4-H group plant trees at the 17th hole

The Little Peppers 4-H group planted two trees recently at the Pitman Municipal Golf Course. The girls have been participating in Horticultural activities throughout the year. The club finished the year long horticulture project by planting 2 locust trees on the 17th hole of the golf course. The Hereford Beautification Alliance provided the trees that were planted.

Tax rebate to city reflects addition of half-cent levy

Hereford's April sales tax rebate from the state of Texas totalled $68,763.68, according to an announcement by Comptroller John Sharp.

On paper, that is a 5.95 percent increase over the $45,253.27 received in April 1994.

However, the large jump is due to the new half-cent sales tax increased approved by voters last year that took effect on Jan. 1.

The April check reflects sales taxes collected on sales in February and reported to the Comptroller's office in March.

For the year to date, Hereford has received $261,753.30 in sales tax rebates, up 14.95 percent from the $227,702.74 last year.

The city collects a total of 1.5 percent sales tax on taxable purchases in the city. Of that, one-half cent is designated for economic development.

Deaf Smith County, which does not receive any of the extra half-cent sales tax money, charges a one-half cent county sales tax, along with four Texas counties to no 50.

For April, the county received $26,448.81, which is a jump of 9.37 percent above the $24,180.88 received in April 1994.

For 1995, the county has received $118,194.52, which is 1.01 percent above the $117,002.19 last year.

Across Texas, Sharp said, sales tax rebates totalled $112.4 million for cities and $11.2 million for counties.

Overall, the statewide tax rebates were 10.2 percent higher for cities, but 1.6 percent lower for counties.

Below are sales tax rebate figures for towns in counties around Hereford. The figures are for the April payment, the April 1994 payment and the difference between the two:

Castro County -- Dimmit, $12,372.49; $21,828.31, down 43.31 percent; Hart, $1,017.69; $849.37, up 19.95 percent; Nazareth, $768.75; $797.08, down 3.55 percent.

Oldham County -- Adrian, $255.28; $0, unable to compute change; Vega, $1,708.50; $1,263.11, up 35.26 percent.

Parmer County -- Bovina, $1,724.51; $1,428.96, up 20.68 percent; Farwell, $2,445.27; $2,369.82, up 3.18; Friona, $8,057.33; $7,412.48, up 8.69 percent.

Potter County -- Amarillo, $2,388,989.58; $2,094,451.56, up 14.06 percent.

Randall County -- Canyon, $33,194.61; $33,649.56, down 1.35 percent.

Death toll rises, pair of suspects sought in building bombing

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN

AP National Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - The death toll rose to 57 today in the deadliest terrorist bombing in U.S. history. Investigators, scouring the heartland and far beyond, issued warrants for two John Doe suspects and said the bombing appeared to be the work of homegrown terrorists, not those from abroad.

As the death toll climbed, Assistant Fire Chief Jon Hansen raised the possibility of more heartbreak. Hansen said firefighters have searched through about three quarters of the building, but that the remaining one-quarter included the area of a day-care center.

President Clinton, declaring a national day of mourning on Sunday for the bombing victims, addressed himself to young people:

"And my message to the children is that this was an evil thing. And the people who did it were terribly, horribly wrong. We will catch them and we will punish them."

Clinton said he and Hillary Clinton would go to Oklahoma City on Sunday for a memorial service. He urged Americans not to "jump to unwarranted conclusions" about the perpetrators of the bombing.

The investigation has been surrounded by a whirlwind of rumors, speculation and unconfirmed reports, some of them laying blame on Middle Eastern terrorists, American right-wing extremists and drug dealers targeting the office of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency.

Federal authorities say they have rejected this last theory. "The drug theory is bogus," one law enforcement official said. "It came from a faulty informant."

The same official said of the case: "This looks less international as we move along and get more information about these two suspects."

Weldon Kennedy, the FBI's on-site commander in Oklahoma City, said he had not discounted any theories of the case. "We are not ruling out any motive or any area of investigation at this point," he said at a late morning briefing.

Kennedy also said investigators were analyzing a film from a surveillance camera at a nearby building. However, he said it was damaged, and added that he did not know if it contained anything significant.

Despite Kennedy's insistence that the investigation was still wide open, there were signs that the theories of international terrorism were somewhat deflated.

A Palestinian-American who was detained in London and sent back to the United States on Thursday was released today. The man had left Oklahoma City shortly after the bombing, and flew from Chicago to London.

"We let him go," Justice Department spokesman John Russell

See other stories,
Pages 2 and 9

said. "He's free to go wherever he wants and I understand he's going back to Oklahoma City."

At one point this morning, Gov. Frank Keating said on national television that about 50 more bodies were found in one section of the Alfred P. Murrah federal building. But federal emergency officials quickly said the governor was wrong, and his spokesman conceded the error.

Investigators fanned out in a wide manhunt for the two suspects described by the FBI. The agency issued drawings of them Thursday, which suggested that a tattoo and a crew cut were about all that distinguished them from countless other medium-build white men. They were believed to have rented the truck that carried the half-ton homemade bomb, FBI Agent Weldon Kennedy said.

As President Clinton promised "swift and certain and severe" justice, Attorney General Janet Reno announced a $2 million reward for information leading to arrests.

Aren Almon, mother of a 1-year-old girl who died in the explosion, said through sobs that she wanted the killers to know the grief they caused.

