Senate bill favors TV, cable, phone business

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)--The Senate's rewrite of 61-year-old rules governing the telecommunications business yields some undisputed winners: the Bell companies, the giant cable companies and the broadcast networks. And there are some big losers: the long-distance companies and the network affiliates.

But for others, especially consumers, the picture is not so clear. Consumer advocates and other opponents of the legislation, which the Senate approved 81-18 on Thursday, say it surely would increase telephone and cable rates.

The House has yet to vote on its own telecommunications reform bill, which, as currently written, is even more deregulatory than the Senate measure. And the White House opposes much of the legislation, although it has not made any veto threats.

"Congress has reached very deeply into consumers' pockets to enrich the biggest companies in the world," said Bradley Stillman, the Consumer Federation of America's legislative counsel. "In the name of deregulation, all consumers will get are higher cable and telephone bills every month without any real competition for some years."

The bill's author, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., says consumers are the biggest winners. Competition unleashed by the bill in the local, long-distance and cable businesses will drive down prices, he says.

"There's all sorts of safeguards," Pressler said. "Prices will drop."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the bill could be "the real job stimulus package of this decade" and create employment for hundreds of thousands.

Others see the potential for job losses and an environment in which small companies and entrepreneurs will find it hard to survive.

"The big companies will get bigger and the little companies are going to shrivel up, sell out or join forces with larger companies in a desperate effort to survive," predicts Gene Kimmelman, co-director of the Consumer Union's Washington office.

Depending on the lens through which the bill is viewed, computer users can be considered both winners and losers.

The bill would ban, among other things, indecent communications on computer services. People who originate such messages could be imprisoned for up to two years and fined as much as $100,000.

But the Clinton administration and civil liberties proponents say the measure would be difficult to enforce and violates First Amendment rights.

For the Bell companies, the Senate bill is a bonanza. It would give them access to the $68 billion-a-year long-distance business, the $22 billion-a-year cable business and the profitable business of making telecommunications equipment.

One of the Bell companies' biggest victories was the defeat of a provision that would have required them to obtain approval of both the Justice Department and the Federal Communications Commission to get into the long-distance business.

Summer-long House war looms on abortion rights

WASHINGTON (AP)--House Republicans who oppose abortion have started what they promise will be a summer-long war on abortion rights.

On Thursday, the House voted to reinstate a ban on abortions at overseas military hospitals. President Clinton lifted the ban in an executive order days after taking office in 1993.

A House Judiciary subcommittee began debating a new Republican bill Thursday that would make it a crime for doctors to perform procedures referred to in the legislation as "partial-birth abortions."

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Charles Canady, R-Fla., has 29 co-sponsors, and will be introduced in the Senate by Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H.

During the hearing, one doctor told the panel he had never heard of a "partial-birth abortion" in 40 years of practice.

"That, I suspect, is because the name did not exist until someone who wanted to ban an abortion procedure made up this erroneous, inflammatory term," said Dr. J. Courtland Robinson, an associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Johns Hopkins University Hospital.

The legislation defines the procedure broadly without reference to the stage of pregnancy -- as "an abortion in which the person performing the abortion partially vaginally delivers a living fetus before killing the fetus and completing the procedure."

In a package of statements handed out by Canady's staff at the start of the hearing, Susan Muskett, a policy analyst with the Christian Coalition, said, "The enactment of a ban on partial-birth abortions is one of the legislative agenda items highlighted in the Christian Coalition's 'Contract With the American Family' and we will actively work towards its enactment."

Groups that support abortion rights claim Republicans know they can't get rid of such rights in the courts or even in a head-on challenge in Congress. So they're going about it through the back door--with anti-abortion measures attached to numerous bills.

"Basically they're going around the law. They're going around Roe (vs. Wade)," Jo Blum, political director for the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League, said of Canady's bill. "And it sends a chilling message to doctors who are going to be scared to do any procedures that might possibly be defined as partial-birth abortions."

Financial rescue package being forged by 7 richest democracies

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP)--Agreeing the United States shouldn't be the only one to chip in when other nations are going broke, leaders of the world's seven richest democracies are joining forces to cope with future Mexico-style financial crises.

Details of the multibillion-dollar rescue package were being announced today at the annual Group of Seven economic summit in this Canadian seaport, with attention also focused on the worsening situation in Bosnia and the U.S.-Japanese trade dispute.

President Clinton expressed confidence that the bail-out plan would not leave the United States as "the lender of last resort," but U.S. officials conceded they had no firm commitment on how much each of the seven countries would contribute.

Clinton succeeded, however, in getting a general agreement from summit partners Canada, Japan, France, Germany, Britain and Italy to double to $58 billion an existing line of credit run by the International Monetary Fund.

Germany and Britain--whose plan for selling IMF gold to pay for debt relief for the poorest countries ran into solid opposition here--have reservations about the bail-out plan.

The Clinton administration may also have a tough time getting the Republican-controlled Congress to support the idea.

The bail-out plan was part of a package of reforms of IMF operations which will strengthen the 51-year-old agency's ability to monitor ailing economies in the hope of averting the kind of financial meltdown that hit Mexico last December.

The first session of the three-day conference, Thursday night's dinner at Government House, ran late as the summit leaders made a new plea to the Muslim-led Bosnian government and rebel Serbs to call a halt in fighting and give international peace plans a new chance.

Despite Clinton's warning that he could not promise funds because of Republican objections in Congress, the other six leaders agreed to pony up their share of a $414 million bill to send a rapid reaction force to Bosnia to protect the beleaguered U.N. peacekeepers there.

Officials from Britain and France, which are supplying most of the 12,500-strong force, said they expected swift approval from the U.N. Security Council--which came early today at UN headquarters. They also said they did not know how the big hole in funding would be met because, normally, the United States pays one-third of peacekeeping costs. The Security Council, in approving the rapid reaction force, said funding will be decided later.

Britain's Prime Minister John Major was disappointed by the United States' position, a senior British official said Thursday, adding that Clinton's problems with Congress did not change the need for the new troops.

New rules make child-proof caps easier to remove

WASHINGTON (AP)--The government is sending relief for senior citizens and other grownups who struggle with caps that keep medicines and other hazardous substances locked safely away from children.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission voted unanimously Thursday to require that future child-resistant tops be made so that adults will have an easier, less frustrating time getting them off.

The change will be the first in child-resistant packaging in more than 20 years, said Ann Brown, chairman of the three-person commission. Regulators say the new caps will actually be safer for the children the hard-to-open models were designed to protect. It seems that many people who had trouble with the caps just left them off altogether--even with kids in the house.

"Today is a great day for America's children," she said.

