Action threatens disaster relief aid

Clinton poised to veto spending package

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Making good on his threats, President Clinton scheduled a Rose Garden ceremony today to veto his first bill - a $16.4 billion package of spending cuts from this year's budget.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole immediately accused the president of shirking his responsibility to trim the federal budget. Signing the bill "would send a strong message that you are serious about cutting federal spending," they said in a joint statement.

Congress officially delivered the measure to Clinton on Tuesday night, knowing the president objected to cuts in education, job training and the environment. A veto would jeopardize disaster relief aid going to Oklahoma City and earthquake and flood victims.

"We're glad it's finally here so we have the opportunity to make some suggestions on how it can be improved," presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said.

"I think it's sad to see the president vetoing aid to California, vetoing aid to Oklahoma City. ..." Gingrich said.

Clinton planned to reiterate his arguments against the measure in a ceremony celebrating the Drug Free Schools program. The bill would cut the program roughly in half for 1995, by $236 million, the White House said.

The veto could set the stage for negotiations between the White House and GOP lawmakers over what programs to sacrifice toward a shared goal of $16 billion in savings.

Clinton's objections are over a relatively narrow $1.4 billion segment of the cuts. Republicans said Clinton offered to split the difference last month with Gingrich, R-Ga., restoring $700 million in programs favored by the president.

McCurry said he was optimistic a compromise bill could be forged "for significant deficit-reduction." Republicans said they have already met several Clinton demands and added: "It is wrong to play politics with such important legislation."

Some White House aides had recommended that Clinton veto the measure quietly, without public remarks, to assuage Republicans. He also has vowed to veto GOP welfare, foreign aid and crime prevention programs.

Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Republicans are willing to restore some cuts in Clinton-backed social programs if other reductions can be found to offset the costs.

"There has to be a little give and take or we won't get a second" spending cut bill, Lott said.

The measure contains major cuts in housing, airport improvement, job training, education and environmental programs that were included in previously approved federal budgets.

The cuts are partly offset by new spending of $6.7 billion for disaster relief for California and other states, $250 million for anti-terrorism efforts in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing and $275 million in debt relief for Jordan, all expenditures that Clinton favors.

The White House says immediate emergency needs will be met, even with the veto.

Clinton argues that the GOP bill cuts too many social programs. He wants to save the initiatives by reducing "pork," such as money for courthouses and roads.

Republicans note that the president approved the projects he now calls pork.

Trying to head off the bill's passage, Clinton proposed last month that Congress restore $1.4 billion in proposed cuts in education, crime prevention, environment, housing and job training programs. He wanted Congress to trim construction projects and governmental travel and overhead by $1.5 billion.

"It's very important for him to get this one under his belt," said Thomas Mann, director of governmental affairs at the Brookings Institution, a Washington think tank.

Just a year ago, Clinton said vetoes are important, "but what the country really needs is action." In April, he said he wasn't looking for "a pile of vetoes."

Judge says Nichols denied bail on 'weight of evidence'

By PAUL QUEARY
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - A federal judge says he denied bail to bombing suspect Terry Nichols after finding "the weight of the evidence that he committed that offense is great."

Chief U.S. District Judge David Russell released his strongly worded written order Tuesday. He had verbally denied Nichols' release at a hearing Friday.

"There is not only probable cause to believe that defendant committed or aided and abetted the commission of the most devastating bombing - in terms of loss of lives - in the peacetime history of this country, but the weight of the evidence that he committed that offense is great," Russell wrote.

Nichols was charged after a search of his Herrington, Kan., house turned up ammonium nitrate fertilizer, fuel oil and detonator cord - ingredients like those used to build the bomb that ripped the face off the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

Russell said Nichols would be a flight risk and a danger to the community if released.

Michael Tigar, Nichols' attorney, did not return phone calls seeking comment.

Nichols and Timothy McVeigh are the only people charged in the April 19 bombing, which killed 168 people and injured more than 500. Both men are being held without bail and could face the death penalty if convicted.

Prosecutors have asked for more time to indict Nichols, who was arrested May 10. They contend that 19 days since then should be excluded from the 30-day deadline to indict after an arrest. The clock does not run during court appearances or while defense motions are pending.

The deadline would be moved to June 26 if U.S. Magistrate Ronald Howland grants the request, said John Russell, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington.

McVeigh's indictment is expected before a Monday deadline.

As of Tuesday, the Midwest Wrecking Co. had hauled away about 4,500 tons of rubble from the bombing site and had at least 10 days of work left, company president Ben Kates said. The site eventually will be a memorial to the victims.

A landfill operator has set aside a separate spot for the rubble of the federal building.

"That way we'll be able to say where it is and where it's been disposed of and properly buried and so forth," said Roger Miner of BFI Waste Systems, which owns the landfill.

Other developments:

-Russell ordered the government to submit sealed records of visits Nichols received from prison psychologists. Nichols' attorney has objected to the visits, which prosecutors say were to calm Nichols after a visit with his wife and child. Russell earlier ordered a stop to the psychologists' visits.

-Gov. Frank Keating announced plans for a July 4th salute to all Americans for their help after the bombing. Events will include a flag-raising ceremony at the state Capitol, a parade in honor of rescue units, and a "Thank You from the Heartland" ceremony.

Charges answered in session of district court

Probated prison sentences were imposed on defendants who answered charges against them in 222nd District Court Tuesday. Judge David Wesley Guiley presided.

On a plea of nolo contendere (no contest) to a charge of possession of controlled substance, methamphetamine, Cynthia Marie Hernandez, 40, was sentenced to seven years' probation and fined $1,500.

Rogelio Guevara, 26, was granted deferred adjudication probation of 10 years on his plea of guilty to aggravated assault.

On a plea of guilty to delivery of cocaine, less than one gram, a state jail felony offense, Matthew Tijerina, 17, was given a two-year state jail sentence, probated five years. He also was fined $500.

A six-year deferred adjudication probated term was assessed Elia

Santos, 26, who entered a plea of guilty to theft over $750 but under $20,000.

An agreed order modifying probation of Brenda Taylor Meiwes was entered. Convicted earlier of forgery by making, she was ordered to enter the Taylor County Restitution Center and was placed on intensive supervision.

In a court session Monday, a 10-year probated sentence was given Andy Scott, 43, on his plea of guilty to theft over $20,000 and under $100,000. He also must make restitution of $19,080.

Also on Monday, Rosa Garcia, 40, entered a guilty plea to delivery of a controlled substance, cocaine, a state jail felony. She was given a two-year state jail term, probated for a mandatory five years. She also was fined $1,500.

Tax cut specifics will not be decided until autumn

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - House and Senate Republicans are slowing their timetable for deciding on vast tax cuts and spending reductions, all but ensuring that this year's budget-balancing battle will stretch well into autumn.

GOP leaders from the two chambers said Tuesday that they probably would not require congressional committees to approve specific tax and spending cuts until September, two months later than originally planned.

The decision reflects the political delicacy of extracting savings from Medicare, agriculture, student loans and other broadly popular programs that Republicans will need in their drive to eliminate the deficit by 2002. Congress' summer is pockmarked with recesses, which would hinder quick agreement on cuts likely to total the mammoth sum of about $1 trillion between now and 2002.

It could also affect President Clinton, who has said he will offer his own vision for balancing the budget but has not said when. Clinton has said he will try to strike a deal with the GOP.

Congress' top Republicans discussed the delay at a closed-door meeting on a day when some also predicted that the House and Senate would compromise on tax cuts of about $250 billion over seven years.

"It certainly is a good number," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., told reporters of the $250 billion figure.

Questions over the size, composition and timing of tax cuts are the biggest ones separating the two chambers' budget-balancing plans, though there is no doubt that they will include some version of lowered taxes in their final product.

House-Senate bargainers plan to meet Thursday to begin crafting a compromise budget package.

The more conservative House, where tax cuts were the heart of the GOP's "Contract With America" campaign promise, included $350 billion worth of lowered levies over seven years for families, businesses and investors. The cuts would take effect next year.

The Senate, where moderates prefer more emphasis on deficit reduction, would allow $170 billion of unspecified tax reductions, but only if the economy spurts and produces savings of that amount for the government. In addition, the Senate would not lower taxes until those savings occur - mostly at the end of the decade.

