Bill would tighten control on retirement system

Enterprise zone meet attracts little attention

A hearing conducted by Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court on establishing an enterprise zone in Hereford and Deaf Smith County attracted little attention Tuesday night.

A single spectator, Gerald Ripley, attended the hearing. Mike Hatley, executive director of Hereford Economic Development Corporation, also was in attendance.

The enterprise zone is a joint project of Deaf Smith County and the City of Hereford.

Judge Tom Simons explained the purpose of the hearing was to collect input on creation of the enterprise zone.

Hatley also observed that the "idea is to entice business into an area struggling financially." A total of 13.7 square miles of land will be included in the zone, if approved by the Texas Department of Commerce.

Dollar falls to new depths overseas By FARRELL KRAMER

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The dollar's exalted position as the undisputed currency of choice in troubled times has faded as surely as its value against the German mark and Japanese yen.

"The prestige of the United States is being tested here," said Hillel Waxman, chief foreign exchange dealer at Bank Leumi Trust Co. in New York. "It should be of concern to the administration. It should be of concern to Congress.

Money traders say the dollar's decline Tuesday to all-time lows against the mark and yen reflects a loss of cachet for the U.S. currency. It sunk to yet another postwar record today in Tokyo, closing at 89.38 yen, and was down again in Europe, too.

Travelers to Europe and Japan already have found their dollars buy less than a week ago. Saudi Arabia plans to raise the price of oil exported to the United States, partly because of the dollar's weakness. Prices of German cars, Japanese CD players, Swiss cheese and French wine inevitably will rise to reflect the dollar's reduced purchasing power.

The longer-term consequences of the dollar's decline, while harder to measure, may reflect how the United States is no longer an unchallenged economic superpower.

"The value of a currency is related to the perception of a country,' Waxman said. "I believe the market is saying the role of the United States moving into the next 50 years is different than it used to be. It will play a more diminished role."

Declines in the dollar's value against the mark also signal the German currency's emergence as a safe haven in its own right.

In the past week alone, the dollar has declined more than 6 percent against the mark. Meanwhile, the mark soared Tuesday to post-World War II highs against the British pound, French franc, Spanish peseta, Portuguese escudo and Swedish

"If I was thinking long-term money and where you would put it, I would say Deutsche marks and Swiss francs," said Michael Zentz, a capital markets analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group in New York.

Zentz and others credited the Bundesbank, Germany's central bank, for its tight, conservative monetary policy that has led to confidence in the nation's economic stability.

Conversely, investors have fled the dollar for a variety of reasons, including the U.S. government's apparent inability to deal with big trade and budget deficits, as well as the difficulty President Clinton confronts in working with the Republican Congress.

Last week, the Federal Reserve and other world central banks jointly sought to halt the dollar's decline by purchasing an estimated $5 billion of U.S. currency with marks and ven to reduce the supply. But the intervention did nothing to discourage dollar

"It's a very psychologically driven market we've been seeing the past couple of days," said Chris Rude, a senior economist at Swiss Bank Corp. in New York. "And right now people are wondering where the leadership

House committee approves change

Legislation would tighten rules for food stamps

By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A House committee approved legislation early today that would fundamentally change the $27 billion food stamp program by tightening rules and holding down automatic increases in benefits that help one in 10 Americans buy groceries.

With one Democrat - Rep. Scotty Baesler of Kentucky - joining Republicans, the bill passed the House Agriculture Committee, 26-18, after more than 15 hours of debate.

Democrats invoked images of hungry children with distended stomachs as they sought to portray the bill as cruel to the poor and fought largely unsuccessfully to reshape the legislation, a central piece of the GOP's plan to overhaul the nation's welfare system.

"There is no intention to punish anyone for anything," said Rep. Bill Emerson, R-Mo. "But to have a tight program that helps real people who need real help and to eliminate fraud, abuse and trafficking."

The bill would hold automatic cost-of-living adjustments in food stamp benefits to 2 percent a year, replacing a system that bases increases on inflation.

Republicans say the bill would cut food stamp spending by $16 billion over the next five years, out of an estimated $150 billion.

But the Clinton administration, which opposed the plan, put the cost of the changes at $24 billion and said that at the end of five years, the value of food stamp benefits would erode below what is necessary to meet a family's most basic nutritional needs.

The food stamp reforms are the second piece of the GOP's proposed welfare reforms to clear a House committee.

Two weeks ago, the Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee approved legislation that would consolidate federal child-care and nutrition programs and return the money to the states in three block grants.

The House Ways and Means Committee finished work on its welfare reform legislation last week but was forced by Democrats to postpone a final vote until this week, possibly today.

That legislation replaces cash welfare and foster care programs with block grants to the states, reforms child support enforcement, ends public aid to most legal immigrants and replaces cash benefits to thousands of disabled children with expanded medical services.