$79.9 billion budget plan signed by Bush

AUSTIN (AP)--Gov. George W. Bush Thursday signed into law a $79.9 billion, no-new-taxes spending plan for government services in 1996-97.

"This budget says state government in Texas can live within its means," Bush said. "It has no new taxes in it and dedicates the lion's share of new revenues to the public schools."

"It addresses the Medicaid needs and makes sure that the juvenile justice system is adequately funded. It represents the priorities of Texas."

Bush said that despite his signature the measure isn't yet final. The governor said he still is considering several line-item appropriations that are subject to veto. He said a final version of the bill would be sent to the secretary of state's office Sunday.

Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo, and Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, the state's chief budget writers, joined Bush for a signing ceremony in San Angelo.

The spending plan reflects an increase of $4.7 billion, or 6.2 percent, over current spending.

Education receives the largest share of spending--41.9 percent, or $33.6 billion, according to an analysis by the Legislative Budget Board. That's a 7.3 percent increase over the current budget.

Spending on health and human services, totaling $26.4 billion, comes in second with 33 percent of the total. Spending in that area rises 10 percent from 1994-95.

Most other areas of the budget--including spending on the Legislature, regulatory agencies, the judiciary, natural resources and business and economic development--also showed increases. Spending on general government and public safety and criminal justice declined slightly.

As in 1993, the Legislature didn't need a tax increase to fund services.

The lack of tax hikes contrasts sharply with the ferocious wrangling required in legislative sessions going back a decade.

Former female Ranger claims 'double standard' in investigation

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP)--Former Texas Ranger Cheryl Steadman says an internal affairs investigation into her allegations of sexual harassment was "stunted" and "so biased that it is ridiculous."

She accused Department of Public Safety investigators Thursday of downplaying her complaints against the elite crime-fighting agency and declared:

"They've gone to great lengths to make me look bad and, to me, it looks like they're trying to cover it up more than ever."

"It's just that old double standard. If a man stands up for himself, he's strong. If a woman does it, she's a bitch. That's probably what kept me from saying something for almost a year."

Ms. Steadman, one of two history-making females to join the 103-member agency in 1993, resigned her Ranger commission last year in frustration and anger.

She accused the agency of harassment, discrimination and retaliation and was reassigned to a DPS job in Houston.

Responding for the first time in length to the investigative findings, Ms. Steadman, 34, said neither the DPS nor the Rangers provided her a copy of the 200-page report that was released June 3 in Austin.

She said she received a portion of the report through the mail from an anonymous DPS officer.

"I'm your friend but you don't really know me," she quoted him as saying in a letter.

"Whoever it is, he hates Cook," Ms. Steadman said, referring to Maurice Cook, the senior Ranger captain in Austin who is quoted liberally in the DPS Internal Affairs document.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the report and shared it with Ms. Steadman Thursday.

The report concluded that most of her complaints were "petty" but conceded that "some statements and incidents" involving Cook and other Ranger officers "could put an unfavorable light on this situation." Investigators accepted as accurate the sworn testimony provided by Cook and the ranking Ranger officers in Houston's headquarters company but added:

"Their admissions, while none of them perceive the actions as wrong, do give credence to some of Steadman's perceptions."

The report asserted that Ms. Steadman's 26-page sworn complaint is "full of inaccuracies, half-truths and information that is plainly not true," but hedged a bit.

"She believes it gives an accurate account of her time in the Ranger division," the investigators added.

Ms. Steadman took her case to DPS Director James Wilson last summer and subsequently filed a separate complaint with the Texas Commission on Human Rights.

"There is a big slant on all of it," she said of the internal affairs investigation. "It is amazing. They minimized everything I felt, which really was the point of the whole thing."

"That's what sexual harassment is about. How it affects someone else."

Her allegations stem in part from an overnight Ranger retreat in southeast Texas in March 1994.

She said the Rangers were drinking, gambling, using vulgar language and that her superiors told her to mix drinks, prepare food and even wash dishes.

The internal affairs report dismissed the gambling as a "quarter-ante...nickel-dime game" and concluded:

"While there was some drinking and some harsh language, there is no evidence to show any one was drunk or any one harassed Steadman. There is no evidence Steadman was treated inappropriately."

The report also noted that Ms. Steadman had raised issues about drinking on state time and the manner in which that time was shown on weekly reports.

"Those issues," the investigators said, "have already been addressed and action taken by Colonel Wilson."

UN council approves larger Bosnian force

UNITED NATIONS (AP)--Struggling to rebuild a mission near collapse, the Security Council voted Friday to enlarge its force in Bosnia to include up to 12,500 heavily armed troops.

The vote was 13-0 with Russia and China abstaining.

The midnight meeting of the council was called by France and came after repeated delays by the United States, which pays about a third of peacekeeping costs. The resolution states that funding for the mission will be decided later.

France and Britain, which have had peacekeepers held hostage by Bosnian Serbs, have been pushing aggressively for the creation of the new force to add muscle to the U.N. mission and give commanders more options in dealing with threatening situations.

"I think we all know that this is the last chance and we will continue to hope for the best," said Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey.

The resolution increases the size of the U.N. mission by 12,500 soldiers, who will be armed with artillery and mortars. However, the resolution does not specify the circumstances under which peacekeepers could use their heavy weapons.

There are some 22,000 peacekeepers already in Bosnia.

In explaining his country's abstention, Chinese Ambassador Qin Huasun said the force, once deployed, "is bound to become a part of the conflict, thereby depriving UNPROFOR (U.N. Protection Force) of its existence as a peacekeeping operation."

"This will severely damage the credibility of the Security Council."

The first six months of the deployment of the new forces are expected to cost up to $414 million, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said in a letter to the council.

On Thursday, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole wrote to President Clinton, saying that the mission should require "no additional U.S. financial or military obligations."

Bosnian Serbs took hundreds of peacekeepers hostage in retaliation for NATO airstrikes last month.

The resolution demands "that the Bosnian Serb forces release immediately and unconditionally all remaining detained UNPROFOR personnel."

The Bosnian Serbs continue to hold at least 26 of the peacekeepers they took hostage.

Therefore, they are not addressed in this report."

Ms. Steadman said Thursday that those actions by Director Wilson are "news to me."

Ms. Steadman denied suggestions that she lied or provided investigators half-truths and said the only inaccuracy was her allegation that Lt. Robert Madeira tore up her photograph in front of other officers.

Instead, it was Capt. W.D. Vickers, commander of the Ranger headquarters company in which she served.

"They told me Vickers took the picture off the wall and took it to Madeira and that he tore it up," Ms. Steadman said. "It didn't matter who did it. It was done ..."