Feelings in both bodies are strong. Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., circulated a letter among GOP senators Tuesday urging Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., to stick by the Senate-approved plan to provide tax cuts only if the budget is on its way to being balanced.

In the House, about 80 Republicans, mainly freshman and newer members, have written Gingrich demanding that the House not relent and accept a smaller tax package.

Nonetheless, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who is running for president, has pledged that the Senate will approve tax cuts this year. And while House and Senate leaders may have to labor to line up rank-and-file GOP support, there is little question they will produce something that will be approved over near-solid opposition by outnumbered Democrats.

Republicans would like Congress to approve a compromise fiscal blueprint before July 4.

Study shows test could catch cervical cancer

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The majority of women whose cervical cancer isn't diagnosed until it becomes advanced simply don't get an easy test that could catch the disease early enough to cure or even prevent it, a new study says.

Older women especially were at risk because they shunned Pap smears, the gold standard in fighting cervical cancer, researchers reported Tuesday in the American Journal of Public Health.

In the study of 481 advanced cancer patients, almost 29 percent - with an average age of 64 - had never had a Pap smear. Of those who had been tested, 32.8 percent had skipped the checkup for at least five years before their diagnosis, reported Dr. Dwight Janerich of the University of Utah.

"This study shows we could be doing much better," said Dr. S.B. Gusberg, past president of the American Cancer Society. "Many doctors, especially family practitioners, don't suggest this screening for patients as often as they should ... and women themselves are failing."

The Pap smear is a simple test in which doctors scrape off cervical cells to check for cancer and for precancerous changes in cells that, if removed, can prevent cervical cancer. It is recommended annually once women reach age 18 or become sexually active. After three consecutive normal tests, doctors may allow low-risk women to have the test as infrequently as every three years.

Risks for cervical cancer include infection with a sexually transmitted virus called the human papillomavirus. In another study, published today in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, researchers said they have proved a cancer link with the virus - by uncovering it in 93 percent of some 1,000 cervical cancer specimens from 22 countries.

That proof means scientists should search for a papillomavirus vaccine to fight cervical cancer, which hits 500,000 women worldwide annually, said Dr. M. Michele Manos of Johns Hopkins University.

Meanwhile, the Pap smear is credited with causing decades of steady decline in invasive cervical cancer rates here, but those declines suddenly leveled off in the 1980s. To discover why, Janerich and colleagues at Yale University studied 481 Connecticut women diagnosed between 1985 and 1990.

Older women who had never been tested were most at risk, followed by women who had skipped Pap tests for at least five years.

But another 15 percent of women didn't return for proper follow-up care after an abnormal or inconclusive Pap test.

And laboratory workers missed some evidence of cancer or precancerous abnormalities in at least 6.9 percent of the cases, Janerich said.

Janerich reached that figure by retrieving the actual cervical samples that doctors had kept for 137 of the patients and having them reanalyzed by two independent pathologists who were unaware of the original diagnoses. Because those samples weren't available for all the patients, the number misdiagnosed could be higher, he said.

Misdiagnosed Pap results have gained wide attention lately as patients or their relatives have sued laboratories. The government has begun requiring that laboratories be certified, to ensure lab workers are properly trained and are given enough time to adequately study each sample for cancer signs, Gusberg said.

Also, 118 women in Janerich's study were diagnosed within three years of their last screening, but he was unable to prove why. In addition to lab errors, doctors must take a proper cell sample to detect cancer, something his study couldn't measure. And some cancer simply grows so fast that it can appear in as little as three years, which is why some doctors insist on annual tests.

About 15,800 Americans will get invasive cervical cancer this year, and 65,000 will be diagnosed with precancerous lesions, according to the American Cancer Society.

Administration issues tax warning

'Grand experiment' could disrupt nation's economy

By DAVE SKIDMORE
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration urged Republicans today not to forget fairness in considering a radical reform of the nation's tax system and warned that, if enacted, the GOP's "grand experiment" could disrupt the economy.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Leslie B. Samuels, delivering the administration's response to various proposals to replace the 82-year-old income tax, acknowledged "many defects" in the current system but raised numerous objections to each of the overhaul plans getting increasing attention in Congress this year.

House Majority Leader Dick Arney, R-Texas, is pushing for a flat-rate income tax that would dramatically lower the top tax rate, eliminate deductions and credits, including the mortgage interest deduction and earned income tax credit and, for individuals, exempt unearned income such as interest and capital gains from taxation.

Meanwhile, House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, wants to "pull the current income tax code out by its roots" and replace it with a broad-based tax on individual and business consumption spending.

Both proposals are aimed at stimulating economic growth by encouraging savings and investment and replacing burdensome complexity with simplicity.

But, in testimony prepared for Archer's panel, Samuels said, "The amount of any (savings and investment) increase is highly uncertain and could be small." Moreover, the risks are great, he said.

"Replacing the entire income tax with a consumption tax," as some members of Congress propose, "would be a grand experiment ... that no country in the world has chosen to undertake," he said.

Conducting such an experiment on "the world's largest and most complex economy" could have far-reaching and unintended consequences, he warned, including a disruption in wage and price levels and housing markets.

While many congressional Democrats are echoing the administration's cautions, others are developing their own alternatives. Rep. Sam Gibbons of Florida, the senior Democrat on Ways and Means, is proposing a value-added tax, a form of national sales tax imposed at all levels of production, not just on retail sales.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., meanwhile, is working on plan with some resemblance to Arney's. It would eliminate deductions and reduce rates. But unlike Arney, Gephardt would tax individuals' capital gains, dividends and interest, and he would impose a higher rate on upper-income people.

As part of Samuels' testimony, the Treasury Department issued a study, disputed by Republicans, showing that a broad-based consumption tax that did not increase or reduce federal revenues would benefit the wealthiest 20 percent of the country at the expense of everyone else.

The top one-fifth of taxpayers, by income, would see their taxes drop by 18.6 percent while the top 1 percent would get a 54.6 percent cut.

Meanwhile, the poorest fifth would see a 134.1 percent increase and the second-poorest fifth, a 70.5 percent rise, Treasury said. It said taxes on the middle quintile would jump 27.9 percent and the next-to-the-highest quintile, 15.5 percent.

Treasury had previously released an analysis of Arney's plan showing a less dramatic redistribution of the tax burden, with the poorest fifth seeing a 12.2 percent increase, the middle three-fifths a rise of between 8.3 percent and 8.9 percent and the richest quintile a cut of 5.6 percent.

Archer is proposing to address some of the Democrats' fairness concerns by exempting medical spending and some housing spending from his consumption tax, but Samuels said such exemptions benefit rich and poor alike and add complexity and compliance costs back into the system.

Samuels also warned that any transition designed to ease the shock of moving to a new tax system "could take many years to complete and could be very costly and complex."

City of Dallas violated laws on meetings

DALLAS (AP) - The city of Dallas violated the Texas Open Meetings Law by negotiating in private with the Dallas Mavericks and Dallas Stars over building a new sports arena, a judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Joe Kendall issued an order Tuesday saying it was improper for five City Council members to meet with officials of the professional basketball and hockey teams out of the public eye.

Taking part in the negotiations were council members Chris Luna, Barbara Mallory, Don Hicks, Robert Stinson and Glenn Box. Box did not seek re-election in May.

The federal judge found the council members committed Class C misdemeanors under the open meetings law, which ensures public access to governmental deliberations. The meetings of the Downtown Sports Development Committee also violated the city's charter, the judge ruled.

The ruling was a victory for Dallas residents Don Venable and Rick Finlan, who filed a lawsuit alleging that the city was illegally negotiating to build a $141 million sports complex.

"If we had not intervened, this deal would have been struck some time ago," Venable said.

Luna, now the deputy mayor pro tem, has downplayed the lawsuit, saying that as new Dallas Mayor Ron Kirk and a new City Council took office, the negotiating committee likely would have been "knocked out" by the new leadership.

Luna also pointed out that the Legislature recently killed a measure regarding public financing for major sports arenas.

Dallas City Attorney Sam Lindsay denied that the city was trying to cut a secret deal involving millions of dollars in taxpayers' money, as the judge alleged.

"I respectfully disagree. ... The full council is going to make any decision on the matter. The decision was not going to be made behind closed doors," he said.

