Farmers rejoice in showers that soak arid fields

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

Drizzles and downpours have washed away some anxiety this week for farmers in parched West Texas.

Residents of Snyder could consider their rainfall heavenly sent. Almost 200 people turned out at a park a few weeks ago to pray for an end to months of dry weather.

Miller Robinson, pastor of Colonial Hill Baptist Church, said about 1.5 inches of rain fell Thursday. "We're just very grateful for it," Robinson said. "All we did was ask."

Rain was forecast to continue as Memorial Day Weekend opens today. "It's nice, it's nice," said Dennis Newton, agriculture extension agent in Hereford. "We were really desperate."

The National Weather Service recorded 2.5 inches of rain near Hereford early Thursday. Newton knew this: enough fell to make puddles in the street and drips off his hat.

"We're going to need some more," he said. But "everybody's excited to finally get a little moisture."

The rains accompanied a cold front that held temperatures in the 50s from Dalhart to Childress.

By late afternoon Thursday, Amarillo had climbed to just 52 degrees - 30 notches below that city's normal high reading for May 25.

Agriculture experts said the rain could kick-start crops - non-irrigated cotton, in particular - that hadn't been planted yet because fields were too dry.

"It's absolutely good news," said Kater Hake, cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Lubbock, who pegged May '94 as the date of the region's last substantial precipitation. "If it didn't rain, there wouldn't have been any more planting."

But thunderstorms came too late for some wheat that already withered in the fields.

Rodney Mosier, executive assistant of the Texas Wheat Producers Association in Amarillo, said drought and freeze damage have cut this year's wheat yields to about half of normal. Rain is welcome but might not help much now, he said.

Sprinkles forced agriculture officials in Muleshoe to move a special ceremony from Jack Schuster's front yard to the Bailey County Coliseum.

But Schuster, a 67-year-old rancher, said the rain Thursday wasn't even enough to make mud.

Accident scene

Hereford firefighters spray water and foam on a wrecked gasoline tanker while colleagues, seen within the spray, seal a fuel leak. The one-vehicle accident occurred at 11:30 a.m. Thursday on U.S. 60, 2.1 miles west of Dawn. Driver Windell D. Chenoweth, 35, of Roswell, N.M., was treated and released from Hereford

Regional Medical Center after he lost control of the truck and tanker full of gasoline he was hauling. Passenger Tim M. Dye, 32, also of Roswell, was uninjured. Westbound lanes of U.S. 60 were closed while the leak was capped. Chenoweth was cited for driving at unsafe speed. See related photo, Page 2.

Investigators due here to probe hantavirus ties in Arzola's death

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

A state health official said it is premature to say the death of Hereford resident Rocky Arzola Jr. was related to the hantavirus, but noted that an investigative team will be here this weekend to look into the matter. The Amarillo Daily News on Thursday reported that Arzola, 15, may have died of the virus, which gained prominence in 1993 when a number of people in the Four Corners region of New Mexico died.

However, said Dr. James Morgan, Regional Director for Public Health in Lubbock, "We don't have a lot of facts yet." Announcement of the possible connection was premature, Morgan said, because that link has not yet been established.

A serology test on blood taken from Arzola was positive for hantavirus, which is spread through contact with excretions -- blood, saliva, urine or feces -- of infected rodents.

"We felt like it was certainly worth going out" and conducting an on-site investigation, Morgan said, even though, "just because you have positive serology doesn't mean you have hantavirus."

Teams from the Texas Department of Health will be in the area this weekend, looking at Arzola's whereabouts before he became ill and talking to family members about the youth's actions.

An unconfirmed report Friday said Arzola did not work for a local feedyard, as Amarillo Justice of the Peace Terry Miller originally stated may have occurred.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta will also work on the case, testing tissue samples from the victim. "The teams will be working through the weekend," Morgan said, and a preliminary report may be available by Tuesday.

"We're trying to see if there's any obvious points of exposure" to the virus, he said, adding that he doubts if any such places can be found.

The hantavirus, Morgan said, is only transmitted from rodents to humans, and that human-to-human infection is not possible.

He said he wanted those who were around Arzola to be aware they could not have been infected even if the youth did have the hantavirus.

The virus, he said, can survive in rodent excretions even after those substances have dried, meaning infection could come about by coming in contact with dried feces, saliva or whatever.

"It's what we call sporadic," Morgan said, meaning hantavirus can appear one case at a time through individual exposure, rather than as an epidemic from human infection.

The 1993 Four Corners cases, he said, were actually unusual because of the number of cases at one time.

