Hantavirus found in area rodents

By CHIP BROWN
 Associated Press Writer
 AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Department of Health said Friday five different rodent species have been found to carry the deadly hantavirus in the Panhandle, where a teen-ager died from the infection last month.

The health department said the tests are a revelation in the study of hantavirus, which initially was believed to be carried by deer mice.

"Our tests, implicating the western harvest mouse as a possible hantavirus carrier, show that other - perhaps many - species of rodent are likely carriers of this deadly virus," said Dr. David Smith, Texas health commissioner.

State health officials tested 338 trapped rodent specimens following the death of 15-year-old Rocky Arzola Jr. of Hereford on May 18. Arzola died within 24 hours of being hospitalized with acute respiratory distress and fever.

A Potter County justice of the peace said Arzola worked in a cattle feed lot and may have been exposed to the virus at work.

From May 26 to May 31, the health department's six-member Rapid Response Team, clad in protective suits with respirators, trapped 338 rodent specimens representing six separate species of mice in Deaf Smith and Bailey counties.

Blood samples from the specimens were tested at a state lab in Austin, and tissue and blood samples also were forwarded to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

"Although tissue and blood sampling at CDC is not yet complete, the blood tests conducted by TDH have shown that 16 of 338 trapped specimens - or about 4.73 percent of the mice caught - had antibodies for hantavirus," Smith said.

"What is somewhat alarming is that all but one of the six species trapped are represented among the 16 mice that tested positive," Smith added. "And one species, the western harvest mouse, with eight specimens infected, seemed to be the prominent species with antibodies for hantavirus."

Hantavirus gained national attention in 1993, after a deadly outbreak of the rodent-borne illness in the Four Corners area of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado.

Smith said hantavirus infection often is accompanied by high fever with a cough, sore throat and respiratory distress.

The health department lists several ways to prevent exposure to rodent-borne diseases:

- Eliminate shelter for rodents by clearing trash, woodpiles, old cans and other rodent attractions.
- Store pet and livestock food in covered containers away from homes.
- Plug holes in walls and around pipes and vents with sheet metal or screens.
- Do not sleep on the floor or ground.
- Rodents in homes should be trapped with baited, spring-loaded traps, placed on newspaper dusted with flea powder. Outdoors, traps should be set near hay or woodpiles.
- Anyone who touches a mouse or rat should wash or bathe with soap.

Entertainers sought for annual Fourth festivities

Preparations are under way for festivities next month at Veteran's Park and Hereford's celebration of Independence Day.

Janie Nino, who is organizing entertainment for the day-long affair, has released a preliminary list of performers and vendors who will be at the park.

The July 4th Celebration is co-sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, the City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

Residents are invited to go take picnic lunches and play equipment to the park early and enjoy a day with their friends and neighbors celebrating the 219th anniversary of American independence.

Several local organizations will be on hand to offer food items for sale as fundraisers and the chamber will provide watermelon for everyone.

Entertainment will continue through the evening until the fireworks display at sundown.

The following are performers who were scheduled to take the stage as of Friday afternoon, and organization which had signed up to operate booths.

Anyone wishing to perform or have a booth at the park must call Nino at 364-0231 before noon Wednesday.

Performance times have not yet been determined and the order may be changed without notice.

Mule-drawn chuck wagon used by local family to keep track of roots

By GEORGIA TYLER
 Staff Writer

Cooking on an open fire at a chuck wagon is a Hereford family's way of staying in touch with their roots.

"I feel I'm remembering my heritage," said Wayne Walker, who has won awards for his expertise at chuck wagon cooking.

Walker and his sister and brother-in-law, Karen and Donnie Fangman; his parents, Connie and Margaret Walker, and a family friend, Bobbie Evans, travel around the country with their chuck wagon for competition.

The wagon used primarily is authentic in detail to the kind that accompanied cattle drives in the 19th century.

As a matter of fact, the wheels on the wagon have been in the Walker family for many years.

"My mother remembers coming to West Texas in a covered wagon," said Connie Walker. His mother, Annie Walker, is 91 years old.

Engineering of the wagon is very simple -- the "box" simply rests on two axles. A door, much like a drop-leaf on a table, is lowered at the back of the wagon to reveal a large work space and storage bins.

A surprise item in the Walking "F" wagon is a package of Ar buckle coffee beans, a brew demanded by drovers on cattle drives. An antique coffee grinder prepares the beans for a pot of boiled coffee, over an open fire.

"We've been looking for another coffee grinder, but haven't found one," noted Walker.

The Walking "F" chuck wagon won the best food award at 1995 Cowboy Roundup USA in Amarillo several weeks ago, then traveled to Red River, N.M., last weekend where the crew took first in beans and meat cooking. Fifteen groups competed in Amarillo and four in Red River.

The 2,200-pound chuck wagon is transported by trailer to cook sites. But, if there's a parade, the Walking "F" takes along a pair of mules to pull the wagon.

Fangman is the acknowledged mule skinner, skilled at reining Jack and Jill as they pull the wagon. Another mule, Ruby, goes along to pull a small surrey if the family takes part in a parade.

Although not authentic to a particular era, a wagon smaller than the big chuck wagon is being outfitted by Fangman. He has installed rubber tires on it to make it easier to pull. The Walking "F" will use it on some occasions.

Fangman's dream is to build wagons for a clientele that the Fangmans and Walkers believe is growing all the time.

Karen Fangman pointed out that the chuck cookoffs are fun and family-oriented. Her three sons, Fred, Colby and Daniel, enjoy the activity as much as the parents, she said.

The Walker-Fangman chuck gang enters events on weekends, reserving weekdays for their own careers. Donnie Fangman is a transportation officer at the Clements Unit in Amarillo. Karen Fangman is a school nurse in Hereford.

Wayne Walker is an auctioneer and in the car business. Connie Walker is retired from business.

They have several dates in coming months to cook for special events or enter competition. They've been invited to Dodge City, Kan., and are planning trips to Clarendon and Ruidoso, N.M.

But, the biggie is unconfirmed. By winning the Cowboy Roundup competition in Amarillo, they earned the right to provide food for the Palo Duro Canyon WestFest in September.

Last year, the giant show staged by cowboy singer Michael Martin Murphey included cattle drives, with chuck wagon meals. Although there are no cattle drives planned this year, the Walking "F" will cook for trail drives, if they are conducted.

"They don't know yet if there will be enough people for the trail drives," said Connie Walker. "We won't know for a while if we'll go down there."

The WestFest series -- held in Colorado and South Dakota as well as Palo Duro Canyon -- got a big boost in late May when a writer for the Chicago Tribune wrote about Murphey's shows.

The writer, Brian Downes, described the Palo Duro Canyon experience last year in some detail and illustrated the article with a photograph of Wayne Walker with the chuck wagon.

After the article was published, the Fangmans and Walkers got telephone inquiries from several Midwestern residents, asking for information on wagons.

Walking "F" took part in last year's WestFest in Palo Duro Canyon.

Whether they have thousands or hundreds watching them in their culinary performance, the Walkers and Fangmans have a good time. The food is good as is the company of performers, cowboy poets and musicians.

The Walking "F" may not know until reaching a contest site what the menu will be. The family members can be sure, though, that the staples of the trail drive -- beans, meat, sourdough

Panhandle faces record tornado season

By JEAN PAGEL
 Associated Press Writer
 CHILDRESS, Texas (AP) - Black clouds swelled with roiling fury on the western horizon.

It was Saturday night, June 3.

The popular Greenbelt Bowl for all-star football players was under way at the local high school stadium. But by the third quarter, organizers grew worried enough about the menacing weather to cut off the game for the first time in the bowl's 46-year history.

Shari Cooper drove away in thick rain and had almost made it home when she saw a tornado lift her husband's indoor rodeo arena.

"The whole building came up, real slow, and then just went 'whoosh,'" Mrs. Cooper said.

Terror broke out on the Cooper property, where about 800 people had been that afternoon for a roping contest. About 40 horses and a few people remained inside as the giant barn's north end collapsed.

Mrs. Cooper described chaos: Flying metal, uprooted concrete, sparks shooting out of an electric box, bleeding horses. Amazingly, no people got seriously injured.

Cleanup took about two weeks. The arena now looks sheared on one side.

That twister and a big batch of others across the Texas Panhandle this spring have set the region on course for a record tornadoic year.

"This is just such weird weather," said Mrs. Cooper, a Childress native. "Whoa, it has really been a real hard spring."

The National Weather Service in Amarillo has confirmed 55-60 tornadoes already this year for a 33-county area that covers eastern New Mexico and the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles. A record 62 tornadoes hit the region in 1971.

What's average? Twenty.

During seven days alone, June 2-8, the weather service counted 35 twisters, including tornadoes that caused multimillion-dollar destruction in Friona and Pampa.

"A lot of weather perimeters came together in the right situation," said Doug Crowley, warning coordination meteorologist. "Colliding air masses of different descriptions, warm moist air from the coast, cool air from the Northwest."

Another explanation for this year's high tornado total gives credit to better technology and volunteers out tracking more funnel clouds, he said.

The biggest one so far, Crowley said, was a mile-wide beast that struck the east Texas Panhandle near Allison with winds from 207-260 mph. Fewer than 5 percent of all tornadoes nationwide ever reach such intensity, he said.

Areas east of U.S. 287 seem particularly hard-hit by the violent weather blamed for one fatality.

Storms near Childress snapped power lines and produced hail that broke storm windows.

A drive through the county shows tumbleweeds gnarled into fences. Trees - planted decades ago as wind breaks - are splintered.

"People just have to accept that as a part of life up here," said Bob

Brand wins awards at state press meet

The Hereford Brand advertising department was judged the best in the state among newspapers its size Saturday when it won first place at the Texas Press Association annual convention being held in Austin.

The award is the second in two years for the department, headed by Mauri Montgomery, and the fifth since 1984.

In addition, the Brand captured a third place award in the best sports photo division.

The photo was taken by Montgomery during a Hereford High School football game on Sept. 30, 1994.

It highlighted HHS tight end Raymond Gonzales diving to catch pass from Michael Brown while being defended by a player from Lindall High School.

Shower dampens Hereford

Hereford residents woke up Saturday morning to rain as a shower passing through town dumped 0.51 of an inch of moisture on the city before 7 a.m., according to KPAN Radio. Another 0.24 of an inch fell after 7 a.m. For Saturday night, forecasters were predicting a 50 percent chance of thunderstorms with a low in the mid-50s and east winds at 10-15 mph. Sunday's forecast is for partly cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms and a high in the upper 70s with variable winds at 5-15 mph.

County meeting canceled

A meeting of Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will not be held Monday morning. County Judge Tom Simons said the meeting was canceled because at least two commissioners will be out of the county.

Blood drive set Wednesday

Coffee Memorial Blood Center will be in Hereford on Wednesday for a blood drive set for 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Donors are invited to turn out for a "Commitment to Caring" in the Community Center. Residents are reminded that blood donors are needed to provide a safe and reliable blood supply for the Panhandle.

Esckridge, city manager in Pampa, where 43 homes and 23 businesses were destroyed this month. "Everybody's pulled together, already starting to rebuild."

Charles Stewart, fire chief and emergency management coordinator in Vernon, is tired of sandbagging. Rain fell 10-11 inches at a time in his city.

"We sure enjoyed this last week with the sun out," Stewart said. Brutal '95 has touched other parts of West Texas as well.

On the morning of May 7, one of the season's first tornados hit near Canyon.

It killed Robert LeGrand, 38, in his mobile home just north of Canyon, and two Hereford women suffered injuries when the twister struck their vehicle while driving on U.S. 60, about five miles west of Canyon. The also caused extensive damage to the High Plains Baptist Assembly.

San Angelo endured its biggest storm in four decades May 28 when tornadic winds ripped through and hail fell two feet deep.

Thousands of homes and hundreds of businesses were damaged. President Clinton signed a disaster declaration for Tom Green County.

Recovery will be difficult, said Jess Stanford, assistant city manager.

West Texas Utilities Co. crews still had about 10,000 street and security light fixtures to replace last week in San Angelo. Broken windows are boarded, roofs coated with plastic.

Stanford said the most lasting damage is the fear etched in memory.

"That's just part of living in West Texas," he said. "These kind of storms come through and it's part of coping with your environment."

bread and cobbler -- will be cooked.

Sponsors of events provide the ingredients for a meal, then recover their expense by serving meals to visitors, Karen Fangman explained about the contests.

Fangman and Walker cook steaks over a wood fire, usually with mesquite.

"We don't tell all our secrets," said Walker with a laugh.

Until recently, their bean pot had no cover which caused some problem because aluminum foil stretched across the top was not authentic, Wayne Walker observed wryly.

The problem was solved by converting a plow disk to a lid, complete with handle welded on the top.

"It fits perfectly," said Karen Fangman.

The Walkers and Fangmans are active in the programs held at the Country Opry in Hereford. This weekend, they participated in the seventh anniversary celebration of the Opry.

Besides entering chuck wagon cooking events, the Walking "F" has been called on to prepare and serve food for special events, such as family reunions.

As far as they're concerned, it doesn't matter how big the crowd. They just enjoy doing what they're doing.

First Deaf Smith County courthouse, at La Plata

Grenada was named the first county seat of Deaf Smith County in October, 1890, but the town's name was changed to La Plata in December, 1890. The commissioners court bought a lot for $75, accepted a bid of $41,900 to build this courthouse in March, 1891. The town lost half its citizens through a drought, a hard winter in 1897, and a promised railroad missed La Plata by 26 miles. In 1898, county citizens voted to move the county seat to Bluewater, near the railroad. Like Grenada, Bluewater had to change its name to get a post office, and it became Hereford.

Base commission presents president political problem

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - An independent commission is calling for the shutdown of 90 U.S. military bases, including some major ones in California that hand President Clinton a delicate political problem.

With recommendations of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission heading for his desk, Clinton faces the tough choice of rejecting the recommendations or dealing California - the biggest electoral prize - an added heavy economic blow.

In two days of deliberation ending Friday night, the eight-member commission made decisions on 166 facilities, including air bases, maintenance centers, tank ranges, depots, shipyards, headquarters, accounting offices and warehouses.

It called for 90 to be closed completely or nearly completely, recommended that 43 stay open and said 33 should have functions realigned.

The commission had begun with 177 facilities of various sizes, but made 166 specific recommendations, in some cases combining more than one small installation into a single recommendation.

Near the end of its deliberations, the commission voted to close the Fleet Industrial Supply Center in Oakland, Calif. That came on top of earlier votes recommending major shutdowns at the Oakland Army Base, the Long Beach Naval Shipyard and McClellan Air Force Base in Sacramento, Calif.

Combined, these would translate into 18,000 lost jobs in California, a state already hit hard by defense cuts.

"There was no spirit of trying to inflict any pain on California," said commission Chairman Alan Dixon, a former senator from Illinois. "It was to try to close the unnecessary bases and installations and, as luck would have it, several were in California."

Dixon said there was no use trying to console communities facing massive job loss with speeches about how the savings will translate into improved military readiness. And California Gov. Pete Wilson, for one, appeared to be in no mood to be consoled.

"If I were president, I would ask that there be a revision of the process altogether," said Wilson, a Republican presidential hopeful. The commission was working from a list developed by the White House based on "unrealistic and dangerous" assumptions about reducing defense spending, he said.

With that as a starting point, he said, the commission could not help but make excessive cuts.

Even before Friday's actions on the Oakland and Long Beach facilities, California Sens. Barbara Boxer and Dianne Feinstein said they would urge Clinton to reject the list.

At the White House, spokesman Mike McCurry described Clinton as "concerned about the decisions being reached by the commission." He said the president would be "especially interested" in how the closures would affect military readiness and modernization.

The commission will report to Clinton by July 1.

Work to start on U.S. 385

The Texas Department of Transportation has awarded a contract to a Kansas firm for work to improve the driving surface of U.S. 385 in Deaf Smith County and FM 2590 in Randall County.

The project is scheduled to begin Monday on U.S. 385. It will include reconditioning the pavement and restriping.

The Deaf Smith County work will include the area from the north city limits north to FM 1412.

Work will move to FM 2590 on July 10 and resurface that road from U.S. 60 to FM 2219.

All roads will be open during construction, but will be reduced to one lane of two-way travel.

Flagmen and pilot cars will guide traffic through the construction zone. Both lanes will be open at night.

Weather permitting, the work will be completed by the end of July.

"The overlay project is preventive maintenance work and very cost effective," said Don Day, Canyon area engineer. "The life of our rural highway system is greatly extended by this practice."

Shuttle set for voyage to meet Mir

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) -

With thunderstorms looming, NASA fueled Atlantis on Saturday for liftoff on the first U.S. mission to dock with a Russian spacecraft in 20 years.

The weather once again threatened to delay the mission to retrieve an American astronaut from Russia's space station Mir. This time at least, NASA was able to pump a half-million gallons of propellants into Atlantis for a late-afternoon launch. Lightning prevented fueling on Friday.

"It's looking like a 1-in-5 chance (of launching) through Monday," said Air Force Capt. Dave Biggar, a meteorologist. "It's going to be a long week."

NASA wants to launch the shuttle and its international crew of seven as soon as possible. That's because for the first time in 34 years of U.S. human space flight, people are waiting in orbit for a ride home.

U.S. astronaut Norman Thagard and his two Russian colleagues, Vladimir Dezhurov and Gennady Strekalov, have been on Mir for more than three months. They're to be replaced by two Russian cosmonauts flying up on Atlantis.

Thagard and his Mir-mates are by no means stranded. If necessary, the three men could return to Earth in a Russian Soyuz capsule.

The last time U.S. and Russian spacecraft docked in orbit was in July 1975. Both countries' rockets blasted off right on time for that rendezvous.

Just in case, the Soviets had a backup Soyuz rocket on a nearby pad ready to go as well as a backup crew for the regular crew. How embarrassing it would have been, Soviet thinking went back then, if the Americans had to wait - and wait - for the Soviets to launch.

Because of the Cold War, nothing really came of the Apollo-Soyuz linkup. This time will be different, both sides insist.

"It's going to be a very good feeling to reach my hand across when we open the hatch on this mission and say, 'This may be just one handshake but there are going to be very many more,'" said Atlantis' commander, Robert "Hoot" Gibson.

Seven Atlantis-Mir dockings are planned over the next two years. NASA and the Russian Space Agency consider all this practice for the real test - building an international space station later this decade.

Laughlin to move to GOP

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) - U.S. Rep. Greg Laughlin, D-West Columbia, will sever his ties with Democrats on Monday and join the Republican Party, the Victoria Advocate says, quoting Laughlin's longtime campaign manager.

Laughlin took a number of shots at congressional Democrats during a speech he gave on Friday at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon at El Campo, Texas, but ducked a question immediately afterward about whether he's switching parties.

"It's no secret that in the Democratic caucus there are a lot of rifts. I have certainly considered all of that, and with that said, I am not making any announcements today," Laughlin replied.

Laughlin and three other Democrats resigned earlier in the month from the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, citing philosophical differences with the fundraising arm of the party.

Ken Bryan, a consultant based in Victoria and Austin who has headed Laughlin's campaign in four elections, told the Advocate that Laughlin's party switch is a done deal.

Bryan said Laughlin will announce the change on Monday.

Don Truman, Republican Party chairman for Victoria, confirmed he invited Republicans from throughout the congressional district to a meeting with Laughlin at a residence Friday night.

Laughlin, a conservative, has fought an uphill battle in Washington since Republicans gained a majority in last November's election.

Report highlights ways schools can reduce expenses

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Texas school districts potentially could save $455 million in outside-the-classroom costs, the state auditor said in a report released Friday.

"Nearly $20 billion was spent on public education during the 1993-94 school year, representing a 35 percent increase over the past four years. Clearly, spending these dollars wisely is an overriding issue," State Auditor Lawrence Alwin said in a letter accompanying the 1994 Savings Profile System for Texas School Districts.

"For local and state officials who must make the tough decisions, this report provides a road map to areas where cost savings might be found," he wrote to state leaders.

The potential savings figure - which the auditor's report said should be used as a starting point for school district budget discussions - was questioned by Dan Casey, research director for the Texas Association of School Boards.

The association in the past has been critical of the audit reports.

Casey said changes have been made that improve the state auditor's procedures since a similar report was issued last year. He also gave the auditor's office credit for attempting to provide a service for school districts.

But he said the report actually identifies variations in spending among school districts. That doesn't necessarily translate into savings, he said.