Republicans said the food stamp reforms will curb the rapid growth in the cost of the program by freezing or repealing some of the deductions families are allowed to take against their income when applying for aid.

The food stamp program remains at the federal level, contrary to the desire of some GOP governors and Republican lawmakers who had sought to have it also converted to a

States that convert their food stamp program to a system that delivers benefits electronically, however, would be allowed to convert food stamps into a block grant.

"The food stamp program is preserved as a federal program to guarantee that any American who needs food will continue to have access to nutrition assistance," said Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan. the committee chairman. "All this will be accomplished within a cost structure that is more affordable and more controlled than the present program."

Lawmakers, however, refused to o along with Rep. Nick Smith, R-Mich., who wanted to prohibit food stamp recipients from using their coupons to buy sodas, candy, including candy-coated ice cream, and tea, coffee and coopa.

"You can make poor people feel really bad if that's what you want to do," said Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., while Rep. Earl Pomeroy, D-N.D., suggested that food stamps should be renamed the "gruel-stamp program."

The Clinton administration said the egislation would unravel the nutritional safety net and harm farmers and the food industry.

Collision of galaxies observed

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -Endeavour's three telescopes peered at two colliding galaxies that are thought to be 20 billion times the mass of the sun.

"I think we nailed it. I think we got a great observation," NASA astronomer Susan Neff said Tuesday. She is helping manage the imaging

The diameter of these colliding galaxies is some 100,000 light years the galaxies themselves are 90 million light years away.

Such a collision occurs over millions of years. Neff believes these two galaxies are in the middle of their encounter and that, millions of years from now, they might settle down and

"We're looking for star formation in the debris after the collision," Neff said. "We're looking at what kinds of stars were in the galaxies before they collided, and we're trying to understand how the collision happened."

An even bigger question is why galaxy collisions are less common now than they were billions of years ago. "That's one of the things that the Hubble Space Telescope is trying really hard to find out," Neff said.

Neff and other scientists working with NASA's ultraviolet imaging telescope won't know the quality of this - or any - observation until sometime next month. Unlike the two other telescopes, which are sending down data throughout the flight, this telescope's observations are being recorded on film. The 70mm film will be removed from the shuttle after its scheduled March 17 landing and then stored in a safe at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md. Scientists want to test the developing equipment one last time before they start developing the irreplaceable

It will be sometime next month before astronomers know the quality of the observations.

In a biomedical experiment aboard Endeavour, meanwhile, an undetermined number of samples were ruined because of a short in a heater circuit.

Jenny Artho, Emily Curtis, Carey Lyles and Matt Irish, from Hereford Junior High, were among the winners during the regional competition for History Day hosted by Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum on Feb. 25.

Winning first place, Jr. Group Performance and the Jane Y. McCallum Award for best entry dealing with women in Texas were Artho and Curtis with their exhibit Women in World War II".

In the Jr. Group Project, winners of the Oral History Award and first place were Lyles and Irish with their project, "D Day".

All of the regional winners are eligible to attend the Texas History Day state competition at Austin on May 5-6, sponsored by the Texas State Historical Association. The first and second place winners in each category of the state contest can University of Maryland.

Chore board for siblings

My three kids are at it again, arguing about whose turn it is to tackle household chores. But when it's time to dole out a few privileges, such as sitting in the front seat of the car or picking an evening television show, they don't miss a beat. Suddenly it's everyone's turn. Sound familiar?

So far, this chore/privilege board I came up with a couple of months ago is a winner at our house. It's not an incentive system like most charts; rather, it's a simple way to keep track of who's who in the job and privilege categories of day-to-day family life.

For a sturdy chore board, we use the following: -1 piece of white foam board, cut in an 18-inch-wide by 9-inch-long rectangle (available at art and discount stores)

-6 adhesive-backed plastic hooks in bright colors

- 6 metal rings (available at stationery stores)

- several plain index cards, cut in 1-inch by 5-inch strips with a hole punched at the top of each strip (one strip for each child for each chore and privilege). If you have, say, two children and six categories, you will need 12 strips.

- 4 one-inch magnet strips - Markers and ruler

Before you make the board, discuss chores and privileges for a typical week, such as "set dinner table." "vacuum stairs," "choose Saturday bike route," etc. Use a black marker to print the six categories across the top of the board. Draw vertical lines down the board to separate them. Under each category, attach a hook. Glue magnets to the back of the board.

Print names on each strip. You. may want to color-code each name. For example, all of Scott's strips would be printed in blue.

On each ring, attach strips for each child in the family. On each hook, hang a ring with strips. The name appearing on top of each ring is responsible for the taskprivilege in the category. For example, if Jennifer's name is on top under "water the plants," it's her turn. When she completes the job, she flips her name over the ring and the next child's name appears. (Kids like this part best!)

Clark is new sweetheart for Hereford Pilot Club

The Hereford Pilot Club met recently at the Hereford Community Center. The program included a Pilot information game played between club members.