"This is not a communicable disease from man to man," he said.

If possible points of contact with the hantavirus are found, Morgan said, then health officials will try to capture some possibly infect rodents and test them for the presence of the virus.

Of the two other Texas hantavirus deaths since 1993, Morgan said, one case had a positively-identified source, while none was found in the other case.

The onset of the infection is accompanied by high fever with a cough, sore throat or respiratory distress.

Rain won't wash out plans for outdoor commencement

Hereford High School officials are planning to hold graduation exercises outside tonight, despite the relative deluge of rain that has soaked the city the past couple of days.

Terry Russell said crews were to work on Whiteface Stadium today to get it ready for commencement at 7 p.m.

"We will be out if it's any way possible," Russell said. "Even if it starts raining today we won't move in unless we decide we can't get the stadium ready."

Holding graduation outdoors means any number of family, friends and relatives of the 253 members of the Class of 1995 can watch commencement.

Moving indoors restricts the number attending because of space considerations.

Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt said the district has equipment that will enable it to dry outdoor bleachers quickly, even if additional rain falls today.

Still, contingency plans are in place for graduation.

Russell said the Whiteface Gymnasium will be set up for graduation, just in case, so the event can be moved inside at any time before graduation actually begins.

During the morning's graduation rehearsal, seniors were to be issued six tickets each, to be used in case commencement is moved indoors.

In that instance, the tickets will be the only way to gain admission to commencement.

But Russell said the final decision about moving indoors won't be made until late this afternoon, around 5 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

If the decision is made, he said, the district will contact KPAN Radio and get the word to the public as quickly as possible.

The rain has caused some changes in commencement exercises.

Russell said student seating will be unaffected, because the chairs for the 253 graduates are placed on the concrete apron used by the Whiteface football team.

This year, the band and teachers will be moved from the grass to the track area because of the soft ground.

The only thing on the grass will be the platform and podium. Students will have to walk across a little grass, but nobody will actually sit on the grass.

When the students move across the stage, a few will participate but not receive a diploma.

District policy allows students who have completed class requirements for graduation, but who have not passed the TAAS tests, to walk through the line with the rest of the graduating class.

Those students -- Russell said the group numbers about 10 people -- will then retake the TAAS this summer. Those who pass will receive high school diplomas after those results are confirmed.

Combest sets meetings to talk about Social Security

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

Without reforms, Medicare will start losing money in 1996 and will be bankrupt in about seven years, according to a Medicare Trustees report April 3, 1995.

With this premise in mind, Congressman Larry Combest, 19th Congressional District Republican, will attend "Town Hall" meetings next week to discuss the crisis and get input from constituents on the best way to fix the problem.

The meetings will start in Lubbock on Tuesday and continue on consecutive days at Midland, Odessa, and Canyon. The meetings will be held in the evening in order to attract as many interested citizens as possible. The Canyon meeting will start at 6 p.m. Friday in Classroom Center, Room 101, West Texas A&M University.

In a conference call a group of West Texas editors and publishers Thursday, Rep. Combest pointed out that Republican leaders have proposed a plan that would cut the growth rate by about 5 percent a year. The Medicare program is currently growing at a rate of 10 percent a year.

Despite opponent's claims, said Combest, "the fact is we would continue to provide funds to increase Medicare spending, but at a slower rate over the next seven years." Spending during that time would rise to an average of $6,300 a patient, compared to the average $4,700 now available, he added.

"The purpose of these town hall meetings is to bring people the facts and cut through the political jargon," said Combest. "No final choices have been made on how to reduce the growth rate, and that's what the dialogue is about at these town hall meetings. We want input on how to best maintain the integrity of the system."

The Lubbock congressman said Medicare's costs are rising twice as much as medical care now available in the private sector. Payroll deductions from FICA taxes fund the hospital insurance (Part A). Employers pay 1.45 percent on payroll, and employees pay 1.45 percent in paycheck deductions, but they are no longer enough to cover rising Medicare spending.

Medicare Part B (supplemental medical insurance) is financed by patients paying a $46.10 monthly premium (deducted from Social Security check) covering 25 percent of the costs, and the remaining 75 percent is covered by tax dollars.

Combest says Republican proposals on Medicare reforms include cutting much of the $44 billion a year in waste and fraud.

Combest said he has also sent out a district-wide mailer which explains the Medicare crisis. He hopes constituents will study this mailer, then attend a town hall meeting and express their opinions.