"If they do catch these criminals," she said in a television interview, "maybe they'll see this and see how much they've hurt me, and hurt my family and hurt other people. They destroyed our lives, and our homes."

Earth Day founder calls for stop to squabbling in ranks

By H. JOSEPH HEBERT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The success of the environmental movement can be seen in the air over America's industrial plants. The yellow haze is virtually gone.

Rivers no longer catch fire because of pollution as one did a quarter-century ago. And the American bald eagle, once about gone, is making a comeback, partly because of the banning of DDT.

But marking the 25th anniversary of the first Earth Day on Saturday, environmental scholars fret that some of the progress is being threatened by a hostile Congress and predict the environmental challenges of the next 25 years will be far more difficult.

"The real question is: What happens now?" says Denis Hayes, who organized the first Earth Day rally in 1970. In a speech to be delivered today, he calls on environmentalists to regroup, stop squabbling among themselves and fashion a new strategy for the future.

"We've made tremendous progress ... and should take a moment to celebrate," Carol Browner, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, said in an interview.

But she acknowledged that over the past 25 years, "we've done the easy things" and the environmental problems of today and challenges of tomorrow "are in many ways more difficult to resolve."

In a speech Thursday at the National Press Club, Browner accused the new Congress of trying to "casually turn back the clock" and gut many of the landmark environmental laws the original Earth Day inspired. "In the past 100 days we've seen actions that threaten to roll back the progress of 25 years," she said.

Browner said regulatory reform proposals already passed by the House as part of the GOP's "Contract With America" would allow special interests to "tie up the work that we do, tie up the public health protections we seek to set."

The House has approved bills that would require the EPA and other regulators to perform more elaborate cost-benefit and risk assessment reviews, as well as legislation to require payment for losses in property values that result from enforcement of wetlands or endangered species laws. A House committee has approved an overhaul of the 1972 Clean Water Act the EPA says would drastically weaken its ability to reduce water pollution.

Today, the air is cleaner, the water clearer and industry is spewing out fewer toxic chemicals. Sewage is no longer routinely dumped into lakes and streams. The erosion of wetlands has slowed.

The Cuyahoga River near Cleveland, which once caught fire because of pollution, is suitable for fishing. Children no longer breathe air filled with lead from passing automobiles and there is less smog, even though the number of cars has tripled. Corporations are finding out that pollution reduction can be profitable.

While some environmentalists worry about backsliding on such issues as clean water and healthy air, new and more complex ecological challenges are ahead.

"We have solved some of the problems that are easier to solve," says Fred Krupp, executive director of the Environmental Defense Fund. "Now we have remaining problems that are going to be tougher."

Committee wants to give teachers raises

HOUSTON (AP) - Some Texas teachers may soon be paid more than the average of their colleagues across the country.

A House committee voted

Thursday to raise salaries by as much as $8,000 for teachers with more than 20 years experience and to increase the minimum starting pay by $5,000.

The House Public Education Committee unanimously agreed to the pay package, which was even higher than what the teachers wanted.

The measure's sponsor, state Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, said the plan would cost the state an extra $201 million over the next biennium.

The current average starting pay for Texas teachers is $21,700 and the overall average teacher salary in Texas is $30,000. The national average is $35,000.

A House-Senate conference committee is trying to work out the differences between the two chambers' version of the state spending plan, but Sadler said he is convinced the money can be found.

Two men, Robert L. Ansley, 23, of Prius, and Danny Lee Ward, 20, of Hereford, are named on a single indictment for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Both men are in jail on bond of $5,000.

An indictment for burglary of a house was returned against Jessie

Mendoza, 17, of 217 Campbell. He posted bond of $5,000.

OKLAHOMA CITY - Digging for signs of life as time ran low, searchers found only more bodies, making the bombing of the federal building the deadliest such attack in U.S. history. Investigators scouring the heartland and far beyond issued arrest warrants and sketches of a pair of John Doe suspects.

OMAHA, Neb. - A mesh fence and about five feet is all that separates some parking meters from the jungle gym and slide at the day care center in Omaha's Zorinsky federal building.

Mayor Hal Daub was thinking about those five public meters - and their proximity to frolicking children - as he and leaders in other Midwestern cities reviewed their own security measures and tried to calm residents' fears following the deadly bombing in Oklahoma City.

OKLAHOMA CITY - Muslim groups around the nation denounced the bombing of a federal building and feared they could become targets of a violent backlash.

"We wholeheartedly condemn what happened. Yet immediately, Arab-Americans became guilty by association," said Hamzi Mograhi, chairman of the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee.

LOS ANGELES - As a flight attendant, juror No. 453 spent a lot of time sleeping in hotels, and several months of sequestration in the O.J. Simpson trial, she once guessed, would be "no problem."

It didn't turn out that way.

"I can't take it anymore," the 25-year-old woman told Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, defense attorneys and prosecutors in a private meeting in which she asked to be released from the case.

WHITE CLOUD, Mich. - Charla Engelmeyer was a bruised and frightened first-grader when she asked for help. Ten years later, it looks like she finally might get it - two lives too late.

The 16-year-old high school sophomore pleaded guilty in juvenile court this week to two counts of voluntary manslaughter for fatally shooting her parents, who she said were abusing her and her three younger brothers.