"They're not using as much chicken blood as last year, but it's still largely voodoo auditing to many school districts," Casey said.

Potential savings were estimated by putting school districts into groups of 25 based on size and demographics. The per-student cost in various categories was compared to the median cost. Differences were used to determine the final figure.

Potential savings were identified in areas including administration, extracurricular activities, plant and maintenance, professional fees, utilities, supplies, travel and insurance.

The report also said that school districts have shown a small decrease in recent years in the percentage of expenditures on noninstructional activities.

DPS urges trip planning

Trooper Wayne Beighle of the Texas Department of Public Safety cautions residents that summer driving too often combines hot weather, hot cars and hot tempers.

Pre-trip planning can help minimize these dangerous symptoms of summer driving.

Pre-trip planning includes vehicle preparation. Check the belts, hoses and coolant fluid. In addition, check the motor oil, transmission oil, brake fluid, power steering fluid and windshield washer fluid.

Also, check the windshield wiper blades, the air, oil and fuel filters and inspect tires to make sure they have correct and even air pressure and look at tread wear and sidewall cracking.

Lengthy trips should begin with route planning. A call to the Department of Transportation or law enforcement agency may help you avoid construction delays.

Let a neighbor, friend or family member not traveling with you know your determined routes and schedules. Part of trip scheduling may include driving during cooler hours and resting your car and yourself during peak hours of heat.

"Now," said Beighle, "prepare yourself."

Take proper clothing in case you are exposed to extended heat, and use quality sunglasses. Most of all, have a safe travel attitude before you pick up the car keys.

This safe travel attitude (being alert, courteous and wary) is your key to safe summer traveling.

Judge refuses injunction against district in valedictorian dispute

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A federal judge has refused to stop a school district from awarding a state-funded scholarship to only one of its two co-valedictorians.

But he said the student who had asked for an injunction can proceed with her lawsuit against the Snyder Independent School District, even though she "does not have a substantial likelihood of success on the merits of her case."

Snyder High School graduate Holly Jones had asked U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings of Lubbock to prevent officials from submitting her co-valedictorian's name to the Texas Education Agency for a scholarship awarded to each school district's top graduate.

School district officials this spring named Miss Jones and Veana Clay co-valedictorians - and put No. 1 rankings on both transcripts. But they only designated Miss Clay for the TEA tuition voucher, which pays for one year's tuition at a state school.

Miss Jones went through four years of high school and finished with a grade point average just 0.0123 of a point behind Miss Clay, who graduated after just three years by taking some correspondence courses through Texas Tech University.

Miss Jones accused the school of breach of contract because the student handbook states that the students should be ranked "at the end of four years high school."

Cummings disagreed. "The court is not persuaded at this point that the student handbook constitutes a contract between the school district and the students," Cummings wrote.

Cummings also said the handbook's wording is "most reasonably construed" to mean "a student who completes four years of course work within three years should be eligible for designation as the highest-ranking graduate."

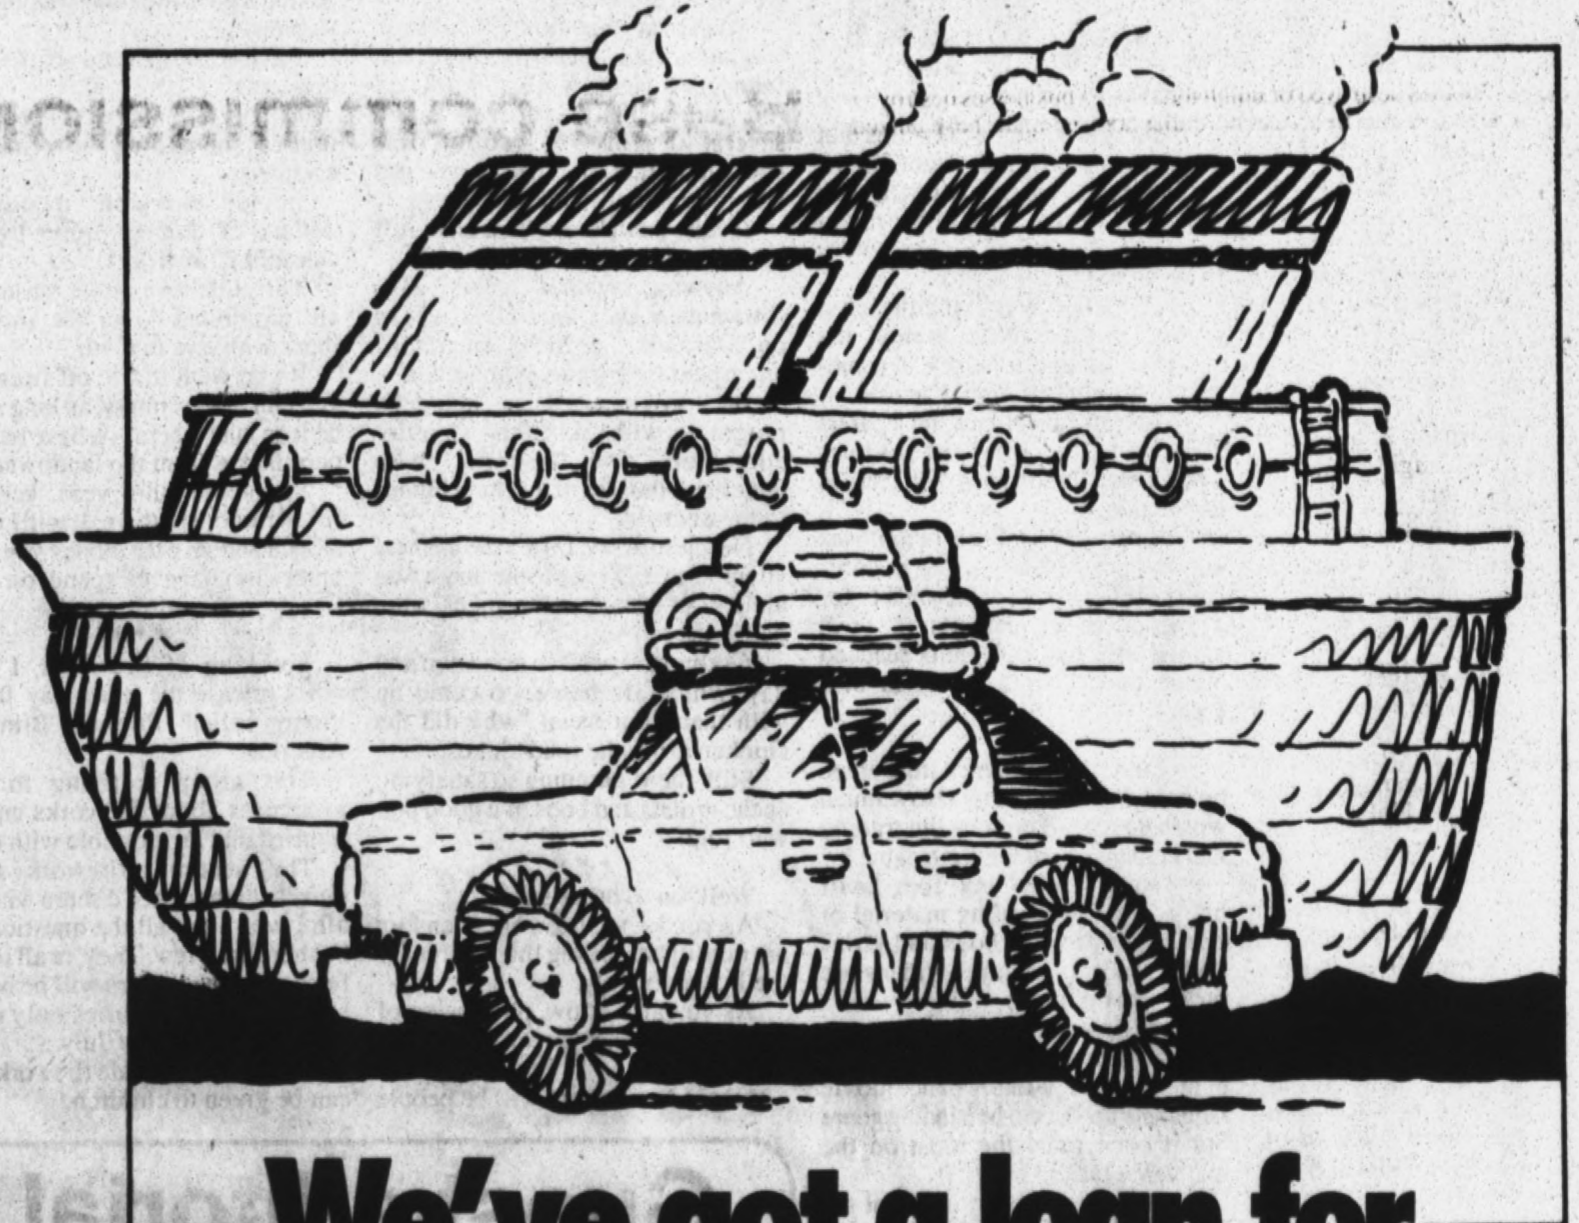

Cummings wrote that if Miss Jones succeeds at trial, she will be able to recover damages against the school district and thus will suffer no "irreparable injury" by his denying the injunction.

Snyder Independent School District Superintendent Gayle Lomax said he was happy with the ruling but saddened that the lawsuit was filed.

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

Editor's Note: "The Bull" was attending a state press convention this week. A column he wrote in November, 1987, is reprinted below.

National polls have shown that far too many Americans have come to distrust or hate the media, and some have called the press "anti-American" or "anti-establishment." The latter terms probably came from the media's coverage of the Vietnam War, "leaks" from high government sources that endangered our national security, and attacks on institutions.

A noted pollster and analyst, Daniel Yankelovich, may have put his finger on the core of the problem a couple of years ago with this comment: "The press is hiding behind the First Amendment in order to do nothing to curb the chip on its shoulder and its smart-ass attitude."

Then he made an interesting analogy: "The telephone realized early that it has a monopoly position and so should be very nice because people had no recourse in dealing with it. And that breeds rage."

Southwestern Bell had a slogan: "We may be the only telephone company in town, but we try not to act like it." Unlike the phone company, added the pollster, the press has not learned to be accountable.

Much of the public's argument with the media, it seems to me, has resulted from the rise in adversarial reporting. Mostly trained by liberal intellectuals with no journalistic experience, many young reporters are coming out of college these days with the idea that their job is to be adversaries. They are more interested in lecturing society on its evils than they are in reporting the news.

Telling the news is an exacting process that is based on accurate information. It is supposed to be a craft, not an art form. Personal opinions and lectures should be confined to editorial columns, not interwoven into a news report.

If those of us in the news business want the public's trust, we've got to prove it to our readers and listeners. We've got to play it straight and open and tell them what we're doing and why we're doing it. We've got to stop defending the indefensible; we've got to acknowledge our mistakes and correct them as best we can.

We need to explain that most of us are trying very hard to get it right, but sometimes we do get it wrong...because of deadline pressures and human failings, because of reasons sometimes beyond our control.

We should point out that the percentage of disorganized individuals, incompetents and reprobates is no higher or lower among journalists than it is among other segments of society.

Finally, we've got to expose ourselves to the same kind of scrutiny to which we expose everybody else in public life. Then the public will understand why we want them to help us protect freedom of the press and respond to our claims that we are servants of the public interests.

Then, they will know that we may be the only newspaper in town, but we're trying very hard not to act like it.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Remember when --

-- Girls wore their blue jeans rolled up to mid-calf? (The reason for this clothing fad is lost in the annals of time, I guess.)

-- Saddle oxfords were the shoe icon of the '40s? (The white part was supposed to be dirty.)

-- A trip to the variety store meant you could buy some things for a nickel or a dime, each? (And, the items were not plastic, either.)

-- Gasoline for the car cost 17 cents a gallon, and that was full service? (Full service meant an attendant would check the air in the tires, check the oil and clean the windshield, without being asked, or tipped.)

-- Every car and pickup had a running board? (How many people fell in the mud the first time they got out of a car without a running board?)

-- A single dip ice cream cone cost five cents and a double dip cone was a 10-cent purchase? (Same flavor, or mix and match.)

-- Chicken houses were still part of the landscape in rural communities? (Fresh eggs tasted great, but the odor from the chickens' nesting place was less than delightful.)

-- "Sword drill" gave youth some inkling of the books of the Bible? (MYF on Sunday night was incomplete without a round of sword drill. Where the name came from, though, is still a mystery to me.)

-- Parents didn't have to sign a permission slip for their kids to get a spanking at school? (The threat in my family was simple -- you get a spanking at school, you get another one at home. The teacher was free to use the paddle, if needed.)

-- A "field trip" was a walk around the football field, for no special reason? (Any excuse would do to get kids out of the confines of a classroom for a few minutes.)

-- Admission to a Saturday afternoon movie matinee was 25 cents? (To the best of my recollection, soft drinks were not available, but popcorn was only a nickel.)

-- A fast food restaurant was the nearest hash house, charging a dime for a hamburger with everything on it and a nickel for hot dog? (The meat on the hamburger was real, pressed by hand, and greasy.)

-- Soft drinks came in bottles that were returnable for two cents each? (When the allowance ran out, a walk along the street and alley might produce half a dozen, or more, bottles to be turned in for cash.)

-- A hickey was a pimple on a teenager's face? (Now, though, it's called a zit and a hickey is something entirely different, I'm told.)

-- Lover's lane was the nearest cemetery? (Cars were just shadows among the tombstones and hardly noticeable.)

-- Buying a new dress or suit was a major project? (As a girl, a store-bought dress for me was probably for a special event. Parents of boys waited until the suit pants reached above the ankle to invest in new duds.)

-- Comic books were a treasure to be held in high regard? (How much worth depended on how the trading market was when the time came.)

-- Nancy Drew and Tom Swift books were the reading material of choice for pre-teen boys and girls? (Who reads these days? Videos are more entertaining.)

-- Motion picture fans had scores of publications to keep them up-to-date on their idols? (The movie magazine appears to be a fading genre but it once ruled the roost on the magazine racks.)

-- Soft drinks came in about six flavors, all in the same size bottle? (Compare that with the dozens of kinds of carbonated drinks and the various sizes at the supermarket and the convenience store fountain.)

-- Milk in glass bottles was delivered to the door daily, or every other day? (If the homemaker wasn't home, the milkman stepped inside and put the milk in the fridge, too.)

-- Men in space were Buck Rogers or Flash Gordon in comic strips or the Saturday afternoon movie serial? (Sci-fi doesn't appeal to me, primarily, I guess, because too many things that were fiction in my younger days came true.)

-- Kids' baseball was a bunch of neighborhood rowdies playing in a vacant lot with a beat up ball and a stick? (Better not to remark on youth sports.)

Hey, you wanna hear a good joke?

You know, humor depends so much on the situation and timing to make it work right.

For example, if I just walked up to you and said, "I'm telling you, it's tartar sauce and we're in big trouble!" you might wonder if I had been out in the heat too long.

But change a few things and becomes funny -- as in the "Kit 'n' Carlyle" cartoon I read the other day in which one fish in the fishbowl said the above line to his companion while looking at the kitten and a small container on the counter in front of the bowl.

I think humor plays an important part in all of our lives.

You know, that moment between you and a friend that strikes you both funny, or a memory from childhood (or, more likely, puberty) when several of you lost control over something that, in retrospect seems stupid or not even all that funny.

I really don't know what set me off on this subject, but ...

Anyway, several years ago, Commander Data, the android officer on "Star Trek: The Next Generation" attempted to learn human humor.

He programmed a holodeck program with a 20th Century comedian, Joe Piscopo, who undertook the task of teaching humor to the android.

Needless to say, Data's mechanical attempts at making people laugh was almost as funny as the jokes were bad.

As for me, I prefer a good pun any day, which are harder to come up with than your usual "why did the chicken cross the road" jokes.

Still, there's nothing so satisfying as the groans and boos of a good pun well told.

Well, on to other subjects.

As you know, fireworks vendors are now open, selling their wares for the Fourth of July.

As you also know, possession of fireworks inside the city limits is illegal.

Now I know there will be people

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

who complain that this deprives them of their Constitutional right to have a good time.

However, for one thing, I see nothing in the Constitution about having a good time and nothing about fireworks.

But more important are the safety concerns. Every year hundreds of people are injured or killed in fireworks accidents.

In addition, there are thousands of dollars of damage done by fires caused by fireworks.

This, I believe, is the reason they are prohibited -- for the safety of those who live in town.

If you want to fire off fireworks, you can in the county, as long as you do it on land where you have received permission from the landowner.

So please, this year, keep the fireworks out of town. It will keep us all safe and save the money you might otherwise have to spend on court fines.

Speaking of fireworks, I got a news release the other day from a group called Prevent Blindness America.

This group is trying to raise awareness about fireworks and the injuries that are possible with them.

They sent me a fireworks safety quiz that I thought I'd share with you all. I won't put all the questions in, but here are a few. They're all true or false and the answers will be below.

1. Fireworks injuries only occur during the Fourth of July.
2. Sparklers are safe fireworks and can be given to children.

3. Gunpowder is a major ingredient in most types of fireworks.

4. Only people who set off fireworks risk injuries.

5. Bottle rockets are not dangerous because they're just firecrackers tied to a stick.

6. Homemade fireworks are safer than store-bought fireworks.

7. Using fireworks is an inexpensive way to celebrate the Fourth of July.

ANSWERS (Now don't cheat. Answer the questions, then look here).

1. False. Most occur during the Fourth of July, but others are during Labor Day, New Year's Eve, Christmas and Mardi Gras.

2. False. Sparklers are the second highest cause of fireworks injuries requiring hospitalization -- most among preschool-age children. Sparklers are dangerous because they burn at a temperature hot enough to melt gold -

- 1,800 degrees.

3. True. Most fireworks contain gunpowder, which causes them to explode.

4. False. Prevent Blindness estimates nearly 40 percent of fireworks injuries are to bystanders.

5. False. Bottle rockets are among the most dangerous fireworks available today. They account for the majority of fireworks injuries that lead to permanent eye damage. They can move as fast as 200 mph, explode in midair and fly in any direction.

6. False. Homemade fireworks are often more dangerous, since those who make them tend to combine chemicals from several devices to make bigger explosions.

7. False. The cost of treating fireworks injuries is far more than the cost of a package of fireworks. Medical costs start with emergency room visits and can include surgery, physical therapy and treatment for permanent blindness.

Now that you know this, do you understand why fireworks are banned in town? I hope so.

Well, that's it for this week.

Have a good week and, remember, the Fourth of July is more than a day off work to fire fireworks. It is the anniversary of our nation's independence.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I read with interest your article titled "Attempts to harness Panhandle wind fall short of goal" that appeared May 26, 1995. I apologize for the late reply but our eldest son, Robert Bates Fullwood died in Berkeley, Calif., June 4. He was named after his grandfather, Robert (Bob) Fullwood who, as a pioneer resident of Hereford, owned an automotive electric shop.

Bob Fullwood's life-long passion was to invent an efficient windmill and water pump to irrigate the plains. This he achieved.

The first windmill was so big and powerful that it destroyed itself. Its successor controlled the four blades through a cam action and a gear train so complex that I never understood it. (He would invent these three-dimensional gear trains in his head at night and make a wooden model the next day.)

The principle of operation was that the blade moving into the wind was feathered, the one moving down wind was turned at right angles -- like a spinnaker, and the other two were on 45-degree tacks.

This is the windmill that is deteriorating in the Hereford Museum. It ran at the Easter place near the Tierra Blanca for 10 years through the depression and dustbowl until the war.

It was never serviced and never turned off because of high wind. Driving an Archimedes screw, it could throw an 8-inch pipe full. It was patented but never sold. I have seen a similar principle used for boat propulsion in the east.

There were many pumps. One consisted of two blades moving in a cylinder. With one blade still, the other would move around a circle, displacing the contained water, then the other blade would start up and do the same thing. This was accomplished by orbiting gears.

The pumps were cast from old aluminum Maytag washing machine tubs. We had no milling machine so one of my jobs was to crank the carriage of the lathe back and forth so it acted like a planer.

Regarding wind-powered transportation, one night during a dust storm in the depression, Dad was called out to fix a car. The engine died east of town around Umbarger or the dump grounds so the occupants opened the doors to create sufficient drag and the wind blew it into town. He said it looked like the fenders had been sandblasted.

