The tour ends today with a tour of IBP in Amarillo and Excel in Friona.

Pampa, Allison hit by numerous tornadoes

PAMPA, Texas (AP) - Lewis Marcy, 83, fled his mobile home in west Pampa when he saw a "spinning wind."

Marcy said he drove his van away from the storm Thursday afternoon and waited until it appeared safe. When he returned to his home, it had been demolished by the storm.

At least five people were injured and dozens of homes and businesses were destroyed or heavily damaged Thursday afternoon as a tornado ripped through Pampa, officials said.

Several hours later, a tornado hit the community of Allison, 50 miles east of Pampa in northeast Wheeler County. The twister cut a swath about a mile wide, said an official with the National Weather Service.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said five or six rural homes were destroyed in the area outside Allison, but no serious injuries were reported.

Coronado Hospital in Pampa treated five people for injuries:

- a 14-year-old girl, treated and released for a cut hand;
- a 54-year-old woman, in the intensive care unit after going into cardiac distress because a power outage cut off electricity to her oxygen generator;

- a 55-year-old woman, in stable condition with a fractured rib, suffered when her house was destroyed around her. She was being transferred to an Amarillo hospital;

- an 18-year-old boy, alert and undergoing tests after stepping on a downed power line;

- a 16-year-old girl, admitted after being tossed around in her residence and suffering seizures from anxiety.

The Pampa tornado struck the southwestern part of the city just before 4:45 p.m. The twister devastated several industrial buildings near the intersection of Texas Highway 152 and FM 282.

Miles O'Loughlin said he watched a tornado form in a field near his office at W/O Operating Company on Texas 152 west of Pampa about 4:45 p.m.

"I bet it sat in that field for five minutes, getting bigger and bigger," he said.

When the twister grew to an estimated one-eighth-mile wide, O'Loughlin said he "jumped in the car and headed due west as fast as I could."

"We watched it, and it hit all kinds of industrial oil field buildings along that road. Some of them are just gone and some others are a shambles. I could see that it hit at least half a dozen to eight (buildings)," O'Loughlin said.

The tornado then worked its way through a residential area, uprooting trees and damaging dozens of homes.

Homes in a 45-block area were still without power Thursday night.

Christy Scroggins of Pampa said she "sat here and watched the tornado tear up the houses. There are pieces of insulation all over town."

"I went down to the day care center to get my daughter and make sure they were OK. There is a dress shop completely wiped out. A Laundromat is completely gone. There's trees shredded all over the place," Scroggins said.

She said people were "going crazy, trying to get out of the way" of the tornadoes.

The tornadoes damaged a 15-block area on Pampa's south side, said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox. The twister also left a 45-block area without electricity for a time, authorities said.

Winds reportedly pulled one man from his house on the southwest side of the city.

A DPS spokesman said 30 Pampa businesses and four homes were destroyed by the storm. About 30 other businesses and 16 additional homes received extensive damage, the spokesman said.

The twisters uprooted and destroyed dozens of trees. Utility poles also were snapped.

About 50 inmates from the Kufe Jordan Unit were helping with cleanup, according to prison spokesman Larry Todd.

"We have five different crews of about 10 inmates each. They do cleanup and search and rescue," Todd said.

Emotional pilot celebrates return to U.S. base after Bosnian ordeal

By PIERO VALSECCHI Associated Press Writer AVIANO AIR BASE, Italy (AP) - A week after his F-16 was shot down by a Serb missile, an emotional Capt. Scott O'Grady returned to his base today and told a cheering crowd "when I was out there I knew you were all behind me."

O'Grady was introduced. He called his reception "overwhelming" and said he was "humbled by all this." O'Grady made a brief statement in which he praised the people who rescued him and said "if you want to find some heroes, that's where you should look, because those are the biggest heroes in the world."

After being flown in from the USS Kearsarge in the Adriatic, a smiling O'Grady raised a fist in greeting to some 200 cheering U.S. military men and women and civilians. Babies in strollers clutched tiny American flags, military wives turned out in shorts and servicemen and women waited for him in a hangar on this base near the foothills of the Alps in northeast Italy.

"It's just such a rush, so exciting. Today I don't have the words," she said, also speaking on the "Today" program. "Just hearing his voice was so reassuring. His first words were 'How ya doin'? My reaction was, 'How'm I doing? But that's Scott, concerned for others.'"

Coming in Sunday's Brand. Nearly 14 years ago, tragedy was narrowly averted when firefighters were able to rescue 4-year-old Jared Artho from a well into which he had fallen. For nearly two hours, rescuers tried to find a way to extract Jared from a hole more than 200 feet deep. Today, Jared is a new graduate of Hereford High School and preparing for his life as an adult. To help congratulate him on reaching that milestone, the Hereford Fire Department recently presented him with a college scholarship and a reminder of what went before - a section of the rope used to rescue him so long ago. On Sunday, relive that day with Jared, his family and some of the men who worked to make Jared's future a reality.

Aviano base serves as a major staging point for NATO reconnaissance flights over Bosnia across the Adriatic, and it was on just such a run that O'Grady, 29, was knocked out of the sky on June 2. Jet fighters flew low over the base's airstrip in celebration. O'Grady, of the 555th Fighter Squadron, was shot down while flying in support of NATO's operation Deny Flight. Bosnia is just a half-hour by jet from this base north of Venice. "We were losing hope, day after day. I'm happy he's alive. He's a nice guy," Chris Lane, also a pilot of the 555th Squadron, said Thursday. "We already started celebrating," said Lane. "But the big day, the day of smiles, is tomorrow when he comes home." The 555th Fighter Squadron transferred to Aviano Air Base from Luke, Arizona, on April 1, 1994.

probation ordered for driver in fatal accident. The driver of a vehicle involved in a fatal accident in 1994 was sentenced Thursday to 10-year probation prison terms on three indictments. Kenneth L. Chambers III, 25, of Dawn, entered guilty pleas in 222nd District Court. Judge Pat Boone of Littlefield, the 154th District judge, presided. The case was prosecuted by Becky McPherson of Floydada, 110th District Attorney. In the plea bargain agreement accepted by Judge Boone, Chambers admitted guilt on three charges, two for aggravated assault with serious bodily injury and the third for negligent homicide. Judge Boone fined Chambers $1,000 on the negligent homicide charge. Fines of $1,000 also were imposed, but suspended, on each of the aggravated assault charges. The defendant was ordered to serve a jail sentence of 120 days with a work release program to be determined. Chambers was the driver of a pickup attempting to turn onto FM 809 from the eastbound lane of U.S. 60. A car traveling west on U.S. 60 and driven by James Roland Fillmore, 41, of Hereford struck the Chambers vehicle, a pickup pulling a livestock trailer. The accident occurred on March 26, 1995. Fillmore died at the scene, the cause of the negligent homicide indictment. Fillmore's wife, Linda Sue Fillmore, and son, James Warren Fillmore, were seriously injured. The aggravated assault with serious bodily injury charges are related to their injuries. At the time of the accident, Chambers allegedly was under influence of alcohol. In questioning by his attorney, Warren Clark of Amarillo, Chambers admitted to a "drinking problem." Asked if he planned to do something about it, he responded, "yes." Judge Boone reminded Chambers that he will be ordered to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division if he fails to abide by the terms of his probation.

100th birthday no reason for woman to stop work. MARGARET STAFFORD Associated Press Writer KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Mrs. Stafford's 100th birthday is no reason for her to miss work. She's having her party and a lunch dinner tonight, when she'll be in a night gown as a 100-year-old. "I'm going to work," she said. "I've made up my mind. I'm not going to stop working." Mrs. Stafford's family, friends and co-workers planned a party for her 100th birthday. "I just know I'm an old schoolteacher," she said. "I've had 33 good, productive years of education."

New 'reinventing government' plan announced by president

By RON FOURNIER Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Relief is being promised to small businesses that spend large amounts of money to file wage and tax information with the government. President Clinton, unveiling his latest "reinventing government" project today, plans to direct three federal agencies to stop requiring businesses to file the same documents to different federal departments, officials said. He also will seek legislation aimed at allowing companies to simultaneously file documents with federal and state governments. "We're not promising a miracle," said Elaine Kamarck, policy adviser for Vice President Al Gore. "But we are painting a vision and we hope all the agencies and the states will get on board so this will be a reality in a couple of years." Officials, who conceded the call for cooperation is not binding, said the reforms will save taxpayers $1.5 billion in five years, mostly for small businesses now besieged by paperwork. Reducing duplicative work on the federal level could save Washington $300 million over five years, they said. In an East Room ceremony with Clinton, the Social Security Administration, the Internal Revenue Service and the Labor Department were signing a memorandum of understanding that requires them to share wage and tax information sent by taxpayers, mostly businesses. That means businesses should no longer be required to file the same tax and wage information over and over again, aides said. Under a pilot project, the Social Security Administration already is taking W-2 wage forms sent by small employers and sharing the data with the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS sends the information to 20 participating states. The administration wants to expand the program to cover all states and all tax forms.