WASHINGTON - Most folks don't lose sleep worrying about the relationship of the federal government's three branches. How Newt Gingrich and Bill Clinton get along is for most a source of amusement. But nine American academics and politicians - the members of the Supreme Court - still care deeply about the 200-year-old concept, and they had some bad news for Congress on that score this week.

MOSCOW - With just a few words, Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev has caused an uproar in the former Soviet Union. Those words added up to a formula that sent tremors from the Baltic to the Black Seas and beyond this week: Russia will use its armed might to defend its interests and compatriots abroad.

State

AUSTIN - Gov. George W. Bush has taken the first step toward fulfilling his campaign promise of lawsuit reform, signing a key bill to limit money injured Texans can receive from individuals or companies punished for wrongdoing. "Law," Bush said Thursday after signing the bill limiting punitive damages.

DALLAS - A 24-year-old New York man has secluded himself in a North Dallas apartment after he was questioned by federal agents about the terrorist bombing of an Oklahoma City federal building. The arrest, questioning and release of Anis Siddiqi was part of the Texas end of the global manhunt for two suspects in the Wednesday bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

DALLAS - More bomb threats across the state forced thousands of people to evacuate government facilities and day care centers, but most Texans tried to carry on after a fierce bomb attack north of the state's border.

CORPUS CHRISTI - Fumes that spread for miles from a barge-tanker collision posed minimal long-term health risks for thousands of people who were forced to evacuate, authorities say. The tanker Maersk Shetland collided with a barge late Thursday morning in Corpus Christi Bay, forcing the shutdown of the nation's sixth-busiest ship channel and the evacuation of a Navy port.

AUSTIN - The winner of $12.3 million from a Lotto Texas jackpot drawing last Oct. 26 has until midnight Monday to claim the prize or lose it. The winning ticket was sold in Flower Mound, northwest of Dallas.

HOUSTON - A fax copy does not meet established legal standards for court documents in criminal cases, an appeals court has ruled.

HOUSTON - Continental Airlines says its passengers can bypass long lines before airport ticket desks and head straight to the gate, stopping only to pick up a boarding pass from a machine similar to an ATM. The Houston-based airline has joined the trend toward ticketless travel by introducing the automated ticket agents.

LAMESA - When a group of Lamesa High School students found out that Dawson County drivers were not buckling up, they decided to do something about it. In a big way. They performed skits, fired off letters to legislators and dressed up in Vince and Larry crash-dummy suits. Two weeks ago, the seat-belt bunch was rewarded for its efforts when it took top honors in the state's Future Problem Solving Program.

Search extends from farm to airports

Investigators seeking information, leads on bombers

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Authorities searched from farm supply stores in rural Kansas to airports in London and Rome in their effort to capture those responsible for the deadly bombing of a federal building.

FBI agents and other authorities mobilized Thursday to carry out President Clinton's pledge to capture the culprits. As investigators scoured the rubble of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building for clues, other authorities were:

- Asking questions at Elliott's Body Shop and Geary Grain in Junction City, Kan., 170 miles to the northwest.

- Studying luggage seized in Rome's airport which contained possible bomb-making materials.

- Inspecting records at a National Car Rental counter at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

- Carrying boxes out of a North Dallas apartment visited by a New York City cab driver named Asad R. Siddiqi.

- Questioning motorists heading toward Mexico.

"There are so many leads at this point, it's just crazy," said Gail Spratt, a spokeswoman for National Car Rental System Inc. "We're just one of many."

The mid-size truck that probably carried the explosives was rented from Elliott's Body Shop in Junction City, Kan., authorities said. The truck belonged to Miami-based Ryder System Inc. A vehicle identification number from a piece of truck axle was used to trace the truck, said Gov. Frank Keating.

Geary County (Kan.) Sheriff Bill Deppish said an FBI artist accompanied investigators to Junction City and talked to witnesses for descriptions of two white males in their 20s believed to have used aliases to rent the truck Monday.

The men are named as "John Doe" in arrest warrants, said Weldon Kennedy, special agent in charge of the FBI's on-site investigation.

FBI agents swarming through Junction City also questioned farm dealers about recent sales of ammonium nitrate and other chemicals that can be used for explosives.

The two suspects believed to have rented the truck also were tied to a car that witnesses said was seen speeding away from the federal building about the time of the explosion. The FBI combed National Car Rental records Thursday amid reports the rented vehicle came from the Dallas-Fort Worth airport.

At London's Heathrow Airport, immigration authorities stopped an Oklahoma City man arriving on a flight from Chicago, then sent him to Washington for questioning late Thursday. The Jordanian-American man, identified as an engineer named Abraham Ahmad, was described as "a possible witness" by Attorney General Janet Reno.

Ahmad's Jordan-bound luggage was seized by Italian authorities at Rome's airport. They said the three burgundy-and-brown vinyl suitcases contained materials that could be used in bomb-making - electrical tape, silicone, aluminum foil, a hammer and tweezers - and a photo album with pictures of missiles and weapons.

One of Ahmad's Oklahoma City neighbors saw him loading the luggage in his car as he left town Wednesday morning.

"I thought, 'My God. That's a big suitcase for such a little car,'" recalled Ute Draper, who lives across the street from the one-story cinderblock home of Ahmad, his wife and their two young daughters.

In Dallas, brothers Anis Siddiqi, 24, and Asad R. Siddiqi, 27, were arrested Wednesday for questioning. Also detained was their associate, Mohammed Chafi of Dallas, Anis Siddiqi said. A law enforcement source told The AP that Siddiqi arrived in Oklahoma City about an hour before the blast.