The meeting began with roll call and announcements. Carol Murry from the Hereford Police Department announced the starting of a new police academy. It is a 12 week academy that covers all aspects of a police officers duties.

During the meeting it was announced that Merle Clark was elected the club sweetheart.

It was also announced that the Mean Green team is eight points ahead of the Bold Gold team. Members were encouraged to keep a look out for the special mystery person. Kim Leonard won the winning ticket for the extra points.

The Pilot information game was played like Jeopardy and was played by Betty Taylor and Linda Minchew against Kim Leonard and Brenda Thomas. The Mean Green team won

Expansion vote, HOF selections divert attention from bad games

By BEN WALKER AP Baseball Writer

At a time when the sport is struggling, when crowds of under 500 fans are showing up at exhibition games, baseball still took some solace thinking about the past and looking ahead to the future.

On Tuesday, while owners were preparing for an expansion vote to add the Tampa Bay Devil Rays and the Arizona Diamondbacks, the Hall of Fame expanded by four members.

Classic leadoff man Richie Ashburn, Negro Leagues star Leon Day, National League founder William Hulbert and turn-of-the-century pitcher Vic Willis were selected by the Veterans Committee.

Ashburn and the other new members will join Mike Schmidt, elected by the Baseball Writers Association of America in January, at induction ceremonies in Cooperstown, N.Y., on July 30.

"I've been suffering right along with everyone else, hoping these problems will get solved," said Ashburn, now a broadcaster for the Philadelphia Phillies.

In the meantime, the replacement games go on.

There were only 338 fans in the stands at Tempe Diablo Stadium when the Milwaukee Brewers and California Angels started. A few miles away in Arizona, about 450 people watched the San Diego Padres play the Oakland Athletics at Phoenix Municipal Stadium.

There were, however, all of 4,287 fans in Fort Myers, Fla., to see the Boston Red Sox beat the New York Yankees 1-0, showing those two teams will draw even if it's not Roger Clemens facing Don Mattingly.

"We've got to put one in the win column," new Boston manager Kevin Kennedy said with a laugh before the game. "You know we have to beat

For some, these games represent an opportunity to get another look. That's how Luis DeLeon sees it.

DeLeon, 36, led the Padres in By then, maybe the strike will be saves in 1982. These days he's pitching for the Chicago Cubs.

DeLeon pitched five perfect innings against San Francisco and has retired all 24 batters he's faced this spring, striking out 12. Long ago, he pitched against players now on the Giants' staff.

"I was telling the younger guys, You won't believe it, but I played with Dusty Baker and Bobby Bonds," he said. "But I'm not that old. I don't feel that old."

But Marty Bystrom, also 36, is feeling his age. A pitcher who helped Philadelphia win its only World Series in 1980, he's with the Phillies again this spring, though he's starting to think it may not be for long.

"I'm sure in the back of everybody's mind there's always that hope that maybe they'd be able to stay around," he said. "It was in the beginning (for me), but now that I've been down here, I don't see that happening.

"If they get everything settled, home because it's just going to cause a problem," he said.

Bystrom pitched two scoreless innings in a 13-2 loss to Detroit. The Tigers are being managed by Tom Runnells, filling in for Sparky Anderson, who refused to work with replacements. Runnells, however, has yet to sit in Anderson's chair at Tigertown in Lakeland, Fla.

Buckley honored by Amarillo C of C

Hereford's Benton Buckley has been named the basketball player of the month for February by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce Sports Committee.

Buckley, a senior who led Hereford's playoff run, will be honored with other athletes at a noon luncheon Thursday at the Holiday Inn in Amarillo.

Senior Benton Buckley scored 566 points for the Hereford High School boys' basketball team during the 1994-95 season, setting a new school record for points in a season.

The old record was the 563 points scored by Russell Backus in 1989-90. Backus lost two of his school records this year, but one stayed in the family. Younger brother Wade Backus, a senior, hit 37 percent (20of-54) of his three-point shot attempts. Russell Backus hit 34 percent of his treys in 1990.

Sophomore Isaac Walker set a new standard in two-point field goal percentage by hitting 52 percent (172-of-332). Leo Brown held the previous best at 46 percent in 1992.

The Herd also set a team record during its 22-10 season. Hereford committed only five turnovers in its 79-78 overtime victory over Canyon Jan. 3 in Hereford. The team's previous best for turnovers in a game was seven against Friona in 1993.

Raiders' Atkins leads women's All-SWC list

DALLAS (AP) - Texas Tech and Houston each landed two players on the 1994-95 All-southwest Conference basketball team, as voted by the conference's eight head coaches.

Southern Methodist and Texas A&M each landed one player on the team, which was announced Tuesday.