Grass clippings letter sent in error, should be ignored. A letter telling Hereford residents to bag grass clippings and dispose of the bags in trash dumpsters should be ignored, said a city official Friday. "We had a slip-up in communications and the letter, a copy of one used previously, was mailed," reported Terri Johnson, city secretary. Hereford residents are asked to deposit grass clippings behind fences in alleys without bagging. Johnson said trash pickup is impeded if residents place the clippings adjacent to dumpsters. Because the City of Hereford began hauling household trash to out-of-town landfills last year, officials have worked toward reduction in the amount of garbage for transport. One course of action is to take limbs and grass clippings to the city-owned landfill. The city secretary apologized for the error and asked residents to be patient as the city attempts to get summer pickups current.

Whitewater prosecutors look past governor; allegations against President investigated

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Starting with information from a former municipal judge, Whitewater prosecutors assembled a criminal case against Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker. They're also looking into the ex-judge's allegation against a far more important political figure - President Clinton.

Whitewater figure David Hale says he was pressured by then-Gov. Clinton in 1986 to make an improper $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal, one of the future president's partners in the Whitewater real estate venture.

While Clinton has long dismissed Hale's allegation as a "bunch of bull," prosecutors in recent weeks have been delving into it before a grand jury in Arkansas, several lawyers familiar with the Whitewater investigation say.

Hale's information concerning Tucker, when bolstered with documents and testimony, was sufficient to get a three-count federal indictment against the Arkansas governor this week.

With Hale's credibility under attack, "the Tucker case was a big step for the prosecutors because it shows that Hale is clearly someone they can use as a starting point in assembling major criminal cases," said one lawyer close to the investigation, speaking on condition of anonymity.

David Kendall, personal attorney to Clinton and his wife, Hillary, declined comment on the significance of the Tucker indictment. White House lawyer Mark Fabiani said: "We are not aware of anything in this indictment that relates to the president."

The importance of Hale's cooperation was further underlined Thursday when Stephen A. Smith, a former associate of both Clinton and Tucker, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of fraudulently acquiring a $65,000 federally backed loan from Hale's company.

Smith used the money to pay off a bank loan to a real estate company in which Tucker was a part owner.

In the Tucker indictment, the governor was charged with making false statements in order to get $300,000 loan in 1987 from Hale's company and conspiring to defraud the government in an alleged tax dodge scheme.

As for matters concerning Clinton, Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr's investigation appears to be months from completion, said sources familiar with the case who demanded anonymity.

The sources said state trooper L.D. Brown described for the grand jury in Little Rock a conversation he said he witnessed in late 1985 or early 1986 in which Clinton pressed Hale for money.

The alleged conversation took place about the time of the $300,000 SBA-backed loan, which was never repaid. Hale's company eventually ended up in receivership at a cost to taxpayers of more than $3 million. Brown was once on Clinton's security detail and now is a Clinton critic.

Brown's lawyer, Justin Thornton, confirmed his client's May 22 grand jury appearance but otherwise declined comment.

One piece of intriguing prosecution evidence, according to several sources, is a series of telephone messages said to have been left in late 1985 and early 1986 for James McDougal.

James and Susan McDougal, now divorced, owned a Little Rock savings and loan that failed in 1989, costing taxpayers $65 million.

The phone messages kept at McDougal's office indicate the S&L owner received numerous calls from Clinton, Tucker and Hale in the period just before Hale made his loan to Mrs. McDougal.

The Associated Press was provided some information from the messages.

On one phone slip scribbled by McDougal's secretary and dated Jan. 15, 1986, McDougal is told to drop by the governor's mansion at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Photos are backdrop in emotional session for jurors, families

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Autopsy photos showing the fatal slash across Ronald Goldman's throat rested on an easel in the O.J. Simpson courtroom, just a few feet away from a juror in the front row.

A few feet beyond the easel, Goldman's father, sister and stepmother quietly cried in the first row of the audience. They dabbed their eyes with tissues and sipped water from little paper cups. At one point the father's chest heaved.

The gore and emotion were too much for the juror near the photos.

Just 10 minutes after a break Thursday, the 37-year-old woman motioned to a bailiff, got up and rushed out of the courtroom. As she left, she braced herself on the backs of chairs and dabbed her nose with a tissue.

For five tense minutes, she remained in the jury room while the courtroom was paralyzed. The judge, remaining jurors, attorneys and audience members sat nearly motionless as a national television audience waited.

When the juror returned, tissue to her nose, quivering in her seat, Judge Lance Ito called a halt to the session 90 minutes early. He told everyone it had been a long day and reminded them that court would only be in session for a half-day today.

It was one of the most wrenching moments in a trial hardly starved for emotion and drama. Defense attorneys were especially concerned; they didn't want the autopsy photos shown in the first place for fear jurors would become emotional, possibly to the point of unclear thinking.

After court, attorneys and Ito - who had ruled that the photos, though ghastly, were legally relevant - met to decide how to handle the remainder of the testimony by Dr. Lakshmanan Sathyavagiswaran, the county coroner.

Defense attorney Robert Shapiro said the judge would move the easel holding the photo board back so it is not in jurors' faces. There also was talk of cutting back the court hours, which recently were extended at the request of the sequestered jurors to speed the trial.

"It's been a very difficult day for everyone, a very difficult week for everyone," Shapiro said. "The judge is very concerned for the jury and for the victims families who are in the courtroom as well as everyone else in these proceedings."

The juror was overcome in the midst of the prosecution's effort to reconstruct the manner in which Goldman was murdered June 12 alongside Simpson's ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson.

Prosecutor Brian Kelberg suggested that in the confrontation outside Ms. Simpson's condominium, the assailant taunted Goldman with a knife before making the deadly slashes and stabs. Kelberg elicited from Lakshmanan descriptions of two parallel, superficial cuts on Goldman's neck.

"These look to be some threatening cuts," he said. "This is something you threaten somebody with. You threaten you're going to do bodily harm to them."

He said Goldman was immobilized early, and he demonstrated on Kelberg how a killer could have grabbed the victim from behind and sliced a knife lightly across his throat. "He was held so he couldn't move, so these controlled cuts could be made," Lakshmanan said.

Eventually, he said, the killer administered the coup de grace, slicing Goldman's jugular vein and inflicting two cuts to his armpits.

Fred Goldman took off his glasses and wept at the description of the fatal slash to his son. His wife, Patti, and daughter, Kim, also cried.

When Kelberg asked how long it would take for a killer who was 6-foot-2, 210 pounds "in a rage, armed with a 6-inch blade" to inflict all of the wounds, Fred Goldman and his daughter stared at Simpson across the crowded courtroom.

Simpson, who matches that description, sat at the counsel table calmly taking notes. Occasionally throughout the day he whispered to his lawyers.

Lakshmanan said all of Goldman's wounds could have been inflicted quickly and "without medical treatment, he would have died within five minutes."

Earlier, the indignity of murder was magnified as jurors examined color photos of Ms. Simpson's underwear and marks on her body that the coroner said were probably left by the hook on her black halter dress.

"She was fully clothed," Lakshmanan said. "The intimate apparel were in place."

Ambulances on Thursday ran on one transfer to Amarillo, on transfer to Lubbock, three medical runs and one no-transport.

PATIENTS IN HOSPITAL
Raymon Chavez, infant boy DeLeon, Suzanna DeLeon, Joe H. Garcia, Charles Leffel, A.N. McRight, Alice Mendoza, infant boy Mendoza, Lorenza Perez, Ewing C. Thaxton and Ethel Vititov.

Dr. Robert Goldstein said the 30-minute procedure went smoothly, and it took only one stitch to repair the source of the bleeding. The 63-year-old baseball Hall of Famer was returned to the intensive care unit at Baylor Medical Center. He was in critical but stable condition.

"He is waking up and is responsive," Goldstein said. "We are very pleased with his progress so far."

Goldstein cautioned, however, that Mantle was not out of the woods.

"I think the next 48 hours will be very important for him," the surgeon said. "If he gets well and gets off the breathing machine in the next 48-72 hours, then I think he'll have a good chance for recovery."

The bleeding was detected by nurses about 24 hours after the transplant. The problem, which sometimes occurs in cases as severe as Mantle's, was not related to whether Mantle's body is accepting or rejecting the liver, hospital spokeswoman Denise Kile Walton told CNN.

Mantle's liver was ruined by cancer, hepatitis and 40 years of heavy drinking. It was replaced Thursday with one from an unidentified deceased donor.

San Jose Church plans farewell, special liturgy in celebration

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

San Jose Catholic Church will host a special "Year of Jubilee Liturgy and Celebration" in conjunction with the farewell to long-time priest Father Darryl Birkenfeld.

The Reverend Bishop Leroy Mathiesen will be the main celebrant with former pastors assisting.

The liturgy will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday in the church, 735 Brevard.

During the celebration, the new community/education building that is being built near the church, as well as stained glass windows and baptismal font for the church, will be blessed.

The Las Mananitas will be sung by Francisco Gonzales in commemoration of Bishop Leroy's 74th birthday.

Starting the festivities, the liturgy will be conducted by new pastor Father John Salazar and the Bishop. During the ceremony the blessing of the new stained glass windows will be conducted.

The church will install 15 new stained glass windows, each depicting a famous saint or holy person.

Each glass cost the parish $1,800. "We had many parishioners memorialize their family members and donate the money for the new windows," said Lydia Villanueva, special coordinator for San Jose Church.

The new baptismal font also will be blessed during the church liturgy. The congregation will then move to the new community/educational building for the blessing of the facility.