"They questioned me for like 16 hours and let me out at 9 o'clock this morning. They took everything in this apartment. After I think they were satisfied, they left me," Anis Siddiqi said Thursday night during an interview in Chafi's empty North Dallas apartment.

He denied any involvement in the bombing.

"I've never been there. I've never been to Oklahoma City," he said. "I'm sure about my brother. He's not that kind of religious fanatic. He drinks; he does several things Muslims don't do."

Anis Siddiqi was still in custody at midnight Thursday, authorities said.

Anis Siddiqi said he and his brother came to Dallas on Tuesday to seek documents for an emergency return to their Middle Eastern homeland, believing they could obtain them faster there than in New York. He refused to identify his homeland, saying the public "might blame my country" for the bombing.

The apartment was searched Wednesday night by officers from the FBI, U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and Dallas police. A Dallas police spokesman, Jim Spencer, referred all comment to ATF, which did not return telephone calls.

A copy of a search warrant left in the apartment showed that authorities seized a black bag containing clothing, a calendar and an address book.

The items were sent for testing at a federal laboratory near Washington after a bomb-sniffing dog indicated the bags may have been exposed to chemicals used in explosives, officials told The Dallas Morning News.

Explosion developments

By The Associated Press

Developments in the bombing of the Oklahoma City federal office building:

CASUALTIES: Death toll of 57, including 12 children, sure to rise. SUSPECTS: Warrants issued for two white men FBI suspected of using aliases to rent truck that was loaded with explosives and used to blow up the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

INVESTIGATION: In London, a Jordanian-American described by U.S. officials as a possible witness in the attack, was put on a plane back to the United States for questioning. Italian officials said his bags, seized in Rome, contained possible bomb-making tools. In Dallas, a Middle Eastern cab driver from New York City questioned; law enforcement source said he arrived in Oklahoma City about an hour before the blast.

THE BOMB: Investigators said truck was rented April 17, packed with 1,000-1,200 pounds of fuel-and-fertilizer explosives, and parked outside building.

REWARD: $2 million for leads to bombers offered by Attorney General Janet Reno.

SECURITY: Six weeks ago, federal agents reviewed security at the building and decided one guard patrolling four buildings was sufficient. On Thursday, President Clinton ordered more protection for all federal buildings.

HISTORY: Before the Oklahoma City bombing, the deadliest on U.S. soil was in 1927, when a man fearful he couldn't pay property taxes blew up a school near Lansing, Mich., with dynamite. Forty-five people, 38 of them children, were killed.

Jurors, alternates stage mini-revolt

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Thirteen jurors and alternates in the O.J. Simpson case protested coming to court today because of the dismissal of three deputies guarding the jury in a sheriff's department source said.

The panelists asked to speak to the judge and were told they had to come to court to do that, because the judge wouldn't come to them.

The sheriff's official said the jurors and alternates involved were on their way to the Criminal Courts Building. Some were wearing black.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito on Thursday ordered that the three deputies be removed, apparently in response to complaints by a dismissed juror that some white members of the panel got preferential treatment.

The judge's decision angered Sheriff Sherman Block, who said the judge didn't even interview the deputies involved.

"I just think it is wholly inappropriate to take the action that he did relative to these deputies," Block said, adding that the slow pace of the trial was to blame for juror discontent.

"I have every confidence that the deputies performed their duties professionally and consistent with their responsibility," he said.

The turmoil came the day after one juror, a 25-year-old black woman, told Ito, "I can't take it anymore."

She asked to be released from the case, according to a transcript of her comments. There was no immediate action for her request.

Thursday was the 100th day of sequestration. Jury-related problems shifted the trial's focus away from the start of testimony by a rookie criminalist who collected most of the evidence in the case.

Commenting before today's developments, law professor Myrna Raeder of Southwestern University said Ito made "an excellent decision" - even if the deputies didn't do anything wrong.

"It really seems to me if enough individuals have a perception that the deputies were exacerbating ... racial tension, then they should be removed, because the comfort of the jury panel as a whole is what we have to ensure," Raeder said.

Meanwhile, criminalist Andrea Mazzola took the witness stand following nine days of testimony by her supervisor, Dennis Fung. Mazzola, who returns to court today, testified about minor paperwork lapses and inconsistencies in her statements, but no serious errors were elicited.

Simpson's lawyers have accused Mazzola of bungling evidence collection. She told the jury that she immediately logged every item she handled but one - a vial containing Simpson's blood, which wasn't booked until June 14, 1994, the day after it was collected.

Asked by prosecutor Hank Goldberg why she waited, Mazzola said, "Our checklist was locked in the back of the truck and we had to get back (to the crime lab) to prepare evidence."

Although the talk was supposed to be secret, The Associated Press obtained a copy of the exchange, which was inadvertently released by court reporters through an electronic service that provides instantaneous transcripts.

"What's up?" Ito asked.

"I would like to be released," said the woman.

"Why?" the judge asked.

"... Because I can't take it anymore," she answered.

"Is it the things that we talked about?" the judge asked.

"It's just a combination of things throughout the past three months," she responded.

During jury selection, the woman was asked by Ito how she would feel about spending the next six months in a hotel.

"I would imagine you ... have stayed in many hotels," Ito said, noting the woman's career.