In fact, Vickers later bragged about it.

"He said it was the only thing he'd done in six months that he felt good about," Ms. Steadman recalled with a wry smile.

The Department of Public Safety Commission, which oversees DPS and Ranger operations, has scheduled a hearing for July 11. DPS spokesman Mike Cox said Ms. Steadman was mailed a letter earlier Thursday inviting her to voice her grievances at the hearing.

"People do believe in me, but I feel so alone," she said. "It seems like such a no-win situation. If I back out, I lose. And if I go on, I still can lose."

Glove demonstration may backfire in trial

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (AP)--With jurors watching wide-eyed, O.J. Simpson struggled Thursday to shove his hands into the bloody leather gloves that prosecutors say implicate him in two murders. "They're too small," the defendant declared.

The demonstration provided perhaps the most dramatic moment in Simpson's trial and appeared to backfire on the prosecutor who requested it.

Simpson grimaced and raised his eyebrows as he tried to pull the distinctive Aris Leather Light gloves over a pair of latex gloves he had to wear to protect the evidence. Even the stretchy latex gloves seemed to give the former football star problems.

Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden tried to suggest to jurors that Simpson was faking his struggle, but his questions were blocked by objections from Simpson's lawyers.

Once Simpson had the gloves on as far as they could go, the prosecutor asked that he grip an object, a marking pen, to show he could bend his hand.

Simpson obliged over objections from defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. He grasped the marker in his right fist and held it up for jurors.

Richard Rubin, former vice president and general manager of Aris Isotoner Inc., which made the gloves for Bloomingdale's department store, was asked by Darden to measure Simpson's hands.

The witness walked over to the defense table, held his own smaller hands up to Simpson's, eyeballed the spread of Simpson's knuckles then declared Simpson a size large or extra large.

The gloves, one found at the murder scene, the mate found at Simpson's estate, are extra large.

"At one point in time, those gloves would actually be, I think, large on Mr. Simpson's hands," Rubin told jurors. He suggested their

Nichols' attorney seeking evidence

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)--Bombing suspect Terry Nichols' attorney accused the government of misconduct Thursday, claiming officials are leaking information to the media and keeping witnesses from talking with defense investigators.

"The leaks are timed and spaced to poison the well of justice in every potential venue from Michigan, to Kansas, to Nevada, to Oklahoma," attorney Michael Tigar said in a motion filed in U.S. District Court. The motion asks the court to set a hearing to determine the extent of government's alleged misconduct.

It also seeks a judge's order for witnesses in the case to cooperate with defense attorneys.

Nichols and Timothy McVeigh are being held without bail in the April 19 federal building bombing that killed 168 people and injured more than 500.

Tigar also asked the judge to order that the defense be given "all material provided by the government to the media" at the same time the media receives it.

Tigar especially objected to the unsealing of government documents containing information from a federal informant in response to a lawsuit by Detroit newspapers. A judge ordered the records released earlier this week.

Tigar said that stopping leaks is especially important given the government's request for more time to present evidence to a grand jury.

The government has asked for a deadline of Aug. 11 to return indictments. U.S. District Judge David Russell approved that deadline for McVeigh. He has not yet ruled on the date for Nichols.

"In this case, one abuse has bred another--the government claims the right to inquire at leisure and leak at will," Tigar said.

The U.S. attorney's office would not comment on Tigar's motion.

Meanwhile, FBI agents are searching for a man who may have helped rent a truck in Kansas that was believed used in the bombing. The Justice Department said Wednesday that the nationwide manhunt had located a man who resembles the sketches of John Doe 2, but the man had been cleared.

Federal officials who spoke on condition of anonymity identified the man as Pvt. Todd Bunting, a soldier at Fort Riley, Kan. Bunting was in Effingham, S.C., on Thursday for the funeral of his mother-in-law, who died in a traffic accident Monday.

age might have something to do with the fit.

Prosecutors tried to show that Nicole Brown Simpson unwittingly outfitted her ex-husband for her own murder by purchasing the gloves on a visit to New York.

Jurors leaned forward as Simpson approached the jury box. They followed his hands with their eyes, and one juror appeared to breathe harder. When Simpson turned to return to his seat, several panelists began writing in their notebooks.

On his way across the courtroom, Simpson handed the leather gloves to Darden then put out his arms out and shrugged to his sisters in the audience. They exchanged smiles.

He peeled off the latex gloves with snaps that resounded in the quiet courtroom, then wadded them up and tossed them on the table in a display of apparent irritation.

Cochran challenged identification of the bloody gloves by a Bloomingdale's buyer, suggesting that a credit card receipt Ms. Simpson signed Dec. 18, 1990, had nothing to do with the gloves in evidence.

Brenda Vemich, the buyer, testified that the gloves placed before her on the witness stand were Aris Leather Lights and designed only for the department store. She cited the gloves' light leather, special stitching, cashmere lining and palm-side vent as exclusive characteristics.

Hereford native to be ordained to priesthood

Hereford native, Deacon John Ohlig, will be ordained to the priesthood by bishop Placido Rodriguez, CMF during a 10 a.m. Mass July 1 at Christ the King Cathedral in Lubbock.

The newly-ordained Father Ohlig will celebrate his first Mass the following day during the 9 a.m. liturgy at St. Anthony's Church, Hereford.

Ohlig, is the son of the late Leo Ohlig and Dorothy Stahlich, was born and raised in Hereford.

After teaching at St. Joseph's School in Slaton, he entered the seminary for preparation to serve as a priest for the Diocese of Lubbock in 1991.

He was ordained to the transitional diaconate by Bishop Rodriguez on 23, 1994 at St. Joseph's Church, Slaton.

Ohlig graduated from Texas Tech University with a Bachelor's degree in Architecture in May 1986 and obtained a Bachelor of Science degree in Home Economics - Human Development and Family Studies from Tech in December 1988.

He recently graduated with a

Masters degree in Divinity from the Sacred Heart School of Theology seminary in Hales Corner, Wisc.

He previously obtained his certification in Clinical Pastoral Education from Lubbock's Methodist Hospital.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When you gave that advice to "No Name, Birmingham, Ala.," your brain must have been taking a well-earned vacation.

The woman wanted to know if she should continue to date a widower who visited his wife's grave three or four days a week and left fresh flowers. You said he seemed very devoted. I wonder how often he sent his wife flowers when she was alive.

Grave visiting, three or four days a WEEK for more than two years? C'mon, Ann, the guy needs grief counseling.

"No Name" should ask him this direct question: Are you planning to continue this schedule of cemetery visiting if we consider marriage?