The building, which is due to be finished in August, will be a multi-functional facility for the parish and the community.

According to Villanueva, the recreational building will be host to a multitude of activities.

"We are looking into different programs that will benefit our parishioners, as well as the entire community," she said.

"We are talking with the rape crisis and child welfare people about conducting programs here in our new building," Villanueva said.

The building is mainly for youth activities and programs, such as basketball and volleyball, but will also be used for health screenings for the elderly and indigent, tutoring, instructional courses for U.S. citizenship, conversational Spanish, English courses, GED courses, senior citizens events, and more community-wide activities.

The parish was in need of a place for prayer vigils for funerals and also a facility for its K-4 pre-school program.

With the building a new playground was built for the K-4 classes. After the blessing the congregation will move to the fellowship hall for a program and meal.

The program will be presented by six people who will trace the history of the church from its first existence as a mission.

The program will begin with the birth of the San Jose Church from its old location known as San Jose Colonia to its present location.

Alfredo Gonzales and Maria Garcia will talk about the early mission De San Jose from its beginning in 1948 to the middle 1950s.

Father Raymond Gillis, a beloved graymoo priest who changed the course of time at the Mission, will be remembered.

Arturo Gonzales will trace the history from 1958 until the time that the Old St. Anthony's church was moved to the labor camp.

He will also talk about the Health clinic that was staffed by nurse Barbara Scoggins.

The missionaries and nuns who taught at the catholic school will also be remembered.

Fathers Jose Gilligan and Jim O'Connor will be remembered by Maurilio Holguin.

Gloria J. Garcia will reminisce about Father Joe Bixenman, who was pastor from 1983 through 1991.

Concluding the program will be Tony Martinez, will speak about the current pastor, Father Darryl Birkenfeld.

Activities will conclude with a dance with music provided by Algo Simple.

The San Jose Mission Camp goes back to May 1948, when Atonement Father Albert Heald bought a barracks building from the former Italian Prisoner of War Camp southeast of Hereford for $540.

The building, 60 feet by 20 feet, was located on three lots in the camp belonging to St. Anthony's Church. Of these lots one was bought and two were donated to the parish by the Potato Grower's Association.

The parish began with 25 Spanish-speaking families in the camp. During the potato season in 1948, the population swelled to approximately 3,000. The first priest was Atonement Father James Salvi, who was succeeded by Atonement Father Raymond Gillis.

In 1950, a school was built at the Labor Camp to educate children that had either been educated at home or in the fields. Shortly after the construction of the school, Father Gillis set his sights on a clinic, and after begging and pleading for dimes and nickels, he built a clinic in the mid-1950s.

In 1957, a new church was built for the parishioners at St. Anthony's Church, so Father Gillis asked for and received permission to move the old church, a landmark in the city since 1921 to the Labor Camp. The old building was moved to the camp in February 1958 and was dedicated in December of that year after the building was slightly enlarged.

In 1973, the mission was established as a parish and about that same time, parishioners began to think about a new convent was built for the Franciscan Sisters of Mary Immaculate.

In 1973, the mission was established as a parish and about that same time, parishioners began to think about a new church to replace the mission church which they had outgrown. The new church became a reality in 1979, and was dedicated in the winter of 1980.

Building to be blessed

The new community/education building at the San Jose Catholic Church will be blessed this Sunday during a special liturgy and celebration. The new facility will be used mainly for youth activities, but will also be host to many community centered events and special programs. The celebration and blessing will begin with mass at 3 p.m. in the church at 735 Brevard, and a program and meal will follow. A dance will conclude the day-long celebration.

Alliance will host kids ministry

The Hereford Ministerial Alliance will host Thank God for Kids Ministries, a Christian outreach program for children, in Dameron Park on June 27, it was announced this week.

Produced by Dr. Jim Lavender, a United Methodist pastor, the program makes memorable the stories and truths of the Bible with the presentation of live animals. In addition to the living lion and lamb, the ministry carries an extensive zoological collection.

"This children's crusade program is usually booked only in metroplex cities. We feel this outreach ministry will affect many children of our town in a positive way," said Carol Haile, children's minister at the Nazarene Church and a member of the Ministerial Alliance.

Dr. Lavender began his Thank God for Kids ministry 10 years ago with two doves. He has reached more than 70,000 kids with his program. The ministry includes the following animals: African lions, Siberian tiger, black bear, black leopard, zebra, llama, goats, sheep, raccoons, skunk, giant rat, rabbits, monkey, miniature pigs, camels, and prairie dog.

The alliance has sent letters to local businesses to solicit financial support for the ministry. Checks should be made to the Ministerial Alliance and sent to Dorman Duggan at Community Church, Box 487.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We'd like to share some tips with "Somewhere in Missouri," whose mother phones her four times a day and expects her to do everything.

1. Have your mother assessed by a geriatric psychiatrist for medication. Whether this is a lifelong personality difficulty or a behavioral change triggered by a more recent event, your mother may be struggling with intense anxiety or depression. There are some new medications on the market that can make a big difference.

2. Be clear to your mother about what you can and cannot do. Say, "Mother, I can do your shopping on Saturday. If you need milk today, perhaps you can borrow from your neighbor."

3. Tell your mother that you are setting aside a special time each week just for her. Then stick to it.

4. Hire a high school student to do errands for your mother so you can help her get used to using outside help rather than looking to you for everything.

5. Get an answering machine so you won't be disturbed with so many calls. Make sure your mother knows you will be checking in with her every day at a mutually-agreed-upon time.

With increased understanding, you can improve your own attitude. If your frustration and anxiety level is lowered, you will be more compassionate and better able to understand you mother's plight. — Aging Network Services, Bethesda

DEAR BETHESDA: You have written a letter that is sure to be a great help to many readers. I want to thank you on behalf of all of them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I will be mailing invitations to my daughter's Bat Mitzvah soon and need an opinion.

I had planned to invite my cousin, "Benny," and his wife and children, but a few weeks ago, Benny and his wife separated. I plan to invite Benny and send his children's invitation to them at their mother's home, where they are living, but I am wondering what to do about his wife. I have always like her, and she says it is a friendly separation, but I'm not sure this is so. Would it be proper to invite her? Or should I ask Benny's parents what to do since they know more about the situation than I do? Please tell me how to handle this.

I am -- Very Unsure of Myself in N.Y.

DEAR UNSURE: I shall repeat the Ann Landers Rule About Invitations: Do not concern yourself about who is speaking to whom. Invite anyone you would like to have attend, and disregard all intramural family or friend-type feuds. If Aunt Tillie says, "I won't come if you invite Ida," tell her, "Sorry, we will miss you."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a problem, and I hope you can help. Ever since I was a little girl, my hands have gotten tremendously sweaty whenever I've been unsure of myself or felt inadequate. I remember when I played in piano recitals, the piano keys had to be wiped off during intermission.

This has been a problem my entire life. I would be very grateful if you could suggest something that might help me. No name or city, please, just -- A Super Sweater in Kentucky

DEAR SUPER SWEATER: I very rarely mention a brand name in the column, but I have recommended Drysol for heavy perspiration in the past and will do so again. This product, available by prescription only, has solved the sweating problem for many when everything else failed. Good luck.

An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love? "Alcoholism: How can you help yourself or someone you love? Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Church News

CENTRAL CHURCH OF CHRIST

As you read this many from Central will be in the mountains of New Mexico. Surrounded by the beauty of creation we will hike, fish, golf, fellowship, sight see, eat and do a lot of nothing. We'll be thinking about you (yea, right).

Sunday will be our week to go to the prison. We are needing additional volunteers. If you are interested call the church office.

June 17 will be "Super Saturday". Come learn with us as we take a trip back to the book of Genesis. We will return to the Garden of Eden and see the fall of Adam and Eve. We will see the first murder as Cain kills Able. Our learning centers will include Creation, The Garden of Eden, Noah's Boat Builders, The Flood, Noah's Covenant and the Tower of Babel. An oasis will be provided along the way to refresh us on our trip. Each traveler will need to bring a sack lunch. Come join us on our journey if you are 2 years-6th grade.

Come worship with us Sunday for Bible class at 9:30 a.m., worship at 10:30 a.m. and evening worship at 5 p.m. Wednesday Bible study is at 7 p.m.

SAN JOSE CATHOLIC CHURCH

On Sunday the regular 11:30 a.m. liturgy will be moved to 3 p.m. as our year of Jubilee liturgy. The mass will begin an afternoon and evening of celebration to bless our new education building and to give thanks for all the blessings God has bestowed on San Jose Church.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

Pastor Ted and congregation cordially invite you to come and be with us this Sunday at 10:30 a.m. as we enjoy the praise music of Enoch Fernando. Don't miss this exciting celebration of Piano Praise!

Orlando coach hopes Magic respond to loss

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - The Orlando Magic have had this feeling before, this ugly, persistent gnawing that follows a loss that should have been a win.

Coach Brian Hill can only hope the response is the same as it was last week, when his team was stunned 94-93 in Game 4 of the Eastern Conference finals in Indianapolis.

Based on that painful experience, the Magic don't think they'll be suffering from any emotional hangover tonight when Orlando and Houston meet in Game 2 of the NBA Finals.