The team is led by Tech's Michi Atkins, who also was named the SWC's player of the Joining Atkins on the first team Tech senior forward Connie Robinson, junior guard Jennifer McLaughlin of Southern Methodist, junior guard Lisa Branch of Texas A&M, sophomore guard Pat Luckey of Houston and senior guard Stacey Johnson of Houston. Luckey and Johnson tied for the last spot on the team.

Texas Tech's Marsha Sharp was selected SWC coach of the year for the fifth straight season, Lady Raiders teammates Tabitha Truesdale and Nikki Heath tied for defensive player of the year, and Johnson, a junior college transfer, was named newcomer of the year. Voting for freshman of the year ended in a three-way tie among Angela Jackson of Texas, Jennifer Jones of Houston and Carey Owens of Texas A&M.

Nekeshia Henderson of Texas. who missed much of the season with injury, was named to the second team along with Truesdale, Martha McClelland of Texas A&M, Brenda Conaway of Rice and Kim Brandl of Southern Methodist.

With more than 1,300 points, Atkins already is the No. 6 scorer in Tech history, with her senior year still ahead of her.

Johnson averaged 21.3 points and 4.7 steals, and the 35 points she scored on Feb. 22 against Baylor tied her for third in the league for most points scored in a game. McLaughlin heads a list of four

SMU players ranking in the league's top 10 in scoring. She averaged 16.8 points and 3.8

Before a season-ending knee injury, Robinson averaged 17.1 points and still leads the league in made field goals at 57 per cent, Branch, the SWC co-player of the year last season, averaged 16.2 points, 6.8 assists and 2.4 steals. She topped the 500 mark in career assists in only her junior season.

Luckey was named the SWC player of the year twice, after missing the first part of the year on the academic ineligible list.

Truesdale and Heath, in tying for defensive player of the year, both rank in the league's top 10 in Under Sharp's coaching, the No. 6-ranked Lady Raiders finished 27-3, going into this week's SWC post-season tournament, good for Tech's fourth straight regular season title.

weren't, for a change.

Ewing scored 38 points in the second half and finished with a season-high 46 Tuesday night in the New York Knicks' 115-110 victory over Boston.

Smits was nearly as good. His 35 points against San Antonio were a season high and came while he was holding Robinson to 19 points and a career-low two rebounds. Without a big night by Robinson, the Spurs' eight-game winning streak came to an end as San Antonio fell to the Pacers, 117-100.

"Nobody stops David," said Smits, who also had 10 rebounds. "But tonight they were playing from behind. It's tough to catch up.

As their losing streak stretched to five, the Houston Rockets fell further behind in the Midwest Division with a 113-102 loss to Phoenix.

Olajuwon scored 40 points and got 13 rebounds, but he also committed four fouls in the fourth quarter, picking up his sixth with 4:05 to play. Knicks 115, Celtics 110

Boston's Dominique Wilkins became the ninth player in NBA history to score 25,000 points, but the visiting Celtics had no answer for Ewing.

Ewing scored 16 straight points to keep his sputtering team in the game during the third quarter as New York won its ninth straight game against Boston. He also added six blocks and 12 rebounds.

Wilkins, who needed 16 points to reach the 25,000-point plateau, finished with 19, including his milestone 3-pointer with 3:19 to play in the fourth quarter.

Suns 113, Rockets 102

Kevin Johnson scored 22 points and led a free-throw shooting spurt in the fourth quarter to help Phoenix win their fourth straight.

The Suns hit all 12 of their fourth-quarter free throws and Johnson had six, including one on a technical foul called against Olajuwon with 7:39 to play.

Charles Barkley scored 26 points, including the visiting Suns' final 10

Cavaliers 89, Pistons 81

Tyrone Hill came back early from hand surgery and scored Cleveland's last 10 points as the Cavaliers beat Detroit.

The Cavs ended a season-worst four-game losing streak by limiting the Pistons to just two points in the last eight minutes.

Chris Mills scored 24 and Terrell Brandon had 20 for Cleveland. Terry Mills led the visiting Pistons with 26 points and 10 rebounds, and Allan Houston added 20 points. Detroit's Joe Dumars scored five points, nearly 15 under his average, on 2-for-10 shooting.

Student campaigns on behalf of handicapped brother

By MICHAEL GAFFNEY Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LUBBOCK, Texas - The passion of youth may be the purest passion. If Amanda Burton is any indicator, the maxim is certainly true.

Her passion captured the interest of Texas lawmakers, garnered the attention of a U.S. senator, won her recognition from advocacy groups and helped to change a community.

Because she fought to get her school to comply with the Americans With Disabilities Act, Amanda was more than prepared to enter a statewide contest sponsored by The Disability Policy Consortium.

The contestant who wrote the most compelling letter and contacted the greatest number of legislators would win an overnight expense-paid trip to Capitol Day in Austin, which took place last Wednesday.

Capitol Day is a rally for people with disabilities and their advocates.