I'm sure the man could be a wonderful, devoted husband, but he might also be so hung up on the past that she shouldn't consider a serious relationship with him until he has healed sufficiently to make a fresh start with a new woman. "No Name" should listen to her instincts. -- St. Pete Beach, Fla.

DEAR ST. PETE: You have made a valid point, and I thank you for suggesting that the frequent grave visitor get grief counseling. It sounds as if he needs it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Worried in the Suburbs" who said school buses should be equipped with seat belts. I disagree.

I am a bus driver in Florida. School bus seats are now padded on both sides and are higher than they used to be. This gives the children more protection. However, if there were an accident and students had to get off the bus quickly because of a fire or an oncoming train, panic might cause some students to be unable to remove their seat belts. If the bus turned on its side, it would also be difficult to get out if they were strapped in. If the driver were unconscious or disabled, who would help the students off?

Buses are built to endure a lot of force, so you have more protection than in most vehicles that travel our roads. The best thing parents can do is teach their children to obey the bus driver and stay seated until they are told to get off. This will go a long way to help them arrive safely. -- Bartow, Fla.

DEAR BARTOW: I heard from at least 200 school bus drivers, and they all agreed with you. Thanks to all who wrote.

Nursing professor is expert in menopause

By ELIZABETH EDWARDSSEN
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) - The bumper sticker affixed to Kathleen MacPherson's office computer reads "They Are Not Hot Flashes. They Are POWER SURGES."

It's an appropriately placed sticker for MacPherson, a nationally recognized expert on menopause and a nursing professor at the University of Southern Maine. She's teaching an advanced course on menopause to nurses from Florida to Alaska who attend class via modem.

MacPherson likes the message, too. Her blood boils when she hears of women counseled to start hormone replacement medication at the first sign of a hot flash.

"It's the myth of menopause as a disease," MacPherson said recently, sitting at her computer in a small office on USM's Portland campus. "You really become a patient instead of a normal woman."

Her class, "Theoretical and Cultural Perspectives on Menopause," addresses cultural interpretations of menopause, among other topics.

"There's very little research out there on that. Everybody looks at the biomedical model, which is important, too, but I happen to think that menopause is much broader than the estrogen question and the biophysiology model," said MacPherson. "There's also all the cultural things - myths, ethnic difference, class - so it's quite complex."

MacPherson, who is a medical sociologist as well as a nurse, has lectured around the world on menopause and contributed to two bibles of modern women's health care, "The New Our Bodies, Ourselves" and "The New Ourselves, Growing Older."

Responses to menopause vary around the globe. For years, American women kept their menopause symptoms to themselves because it meant they were getting older. In India, women gain status upon entering menopause.

Conversation flies back and forth between MacPherson and her eight students on topics ranging from complex sociological issues to their admiration of an older woman's character on the TV series "Northern Exposure."

All their communicating is done on an Internet "closed list" - a private bulletin board of sorts that reads like a long academic script.

The format offers the convenience of a portable classroom. All busy professionals, the students can sign on at any hour to read MacPherson's study questions or post their own notes.

Diane Toebe, who teaches nursing at the University of Alaska at Anchorage, found the arrangement especially useful when Army Reserve duty took her to Hawaii.

"I was able to just continue my class, talking to Dr. MacPherson and my classmates. It was really nice," said Toebe.

Toebe said she signed on once or twice a day to read messages from MacPherson and her classmates. She enjoyed the computerized format of the course.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been afflicted for years with a problem diagnosed as photophobia. Bright lights do affect my eye condition, but the symptom will also manifest itself in a dark place. My eyelids go into spasm and close tightly for 30 seconds or longer. This sometimes happens out on the street also. Would you venture an opinion? -- G.N.B.

ANSWER: I first would question the diagnosis. What you have is not photophobia. That is a painful sensitivity to light, a problem of many causes. You describe blepharospasm, a painful involuntary closure of the eyes.

For blepharospasm, you need the help of a neurologist or an eye doctor.

It can be treated. What treatment are you receiving? Please write again.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please shed some light on shingles. Who is prone? If the elderly, why so? How long should it last? What is a good treatment? -- B.B.

ANSWER: It's a long story. Basically, anyone who ever had a chickenpox virus infection -- which most of us get in childhood -- is subject to shingles. The virus goes into hiding in a nerve, then emerges to raise havoc at the skin surface in later years.

Older people are most often affected, although shingles can happen at anytime after you have had chickenpox. We know more today about why older people seem more likely to have shingles and have it more severely and perhaps longer. It is because their immune systems are weaker.

It is the immune system that has kept the virus in hibernation all those younger years.

Shingles is painful, because as the virus travels down the nerve it irritates the cells there. Nerve irritation, wherever and whenever you encounter it, is quite painful and takes a long time to subside.

Treatment for shingles is varied, ranging from antiviral medicines such as acyclovir and famciclovir to nerve blockers and pain medicines.

The earlier the telltale rash is recognized and medicine is given, the better the chance of success.

For a further discussion, see the booklet I'm sending you. Others can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 28, P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

The Whiteface Football Camp will start Wednesday and run through Friday. It's a chance for young kids to learn fundamentals and have some fun, and it's also a chance for kids who plan to play this year in the seventh, eighth or ninth grade to get a head start.

The second sessions, from 10 a.m.-noon, will be only for incoming seventh-graders. This will be treated as an orientation for junior high football.

"Everything we'll ask them to do, we'll go over in those two-hour sessions," said head coach Danny Haney.

The afternoon sessions, from 1-3 p.m., will be for incoming eighth and ninth graders. It will feature advanced instruction, including plays, blocking schemes, routes and coverages.

"We'll pick up where we left off last year," Haney said.

The registration fee for the camp is $20 per boy. Registration will be

Price leads Open at 4-under

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) - The scorecard said it was a bogey. Nick Price said it was a par "that felt like a birdie."

Whatever it was, the 5 he scored on the 12th hole was a critical part of the 4-under-par 66 that provided him with the lead Thursday in the first round of the U.S. Open.

It also was indicative of the toll extracted from 156 of the world's best players by historic Shinnecock Hills, one of the first five members of the U.S. Golf Association and site of the centennial anniversary of the American national championship.

Take, for example, Bill Murchison, who travels the Nike tour with his wife and eight children. He had a share of the lead at one point, but played the back nine in 43.

Or Fred Couples, who struggled to a fat 77.

Or Phil Mickelson, who could only explain "it's part of the game," after a 16th hole double-bogey 7 dropped him out of sole control of the lead.

And this was Shinnecock at its most benign.

"I think the golf course is playing the easiest we're going to see it this week," Jeff Maggert said Thursday after gaining a place among the leaders.