HHS receives grant of $1,500 from SPS

Hereford High School is among 47 Central and West Texas high schools to receive $1,500 grants from Southwestern Bell Telephone and its local customers.

The Hereford grant was announced Tuesday by Gary Stevens, area manager-external affairs for Southwestern Bell.

The gifts are the maximum possible under an innovative education support program in which SWB donated $2 to the school every time a customer ordered certain telephone features between Sept. 1, 1994, and April 28, 1995.

Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt said HHS Principal Terry Russell will have the ultimate decision on how the money is used, although Greenawalt said Russell likely will get input from the Campus Improvement Team on its use.

The telephone company has asked that the funds be used for educational programs, equipment or capital purchases.

"It came through loud and clear during the program that Texans are big supporters of education," Stevens said. "Likewise, Southwestern Bell Telephone is well-known for its commitment to high-quality education. The program presented a

Trial jurors show signs of stress at display of autopsy pictures

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
 Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - After showing so little emotion for so long, through tearful testimony, the racially charged appearance of a detective and damaging descriptions of DNA evidence, some of the O.J. Simpson jurors could hold back no more.

Several of the 12 jurors and two alternates appeared shaken when confronted Tuesday with autopsy photographs of Nicole Brown Simpson taken 1-1/2 days after she was nearly decapitated.

One picture on the large display board was said to have shown Ms. Simpson, eyes open, head back, with a dark knife slash across her throat - the fatal wound, so deep her spine was visible.

In the front row of the jury box, a 60-year-old woman, who just a few hours earlier had been giggling after stumbling while walking into the courtroom, looked down and took deep breaths. Her chest heaved as she tried to gain control.

To her left, a muscular 32-year-old Pepsi truck driver tried to avert his eyes, but there was nowhere to look because the board was right in front of him. So he stared at the floor. His eyes were red. He appeared near tears.

Near the end of the box, a 43-year-old marketing representative appeared grim and sad. He, too, looked at the floor and occasionally took notes.

Behind him, a 24-year-old fire station receptionist - an alternate known for her towering blond hairdo - appeared disturbed but also very aware the audience was watching her.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last December, my sister's 60-pound dog ran into my knee and caused considerable damage. I had to have arthroscopic surgery, which resulted in the loss of half the cartilage in my knee. I went through a great deal of pain, to say nothing of the inconvenience of being laid up for several days.

After learning that my sister had an insurance policy that covered personal injury I decided to file a suit against her.

My sister is furious. She insists that I have disgraced the family because "relatives do not sue relatives." Now, I am considered both the villain and the victim, and my sister is no longer speaking to me.

I feel I had just cause to file that claim. My sister, however, doesn't believe that her dog did "all that much damage." Meanwhile, the dog is still permitted to run free around her home.

Was I wrong to sue her? Both my sister and I are quite bitter about this. I hope, however, that we can resolve the problem after reading your response in the paper. -- On the Mend in Cleveland

DEAR CLEVELAND: Several things got off track from the very beginning. First, when your sister's dog injured you, she should have told you that she had personal injury insurance and notified the insurance carrier. Second, you should have informed your sister that you felt entitled to compensation instead of surprising her with a lawsuit.

As I see it, there is plenty of blame to go around. Since you both are at fault, I suggest that you meet each other halfway and put this thing behind you -- and the sooner the better. The longer the rift continues, the harder it will be to mend.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I feel compelled to respond to the letter from "Confused in New Jersey," the woman who was shocked when she saw her boyfriend sitting on a bar stool dressed as a woman.

I am a marriage, family and child counselor with broad experience in the field of gender confusion. So little is known about this complex disorder that I would like to help clarify some of the more prevalent concerns. It is imperative that "Confused" has a clear understanding of her boyfriend's cross-dressing behavior. Yes, the majority of cross-dressers are male and heterosexual, but this is a far cry from a "hobby," as you suggested, Ann. Although it may be enjoyable for the cross-dresser, it still poses a dilemma because of society's prejudice. As of this date, there is no way to turn this proclivity around or get rid of it.

It is very important for the public to know that cross-dressing is not a hobby, nor is it a matter of choice. It is a condition that usually begins in early childhood and endures throughout the life span. Great understanding is required by the spouse.

I have worked with many cross-dressers over the years, and I remain hopeful that acceptance will continue to grow as awareness increases. -- Fresno, Calif.

DEAR FRESNO: Thanks for your comment that cross-dressing is "not a choice but a condition." Your letter will surely help make life easier for many cross-dressers who are struggling for understanding and acceptance.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You often suggest a witty rejoinder to defuse an awkward moment, so perhaps you can help me.

I am a 40-year-old professional woman. I met the man I dearly love at church. When I introduce him to my friends and acquaintances, they invariably ask him, "What do you do?" When he replies, "I'm an auto mechanic," they usually respond by saying, "Oh," and then there is an embarrassing silence. I sense a tinge of disappointment.

I'm sure these people don't think less of him because of his job but are simply caught off guard. Is there anything I can say when I introduce him that might help them get through this part of the conversation more smoothly? Thanks, Ann. -- Feeling Awkward in Seattle

DEAR SEATTLE: I sense you are the one who is feeling uncomfortable about your sweetheart's job. You need to come to terms with it.

A good auto mechanic is worth his weight in gold. When a car breaks down, a Wall Street investment banker or a federal judge is useless. An auto mechanic can be the hero of the day. Be proud of him, and others will be, too.

FREE "LIVING TRUST" SEMINAR

"What You Ought to Know About Living Trusts"

(What you don't know could cost your family thousands of dollars!)

If you own a home...or you have assets worth at least $100,000...you owe it to yourself—and your family—to get the facts on living trusts. If you think you're protected with a simple Will...think again... A Will guarantees that your estate will go through probate, which means that your family may not be able to take possession of your estate for many months, or even years!

Plus, if your estate is over $600,000, your family may owe estate taxes which could amount to 37-55% of the value of your estate. This means that your family may have to sell some assets just to pay the estate taxes!

A living trust avoids all this by avoiding probate and minimizing estate taxes. Plus, a living trust will protect your estate if you become incapacitated during your lifetime by avoiding a guardianship. This means your estate will be managed as you see fit, not as a court-appointed guardian sees fit.

To find out more about the benefits of living trusts, attend one of these free seminars...

Bruguera goes on to French semis

By NESHA STARCEVIC

PARIS (AP) - Sergi Bruguera, winner of the last two French Opens, and 1989 champion Michael Chang moved to a semifinal showdown with straight-sets victories today.

Bruguera, seeded seventh despite his two successive titles, advanced with a 6-2, 7-5, 6-2 victory over Renzo Furlan of Italy, who was battling leg and back injuries. Chang, seeded sixth, breezed past qualifier Adrian Panatta of Romania 7-5, 6-0, 6-1 in another one-sided match.

They speculated that the hepatitis resulted from blood transfusions Mantle received during past athletic-related surgeries. "We've done a thorough examination, and there's no indication the cancer has spread."

Mantle has liver cancer

DALLAS (AP) - Former New York Yankee great Mickey Mantle has liver cancer and is on a list to receive a transplant "within three to four weeks," his doctors said today.

"But his condition could change at any time," said Dr. Kent Hamilton, the 63-year-old Hall-of-Famer's attending physician. "It's day to day. I can tell you he will not get out of the hospital without getting a transplant."

Three-point shooting could decide NBA Championship

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer
ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - Double-team the low-post threat and the Houston Rockets and Orlando Magic will make you pay.

The matchup between Hakeem Olajuwon and Shaquille O'Neal will be the focal point of the NBA Finals. However, 3-point shooters such as the Rockets' Robert Horry and Kenny Smith or the Magic's Dennis Scott and Nick Anderson could be the difference in the best-of-7 series.

Houston and Orlando have been launching - and making - shots from beyond the arc in record-setting numbers during the playoffs. Between them, the teams have attempted 723 treys and made 289.

The Rockets have four players with 20 or more 3s and Orlando has three who have made at least 29 in support of the strong inside games of Olajuwon (33 points per game) and O'Neal (25.1).

"The similarities between these teams are really quite amazing," Magic coach Brian Hill said Tuesday. "Both teams revolve around the ball going into the dominant player in the post and then back out again."

With Olajuwon and O'Neal certain to attract crowds near the basket, the Finals could turn into a 3-point shootout.