As a result of her contacting U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, state Sen. John Montford and state Reps. Robert Duncan, David Counts and Delwin Jones, Amanda earned the opportunity to speak with lawmakers and address the public during Wednesday's rally and voice her concerns for the handicapped.

Amanda, 16, lives in the small farming community of Wilson, in Lynn County.

She is the eldest child in the Burton family, which includes two boys and three girls.

For two years, Amanda and her stepmother struggled to get the Wilson Independent School District wrestling Derek's wheelchair across to renovate the school's gymnasium and make it wheelchair accessible.

Amanda's passion springs from compassion for her 6-year-old stepbrother, Derek, who had trouble attending events at school. Derek cannot walk or talk. He is severely limited by cerebral palsy, a muscular disorder which, in Derek's case, means he has no voluntary control over his body movements.

Despite his limitations, Derek loves to watch his stepsister play basketball and perform in the band, and Amanda wants him to be there to experience the events.

The trouble began early in 1993 when Amanda was on the pep squad.

"I was twirling then, and we had pep rallies and he couldn't be involved," she said. "He likes to be involved with everyone else."

Because of his fragile condition, his mother worried about putting Derek on the gymnasium floor. So she carried him into the gymnasium and up to the bleachers. The gym had no wheelchair ramp.

Mrs. Burton had suffered a fractured sternum in 1992 and tendinitis in her knees was aggravated by lifting the 60-pound boy up to the stands.

"It was hard for me and hard for him," Mrs. Burton said.

When football season rolled around, another aggravation surfaced. Parking was a problem for the Burtons because there were no designated handicapped spaces, and Mrs. Burton often found herself a gravel lot to reach the fence where he could see the action on the field.

Amanda wrote a letter in 1993 requesting handicapped parking at the football field, and the school board approved it. "But nothing ever happened," she said.

Nancy Templeton, district superintendent, said that she called the school's maintenance people and had a handicapped parking sign installed.

"We designated some parking, but we didn't get it permanent until this year," Ms. Templeton said.

Dissatisfied with the school's response, Amanda and her stepmother began a campaign that pitted them against the Wilson Independent School District. They attended school board meetings to plead their case and wrote letters to Ms. Templeton and other board members.

"For months and months, nothing was said about our letters," Mrs.

Burton said. Frustrated and angry, the Burtons complained to Advocacy Incorporated, a nonprofit legal rights organization that supports people with developmental disabilities. The organization sent an attorney to assess the situation.

The attorney advised the school's administration that it would have to comply with the 1990 Americans With Disabilities Act or face legal action.

The school had until January 1995 to comply with the federal law, Ms. Templeton said, so in July she had an engineer submit a list of options to the school board.

"We had a committee who reviewed our facility," Ms. Templeton said. "From the recommendation of the committee, we put in windows in the gym last September." The windows were installed in a room that shared a common wall with the gym.

"We thought the windows would provide reasonable accommodation," Ms. Templeton said.

But the district's attempt to comply with the law failed to placate the

"They decided to put the window in anyway, even though they had been told by a lawyer that it was not access," said Mrs. Burton.

"They wanted to cut a hole in the wall and put him in a room. He needs to be around people," Amanda said.

"Sitting up there alone, behind a window with everyone staring at him. He's not a freak," said Mrs. Burton. 'That's not access; that's segregation."

Finally, last October, Amanda and her stepmother took drastic action. "Amanda and I went to the school board meeting and we asked them, 'Is anything going to be done this year? And they said no," Mrs. Burton said.

So Mrs. Burton filed a civil rights discrimination complaint against the district with the U.S. Department of Education.

After federal officials got involved, the district quickly voted to bring a $500,000 bond initiative to the community, citing the need to build a new gymnasium that would comply with the disabilities law. "We know we didn't have a good situation here," Ms. Templeton said. to rebuild and not only meet the needs of the individual (Derek), but the whole him." community."

1994, and the district signed a Press

"commitment to resolve" agreement on Jan. 20 to halt the civil rights case. Ms. Templeton said that the district agreed to have a new gym built by October 1995. Through the battle, Amanda felt subtle and not-so-subtle pressure from her teachers and fellow students. Nonetheless, Amanda said she will

Bounty hunter tracks down parents to collect child support for a cut

By PEGGY FIKAC Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - When divorced parents have nowhere else to turn for the child support owed their sons and daughters, they hire Casey Hoffman.

The former Massachusetts family law attorney and former head of Texas' child support enforcement program has buil: a business as a bounty hunter, tracking down deadbeat parents.

If he can make them pay, using such tools as wage withholding and liens, he keeps a third of the money owed.

Hoffman said of his clients, "They say to themselves, 'Well, look, I've been getting 100 percent of nothing. Sixty-seven percent of something is better than 100 percent of nothing. What have I got to lose?"