"Yes," she answered, "so I guess it wouldn't really be a problem. I'm used to staying in hotels."

Southwestern University law professor Robert Pugsley said it was unlikely Ito would dismiss the juror without further investigation. Then, Pugsley said, the judge should let her go only if there was evidence of misconduct, a medical reason or some emergency.

"I think that Judge Ito would be well-advised not to let her off because it would set a very dangerous precedent," Pugsley said. "There's any number of jurors and alternates ... who have equally good reasons and are equally fed up with being on this jury."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am one of the few remaining fossils who chooses not to be a slave to an answering machine in my residence. I have one at work because my job requires it. Am I inconsiderate because I don't want to have one in my home?

I've asked friends and family to call me weekdays after 7 p.m. or during weekends. And yet people, even those I consider good friends, are becoming militantly hostile because they cannot leave messages.

Recently, a book club member refused to attend a meeting at my house because she was unable to leave a message on my answering machine. Is this electronic gadget becoming a social requirement? What do others think? I am -- Taking Umbrage in Virginia

DEAR UMBRAGE: An answering machine is a great convenience for those who wish to be available to everyone.

Life, however, can function quite smoothly without one. I do not have such a gadget in my office or my home, and I cannot imagine wanting one.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You printed a letter from "Torn Mother in Fort Lauderdale," whose daughter's room looked like a cyclone hit it. Her husband, "Andy," reached the boiling point. Tell her she hasn't seen anything.

I have three grandsons and have been trying to think how I could possibly describe their rooms. "Total disaster" is the closest I can come. When all three boys were in high school, I'd go over to visit their mother in the morning and try to help. I'd go through their bedrooms, picking up clothes, turning off the lights, TV sets, ceiling fans, whatever.

A hanger was an alien object to these boys, and their clothes were in piles on the floor or hanging on door knobs and on the backs of chairs. All three boys had to do their own laundry. Where they put it and how they could find anything to wear was a mystery to me. They seemed to manage, however, and always looked OK.

This is what happened to the slob: The oldest was valedictorian of his class with a perfect 4.0 grade point average. He won a scholarship to Washington University and was No. 1 in his class. He then went to Duke University medical school where he was also No. 1.

The second "slob" had a 3.9 average, won a scholarship to Duke in engineering and will graduate this June.

The third boy had a 3.8 average and has a scholarship in athletics to Washington University.

So tell Andy to lay off. It's not important. -- Clearwater, Fla.

DEAR FLA.: Your letter will give hope to all parents of slobs. Thanks for the day-brightener.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a divorced woman with two attractive, highly motivated children, both in high school.

I am dating a fine man my own age who also has two children. They are the same ages as mine, but poor students and spoiled rotten.

This man wants to marry me. The problem? His kids don't get along with mine. Any advice? -- VCX

DEAR VCX: You need to see a good counselor who will talk with both families and give you a frank appraisal. It would be a crying shame to pass up an opportunity to have a good life because of the children. Before you know it, they will be gone and you will be alone -- with your regrets.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You printed a letter from "Torn Mother in Fort Lauderdale," whose daughter's room looked like a cyclone hit it. Her husband, "Andy," reached the boiling point. Tell her she hasn't seen anything.

Cowboys need good draft Dallas looking for depth at all positions

By DENNIE H. FREEMAN

AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - No mistakes. No excuses. The Dallas Cowboys have to score some big hits in this weekend's NFL draft.

"We can't have any misses or mistakes this time," said quarterback Troy Aikman. "This is a critical draft for us. We have a lot of needs to fill."

Without Jimmy Johnson guiding the draft last year, the Cowboys made only one pick that helped them. It came in the second round when they took a chance on offensive tackle Larry Allen from tiny Sonoma State. Allen eventually became a starter when Erik Williams was hurt in an automobile accident.

The rest of the picks were busts, including first round selection defensive end Shante Carver of Arizona State. The Cowboys moved from 28th to 23rd to get Carver, who played sparingly.

Also, Dallas failed to get any players for the special teams which dropped in caliber of play. Running back Derrick Lassie scored a season-ending knee injury while pressed into service on the special teams.

Dallas is picking from the 28th spot again, barring a trade, and has eight selections scattered through the draft until the 28th pick in the seventh round, the 236th overall.

The Cowboys have depth problems at every position but none greater help at fullback and running back and could use another gifted wide receiver because Alvin Harper went to Tampa Bay.

They have depth problems in the defensive line and at linebacker.

"It could be we'll pick the best athlete available," said owner Jerry Jones. "We need backups and special team players."

The Cowboys also could trade out of the first round.

"That's possible," Jones said. "We'll be successful going into draft day if nobody knows what our thoughts are."

The Cowboys are defensive about their lukewarm success in the draft last year.

"Shane wasn't a bust, we just didn't have an opportunity to play him," said coach Barry Switzer. "He will play this year and will play well."

Switzer fined Carver last year for attitude problems.

"I don't know what we would have done without Allen and we did have a few surprises and disappointments in the later rounds," Switzer said.

Lacewell did give a tip on the kind of players the Cowboys would be taking.

"We've spent most of our time evaluating special team type players who might be available in the middle rounds," Lacewell said.

The Cowboys need quality backup than in the offensive line. Williams is in trouble with the law again in an incident involving a 17-year-old girl and the Cowboys aren't looking for him to be available this season.