"We know there are going to be an enormous amount of double-teams, so that means there are going to be a lot of open looks," said Scott, who set playoff record for treys attempted in a game (15) and attempted (65) and made (28) in a seven-game series during the Eastern Conference finals.

we feel that we are just as good of a shooting team as they are," said Houston's Mario Elie. "There are a lot of guys that are ready to take the big shots. If it comes down to a close game I feel that we have the upper hand since we have had all of these tough games in the playoffs."

Orlando made 77 of 170 3s - both playoff records for a seven-game series - in the East finals against Indiana, and Houston established new highs for a six-game series by going 44-for-127 in the Western Conference finals against San Antonio.

The Rockets also set playoff marks this year for 3-point attempts (32) and 3-pointers made (19) in a game as well as in a five-game series (47-for-99). Scott, who made more 3-pointers (150) during the regular-season than 2-point baskets (133), took a six-game record 43 treys against Chicago in Orlando's second-round series.

Although the trey is an important part of Orlando's offense, the Magic is not what Hill would call a 3-point shooting team. "We don't just chuck and duck like a lot of people think we might do," he said.

"Our 3-point shots are very calculated out of our offense. Anybody who watches our team very closely realizes we don't shoot 3-point shots off the dribble or on the run. We shoot stationary shots and we get those because of the double-team situations, or we get them because a guy has penetrated and drawn another defender and then kicked the ball out to an open shooter."

Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said watching film of the Magic on offense reminds him a lot of his own team.

"It's really a mirror image," he said.

Brewers pick themselves up against Twins

By The Associated Press
When the Milwaukee Brewers need a lift, there's always the Minnesota Twins.
A little over a week ago, the Brewers were riding an eight-game home losing streak when Minnesota came along. Bingo - a two-game win streak.
Tuesday night, the weak-hitting Brewers slammed three homers to snap a three-game losing string 13-5. Again, it was the Twins providing the opposition, such as it was.
"I can understand the troubles they're having," said Brewers manager Phil Garner. "We've had our problems, too. Our lack of being able to put runs on the board in key situations. I've seen hard times."
Not as hard as the Twins, who sustained their sixth straight home defeat.
With an 11-27 record, Minnesota is the worst team in the AL. The Twins have been reached for 68 home runs through 38 games, a pace that would have Minnesota surrendering 258 homers in the shortened 144-game season, shattering the 162-game record of 226 set by Baltimore in 1987.

"There's not much we can do," said Kirby Puckett, who hit a three-run homer for the Twins. "The pitchers are trying, man."
The Brewers also have nine homers in four games against Minnesota, compared to 12 in 31 games against the rest of the league.
"We're not known for very many home runs," said Garner, whose team went into Tuesday's game tied with the Yankees for the second-fewest runs scored in the AL.
"I don't like playing clubs that have lost five or six in a row, because they're bound to come out of it," Garner said. "Sure, you catch a club when they're flat sometimes and beat them, but I'm not sure we've shown a pattern of being able to take advantage of those things."
John Jaha and Joe Oliver each hit three-run homers and Darryl Hamilton hit a two-run shot, his first homer since June 6, 1994, to power Milwaukee.

Bob Scanlan (3-3) gave up five hits in 6 1-3 innings as the Brewers handed the Twins their ninth loss in 11 games. Only the NL's Florida Marlins have a worse record than Minnesota.
Brad Radke (2-5), who lost his fourth straight decision, struck out a career-high six and retired 12 of 14 from the second through the fifth.
White Sox 6, Blue Jays 4
Robin Ventura extended his hitting streak to 11 games with a pair of hits and had three RBIs to pace Chicago over visiting Toronto.
Robin Ventura had three RBIs while extending his hitting streak to 11 games and Ron Karkovice laid down a suicide squeeze bunt.
Jason Bere (2-4) went five innings for the victory, while Roberto Hernandez got the final out for his 10th save. Pat Hentgen (4-3) took the loss.
Rangers 2, Royals 1
Kenny Rogers matched the longest winning streak of his career with his seventh consecutive victory and Mike Pagliarulo snapped a 1-1 tie with a sixth-inning single as Texas defeated visiting Kansas City.

Rogers (7-2) shut down the Royals on seven hits, one walk and seven strikeouts. His second complete game of the year tied him with Kansas City's Kevin Appier and Montreal's Jeff Fassero for the major league lead in victories.
Texas took a 2-1 lead against Mark Gubicza (3-5) in the sixth when Mickey Tettleton singled with one out and scored from first on Pagliarulo's two-out single that got past center fielder Les Norman.
The Royals' lone run came when Vince Coleman led off the sixth with his second homer of the season.
Orioles 12, Mariners 6
Home runs by Rafael Palmeiro and Manny Alexander powered host Baltimore's seven-run fifth inning. Brady Anderson and Jeffrey Hammonds also homered for the Orioles, who had 15 hits and at least one RBI from every starter except Chris Hoiles.
Jamie Moyer (1-1) allowed four runs and five hits in seven innings for Baltimore, which moved into second place in the AL East.

Marc Newfield homered for the Mariners, who have lost four of five. Seattle starter Dave Fleming (1-4) gave up 11 hits and eight runs in 4 2-3 innings.
Indians 4, Tigers 3
At Jacobs Field, Wayne Kirby's bases-loaded grounder in the eighth inning snapped a tie and gave Cleveland its ninth victory in its last 10 games.
Eddie Murray singled off Joe Boeyer (3-3). One out later, Manny Ramirez walked and Paul Sorrento then singled off reliever Buddy Groom to load the bases.
Brian Moxcy relieved Groom and got pinch-hitter Kirby to ground to second, but pinch-runner Alvaro Espinoza scored from third on the play with the winning run.
Julian Tavarez (4-0) pitched two scoreless innings to get the win. Jose Mesa got the final three outs for his 12th save in 12 opportunities.
Juan Samuel homered for Detroit.

Angels 12, Red Sox 3
At Fenway Field, Tony Phillips, cleared by the AL of bat-tampering allegations, homered twice and had two other hits to lead California over Boston.
Rex Hudler had three hits, including a homer, and scored three runs, and Carlos Martinez also homered for California.
Mark Langston (4-1), who lasted just one-third of an inning on Sunday, scattered seven hits, including Mike Greenwell's homer, striking out three and walking one.
Athletics 8, Yankees 6
At Yankee Stadium, Geronimo Berroa hit a grand slam and Ruben Sierra added a two-run homer to lead Oakland to its third straight victory. The Yankees have now lost seven of their last eight and 12 of 14.
Todd Stottlemyre (4-1) got the victory despite allowing RBI doubles to Bernie Williams and Luis Polonia in the Yankees' second. Dennis Eckersley, the fourth Oakland pitcher, got the final four outs for his eighth save.

Valenzuela pitches Padres past Phils; Perez finally falls

By The Associated Press
Fernando Valenzuela, a rookie sensation 14 years ago, picked up his first victory as a starter this season. Carlos Perez, this year's rookie sensation, picked up his first loss.
Valenzuela, who won Rookie of the Year and Cy Young awards while pitching the Los Angeles Dodgers into the 1981 World Series, pitched six shutout innings and drove in the only run as San Diego edged Philadelphia 1-0 Tuesday night, the Phillies' fifth straight loss.
Valenzuela "doesn't have the stuff he used to have, but he still knows how to pitch," said teammate Tony Gwynn, who had three hits for the Padres. "Sitting on the bench, I got the impression he could go more. You just don't get the impression of a guy who people have categorized as being on his last leg or his stop, his last hurrah."
Up the California coast, the Dodgers defeated Montreal 5-1, handing the flamboyant Perez his first loss in six decisions.
Valenzuela (2-2), whose other victory came in relief against Pittsburgh on May 20, allowed only three hits in six innings, his longest stint in five starts this season.
"I threw a lot of pitches and went to full counts on many hitters, but I think it was one of my best games," Valenzuela said.
Because he's the fifth man in the starting rotation, Valenzuela was making only his third start since May 10. He's also made three relief appearances.
"I know it's been tough," Padres manager Bruce Bochy said. "I've been trying to get him out of the pen a couple times to throw to some seasoned hitters. The guy's a proven winner. He pitched so well, without being in the rotation all the time. It's a credit to him."