He notes that his Austin-based company, Child Support Enforcement, only takes a cut of the back child support - not future payments. And unlike lawyers who charge large upfront fees, he only gets paid if the custodial parents do.

Those helped by Hoffman, who does work around the country, say he's worth the price.

"I wouldn't care if he took three quarters (of 'the back support). Without him doing it, I'm not getting anything at all," said Michelle Newkamp, 32, a mother of two who lives near Austin in a home she owns thanks to Hoffman's work.

Like most who go to Hoffman, Ms. Newkamp said she first tried but failed to get action from state government, which handles hundreds of thousands of child support enforcement cases.

"The attorney general's office was doing nothing. Where else do you turn?" Ms. Newkamp asked. "I didn't have an option.'

Others say companies like Hoffman's present a choice that parents shouldn't have to make.

"We think he's a vulture, a bloodsucking vulture," said Lynda Milot Benson of Dallas, state president and national board chairwoman of the Association for Children for Enforcement of Support.

"You're a child, and a parent has deserted you. The one parent you have left has gone to the child support this thing around," he said.

you. Now we will go to this person, who will keep part of the money," she said.

But Hoffman is defended as a "God-send" by Susan Roberts, a former ACES member and Oklahoma president of Advocates for Better Child Support, whom he helped in her child support case.

Hoffman said Ms. Benson's dissatisfaction with the state's handling of her child-support case is what sparks her criticism.

Ms. Benson said that has nothing to do with her objections to Hoffman's business, although she criticizes his record as head of Texas' child support enforcement program. He points out that the program was recognized as the nation's most improved after his five years heading

But even Hoffman and Ms. Benson agree on one thing: The huge problem of unpaid child support is hurting children and contributing to the number of families who are either on welfare or teetering on the brink.

Nationally, there was $34 billion in child support that should have been paid in 1992 but was not, according to federal figures cited by Hoffman.

He said that according to one estimate, 40 percent of the children on welfare are the responsibility of parents who can afford to pay

Hoffman and Ms. Benson both support a proposal in the Texas Legislature to take away state licenses of parents who don't pay court-ordered child support.

Hoffman also has testified before a congressional subcommittee for other changes, such as requiring parents who owe child support, rather than the custodial parents, to pay enforcement costs; and requiring weekend jail time for people who repeatedly dodge their responsibility.

To really make a difference in child support enforcement, Hoffman said, society must show disapproval of deadbeat parents. And that disapproval must come from men, he said, since men make of the majority of those who owe support.

"It's going to be out of this personal embarrassment of men worrying about other, men thinking that they're despicable lowlife that's going to turn company can be an important part of the effort to make dodgers live up to their responsibilities.

The state attorney general's office

'We need all the help we can get in the collection of child support," said Ron Dusek, spokesman for the state attorney general's office.

However, he cautions that government doesn't regulate private child support collectors, so parents should do research before hiring one.

"There are some companies out there - and I'm not talking about Casey's - that are not reputable," Dusek Dusek defends the job done by the state, which currently has more than 700,000 child support enforcement cases. Of those, he said, just 340,000 already have the necessary court orders, and the state collects on 44 percent of those - compared with about 18 percent of its overall cases.

Hoffman's company limits the cases it accepts: A parent must be owed a minimum of around $5,000, have a court order and not be receiving the Aid to Families with Dependent Children welfare grant. Nearly half the state's cases are people on welfare; the state recoups welfare expenditures from the support payments made.

While his company collects on 52 percent of its cases, Hoffman said its message to clients is much broader: You will be served no matter what happens in our office.

"If we can't find him, and we can't collect from him, it's time for you to go on with life," he said. "At least you can get peaceful internally."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Please explain the differences and uses for apple cider vinegar and white distilled vinegar.

I am also interested in getting the pamphlet on vinegar. Please rerun the address and price. - Ima Conkling, San Antonio, Texas

Apple cider vinegar is much darker than white vinegar and is widely used in cooking, pickling and spicing up food with a cider flavor. It also adds a darker color to dishes.

Because of its dark color, it may stain clothing or carpeting; therefore, it is not recommended for cleaning jobs even though it has the same acid content as white vinegar.

White vinegar, on the other hand, clear and it's usually less expensive than cider vinegar, which means it can be used in larger quantities for many dirty jobs and not hurt the old pocketbook. This is why I always recommend using white vinegar.

If you'd like a copy of my pamphlet Versatile Vinegar Hints, which also has cleaning and pickling hints in it, please send $2, along with a selfaddressed, stamped (55 cents) legalsize envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001.

Dear Heloise: We have a grape arbor and grow the deep-purple grapes. Every summer I make grape

The other day, as I was processing the grapes, I ended up with two deep-purple hands. Every little crease, crack and crevice looked black, even my fingernails. I got real down in the dumps, as we had a social engagement the next day.