I built my first wind car when I was about 10 using a big shade from the shop and my red wagon. Pete (Benjamin Floyd) Davis and Clarence Beauford and I took it to an open field south of the railroad tracks. It was unstable but went so fast it ruined the rubber-tired wheels.

The next version was shaped like a kite and made out of two 2-by-4s with a wheel on each cross member and one at the rear -- like a rudder.

It worked fairly well, but the small wheels kept hanging up in prairie dog holes.

We made kites as big as 6 feet across in an attempt to ride them, but never made one big enough.

Dear Editor:
This year, District 2AAA had problems scheduling the second district golf tournament. We were going to cancel this round because we couldn't find a golf course to play on. I called your pro, Dave Kaesheimer, to see if he would let us play on the Hereford golf course. While other courses wouldn't let us play, Dave and staff made us feel welcome. Not only did he let us play, but he organized the tournament.

Mr. Kaesheimer is working hard for junior golf. I appreciate Mr. Kaesheimer and the city of Hereford.

Polio vaccine pioneer Jonas Salk dies at 80

By ERNEST SANDER
Associated Press Writer
LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) - Dr. Jonas Salk, the medical pioneer who developed the first vaccine to prevent polio's crippling rampage and later tried to devise a treatment for AIDS, died Friday. He was 80.

Salk died of heart failure at Green Hospital of Scripps Clinic in La Jolla at 12:23 p.m., said Anita Weld, a spokeswoman for the Salk Institute. He had been hospitalized earlier in the day complaining of shortness of breath.

Salk spent a lifetime stubbornly pursuing his ideas - first for a polio vaccine and later for a vaccine-like AIDS treatment - even when they drew skepticism from other researchers.

"There have to be people who are ahead of their time," Salk once said. "And that is my fate."

Working at the University of Pittsburgh in the 1950s, Salk became a hero to millions of Americans when he ignored scientific doubters and used killed virus to develop the first polio vaccine.

During the first half of the 20th century, epidemics of paralytic poliomyelitis swept the United States repeatedly. Polio viruses infected thousands of Americans annually, causing widespread fear, killing some young victims and condemning many others to iron lungs, leg braces and years of rehabilitation.

Salk's injectable vaccine was declared effective in 1955, and polio's toll plunged. "What had the most profound effect was the freedom from fear," Salk said in 1995, as he prepared to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the announcement.

Dr. Albert Sabin's live-virus vaccine - swallowed on a sugar cube - was approved in 1961. Many experts believe it is more effective, and it ultimately gained favor, although Salk's vaccine is still used.

Newspaper editor named UNT regent

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. George W. Bush Friday announced three appointments to the board of regents of the University of North Texas in Denton.

Named were Burle Pettit of Lubbock, Bobby Ray of Plano and Joe Kirven of Dallas.

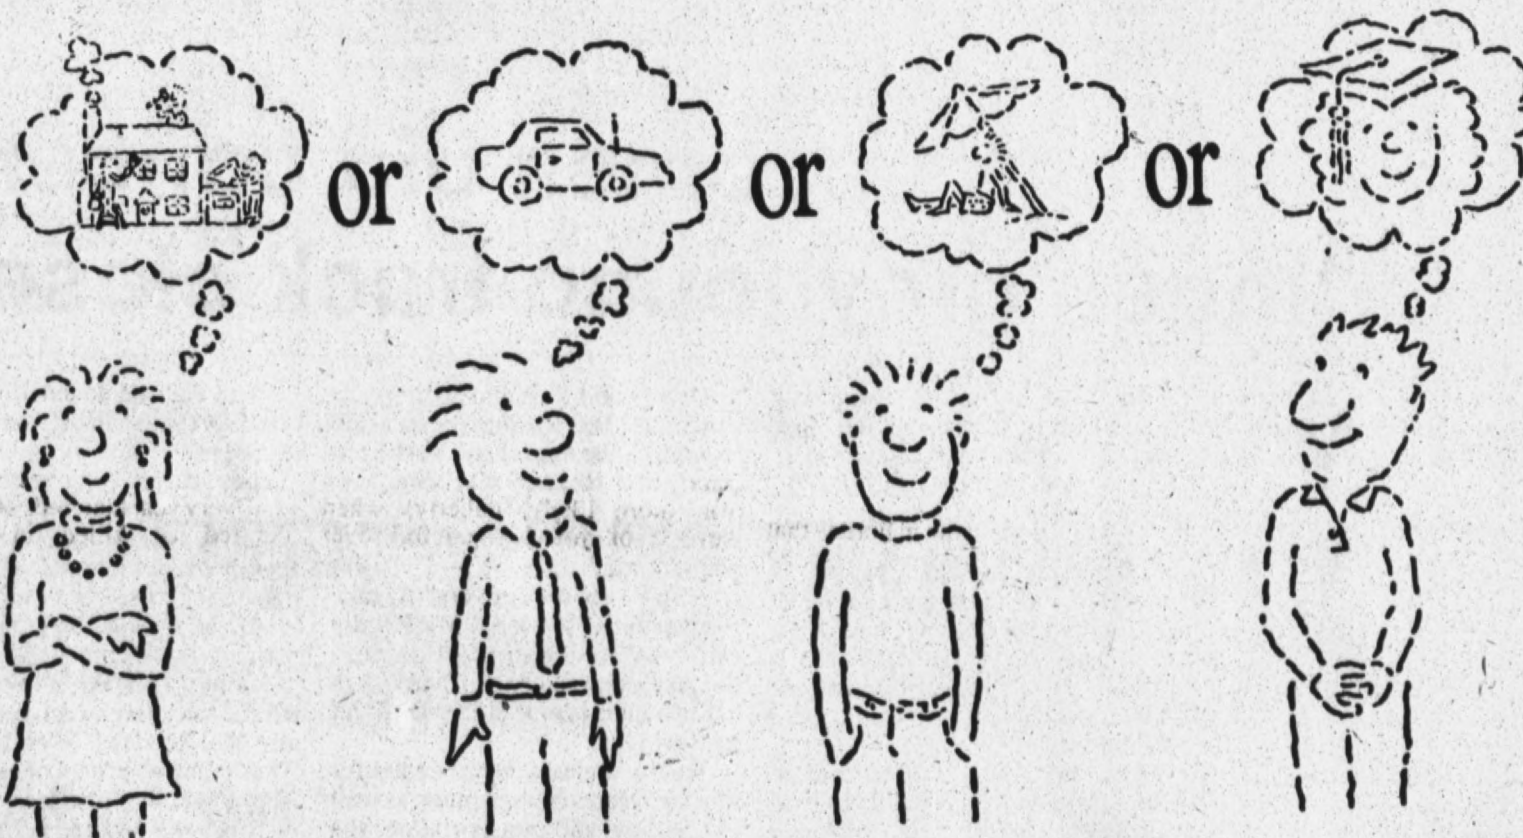

Pettit, editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, has served on several committees at the university. Last year he was named UNT Alumnus of the Year. Pettit replaces R.L. Crawford Jr., of Lewisville, whose term expired.

Ray, who holds a bachelor's degree in business administration from UNT, is chief operating officer of Goodman Homes Inc. and president of Diamond Ventures Corp. He replaces E.L. "Buddy" Langley, of Irving, whose term expired.

Kirven has served on the UNT board of regents since 1989.

All terms expire May 22, 2001, and require Senate confirmation.

Racing industry in Texas lacks attendance, betting

Closings, bankruptcy proceedings bedevil horse, greyhound tracks

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Bill McLaughlin laughs sardonically when he refers to the Texas pari-mutuel betting industry as the "soon-not-to-be pari-mutuel betting industry."

Truth is, he finds the state of Texas racing anything but amusing. McLaughlin, general manager of Valley Greyhound Park in Harlingen, is preparing to shut down the track, which has seen sharp declines in attendance and wagering since its 1990 opening.

The track faces at least $2 million in losses this year, McLaughlin said. Valley Greyhound would become the third Texas track to close since voters approved pari-mutuel wagering in 1987. Just last week, Class 2 horse track Bandera Downs shut down after struggling to compete with nearby Retama Park.

McLaughlin believes the problems at Valley Greyhound and Bandera Downs are ominous signs of things to come.

"This industry is in dire jeopardy right now," he said.

"Sadly, the tradition of Texas is one of having pari-mutuel wagering in the 1930s, and then letting it go by the wayside. I'm afraid this is going to happen again here without some movement by the powers that be in Austin."

Problems have been piling up for the state's six horse and three greyhound tracks. With the Legislature's failure to allow off-track betting, industry officials say things are bound to get worse.

Just one year after opening in April 1994, the state's first Class 1 horse track - Sam Houston Race Park in Houston - filed for bankruptcy and announced a multimillion-dollar deal to restructure its $75 million debt. The newest Class 1 track - Retama Park near San Antonio - opened in April with almost 30,000 fans betting $705,712. But those figures plummeted just three weeks later, to 5,642 fans and a handle (amount of money bet) of just more than $370,000.

Last month, the track cut back its racing days from five to four each week. In addition, race purses have been slashed twice, for a total reduction of about 40 percent.

"I don't think you ever do as well as you hoped, but we did not do as well as I thought we'd do," said Retama Park President Bob Quigley. While Retama's figures were not as high as expected, the track did manage to pull enough business from Bandera Downs to force its closing.

Located about 40 miles northwest of San Antonio, Bandera Downs opened July 6, 1990, and was the oldest continually operating horse track in Texas.

However, after Retama opened, live race day attendance at Bandera dropped from an average of 1,350 to 850, and the average live handle fell from about $130,000 to $85,000.

Bandera spokeswoman Dinah Lovett said the track's closing should serve as a warning to the rest of the racing industry.

"I think it sends a very clear message that if we're going to have pari-mutuel racing in Texas that we are going to have to sit down together and we are going to have to make some decisions that will allow us all to survive," Ms. Lovett said.

"None of us are going to be able to run head-to-head."

Texas' greyhound tracks also are struggling. Gulf Greyhound Park in La Marque, the world's most successful greyhound track, saw its wagering decline more than $70 million last year, according to the Texas Racing Commission.

Wagering at Corpus Christi Greyhound Race Track dropped by $34 million, and betting at Valley Greyhound decreased $26 million.

"We certainly are not performing as well as might have been projected," Jim Noteware, president and general manager of Sam Houston Race Park, said of the pari-mutuel industry.

"While Texas is horse country in that everyone loves horses, it is not horse country in that it doesn't have a history in betting. There's not that many experienced horse players in Texas," Noteware said.

Texas racing got off to a slow start from the beginning. Although voters approved pari-mutuel betting in 1987, it wasn't until 1989 that the first track opened. Within a year, G. Rollie White Downs, a Class 2 horse-racing facility in Brady, closed because of poor attendance and handle.

The first "successful" tracks opened in 1990, and the first Class 1 track opened four years later.

Up and running five years now, the industry has yet to take off, track officials say. Wagering and attendance have not lived up to projections, and the Racing Commission still owes the state $9.8 million for start-up expenses.

"Our biggest problem in Texas was that we had our aspirations set too high. We should have looked upon this more like you look upon an expansion team in any other sport," said Corey Johnson, vice president and general manager of Lone Star Park, which holds a Class 1 license for a proposed horse track in Grand Prairie.

Lone Star has been working nearly three years to secure financing for the $100 million track and has yet to begin construction.

"In Texas, we have a tendency to think that everything's better here. I think we failed to look at it realistically," Johnson said. "A vast majority of residents here in Texas don't know enough about our sport."

Others blame the tracks' lack of success on the advent of the lottery and the opening of casinos in bordering states.

"Horse racing now must compete in a larger marketplace of entertainment and, for that matter, gaming," Noteware said. "It's a misnomer that Texas does not have casino gaming. Texas does have casino gaming - it's called a Louisiana border. The New Mexico and Oklahoma borders, too."

Texas is not alone in its pari-mutuel problems. Attendance and wagering have declined at tracks across the country.

However, industry officials say Texas racing will continue to struggle unless it can compete with other forms of gambling. That's where off-track betting comes into play.

During the legislative session that ended May 31, the Senate approved an off-track betting proposal that would have allowed Texans to wager on horse and dog races at up to 40 locations around the state.

However, the proposal died when House opponents prevented a vote on it in the session's waning hours.

About half of the more than 30 states with racetracks allow off-track betting, said Conrad Sobkowiak of the Thoroughbred Racing Association in Elkton, Md.

"Racing's at that stage where you need to supply more ways for people to have it available to them. That's the idea - let's get it to as many people as possible," Sobkowiak said.

Said Johnson, "It's almost like any other piece of the entertainment industry. We have to make our product more convenient. Off-track betting, basically it's convenience wagering."

McLaughlin said his track's demise is directly attributable to the Legislature's failure to enact off-track betting.

"We knew we were dead without legislation," he said.

Sen. Jeff Wentworth, R-San Antonio, who sponsored the proposal, said he is unsure whether the pari-mutuel industry can survive without off-track betting.

"I'm concerned that it won't, that's what the track owners and management are telling us. That's why I was interested in helping them survive," he said.

Wentworth pointed to Valley Greyhound as an example. "They were not crying wolf. They really did need that help."

Industry officials said they plan to regroup and bring the proposal back to the Legislature in two years. Without it, they say, the outlook for the Texas racing industry is bleak.

"Will it survive? Yes," said Noteware. "Is it going to mature, is it going to thrive? No."

Said Retama's Quigley: "It'll survive, but it'll always be minor league."

Future of dogs becomes big concern as Harlingen greyhound track closes

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - While others worry about the financial implications now that Harlingen's dog-racing track has announced it is closing, greyhound adoption groups are concerned about life and death.

If homes aren't found for the dogs that don't go on to race at other tracks, Janet Huey of Houston-based Racers Recycled Inc. said, "They'll be euthanized. I never say 'put to sleep,' because they don't wake up."

"It will be just a vast quantity of dogs needing homes at one time. There are always more dogs than homes ... in the dog world in general."

Marnie Reeder, director of the Greyhound Rescue Austin - and, unlike Ms. Huey, a greyhound racing opponent - is equally blunt.

"The problem is there are going to be so many, and traditionally, they kill them," she said.

There aren't firm numbers on the number of greyhounds killed annually, said Jacque Schultz of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in New York.

When a track closes, she said, dogs' fate may be racing elsewhere, adoption, use as breeding stock, sale to laboratories or death.

Joe Kenney, marketing director for Valley Greyhound Park, said most of the kennels there have operations at other tracks where a number of dogs could go.

The Harlingen track also has an adoption program, Kenney said.

He said he hadn't heard of any Valley Greyhound Park dogs being sold to labs and that he would hope dogs wouldn't be killed.

"Hopefully we have surrounded ourselves with good trainers and kennel operators who do have a love for these dogs," he said. "I think anybody in any position to help out here is going to do everything in their power to do so."

There are about 500 dogs at the track, Kenney said. Linda Perko, an adoption advocate working in Harlingen to place the greyhounds, said it's uncertain how many will need homes.

Jim Frey of the Texas Greyhound

Association, a breeders' group, said a significant number of the dogs should be able to race elsewhere.

"I would hope that well over 50 percent would be useable somewhere else," said Frey.

Of the rest of the dogs, he said, "I think most of them are adoptable. Obviously, there are not homes for all of them in the Harlingen area. It would have to be a statewide effort. It would be great if it could be a national effort."

Ms. Perko, who is director of an Ohio group that's part of a national greyhound network, said a Michigan organization has offered to take 30 dogs for adoption. In addition, she said her group can take about 20.

Ms. Reeder said her group also has been talking with other organizations and has sent out information on the Internet.

Greyhound Rescue Austin plans to ask the Texas Racing Commission to monitor the dogs at the Harlingen track, Ms. Reeder said. She and others said they'd like to see the kennel facilities stay open until the dogs are placed.

"I'd like to see Texas racing take responsibility for this," Ms. Reeder said. "We don't want to see the dogs die just because the track has failed. ... I'm hoping people everywhere will get involved."

Foster homes will be needed for the dogs headed for adoption, as well as dog food and transportation, she added. Several adoption advocates said the ASPCA's greyhound adoption fund, financed by the American Greyhound Council, might be used to offset some of the costs.

Ms. Schultz, administrator of the adoption fund, said the money is limited. But she added, "We would certainly try to help in whatever way we could."

Frey said his group intends to help coordinate adoption efforts.

"It has to be dealt with in an appropriate and humane manner if the track does close," he said.

All said greyhounds make great pets.

"They are very loving, very affectionate, very sweet, very docile," said Ms. Reeder. "Everybody says, 'Don't they need a lot of exercise?' - They forget, they (the dogs) are retired. 'They make great couch potatoes.'"

Those seeking information on adopting greyhounds through the Harlingen track's program can call (210) 428-0161. Information also is available from greyhound adoption groups.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - A woman contends best-selling author Tom Clancy plagiarized a poem of hers for his latest novel, "Without Remorse."

In a copyright infringement lawsuit, Colleen Corah Hitchcock of suburban Edina alleges Clancy used her poem, "Ascension," on the dedication page without crediting her. Hitchcock said she wrote the poem in her father's memory after he died of cancer.

Hitchcock's lawyer, Douglas Williams, said the poem appeared in hardcover editions of Clancy's book, of which more than 1.7 million copies were distributed. The book was published last year.

Bell lifts Astros to win

HOUSTON (AP) - Derek Bell's RBI single in the 12th inning Friday night gave the Houston Astros a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs and snapped their seven-game home losing streak.

With one out in the bottom of the 12th, Brian Hunter had an infield single off Mike Walker (#2) and he went to second on a single by Craig Biggio. Jeff Bagwell hit into a force play that left runners at first and third and Bell followed with his game-winning hit on a 3-2 pitch.

Todd Jones (4-1) allowed one hit over two innings and struck out five and walked three.

Walker allowed four hits in 1 2-3 innings.

The Astros tied it in the ninth against Randy Myers when Bell led off with a single, their fifth hit of the game. After one out, pinch-hitter Tony Eusebio singled to right sending Bell to third. Craig Shipley then hit a sacrifice fly to make it 2-2.

The Cubs got only three hits off Mike Hampton, who retired the next 16 batters after Mark Grace's ninth homer in the third. Hampton struck out six and didn't have a walk over eight innings.

Cubs starter Jaime Navarro allowed four hits over seven innings and had three strikeouts and two walks.

Grace, who has gone 19-for-44 in hitting safely in 10 of 11 games, gave Chicago a 2-1 lead with the two-out homer.

The Astros, who are 8-16 at home this season, scored first when Hunter led off the game by beating out an infield dribbler to first baseman Grace. He stole second, went to third on Biggio's fly ball and scored on Bagwell's sacrifice fly.

Chicago tied it in the second on consecutive doubles by Shawon Dunston and Ozzie Timmons.

Hampton made his third start since coming off the disabled list on May 15 with a partial tear of the medial collateral ligament in his left elbow. He hasn't won a game since beating St. Louis on May 5. He's 0-2 in the Astrodome this season.

In other NL games Friday night, it was Florida 16, Cincinnati 4; New York 9, Atlanta 3; St. Louis 7, Philadelphia 1; Los Angeles 7, San Francisco 2; and San Diego 3, Colorado 2.

Astros put Hudek on DL with elbow

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Astros closer John Hudek, an NL All-Star last year after starting the season in the minors, was placed on the 15-day disabled list Friday because of a right elbow sprain.

Trainer Dave Labossiere said the exact injury was undetermined, but X-rays and a blood flow study had been taken and an MRI was scheduled for Monday.

Labossiere said the Astros were concerned about possible circulation problems.

"All the tests we've run looking for orthopedic ailments, we've found no structural damage to bones or ligaments," Labossiere said.

Clark, Rangers topple A's

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Will Clark's two-run single keyed a four-run fourth inning and the Texas Rangers took advantage of Dave Stewart's wildness in a 7-4 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Friday night.

Kenny Rogers (8-3) got his fifth straight home victory despite lasting only five innings - tying his second-shortest outing of the season. He allowed three runs and four hits as Texas won its sixth in a row and 15th of its last 18 at home.

Stewart (3-6) allowed five walks, three wild pitches and was called for a balk in three-plus innings.

The game was tied at 3-3 in the bottom of the fourth before the Rangers sent 10 men to the plate against three pitchers.

Stewart walked Ivan Rodriguez, gave up a single to Mike Pagliarulo, moved both runners up on a balk and then loaded the bases on a walk to Benji Gil.