"I don't know of any game in my two years here that was tougher to come back from than Game 4 against Indiana," Hill said Thursday, "and this team came right back and responded with some of its best basketball of the year. So I have no doubt in my mind that we'll play well tomorrow night."

They'd better, or they face the prospect of going to Houston down 2-0 in the best-of-7 series, with the next three games scheduled for the Summit.

"There will be a lot of pressure on us," Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway said. "It would be devastating if they come in and win tomorrow's game."

Houston's remarkable 120-118 overtime victory Wednesday night was the chief subject of dissection after Orlando's practice Thursday.

Players and coaches said they'd never experienced anything quite like it, with the abrupt and extensive momentum changes, the four missed free throws by Nick Anderson in the final 10.5 seconds of regulation and the phenomenal 3-point shooting by Houston's Kenny Smith and Robert Horry.

The Magic believe their defensive breakdowns led to too many open shots for the Rockets gunners. Orlando wanted to double-team Hakeem Olajuwon on virtually every possession. But they were so eager that sometimes they'd inadvertently triple-team him.

"There were too many cases when we had three people down there and they had two or three people open on the wing," Hardaway said.

The biggest mob of reporters at Thursday's interview session surrounded Anderson, who had to talk over and over about how a player who made 75 percent of his free throws could miss four in such a crucial situation.

Anderson said he'd watched replays of his misses on television.

"I had no follow-through. It was like I jerked away," he said.

It was an experience he will have to shrug off, he said.

"I slept pretty good," Anderson said. "I'm a strong basketball player. I'm strong up top. I can't let this get me down. It's one out of many."

said the victory reminded him of Game 1 of the Western Conference finals, when the Rockets escaped what looked to be a defeat with a 94-93 win in San Antonio. The next game, Houston pounded the Spurs 106-96.

"What we have to do is understand that we are blessed and come out and be as professional as we can and really keep the pressure on them," Tomjanovich said.

Round 1 of the heavyweight matchup between Olajuwon and Shaquille O'Neal was a virtual standoff. Olajuwon outscored O'Neal 31-26. O'Neal had nine assists, Olajuwon seven. O'Neal won the rebounding battle convincingly 16-6. But Olajuwon got the rebound that counted most, a tip-in with three-tenths of a second to go that gave Houston the victory.

Neither center went against each other one-on-one more than occasionally. When both got into foul trouble, they often didn't guard each other at all. Hill said it's possible he'll let O'Neal go it alone against Olajuwon, but that raises the risk of Shaq getting into quick foul trouble. Any defensive changes are more likely to be subtle.

"There are a lot of little adjustments you make, but it's going to be nothing dramatic," Hill said. "If you're going to send people inside to try to stop a dominant inside player, then you'd better get to their perimeter people quick."

Chang knocks off ex-champ Bruguera

PARIS (AP) - Michael Chang ended Sergi Bruguera's reign as French Open champion today, beating the two-time winner 6-4, 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-0) in the semifinals.

Chang will play Thomas Muster for the title.

Muster, playing the kind of awesome tennis that has made him invincible this year on clay, overwhelmed Yevgeny Kafelnikov 6-4, 6-0, 6-4 in the first semifinal.

Bruguera won the tournament the last two years but was seeded only seventh this year, one spot below Chang.

Chang, who became the youngest champion in the history of Grand Slams when he won here in 1989 at the age of 17, outlasted the Spaniard in a duel of long rallies from the baseline.

Bruguera had won 19 consecutive matches at Roland Garros since losing to Ivan Lendl in the first round of 1992.

Twice Bruguera went up a break in the third set, and twice Chang came right back.

Muster simply rolled past Kafelnikov.

"I felt like a small mouse against a big elephant," Kafelnikov said after the short match. "I felt that he is something unusual. I didn't think that I could beat Thomas. Thomas is something like a wall, he's unbeatable."

"I'm not unbeatable, I'm just a human being. It takes a lot experience to play a Grand Slam semifinal."

Muster's lopsided victory extended his clay-court winning streak to 34, the longest since Bjorn Borg's 34-match run ended in 1980, and it took him to the first Grand Slam final of his career.

"One more to go for me, but winning or losing is not going to change my life," Muster said.

Muster, seeded fifth, was never challenged by Kafelnikov.

Kafelnikov is often called "Kalashnikov," after the weapon, by his peers, but Muster had all the big-caliber guns today.

He broke for a 2-0 lead and cruised through the first set. He was two sets up before the match was one hour old.

Kafelnikov, a ninth-seeded 21-year-old Russian playing his first Grand Slam semifinal, tried coming to the net more but even that could not save him.

"I stayed on the baseline in the first two sets and it didn't work. So I tried serve and volley but that didn't work too well either."

Muster employed his full range of shot - drop shots, lobs, searing forehands, passing backhands.

Kafelnikov held his second break point of the match at 4-4 in the third set. The Austrian replied with a brilliant cross-court forehand, and then slammed two aces.

"I expected Thomas to beat me but I thought the match could be a little bit longer," Kafelnikov said.

Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, the defending champion, meets three-time winner Steffi Graf on Saturday, in a duel between the top-ranked players in the world and with the No. 1 ranking on the line.

Graf is now ranked second, but if she beats Sanchez Vicario in Saturday's final, she will regain the No. 1 spot, which has shifted between the two players already five times this year.

Graf beat Conchita Martinez, the

No. 4, 6-3, 6-7, 6-3 in Thursday's semifinals.

Sanchez Vicario, who also won the French Open in 1989, beat Kimiko Date 7-5, 6-3 to reach the final, with $620,000 awaiting the champion.

Graf, winner here in 1987, 1988 and 1993, is unbeaten in 24 matches this year and has lost only one set - the one to Martinez Thursday.

She ended the 26-match unbeaten streak of Martinez, the reigning Wimbledon champion whose last defeat in March was also by Graf.

Graf's last Grand Slam title was the Australian Open in 1994. Sanchez Vicario beat her for the U.S. Open title last year, the last time the two clashed. Graf has a 24-8 career lead.

Pilot Point records no-hitter; Coronado, Lamesa advance

AUSTIN (AP) - It took the first no-hitter in Class 2A state high school baseball tournament ever for Pilot Point to advance to today's state championship match.

Russ Horton allowed just three baserunners, all on errors, as the Bearcats (26-4) eked out a 1-0 victory over Grand Saline (21-6) on Thursday. Grand Saline's Justin Harvath, losing for the first time of the season, allowed only two hits himself.

But Pilot Point made a first-inning run - on an error, a single and a ground out - stand up for the victory.

In other state tournament action on Thursday, Sugar Land Elkins and Lubbock Coronado won Class 5A semifinal matches, Coppell and Lamesa won in 4A, Luling and Hallettsville won in 3A, defending state champion East Bernard beat Coahoma 10-3 in the other 2A game, and D'Hanis and Mildred won in 1A.

CLASS 5A
Lubbock Coronado 4,
Grand Prairie 1

Brad Ralston pitched a complete game and notched nine strikeouts in Coronado's defeat of Grand Prairie.

Grand Prairie senior pitcher Kevin Walker (12-3), who was taken by the San Diego Padres in the recent amateur draft, gave up four runs on five hits through three innings.

He then shut down Coronado, retiring 12 straight batters in the final four innings, including five strikeouts. He gave up two walks.

But Ralston (16-2) stole the show by not allowing a Grand Prairie player past second base until the final inning. He gave up six hits with four walks.

Kerry Wood, Grand Prairie's top pitcher (14-1) and selected No. 4 overall in the draft by the Chicago Cubs, played first base for the Gophers.

Sugar Land Elkins 11, Corpus Christi Moody 6

Steven Truitt drove in three runs, including two in a decisive seven-run fifth inning, as Elkins came from behind.

CLASS 4A
Lamesa 1, Calallen 0

Alvin Cantu gave up just four hits as Lamesa scored the game's only run in the first inning.

Cantu (15-2), a senior left-hander, kept hitters off balance all game by mixing fastballs with curves and got great defense down the stretch to ensure the victory.

Calallen was led by shortstop Brent Klosterman, who had one of his team's hits and played dazzling defense by chasing down several blasts up the middle and making long throws to first.

Fidel Ogeda doubled in the first inning to set up Lamesa's only run. Gabriel Moncallo replaced Ogeda as a pinch runner and scored from third on a single by Sonny Casarez.

Isaac DeLeon (13-3) pitched the entire game for Calallen, giving up four hits and two walks with seven strikeouts.

Cantu, who also pitched a complete game, gave up two walks and had two strikeouts. Lamesa overcame three errors.

Coppell 9, Nederland 4
Sean Smith's bases-loaded sixth-inning double scored three runs, leading Coppell to its victory over Nederland.

Gamez, Singh pace Kemper

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) - Robert Gamez has a suggestion for his peers on the PGA Tour: Pick up the pace!

Even though he shot a 65 Thursday to share the lead with Vijay Singh after the opening round of the Kemper Open, Gamez claimed he might have done even better if he didn't have to wait around so long before every shot.

"It was so slow out there it was hard to get any rhythm," he said. "As hot as it is, to be out there five hours is stupid."

"A lot of guys don't get ready until it's their turn to hit. The tour, unfortunately, isn't doing anything about it. They know who the slow ones are."

Gamez, now in his seventh year on the tour, took more than an hour to complete the first five holes. "I finally got into some kind of a rhythm around the sixth hole," he said.