I sat down with a cup of coffee to have a little pity party and then it struck me. On the side of my denture-cleaner box was a statement that said it was strong against stubborn stains. So I filled a small bowl with warm water and soaked my hands for a few minutes.

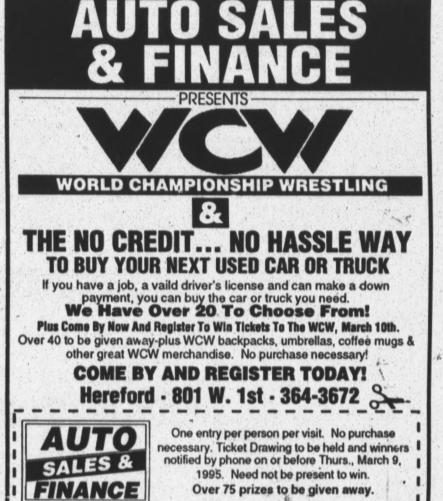

Presto! You would never have known my hands had ever touched a grape. Isn't it something how we find out these little things? - Jeanie

ATLANTA (AP) - Phylicia Rashad didn't forget her college pal Pearl Cleage: She's lending her famous face to the Atlanta playwright's upcoming drama, "Blues for an Alabama Sky."

The "Cosby Show" star will portray an out-of-work singer in Harlem at the start of the Depression in the play written by her Howard University classmate.

"We were building sets together, taking classes together, having a great time," Rashad recalled Tuesday, a little more than two weeks before the play opens for a six-week run.

"Let's work together," she said she told Cleage in 1983, "and here we are today."

Rashad said her only hesitation was being separated from her husband, TV sportscaster Ahmad Rashad, and 8-year-old daughter Phylica, who live in New York.

"My family is the center of my fe," said Rashad, who appeared in roadway's "Jelly's Last Jam" in Fluctuating conditions causing ag concerns COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) Fluctuating weather conditions are we should be ahead of schedule, but causing some concern for the state's the on-again, off-again, weather agricultural producers, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service conditions have not made this possible.

Steve Byrns, Extension communications specialist in San Angelo, said the West Central area hasn't been hurt by weather conditions yet.

"Tonight it is supposed to get swept across the eastern half of Texas down into the 20s and by Saturday it's supposed to be back up into the 80s," Byrns said. "But so far, these conditions haven't caused any hours averaged between one-quarter

"The moisture will aid wheat and one-half inch," he said, "although some places, such as growth, the freeze has slowed pest activity and we have the best wildflower crop in years," he said. While things have been good, it's Zeitler said the front caused temperatures to drop over most of the hard to predict what may happen.

"Yesterday's high in College Station was 81, dropping overnight "You can usually expect one more cold spell around Easter, and with the crazy weather we have experienced, Patrick Hirsch, Henderson County who knows what will happen between now and then," he said. Extension agent in Athens, said peach

Zeitler said high pressure will bring fair skies and cool conditions today and Wednesday.

"A warming trend will begin on Thursday, with fair skies and mild weather expected through the weekend," he said. High temperatures will range from the 40s to lower 60s today, followed by 60s and 70s on Wednesday and Thursday, and 70s and 80s Friday through Sunday. "Low temperatures will range from the 20s to lower 40s tonight and Wednesday night and warm to the 40s and 50s from Thursday through Sunday," Zeitler said.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: short. Land preparation, fertilization active. Wheat crop needs more moisture. Some freeze damage may have occurred on wheat that is beginning to joint. Pastures, ranges declining. Cattle in good condition.

SOUTH PLAINS: very short. Land preparation, fertilizer application, and pre-irrigation continue for crops when weather allows. Pastures, ranges remain dry. Supplemental feeding for livestock ROLLING PLAINS: short to adequate. Wheat fair to good condition; insect pressure low. Minimal damage to jointed wheat due to freezing temperatures. Livestock fair to good.

"With the mild winter we've had, Fruit trees in bloom suffered some damage by freezing temperatures.

NORTH TEXAS: surplus to adequate. Pastures, ranges good to poor. Wheat good to fair. Cattle in good to fair condition; supplemental feeding continues. Ryegrass, clover, small grain pastures improving. Soil conditions

EAST TEXAS: adequate to surplus. Pastures, ranges in fair to good condition. Winter pasture growth impaired by weather. Limited gardening due to weather. Cattle in good condition. Some blooming of early variety peaches.

FAR WEST TEXAS: very short to short. Pastures, ranges need rain. Freeze expected to damage fruit due to many trees that have already bloomed. Irrigating onions; cutting, baling alfalfa hay. Calving out cattle; supplemental feeding continues. WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: short to adequate. Moisture will aid wheat growth. Freeze slowed pest activity, damaged early blooming fruit trees. Livestock conditions good; supplemental feeding continues. Ranges, pastures showing signs of winter utilization.