After he was relieved by Dave

Leiper, Otis Nixon singled on the next pitch to give Texas a 4-3 lead. Pagliarulo was forced at the plate on Mark McLemore's groundout, but Clark then delivered his two-run single to give the Rangers a 6-3 advantage. Juan Gonzalez added an RBI single to make it 7-3.

In other games, California defeated Seattle 14-4, Chicago downed Cleveland 12-5, Baltimore beat Boston 7-5, New York defeated Toronto 6-2 and Detroit beat Milwaukee 5-2.

Change is Rockets' formula for success

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The more the Houston Rockets change, the more they seem to win. They altered their roster in each of the last two seasons and still won back-to-back NBA championships.

It's usually considered a mistake to tinker with success but if the Rockets achieve a three-peat, there will be more changes for the guys from Clutch City.

Team chemistry, family, consistency are words used to describe how a team bonds together to win a title. That's what the Rockets did in the playoffs this year.

Now the catchword is improve. "In this league, if you don't improve, everybody else is trying to catch you," said Bob Weinbauer, Rockets vice president of basketball operations.

Change started even as the Rockets held their final victory celebration with 52,000 of their fans in the Astrodome last week when word leaked that the option year of Carl Herrera's contract wouldn't be picked up.

Herrera, along with Chucky Brown, Charles Jones, Pete Chilcutt and Zan Tabak are unrestricted free agents and can negotiate with any team. The Rockets hope to resign Herrera.

Five members of the Rockets' first championship team were active on the playoff roster for the repeat - Hakeem Olajuwon, Kenny Smith, Robert Horry, Sam Cassell and Mario Elie. Two more players from last year's team, Vernon Maxwell and Herrera, were out early in the first round.

Maxwell drew an indefinite leave of absence and Herrera had shoulder surgery.

Brown, who earned title rings in both the NBA and Continental Basketball Association, Jones, Chilcutt and Tabak were newcomers to the playoff roster this season.

Tracy Murray and Tim Breaux were members of the Rockets' regular season roster who could return next season.

"As we see that it's necessary to make changes, we'll continue to do so," Weinbauer said. "The lineup we finished this season with was excellent but realistically, thinking over the 82-game haul, you'd like another big body or two to be able to take some of that physical punishment underneath and eat up some fouls."

The Rockets don't have a first round pick in Wednesday's NBA draft unless they make a trade, leaving the free agent market for finding a hulk to bolster the roster.

The Rockets have made the most of their trades - even the ones that didn't work out.

Two seasons ago, Houston tried to trade Robert Horry to Detroit for Sean Elliott and the trade fell through when Elliott failed his physical. Shocked by being almost traded, Horry returned with fire in his eyes and the Rockets won their first title.

This year, another blockbuster trade, another title. Clyde Drexler comes home and Otis Thorpe goes to Portland. That trade didn't reveal its full impact until the Rockets finally came together in the playoffs.

"We did something that you're not supposed to do, we made a major trade during the season," coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "But the Rockets had the character to keep that team chemistry and win the championship anyway."

Horry and Mario Elie became key factors in the playoffs when Tomjanovich moved Horry to power forward and Elie into the starting lineup at small forward.

"We were successful with Robert playing the power forward," Weinbauer said. "He has great reach, tremendous athletic ability and it makes it difficult on power forwards to guard him."

But it was also difficult on Horry to consistently guard heavier players, although he did it for the shortened span of the playoffs.

A long season could be a strain on Horry, however. He was bothered by back problems during the season.

"I only played in 67 in the regular season," Horry said. "I don't know how my body would hold up all season banging on those big bodies."

Horry is entering the fourth year of a five-year contract that will pay him about $1.9 million next season. After his value rocketed in the playoffs, he's likely to ask for a better deal.

Mavs' GM worked way up from bottom

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The man at the helm of one of the NBA's most exciting young teams may be one of the league's most amazing success stories.

Keith Grant has gone from the Dallas Mavericks' equipment manager in charge of washing socks, to player personnel director in charge of deciding which players the team will choose in Wednesday's draft.

It wasn't an overnight jump, he didn't win a contest and it wasn't because his father owned the team. Grant earned each and every promotion.

"I was very fortunate because people gave me an opportunity and I think I'm very fortunate because I took that opportunity," said Grant, 37. "I wasn't afraid to do that extra stuff that had to be done."

Grant joined the team at age 22, fresh out of Oklahoma City University with a business management degree and a passion to work for a pro sports team.

His timing was great. The Mavericks were an expansion team joining a league that was about to become tremendously popular about the same time as a technology boom would change the way teams were run.

Grant recognized the change early on and, as an eager young employee, he did all he could to pitch in. His bosses were more than happy for him to learn new skills and soon he became invaluable by mastering many of them.

"I asked, 'Can I do this?' Then I'd show them the results and they started using me more. I was still the equipment manager, but I was doing a little bit of everything," Grant said.

"Video was just starting to come in around 1981, so I learned how to do video. Then the computer came and I learned how to use the computer. All of a sudden, there started to be a need for all that kind of stuff."

Grant, though, saw the need before others did. He helped the Mavericks become one of the first teams with an extensive video library and he put them ahead of the times by getting stats and scouting information into computers.

Grant's eagerness was obvious to everyone in the organization, and they were more than happy to keep him going by showing him the ropes.

General manager Norm Sonju went over math models for player contracts with Grant and he enjoyed playing with numbers so much that he wound up coming up with things like attendance analyses.

Grant made advance scouting of opponents easier for coach Dick Motta and his then-assistant Bob Weiss by videotaping NBA games at his apartment, where he had the new innovation known as cable television. The coaches responded by teaching him what they were doing.

Player personnel director Rick Sund showed Grant the nuances of scouting college players and Grant helped him by gathering information on potential draftees and logging it into his new computer system.

"There's only so many things an equipment manager can do. Because I didn't go on the road with them, I had a lot of time to do all these other things," said Grant, who also filled his time in the summers of 1982-84 as the organist for the Texas Rangers.

The extra work finally earned Grant a promotion to administrative assistant in 1984. The job was created for him so he could concentrate on his various projects.

"That's where things really started to grow," Grant said. "It looked like there could be a future, but I didn't know which direction it would go because I was still doing a lot of everything and everybody was using me."

Grant's emphasis began moving toward scouting and by 1986 his main job was advance pro scouting with some time spent on examining college players. By 1990, he was director of both pro and college scouting.

In Grant's first year as a full-time pro scout, Dallas won a club-record 55 games and won the Midwest Division for the first and only time. The next year, the Mavericks came within a victory of the NBA Finals.

"It was great and very rewarding that my scouting reports were part of our success," Grant said.

By now, Grant had earned a great reputation throughout basketball. The league respected him so much that in 1988 they asked him to help run their pre-draft camp in Chicago.

In Dallas, Grant is best known as the guy who almost turned the 1989 draft into a miracle.

Grant wanted to use the No. 8 overall pick on unknown Texas-El Paso guard Tim Hardaway. The Mavs instead chose Randy White. Grant suggested using the No. 35 pick on Cliff Robinson; Dallas instead took Pat Durham.

Grant, however, refuses to say "I told you so" about that draft or any other bad moves he may have warned against.

"We selected who we selected and I'll stand by that. Maybe I recommended another guy, maybe I didn't. But I'm a team player the entire way," he said.

That loyalty and all those years of pitching in wherever needed finally paid off last May when Grant was promoted to replace Sund, who had been fired a month before.

Sund lost his job after 14 years mainly because he saddled Dallas with miserable head coach Quinn Buckner. But he left behind a wonderful foundation of Jamal Mashburn, Jim Jackson and a wealth of future draft picks.

With his first pick, Grant struck gold with point guard Jason Kidd, the co-Rookie of the Year. Grant could've chosen the other co-winner, Grant Hill, but he knew that Kidd was a better fit in Dallas.

Another draft is only a few days away, giving Grant another chance to mold the team his way. In addition to the two picks, he has six more over the next three drafts and he expects to use at least some of them as trade bait.

"I don't know if we'll move any, but I'm working the phone every day trying to do things to make our club better," he said. "Even though we have all these future assets, it doesn't make sense to make a move just to make a move."

At best, Grant figures the team is several years away from being a contender.

When they reach that caliber, Grant expects them to remain there, unlike the teams from 1987 and 1988 that were scrapped and needed nearly a decade to be rebuilt.

"The year we got to the conference finals, I think we took it for granted," Grant said. "It's been hard to get back to that level, but as we put this thing together, I want to get back there and be there for a long time."

Spurs face decision on Rodman

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - As Spurs executives work on off-season player moves and the upcoming NBA draft, they can't escape league-wide speculation about the future of forward Dennis Rodman.

The eccentric 34-year-old who led the NBA in rebounding has said he wouldn't mind playing for Miami or the Los Angeles Lakers if he is not with San Antonio. Reports have surfaced that several teams are interested in him.

Spurs officials won't comment on any of it.

"Dennis Rodman is not a topic for interviews," said Spurs general manager Gregg Popovich, who, along with coach Bob Hill, scoffed at the national media attention paid to Rodman's antics during the NBA playoffs.

Rodman's tardiness, absences and a playoff game exchange with Hill drew disciplinary action from Spurs management last season.

The Spurs protected Rodman in the expansion draft. Popovich wouldn't comment on whether he favors trading Rodman.

Among the teams reportedly interested in Rodman are the Los Angeles Lakers; the Philadelphia 76ers; the Houston Rockets; the Phoenix Suns, who reportedly would offer Dan Majerle, Wayman Tisdale and a No. 1 draft pick; and the Denver Nuggets, who would offer Bryant Stith or Rodney Rogers.

Specialists comment on crops

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

Summer crops have been looking good at this stage of the game, but constant care is still needed to ensure that producers get a satisfactory harvest in the future.

Corn, cotton, sugarbeets, and milo have benefitted from the recent rains, but according to area specialists, observation and attention are crucial.

"The wheat harvest may be affected by the weeds that are emerging due to the recent moisture," said Dennis Newton, Deaf Smith County Extension Agent - Ag.

"The weeds will not only affect the harvest, but local elevators may be marred by the high moisture of the grain being brought in," he said.

Producers should be timely with harvest before the weeds become more of a problem, according to Newton.

In the summer crops, at this stage, the main concern are the weeds.

"Local corn crops are looking good," he said. "Producers may see a few corn borers within the next couple of weeks, but most farmers will not try and control first generation corn borers."

According to Jerry Michelf, entomologist for the Bushland Research Center in Amarillo, the corn can be left alone for now.

"If a producer sees corn borers he can just forget about them for now," Michelf said. "Farmers do not normally worry about the corn borer until the crop gets to the silking stage. It is definitely not worth spraying at this time."

The rains have definitely helped farmers keep up with irrigation and that in itself is a major plus. Of course, along with the good comes the bad.

"Our ag. producers will have to get on top of the weeds and make sure they can control them," Newton said. "Some herbicides haven't been effective this spring because the rains hit at the right time for weed emergence."

Sugarbeets have been doing well this season, according to Stan McCabe, Agriculturist for Holly Sugar.

"We have had a few signs of curly top disease, but it hasn't been wide spread," McCabe said. "The major cause is the vector of the disease, the leaf-hopper."

According to McCabe, the main concern with the sugarbeet crop is keeping the weeds out and watching for any type diseases that might occur.

"The crop needs to be laid-by at this point. That involves hoeing, cultivation, and the use of herbicides," he said.

One thing sugarbeet producers should watch for is the army worm which usually attacks the crop later in the season.

Milo is another summer crop that is grown in this area and is a concern for grain producers.

"We need to watch the sorghum for green bugs," Newton said. "We have a published guideline available at the extension office that indicates when a producer should consider spraying for the pest."

"The economic threshold is determined by the amount of bugs per foot in the crop," he said.

The cotton acres seem to be thriving and doing well, according to Newton.

"These little showers we received have been great for the cotton," he said. "We just don't need to get any heavy rains that set the crop in water."

"Thrip needs to be a concern at this time because they will be moving out of the wheat during harvest" he said.

Summer crops looking good

The area summer crops are looking good this year as rain and sunshine have been prevalent the past few weeks. This field of corn southwest of town seems to have profited from the moisture and heat units.

High Plains cotton crop tops 3-million-bale mark

LUBBOCK -- Final statistics on the 1994 crop show the Texas High Plains managed to put together back-to-back 3 million plus bale crops. The figures indicate the area produced 3,067,200 480-lb bales in 1994.

According to Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers (PCG) abandonment on the 1994 crop totaled only 6 percent and the crop's weighted average yield came to 482 pounds per harvested acre.

The abandonment figure reflects a total of only 184,800 acres lost during the season out of 3.219 million acres planted to the fiber crop.

"Expectations for the 1995 crop becoming a third 3 million-plus bale crop are still out there," says PCG Executive Vice President Donald Johnson.

Johnson acknowledges, however, that early planted cotton, especially in the southern areas of the High Plains, is hard to find and that recent weather has significantly muddled the complexion of the entire High Plains crop.

"To be honest we really do not have a good feel for how this year's crop is doing," explains Johnson. "The crop's condition runs the gamut from just planted all the way through cotton with five true leaves and nobody appears to be able to predict where the 1995 crop is headed."

The 1994 crop figures were obtained from the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service (TASS).

As usual several High Plains counties ranked as the top cotton producing counties in the state. In fact the top 11 counties were all located on the Texas High Plains. They are: Gaines, 1; Hale, 2; Lubbock, 3; Terry, 4; Lamb, 5; Floyd, 6; Hockley, 7; Crosby, 8; Lynn, 9; Dawson, 10; and Yoakum, 11.

It is time to start buying lambs for the 1995-1996 Stock Show Season. Producers are in the process of weaning their lambs and have begun to sell them. Therefore there is a greater number of show prospects available, and they are priced cheaper than they will be next fall.

I know that many of you that have shown lambs in the past are thinking that it seems that we just got through with our lambs from last year. You may feel that you just have too many activities this Summer to start another project. However many times in the show ring the early bird catches the worm, and there are several advantages to buying lambs early.

The first and possibly the most important factor is cost. These lambs are younger, and usually do not cost as much as they will next fall. For some reason, the more feed that a producer has to put into a lamb, the more expensive that lamb becomes.

Show quality lambs can be bought from approximately $100 up. The average lamb will consume about $150 in feed per year.

The next advantage to buying lambs early is that there are more high quality sheep available now. With producers in the process of weaning they have a greater number of lambs to choose from. Other County Agents, Ag Teachers, parents, 4-H and FFA members will be picking from these lambs in the next couple of months. Therefore the selection will be limited if you wait until next fall.

Another benefit is the added time that you will have to work with your lambs. With school out, you will have additional time to work with your lambs. Usually the earlier you get your lambs the gentler that they will be.

One additional reason to get your lambs now is that there are several jackpot shows coming up. The Golden Spread Classic in Amarillo next Saturday will start up the shows in our area. These jackpots allow you to get a great deal of experience, help condition your lambs for travel, allow families to spend time together, and are just a lot of fun. It is very beneficial to haul these lambs throughout the summer, in order to condition them for the shows next fall and winter. By showing them they become accustomed to the travel and will maintain their condition better with each additional show.

For those of you that have not shown in the past but are interested in possibly showing a few lambs, there are several things gained through the program. I feel that family bonding is one of the greatest benefits of the lamb program. Parents and youth work together in a successful feeding program.

You will also learn responsibility, gain self confidence, make new friends, and learn important life skills that will help you throughout life.

If you would like to visit about the 4-H lamb program, or any other programs please contact Vance Christie at 3364-1639. Also, if you want me to start looking for lambs please let me know immediately. WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department researchers have discovered an organism that could help keep grain in silos from spoiling.

Silos hold corn, barley or alfalfa silage, the main feed of the nation's 9.8 million dairy cows. Inside the sealed silos, the crops ferment, which protects them from yeasts and molds, said agricultural engineer Richard E. Muck of the Dairy Forage Research Center in Madison, Wis.

But spoilage begins when the silos are opened to feed animals or to add more grain. Even with good management, about 5 percent to 15 percent of a crop can be spoiled by the growth of aerobic micro-organisms, Muck said.

From one-third to half of all dairy farmers use silage inoculants to speed up fermentation and protect the grain.

"But the silage inoculants farmers buy do only one part of the job that's required for total crop protection - speed up fermentation," Muck said.

Horn fly is a problem for many cattle producers

Dennis Newton, Deaf Smith County Extension Agent, recently reported the importance of horn fly prevention and management among cattle.

Horn flies are the most important insect pest of cattle nationally and occur in damaging numbers throughout Texas every summer. Horn fly problems are normally limited to pasture and range situations and or usually very minor in feedlot operations.

Present throughout the country, these bloodsucking flies are the smallest of the commonly recognized livestock pest flies. They are about half the size of the ordinary house fly.

Generally, in the Texas Panhandle, the flies have two peak periods May-June and September-October. During July and August, hot, dry weather usually keep horn fly populations at a relatively low level.

The reason for this is because horn fly larvae develop only in manure with sufficient moisture levels. In July and August, unless there is above average rainfall, the manure pats dry out before the larvae can develop to maturity.

Adult horn flies of both sexes spend most of their time resting on the bodies of animals during the day as well as at night, feeding intermittently. Several generations of the fly occur each summer.

Horn flies are usually found on the backs of cattle, out of reach of the animal's head or tail. During the day, they move to the shaded side or underside of the animals to escape the heat.

Each fly feeds from 20 to 40 times within a 24 hour period, piercing the cow's skin each time. Thus, a cow with 1,000 horn flies may be bitten from 600,000 to 1,200,000 times in a 30-day period. It is no wonder that these blood sucking flies reduce weight gains and milk production in mother cows with calves.

A number of strategies of insecticide use are available for horn fly control. Producers may use insecticidal ear tags, sprays, pour-ons, dust bags, backrubbers or self-oilers, and oral (through feed) larvicides or some combination of these.

Through the use of pyrethroid insecticide ear tags stockman have encountered the most widespread problem of resistance to insecticides with livestock pest. The longevity of the tags' action made them desirable from a control standpoint, but also meant that selection for resistance occurred over several generations with each application of ear tags.

Resistance occurs as season long use of the same insecticide kills the insecticide susceptible horn flies, leaving only resistant flies to reproduce. Soon resistant flies dominate and the insecticide is no longer effective, often after only two season of use.

Resistance to one pyrethroid causes resistance to other pyrethroids -- a phenomenon called cross resistance.

Third generation pyrethroids are listed separately from other pyrethroids because of their relative effectiveness and their relationship to quickly building high levels of horn fly resistance.

The third generations pyrethroids to date have provided the longest and most effective control of horn flies. They do, however, cause pyrethroid resistance levels to increase at a very rapid rate.

Widespread use of these tags year after year will result in super-resistant flies which may be very difficult to control with any pyrethroid tag. Even a few years of consecutive use may render the other pyrethroid tags ineffective.

Insecticide resistance management is an important component of horn fly management. If resistance to pyrethroids continue to increase, producers will have, for all practical purposes, lost an extremely important class of insecticides for horn fly control.

Producers with questions concerning horn fly control or desiring more information may contact the Deaf Smith County Office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Mexican cattle to U.S. is hastened by drought

FORT WORTH -- The virtually one-sided flow of live cattle from Mexico into the United States in recent months tears up the notion of "trade as a two-way street" under the North American Free Trade Agreement, the president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association told member of the Mexican National Cattlemen's Association at their annual convention recently in Cancun.

Chaunce O. Thompson Jr., a rancher from Breckenridge, who is president of the 118-year-old Texas cattle association, acknowledged and sympathized with the Mexican cattlemen over the worst drought in northern Mexico in 40 years.

The drought has killed hundreds of thousands of Mexican cattle and forced the liquidation of 1.5 million head, of which 80 percent are finding their way into Texas. Also driving the cross-border migration of cattle and dollars is Mexico's devalued peso and austerity program, which have severely limited imports of U.S. beef into Mexico.

"Feeder cattle imports from Mexico are up 68 percent from a year ago and slaughter cow numbers are up an astounding 2,000 percent," Thompson said. Historically, Mexico sends approximately one million head of cattle to the United States annually, but some estimates put this year's number at 1.5 million or higher.

Citing the gloomy profit picture for U.S. cattle producers, Thompson told the Mexican cattlemen that "We have shared your burden. We have accepted your feeder cattle, your slaughter cattle and even some of your breeding cattle. At issue in Texas is how much more Mexican cattle can we absorb and at what price to our domestic cattle industry?"