A sharp change in the weather had a lot to do with it. After four days of rain, bright, sunny skies appeared, with temperatures in the 60s and relatively light winds.

But "it's still a very difficult golf course," Price said. "If the winds stay as they are and we don't have any more rain, I think the USGA will be very pleased by the weekend."

As evidence of the course's current severity, the group at 74, 4 over par, included defending title-holder Ernie Els of South Africa, Bernhard Langer of Germany, Payne Stewart and Seve Ballesteros of Spain.

Scott Simpson, who won this title in 1987, was second alone at 67. Greg Norman, a winner two weeks ago, played without a bogey in a solid 68 and was tied for third with Mickelson.

"I did everything right that I needed to do right, and I'm very happy," Norman said.

Mickelson also expressed pleasure with his 2-under-par effort, but it was obvious the double-bogey, bogey, par finish was less than thrilling.

The left-hander ran off a string of three birdies beginning on the 11th hole, then ran in a 30-footer on the 15th to take the lead alone.

But he chopped up the par-5 16th, hitting a 1-iron second shot into the rough, playing out with a sand wedge, reaching the green in 4 and then three-putting from 20 feet.

He also bogeyed the next, failing to get up and down after hitting a 5-iron through the green.

Veteran Fuzzy Zoeller led a group at 69 that included Maggert, Bob Tway, Steve Lowery, Billy Glasson and Jumbo Ozaki of Japan.

Price, ranked No. 1 in the world, player of the year for the past two seasons and the dominant player in world golf since his 1992 PGA triumph, has been in a mild slump most of this year.

"My putter hasn't been very effective," he said.

But the critical save of bogey on the 12th had nothing to do with the putter. Rather, it was an extraordinary shot with the L wedge.

He pulled a 3-wood second shot far left of the green into knee-deep vegetation.

But the ball was setting up just a little, down there among stalks and weeds and woe. Somehow, he popped the L-wedge shot out to the green, about 10 feet from the cup. Then he missed the putt for a scorecard bogey.

"Nice bogey," someone said as he walked off the green.

"It was a par," Price said. Later, he explained: "I've set a standard for myself this week. Any par-4 I have to hit a 3-wood to, I'm playing like a par-5."

Scholars named track coach at Tech

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Greg Sholars has been named men's track and field coach at Texas Tech, athletic director Bob Bockrath said Thursday.

Sholars, 28, has served as a women's assistant track and field coach and women's head cross-country coach at the University of Texas that past three years. He also has coached at Florida, North Texas and Northeast Louisiana.

Sholars replaces Corky Oglesby, who quit last month.

Sholars gained national renown as a high school sprinter in Fort Worth and a college sprinter for Texas

Riley resigns from Knicks, says money wasn't issue

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - When Pat Riley walked away as coach of the New York Knicks, he left behind the final year on his contract. That unfinished business is no small detail for his former boss.

Suppose, Dave Checketts was asked, Riley wants to coach elsewhere next season?

"He cannot coach while under contract," the Madison Square Garden president said Thursday. "We'll leave that alone. Contractually, the answer is no."

Yes, but what if some team offered to trade for him.

"We have a very valuable asset under contract to us and that's the only statement I'm going to make about that," Checketts said.

Riley turned down a five-year, $15 million extension, questioning the extent of his authority in the organization. The Knicks contend he sought part-ownership.

"I emphasize that the decision to leave the Knicks had absolutely nothing to do with money," Riley said in a statement released through his public relations firm. "The financial package which we had been discussing was extremely generous. Regrettably, there were serious differences and questions about authority and final decision-making."

Garcia knocks in six as Bucs whip Dodgers

By The Associated Press
A switch in the field gave Carlos Garcia a boost at the plate. Moving from second base to shortstop to replace slumping Jay Bell, Garcia drove in six runs Thursday to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates over the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-7.

Garcia, who entered the game with only 11 RBIs in 126 at-bats, hit a three-run homer and a bases-loaded double. The six RBIs doubled his previous career-high for one game. "Finally, I'm getting some timing at the plate and I'm starting to see pitches the way I should," said Garcia, who went 2-for-3 to raise his average to .248.

Garcia, who played shortstop in the minors, is getting his confidence back after undergoing knee surgery last winter.

"He's been more aggressive and he's getting better swings," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "I also think he feels good physically."

Bell was 0-for-21 against the Dodgers this season.

Elsewhere, Chicago beat San Francisco 3-1; Atlanta downed Montreal 2-0; Philadelphia defeated Houston 4-2; New York edged Florida 5-4 in 10 innings; and St. Louis beat San Diego 2-1.

Mark Johnson hit a three-run homer for Pittsburgh, which also was helped by the eight walks issued by four Dodgers pitchers.

Denny Neagle (6-3) went 6 1-3 innings for the victory. He had a shutout until the sixth, when a pair of Pittsburgh errors and Tim Wallach's two-run double cut the Pirates' lead to 8-4.

Pedro Astacio (1-5) lost his fourth in a row, allowing eight hits and four earned runs over four innings. Astacio has won only once in 19 starts since last June 25.

"Some innings he's outstanding, but he's giving up too many unnecessary runs," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "He's got to have better control of his pitches."

Phillies 4, Astros 2
At Philadelphia, pinch-hitter Tony

Longmire won it with a two-out, three-run homer in the ninth.

Gary Varsho and Randy Ready singled off John Hudek (2-2) before Longmire lined a 2-1 pitch over the right-field wall. It was his second pinch-homer of the season.

Phillies starter Tyler Green struck out a career-high nine in 8 1-3 innings. Ricky Bottalico (3-1) got two outs in the ninth for the win.

Cubs 3, Giants 1

At Chicago, Frank Castillo lost his bid for a perfect game on Mike Benjamin's one-out single in the seventh inning.

Castillo (5-2) allowed four hits and one walk in eight innings, and matched his career-high with 10 strikeouts. Randy Myers got his 15th save.

Benjamin, who set a major-league record with 14 hits in his three previous games, went 1-for-4.

Mets 5, Marlins 4, 10 innings

At New York, Joe Orsulak singled home the winning run in the 10th for the Mets, who thought they should have won it an inning earlier.

The Mets scored three runs in the ninth to tie the game, but it went into extra innings after a disputed double-play call.

Blas Minor (2-2) worked out of a two-on, one-out jam in the 10th for the victory.

Braves 2, Expos 0

At Montreal, Greg Maddux scattered seven hits for his first shutout of the season.

Maddux (5-1) walked none and struck out three. The three-time Cy Young Award winner lowered his ERA to 1.91 with his 18th career shutout.