Mark O'Meara, Jeff Maggert, Wayne Grady and Steve Lowery were one shot behind the leaders. Tom Kite and six others had 67s on the TPC at Avenel course.

Reds nail Astros; Larkin injured

By The Associated Press
After a 1-8 start and injuries to key players, don't bet against the Cincinnati Reds finding a way to use their latest setback to their advantage.

The Reds, whose turnaround has brought them to a 25-14 record, tied with Philadelphia for the best in the National League, saw shortstop Barry Larkin, the NL's fourth-leading hitter at .353, struck on the right hand by a pitch from Darryl Kile in the third inning Thursday night. The Reds rallied for a 6-3 victory over the Houston Astros.

Larkin was taken for X-rays, which were negative, and received three stitches to close a cut on his thumb. The Reds listed him as day-to-day.

"It was a huge scare," Reds manager Davey Johnson said. "I was afraid he'd come up with a fracture. But it looks like it's just a few stitches and a bad bruise. It might be up to a week. It depends on how long it takes to close up and get the soreness out."

Cincinnati already has overcome injuries to outfielders Ron Gant and Deion Sanders and starter Jose Rijo.

"I've always said he's the best player on this team," starter Tim

Pugh (4-0) said of Larkin. "He's worth three or four outs a game that are his. But (Lenny) Harris made a couple of nice plays himself. The guys who stepped in did a good job."

In the other NL games Thursday, it was New York 9, San Francisco 6; Florida 7, Pittsburgh 3; and Colorado 5, Chicago 3.

The Reds were trailing 3-2 when they scored three runs in the top of the seventh. Harris, who replaced Larkin, tied it with a run-scoring single and Hal Morris made it 4-3 with a sacrifice fly. Gant drove in the final run with a single.

Pugh, who hasn't lost since May 27, 1994, allowed six hits and three runs in six innings.

"I had good stuff, but I was wild in the zone," Pugh said. "I left the ball over the plate a lot. I could have been sharper with my breaking ball."

The Astros got all their runs in the second, two scoring on a double by Kile (2-5), who has lost four straight.

"He threw well enough to give us a chance," Astros manager Terry Collins said of Kile. "We had opportunities to get some runs early, but you let the Cincinnati Reds and their offense stay around and sooner or later it catches up with you."

Kile, who hasn't won since May 3, allowed six hits and struck out seven.

Mets 9, Giants 6

The Mets came up with seven runs in the top of the first, their biggest inning of the season, and earned a split in the four-game series.

As New York sent 11 men to the plate, Brett Butler walked, scored and drove in two runs with an infield single.

Dave Mlicki (4-1) went a career-best 7 1-3 innings, allowing five runs on eight hits, including homers to Barry Bonds and Mark Carreon.

Trevor Wilson (3-3) had his ERA swell to 3.80 from 2.68 as he walked Butler to start the game and then gave up three straight hits, including doubles to Chris Jones and Bobby Bonilla. He only got one out in his worst outing of the season.

Marlins 7, Pirates 3

Kurt Abbott and Greg Colbrunn, both recently benched while in hitting slumps, each went 3-for-4 with a homer as the Marlins got their first three-game winning streak of the season.

Abbott, who homered in the second, had a two-run single to cap a three-run third that gave Florida a 5-3 lead. Colbrunn hit his second homer in as many games, a two-run shot in the fifth, to make it 7-3.

The loss was the visiting Pirates' sixth in their last seven games.

Terry Mathews (1-0) allowed two hits over 2 2-3 innings to get the victory.

Pirates starter Paul Wagner (1-8) went three-plus innings, but did drive in two runs with a double in the second for a 3-1 lead, matching his RBI total of last season.

Rockies 5, Cubs 3

Vinny Castilla continued his hot run, stretching his hitting streak to seven games, with eight runs scored and eight RBIs in that span. His two-run double in the first started the Rockies to their seventh win in their last eight games.

Kevin Ritz (4-1) tied the Rockies' record and matched his career high with nine strikeouts. He went seven innings, allowing five hits and one walk.

Kevin Foster (4-3) gave up seven hits and four runs, walked two and struck out three in 3 1-3 innings as the Cubs dropped their fourth straight and seventh of 10.

Jason Bates homered for Colorado, while Rick Wilkins hit one for the Cubs.

CS-Fullerton blows out Vols in CWS semifinals

By TOM VINT
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Cal State Fullerton coach Augie Garrido had to get out of the way of his 1995 Titans team, which has been better than he could have imagined and now will play for the College World Series championship.

"This is their doing," Garrido said after the top-seeded Titans ripped No. 5 seed Tennessee 11-0 Thursday in the Bracket Two semifinal. "They overcame me as well. Once they got past me, opponents were easy. The credit goes to the players. It's their team."

Garrido figured this was going to be a rebuilding year after losing six position players and six pitchers from last year's College World Series semifinalist. But he has said while in Omaha he has never been let down by this surprising team, which has a CWS-leading .385 batting average and 2.00 earned run average in three games.

The Titans are 56-9 going into Saturday's title game against the winner of tonight's Miami-Southern Cal contest. One of those losses during the regular season was to Southern Cal.

Thursday was a near repeat of the first time Tennessee came up against college baseball's top-ranked team. The Volunteers were thumped 11-1 Monday by a 16-hit Fullerton offensive and the four-hit pitching of Jon Ward.

All-American Mark Kotsay hit a grand slam in a six-run second inning in that game.

On Thursday, catcher Brian Loyd hit a long grand slam into the wind in a seven-run first. The Titans collected 15 hits and got five-hit pitching for eight innings from Tim Dixon (13-0).

"I'd have to say they are a pretty good-hitting bunch," Tennessee coach Rod Delmonico said. "They're hot right now. They've only lost nine ball games."

I wonder how they'd lost nine the way they're playing out here."

Fullerton has been near-perfect at the CWS. It is the first top-seed since seeding first began in 1988 to win a bracket championship. No No. 1 seed has won the title, however.

"Our team feels like we have pretty good momentum going into the championship game," said Titan Tony Martinez, who also delivered a three-run homer after a two-out error in the first.

Tennessee starter Scott Schroeffel (7-3) never made it through that opening inning. He gave up four hits and three walks in falling behind 7-0. "It just seemed like we couldn't get them out," Delmonico said.

Loyd ended up with three hits as every Titans starter had at least one. His shot into the wind was one for the coach, however.

"Coach told us to sit on the fastball," Loyd said. "Before my at bat, coach told me 'If he hangs one, you can hit it.' Well, he did and I hit it. In (batting practice) the balls weren't going to left field, but after I hit this I looked at it and sure enough it did."

The wind helped Dixon, who had two fly balls off the bat of Tennessee All-American Todd Helton hold up in the wind. Both were outs. Helton still had two of the five hits off the left-hander, who transferred last year from Arkansas-Little Rock.

"I took a chance and I got the opportunity," Dixon said of the transfer. "It has been a great feeling."

He retired 16 Volunteers in a row at one stage and allowed only one runner as far as third base.

"I never really thought about the shutout," Dixon said. "I just went out and threw strikes. It wasn't on my mind."

Garrido said his players won't have much on their minds today as they await a challenger for the championship game.

Tribe's Thome homers to beat Brewers

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Even dramatic wins in the late innings, it seems, have been commonplace for the Cleveland Indians.

The Indians did it again Thursday night, rallying for four runs in the top of the ninth to beat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-7.

Jim Thome's two-run homer capped the comeback, the 11th time this season the Indians have won in their last at-bat. Overall, Cleveland has won six in a row and 11 of 12, including a victory Wednesday night when Thome homered in the 10th to defeat Detroit.

"It doesn't constantly amaze me. We do what we're capable of doing," said Indians manager Mike Hargrove, ejected during the ninth-inning rally for arguing balls and strikes.

"Jim Thome hitting a home run tonight is nothing he's not capable of doing. (Albert) Belle's two-run double, there's no one playing over their heads," he said. "We feel if we can get the winning or tying run to the plate often enough good things are going to happen, because we do swing the bat."

In other games, Texas defeated Kansas City 10-9 in 10 innings, California beat Boston 10-8, Oakland downed New York 8-3, Baltimore beat Seattle 8-2 and Minnesota defeated Detroit 9-2.

At 28-10, the Indians have the best record in the majors. Showing that no lead is safe against them, they're even 6-7 when trailing after seven innings.

"We just have a lot of guys who can hit the ball out of the park in the late innings," Thome said. "We've got a lot of quality guys who can hit in that situation."

The Indians were down 6-4 in the ninth when Omar Vizquel and Carlos Baerga singled off Graeme Lloyd (0-5), and Belle tied it with a two-run double.

Bill Wegman relieved and retired Eddie Murray on a fly ball, but gave up a 425-foot home run to Thome.

Julian Tavarez (5-0) was the winner and Jose Mesa remained perfect in 13 save chances despite giving up a run.

The host Brewers blew a chance to extend their 6-4 lead in the eighth when Pat Listach missed a suicide-squeeze bunt and Cleveland tagged out two runners for a double play.

"We went from looking real good to looking real bad," Brewers manager Phil Garner said. "That was a buntable ball, Pat just didn't get the ball down."

Rangers 10, Royals 9

After pitcher Bob Tewksbury almost won the game in a rare appearance at the plate, Rusty Greer made sure for Texas.