Immediate help may not be on the way from the draft.

"There are two or three guys that get your attention in the offensive line and maybe one or two more but after that it (the talent level) drops dramatically," said Larry Lacewell, Cowboys director of pro and college scouting.

Dallas needs help in the secondary, particularly at safety where James Washington accepted an offer from the Washington Redskins.

Oilers hope to fly Air McNair

By MICHAEL GRACZYK

Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The 1994 season was so bad for the Houston Oilers that even an NFL-worst 2-14 record did not merit the Oilers the usual overall top pick in this weekend's college player draft.

Houston had the misfortune of being terrible the same year the NFL expands, and new teams in Carolina and Jacksonville will pick ahead of the Oilers, who must settle for the No. 3 selection overall when the draft begins Saturday.

While Houston general manager Floyd Reese won't say specifically who the team covets, his eyes light up when talk turns to Alcorn State quarterback Steve McNair.

Reese says there are perhaps eight or nine "franchise" players in this year's draft. McNair - speedy, elusive, strong-armed, 6-foot-1 and 223 pounds - is one of them, he says. And the Oilers for the long-term need a quarterback.

"If you get a franchise player and fill a need, you can kill two birds with one stone," he says.

Mike Holovak, who Reese succeeded as GM and remains vice president of personnel and scouting, says McNair is the best quarterback prospect he's seen.

Reese insists he's not frightened by McNair's lack of big-time opposition at Alcorn.

"In my mind, a kid coming from that situation has a better chance of being better in a better environment," he says. "They won eight games. Without him, they win zero."

Oilers scout Glenn Cumbee drools that McNair eventually will drive defensive coordinators crazy with his arm and running ability.

Houston also likes Florida defensive lineman Kevin Carter and Colorado receiver Michael Westbrook. Both fill Reese's definition of a franchise player, but neither is likely to be around if the Oilers wait for the second round, where their pick is the 35th overall.

"Oh, it's critical," Reese says of his first selection. "This guy - the third pick ... at some time in his career should hit a string of Pro Bowls."

He won't rule out a trade - up or down - and says each NFL team has contacted him about a deal for the No. 3 overall pick.

The first two rounds of the draft take place Saturday. Rounds three through seven are set for Sunday.

"We have to come out of this draft filling X-number of needs," Reese says. "You can't take care of every need. We know that."

Houston has signed free agent ex-Rams quarterback Chris Chandler, but he's viewed by many as a stopgap. Career backup Cody Carlson in 1994 was tabbed successor to Warren Moon, who was dealt to Minnesota a year ago.

Carlson, however, was hobbled by injuries all season and the Oilers were forced to go with erratic Bucky

Richardson and journeyman Billy Joe Tolliver.

The results were disastrous.

After making the playoffs seven straight years, the Oilers tumbled to the NFL basement. The offense wound up rated 26th in the league. The defense finished 28th and last.

Coach Jack Pardee was fired and the once-potent run-and-shoot offense was scrapped under new coach Jeff Fisher, who began the year as the Oilers defensive coordinator.

Barring last-minute deals, Houston has nine selections, including three in the third round. Besides their own pick in the third round, the 67th overall, they have Minnesota's No. 3 selection from the Moon trade and the 95th pick overall as compensation for free agent losses.

Reese says it's likely he'll draft at least one defensive lineman, an area where the team also is weak.

Other areas of need are at receiver, where the Oilers cast of small receivers used in the run-and-shoot is out of sync with the more traditional attack run by Fisher and his new offensive coordinator, Jerry Rhome.

Look also for the team to take a defensive back or two and an offensive lineman.

Despite the 1994 debacle, Reese does not see the draft as the start of a rebuilding program. He sees the Oilers contending for a playoff spot this year and a Super Bowl spot soon.

"Our objective has to be to win the Super Bowl," he says. "To do anything else, we'd be spinning our wheels. You have to look at that as the goal. Anything less has to be considered failure."

Girls' junior high district track meet set Saturday at Whiteface Stadium

The Hereford baseball team will try to shake a five-game losing streak when it hosts Canyon Saturday.

Hereford hasn't won since March 28, when the Herd beat Dumas to improve to 2-1 in District 1-4A. Now the Herd is 2-5 in district--in sixth place--and 5-14 overall. Canyon is fifth in the district at 3-4 and 8-10-1.

The game starts at 1 p.m. at Whiteface Field. The school's junior varsity teams will play in the second game of the doubleheader, which will start at about 4 p.m.

Hereford will also host the district track meet for girls' junior high track teams Saturday at Whiteface Stadium. Eighth and seventh grade teams from six schools will participate: Hereford, Borger, Canyon, Dumas, Pampa and Valleyview.

The regional tournaments for tennis, golf and track are next week, all in San Angelo. The tennis and golf tournaments will be Monday and Tuesday, while the regional track meet will be Friday and Saturday.

Boxer Schulz gets spotlight vs. Foreman

LAS VEGAS (AP) - The most momentous event in Axel Schulz's life was the collapse of the Berlin Wall and the resulting demise of his East German Army boxing team.

Being plucked from obscurity to fight George Foreman for the heavyweight title may rank a close second.

The unlikely saga of the former East German amateur heavyweight climaxes Saturday night when he fights 46-year-old Foreman for the IBF version of the heavyweight crown.