Marquis Grissom went 4-for-4 with two doubles and Mike Kelly homered for the Braves. Pedro Martinez (5-2), who gave up seven hits and struck out nine in seven innings, took the loss.

Cardinals 2, Padres 1

At St. Louis, 29-year-old rookie Mark Petkovsek pitched eight strong innings and Ray Lankford homered for the Cardinals.

Lankford's homer off Scott Sanders in the sixth inning ended a 14-inning scoreless drought for the Cardinals, who were limited to five hits by four San Diego pitchers.

St. Louis added a run in the eighth on an infield hit by Tripp Cramer. San Diego scored with two outs in the ninth on Roberto Petagine's RBI groundout off Tom Henke, but Henke got the final out for his 14th save in 14 chances.

Petkovsek (2-1) gave up four hits in the longest outing of his brief career.

Gubicza thrives in Royals rotation

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Kansas City manager Bob Boone just laughs when asked about the novelty of his four-man pitching rotation.

"For 100 years, that's the way it's been done," Boone said. "I felt it should have been done more often, but I was never in control of it before. Problem is now, (the five-man rotation) has been in place so long, it's the thing that fired managers are made of."

Mark Gubicza, one of Boone's four starters, pitched the first one-hitter of his 10-year career Thursday to beat the Oakland Athletics 7-0.

Gubicza was among baseball's hardest throwers in the 1980s before rotator cuff surgery set him back in 1993. He started this season 1-4, and Boone had a one-to-one talk with him about a month ago. Since then, Gubicza is 3-1 with a 2.11 ERA in the five starts.

"He basically told me to go after people," Gubicza said. "He believed in me. It built my confidence."

In other games, Detroit defeated New York 9-2 and California beat Chicago 5-1.

The Royals' foursome of Gubicza, Kevin Appier, Chris Haney and Tom

Gordon have all contributed to the team's season-high six-game winning streak. The streak has helped keep Kansas City within seven games of the AL Central-leading Cleveland Indians, who have baseball's best record at 33-11.

"He just keeps getting better and better every time out," Boone said. "Now he's even throwing harder, maybe because of (the shorter rest between starts)."

Gubicza says the short rotation keeps him alert.

"I don't have enough free time to let my mind wander between starts," Gubicza said. "And being a sinkerball pitcher, it kind of helps me not to overthrow the ball as much."

Oakland manager Tony La Russa might be swayed to switch to a four-man rotation after what happened Thursday. Ron Darling had another bad start, allowing seven runs in only 2 1-3 innings.

La Russa declined to talk much about either starting pitcher, instead focusing on the big picture of being out and outscored.

"I don't have any comment about Gubicza," La Russa said. "They just outplayed us. They out-everythinged us."

Boone said Gubicza "is probably throwing harder than he has in the last five years." Combine that with some off-speed pitches, and you have the makings of a near no-hitter.

"He was throwing sinkers and sliders, which he throws all the time," said Oakland's Mark McGwire, whose single with one out in the fourth was the A's lone hit.

Gubicza (4-5) walked one and struck out five, pitching his 14th career shutout. His last shutout and complete game both came in May 1992.

Vince Coleman led off the game with a double off Darling (2-3) and scored on Wally Joyner's two-out single for a 1-0 lead. Coleman's two-run double in the second keyed a three-run rally to make it 4-0.

Darling lasted only one out into the third, leaving after the Royals scored three more runs. He has made it past five innings in only two of his 10 starts. His ERA is 6.75.

Angels 5, White Sox 1

For the first time since April 14, 1988, a game at Anaheim Stadium was delayed by rain. After the start was held up for 44 minutes, California went on to beat Chicago.

Rookie Garret Anderson, who had three hits, and J.T. Snow, who homered, each drove in two runs.

Lee Smith tied his major league mark with a save in his 17th straight appearance. Smith got his 16th save last Sunday, and it was announced then that he had set the record; the next day, however, further research revealed Smith reached 17 in a row with St. Louis in 1993.

Mike Bielecki (3-3) took a three-hit shutout into the seventh inning. Brian Keyser (0-2) left in the fifth.

Tigers 9, Yankees 2

Cecil Fielder hit his 14th home run and Detroit took advantage of New York rookie Brian Boehringer's wildness at Tiger Stadium.

Boehringer (0-1), making his first major league start, walked seven in four-plus innings. Five of the walks figured in the scoring.

Chris Gomez also homered for Detroit and Todd Steverson had three hits. Sean Bergman (3-4) won his second straight start.

Movie actor Fred Dryer scored two safeties in a 1973 game for the Los Angeles Rams.

Ryan to throw out first pitch at All-Star game in Arlington

ARLINGTON, Texas - Considering the Texas Rangers named a street outside their new stadium Nolan Ryan Expressway, it's not surprising that baseball's all-time strikeout king will throw out the ceremonial first pitch when the All-Star Game comes to town July 11.

Ryan retired following the 1993 season, then made his only trip to the mound at The Ballpark in Arlington on April 1, 1994, when he threw out the first pitch at an exhibition game with the New York Mets that was the first game in the stadium.

"This is about the only way for me to get there now," said Ryan, a special assistant to Rangers president Tom Schieffer. "It's a nice honor to be invited. It should be fun, especially because it's at The Ballpark. That will make it more enjoyable."

Ryan, 48, will be throwing out the first pitch for the second time at an All-Star Game. He and Pete Rose had the honor for the 1985 All-Star Game in Minneapolis when both were still playing.

Others who have thrown out the first pitch at two All-Star Games are Ted Williams (1953 and '92), Richard Nixon (1958 and '59), former American League president William Harridge (both games in 1960), Lefty Gomez (1972 and '73) and George Bush (1981 and '86).

Ryan, who had seven no-hitters among his 324 career victories, pitched for the Rangers from 1989-93. His personal services contract with the team requires him to work 150 days a year.

"This will be a good two or three days," Ryan said. "Things have been on a downturn after the strike. This should be a good time for baseball people to get together and be positive about the sport. That's a plus. Maybe it will carry over into the rest of the season."

Buffalo Soldiers served in Army with distinction

By CINDY RAMIREZ
El Paso Times

EL PASO, Texas - Retired Master Sgt. Donnie Wah Brown loved telling stories of his days as a Buffalo Soldier, never tiring of talking about the role blacks played in defending their country.

He always smiled when he talked about the horses he cared for and the country he served.

He often was saddened when reminded that history books seldom mentioned a word about the black troops known as Buffalo Soldiers in the days of segregated Army.

Brown, the last Buffalo Soldier living in El Paso, died June 1 at the age of 87.