Bryce Florie, Brian Williams and Trevor Hoffman completed the six-hitter for the Padres, with Hoffman pitching the ninth for his sixth save. Philadelphia had runners on first and third with no outs, but Hoffman got a strikeout, a popup and a flyout to get out of the jam.
Valenzuela's groundout to first base with one out in the second inning knocked in the game's only run. Brad Ausmus was hit by a pitch by Mike Williams (0-1), stole second and took third on Andujar Cedeno's infield single.
Dodgers 5, Expos 1
Ismael Valdes, (2-2), making only his seventh career start, went the distance for the second time for Los Angeles, allowing seven hits and two walks while striking out a career-high 10 batters.
Perez (5-1) yielded eight hits and two runs in six innings in his sixth career start.
Eric Karros drove in two runs with a single and a double for the Dodgers, and Mike Piazza had an RBI double, his only hit in two games since returning from the disabled list.
Rockies 5, Cardinals 4
Colorado, after trailing 4-1, rallied for its 11th come-from-behind win when Walt Weiss drew a bases-loaded walk in the eighth inning to break a tie.
St. Louis reliever Jeff Parrett (2-2) walked Vinny Castilla to open the eighth, and then gave up a single to Andres Galarraga. Rene Arocha came on, but misplayed a sacrifice bunt by Joe Girardi before walking Weiss.
Curtis Leskanic (2-1) pitched 1 2-3 innings for the victory at Coors Field.
The Cardinals scored their runs on Brian Jordan's two-run single and Bernard Gilkey's two-run homer. Castilla homered for the Rockies.
Reds 2, Pirates 1
Eric Owens, just called up from the minors and making his first official major league at-bat, singled home the winning run in the bottom of the 10th. Thomas Howard opened the 10th with a fly to center that dropped in front of late-breaking Al Martin for a double. Owens dribbled a single to right off Dan Miceli (0-2), giving the Reds their 13th victory in 15 games.

Chuck McElroy (1-1) pitched one perfect inning to help the Reds improve to 6-1 in extra innings this season.
The Pirates lost their fifth straight, wasting a sensational performance by starter Esteban Loaiza, who allowed just one hit in seven innings.
Braves 17, Cubs 3
Ryan Klesko's grand slam and two-run homer accounted for two of Atlanta's five homers, and he had four of the Braves' 20 hits in a rout of visiting Chicago.
Chipper Jones also had four hits and Jones, Jeff Blauser and Javier Lopez also homered for the Braves.
Kent Mercker (3-2) went six innings for the victory.
Marlins 7, Astros 6
Charles Johnson's 11th-inning double, his third of the game, scored Greg Colbrunn from second base and gave Florida the victory at Houston.
Colbrunn led off the 11th with a single off John Hudek (2-1), who took a 0.68 earned run average into the game. Colbrunn was sacrificed to second and scored when Johnson doubled to the center-field fence.
Mark Gardner (1-4) pitched 1 1-3 innings, striking out two, for the victory.
Giants 2, Mets 1
Pinch-hitter Rickert Fancyste singled over the head of center fielder Brett Butler with one out in the ninth inning, climaxing San Francisco's comeback against visiting New York.
Royce Clayton led off with a double off reliever John Franco (2-1) and was sacrificed to third by Steve Scarosne. After an intentional walk to Kirt Manwaring, Fancyste lined the winning hit over the drawn-in outfield.
Barry Bonds' RBI double with two outs in the eighth tied the game 1-1. Bonds' hit off Franco prevented Mets starter Mike Birkbeck from getting his first win since 1988.
Jeff Kent accounted for the Mets' only run in the fifth with his sixth homer.

USC knocks out FSU; Vols oust Stanford

By TOM VINT
AP Sports Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - A record home run barrage and hometown pitching couldn't keep Florida State and Stanford from elimination at the College World Series.
No. 6 seed Southern Cal batted through the order twice in a 17-hit attack that sent No. 2 Florida State home Tuesday in a 16-11 slugfest. Then Florida State transfer Scott Schroeffel and Todd Helton homered to give No. 5 Tennessee a 6-2 victory over Stanford and its Nebraska-bred starting pitcher Todd Bartels.
Southern Cal (47-20) advanced to meet Bracket One unbeaten and third-seeded Miami (48-15) tonight. Tennessee (54-15) takes on top seed and Bracket Two unbeaten Cal State Fullerton (55-9) Thursday afternoon. Wins by Miami and Fullerton advance them to Saturday's championship game. Southern Cal and Tennessee have to beat their bracket leaders twice to get to the final.
Florida State didn't go down without a fight despite falling behind the 11-time champion Trojans 14-2 after four innings. Greg Walbridge drove in two runs with a double in a six-run first. All-American Geoff Jenkins hit his 21st homer in the second, pinch-hitter Brian Ponchak had a two-RBI double in the third and Wes Rachels singled in two runs in a five-run fourth for USC.
J.D. Drew brought the Seminoles back, however, with a record-setting three homers in his final three at bats. Teammate Doug Mientkiewicz added two homers to become the 10th player in CWS history to have two in a game.

Satellite dish puts massive ear to the heavens

EDITOR'S NOTE - Imagine a satellite dish as big as two football fields. That's about the size of a contraption being put together in a remote corner of West Virginia to eavesdrop on the universe, places like the Milky Way. Call it Big Ears.

By CASEY COMBS
Associated Press Writer
GREEN BANK, W. Va. (AP) - As the world's most sensitive electronic eardrum, the Green Bank Telescope is expected to pick up signals from outer space that none other has ever heard.

The radio telescope, under construction at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory, will help map the universe by receiving radio waves more clearly than any other instrument on Earth, says site director Jay Lockman.

It will be the largest fully steerable radio telescope when finished in December 1996. Its collecting bowl, resembling a satellite dish, will be 330 feet in diameter, as big as two football fields.

Radio telescopes collect signals that help fill in gaps left by optical instruments. They read radio waves emitted by most gases and objects in space, including those that may not radiate or reflect visible light.

"One without another doesn't give you the whole picture," says Martha Haynes, a Cornell University astronomer who draws pictures of galaxies by studying clouds of gas between them.

"If you tune your FM car radio in between stations, you'll hear a hiss," Lockman says. "Some of that radio signal is coming from noise in your receiver, but other parts are coming from high up in the atmosphere, the ionosphere or even out in the Milky Way."

To read those signals now, a radio telescope with a 140-foot diameter dish and four smaller radio telescopes tower above the clumps of trees around the observatory. All five are aging, built between 1958 - when the observatory opened - and 1965. A 300-foot diameter radio telescope also was used for decades until it collapsed suddenly in 1988. An investigation found that several supporting pieces in the 26-year-old structure had simply worn out. Nobody was hurt.

Haynes and a graduate student were on a waiting list to use that radio telescope at the time. They've had to delay their research since then because none other would suffice.

"I've had to become an optical astronomer in order to do interesting stuff," she says.

The collapse was a surprise, Lockman says, but it gave astronomers an opportunity to push for a new radio telescope that would incorporate updated technology.

The $75 million replacement won't be much larger, but it's designed to be at least twice as sensitive, work more than 30 times faster and pick up much higher frequencies, Lockman says.

Another radio telescope in Puerto Rico is evidence that bigger isn't always necessarily better. That dish is 1,000 feet in diameter, the biggest in the world, so it can pick up very distant signals.

But it is too big to be steered much, so it can only read signals from limited parts of the universe, Lockman says.

The fully steerable Green Bank radio telescope will cover 85 percent of the sky.

It will also be innovative because it will be shaped like an oyster shell.

Other radio telescope dishes have a familiar circular, satellite-dish shape. They bounce signals into a focusing eye centered above by tepee-like support legs. But the legs often block the incoming signals, Lockman says.

The new shape means the focusing eye can be held by one leg off to the side, where the joint of an oyster shell would be, leaving the collection dish clear, Lockman says.

"The accuracy of other telescopes is limited by the scattered radiation of the feed legs. This will be a revolution, I think," says Carl Heiles, an astronomer at the University of California, Berkeley, who studies interstellar gas.

Also, the radio telescope will use lasers to keep the 2,204 collection panels on the dish aligned with each other to at least a tenth, possibly a hundredth, of a millimeter, Lockman says. That will allow signals to be collected evenly so that the radio telescope can read even very narrow frequencies.