Greer led off the bottom of the 10th with a home run off Billy Brewer (1-2). The Rangers overcame an 8-1 deficit after seven innings, matching the biggest comeback in team history.

Benji Gil's two-run homer in the ninth off Kansas City relief ace Jeff Montgomery tied it at 9. Later in the inning, with the bases loaded and two outs, Tewksbury batted for pitcher Matt Whiteside; the Rangers had lost their designated hitter spot because of lineup changes and were out of position players.

Tewksbury, a .154 batter in the NL, pulled a line drive foul down the left-field line before striking out. Greer's homer was his fifth of the season, and three have won games.

Texas tied a major league record with four pinch-hits during a six-run rally in the eighth. Ed Vosberg (2-1) pitched the 10th.

Angels 10, Red Sox 8

The longest nine-inning game in the majors this season - 4 hours, 9 minutes - featured a bench-clearing brawl at Fenway Park.

California rallied for a 9-8 lead in the eighth on errors by shortstop John Valentin and third baseman Tim Lincecum.

In the seventh, Tony Phillips and Boston catcher Mike Macfarlane began arguing after a called strike. They began grappling, and both were ejected.

Lee Smith tied Doug Jones' major league mark with saves in 15 straight appearances. Mike Butcher (5-0) was the winner and Rheal Cormier (2-1) was the loser.

Orioles 8, Mariners 2

Brady Anderson and Kevin Bass led off the first inning with home runs, sending Baltimore past Seattle at Camden Yards.

Jeff Manto hit a pair of two-run homers for the Orioles and Cal Ripken also connected.

Mike Mussina (5-3) gave up five hits in eight innings. Salomon Torres (0-2) allowed five hits, four of them home runs, in his first AL start.

Athletics 8, Yankees 3

Ruben Sierra hit two solo home runs and Geronimo Berroa had a two-run homer as Oakland won at Yankee Stadium.

New York lost for the 13th time in 16 games. Don Mattingly, whose nine Gold Gloves are a record for AL first basemen, made two errors in an inning for the first time in his career, misplaying a pair of grounders in the seventh.

Jack McDowell (1-4) lost despite striking out 11 in seven innings. Mike Harkey (2-4) was the winner.

Twins 9, Tigers 2

Scott Leius, Pedro Munoz and Rich Becker homered for Minnesota at the Metrodome.

Kevin Tapani (4-4), who shut out Texas in his last start, pitched eight innings and allowed two runs, both of them unearned. He struck out seven, and extended his streak of consecutive innings without a walk to 23.

Leius also doubled and singled against Mike Moore (4-4).

Owners pass proposals to speed up slow games

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Baseball games will get faster during the second half of this year - and the season may even finish.

Owners adopted speedup rules Thursday as they concluded their quarterly meetings, calling for umpires to keep hitters from stepping out of the batter's box and cutting the time between innings from 2 minutes, 25 seconds to 1:45.

And the chairman of management's negotiating committee said he thought there would be a World Series this year.

"Both sides are rational enough to know they can't have a work stoppage in 1995 and probably 1996," John Harrington said. "You can't do that to the fans again, one on top of the other."

Teams hope the rule changes will cut the average game time from three hours to 2 1/2.

They didn't spend much time discussing the decrease in attendance following the strike. The average is down 25 percent from last year's final figure.

"The numbers are down and we're very concerned, but let's see how the summer plays out before we get hysterical," acting commissioner Bud Selig said.

Teams, facing a loss of at least $300 million this year, still won't search for a commissioner until there's a labor deal. On Monday, Selig's temporary term reached its 1,000th day.

"It feels like 10,000," he said Thursday.

Owners have been debating whether to stay with their luxury-tax proposal or go back to a salary cap, a move that could provoke players into another work stoppage next year.

Harrington, the chief executive officer of the Boston Red Sox, hinted that owners may be coming up with a new plan.

"Maybe there's another egg being hatched," he said.

But a management source, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said not to expect a radical shift in the owners' bargaining position. The sides have discussed extending the terms of the expired agreement through the 1996 season in order to ensure labor peace, but those discussions are still in the early stages.

Harrington, who has been trying to persuade hard-liners that a cap can't be obtained without another confrontation, said his preference is for a long-term contract.

"The deal has to be one that we won't really have to adjust in the future," he said.

Selig hasn't told owners who their new top labor lawyer will be or which law firm they will use.

Kansas church is reminder of 'Bible and Rifle Colony'

Community settled by Abolitionists moving from Connecticut before Civil War

By AMY LIGNITZ
Associated Press Writer
WABAUNSEE, Kan. (AP) - Maxine Summers' strong, aged hands move capably across the cracked, yellowed ivories of the pump organ, her legs rapidly pushing life through the instrument.

Her grin is broad as "Come to the Church in the Wildwood" croaks from old organ in the stone church rising from the prairie.

This is the Beecher Bible and Rifle Church, a house of worship with one foot in the present and another in a fascinating past.

The bronze bell that now calls about a dozen faithful to worship is the same bell that summoned dozens of abolitionists to the church more than 130 years ago.

The church was founded during Kansas' struggle to be a free state. Two years after the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854 allowed settlers to decide for themselves whether their territories would allow slavery, a group of abolitionists in New Haven, Conn., organized the Connecticut Kansas Colony. The group was to come to Kansas, each carrying a Bible and a rifle, to help the anti-slavery effort.

At one of the meetings before the company left for "Bleeding Kansas," abolitionist Pastor Henry Ward Beecher pledged 25 Sharps rifles from his Plymouth Church in Brooklyn, N.Y. In making the donation, he said, "There are times when self-defense is a religious duty. If that duty was ever imperative it is now, and in Kansas."

Because of Beecher's contribution, rifles shipped into Kansas by antislavery forces became known as Beecher's Bibles. The Connecticut Kansas Colony later became known as the Beecher Bible and Rifle Colony.

"They were clearly carrying on a very important tradition," said Ramon Powers, executive director of the Kansas State Historical Society.

He said the church "epitomizes that struggle in that it received its name in part because of the overt support from New England for the anti-slavery forces."

Most towns in Kansas Territory at that time were settled by companies from Midwestern states. Wabaunsee was an exception, and the New Englanders who settled there strongly opposed the slavery's expansion in the territories.

That issue caused the demise of the Democratic Party in the mid-19th century, the rise of the Republican Party, and ultimately the conflict between the North and South, Powers said.

The role of the little Beecher Bible and Rifle Church appears to be mostly symbolic.

"What you have in the record is the symbolism that this was New England's contribution to the effort,"

Powers said. "But there doesn't seem to be a lot of tangible evidence that rifles sent there were put to immediate use for the free-state cause."

One group of the Beecher company elected a captain and spent six weeks near Lawrence fighting border ruffians from Missouri.

The church is closed except Sunday mornings and for an occasional wedding. Mrs. Summers lives nearby and sometimes takes tour groups through the musty church, completed of native limestone in 1862. She points out the original hand-carved walnut woodwork and tells how the early congregations were divided down the middle: men on one side, women on the other.

She leads visitors to the loft at the back of the church. Like the overflow crowds of previous decades, they ascend narrow, winding wooden stairs. Some of the remaining original straight-backed pews are in the loft, and Mrs. Summers has visitors sit in them, proving how uncomfortable they were for early churchgoers.

She then grabs the rope that disappears through the roof into the bell tower, and gives it a forceful tug. After a few tries, a clear ring sounds from above.

Prairie wind moans through the wood-framed windows, the panes covered with colorful adhesive film to give the effect of stained glass. The sound is eerie, but Mrs. Summers laughs, and says Pastor Lynn Roth attributes it to Gabriel blowing his horn.

A visitor asks whether the church is on a historic register.

"We've got a plaque someplace," she says. "I don't know where that is."

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Satirists like John Waters are finding it hard to compete with real life these days.

In the 1994 movie "Serial Mom," the director created a ludicrous scene in which sidewalk vendors hawked T-shirts with the portrait of a popular defendant in a multiple murder. Now, vendors outside the O.J. Simpson trial do just that.

"It was parody then," Waters said. "Now it's a parody come true. It's not easy being a parody writer in America in the '90s."

"We've completely lost the distinction between fame and notoriety," he said. "If Manson got out, he would get a better table in a restaurant in New York than Madonna."

A self-described trial junkie, Waters has attended many trials, including those of Charles Manson and Patty Hearst.

Waters was in Minneapolis on Friday for a talk at University of Minnesota on his long-running fascination with crime and celebrities.

The Beecher Bible and Rifle Church was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1971.

As far as the connection to Kansas' history, Roth says, "We don't really pay that much attention to it."

"It's a strange name for a church, and that helps to get attendance. One of the reasons, I suppose, the church has held on is the historical part of it."

The church, officially of the United Church of Christ denomination, supports itself from what goes into the wooden collection box, which Mrs. Summers says is the church's original, as is the blocky, upholstered walnut pastor's chair.

"I feel an obligation to the people there to preach the Gospel," Roth said. "The fact that we're historical is interesting, but I don't think it affects us that much."