On Wednesday he became the 10th Buffalo Soldier to be buried at Fort Bliss National Cemetery, where an American flag draped his casket during the burial service.

"We'll miss the sweet, loving spirit he always had," his widow, Hermie Brown, said in an interview. "It was very dear to him to have been a Buffalo Soldier. He always had stories, and anytime he could get someone to listen, he'd talk."

Brown served in the 10th Cavalry, one of four units of black troops Congress formed in 1866. The troops were trained and commanded by white officers and were added to the Army, usually at isolated frontier posts.

The troops of the 9th and 10th Calvaries and the 24th and 25th Infantry Regiments became known as Buffalo Soldiers because they were all-black units. The Buffalo Soldiers retained their name until the Army was desegregated in 1952.

Historians say the name was given by Plains Indians who thought the soldiers' dark skin and curly hair reminded them of buffaloes.

But Buffalo Soldier Wallace Lott Jr. said the nickname - which they accepted as a sign of respect from the Indians - was based on more than appearance.

"They saw these soldiers as furious fighters. Some of their survival was based on them eating plants and grazing the land for food and items to use as weapons, just like the buffalo," said Lott, who came to El Paso from Arizona for the funeral.

Often, the Buffalo Soldiers covered themselves with buffalo coats to keep warm because they sometimes didn't have coats. Racial discrimination in the Army meant blacks received inferior equipment, food and horses.

"We had the shabbiest horses and the oldest blankets around," Lott said.

The soldiers' main task in the 19th century was to protect settlers against Indian raids, but they were also instrumental in developing parts of Texas, Arizona, Kansas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

The outfit served as animal doctors, hunters and cooks.

El Paso historian Leon Metz said the Buffalo Soldiers were near El Paso during the Mexican Revolution more than at any other time.

Most guarded the mail and stage coach route from San Antonio to El Paso, and many were stationed along the border to fight Indian raiders, bandits and outlaws, Metz said.

Buffalo Soldiers helped fight the Spanish-American War in Cuba and the Philippines, and later chased Pancho Villa through northern Mexico. They also combated the Germans during the two World Wars. President Truman ordered the Army desegregated and by 1952 all the Buffalo Soldiers units were absorbed into an integrated Army.

"It was certainly a glorious day when that happened," said S.L. Seal, who served in the 10th Cavalry.

World War II veteran Louis Blanche, who also came from Arizona for Brown's funeral, joined the segregated Army in 1943. He remembers collecting stray animals and doctoring sick mules and horses as a Buffalo Soldier.

He'll never forget the blistering feet, freezing cold nights and loneliness of his service. But he doesn't recall being angry at or fearful of hatred by the people he worked to protect.

Blanche and Lott both knew they would be faced with hostility from their own countrymen, but neither allowed that to bother them. They both lied about their ages to join the Army.

"We were there to help protect and that was that," Lott said.

Today, Lott visits with descendants of Buffalo Soldiers such as Brown to collect stories and help ensure they don't go unheard.

"It's time to get our story on paper," Lott said. "People need to know about our contribution to history."

NEW YORK (AP) - "Pocahontas" is a movie that finally treats American Indians with the respect they deserve, says a man behind one of the film's voices.

"It's a beautiful movie and it's grounded in truth. My people are going to benefit for decades," said Russell Means, a founder of the American Indian Movement who did the voice of Pocahontas' father, Powhatan, in the Walt Disney animated movie.

"I just love the humanization of my people. I just love it. It's about time American Indian people get treated like everybody else," Means said.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS, CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

AMOS - THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHET

HAVING BEEN CALLED UPON BY THE LORD TO GO NORTH INTO ISRAEL AND WARN THE PEOPLE THAT THEIR SINFUL WAYS HAD ANGERED THEIR GOD, AMOS, THE HERDSMAN, BEARS THE END OF HIS LONG JOURNEY...

...WHERE HE WILL ADMONISH THE PEOPLE WHO ARE LIVING SO RIOTOUSLY IN BETHEL....

...NOW HE ENTERS THE CITY GATES OF BETHEL WHERE KING JEROBOAM HAS HIS SUMMER PALACE AND WHERE THE MOST IMPORTANT TEMPLE IN ISRAEL IS SITUATED...

...HE THREADS HIS WAY THROUGH THE WINDING STREETS, EVER INTENT ON REACHING THE TEMPLE....

...AT LAST HE ENTERS THE TEMPLE, WHERE, ALREADY, A LARGE CROWD OF WORSHIPERS HAVE CONGREGATED TO JOIN IN THE DAILY RITUAL OF PSALM AND PRAYER, BRINGING WITH THEM THEIR OFFERINGS OF SHEEP, OXEN, AND DOVES, BUT HARDLY A ONE OF THEM COMING WITH A CONTRITE HEART....

SAVE THIS FOR YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SCRAPBOOK.

Next Week TO WHOM IT IS SPOKEN!

THIS DEVOTIONAL & DIRECTORY IS MADE POSSIBLE BY THESE BUSINESSES WHO ENCOURAGE ALL OF US TO ATTEND WORSHIP SERVICES.

Magazine's report card on state's Legislators 'bites'

Most of Panhandle's senators, representatives escape 'Texas Monthly' listing

AUSTIN (AP)--It's back and it's biting: Texas Monthly magazine's list of the best and worst legislators of 1995.

Among the best are the West Texas Democrats who shared the trying task of writing the state's spending plan and the East Texas education gurus who tackled the catch-phrase "local control" and rolled it into a new school code.

The worst list includes two brand-new Republican senators and the longest-serving member of the Texas House.

The biennial report card, compiled by Texas Monthly Executive Editor Paul Burka and freelance writer Patricia Kilday Hart for the magazine's July issue, has been published since 1973.

And, though they may not admit it, it's something all legislators are aware of.

"It is a distinction that is both coveted and feared," Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said Wednesday. Ellis was one of the 10 legislators named to this year's best list.

Rep. Warren Chisum, who was named one of the nine worst legislators, sees it this way: "This is an editorial judgment of the Texas Monthly staff. It hasn't got anything to do with the people of Texas or how the people of Texas think."

Chisum, D-Pampa, head of the Texas Conservative Coalition, believes the list reflects a political preference by the magazine's editors.

"They generally pick the more liberal members to be on their best list and the more conservative members to be on their worst list, so that ought to say something about it," he said.

Of the 10 best legislators, eight are Democrats and two are Republicans. On the worst list there are four Democrats and five Republicans.

So how does one get picked for either list? Burka explains in the article's forward.

For the best list, he wrote, great weight was placed on "integrity, effectiveness, fairness, and a willingness to put public policy ahead of partisanship and personal ambition."