"It's like building a battleship with the precision of a watch," Lockman says.

But none of these features would matter much if the radio telescope were not being built in the Deer Creek Valley, the center of the world's only "radio quiet zone."

Within the zone, which covers roughly a 100-mile radius into much of eastern West Virginia and western Virginia, radio, television and cellular-telephone transmitters are required to point away from the valley to avoid causing interference. The observatory is about 220 miles west of Washington, D.C.

The radio telescopes are also protected from interference by the surrounding mountains of the Monongahela National Forest.

Because of the zone, Green Bank is the only radio telescope location that is almost free of interference from earthly sources. Besides Puerto Rico, radio telescopes in the United States are also set up in Arizona and New Mexico.

The more than 800,000 kinds of insects make up the largest group of animals.

"If I'm trying to pick up a signal in a really distant galaxy, and there's somebody driving around with a cellular telephone right next to me, that cellular telephone signal is a lot stronger than the signal I'm trying to pick up," Haynes says.

So the location, along with the innovative dish design and laser technology, will make the new radio telescope "the only game in town" for radio astronomers, Haynes says.

It should be able to detect, for instance, molecules of water halfway across the known universe, Lockman says.

And because it will listen with such detail, it should be able to show clearly how other galaxies are forming, Haynes says. That could provide clues to the origin of our own galaxy, the Milky Way, she says.

The observatory gets requests for about twice as much time as it can grant even for the existing radio telescopes, Lockman says. Researchers from all over the world must draw up detailed proposals to compete for the 140-foot instrument, the main research radio telescope at Green Bank now.

If a request is accepted, the National Science Foundation, a federal agency, pays the researcher's expenses.

Besides the astronomers, about 20,000 visitors tour the observatory at Green Bank every year, even though the nearest cities are several hours away.

"We don't really advertise and you know it's not so easy to get here," Lockman says. "But there are people who come here from all over the country because they're just interested in what's 'out there.'"

Area colleges announce honor students, grads

TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY
Students from Hereford who graduated from Texas Tech University during spring commencement exercises were Britni Sue Block, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Block, with a bachelor of science degree in horticulture; Donna Nicole Grotegut, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Josef C. Grotegut, cum laude with a bachelor of science degree in agricultural economics; and Tate Edward Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Monty Smith, with a bachelor of science degree in exercise and sports sciences.

Several Hereford students qualified for the academic honors lists at the end of the 1995 spring semester. Students on the President's List earned a perfect 4.0 (A) grade point average while enrolled in 12 or more credit hours of classwork. Students finishing 12 or more hours with a grade point average of 3.5 to 3.9 qualified for the Dean's List.

On the President's List were J.J. Bookout, Jr., education major; Constantine George Malouf, pre-medicine; and Aaron Patrick Stevens, general business.

Qualifying for the Dean's List were Temple Houston Abney III, agricultural economics; Jim Bret Campbell, agricultural communications; Michael Roy Carlson, agricultural economics; Kathleen Hamilton Cooper, mass communications; Tracie Christine Gilbert, accounting; Donna Nicole Grotegut, agricultural economics; Heather Ramona Kleuskens, design communication; Hayley Diane Lockmiller, nursing; Derek Vincent Mason, management info systems; Matthew Alois Reiter, accounting; Robin Kristopher Simons, accounting; Rebecca Frances Solomon, multi-disciplinary studies; and Christopher Roger Williams, management info systems.

TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY
Diplomas were awarded to three Hereford students during May commencement ceremonies at Texas A&M University.

They included Gina Leann Alley, who graduated summa cum laude (grade point ratio of 3.90 or above) with a bachelor of business administration degree in finance; Susan Lee Emmons, who graduated magna cum laude (3.70-3.899 GPR) with a bachelor of science degree in political science; and Trisha Ann Teel, who graduated cum laude (3.5-3.699 GPR) with a bachelor of science degree in animal science.

Texas A&M University has named its honor students for the 1995 spring semester. The Dean's Honor Roll recognizes students who have maintained at least a 3.75 GPR out of a possible 4.0 during the most recent grading period.

A second designation, "Distinguished Student," recognizes students who earned a 3.25 to 3.74 GPR.

Among those recognized on the Dean's Honor Roll were Gina Leann Alley, finance major; Teresa Ellen Baker, biomedical science; Tyler James Head, agricultural economics; and Christopher Lynn Lyles, computer engineering.

Named as Distinguished Students were Blake Morris Buckley, computer engineering; Clifford Alcic Skiles III, biomedical science; Trisha Ann Teel, animal science; and Brady Lance Wilson, animal science.

MCMURRY UNIVERSITY
Among 205 seniors who received diplomas at McMurry University Commencement recently was Angela Florence Brumley of Hereford. Miss Brumley graduated cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree in communication.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS
Bobby Perales, a sophomore at the University of Texas at Austin, has qualified for the Dean's List for the Fall 1994 and Spring 1995 semesters.

He is a pre-med and government major.

Perales is currently vice president of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity. He is the recipient of the Beta Theta Pi "Best New Member Award" for 1994.

Perales is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Jesse Perales.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH TEXAS
Lori Michelle Sanders has been placed on the Dean's List Honor Roll at the University of North Texas, College of Business Administration. She achieved a perfect grade point average for the 1995 spring semester.

It is as absurd to pretend that one cannot love the same woman always, as to pretend that a good artist needs several violins to execute a piece of music.

Resident's granddaughter graduates in California

Glen and Helen Nelson of Hereford attended the high school graduation of their granddaughter, Melissa Ann Nelson, from Brentwood School in California on Saturday.

Commencement address was delivered by Billy Crystal whose daughter, Lindsay Ann, was among the graduating seniors.

The Nelsons were accompanied by their son, Bill Nelson, of O'Donnell.

Miss Nelson is the daughter of Olen and Connie Nelson of Pacific Palisades, Calif.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I was recently diagnosed with "lobular carcinoma in situ" The doctor who did the breast surgery didn't use the word "cancer." But the doctor who found the lump did, and said the surgery saved my life. I have never seen this subject in your column. I'm pretty scared. Could you please tell me what you can? — G.V.S.

ANSWER: Lobular carcinoma in situ of the breast consists of a small collection of abnormal cells bearing the hallmarks of cancer. Whether you should use the word "cancer" to describe the condition is arguable.

The important words for you are "in situ," for they mean the cells remained confined and did not spread.

Cancerous or not, such growth must be removed, for there is a great likelihood of eventual growth and spread. Lobular carcinoma in situ is a further warning that another patch might develop in either breast.

I want to be helpful without alarming you. Careful observation is in order, but only in the sense that it would be for many other women, such as those whose mothers had breast cancer.

Substitute the word "forewarned" for "scared" in your lexicon and you will be emphasizing the positive. Consider that now you will get increased surveillance and special attention.

Just follow your doctor's advice as to periodic examinations, and you'll be fine.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have an anal fissure with scar tissue. I always thought I had hemorrhoids. How does one get anal fissures? Do they turn into cancer? — V.K.J.

ANSWER: Anal fissures are painful, common and often frightening, a miserable combination of characteristics, we can all agree.

The fissure represents a split in the delicate anal lining, often the result of constipation and straining. Scar tissue often forms along fissures, just as it might on skin anywhere.

Many times, frightening traces of blood appear, opening up scary scenarios, allayed only by closer examination.

You want to keep the stool soft. One way is to add fiber to your diet.

Your doctor might suggest a stool softener for a while. Fissures do not turn to cancer.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Several years ago, a young woman wrote to you about her problem of blushing, which she experienced even in casual social interactions. You advised her to ask her physician about prescribing a certain medication for this embarrassing condition. I cannot remember it, but it began with an "N." I suffer from this psychologically crippling symptom of shyness. I'm hoping you can pass along the full name of the drug. I am growing desperate. — T.Y.

ANSWER: You have a good memory. The drug I mentioned in connection with excessive blushing was Nadolol, a beta blocker. I still cannot claim that it will work every time for everyone, but it is worth a try.

Blushing happens when vessels close to the skin surface suddenly dilate. Drugs such as Nadolol can help control that phenomenon.

I cannot leave the subject there. You should look beyond the blush for some food cause, such as tomatoes, spinach, some cheeses, red wine and beefsteak. Go easy on them.