Keeping an eye on Texas

Auto insurance rates vary

Auto insurance rates in Texas are determined by the Texas Board of Insurance, which sets benchmark rates for different parts of the state. Insurance companies can charge within 30 percent of that benchmark rate. Drivers in Brazos County pay about $745 annually for automobile insurance, the lowest benchmark rate, while Harris County drivers see the highest rate in Texas at $1,238 per year.

'Family Circus' values capture niche in comics

By AL BRAVO

Associated Press Writer
PARADISE VALLEY, Ariz. (AP) - In an age when politics, contemporary issues and adult humor grab more space on America's comic pages, Bill Keane finds that traditional values ensure a following for his "Family Circus" cartoon.

The man who has drawn the one-panel cartoon since Feb. 29, 1960 said "Family Circus" has endured because of consistency and simplicity.

"It's reassuring, I think, to the American public to see the same family," the 72-year-old Keane said recently in the studio at his suburban Phoenix home.

Billy, Jeffy, Dolly, P.J. and their parents appear in about 1,500 newspapers, including 81 of the 100 largest papers in the nation.

Keane makes references to current movies and the like, but is most comfortable celebrating the traditional family. Billy's wanderings and the ghostlike "Ida Know" and "Not Me" characters who get the blame for household accidents are staples of the comic.

"We are, in the comics, the last frontier of good, wholesome family humor and entertainment," Keane said. "On radio and television, magazines and the movies, you can't tell what you're going to get. And when you look at the comic page, you can usually depend on something acceptable by the entire family."

Charles Schulz, creator of "Peanuts," said the most important thing about "Family Circus" is that it's funny.

"I think we share a care for the same type of humor," Schulz said from his studio in Santa Rosa, Calif. "We're both family men with children and look with great fondness at our families."

Keane was born Oct. 5, 1922, and taught himself to draw in high school in Philadelphia, imitating the styles of cartoonists in The New Yorker magazine of the late 1930s.

He worked as a messenger at the Philadelphia Bulletin before serving three years in the Army, where he drew for Yank magazine and the Pacific Stars and Stripes newspaper in Tokyo.

On his return to the United States, Keane drew spot cartoons and caricatures for the entertainment section of the Bulletin and a weekly Sunday comic for the newspaper. He edited a weekly supplement for children in the Sunday paper and produced single-panel cartoons for other magazines.

Keane dropped an 'l' from his first name, just to be different. He also began his own family, eventually having four sons and a daughter, one more than his future cartoon family.

In 1953, Keane started a one-panel comic called "Channel Chuckles" that lampooned the up-and-coming medium, television. He moved to Arizona in 1958 because of allergies. Two years later, he started drawing a comic about a family much like his own.

He first called his new panel "The Family Circle," but had to change the name after Family Circle magazine threatened to sue. The evolution of the strip wasn't complete until several years later, Keane said, doodling at his desk.

"But I did one cartoon - oh, about 1965 or '66 - that showed Jeffy coming out of the living room late at night in pajamas and Mommy and Daddy watching television and Jeffy says, 'I don't feel so good, I think I need a hug.' And suddenly I got a lot of mail from people about this dear little fella needing a hug, and I realized that there was something more than just getting a belly laugh every day."

"Family Circus" has one occasional theme that's rare on the comic pages: religion.

"I'm not out to be an evangelist or trying to preach at all, but I do feel it does add a stature to the family that is believable. And it has an appeal to most mothers and fathers and the kids themselves," Keane said.

Elsa Nystrom, a professor at Kennesaw State College in Marietta, Ga., who has used the comic in her class on aging, said Keane sometimes has Granddad looking down from heaven.

"His use of morality was positive," she said.

Keane lists less traditional strips like "The Far Side" among his favorites. And he loved it when cartoonist Bill Griffith had his offbeat "Zippy the Pinhead" character walk up from a bump on the head thinking he was Keane's Jeffy.

Keane responded by giving Zippy an appearance in "Family Circus."

The full title of this nation's ambassadors is "ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS, CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

AMOS • THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHET

ON HIS WAY NORTH TO WARN ALL SINNERS IN ISRAEL THAT THE LORD IS DISPLEASED WITH THEM, AMOS PAUSES TO VIEW THE CITY OF JERUSALEM FROM AFAR....

FROM AN OLIVE GROVE, HIGH ABOVE KIDRON VALLEY HE CAN SEE THE DOMES AND ROOFS OF THE GOLDEN CITY....

AND WHILE AMOS STRUGGLES TO REACH BETHEL, THERE, IN THE SUMMER PALACE OF THIS CITY, GUESTS OF KING JEROBOAM, THE NOBLES AND PRINCES OF ISRAEL CONTINUE TO REVEL IN LUXURY, IN RIOTOUS WASTEFUL LIVING, WITH NO THOUGHT OF THE RIGHTEOUS WAY OF LIFE!

Next Week INTO THE TEMPLE BETHEL!

Mental health crisis is being overlooked

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Much of the world faces a largely overlooked crisis in mental and behavioral health that is contributing to societal violence and community breakdown, a report says.
Focusing on links between mental health impairments and the social problems may provide new solutions to both, said Dr. Arthur Kleinman of Harvard Medical School, who directed the study.

communities beset by poverty and unemployment, he said.

The report also says:
- Depressive and anxiety disorders together account for 20 percent to 30 percent of all visits to health care providers worldwide. Through treatable, they are often overlooked because of an overall lack of attention to mental health, Kleinman said.

- Mental retardation is two to eight times more common in poor nations than in industrialized countries, due to such things as nutritional deficiencies and lack of proper prenatal care.

- Social conditions foster behaviors that harm physical health. For example, impoverished mothers in African shantytowns who exchange sex for food and lodging can get infected with the AIDS virus.

- By the year 2000, the number of people with schizophrenia in poor countries will increase by 45 percent, compared to 1985. That is because of growth in the number of people in the age groups at risk.

- By the year 2025, three-quarters of elderly people with dementia such as Alzheimer's disease will live in developing countries.

The report calls for an international emphasis on mental health. Among its recommendations are improvements in mental health services in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Middle East, and particularly improved services for children and adolescents. It calls for better training in mental health for a range of health workers from doctors to village health personnel, and changes in government policies to prevent violence against women.

The report, which drew on the work of more than 80 experts in more than 30 nations, surveys mental and behavioral health problems in low-income nations of Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Middle East.
The report was presented May 15 to United Nations Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali. It was funded by the Carnegie Corp., the MacArthur and Rockefeller foundations and the Milbank Memorial Fund.

One conclusion of the report is that societal and mental health problems feed on each other, said Kleinman, who is chair of the department of social medicine at Harvard.

For example, he said, communities with politically inspired violence often have high rates of alcohol abuse and violent abuse within homes. That can lead wives to depression and hurt children's development in school, he said. And children growing up in violent homes are predisposed to adopting violence as a way of life, he said.

Violence across ethnic or religious lines creates "desperate, hopeless, depressed youth" who have higher rates of suicide and homicide, which in turn promote more breakdown of

Luftwaffe pilot reunited with plane in Texas museum

German aviator survived after FW-190 shot down over Norway in February 1945

By JOHN FLORES
The Monitor (McAllen)
 RIO HONDO, Texas - The sleek German plane's engine revved, its pilot steering to evade an oncoming British Bristol Beaufighter. But the British plane's six .303-inch Browning machine guns were no match for the Focke-Wulf 190. Bullets ripped into the FW-190's engine on Feb. 9, 1945, and the dog fight over a Norwegian fjord came to a quick end.

Unteroffizier Heinz Orlowski, a 21-year-old Luftwaffe hunter pilot, bailed out of the burning plane seconds before it hit the ground. Orlowski's parachute didn't open, and during the 300-foot fall, a phosphorous signal pistol discharged into his leg, burning him to the bone. With the unopened parachute trailing in the wind, he plunged deep into a mountainside snow drift.

"(A group of) Norwegians who had watched the air battle found me and brought me down to the valley on skis," he said during an interview with Eileen Mattei of the Texas Air Museum in Rio Hondo.

Last year, Orlowski, a retired wood merchant living in Berlin, once again saw the FW-190. Walking with a slight limp from the massive phosphorous burns, he approached the same plane from which he had escaped from 50 years earlier.

Only this time, the plane was on display at the Texas Air Museum in Rio Hondo.

Orlowski came to Texas at the invitation of The Discovery Channel, which wanted to film a documentary about him. The show is scheduled to air in the coming months.

The FW-190 was found in 1985 in Norway. The Texas Air Museum acquired it a year later - about the same time museum director John Houston learned the plane's pilot was still alive.

"The Norwegians researched and found him. One of the members (of their air museum) got a Berlin phone book and called a few people (of the last name Orlowski). Finally, they managed to get a relative of his," Houston said.

Houston spoke enough German to call Orlowski and request an interview. In 1988, he met with the aging Luftwaffe pilot at his Berlin home. The meeting was a smashing success.

"I called him from Sweden, and he said I could come to visit him at 2 p.m. and stay 'til 3," Houston said. "But when 3 o'clock came around, he asked if I'd like to stay till 4. Then, at 4, he asked if I'd like to eat dinner."

World War II combat Luftwaffe pilots normally don't talk much about their experiences, Houston said. But the thought of seeing his old plane again was enough to engage Orlowski for a long while.

"(This) is a very positive thing. There are no Focke-Wulfs in German museums ... I had always wished to visit the Focke-Wulfs (in Rio Hondo). When the television group offered to pay our way, I could not refuse," Orlowski said.