"But we also looked for legislators who far surpassed the level at which they were expected to perform," Burka wrote.

"On the worst list, we looked first for legislators who did great harm. ... What we did find was a lack of respect for the basic values of politics: compromise, good faith and a commitment to the public trust."

Included on this year's best list are Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo, and Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, the state's chief budget writers. Also named were Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, and Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, who led the rewrite of the Texas education code.

Among those named to the worst list were freshman Sens. Michael Galloway, R-The Woodlands, and Drew Nixon, R-Carhart, who were criticized for "ignorance" and "arrogance."

"No one expects first-year lawmakers to shine, but these two were dimmer than Jim Carrey," the article states.

Nixon responded, "It doesn't bother me at all. It's somewhat done in jest as well as seriousness."

Also on the worst list was Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, who at 86 is the longest-serving member of the House.

Willis, who has said he will not seek re-election, was described this way: "His idea of family values is using his position to give things of value to his own family."

The article cites a proposal by Willis to change state pension laws. The proposal, which failed, would have allowed Willis to shift his beneficiary from his wife, who no longer lives with him, to one of his daughters without his wife's consent.

In response to the article, Willis said: "It saddens me that Mr. Burka could have this personal opinion of me. ... I've always tried to help the average citizen."

In a flip-flop from the 1993 list, Sen. John Whitmire, who was named one of the best legislators that year, was placed on the worst list this year.

He was criticized for the "mess he made of his attack on the state's program to comply with the federal Clean Air Act."

Whitmire's reaction? "It's a political document," he said. "I was on the best last time, and now I'm on the worst. Truth is, I didn't deserve to be on the best and I don't deserve to be on the worst."

Witnesses in military fatigues go rounds with Senate subcommittee during hearing

WASHINGTON (AP)--It was an extraordinary scene: The witnesses, some decked out in military camouflage, used words such as "tyranny" and "servitude" to describe government encroachment into ordinary citizens' lives. Senators fired back, describing the views of these self-styled citizen militiamen as "extreme" and "abhorrent."

The setting was a Senate subcommittee hearing Thursday called by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., in the wake of the April 19 federal building bombing in Oklahoma City. Specter, who's running for president, said he wanted to determine whether the burgeoning militia movement posed a threat to safety and the federal government--and to what extent the government might pose a threat to militia members' rights.

Some of the verbal exchanges were sharp.

"The federal government needs a good spanking to make it behave," Norman Olson, the member of the Michigan Militia who was wearing military fatigues, told the senators.

James Johnson, a member of the Ohio Unorganized Militia, said the government was increasing taxes and regulation to the point of leading citizens "down the road to involuntary servitude."

"With the increasing polarization between the tax-paying citizens and government, the only thing that stands between what is going on now and armed conflict is time," Johnson said.

"We stand against corruption and the tyranny of government," Olson told Specter. "We're coming to believe you all stand for that corruption."

Specter's reply was testy: "I don't take that lightly, your comment that I represent corruption. And I'd like you to prove it."

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., asked the five militia witnesses if there ever were circumstances under which people could take the law into their own hands. Each said no.

"Absolutely not," said Robert Fletcher, a militia leader from Noxon, Mont. "At no time have we espoused any such action. We are a defensive concept."

There are more than 220 militias nationwide, Specter said. The militias operate in about 40 states, said Robert Bryant, an assistant FBI director.

Law enforcement officials also testified before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on terrorism, technology and government information that Specter chairs. All agreed the militias were "disturbing and dangerous."

"Federal and local enforcement personnel have been threatened, harassed, assaulted and shot" by militia members, said James L. Brown, deputy associate director for criminal enforcement at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The lawmakers said they felt current laws were adequate to handle violence on domestic soil or investigate threats of violence. However, they favored the anti-terrorism bill the Senate passed last week in response to the Oklahoma City bombing that killed 168 people.

The $2 billion Senate package includes provisions to enlarge federal law enforcement agencies and the government's wiretapping authority.

Olson said he understood "the dynamic of retaliation and revenge--when justice is taken out of the equation."

Specter asked Olson if he was referring to the Oklahoma bombing.

"You're trying to lay at the feet of the militia some culpability,"

Olson said. "You're trying to make us something we are not, much as the press has done."

Olson said he believed "foreign interests" were involved in the Oklahoma bombing. Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols, the only two people charged in the explosion, were both Americans. Nichols and his brother, James, reportedly attended meetings of the Michigan Militia.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., testified that the internal publications of the Wolverine Brigade of the Southern Michigan Regional Militia were full of "paranoid conspiracy theories."

"Extreme hate rhetoric contributes to an incendiary atmosphere in which an unstable individual will take the rhetoric seriously and light a match--or a fuse," Levin said.

Feinstein said she was concerned about reports of militia members stockpiling weapons.

"I see nothing in the Constitution that provides for these kinds of private armies," she said, estimating that California was home to 35 militia groups.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said he found the views of the militia "abhorrent."

"I am disgusted by those who want to tear down the people--whether in law enforcement or government--who work to help this country operate," he said.

Texas couple's 'find' revealed as facsimile

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)--The discovery seemed too good to be true: a Texas couple stumbling upon an original manuscript of one of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's most popular poems.

It was. Though touted by some scholars as near certainly authentic, the framed manuscript of the 1840 poem "The Village Blacksmith" was nothing but a facsimile, researchers said Wednesday.

What Mark Holmes and his wife, Deborah, of Pinehurst, Texas, paid 50 cents for at a garage sale last year may have looked genuine. But the original working manuscript--complete with the poet's cross-outs and scratch marks--is sitting in the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., the library confirmed.

Victor Gulotta, a Boston-area researcher and Longfellow collector, was practically salivating at the thought that the yard sale find was the real thing.

Gulotta, 41, was prepared to buy the item for his collection. Harvard University, where Longfellow taught for years, also expressed interest.

Gulotta, who is working on a collection of previously unpublished Longfellow letters, said an original manuscript could have fetched more than $10,000 at an auction.

"It would have been incredibly exciting had it turned out to be authentic," said Gulotta, who described the poem as quintessentially Longfellow.

James Shea, museum manager at the Longfellow National Historic Site in Cambridge, wasn't surprised when Holmes called him in May to discuss his finding. People claim all the time to have located a Longfellow poem, painting or letter, he said.

The Brattle Street site, where Longfellow and his wife lived, houses 600,000 Longfellow and family documents.

"When this manuscript came up, of course I perked up," Shea said. "But I was very skeptical because findings like that in a yard sale--I mean, it happens--but it's just so unusual."