'Summer-ize' pets to help keep them healthy through hot months ahead

By JIM HINEY

Bryan-College Station Eagle
BRYAN, Texas — You prepare your cars and homes for the blistering Texas weather to come, but do you "summer-ize" your pets?

"If you don't prepare for the summer, both you and your animal will be miserable," said Mary Haislet, humane educator at the Brazos Animal Shelter.

Heat, and the resulting heat stroke, is probably an animal's greatest enemy, Haislet said.

Too often people leave their pets in their cars, she said. Even with the windows cracked or partially rolled down the temperature inside a car can quickly rise to more than 100 degrees, she said.

At home, pets who stay outdoors need a shady area to escape the sun and they need plenty of cool, fresh water, Haislet said.

Pet owners also need to make sure their animals don't overheat themselves through too much exercise, said Dr. Henry Prenal, a Bryan veterinarian.

The sun doesn't have to be out for overheating to be a problem, Prenal said. An active animal can get too hot while on an evening romp, he said.

Incessant panting by an animal is probably the most visible symptom of overheating, Prenal said. The best treatment is to get the animal into cool water and monitor its temperature.

Because of their coats, long-haired dogs are especially susceptible to the heat, Haislet said. Those animals should be washed often or shaved, she said.

Disease is a year-round concern, but it seems to be a bigger problem in the spring and summer. Haislet and Prenal stressed the importance of properly vaccinating animals.

"Even if you have a street-smart cat it can get out and bring diseases home to you," she said.

Spring and summer also brings an increase in the birth of puppies and kittens, which means an increase in the number of people who get new pets, Haislet said.

Haislet said she urges new pet owners to take their animals to a veterinarian as soon as possible and start the treatment of shots. She also suggests keeping the animals, especially puppies, at home until the animals get all of their shots.

"People get new puppies and the first thing they want to do is take them to the park," she said. "Most of the area parks are contaminated with parvo."

Parvo is the plague of puppies. It is a virus that attacks the intestinal tract and causes bloody diarrhea, Prenal said. The only option veterinarians have is to treat the symptoms, he said.

The death rate for parvo is high whether it's treated or not, Prenal said. Treatment is expensive and can range from $300 to $600, he said.

Heartworms are another problem, though they are not confined just to summer. The disease is spread from dog to dog by mosquitoes and is the biggest threat during the seasons when mosquitoes are the most active, Prenal said.

Preventative heartworm medicine is available and should be given to dogs year-round, he said.

Vacations and July 4th are also tough on animals, Haislet said. July 5 is typically a busy day for animal shelter workers because they must deal with a large number of animals who run from home or family outings because of the loud noises and bright lights of the fireworks.

Many animals jump fences and dogs break chains to get away from fireworks, Haislet said.

Animals allowed to roam free often become targets of pranksters or they may stray into traffic, she said.

"Should your pet get lost on July 4, search your neighborhood and then check the ... animal shelter," she said.

Pet owners need to make think of their pets while making vacation plans.

Weather plagues livestock industry

One or other -- drought, rain -- causing many problems

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Although the drought situation in South Texas is showing signs of improvement, it has compounded problems for beef cattle producers in an already-weakened market, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Jose Pena, Extension economist in Uvalde, said some producers in that area are blaming the drought for problems with the industry. Pena said although the drought has negatively affected production in South Texas, it is just part of the big picture.

"The weakened state of the market," he said, "is causing ranchers to reconsider some of their marketing practices and now some are having to reduce their herds."

Cattle producers in the southeast part of the state are also experiencing problems on the flip side of the coin. Dale Fritz, Extension district director, of Bryan, said surplus soil moisture has caused some producers in that area to move cattle out of pastures.

"The pastures are saturated," he said, "many are flooded. This doesn't help the cattle market, which is already depressed."

Recent problems in Texas with too much or too little rain in the pastures does not make it easy for beef cattle producers to manage their herds. This adds to overall market trouble with an influx of feeder cattle into the United States, causing lower prices.

Dr. Larry Boleman, Extension beef cattle specialist at Texas A&M University, said presentations are being prepared for the Texas A&M Beef Cattle Short Course in August to help producers adjust to the changes in the market.

"We expect to come up with some answers for pasturing cattle, feeding cattle, management of cattle, health programs and keeping our reproduction and weaning weights at the high level that we've had them," he said.

With the profit margin so narrow in the beef cattle market, it is important for producers to follow some suggested management practices very closely, said Joe Roach, Franklin County Extension agent.

"There is not a lot of profit in the beef industry," he said, "and what needs to be realized is that some Texas cattle producers do not do all the correct procedures."

Roach said producers like Ranch-to-Rail and TEX-VAC, the Texas Value Added Calf program, would be successful if producers would use them, but few will follow the guidelines.

"The Ranch-to-Rail program focuses producers on quality, profitability, and opportunity," he said, "and the TEX-VAC program focuses primarily on raising immune levels for cattle going into feedlots."

"They're both great programs that will cut costs for producers, if they'll use them."

Dr. Randall Grooms, Extension livestock specialist in Overton, said TEX-VAC is a program that producers follow to enhance calf quality.

"The objective of any cow-calf producer," he said, "should be to produce and manage calves in a manner that will strengthen the beef industry while increasing profitability."

Strength and profit are just what Texas beef cattle producers need. Roach said producers that implement some sort of management program, and do it right, may be the only ones that will survive.

Struggling with the beef producers are agribusinesses, including feed stores. Economical management practices and reduced herds could cause a decrease in feed sales.

Roach said jokingly that feed stores in Franklin County are considering giving away free chicks and beef calves to enhance feed sales.

"That was intended as a joke," he said, "but it's not so funny anymore."

To add to cattle producers problems in Texas, there is still little to no rain in the forecast for the Trans-Pecos and Edwards Plateau area. Ranchers have already begun reducing cattle herds because of the drought situation.

John Zeitler, meteorologist at the National Weather Service Agricultural Service Center in College Station, said a cold front will push into the western part of the state bringing much cooler temperatures to replace the hot and humid conditions this week.

Next week, Zeitler said the outlook indicates above-normal temperatures statewide, and above-normal rainfall will continue for the High Plains and Low Rolling Plains.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture adequate. Hail erosion of cropland, wet soil affecting seedling cotton plants. Pastures improving with rain. Replanting of crops, sorghum delayed by rain. Cattle in good condition.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture very short. Pastures, ranges in fair condition. Cotton damaged by severe weathers is being replanted. Potatoes, onions, progressing well. Limited grazing area for livestock; supplemental feeding still required.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture adequate to surplus. Rainfall improved pastures, ranges. Wheat harvesting and cotton planting slowed by rainfall. Some cotton being replanted because of seedling disease and weather. Early peaches harvested.

NORTH TEXAS: Soil moisture short to surplus. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Harvesting wheat, soybeans. Flooding affected some crops, hay harvest. Harvesting early peaches. Gardens in good condition, seeing some insects and disease.

EAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate to surplus. Pastures in good condition; high hay yields. Corn progressing well. Harvesting peaches. Pecans in fair to good condition; spraying for pests continues. Livestock in good condition.

FAR WEST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to surplus. Pastures, ranges in good to poor condition. Cotton, sorghum planting almost complete. Livestock in fair condition; supplemental feeding continues. Harvesting onions, cabbage. Cutting, baling alfalfa.

WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Severe weather causing reduced yields of wheat, peanuts; cotton needs replanting. Fruit progressing. Pecans in excellent condition. Livestock in good condition.

CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Livestock in good condition. Harvesting wheat; cutting and baling hay. Watermelon, cantaloupe planting continues. Spraying for casebearers and scab. Winter grasses seeding out and maturing.

SOUTHEAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate to surplus. Field activities delayed by rain. Pastures are saturated. Cattle market poor. Harvesting peaches; pecans in good condition. Vegetables affected by abundance of insects, disease.

SOUTHWEST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Rainfall relieved crops from drought. Strong winds damaged crops. Pastures, ranges good. Livestock in excellent condition; market weak. Soybeans in good condition; setting beans. Home gardens doing well.

SOUTH TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges improving due to rainfall.

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams & Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — The days following adjournment of the Legislature belong to the governor, who signs bills alone in the spotlight because weary lawmakers have gone home after 140 days of lawmaking.