Thompson, who said his group continues to support NAFTA, emphasized that Mexico needs Texas and Texas needs Mexico in cattle and beef trade, but ways must be found for both sides to prosper.

He asked the Mexican cattle group and the Mexican government to consider several TSCRA recommendations, including:

- * Creation of a plan to orderly market all classes of Mexican cattle to the United States to minimize market disruptions.

- * Purchase of U.S. beef of all grades, by whatever means available, to offset the increased burden of extra imports of Mexican live cattle.

- * Establishment of a market information and reporting system to track livestock movements, marketing, identification, prices and other trends in Mexico, as it is done in the United States.

- * Development of a self-help program for the Mexican cattle industry similar to the dollar-per-head checkoff program in the United States to fund research, promotion and education about beef to Mexican consumers.

Emergency farm loan applications accepted

Applications for emergency farm loans for losses caused by drought, are being accepted at the Rural Economic and Community Development (RECD) office located in Hereford, RECD County Supervisor Rodney L. Baker said recently.

Deaf Smith County is one of six in Texas recently named by Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from the drought.

Baker said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of their actual losses or the operating loan needed to continue in business or $500,000, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest is 4.5 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an RECD emergency loan," Baker said. Farmers participating in the PIK or Federal Crop Insurance program will have to figure in proceeds from those programs in determining their loss.

"Applicants for loans under this emergency designation will be accepted until January 19, 1996 but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing and possibly over into the new farming season," Baker said.

RECD is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is authorized to provide disaster emergency loans to recognized farmers who work at and rely on farming for a substantial part of their living. Eligibility is extended to individual farmers who are U.S. citizens and to farming partnerships, corporations or cooperatives in which U.S. citizens hold a majority interest.

The RECD office in Hereford is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

U of H aims to compete in new conference

By JERRY WIZIG
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON - As University of Houston athletic director Bill Carr was recently discussing the future of athletics at his school, a fire alarm sounded through the new athletics and alumni facility that alumnus John Moores funded.

One could not find more fitting symbolism.

As UH prepares for its 50th football season, the future has never looked more challenging for Cougar athletics.

Finding themselves between the final season of the Southwest Conference and their leap into Conference USA, the Cougars seem caught between two tides of fortune. They can be perceived as standing with their backs against the wall athletically - "Not a metaphor I would choose," Carr said - or at the lip of the cup of an exciting new stage.

Not-so-distant history reveals the Cougars aren't novices at this type of transition.

After spending decades with their noses pressed to the window of an uninterested SWC, Bill Yeoman's football teams won their way to the Cotton Bowl three times in UH's first four seasons in the conference. Before Guy Lewis' basketball teams began SWC competition, the Cougars already had played in nine NCAA Tournaments, including a pair of Final Fours. Five more NCAA Tournaments, three Final Fours and Phi Slama Jama followed their entry into the SWC under Lewis. Then came three more NCAA appearances by former coach Pat Foster's teams.

But that was then. Stark reality shows 10 wins in the last four football seasons and 17 victories over the past two basketball seasons.

"We have had," Carr said, "some long-suffering fans."

And there have been fewer and fewer of those.

The downturn in fortunes occurred at the worst possible time - with the SWC's breakup, which dates publicly from Feb. 22, 1994, when Texas, Texas A&M, Baylor and Texas Tech disclosed they had been invited to join the Big Eight.

At Carr's urging, UH made it clear it was not interested in discussions with the Western Athletic Conference, which soon added Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian from the SWC. After a year of speculation and endless discussion, the Cougars - along with six Great Midwest and five Metro Conference schools - ended up in Conference USA, a move UH saw as its best alternative.

"I was convinced a new conference structure would emerge because of the urgency of Division I-A football schools," Carr said. "There is no life for a (football) independent."

"In the industry of athletics, you have to have competition, and it determines your own level of excellence. Conference USA is our best possible alternative. We will associate with a whole new set of rivalries, some of which we have engaged in before. We will have a bowl tie-in for our football programs while we build those, and we have great basketball programs as our banner-carrying sport."

"The whole drift of the industry is, it's becoming more and more difficult," Carr continued. "In about 10 years, the number will be down to 70 or 80 (from the current 107 Division I-A football schools). I firmly believe a number of schools will fall out of I-A football and there will be more reconfiguration."

"Division I-A football drives the train. Basketball pays the bills."

Cincinnati, Louisville, Memphis, Southern Mississippi and Tulane will remain football independents until C-USA starts up the sport in 1996, the year the Cougars begin competing in the league. The Cougars will not be included in C-USA's inaugural 1995-96 basketball season, which will feature the aforementioned schools plus Alabama-Birmingham, DePaul, Marquette, North Carolina Charlotte, Saint Louis and South Florida.

"In many ways, we would like to make the transition (from the SWC to C-USA) in the fall of 1995," Carr said. "But we think we're right to stay with the SWC until its dissolution."

Economically, the challenge for UH athletics is as great at the turnstiles as it is on the field.

In their consecutive one-win football seasons, the Cougars' attendance average was 21,312 in 1994 and 19,449 in 1993. Even in 1989, Andre Ware's Heisman Trophy-winning season, the average for home games was about 28,500 - down from 38,680 in 1979, Houston's third Cotton Bowl season. Basketball attendance at Hofheinz Pavilion sagged to about 3,000 a game in 1994-95.

Carr encountered a $4 million deficit when he arrived in April 1993. Aided by about $2.5 million in interest earned by a gift from John and Rebecca Moores, the deficit was reduced to $3 million in the 1993-94 fiscal year.

The 1994-95 deficit, Carr said, is projected at $3.25 million to $3.5 million on a budget of $10 million. The athletic department receives about $2.1 million a year in student service fees.

"Definitely, we have not made the progress we need to make in reducing the deficit," Carr said. "That's one of our mandates from our regents."

The 1995-96 budget will be slightly less than $10 million, including raises for some assistant football coaches Carr said "were below a reasonable level for their positions." Generating revenue, Carr said, is critical.

"Our athletics program, including our football program, is as crucial as any in the country," Carr said. "I still believe the fiscal challenge can be met. None is more critical."

Fannies in the seats and a drastic increase in contributions (currently only about $300,000 to $400,000 annually) are the obvious priorities. But as is the case with several other C-USA schools, competing with the pros is a part of athletic-department life at UH.

"The Houston sports fan is very sophisticated and wants to see a high level of excellence," Carr said. "People have to be proud of the program. They come to see competitive excellence and also to see family and friends, an intercollegiate athletic event that is good, clean fun. That is the marketing direction we have to take."

"Houston is saturated by professional sports, but I don't see Houston people building their social calendars around the Rockets, Oilers or Astros as they do in, say, Gainesville, Fla., where there is a single focus (the University of Florida)."

People, emotion and money are the factors that must lead a UH resurgence, Carr said, adding, "When people have a sense of ownership and pride, if they are capable of giving, they will give according to their means."

"John Moores and his family didn't go hungry because his family gave $29 million. He wanted to give it, and if he hadn't been involved (with UH athletics), he wouldn't have done it."

The athletic and alumni center funded by the Mooreses should be the Cougars' launching pad to the future. "It gives us a platform from which to more efficiently present ourselves," Carr said.

UH's lease with the Astrodome, its home football field since 1965, expires after the 1995 season. Carr expects to sign an extension of four or five more years soon.

There's no arguing the fiscal facts. Conference USA's initial football and basketball television packages (five years, $30 million total for football and basketball) don't approach those of the Big 12 ($100 million for football, $18.5 million for basketball).

And future UH football schedules will not include, at least in the foreseeable future, rivals such as Texas A&M and Texas, teams the Cougars longed to play regularly before their SWC days and that Carr would like to return to the schedule.

"I understand their concerns with eight conference games (in the Big 12) and wanting to play a competitive non-conference schedule," Carr said.

"I think they should have an obligation to play a sister school. The state of Texas has a lot of money invested in UH, and UH is a state asset."

"Ultimately, the values and philosophy of the school are articulated by the regents," Carr said. "If the regents decide, they will emphasize or de-emphasize athletics."

"My perception is, the regents recognize the value of athletics to an urban institution in Texas and want us very much to have a program with competitive and academic excellence."

One way to expand the coffers is to play big-name non-conference opponents. Carr and football coach Kim Helton like a C-USA schedule that will allow for six non-conference games.

(For the league's first three basketball seasons, including UH's first two, there will be 14 conference dates per season. The Cougars will play home-and-home series with division foes Memphis, Louisville and North Carolina Charlotte in 1997 plus eight other conference games, leaving coach Alvin Brooks with ample non-conference dates.)

Carr and Helton compare UH's situation with that of Florida State before the Seminoles emerged on the national football scene. It helps when there are road-game guarantees like the $325,000 UH will receive for its 1995 opener at Florida.

"I think we will see a bigger difference in attendance as we get better," Carr said. "We are not in a strong competitive position now. We have been, and we will be again. Conference USA gives us the chance to establish a whole new set of rivalries with some schools. We can leverage in revenue from football and basketball and have a surge of interest in these new people.

"While we build our football program as Florida State did in the late 1970s and early 1980s, we must do what they had to do. They won on the road (at places like Nebraska, LSU, Ohio State and Michigan)."

"Is it easy to do? Certainly not, but it is what you have to do."

Jordan gets movie deal

By WENDY E. LANE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Ehhhh ... what's up, Michael?

For Michael Jordan, a starring role in a feature film is what's up.

Jordan, the marketing marvel and sometimes player for the Chicago Bulls, will team with Bugs Bunny and other Looney Tunes characters in a new Warner Bros. movie called "Space Jam."

The movie, scheduled for release in November 1996, is the first for Jordan, who will play - who else? - himself.

"My kids wanted me to do it," he said. "It'll give me the opportunity to play myself. If I can't play myself, I can't play no one else."

Jordan, who has appeared with the Looney Tunes in commercials for fast food and athletic shoes, doesn't worry about being upstaged by a smart-mouthed rabbit.

"I don't mind playing second fiddle to him at all," Jordan said, "or fourth or fifth fiddle."

The movie's plot calls for Jordan to help the Looney Tunes foil a kidnap plot by a band of outer-space creatures. Other as-yet-unannounced entertainment and sports celebrities are to appear in the film, its producers said.

Jordan's first film acting role will be a challenge because of the live action-animated format, said producer Ivan Reitman, whose credits include "Ghostbusters," "Kindergarten Cop," "Twins" and "National Lampoon's Animal House."

"Michael has picked a relatively difficult film," Reitman said. "One of the hardest things to do is act with cartoon characters that aren't there. It will take an enormous amount of patience."

To make things easier, live actors will act as stand-ins for Bugs, Daffy and the rest of the Looney Tunes gang during filming. Jordan's part in the production will begin next month and is expected to conclude before the start of the Bulls' training camp in October.

Jordan returned to the NBA in March after quitting the game in October 1993 and embarking on a less-than-successful career as a minor league baseball player. He rejoined the Bulls for the last 17 games of the regular season - pumping up the league's television ratings - but Chicago was ousted from the playoffs by the Orlando Magic in the second round.

Physician's assistant greeted by harsh Panhandle weather

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

The best time for a new resident to arrive in Hereford is not during tornado season, according to Narin Phuong, P.A.

The Cambodian native is the new physician's assistant to Dr. Jesse I. Perales at Hereford Health Clinic.

Mr. Phuong began his duties in May, arriving in Hereford just after the Canyon tornado and just prior to the one that touched down in Friona.

"The tornados scared me," said Mr. Phuong. "I have lived where there are earthquakes and hurricanes, but they don't scare me as bad as tornados."

Mr. Phuong and his family have lived in Long Beach, Calif., for the past 15 years. He studied to become a physician's assistant at the Charles Drew University of Medicine in Los Angeles.

"The schooling is different for a physician's assistant. It is a two-year program. One year of academic work and one year of developing clinical skills in hospital," said Mr. Phuong.

Fields of study include family practice, X-ray, obstetrics, gynecology, pediatrics, geriatrics and emergency room procedures.

A physician's assistant is trained to work under the supervision of a licensed physician. He works very closely with the doctor.

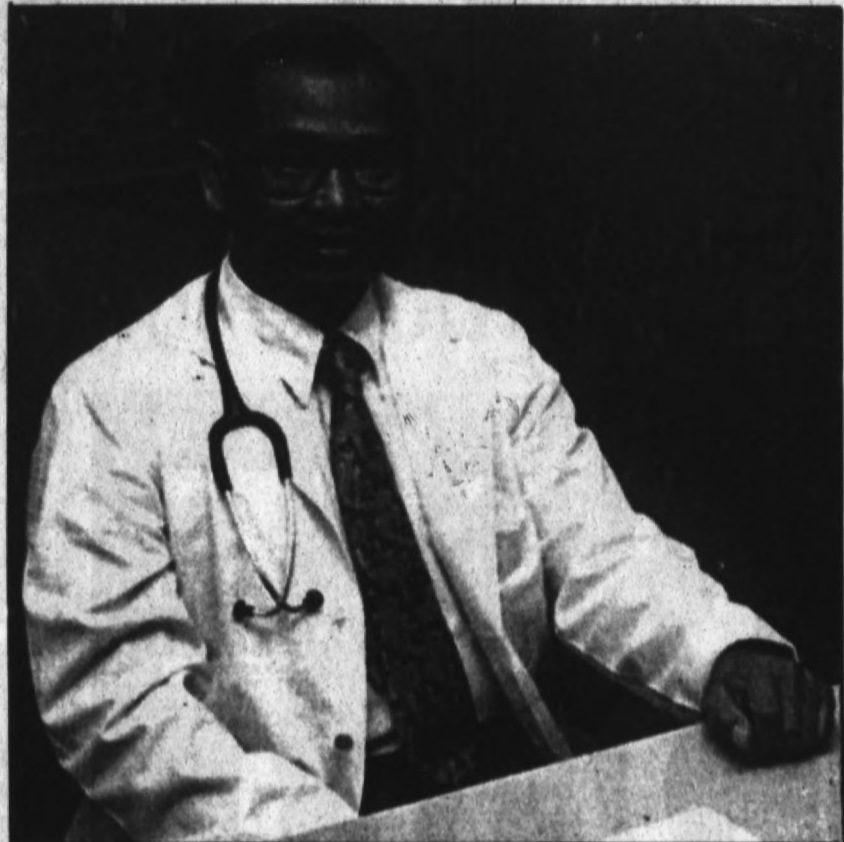

During his year of clinical training, Mr. Phuong delivered 32 babies at Martin Luther King Hospital. He did his geriatric practice at Santa Monica VA Hospital and pediatrics at the Watts Foundation in Los Angeles.

Mr. Phuong, his wife and his two older children came to California in 1980. They fled from Cambodia during the Communist takeover. Then spent time in a camp in Thailand before coming to the United States.

He was an elementary school teacher in Cambodia for three years prior to the takeover. He spoke French, in addition to his native language, but did not speak English. He learned English, which was "easier to learn than French" while at the camp in Thailand.

Mr. Phuong learned of the opening for a physician's assistant in Hereford through a recruiter. The details were worked out and he came to Hereford, leaving his family in California for the present.

His three older children -- a son in college, a son in high school and daughter in junior high -- will be joining him soon. His wife and youngest son will join the rest of the family in Hereford as soon as they can.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Whenever we try to give our dog a pill, he spits it out. I mix it in the dish of dog food, but he eats around it. I try putting it in his mouth, but that doesn't work. Have you any ideas? — Brenda Wilson, Portland, Ore.

If you give your dog a pill in his food, give him a spoon size portion and feed it to him — don't put it in his dish.

Another way is to put some butter on the pill, put the pill far enough down his throat, then tip your dog's head back, stroking his throat until he swallows the pill.

These methods are good for both dogs and cats. My dogs get their pills in a spoonful of butter and they just gobble them down.

Two of my pamphlets — one for dogs, the other for cats — are chock-full of hints and information I know pet owners will enjoy.

Anyone interested can order them.

Just send $2 for each booklet desired and a long, self-addressed, stamped (55 cents for one, 78 cents for two) to: Heloise Dog and/or Cat, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Dear Heloise: Here's a good time-saving hint when moving:

Pick up a change-of-address card at the post office, fill it out, then make as many copies as needed.

It's quick and simple, only costs pennies for copies and is worth it in the time you save. — M.H.C., Rosebud, Texas

BABY SHOWERS

Dear Heloise: When I was about three months pregnant with my son, my friends in Medina, N.Y., had a surprise baby shower for me.

Since my husband and I both have big families and this was the first grandchild, there was no doubt we would receive many gifts including all the necessities for a baby.

My friends had a shower for me instead of the baby. The gifts they chose were for me as a pregnant mom: many maternity outfits, perfume, hair bows, pins, scarves and accessories to make me feel good as my body changed during the next six months.

It was a unique and thoughtful idea. Maternity clothes, which can be an expense, and the extra little things, which made me feel pretty, meant so much to me. — Julie Horrigan, Erie, Pa.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer you, I letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

Never cut what you can untie. —Joseph Joubert

MRS. CHRISTOPHER LYNN HAVIS
...nee Connie Jackson

Jackson, Havis exchange vows in ceremony Saturday at San Jose Catholic Church

Connie Jackson and Christopher Lynn Havis were united in marriage in a Saturday afternoon ceremony at San Jose Catholic Church.

The bride is the daughter of Juan and Aurora Jackson of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Kirk and Sue Martinez of Amarillo.

Officiating were Father Darryl Birkenfeld of San Jose Church and Father Phil Lindley of Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church in Amarillo.

The church was decorated with a cascade of fresh white gladiolus, daisies, baby's breath and mixed ferns with white statice and a pair of spiral candelabra accented with mixed ivy.

Clara Jackson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Annie Jackson, sister of the bride and Anissa Gonzales, cousin of the bride.

William Hunter of Amarillo served as best man and groomsmen were Juan Jackson, Jr. and Leroy Jackson, brothers of the bride.

Serving as ushers were David Jackson, cousin of the bride and Fred Melendrez.

Junior bridesmaid was Stephanie Ramirez and junior groomsman was Leonel Gonzalez III, both cousins of the bride.

Flower girls were cousins of the bride Jacquelyn Balderez, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Adam Balderez; and Elizabeth Gonzales, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Uriel Gonzalez.

Kristopher Ramirez, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Juarez, was ring bearer.

Candle lighters were Laura Lomas and Felipe Gonzalez, Jr., cousin of the bride.

Vocal selections were provided by Sandy and Edward Maldonado.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a satin gown with a sabrina neckline and a princess bodice accented with Alencon lace, seed pearls, sequins and a basque waistline. The renaissance fitted sleeves had beaded and sequined lace. The full skirt was accented with Alencon lace trim and a double bow accented the chapel train. She wore a matching veil of white illusion. The bridal bouquet was a cascading teardrop arrangement of silk roses, crystals and pearls.

The bride wore a pearl necklace and earrings borrowed from her mother. She carried a silk and lace handkerchief belonging to her late grandmother, Emilia Jackson. She was given a gold brooch belonging to her maternal grandmother, Francisca Perez.

Bridal attendants wore tea length dresses with white taffeta skirts and black bodices. Each carried a bouquet of fresh daisies, baby's breath and mixed ivy tied with black and white silk ribbons.

Church gifts were provided by Mr. and Mrs. Saturnino Tamez, Iazo; Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Barela, arras; Mr. and Mrs. Felipe Gonzales, Bible and rosary; and Mr. and Mrs. Leonel Gonzalez, bouquet.

The couple was honored with a reception in the church hall. Janie Gonzalez and Patsy Juarez, cousins of the bride, served cake while Chelli Cummings served punch and coffee. Laura Lomas attended at the registry.

The serving table, covered with a lace cloth, was centered with a crystal candleholder and the bride's bouquet and featured a four-tiered white cake surrounded by four smaller cakes accented with the chosen colors of black and white.

Following a surprise honeymoon planned by the groom, the couple will be at home in San Antonio.

The bride is a 1993 graduate of Hereford High School and plans to continue her study of psychology at the University of Texas in San Antonio.

Havis is a 1988 graduate of Vernon High School and a 1991 graduate of Vernon Regional Junior College. He attended PRLA and is a certified peace officer. He plans to continue his career in law enforcement.

Out of town guests represented Amarillo, Houston, Lubbock, McAllen, Mission, Pharr, Vernon and Wichita Falls. Out of state guests represented Alabama, Arkansas, California, Florida and Oklahoma.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was appalled when I read in your column about Dr. Raymond Sattler, a surgeon in Wilmington, N.C., who left a patient whose brain was exposed on the operating table for 25 minutes while he went to get a snack.

