill has been filed. A similar bill passed the Senate two years ago but died in the House.

Other Highlights

Gov. Bush tentatively is scheduled to deliver his first State of the State address to a joint session of the Texas House and Senate on Feb. 7.

The Texas Senate has confirmed Gov. Bush's choice for chairman of the State Board of Education, Houston chiropractor Jack Christie.

The Texas Trial Lawyers Association is supporting legislation by Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, to toughen the penalties for filing frivolous lawsuits. And prisoners who file frivolous lawsuits could lose their good conduct time under a separate proposal by Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston.

While discussing his support for legislation allowing Texans to carry concealed handguns, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said, "I have no reason to believe that my fellow Texans are cave men and women who are going to go out and shoot everybody walking up and down the street."

Gov. Bush last week said he would support legislative efforts that would abolish most public funding of abortions and require mandatory notification of the parents of minors seeking abortions. He also poo-pooed a bill sponsored by Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, that seeks to increase penalties for criminal trespassing at clinics where abortions are performed.

Nine Texans who earlier filed a successful challenge to the state's congressional districts have filed a similar suit in a Houston court against the Texas Legislature in efforts to prevent future elections under the current election plan for state legislators. Plaintiffs say the districts are "racially gerrymandered."

In 1856, Lafayette became the first American college to offer a course on Shakespeare taught by Francis A. March, holder of the country's first chair in English philology. Today, Lafayette publishes Shakespeare Bulletin, a journal on performances of Shakespeare around the world.

Senator Teel Bivins Reports

AUSTIN — The Texas Senate recently passed a resolution letting the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service know that Texas adamantly opposes placing the shiner on the endangered species list. The 2-inch minnow is found in the Canadian River in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, and in the Cimarron River in Kansas and Oklahoma.

Rep. David Swinford of Dumas wanted to introduce a similar measure in the House. But because of the way the House operates, it doesn't get up and running as quickly as the Senate, so the House leadership told Swinford it was considering only memorial resolutions.

Swinford thought about it and asked, "What if we just go up there and kill one? Then we could do a memorial resolution, and I could still make my point."

He was kidding, of course, but we're all very serious about our opposition to naming the shiner an endangered species. We know the shiner is not in trouble, and we've seen what happens when the federal government comes in unreasonably applying the Endangered Species Act.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department — which knows a lot more about Texas species than any federal agency — has conducted multiple studies and found the shiner is not endangered or even threatened. Yet, the feds continue to claim the shiner must be protected.

The implications of designating any species as endangered are tremendous. Strict controls can be placed on land and water use.

I have a couple of letters sent by the Fish and Wildlife Service to land owners in Central Texas where a federally protected bird is known to nest. One letter warned a landowner that he could be committing a federal crime by clearing parts of his own land without a permit. The poor guy could go to jail just for cutting down a few trees on his property. That's scary.

In another case, a woman wanted to build a house on her property. The wildlife service told her that it needed to do a study first to determine whether the bird was using nearby vegetation during the breeding season. If construction would not interfere with the bird's activities, then she could build a house as long as the following conditions are met: (1) Vegetation clearing is limited only to the amount necessary for construction, (2) Landscaping is done with native vegetation, and (3) Construction activities occur between August 1 and March 1.

The Endangered Species Act was a good idea when it was passed back in the Nixon administration. But it's gotten out of hand. The federal bureaucrats that administer the law have broadened its application way beyond Congress' original intent. It unreasonably restricts what people can do with their own land. And this is happening across Texas and across America.

John Rogers with the Fish and Wildlife Service appeared before the Natural Resources Committee in Austin last year and pledged to try less burdensome measures like relocating species before going to the extreme and placing them on the endangered species list. The Parks and Wildlife Department was ready and willing to participate.

Unfortunately, nothing happened. The feds went ahead and proposed listing the shiner anyway.

The wildlife service recently held a meeting in Amarillo to hear what people thought about listing the shiner. Hundreds of people turned out to tell the service that Texas is capable of protecting its own natural resources and doesn't need the federal government's help.

My deep fear is the wildlife service didn't listen. Therefore, our best hope to avoid calamity is for the U.S. Congress to adopt legislation that places a moratorium on listing any species until the act is rewritten. Fortunately, Congressman Mac Thornberry serves on the committee responsible for this bill.

That which, perhaps, hears more silly remarks than anything else in the word, is a picture in a museum.

CAPITOL COMMENT

U.S. SENATOR

KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON

Providing Retirement Equity for All

Several innovative ideas aimed at providing Americans with better opportunities to save for their retirement are percolating through the 104th Congress.

But before such proposals are enacted, lawmakers first need to make a more basic change in the rules of the game: Provide retirement savings equity to those who work at home.

As the law stands now, non-wage-earning spouses — the majority of whom are women — are allowed to contribute only $250 annually to an Individual Retirement Account. Wage-earning spouses are allowed to set aside $2,000 annually exempt from income tax.

This means that the Smith couple, in which both partners work outside the home and earn a salary, is permitted to set aside $4,000 a year in an IRA and deduct the entire contribution from its taxable income.

But the Joneses, a single-income couple, can deduct only $2,250 to set aside for their retirement. In other words, the federal government punishes those who stay home to take care of their families when it comes to saving for retirement.

Last week I introduced a bill designed to redress this situation, which I consider to be a glaring inequity in our tax code — and one that, in practice, discriminates against women. The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that 23 percent of women over the age of 16 in this country are one-wage-earning spouses. So, while the existing law appears gender-neutral, referring only to "spouses," in reality it adversely affects almost a quarter of the adult women in our country.

My bill, which I am co-sponsoring with Sen. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, would allow homemakers to make contributions equal to that of their spouses to an IRA account.

This reform is critical to the long-term financial security of women. Women live longer than men and earn less money. They leave the workforce to bear children and care for their families. As a result, they begin saving for retirement later than men and save less.

It is unconscionable for our government to sustain a policy that puts so many women at an even greater disadvantage.

This will mean real help for families: Deducting the larger IRA contribution will make a substantial difference in the size of a couple's retirement savings. If a couple is able to contribute $4,000 a year over 30 years, and earns 6 percent on the investment, their nest egg would be $146,650 greater than what they would be able to accumulate under the current law.

Equality before the law is a standard in which this country takes great pride. The Homemaker IRA Bill would uphold that standard. There is no defensible reason why those who have chosen homemaking as their life's work should be left to an impoverished retirement.

And it is time for our government to acknowledge that work performed in the home is as important to American society as what goes on in the workplace — maybe more so.

PROCLAMATION

By Executive Order of the Honorable Tom Simons, County Judge of the County of Deaf Smith it is proclaimed:

WHEREAS, April 1995 marks the twenty-seventh anniversary of the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, which included Title VIII, the Fair Housing Law, for guaranteed equal housing opportunity for all citizens; and

WHEREAS, Fair housing is consistent with the principle of equality and justice for all, providing the challenge to combat discrimination, and to broaden the protection of the beliefs upon which our nation was founded; and

WHEREAS, This motion provides an opportunity for all Americans to rededicate themselves to the principles of free choice and to reacquire themselves with the rights and responsibilities that are theirs under the Fair Housing Law.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Tom Simons, County Judge of the County of Deaf Smith, do hereby proclaim February 1995 as: in the County of Deaf Smith, and urge my fellow citizens to join me in reaffirming the obligation and commitment to fair housing opportunities for all people.

Let all within the reach of this proclamation heed its directive. By his Honor the Judge of the County of Deaf Smith, Texas

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, You who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my idea. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Amen, Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. (Grace obtained).