Last week, Gov. George W. Bush took the microphone in a news conference to declare the 1995 legislative session a success.

The first-term governor, who focused on four goals — education reform, welfare reform, juvenile-justice reform and tort reform — said he is ready to tackle another tough issue.

"We must look carefully at property tax relief, at relieving property owners of a high burden," Bush said. But he emphasized that property tax relief does not have to mean the onset of a state personal income tax.

"I am personally against an income tax," Bush said. "I believe — and hopefully we'll find a way to have property tax relief without an income tax."

Under a constitutional amendment adopted by voters in 1993, Texas cannot have a personal income tax without it first being approved in a statewide referendum.

Four Bush Goals Succeed

In addition to a $79 billion two-year budget without a tax increase, the four goals Bush stressed during his gubernatorial campaign were at least partially achieved.

Here's a rundown of those goals:

■ Education. The centerpiece of Bush's education reform plan curbs the regulatory authority of the Texas Education Agency and gives local school boards more control (home-rule concept) over their curricula and programs.

■ Welfare. The governor was unable to persuade the Senate to give Texans but one chance to be on the welfare rolls. The final bill permits people to reapply after one to four years, depending on the recipient's education and work experience.

■ Tort Reform. Bush declared an emergency on tort reform, and lawmakers promptly passed several measures aimed at lowering litigation and placed caps on punitive damage awards. The measure also limits the liability of police officers and other public employees when sued for negligence.

■ Juvenile Justice. The governor said it was time to get tough with juveniles, and lawmakers did. They lowered the age at which young criminals can be tried as adults from 15 to 14 in capital murder cases; created a habitual offender provision that could put three-felony juveniles in prison for 40 years; and increased the number of juvenile detention beds from 2,500 to 6,300.

Democratic Chair to Quit

While Texas' GOP governor was inking bills, Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle announced he would not seek another term.

Slagle, 60, who held the post longer than anyone else in modern history (16 years), said his "zest for fighting Republicans to achieve the real American dream of equal opportunity for all Americans is unabated."

The Sherman lawyer cited a desire to spend more time with his family as the reason he would not seek a ninth two-year term. His successor will be selected by delegates to the Democratic Party Convention in June 1996.

In the past two years, some party faithfuls have complained that Slagle should step down and allow the party to have fresh leadership.

And the complaints increased following the Republican victories in the 1994 elections.

Abolish State Treasury?

One of the 14 proposed constitutional amendments on the Nov. 7 ballot will allow voters to decide whether to abolish the State Treasury. If they do, the comptroller's office would take over the agency's functions.

Other bills signed by Gov. Bush would:

■ Allow licensed individuals to carry concealed handguns beginning Jan. 1, 1996, which Bush labeled another "weapon to keep law-abiding citizens safe."

■ Begin deregulation of the telephone business and open local service to competition and provide $1.5 billion over 10 years for high-tech equipment for schools, libraries and hospitals.

■ Limit campaign contributions to judges. Basic limits are $5,000 for a statewide judicial office, less for lower courts. The time period for judicial candidates to raise funds would be 20 months.

■ Expand a clearinghouse for background checks on sex offenders, give some non-profit groups greater access to criminal history information, and require that crime victims be notified if an offender is placed on community supervision.

■ Create an automatic life sentence of 35 years without possibility of parole for anyone convicted of a first-degree felony sex offense against a child if that person has two prior felony convictions.

■ Allow crime victims to personally present their views to the Board of Pardon and Paroles before a decision on an offender is made.

■ Allow law enforcement agencies to share information among themselves on paroled sex offenders.

Environmentalists blame loggers for nine-acre landslide into river

By MARK EVANS
Associated Press Writer
BOONVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Whether the falling trees in this remote forest made noise is anyone's guess. Nobody was around to hear. Months later the uprooted trees are still causing a stir. Environmentalists blame loggers for the 80-foot-deep, nine-acre swath of hillside that tumbled into the Navarro River sometime in March. The land owner, Louisiana-Pacific Corp., contends it was an "act of God."

No one who's seen the chunk of earth lying at the bottom of a Mendocino County gorge is arguing over the awe it inspires. Or its rarity. Geologists say such landslides come along every few hundred years or so.

"It's pretty special. We know river-damming slides occurred in prehistoric time, so they're not unknown, just very, very rare," said Robert Curry, a geology professor at the University of California-Santa Cruz. "It's the first time we've had a chance to actually see one happen."

"Amazing," said Karl Poppelreiter, a Mendocino County ranger who patrols the river. "And I'm the lucky schmuck to have found it."

Poppelreiter hopped in his canoe March 24 for a trip down the Navarro. He was familiar with the river's winding route, and he knew its calm and its reputation as a rare waterway gentle enough for amateur kayakers to navigate safely all the way to the Pacific Ocean.

Four miles west of his station, the water slowed Poppelreiter's boat to a near-halt. Soon, he was floating in an unfamiliar green lake. Ahead, he could hear the rush of white water caused by the 500-foot-long jumble of fallen trees, boulders, and mud which nearly plugged the river.

Poppelreiter briefly explored the denuded hillside, a quarter-mile high and still gurgling with underground streams and flows of mud. Then he tried to guide his canoe through the river's tree-strewn channel.

"A novice would have died in the river that day, no doubt in my mind," said Poppelreiter. "It threw me right into the water, kind of pinballed me around, knocked me up against some logs. The force was tremendous."

Since then, the Navarro has calmed. Some of the fallen logs and debris have moved down river, and the water has carved itself a wider channel through the slide.

Was it Northern California's winter deluges that caused the slide, or years of human tampering with the hillside?

"I call that Lake Louisiana-Pacific," said Chris Tebbutt, a member of the local Redwood Coast Watershed Alliance. "They knew not to log this land. The ground is much too steep to be taking away that amount of canopy. They just weren't paying attention to what was happening up the slope."

Tebbutt says the timber company robbed the hillside of its natural protection of Douglas fir and redwoods. That let the heavy rains of January and March batter the land with unnatural force.

In addition, rotting roots weren't strong enough to bind surface soil to layers of earth beneath it, he said.

Others believe logging roads may have weakened the slope by guiding rainfall into man-made contours on the hill. One such road marks the upper boundary of the slide.

"Hopefully, this serves as a wake-up call to regulators," said Kathy Bailey of the Sierra Club. "This highlights a regulatory weakness, and that weakness could allow this to occur anywhere along our waterways."

Louisiana-Pacific officials have surveyed the slide and insist it was caused solely by the steady winter rains. Plenty of slides occurred throughout California during the winter floods, they say.

"Things like this do occur," said Tom Thompson, resource manager for the timber company's western division. "Anything dealing with the timber company in this area gets to be news."

The state also is investigating, examining a 1988 timber harvest plan that allowed the steep river gorge to be logged. A preliminary review shows the slide was natural, the result of nearly a foot of rain in the week or so leading up to it, said Julie Bawcom, an engineering geologist for the state. And the extraordinary depth of the slide indicates that logging wasn't to blame, she said.

Hereford has a number of excellent retail stores who make every effort to fill your needs or services. Shop at home with the local folks. They help support your church, your kids, your entire community.

If your neighbor's house caught fire, wouldn't you want to do more than watch?

Of course you would. And we'd like to offer a suggestion: become a volunteer fire fighter.

It's a great way to do something important for your community, and for yourself.

But to be a volunteer fire fighter, you'll need more than just a desire to help people.

You'll also need courage and dedication, enthusiasm, and a willingness to learn new skills and face new challenges.

If you think you qualify for this kind of job, come down to the fire station and talk to us.

Watching can be a helpless feeling. We don't have to tell you what kind of a feeling you'll get from helping.

Your local fire department.

If you are interested in becoming a Volunteer Fireman

June is Dairy Month

Here's the Moo... Hi I'm Steak and This is my brother Elmo. We're the Moo's Bros and we're here to set the record straight about Dairy Month. Every June, America expects every cow in the country to work overtime to fulfill the phenomenal demand for more milk. Well, our little heifers are tired of this and they're not going to take it anymore! It's time that some of the "other guys" in the Dairy Aisle contribute, too! Dairy month is more than milk - it's orange juice, it's biscuits, yogurt, dips, cheese, cultured products, and even ice cream and eggs! Let's see some chickens put in some long hours for a change!