"This is his one great, great chance in the spotlight," promoter Bob Arum said in a rare understatement.

A virtual unknown even in his native Germany only a few months ago, Schulz is now so hot that more than 100 members of the German media are in this gambling resort covering his every move.

Another 2,000 German fans are expected for the fight itself, while millions of others will get up early Sunday morning to watch the bout live on German television.

"In Germany, this fight is an event many, many people are looking forward to," German promoter Wilfried Sauerland said.

Reardon retires, stands at second on saves list

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

While baseball was talking about welcoming back fans, the game was saying goodbye to some familiar faces.

Jeff Reardon, invited to spring training at age 39 by the Montreal Expos, retired Thursday after a 16-year career.

"I felt I wasn't helping the team and I decided it was better if I retired now, instead of later," said Reardon, second on the career saves list with 367.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, meanwhile, released one-time wunderkind Tim Wakefield.

Wakefield nearly pitched the Pirates into the 1992 World Series with his knuckleball. But he never recaptured that success, going 5-15 in the minors last season and struggling this spring.

"The Pirates gave me every opportunity to prove myself these last years and I didn't produce," said Wakefield, 28.

Also, the Texas Rangers announced that manager Johnny Oates has been given a two-week leave of absence to be with his wife, who is hospitalized with exhaustion. Third-base coach Jerry Narron will run the Rangers until Oates returns.

"It's two weeks - maybe less, maybe more - and we're just trying to win as many games as we can," Narron said. "We want to make sure when Johnny comes back we're not buried in a big hole."

With opening day set for Tuesday, baseball officially unveiled its new slogan: "Welcome to the Show."

"We wanted people to refocus on what they liked about baseball and on what makes this game unique and different from other kinds of sports," said Jeff Goodby, co-creative director for the agency that developed the ad campaign.

The New York Yankees became the latest team to make a goodwill gesture to fans, offering 4,500 free bleacher tickets to every game during the first week in May.

Whether the locked-out major league umpires will be welcomed back in time for the start of the season was uncertain. The umpires and owners made no progress Thursday.

"I remain pessimistic, but hopeful," management negotiator Robert Kheel said.

Feeling a little better were Eddy Martinez and Rico Brogna.

Martinez, a 17-year-old shortstop from the Dominican Republic, ran through a stop sign from Baltimore third-base coach Steve Boros and slid home head-first for an inside-the-park grand slam in the Orioles' 15-5 win over Boston at Fort Myers, Fla.

"I saw the sign, but kept going. I wanted a home run," he said through an interpreter - third baseman Leo Gomez.

Martinez, 2-for-6 this spring, is headed to the minor leagues. With Cal Ripken around, the Orioles aren't exactly in need of a shortstop right now.

"The kid's going to be an outstanding player with a little experience," Orioles manager Phil Regan said. "It's amazing that a 17-year-old kid can come in and do what he's done."

Brogna hit three home runs for the New York Mets in a 10-8 win over Los Angeles in Vero Beach, Fla. All three shots came off Chan Ho Park, who allowed seven runs and nine hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Spurs clinch top record in NBA

By The Associated Press

No matter how many Game 7s the San Antonio Spurs play in the NBA playoffs, they will all be at the Alamodome.

The Spurs clinched the best record in the league Thursday night with a 112-111 victory over the Dallas Mavericks. They are a franchise-best 60-20 with two games remaining.

"It was a special way to win our 60th," Spurs coach Bob Hill said. "It guarantees us the best record in the league. Now the real season begins."

The playoffs can start on such an up note because Sean Elliott made two free throws with 0.5 seconds to play to beat the Mavericks on the road.

Dallas coach Dick Motta thought there wasn't a foul on the play, but all his arguing got him was an extra half-second on the clock. It wasn't enough.

"When a team executes and you play hard, you get a call like that," Hill said. "I don't know if he was fouled or not, but these things all average out."

David Robinson had 36 points and 13 rebounds for the Spurs, while Elliott finished with 17 points.

Jason Kidd had his fourth triple-double in a 10-game span for Dallas, which finished the season with 19 home victories, an improvement of 12 over last year.

New York didn't have starters Patrick Ewing, who strained his left hamstring, and Derek Harper, who has a sore right ankle, for much of the game, but still managed to rally from a 76-64 deficit with 8:57 to play. The Knicks took the lead for good on Charles Oakley's three-point play with 20 seconds left.

Ewing finished with four points in 19 minutes, while Harper played 11 minutes and did not score.

John Starks led New York with 18 points, while Alonzo Mourning had 22 points and 10 rebounds to lead Charlotte.

Bulls 120, Pistons 105

Michael Jordan had 17 points, eight rebounds and seven assists in 27 minutes, but he still missed more shots (10) than he made (8) for the seventh time in seven home games at the new United Center since coming out of retirement.

Scottie Pippen led the Bulls with 20 points and nine assists, and rookie Dickey Simpkins had a career-high 16 points.

Terry Mills scored 26 points and Grant Hill had 20 points and 15 rebounds for the Pistons.

Knicks 91, Hornets 86

The Knicks' road victory clinched the second-best record in the Eastern Conference for them and gave Indiana the Central Division title. The Hornets, who were chasing the Pacers, will be the fourth seed in the East and play the Chicago Bulls in the first round.