When Orlowski and his wife Hilde visited the museum last year, the German man still had the distinguished air of a superior combat pilot, McMaster said. But now the unlikely gleam of nostalgia also shined in Orlowski's eagle eye.

"I was at the museum when they got here, and I watched him approach his old plane," McMaster said. "You could picture him at 21 years old, because it had all come back to him."

Orlowski pushed a button on the fuselage that dropped a step out to help the pilot to climb into the cockpit. The step didn't fall, so without hesitation he reached into another compartment and opened it. Then he climbed into the cockpit.

"He was looking around (inside the cockpit) for several minutes, then he raised his head up and looked out over the engine (cowling)," McMaster said. "He turned to the group of us on the ground ... That smile on his face was worth the price of the ticket to get him over here."

At the time he was shot down, Orlowski was part of an escort group for the vaunted German battleship, the Tirpitz. He was sidelined for the remainder of the war due to the burns suffered in the ejection from his fighter plane. The injury may have saved his life, because unlike Allied fighter pilots, the Luftwaffe's policy was to keep a pilot flying for the duration of the war. Only severe injury or death would take him out of fighter duty.

"I had 400 takeoffs and landings in many aircraft," Orlowski said. "And I started pilot training when I was 19. After training in a variety of planes - Focke-Wulf 56, Stoesers, Arado 66 and 69, Bucher 133 and 134 - I began specialized training as a hunter pilot."

He also flew the legendary ME-109 and ME-110 before getting assigned to the FW-190. While the ME-109 was noted by pilots as more effective at higher altitudes, the FW-190 became the primary workhorse for German combat force because of its more powerful radial engine and improved landing gear.

Most of the planes were destroyed in battle against superior Allied forces.

The FW-190 Orlowski flew, called "White One," still has its original 1,700-horsepower BMW radial engine, but it wasn't restored for flight.

Another FW-190, the "Blue Four" flown by Luftwaffe ace Rudi Lenz, also was acquired by the museum. The "Blue Four" will be restored to flying condition in an estimated 18 months.

Houston founded the Texas Air Museum about 10 years ago, with the aim of memorializing military air power - especially from the Vietnam era. Today, a glance across the expansive grounds reveals a widened mission.

The museum today has 48 planes and flight crew relics from a 60-year spectrum of aviation, from pre-World War I to Vietnam.

"There are no flying Focke Wulf 190s anywhere in the world ... and there are only four or five in existence," said Bob McMaster, maintenance chief for the air museum.

With a top speed of 408 miles per hour, solidly-based aerodynamics, and plenty of armaments - two 13mm machine guns and four 20mm cannons, the FW-190 was swift, evasive and deadly. Its primary foes were the British Spitfire, the De Havilland Mosquito, the Bristol Beaufighter and the P-51 Mustang.

The P-51 Mustang, with six .50 caliber machine guns and a top speed of 437 miles per hour, could easily outpace the FW-190. Due to prolonged tours of duty, Luftwaffe pilots often had an edge in combat, if not in equipment.

'Military brats' look for home they never had

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) - In 1961, when King Mohammed V of Morocco died, 13-year-old Mike Adams looked out of his bedroom window to see an endless procession of Berber tribespeople flow into Rabat to pay their respects.

"There must have been a million of them, maybe two million," he recalls. "I've never seen anything like it. How many people have?"

Not many people move 12 times during their childhoods, and attend three high schools. As the son of an Air Force officer, Adams did just that.

And now he is trying to connect with other "military brats" who grew up in a world of uniforms, oftentimes living abroad, sometimes witness to history.

A year ago, he founded Military Brats of America, a national organization that seeks to promote the interests of the 10 million to 15 million people who he says fit the general definition.

"The size of the American military exploded during and after World War II, and so did the number of military children," said Adams, 47, a self-employed graphic designer in New York. "The oldest of us are now in our 40s, and we're beginning to ask, 'what hit us?' in childhood."

Whether "dependents," as they're officially known, or "brats" as they generally call themselves, being one is a mixed blessing, Adams says. Growing up with a more sophisticated view of the world also can mean missing out on some of life's simpler pleasures.

Typically, he said, military brats attend six or more schools by the time they finish high school. Their closest friendships may last only a year. Many never know such typical teen experiences as hanging out at the drive-in, cheering a basketball team in the state regionals, or attending a senior prom.

"It's best summed up in one phrase - no home town," Adams said. "Home towns give normal people a sense of a shared destiny. None of us have any place to go back to. In a world of interconnected destinies, most brats have been going it alone."

Adams says he sought a way to bring such people together, to compare pasts, even find out if childhood experiences led to similar later lives.

Three years ago, he placed small ads in magazines catering to military audiences. Those drew only nibbles of interest, but the idea eventually caught on, and last year became Military Brats of America.

For $8 dues, a new member gets a newsletter, a listing in the MBA "registry" and a bumper sticker with the logo of a crying baby, clutching a missile in one hand.

Adams said MBA's main purpose is to "bolster the image of military brats in the national consciousness," somewhat like war veterans. "As it stands, we have absolutely no image in the minds of Americans."

Last year MBA established its own computer bulletin board. In eight months, 1,000 messages have been posted by people seeking old friends, recalling experiences or swapping views on "the best and worst things" about being a military brat.

Whether discussing the transience of military life, fleeting friendships, pride and patriotism, Vietnam or even darker questions - alcoholism, drugs and domestic violence - most contributors are upbeat, Adams said.

A sampling of comments, randomly culled by Adams from his computer, seemed to bear that out. Most respondents used only their first names or nicknames.

-A Pennsylvania man said living abroad more than compensated for not having a home town. "I couldn't have asked for a better upbringing," he said. "I can fit in with any social group ... speak at least a smattering of several foreign tongues, and can survive even in countries whose language I know not."

-A woman with three daughters said she saw her family's frequent moves as a means to self-improvement: "I could always ... become a new person if I didn't like the me I was."

-A 26-year-old woman said that only now does she realize some military families had serious problems but added, "I wouldn't change a day in my life, though. I feel us brats are more prepared for the world."

Adams welcomes additions to his list of "military brat celebrities." Among them: House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Republican presidential candidate Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas; singers Bette Midler, John Denver and the late Jim Morrison; basketball star Shaquille O'Neal; and actresses Faye Dunaway, Heather Locklear and Victoria Principal.

Military Brats of America can be reached at: PO Box 1165A, New York, NY, 10159.

Iraqi arms dealers linked to zirconium

By MICHAEL BLOOD
Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) - The government's seizure of tons of Iraq-bound metal that can be used to make nuclear weapons may be just a fraction of the illicit marketplace linked to the former Soviet Union.

Three men, including a former bank president, were arrested Thursday and charged with trying to sell nearly 8 tons of zirconium to undercover agents posing as Iraqi-sponsored arms dealers.

Investigators suspect the nearly 8 tons of nuclear-grade zirconium confiscated Thursday was stolen, possibly in the Ukraine. Officials called it the largest seizure of nuclear-related materials in U.S. history.

Since the breakup of the Soviet Union, U.S. officials have warned of the potential for its nuclear hardware and related materials to end up in the hands of terrorists or rogue nations.

"The concern now is it could reach epidemic proportions of leakage out of Russia, given the weakly enforced export control laws and the desperation for cash," said David Albright, president of the Institute for Science and International Security, a research group in Washington.

"These types of incidents are a tip of the iceberg," said Evan Medeiros, a senior analyst with the Arms Control Association in Washington.

While the whereabouts of enriched uranium and plutonium remain a greater concern, "I don't think the significance of this can be underplayed," Medeiros said.

The yearlong case began after informants told investigators that the men were trying to sell zirconium from the former Soviet Union on the black market, said Robert Van Etten, special agent in charge of the U.S. Customs Service office in New York.

Shipping documents show the metal was sent from the Ukraine to Germany before heading to the United States, investigators said.

The zirconium was stored at a warehouse in the borough of Queens, the complaint against the men alleges. The men allegedly sought $2 million for 5 tons of the metal, a price later reduced to $1.8 million, Van Etten said.

In secretly taped conversations, the defendants said the material had been stolen from a stockpile in Ukraine, Van Etten said. Officials have not yet confirmed its source.

Nuclear-grade zirconium is typically used as a coating for uranium fuel rods in reactors. It can play a supporting role in the manufacture of weapons since a byproduct of uranium used in reactors is plutonium - a key component in nuclear arms.

Other grades of zirconium are used in jewelry.

The 5-ton shipment, destined first for Italy to avoid the U.S. trade embargo, was delayed by Customs investigators in December at New York's Kennedy Airport. The businessmen then negotiated a deal to get the undercover agents a 2-ton shipment from Ukraine instead. That shipment was seized Thursday in Cyprus.

Charged with attempting to illegally export zirconium, in violation of U.S. trade sanctions against Iraq, were Demetrios Demetrios, 40, Renos Kourtidis, 55, and Constantine Zahariadas, 50. They each face a maximum 10-year prison term and $25,000 fine if convicted.

Kourtidis is the former president of Marathon National Bank in Queens. Demetrios is the owner of Interglobal Manufacturing Enterprises, an import-export business. Zahariadas, a Greek citizen, is also in the import-export industry, authorities said.