This same doctor instructed a nurse to drill holes in a patient's head and was given intravenous fluids after "feeling weak" during a medical procedure.

I was greatly relieved a short time later when I read that the surgeon's medical license was lifted. Now I find out that Dr. Sattler has his license back. He denied that his actions had hurt any of his patients, and the state medical board of North Carolina agreed.

I moved to Wilmington last year. If I ever need an operation, I'm going back to Tampa. -- Mrs. X

DEAR MRS. X.: Hold it. Don't be so hasty. Before you buy a ticket to Tampa, please read the next letter.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just saw something in the Miami Herald that really shook me up. The University Community Hospital in Tampa has had three "unfortunate mishaps" within a short period of time.

One woman had arthroscopic surgery performed on the wrong knee.

A diabetic who was scheduled to have his right leg amputated woke up from the anesthetic to discover that the wrong leg had been removed. The state inspectors said the incident occurred because the surgery was originally scheduled on the left leg by mistake. Though a correction was made in the computer, it didn't get to the operating room, where final instructions are posted.

A few weeks later, in that same hospital, a 77-year-old man died after he was "inappropriately" removed from his ventilator. The hospital said it was a case of mistaken identity.

The respiratory therapist failed to identify the patient before carrying out the medical order. This was a violation of hospital procedure that requires the patient's identification bracelet to be checked against the written order.

Scary, isn't it? -- No Signature Please

DEAR NO SIG: You bet it's scary. I contacted Dr. James S. Todd, executive vice president of the American Medical Association, and asked for a comment. This is what he said:

"Every day in America, there are close to 6 million patient-physician encounters. Almost all are beneficial. Some are miraculously successful, and unfortunately, some go wrong."

"The mistakes made in Tampa should never have occurred. Unfortunately, the rules established by the AMA and other protective agencies were not followed. What occurred in Tampa was due to human failure."

"The malpractice system is virtually useless. It is clogged by claims which have no merit. Plaintiffs' lawyers are largely responsible for this. It seems they want to win a lottery. Unfortunately, the current legal procedure make it necessary for physicians to behave defensively and more expensively--not better."

"As for the physicians who get their licenses back, the AMA has no control. It is strictly up to the state licensing board to make the decisions."

So, dear readers, there you have it, from the Top Doc.

Gem of the Day: There's nothing wrong with drinking like a fish -- provided you drink what fish drink.

Names in the news

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) - Michael Jordan is taking his one-on-one with Bugs Bunny from TV commercials to the big screen.

The basketball star will make his film debut with the world's most famous bunny in a movie to be shot this summer, the Long Beach Press-Telegram reported Tuesday.

The hare-Jordan duo appeared in a 1993 commercial for Nike's Air Jordan basketball shoes.

The Warner Bros. movie, "Space Jam," - a mix of animation and live action - finds animated characters in danger of being kidnapped by a grumpy group of outer-space villains until Bugs enlists the help of Jordan.

It wasn't immediately known when the movie would be released.

The fingertip length veil consisted of a tiara headpiece made of white Venice lace with iridescent sequins and pearls falling in layers of tulle.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

At a recent workshop, time was spent on an "underground" slogan that's spreading across the nation - "Practice random kindness and senseless acts of beauty."

This can easily be incorporated into plans that HJH teachers have for the new school year. Seventh grade team teachers have begun a unit for students which will assist them in the change to junior high. This will include: becoming acquainted with the junior high program, campus and expectations; responsibilities and opportunities and the daily preparation for the future. Much of this will involve a continuation of the intermediate school concepts on values and self-esteem.

Parents and students are encouraged to wait until supply lists are posted before the purchase of school supplies. Some items they can "be sure of" will be regular rule paper and #2 pencils. Junior Historians will operate the Little Store again this year and many of the required supplies can be purchased there.

Congratulations again to those 4-H members who performed so well recently in various contests. These students are winners in many areas!

Those students who need physicals for participation in athletics should plan to get this done before school starts. There is really no excuse for students to miss classes for something that should have been done before classes began!

The Junior Historian trip to Palo Duro Canyon to see "Texas" is in the final planning stage. About thirty members, parents and sponsors are planning to go on the July 10 trip. Watch for details in next week's column for departure time and place.

Our custodial staff is busy preparing our classrooms for the new year by waxing floors, taking care of repairs and painting. Most teachers will spend several hours before in-service begins to put the "finishing touch" on each room to provide comfortable learning environments for the students. We welcome parent and student volunteers to help with this annual job of returning posters to the walls, getting books into rooms, arranging desks, etc.

Let's get the commitment to 'acts of senseless kindness' started before the school year begins by having it as a community project! Let's step to the top together!

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to all of the volunteers that have helped with the storm victims and have sent donations.

We are not accepting any clothing at the office beginning this week. Thanks to the generosity of many people, we have too many clothes at this time. Clothing may be taken to the Good Sheppard on Highway 60 and to the Guadalupe Economic Service at the old Church at San Jose (old Labor camp) on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

The Annual Membership meeting will be held Thursday, June 29, at 7:30 at the Red Cross office. All volunteers are asked to attend. The new members for the Board of Directors will be elected, reports given and volunteers honored.

A CPR class will begin Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Red Cross office. Call the office to register for this class.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

This is the beginning of the fourth week of the Summer Reading Club and there are over 653 children enrolled. Our Tuesday morning program was a great success with 287 children attending. After hearing stories of John Muir and Jane Goodall and how they have helped care for our world, the children decorated flower pots and were given potting soil and flower seeds to start their own gardens. I want to thank you parents for allowing your children to participate in the Summer Reading Club and encourage you to keep the reading habit after the program has ended. Reading together can be a great family activity.

For you who wish to continue the reading habit or begin it the new book list this week has a variety to choose from. Pigtown by Wilson J. Caunitz has a true story at the heart of this gripping novel. Seven One Detective Squad covers a part of Brooklyn called Pigtown, so called because until recently people actually kept pigs and other animals and small market gardens. A decision made at the highest level of the NYPD was responsible for massive corruption, the flow of "bad money", and drug trafficking. Matthew Stuart and his loyal resourceful crew are given the case involving a body found stuffed under a refrigerator. The victim, Mafia wiseguy Beansy Rutolo, triggers an investigation that puts Stuart and his men in danger from the Mafia and fellow NYPD officers.

The Senator's Agenda by Bob Larson features Wes Bryant, formerly of Denver's top rated talk radio station. When an old college friend Billie Baldwin, who had recently become Colorado's U.S. Senator, calls and asks Wes to be his new press secretary, Wes accepts. Wes soon learns that the previous press secretary killed himself the night Bill won the election. Something begins to nag at Wes that forces him to confront the truth about the powerful special interest groups that seem to control Bill. What if Wes is unknowingly a part of their manipulation? Wes knows he has no choice but to find the truth concerning his friend Bill, at any cost.

True Crime: The Novel by Andrew Klavan will keep you turning one page after another. On a hot Missouri summer's day Frank Bechum sits on Death Row awaiting his execution. Six years ago Bechum was convicted of murdering a shop clerk. Now after an exhausting appeals effort there is nothing left but to say goodbye to his wife and children and the interview for the St. Louis News. Reporter Steve Everett is looking for a big story that could get his career back on track, not a human interest piece. But Everett is a good reporter and as his research begins to support Bechum's story of innocence, and uncovers another story just below the surface, Everett becomes convinced that Bechum is innocent. There are only 18 hours left until midnight, the time of execution, and Everett will risk everything even his own life and career to save Bechum.

Presented in the form of a secret autobiography The Memoirs of Elizabeth Frankenstein by Theodore Roszak is a "subversive, erotically charged counterpart" to Shelly's Frankenstein. In her memoirs the spirited Elizabeth is a woman ahead of her times. As a child Elizabeth was rescued from the Gypsies and raised by Caroline Frankenstein as Victor's adopted sister. She and Victor are educated in the ancient teaching, ceremonies, and healing arts. The goal is to unite the two in the "chemical marriage," a union of opposites that will restore the earth's delicate balance. Roszak writes that "In speaking through Elizabeth Frankenstein, the character Mary Shelly modeled after herself, I hope to give Mary the voice she was not free to adopt in her own day."

The two biographies this week include Explorations; My Quest for Adventure and Discovery Under the Sea by Robert D. Ballard Ph. D. An accomplished oceanographer, scientist and adventurer Dr. Ballard tells the entire story of his undersea career. Among his many discoveries are those of the giant clams, worms that thrive in the depths previously believed uninhabitable, he also discovered the super-hot hydrothermal vents that some believe may be the source point of all life on earth. He also includes the discovery of the Titanic twelve thousand feet below the sea surface and the Nazi warship Bismark. Ballard also tells of previously classified expeditions to uncover the wrecks of Cold War nuclear submarines in an attempt to determine why they were lost, and the dangers they may still pose. I had the pleasure of hearing Dr. Ballard speak and I am excited and pleased to recommend this book to everyone. You will find it a pleasure to read, even if you know nothing about oceanography.

The second biography this week is Vicki! The True-Life Adventures of Miss Fireball by Vicki Lawrence. Vicki Lawrence appeared on the Carol Burnett Show after winning a look alike contest. Her role as Carol's sister began her public career which led to starring roles in Mama's Family, Win Lose or Draw, and her own syndicated talk show Vicki! Vicki shares her observations on motherhood, relationships, being a woman in a man's world, and her personal and professional triumphs. Vicki's funny and touching style makes this biography very enjoyable.

It is the mark of a good action that it appears inevitable in retrospect.

Thank God for Kids Ministries

Dr. Jim Lavender, along with his lion and lamb, make memorable the stories and truths of the Bible for children of all denominations.

Live animals help make Bible truths memorable for children

The Hereford Ministerial Alliance is the host for Thank God for Kids Ministries, a Christian outreach program for children from Richmond, Va. It will be held June 27, from 7 to 8 p.m. at Dameron Park.

Thank God for Kids Ministries, produced by United Methodist pastor, Dr. Jim Lavender, makes memorable the stories and truths of the Bible with the presentation of live animals.

In addition to the living lion and lamb, the ministry carries an extensive zoological collection.

The animal collection now contains every major species of giant cat, including one of the worlds' few remaining Siberian Tigers.

The goal of the ministry is to bring children and their families to local churches across America. Thank God for Kids will be presented to the public at no charge.

Dr. and Mrs. Lavender were appointed to begin the New Discovery United Methodist Church in Richmond, Va., in 1983. This was in response to the increased need to attract children in creative and memorable ways.

The Lavenders began to use birds and small animals along with simple magic tricks to teach the truths of the Bible to children.

The church grew quickly and the ministry was a success.

The end of the 1994 year marked the tenth anniversary of the ministry and in those ten years the ministry has reached approximately 68,000 children.

Today the traveling group ministers to churches of all denominations, attempting to reach America's children one child at a time.

Extension News

If you have a problem with drinking enough milk, there are other foods with calcium that can help supplement your diet.

Foods in the following chart can add extra calcium equal to the amount in the two to three servings of milk you need for each day.

Food equal in calcium to 1 cup of milk include:

- * 7 medium or 3 ounces of sardines, including bones
- * 2 cups mustard greens
- * 7 corn tortillas, if made with lime or calcium salts - 6-7 inches across
- * 7 wheat flour tortillas - if the flour is enriched (read the label) - 7-8 inches across

* 3 ounces canned salmon, including the bones

* 1/2 cup or 4 ounces tofu (if made with calcium sulfite)

* 1 cup collard greens, frozen

* 4 ounces or 1 1/2 waffles, 7 inches across enriched mix with milk and eggs

* 3/4 cup or 4 1/2 ounces Mackerel with bone (includes 2 2/3 tsp. fat)

Foods equal in calcium to 1/3 cup of milk include:

* 1 cup dried beans

* 1/2 cup turnip greens or fresh bok choy

* 1 cup broccoli

* 1 medium square cornbread (2 1/2 x 2 1/2 x 1 1/2 inches)

* 2 pancakes, 4 inches across

* 3 ounces of shrimp

* 5 slices bread made with enriched flour

You can make these foods higher in calcium by cooking soups with bones and tomato or vinegar, combing macaroni or other pasta with cheese and other combinations that have calcium.

Converting an old filing system to a new—even an electronic one—can make a business more competitive.

TEN GOOD IDEAS

The price of a good newspaper is usually around a dollar. The value of a good idea may be thousands or even millions of dollars.

Part of our job as newspaper columnists is to increase the value of your newspaper. We do this by struggling to come up with useful information and good ideas packaged in such a manner to make them interesting reading.

Therefore, I offer you a very special value in today's column: 10 good ideas. Their exact value will depend on how you use them, buy any of them could easily pay for a lifetime supply of newspapers. Worth a million:

- You can measure the quality of your customer service by how often you have to say you're sorry. This assumes that you do apologize when you make mistakes or fail to meet your customer's expectations. Good service means never having to apologize. Anytime you have to say, "I'm sorry," note the reason. You should try to eliminate the cause of apologies.

Become a problem solver. There are three kinds of people in business: Those who cause problems and know it, those who cause problems and don't know it and those who are more concerned with solving problems than determining who caused them. You will increase your value to others by becoming a problem solver. Focus your energy and efforts on finding answers and solutions, not on assigning blame.

Assume that you have no job security. Even if you're self-employed, your customers can fire you by taking their business elsewhere. Life is not a probationary period where you can mess up continually. Long-term security is a series of short-term successes.

Be thankful for your success and happiness. Despite what you may see on television or at the movies, most of life's problems cannot be solved in 30 minutes. All stories do not have happy endings.

In real life people lose jobs, get sick, lose loved ones and have big problems. If life is going well for you, rejoice and be grateful. Being thankful can lower your stress level and help you live a healthier, happier life.

Work toward simplicity. Divide complex projects, into smaller, less difficult tasks. Write short sentences and paragraphs. Avoid using voluminous, polysyllabic, metaphorical discourse when small, common words will convey the same meaning.

Be courteous. I often observe rude, ungrateful people as I travel. And yet, I've never met a successful manager or business owner who had the respect of both employees and customers who wasn't courteous. Courtesy is a mark of class, and an important factor in building a profitable business or career. Read junk mail only when you're looking for direct marketing ideas. Once in a while you may find a good idea you can use or adapt to your marketing efforts. Remember that most junk mail is junk, so filter ideas carefully.

Learn to do more with less. Many people use the lack of resources as an excuse for not accomplishing anything. Find ways when there are no ways. You increase your value to others when you develop a reputation of getting the job done anyway. If you work for yourself, doing more with less will help you make more money and can keep you profitable when others are failing.

Wherever you go, whatever you do, try to look your best. Your appearance is important. Sloppiness may cost you dearly in both credibility and money. It is always better to overdress than to appear disheveled.

Allow time for thinking. If your schedule keeps you too busy to think, you're too busy. Everyone needs some time to "sort things out." Thinking is the source of creativity and innovation. Carefully thought often solves little problems before they become big, highly visible ones.

RANCH WITH ROOMY ROOMS
Laundry Room In The Bed Room. End Of The Home

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

Homeowners will appreciate this well thought out floor plan. An entry foyer will direct traffic flow either to the bed room end of the home or to the spacious central core of the home.

The great room is vaulted and extends the entire depth of the home front to back. The ideal dining room is only visually segregated from the great room. The fact that there is no wall separating the two rooms allows them to function as one when entertaining. The breakfast room harmonizes with a kitchen designed for workability, and double garage access is provided in this area as well.

The three spacious bed rooms give you more of what you want. The two front bed rooms share an interconnecting bath and each has an abundance of closet space. The master suite is grand, and has a private luxurious garden bath, including double vanity, corner whirlpool tub and separate glass shower, as well as a large walk in closet.

Also included in the bed room wing of the home is a convenient half bath and an outstanding laundry room with an abundance of storage space.

The exterior is combination stone and horizontal siding with an attached double garage which is pulled forward under it's own gable. The home is plan number 2082, and includes 2,018 square feet of heated living space. All W. D. Farmer plans are furnished with details necessary for FHA and VA approval and special construction details for energy efficiency.

For further information on plan 2082, write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, You who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my idea. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Amen, Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. (Grace obtained).

Without advertising a terrible thing happens... nothing
Hereford has a number of excellent retail stores who make every effort to fill your needs or services. Shop at home with the local folks. They help support your church, your kids, your entire community.
America's best legitimate advertising buy is still the local newspaper that is involved in your community. Just matters don't contribute a dime to the betterment of Hereford. They take and don't give back.

Real Estate Discrimination Policy
All real estate advertising herein is subject to the Federal Fair Housing Act, which makes it illegal to advertise any preference, limitation or discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status or national origin, or intention to make any such preference, limitation or discrimination.
State laws forbid discrimination in the sale, rental or advertising of real estate based on factors in addition to those protected under federal law. We will not knowingly accept any advertising for real estate which is in violation of the law. All persons are hereby informed that all dwellings advertised are available on equal opportunity basis.

Photos should be in black and white; some color photos may be approved if contrast is suitable for reproduction. Wedding and anniversary writeups should be submitted at least five days before publication.

— YOUR EYES —

WHAT TO LOOK FOR IN SUNGLASSES

The more we learn about the sun's rays and the damage they do to our skin and our eyes, the more we realize we need protection. Ideally, we protect our eyes all year around. But for most of us, summer is the time we're outdoors, often on a high-glare beach or water.

Now's the time to make sure you're equipped with up-to-date protective lenses against ultraviolet A—closest to the visible spectrum—and invisible UV-B, even more injurious. Follow this rating system:

- Cosmetic lenses absorb 70 percent of UV-B, 20 percent of UV-A and less than 60 percent of visible light. You'll look like a movie star, but there's not much protection.
- General purpose lenses absorb at least 95 percent of UV-B, 60 percent of UV-A and from 60 to 92 percent of visible light. They're adequate for most outdoor activities.
- Special purpose lenses are advisable for the beach, on the water and on ski slopes later. They block at least 99 percent of UV-B, 60 percent of UV-A and 20 to 97 percent of visible light.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

It is hard to believe that half of this year is already gone! The 4th of July celebration is coming soon. We are fortunate to have Wes Klett in charge of this event. He has great ideas and is a good organizer. It is a time we can get together as a community to celebrate the freedom we have here, meet new people and visit old friends, and also see a beautiful fire works display. If you need a ride to the park, let us know and we will take you. Let us help Wes and his committee have a record breaking attendance.

We will be having a Health Information, Counseling and Advocacy Program (HICAP) Clinic at the center on July 11, 1-4 p.m. There will be staff and volunteers on hand to provide one-on-one counseling and assistance, as well as to distribute updated material on various issues concerning Senior Texans. This is a free service and absolutely no selling.

We plan to have a HICAP Volunteer working as a Benefits Counselor at the center soon at least two days a month to assist with these needs.

We are working on a tour to Branson and a Christmas Light tour. Will have details soon. If interested in any of our tours, please come by the office and leave your name.

Do you have specific ideas on concerning Medicare, changes or some information you feel would help the program, please write or call our representatives in Washington. You know how important Medicare is to you, our Seniors.

See you at the Center.

HICAP Clinic will be held at Senior Center

Attention Senior Texans!! Do you need help sorting through paperwork from Medicare and other insurance companies? Are you sometimes frustrated with trying to understand what Medicare covers, what it doesn't, and how to fill the gaps? Would you like more information on how to obtain a "Living Will" or a Power of Attorney? Do you need assistance in applying for public benefits?

If you answered YES! to one or more of these questions, make plans now to attend the HICAP Clinic at Hereford Senior Citizens Association on July 11 from 1 p.m.-4 p.m. Staff and volunteers from the Health Information, Counseling and Advocacy Program (HICAP) will be on hand to provide one-on-one counseling and assistance, as well as to distribute updated material on various issues concerning Senior Texans. This is a free service, and there is absolutely no selling involved. If you are homebound, you can have a volunteer visit in your home by calling the number listed below.

HICAP is sponsored by the Texas Department on Aging, the Texas Department of Insurance, and the Texas Legal Services Center. Locally, it is coordinated by the Area Agency on Aging of the Panhandle. For more information, please contact Julie Simmons, Benefits Counselor, at 800-642-6008. We hope to see you on the 11th!

New members welcome!
Inquire at the Senior Center.