New York didn't have starters Patrick Ewing, who strained his left hamstring, and Derek Harper, who was buried in a big hole." Should Oates only be gone two more weeks, he could be back by May 5 in Oakland for the opener of a seven-game road trip. He'd only miss the first eight games of the season.

Melvin said the two-week leave is not rigid. Oates can stay out as long as he needs and he's obviously welcome to return quicker if possible.

"Fourteen days from now, I'm not going to say, 'Where are you?'" Melvin said.

Oates takes 2-week leave of absence

PORCHARTLOTTE, Fla. (AP) - When new Texas Rangers general manager Doug Melvin decided to hire a new manager, his final candidates' list included his former Baltimore Orioles colleagues Johnny Oates and Jerry Narron.

Melvin chose Oates, then hired Narron as his third-base coach.

Now Oates has taken a two-week leave of absence from the team to be at home in Virginia caring for his ill wife - and Narron is Melvin's choice as the Rangers' interim manager.

Oates made the decision Thursday, then Melvin told Narron to take over the team from Bucky Dent, who had been in charge since Oates left camp last Friday. Dent will move from dugout coach to take Narron's place at third.

"I spoke with Johnny today, and he indicated that, after consulting with the doctors, he feels he needs up to two more weeks to deal with Gloria's illness," Melvin said.

"I have granted Johnny's request for the leave of absence, and join with the entire organization and all Rangers fans in sending our thoughts and prayers to Gloria, Johnny and their family."

Narron, 39, coached for Oates in Baltimore in 1993 and 1994 and was a manager in the Orioles' farm system from 1989-92, when Melvin ran the system.

"It's two weeks - maybe less, maybe more - and we're just trying to win as many games as we can," Narron said. "We want to make sure when Johnny comes back we're not

Study shows faith seen more often on television

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

Faith appears to be making a comeback on the small screen.

The number of portrayals of religion in prime time more than doubled from 1993 to 1994 and, more often than not, the treatment was positive, according to a new study.

The average of one mention of religion for every seven hours of prime-time television still does not reflect its importance in American life, but the networks seem to be treating issues of faith with greater sensitivity, the study by the Alexandria, Va.-based Media Research Center concluded.

"We certainly had some internal debate on how to spin the numbers. I was more enthusiastic than others were," said Thomas Johnson, co-author of "Faith in a Box: Entertainment Television on Religion 1994." "I think it's pretty significant."

In the study, researchers found 253 treatments of religion in some 1,716 hours of prime-time programming, a dramatic increase from 1993 when there were only 116 portrayals in 1,675 hours of programs.

More striking was the change in attitude. In 1993, the researchers found positive depictions of faith outnumbered negative ones by a 3-2 margin. Last year, the study said there were nearly twice as many positive depictions as negative portrayals.

"After scrutinizing 1994's sitcoms, dramas, telefilms and miniseries, we can report that prime time did, in fact, improve its coverage of religion," the study said.

The researchers noted that programs previously indifferent or hostile to faith mellowed, and that two new CBS series, "Christy" and "Touched By an Angel," were "decidedly pro-religion." Other series the research center deemed worthy of special praise for their handling of religion were "Thunder Alley" on ABC and "L.A. Law" and "Homicide: Life on the Street" on NBC.

When also taking into account the generally sympathetic attitude to religion and religious values of such shows as "Home Improvement" and ABC's family night of comedies on Friday, religious conservatives no longer need to view prime-time programming as a collective wasteland, Johnson said.

"It's certainly not a lost cause, and the improvement from '93 to '94 would indicate that," he said.

That does not mean television is by any measure "religion-friendly yet," the study cautioned.

"With only 253 treatments in over 1,700 hours of programming, religion is not on Hollywood's radar screen to any meaningful degree, and in some quarters, the hostility aimed at religion remains alive," it said.

Among the examples of negative portrayals reported in the study were a Feb. 17 episode of NBC's "Wings" in which a young woman hired to strip at a stag party discovers her minister in the audience and several incidences of ruler-wielding nun jokes and other variations of what the report calls "prime-time's Catholic-clergy-as-violent-disciplinarians theme."

The report said even the show that was probably the most offensive to religious viewers - NBC's "John Larroquette Show" - did not make religion-bashing a habit.

Film critic Michael Medved, author of "Hollywood vs. America, Popular Culture and the War on Traditional Values," called the study findings reflective of a general trend in the direction of more family oriented entertainment.

Bird talk wins suit

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)

- It was a true cockatoo to do - that much is true. It ended with a revelation: Michel was really Racquel. Who knew?

A custody battle over a pet cockatoo was resolved today after a policeman testified he heard the talking bird use phrases it learned from its former owners.

Two families in suburban Melbourne each claimed the pink-and-gray bird was theirs - and the matter went before the Broadmeadows Magistrates' Court.

Carmen Ferreira told the court her pet, Racquel, disappeared two years ago and that she heard it earlier this week calling out "Hello, Racquel" from a nearby house.

But Ignazio Vargou told the court it was not the same bird. He said he bought his, named Michel, at a market more than three years ago.

Magistrate Bernard Coburn ruled that Racquel and Michel were the same bird and ordered him returned to Mrs. Ferreira.

He cited the bird's vocabulary as the basis of his decision.

Senior Constable John Cooke testified he heard the bird say "Hello Racquel, hello Sean," - the name of Mrs. Ferreira's grandson - and other phrases the Ferreiras had taught it.

The cockatoo sat in the courtroom during proceedings.