CENTRAL TEXAS: adequate. Winter grasses should improve with recent moisture. Livestock stressed due to cold, wet conditions. Wheat infected with leaf rust. Spring gardens being planted: onions, cabbage, broccoli, other cole crops. SOUTHEAST TEXAS: adequate. Pastures, ranges in good condition; some rain reported. Planting corn. Preparing land for spring gardens. Some peach trees blooming. Livestock in fair condition. SOUTHWEST TEXAS: adequate. Fluctuating temperatures affecting fruit trees. Peach, apple, redbud trees are blooming. Summer grasses in pastures greening up early. Small grains progressing well. Livestock in good

COASTAL BEND: adequate. Corn being planted; land preparation occurring where dry enough to get into fields. Cattle in good conditions; market steady. Home gardens, early vegetables being planted. Peach trees are blooming.

SOUTH TEXAS: short to adequate. Cotton planting active. Corn 90 percent planted, cotton 50 percent planted, sorghum 75 percent planted. Sugarcane harvest continues. Pastures, ranges fair to good. Livestock fair.

AUSTIN (AP) - Despite a strong statewide property rights movement against setting aside more land to protect endangered species, a new study shows Texans are in favor of such action.

According to the "Texas Environmental Survey" released Tuesday, Texans are willing to make economic sacrifices to protect waterways and wildlife; put pollution control before job creation; and would support a law requiring a statewide recycling program.
The December 1994 survey directed by Rice University sociology professor Stephen L. Klineberg was questioned by state property rights movement leader Marshall E. Kuykendall Sr. of Austin, who heads the group Take Back Texas.

"I haven't seen the study, but if you ask all the ranchers in Texas if they want more land set aside for endangered species, you are going to hear loud opposition," Kuykendall

"If you ask all the folks in downtown Houston or Dallas, they are going to say, 'Sure, we would like more land set aside for endangered species in the Hill Country.' My gut feeling is we didn't hear from too many of the ranchers." The survey, conducted during the first 2-1/2 weeks of December, shows that Texans feel less strongly about environmental concerns than in similar surveys conducted in 1992 and 1990.

Klineberg said, "The lessening of environmentally pro-active sentiment was in keeping with the antigovernment mood of the elections and with the relative lack of media attention paid to environmental issues during the past few years." "But the commitment to environmental protection remains surprisingly strong in Texas," he said.

When asked if more tax money should be spent to set aside and protect wilderness areas for endanered species in Texas, 56 percent of the respondents said they were supportive, while 37 percent were opposed, according to the study.

"People believe that government interferes too much in our daily lives," Klineberg said. "But what has now become a deep Texas belief is that the environment of the state needs to be protected. "People say quite dramatically that when it comes to an issue of property rights vs. protecting the environment, limitations on property rights are justified." Kuykendall, who organized a property rights rally at the Capitol this summer that drew several thousand people, said the federal government and the Texas Legislature are showing "movement to protect our property rights." He said his group would support setting aside land for endangered species only if it didn't involve private property. The study, conducted by the Houston research firm Telesurveys of Texas, is based on a random telephone survey of 1,000 households and has a margin of error of 3.5

Survey findings outlined

AUSTIN (AP) - Findings of the Texas Environmental Survey, conducted by the Rice University department of sociology. The survey is based on a random telephone sample of 1,000 Texas households and has a margin of error of 3.5 percent. The statements or questions are written as they were posed to the respondents.

- Is government trying to do too much, not doing enough, or doing just about the right amount to protect the environment in Texas? 39 percent said right amount; 38 percent said not enough; 14 percent said too much.

- A law requiring people to recycle their trash? 71 percent said they were in favor; 26 percent said they were opposed; 3 percent said they

- Spending more tax money to set aside and protect wilderness areas endangered species in Texas? 56 percent were in favor; 37 percent

- Locating a new plant in the community would employ a thousand people but would also cause a substantial increase in pollution. 71 percent said they would be opposed to the plant; 21 percent would be in favor; 8 percent didn't know.

- Pollution control measures have created costs that are unfair to industry. 52 percent disagreed; 39 percent agreed.

- Higher gasoline taxes to encourage more efficient cars and more use of buses and trains? 64 percent were opposed; 31 percent were in favor.

Stronger government regulation is necessary to control industrial pillution. 72 percent said they agreed; 23 percent said they disagreed.
 We should think of jobs first and pollution second. 51 percent disagreed;

Help IGA Raise $1,000,000!

Please help your local IGA, and IGA stores all across America raise $1,000,000 to help support our country's sponsorship of the "1995 Special Olympics World Games" to be held July 1-9, 1995.

Each time you buy and deposit any label or Proof of Purchase from IGA, Rainbow, Marquee or Marquee Premium products through June 30, 1995, you'll be donating 2¢ towards IGA's nationwide effort to feed over 8,900 athletes & coaches from 129 countries! Ask your local IGA store manager for details on how your company or organization can help participate.