Busy quilting

Among other activities at the Senior Citizens Center, quilting is a favorite pastime for many of the members. These women spend their time working on a beautiful quilt which is estimated to take around two weeks to complete. Quilting is offered every day at the center from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Those working are (top left) Merle Boozer, (top right) Ruth Fortenberry, (bottom) Estelle Ware. Also helping the trio was Mona Keese (not pictured).

43 million people receive benefits, direct deposits

Who gets Social Security? Almost 43 million persons receive Social Security benefits, one in six in the population. They include 26.4 million retired workers; 4 million disabled workers; 5.5 million widows/widowers; 3.3 million spouses; and 3.6 million children.

Most people get direct deposit. Since 1976, Social Security beneficiaries have been able to have their checks deposited directly to their checking or saving accounts. Today more than 52 percent of beneficiaries have direct deposit.

Summer officially arrived this past week and many of our members have gone fishing, to see the grandkids, or to the mountains. The mountains sound like a good idea to me.

The stormy weather is still causing crop damage to some areas of the Panhandle. The rebuilding from the tornadoes is taking place. The people in our area will replant, rebuild, or whatever it takes to come back if given a chance.

Wheat harvest is underway, but not a bumper crop by any means, as it was too dry all winter and spring. When the rains came, the thunderstorms brought hail to some areas, so some of us will have a very short crop.

The Senior Center still continues to serve the needs of our senior citizens. The therapy pool area got a refurbishing last month, thanks to member Truman Thurston, member Neal Young, staff personnel Carolyn Hutcheson, and director Margie Daniels. Thanks to these people and all our volunteers that work in other areas of service. We just could not be the Center that we are without our volunteers.

Thanks also to the people at Hereford Regional Medical Center for their many fine programs they supply each month. We are fortunate indeed to have a fine facility in Hereford. Jim Robinson, the hospital board and the entire staff have recognized our Senior population and are striving to serve us. Thanks to Jim and all of you!

Until next time, may the rain clouds be gentle and often and you have a nice summer, however you choose to spend it.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD

During the past decade, the Federal government and national health organizations including The American Dietetic Association have published an unprecedented number of recommendations about eating healthfully. In addition, enormous advances have been made in the science of food and nutrition. Despite these encouraging developments, misinformation about the role of nutrition in health abounds in our society. In this climate of misinformation nutrition-related misbeliefs, health fraud and quackery flourish.

It is the responsibility of the professionals, health-care practitioners, educators, and the food industry to address the medical and economic effects of food-and nutrition-related misinformation on consumers. These persons must continue to promote sound nutrition information to the public and actively confront food and nutrition misinformation.

The public is faced with an overwhelming amount of food and nutrition information. Unfortunately, it is not always clear how to distinguish nutrition facts from nutrition misinformation. There is no clear conception of what constitutes health fraud or quackery. Nutrition facts are those that have been established using the scientific method. Nutrition misinformation, on the other hand, consists of erroneous facts or misinterpretation of nutrition food and science. The danger of nutrition misinformation is that it may be used to fuel food faddism, quackery, or health fraud.

Food faddism is a dietary practice based on an exaggerated belief in the effects of nutrition on health and disease. Food fads involve unreasonable and exaggerated beliefs that special attributes of a particular food may cure disease, that certain foods should be eliminated from the diet because they are harmful, and that certain foods convey unique health benefits. The U.S. Surgeon General's Report on Nutrition and Health defines food quackery as "the promotion for profit of special foods, products, processes, or appliances with false or misleading health or therapeutic claims". Food quackery is exploitative and entrepreneurial, and many times those who promote quackery schemes may themselves be victims of misinformation and may sincerely believe that they are promoting accurate information. Health fraud shares many of the characteristics of food faddism and food quackery, yet it is always deliberate and done for gain. In cases of health fraud, a person or group knowingly disseminates erroneous nutrition information or makes false claims of nutrition benefits.

The health consequences of quackery may result from failure to seek legitimate medical care or continue essential treatment, effects of nutrient toxicities of potential toxic components of products, undesirable nutrient-drug interactions, nutrient deficiencies, and interference with sound nutrition education and practice. Economics harm occurs when purported remedies and cures do not work and when products are purchased needlessly.

Nutrition misinformation and misbelief flourish to some degree because they are deep rooted in our cultural milieu. Also fundamental to nutrition misbelief today is the folk statement "you are what you eat", which implies that everything from mood and behavior to intellectual capacity is determined by diet. Although food beliefs that are rooted in traditional cultures and religions may be unsupported by scientific evidence, they should be respected as long as they are reasonable and do not lead to possible harm and economic exploitation to adherents.

Scientific progress alone does not eliminate nutrition misinformation. Both the news media and researchers need to share the responsibility for reporting accurate and balanced information to the public. The New England Journal of Medicine, concerned over the way scientific articles in their journal are sensationalized by the media have developed the following procedures:

1st. stating that an association between two events is not the same as cause and effect.

2nd. demonstrating one link in a postulated chain of events does not mean that the whole chain is proved.

3rd. probabilities are not the same as certainties.

4th. the way a scientific result is framed can greatly affect its impact.

The evaluation of nutrition information is best done through proper interpretation of scientific studies by qualified nutrition professionals. Thus the media should take advantage of the expertise and of nutrition professionals to clarify information and place new research findings in their broader context.

Nutrition misinformation is often disseminated as promotional material with dietary supplements, herbal remedies, or special preparations for weight control, constituting a form of hidden advertising. Testimonials are another way misinformation is spread. The effect of testimonials can be far reaching and potentially harmful to the public. Professionals must be prepared to counter misinformation by providing reliable, accurate information to the media and the public. The consumer must feel free to seek the advice of these professionals when they are in doubt about a product.

Consumers can take steps to arm themselves against nutrition misinformation to becoming more aware of the many ways misinformation, food fraud and quackery operates. Consumers suspicious about a statement, product, or service should be encouraged to make an inquiry to the local health department, food and nutrition services in the community or to the county extension services. Consumers need to be aware of credible sources of nutrition information.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I'm 59 years old and I'm starting to think about what would be the best time for me to retire. Will someone at Social Security be able to help me?

A: Although Social Security will not be able to tell you the best time to retire, we can give you information to help you decide. Here are some things you should keep in mind. You can retire as early as 62. If you do, your retirement benefits will be reduced to take into account the longer period of time you'll receive checks. If you wait until 65, you'll receive your full benefit amount. And if you delay your retirement until after 65, the benefit amount will be increased slightly for each month after 65 that you delay retirement.

You'll also want to know that Social Security will give you a personalized benefit estimate at your request. Call our toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, to ask for a Request for Earnings and Benefit Statement.

Q: I just turned 65 and signed up for Medicare. My wife and I are planning to travel to Europe in July. Does Medicare pay for hospital and medical services outside the United States?

A: Generally, Medicare does not pay for hospital or medical services outside the U.S., although in certain, limited cases Medicare can pay for inpatient services that you get in Canada or Mexico. If you are planning to travel outside the United States, you may want to buy special short-term health insurance for foreign travel. If you have a private policy now, be sure to check to see if health care in a foreign country is covered by your policy.

Q: Can I apply for food stamps at my Social Security office?

A: If you and the rest of your household either receive or are now applying for Supplemental Security Income (SSI), then the local Social Security office can take your food stamp application. If not, you can still obtain a food stamp application. If not, you can still obtain a food stamp application from the Social Security office; however, you would have to apply for food stamps at the Texas Department of Human Services.

Q: How does Social Security compute the amount of my Social Security retirement benefits?

A: The formula for figuring benefits uses your average earnings over your entire working life. For nearly everyone retiring now and in the future, 35 years of earnings are used to compute the retirement benefit. A factsheet called "How Your Retirement Benefit Is Figured" is available from Social Security. It explains in more detail how the payment is computed. Just call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 to obtain a free copy.

If you wish to have your questions answered in this column, please write to Byron Sansom, district Manager, Senior Scene, Social Security Administration, 3501 W. 45th, Suite E., Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Korea POWs reunited by dog tags

Names in the news

By DON WALLACE
Jacksonville Daily Progress
JACKSONVILLE, Texas - Dogtags more than 40 years old have brought two old service buddies together for a memory-stirring visit.

The tags - those metal little disks used for identification in the military - tied James Raymond Wells of Jacksonville with Lee E. Merworth of Mena, Ark. For more than 32 months (1950-53), Wells and Merworth were together in Chinese prisoner of war camp No. 5 near the Yalu River in North Korea. Wells and Merworth were two of 12 American GI's crammed and left to starve with no heat in a 9-by 9-foot room.

Of the total 3,500 prisoners at the camp, about 2,000 died. But Wells and Merworth managed to survive.

Wells, now a 64-year-old Jacksonville printer, was only recently rummaging through his war memorabilia at home and came across Merworth's dogtags that Merworth had given to him when the two were POWs. Wells wondered to himself what happened to the old buddy from Midland.

"I wondered if he'd died," said Wells. "I hadn't heard from him in a long time. I was going to put the notice of his dog tags in the Prisoners of War bulletin. Then I got a call."

The call strangely enough, was from Merworth, who happened to be visiting relatives in Maydelle. Last Friday, they got together.

"It was a weird deal," Merworth said. "It was the first call I made in trying to find Raymond and I got the right man."

Wells added, "It makes you think it was something psychic. I was thinking about him and looking at his dogtags and he called. The first time I'd heard from him all these years. I was so excited. I just laughed."

The two relived some grisly stories from the camp, scratching off wounds of powerful memories.

'We hadn't had any salt in so long that when we got some I just took a big bite out of it.'

—Korean War POW James Wells

"I got sick and nearly died," Wells said. "I had dysentery and pneumonia and couldn't eat. I didn't eat anything for 17 days. I lost down to 65 pounds. They took me to what was called the death house, where they left you to die. But I was determined not to die. Finally the glucose water the Chinese doctor gave me let me get a little better and I eventually recovered."

Merworth, now 65 and a retired bricklayer, said, "I was 19 or 20 then and that helped me survive. Lots of boys were thin, really in bad shape. They looked like skin wrapped around a skeleton. They didn't feed us nothing. A hunk of cabbage in a bowl of water and they called it soup, but we ate it."

Conditions were tough in the camp with the diet mainly millet, barley with boll weevils in it and no salt for over a year.

Wells said, "Your body needs salt, we hadn't any salt in so long that when we got some I just took a big bite out of it. And that was the nasty old sea salt, but it tasted good."

The cold treatment by their captors and the cold weather of Korea took a toll on Merworth. Temperatures fell to 40 and 50 below zero and the soldiers had only cotton padded clothing.

Merworth had to have several toes amputated because of frostbite.

Wells, who was wounded in both legs in combat and came into the camp injured, still maintains a sense of humor about it.

"I was beat one time for undermining communism," Wells said with a laugh. "That's why I was here - to fight against communism. I got bayoneted by them once after we'd watched one of those brain-washing films. I guess I wasn't moving along fast enough. The camp rioted and the Chinese gave me two apples to make up for it."

Wells recalled, "I remember the funny things like the Chinese officer counting light bulbs and saying we had too many and he was counting the reflection of one of the bulbs in a mirror."

Merworth said, "I remember watching the aerial dogfights over the camps between our boys in Air Force jets and the (Russian-built) MIGs. We were down between two hills and you could see them coming right down at you."

Merworth gave wells his dogtags in the POW camp to remember him by, but had forgotten where they went over the 42 years.

"I had the dogtags put up with my war memorabilia," Wells said. "You're going to have to tell me your service number to get the tags back."

Merworth said without blinking, "RA 18363664."

Wells handed the tags to the old soldier.

Merworth looked at tags and said, "We had to learn that number or pull guard duty. I thought I lost these tags or gave 'em to a girl. I didn't know what happened to them."

Wells said, "I had them all the time. Now you can have them."

Merworth grinned and said, "Maybe I'll give them to one of my kids."

Merworth slipped his well-worn dogtag chain over his head. He rubbed the tags through his shirt.

The tags finally were back where they belong.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Kato Kaelin, O.J. Simpson's often clueless houseguest, has been named the best subject for a newspaper columnist without a clue on what to write.

Kaelin was awarded the "Sitting Duck Award" by the National Society of Newspaper Columnists.

The award goes to "the target most useful to a columnist on a slow day."

Kaelin won "for being such a perfect example of fleeting celebrity," said Sheila Stroup of The New Orleans Times-Picayune. "Hair today, gone tomorrow."

NEW YORK (AP) - Clint Eastwood plays Meryl Streep's lover in the new movie "Bridges of Madison County," but he was almost mistaken for her father.

When the gravelly-voiced actor - who directed "Bridges" - called Streep's home to ask her to be in the movie, the baby sitter didn't believe him.

"Harry! I know who this is!" the baby sitter said, thinking Eastwood was Streep's dad.

"It's a wonder that I got the part," Streep says in the June 19 issue of Newsweek magazine.

Streep said she wasn't bowled over by Robert James Waller's book, but wept when she read Richard LaGravenese's screenplay.

Social Security

By JIM McDANIEL
Manager in Amarillo

Nearly 800 million claims for Medicare benefits were submitted to Medicare for payment in 1992. Some of the claims were fraudulent. As fraudulent claims were detected, some providers were warned, some were fined, some were thrown out of the Medicare program, and some were sent to prison. Despite the efforts, it is estimated that as much as $10 billion was stolen from Medicare that year.

Each time Medicare pays a claim it shouldn't, the government is being ripped-off, and as a taxpayer so are you. When someone knowingly or willingly lies in order to get paid this is fraud, a federal crime. Such a crime happens when a provider misrepresents on the claim form what was furnished to the consumer.

When you suspect that Medicare has improperly paid a claim, contact the insurance company that paid. The company will contact the provider to investigate. If you wish, your name will not be used. If you feel comfortable doing so, you may contact the provider that submitted the claim before calling Medicare and inform the provider that Medicare paid for the time or service. Also, explain why you believe Medicare should not have paid.

If the provider made an honest mistake, it can be corrected and Medicare will get a refund. If the provider told you before you received the service that Medicare is not likely to pay for the service, you may have to pay for the service.

In many cases, you will not suspect foul play until you review the Explanation of Your Part B Medicare Benefits (EOMB). These explanations include information on whether or not Medicare paid, how much, and the item/service for which Medicare paid. These statements are valuable in detecting Medicare fraud. Look for:

*Duplicate payment for the same service;

*Ambulance services you are not aware of;

*Payment for home medical equipment while you or a family member are in a Medicare-approved hospital or nursing home;

*Dates of service on the EOMB that differ from the dates you actually received the service;

*Outpatient services billed while the patient was in the hospital; and

*Items or services you do not recall getting. Remember, however, that there are some instances when you will receive bills from a provider you never saw. For example, you may have gotten services from radiologists or cardiologists who interpret test results for your personal physician. You may never meet these consultants, but they perform real, necessary services.

If you believe Medicare is being cheated, call or write the Medicare company that paid the claim. The name, address and telephone number are on the EOMB. If you plan to write rather than call, clearly state at the beginning of your letter that you are filing a fraud complaint. This will ensure that your complaint is processed through the mail room to the fraud unit. Address the envelope to the name and address on the explanation of Medicare benefits, attention: Medicare Fraud Unit.

Fresh summer produce will be lower in price

COLLEGE STATION -- Fresh produce in July will be a vegetarian's delight as supplies of fruits and vegetables increase and cost goes down.

As the summer produce season gets under way, lower prices are normal, said Dr. Richard Edwards, food marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Lettuce lovers will be relieved to see it back on sale at 59 cents a head for the first times in a number of weeks, he said.

Cauliflower will be marked down to 99 cents per head, and broccoli will be priced at 49 cents per pound.

However, specials on these items, which were most adversely affected by the flood, will probably be offered only once during the month. Sales will be spotty until production returns to normal levels.

Peaches will be one of the major advertised specials with prices dropping to about 69 cents per pound at the beginning of the month and 49 to 59 cents per pound later on.

Nectarines will be on sale for about 10 cents per pound more than peaches, Edward said. Apricots will come on the market at reduced prices of 69 to 79 cents per pound.

Strawberry prices will be quoted per pound rather than per pint at around $1.29. On sale, one-half pint of red raspberries will be about the same prices as a pound of strawberries. Blueberries will go for about $1.25 per pint on sale.

Other summertime favorites that will have lower prices include bell peppers for 59 to 69 cents per pound, zucchini squash for 39 cents per pound, yellow squash for 49 cents per pound, cucumbers for 25 cents each, green beans for 69 cents per pound, sweet corn at $2 per dozen ears, and tomatoes for 49 to 59 cents per pound.

Richards knows person to call for girls night out

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)--When the girls want to have fun, Ann Richards knows just the ticket.

The former Texas governor said she and a friend were recently looking for a third person to join them at a restaurant in Washington.

"I said, 'Well I know someone who needs fun and isn't having much it looks like to me and that's Hillary Clinton,'" Richards said. "So I called Hillary and said, 'Why don't we go over to Galileo's as kind of girls night out?' Anyway, we had like 15 courses. We were there all night."

Richards was a celebrity chef at a cooking class Wednesday to raise money to help at-risk youth stay in school.

She doesn't miss her old job one bit: "I am leading a sane and joyous and busy life."

Potatoes believed to contain several cancer fighting agents, antioxidants

COLLEGE STATION -- When it comes to disarming disease causing agents in the body, potatoes pack a punch more powerful than many other vegetables.

New research has found that while vegetables such as bell pepper, onions and carrots remain valuable dietary sources of disease-preventing antioxidants, potatoes rank near the top of that category.

"We were surprised to find that potatoes are second only to broccoli in terms of antioxidant activity," said Dr. Creighton Miller, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station potato breeder. He said people should not only put potatoes on every plate, but should eat them skins and all.

Discovery of the potato's high antioxidant activity is reported in the current issue of the Journal of Food Science.

Miller, Experiment Station food scientist Dr. Luke Howard, and graduate student Mohamed Al-Saikhan were screening potatoes, looking especially at the pigments in yellow flesh varieties, when the high antioxidant activity was observed. That led them to compare the potato to several well-known antioxidant-high vegetables.

"This is important because there are so many oxidative activities in the body that contribute to cancer and heart disease," Howard said.

The oxidative activity -- from naturally occurring metabolic process in the body and from exposure to pollution and smoking tobacco -- produces 'free radicals' which destroy DNA in the body, thus opening the door for the development of diseases, Howard explained. Antioxidants slam cell doors shut in the face of the harmful free radicals.

"This research shows that in addition to eating lots of broccoli, we should include potatoes in the diet as well," Miller noted.

Lab results indicated that on a scale of 100, broccoli had an antioxidant value of almost 96, potatoes had about 69, carrots had 32, onions had 25 and bell peppers had 15. The greatest concentration of antioxidants in the potato was in the skin, Howard noted.

Preliminary studies by Miller and Howard point to patatin, the major water-soluble protein in potatoes, as being the possible source of the antioxidant activity.

"This shows another health attribute for potatoes," Miller said. "People tend to think of potatoes only as high in starch and carbohydrates."

Indeed, many people don't realize that one potato also contains half of the daily recommended amount of vitamin C and 750 milligrams of potassium, an element linked to the possible prevention of such ailments as stroke, he said. Potatoes also are high in dietary fiber and iron.

Yet even though the excellent nutritional value of potatoes may not be common knowledge, the fleshy tuber already is the fourth most important food crop in the world, only slightly behind, rice, wheat and corn. Potatoes are a much-loved food in the United States where annual per capita consumption is 125 pounds.

That, plus its $2.5 billion value each year for U.S. potato farmers, underscores the importance of the antioxidant research finding.

The researchers plan to examine the effect of cooking on antioxidants as well as the influence of the environment on potato plants in the field, the variability of antioxidants among potato varieties, and genetic markers in potato varieties with the highest antioxidant activity. Miller said finding answers to these questions will help breeders develop an even more nutritious and health-promoting potato.

The fact will one day flower into a truth.

With 750 mg of potassium, each potato carries a jump start at helping the body prevent strokes.

Each potato's 3 grams of dietary fiber help keep the digestive track regular and possibly reduces serum cholesterol levels and the chance for developing colon cancer.

Vitamin C Vitality
One potato gives half a person's daily requirement of vitamin C, a nutrient which helps the body heal wounds.

Defrauded investors are widows according to the Gray Panthers

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- The number of securities fraud cases initiated by federal and state governments increased by more than 45 percent in just five years, according to a new study released today by the Gray Panthers.

"This study shows that at least 15 securities frauds are committed every business day," said Gray Panthers Executive Director Dixie Horning. "All too often, older Americans are the victims of swindlers and scam artists who will stop at nothing to line their pockets with someone's retirement savings. Congress should be considering more protection for seniors, not less." Horning warned that legislation pending in the Senate Banking Committee would limit the ability of senior citizens and other fraud victims to recover damages.

The study finds that enforcement actions by state and federal securities agencies against fraud jumped from 2,790 in 1988 to 4,032 in 1993, the year in which most recent data is available. The trend at the federal level is even more dramatic. From 1981 to 1993, the number of actions reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission more than doubled.

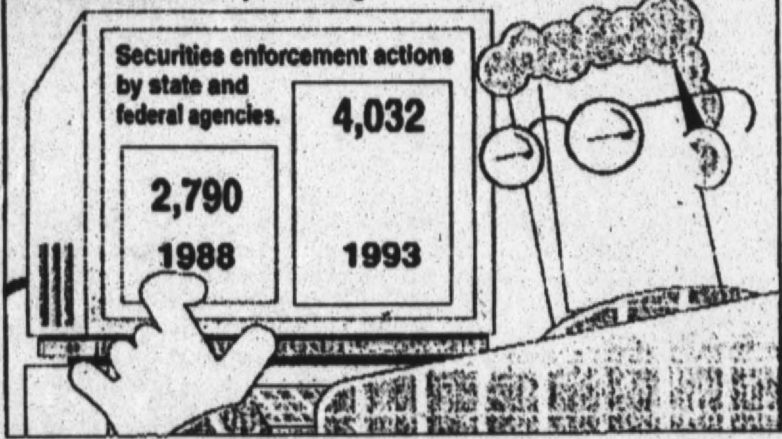

"Securities fraud is increasing at an alarming rate," the report states. "Many defrauded investors are widows relying on pension funds and other investments to supplement their monthly Social Security checks. All too many have seen a lifetime of savings disappear into a black hole." As the number of frauds increased, so did the number of people who committed them, the report finds. The number of individuals charged with federal securities fraud grew from 601 in 1988 to 887, an increase of over 47 percent.

"Today's securities frauds are often complex schemes involving multiple collaborators, companies, accountants, brokers and bankers who stand to gain millions at the expense of unsuspecting investors," the report said.

Securities Fraud Skyrocketing

There are at least 15 securities frauds committed every business day, and older Americans are the prime target.

Loneliness strikes one-third of Americans according to book

Loneliness is a state of dejection and grief caused by being alone. This feeling strikes more than one-third of all Americans at some time or another.

According to "The Second 50 Years" by Walter J.L. Cheney, William J. Diehm and Frank E. Seeley, 77 percent of all seniors living alone are women.

Widowhood is the most common reason for women to live alone, although it is not the only reason. Men who live alone, although it is not the only reason. Men who live alone are likely to be divorced or never married. The large discrepancy between the number of men and women who live alone occurs because women tend to marry older men and live longer than most men.

Loneliness comes to people who do not prepare for a good retirement, according to the authors. For those who choose to reside in a home after retirement, there are many well-run establishments to choose from. They are caring organizations that handle seniors effectively and understand that people need to be cared for.

Likewise, there are other facilities that do not function very well and don't provide all of these comforts. If a person finds a caring facility, chances are good that he or she will not need to worry about being lonely.

If you are lonely, here are some "sure-fire" ways to help ward off those lonely feelings.

*Keep busy -- Get involved in everything that grabs your attention, write letters, visit people, or take up a hobby. Every little - medium-size thing you do can grow into a significant project.

* Help others -- Look for others who are just as lonely as yourself. While helping them to feel less alone, you will be curing yourself of the same ailment.

* Involve yourself -- The burned-out condition that many retirees seem to feel leads to a mental attitude of loneliness. Instead of sitting in a chair all day and watching television, become involved in community affairs.

* Avoid escapes -- Avoid daydreaming, sleeping too much television. When you do dream, make sure it is of obtainable goals that you can achieve in the near future.

* Choose to be happy -- Ask yourself, "How does my unhappiness change the situation?" Most of the time, the answer will be "It doesn't, it just makes it worse." Fight depression by joining a self-help group or talking with friends, counselors and clergymen to help put yourself in a good frame of mind. Make life better by improving your attitude and being happy.

* Collect good thoughts -- Read and collect funny jokes, meaningful poems and great literary masterpieces. Memorize some of these inspirational passages and good thoughts, and share them with whomever you meet. In time, people will seek out your companionship and happy thoughts.

* Join a social group -- Visit and join the various social groups in your community to meet people and make new friends. Commit yourself to one or more groups that you find interesting.

* Go to church -- Most religious institutions care for people and treat all who attend like family. If you are friendly, chances are the institution will be friendly in return.

Loneliness generally occurs at specific times of the year, like birthdays, anniversaries and holidays. By becoming active and doing for others you can be a happy, contented person while those lonely feelings disappear.

Social Security is mailing PEBES to senior citizens

By mid-June, Social Security had mailed about 4 million Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statements (PEBES) to people age 60 and older who have earnings posted to their record and are not already receiving Social Security benefits. The statements are being mailed at a rate of about 900,000 per month according to Jim McDaniel, of the Amarillo Social Security office.

These SSA-initiated mailings -- required by law -- are intended to give workers an idea of what their Social Security benefits will be when they retire and to make sure their earnings are correctly reported. Reported earnings are used to calculate a person's future Social Security benefits.

"Remember, you don't have to do anything when you get the statement unless you find a mistake in your earnings listed or you want to file for benefits," McDaniel stated.

The mailings are scheduled according to the person's birth month, beginning with people born in October. For example, if you were born in September, your statement will be in the last group to be mailed.

If you're 60 or older, not receiving Social Security benefits, and don't receive a statement by September 30, call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 (anytime, including weekends and holidays) and ask for a Form SSA-7004 (Request for Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement). You should receive your statement in four to six weeks after completing the form. People under age 60 also may call the same number to request the form.

Beginning in October 1995, and each year thereafter, statements will be sent to people who reach age 60 during the year.

To Your Good Health

I've had high blood pressure for 10 years now, and even with my medicine, it stays as high as 160 over 95. I also have a variety of food allergies, including lactase deficiency. It so happened that in preparing for surgery recently, I went on a 36-hour limited diet (solid and liquid). Right before the surgery, my blood pressure was down to 110 over 74. I wonder if food allergies were raising my blood pressure. — Mrs. R.F.

ANSWER: I am not aware of food allergies being implicated in chronically high blood pressure. But your diet might well have helped lower yours.

Various foods, I'm sure you know, are implicated — non-allergically to be sure — in high blood pressure. Many dietary factors can play a role.

Salt is a common factor in fluid retention and blood pressure rise. Alcohol is another, as is obesity itself.

On the other hand, some say that calcium and potassium can directly lower blood pressure.

My guess is that your pressure dropped during your 36-hour fast period because of the caloric and fluid limitation.

Viewers may experience deja vu with new fall lineup

Andrew Clay (who has dropped the "Dice" from his name) and Cathy Moriarty (Raging Bull) star as a married couple who are exceptional at fighting and even better at making up in Bless This House. The new series is scheduled to air Wednesdays this fall on CBS.

BY AMY HIBBERT

Warning: The networks' new fall lineups may produce a sense of deja vu.

Don't be fooled: All of the following shows are new, even if the ideas are reminiscent of shows gone by.

One of the sitcoms ABC brings to the fall roster is The Drew Carey Show. The series, scheduled to air Wednesdays, stars Carey as a twenty-something who hangs out with close friends after work. In other words, Cheers meets Friends.

Two prime-time soap opera alumni are joining forces for yet another saga about a wealthy and powerful family. The Monroes, ABC's new Thursday drama, stars William Devane (Knots Landing) and Susan Sullivan (Falcon Crest) as John and Kathryn Monroe, the heads of the clan.

Jeff Foxworthy makes it onto the growing list of comics getting their own series. He will star in Somewhere in America, Saturdays on ABC, playing a family man with his own perspective on life, not unlike Tim Allen in ABC's Home Improvement. Like Ellen DeGeneres and Roseanne, Foxworthy gets to use his own first name.

NBC expands on the orphan-children-managing-on-their-own theme that started with ABC's On Our Own and Fox's Party of Five. Joey Lawrence stars in Brotherly Love, scheduled to air Sundays, as an older sibling taking care of his brothers (played by his real-life brothers Matthew and Andy) after their father dies.

Thursdays on NBC, Lea Thompson will star in Caroline in the City as a cartoonist whose experiences creep into her work. Who could miss the similarities with Barry and his column on CBS' Dave's World?

CBS introduces Bless This House on Wednesdays. Cathy Moriarty and Andrew Clay star as a married couple, with the requisite two children, who have a knack for fighting. This family seems reminiscent of the Bundys in Fox's Married... With Children.

Central Park West, slated for CBS' Wednesday lineup and featuring Mariel Hemingway, looks at a group of young New Yorkers making a living. The ZIP code is different, but the tax brackets are similar to those of Fox's Beverly Hills, 90210.

Fox joins the borrowing frenzy with Sunday's Too Something. The series stars Eric Schaeffer and Donal Lardner Ward as longtime friends working together while pursuing their dreams. ABC's Bosom Buddies, with Peter Scolaro and Tom Hanks, quickly comes to mind.

Love and the law remain popular themes in the new fall schedules.

ABC looks at the legal system in Murder One, a Steven Bochco creation to air on Thursdays. All rise for Pamela Reed as a judge in NBC's The Home Court on Saturdays.

CBS will introduce Patricia Wettig as a judge in Courthouse on Wednesdays, followed by John Grisham's The Client on Thursdays. JoBeth Williams takes over the lawyer role Susan Sarandon created for the film.

As for Cupid, Nancy Travis and Kevin Kilner are set to play romantic interests in CBS' Almost Perfect on Sundays, coupled with Elizabeth McGovern and Hank Azaria as lovers in If Not for You Mondays. Also Sundays, Fox will focus on the male perspective of love and marriage with Misery Loves Company.

The themes may be familiar, but the networks are banking on fresh faces to make their new lineups successful. Only the viewers and time will tell.

HIGHLIGHTS

Mummies, papyrus and pyramids are the stuff of "Egypt: Quest for Immortality," the first of 10 episodes in Lost Civilizations. The series debuts Sunday on NBC. Sam Waterston is narrator and host.

Connecticut Yankee guides viewers to Lost Civilizations

BY SUZANNE GILL

Sam Waterston has watched all 10 installments of NBC's Lost Civilizations, a series making its debut Sunday, June 25, with "Egypt: Quest for Immortality."

Waterston, who narrates the series, is among the last to work on it before completion, like a slave putting the final stone into a pyramid.

Three years in the making, Lost Civilizations combines location footage, computer enhancement, re-enactments and interviews to tell the stories of 10 cultures now lost or disappearing. The series travels from the Holy Land to China, from Tibet to sub-Saharan Africa. Waterston's Yankee tenor pulls it all together.

"I hope you like this voice, because you're going to get a lot of it," he kids.

"But there's also a lot of other stuff, too. There's a fantastic amount of reconstructed history, a technique that is only very recently available to documentary filmmakers."

"There is realistic-looking scaffolding, for instance, that was made out of lollipop sticks and juxtaposed against a real building, and you can't tell which is what, and what's real and what's not. And when Inca emperors and Chinese kings are walking around, you suspect that this can't be documentary footage, but it looks very real."

The 10 episodes of Lost Civilizations will air throughout the summer. An agreement with Time Life, whose books inspired the series, will make the episodes available on home video about a month after they air on NBC.

Much of the material was new to Waterston, an avid student of history.

"I didn't know anything about sub-Saharan African ancient civilizations. The historical evidence that there is has been very largely kept from view. And while I knew something going in about the lost civilization of the Aegean, I had never seen it all brought together in that way. And in biblical archaeology, which one might expect to be most familiar, I found things I didn't know anything about at all."

"But the big thing is just bringing together in one place material that has been scattered around and presenting it in a way that's responsible to the facts and is also very entertaining."

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Why is Chris Noth leaving Law & Order? Tell me anything you can about his background. -Elizabeth Corley, Ormond Beach, Fla.

A: Noth, technically speaking, was not fired: His contract wasn't renewed. According to an in-depth, dish-the-dirt article in the April 14 issue of Entertainment Weekly, L&O executive producer Dick Wolf didn't think there was enough conflict between Detective Mike Logan (Noth) and Detective Lennie Briscoe (Jerry Orbach). Wolf chose instead to hire 30-year-old Benjamin Bratt (Texas) to interject a Generation X flavor.

Chris Noth

The departure of Noth, 38, means there is no one left from the original cast (Steven Hill, who portrays District Attorney Adam Schiff, wasn't in the pilot).

Here's the brutal history: George Dzundza, who played Detective Sgt. Max Greevey, bailed after the first season. His replacement, Paul Sorvino as Detective Phil Cerreta, left soon thereafter to pursue an opera career.

The excellent Richard Brooks (Assistant District Attorney Paul Robinette) and Dann Florek (Capt. John Cragen) were canned to make room for the first female characters, played by the equally capable Jill Hennessy and S. Epatha Merkerson. Michael Moriarty (Assistant District Attorney Ben Stone) clashed with Wolf and left the show. At last report, he was leaving the country, claiming he had been blacklisted.

Noth (rhymes with "both," not "cloth") is the son of former CBS news reporter Jeanne Parr. He was born in Madison, Wis., and grew up in Connecticut, England, Yugoslavia and Spain. A classically trained stage actor from the Yale School of Drama, Noth also has extensive theater credits.

His feature films include Off Beat,

Smithereens, Baby Boom and Naked in New York. On TV, he has appeared in Hill Street Blues, I'll Take Manhattan, Killer in the Mirror and several other TV movies.

Q: What happened to Me and the Boys? It was one of our favorite programs. -Jan Lebert and Andy Ewing, Davison, Mich.

A: A spokeswoman at ABC says the show did OK in the ratings, but executives thought it was too "kid-driven." ABC must target a more adult audience next season, when it will face a strong challenge from NBC for first place in the Nielsen race. Meanwhile, the network is said to be very bullish on Me star Steve Harvey and is looking at possible new projects for him.

Q: Can you tell me how to reach the Statler Bros.? -Billie F., Pismo Beach, Calif.

A: You can write to them c/o The Nashville Network, 2806 Opryland Drive, Nashville, Tenn. 37214.

BY CANDACE HAVENS

A longtime favorite is leaving All My Children. Richard Shoberg, who has played Tom for 18 years, is leaving due to inactivity.

Since the departure of Tonya Pinkins, who played Tom's wife, Livia, Shoberg's character has not had a story line.

Shoberg is not the only one who will be looking for a new job. Christine Tucci, who has played the role of Amanda on Another World since July 1993, will leave the series in early July. The decision was dictated by story considerations.

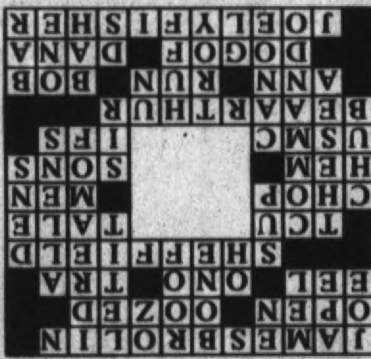

Another Procter & Gamble casualty is Margaret Reed, who plays Shannon on As the World Turns. Reed's departure also is prompted by plot factors. Reed is pregnant and will postpone her job hunt.

SOAP TALK

Favorite daytime actors leaving regard to Jerry Douglas, who plays John Abbott on The Young and the Restless. He is doing an excellent job playing a recovering stroke victim. My heart fell as he cried while trying to tell Jack (Peter Bergman) he wanted to go home from the hospital. Thumbs up to Jerry Douglas! -Kelly, San Angelo, Texas.

Dear Reader: Douglas is doing a terrific job. Some of us feared when John went into a coma he would be unconscious for a long time. But Y&R surprised viewers by bringing in a very meaningful story line of John's recovery.

Dear Candace: I would like to know if Ned (Wallace Kurth) and Lois (Rene Sofer) on General Hospital are married in real life? They make such a good combination. -Kristen Spurdute, Ellwood City, Pa.

The Hollywood truism "You're only as good as your last picture" is attributed to Oscar-winning actress Marie Dressler (1869-1934).

Dear Reader: Kurth and Sofer are a couple offscreen, but they are not married.

Sofer won in the supporting actress category at the Daytime Emmy Awards this year. During her acceptance speech she commented on their relationship and how very much in love she was with Kurth. Marriage could be in the future.

Send your comments to Candace Havens, Soap World, Features Dept., TV Data, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12804. Because of the volume of mail received, personal replies cannot be sent.

Two editions of Nick News, "A Conversation With Magic" and "Stranger Danger," are available as free rentals at Blockbuster Video.

A recent Court TV survey said live courtroom trials are less exploitative than news, tabloid or talk shows, or even prime-time dramas.

HIGHLIGHTS

July Highlights on The Family Channel

The Family Channel offers original programs as well as feature films to chase away those "Summer-time Blues!" Including a 4th of July Special, "Star Spangled Branson" featuring the nation's top talent in Branson, Mo., America's music entertainment mecca, airing July 2, at 7:30 p.m. and Independence Day, July 4, at 7 p.m.

Packed with country and popular music and capricious comedy, this patriotic celebration will feature a mixture of top entertainment names including Barbara Mandrell, Yakov Smirnoff and Neal McCoy, as well as Johnny Cash, country artist Michelle Wright, the Oak Ridge Boys, Marie Osmond, Mel Tillis, Jim Stafford, and Tony Orlando.

Life is the price and the reward of freedom during two original Family Channel movies in July. "Tad" tells the story of our nation's sixteenth president as seen through the eyes of his youngest son, in the context of the bloodiest war ever fought in America. "Tad" airs July 2 at 3 p.m. and again on July 9 at 1 p.m. "Race to Freedom: The Underground Railroad" chronicles the myopic account of fugitive slaves en route to Canada via the legendary "underground railroad." Airing on July 1 at 7 p.m. with an encore presentation on July 2 at 1 p.m.

The miniseries, "Centennial," James Michener's encyclopedic saga, continues to heat up on FAM in July. The 26-hour series, set in Centennial, CO, will air Saturdays throughout the month at 11 a.m. and 9 p.m. for two hours.

Two new-to-FAM movies get the month in full swing this summer. "Karate Kid III" continues the story of the "Karate Kid," Daniel LaRusso (Ralph Macchio) returns from Okinawa to work with his mentor, Mr. Miyagi (Noriyuki "Pat" Morita), in their bonsai shop. Daniel is blackmailed into competing against the notorious and vicious Mike Barnes (Sean Kanan). "Karate Kid III" airs Sunday, July 23 at 6 p.m.

Unforgiving terrain and the blending of two cultures sets the backdrop of "Follow The River." Mary Ingles (Sheryl Lee) is with child when she and her two sons are captured by the Shawnee Indians in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains. Her husband, Will Ingles (Tim Guinee), barely escapes death during the attack. "Follow The River" also stars Ellen Burstyn and Eric Schweig it airs on Sunday, July 9, at 6 p.m.

Other movies coming in July include "Bend of the River," starring James Stewart and Julie Adams, airing on Saturday, July 8 at 7 p.m. "Art Of Love," starring James Garner and Elke Summer, showing Sunday, July 30 at 6 p.m. "Cockeyed Cowboys of Calico County," starring Dan Blocker

WHAT CAN I DO WITH MY HOME'S OLD, FADED EXTERIOR TO MAKE IT LOOK BETTER?

No matter what type of exterior your home has, aluminum, vinyl, wood, brick or stucco, it's okay to paint over the surface.

The most important step is to clean and prime the surface before you paint.

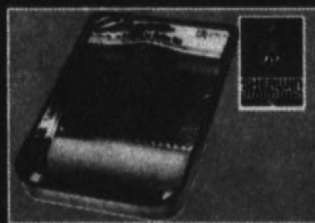

Then apply one or two coats of A-100® from Sherwin-Williams for excellent adhesion and durability.

You can easily achieve a dramatic look by ordinary places. It's easy to wake up a place along moldings and chair rails of both papered or papered walls. Use borders to create stunning attractions in otherwise forgotten spaces.

Go bold by using a larger border on your soffits, and a small border above the backsplash.

Use wallpaper borders as a window frame, chair rail, baseboard or crown molding to add a traditional decorative touch to any room.