Ready to graduate

Hereford High School senior Brandi Brookhart, right, gets a little help from her mother, Sandy, as she puts on cap and gown in preparation for today's commencement exercises. Graduation for the 353 members of the Class of 1995 will be at 7 p.m. in Whiteface Stadium, unless weather forces activities indoors to Whiteface Gymnasium. Brandi, daughter of Brad and Sandy Brookhart, will be among those crossing the platform to receive diplomas and end their compulsory education.

White sentenced to prison for role in husband's escape

A young woman who helped her husband escape from custody was sentenced to seven years in prison Thursday.

Amy White, 23, in a plea bargain agreement, was sentenced after pleading guilty to the charge of escape.

She appeared in 222nd District Court. Judge David Wesley Gully pronounced sentence.

The defendant was charged with escape in connection with an incident that occurred on Feb. 6.

Her husband, Lloyd White, 25, was a prisoner in Deaf Smith County jail and was taken to a Hereford dentist's office for treatment.

After the appointment, the handcuffed White bolted from the building while the sheriff's deputy attended to paperwork.

The deputy reported that White ran a short distance to a vehicle driven by his wife. She sped off after White entered the car.

Park rangers at the Lake Meredith recreational area arrested the pair on Feb. 9. The Whites reportedly asked visitors to the area for help with their auto. The incident was reported to rangers who arrested them. White was still wearing handcuffs.

At the time of the escape, White was being held in Deaf Smith County jail for parole violation. He had been convicted of burglary of a motor vehicle in Potter County.

White is being held in Deaf Smith County jail in lieu of $20,000 bond. Assistant District Attorney Jim English said he doesn't know when White's case will go to court.

Local Roundup

Thunderstorms lurking Friday night

A 60 percent chance of thunderstorms is forecast for Friday night, but skies should clear somewhat for much of the Memorial Day weekend. Rainfall Wednesday night and Thursday amounted to 1.56 inches to add to the 1.67 inches previously recorded during the month, according to KPAN Radio. Saturday will be partly cloudy with a high temperature in the upper 70s. Winds from the southwest to west will blow at 20-30 mph, with gusts. The holiday weekend is expected to be a mixed bag with a dry Sunday but return of thunderstorms Monday.

Incumbent donations are okay, says letter

WASHINGTON (AP) - On its official stationery, the White House wrote all government agency heads advising them that a change in federal law now allows their workers to donate to "the re-election committee of an incumbent president." "Your cooperation in disseminating this advice is greatly appreciated," White House Counsel Abner Mikva wrote in a May 2, 1995, memo that was obtained by The Associated Press. In the memo, Mikva wrote that before the Hatch Act was changed in 1993 to allow federal workers to participate in more political activities, the Justice Department believed the law precluded them from giving money to a sitting president's campaign. Critics from campaign-finance watchdogs to one of Mikva's predecessors roundly criticized the letter Wednesday, saying the use of White House stationery left it open to accusations that it was trying to pressure federal workers to donate. "The effect is, I guess, that any agency head, if he or she wants to make sure his job is safe, would have to circulate this memo," said Ellen Miller, director of the Center for Responsive Politics, a Washington group that studies campaign finance. C. Boyden Gray, who was George Bush's White House counsel, said: "The appearance of bringing undue pressure to bear is precisely what the Hatch Act is designed to avoid. I think there's an appearance problem here." Herbert Alexander, a campaign finance expert at the University of Southern California, said the problem lies in the fact that the White House could have used other mediums to convey the same message. "This information could more properly have come from some other source, such as the campaign committee," Alexander said. "These things can be done more delicately than this." But the White House insisted it had done nothing improper. "It is entirely proper for the White House legal counsel to remind federal employees, and particularly political employees, what they are obligated to do under the law," White House Press Secretary Mike McCurry said. "We've done exactly what you should do, which is make sure people know what they can do, and what they can't do, under the law." But Ann McBride, president of citizens' watchdog group Common Cause, said that even though the White House and government agencies routinely send memos noting changes in federal law, this one should not have been delivered. "There's just no way that a message comes from the White House and people don't feel some sense of implicit coercion," said McBride.

Juvenile bill wins House approval

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas House has given final approval to an overhaul of the juvenile justice system that seeks to carry out Gov. George W. Bush's campaign pledge to get tough on violent youths. "It'll remove the bad kids from the street and it'll keep them off the street," said Rep. Toby Goodman, R-Arlington, the bill's author. The House passed the bill 137-10 Thursday. The measure needs final Senate approval before heading to Bush, who made juvenile crime reform one of his four top legislative priorities. "This bill re-establishes the concept of punishment as a deterrent to juvenile crime. It says to young people, 'We're going to help you, but if you engage in criminal behavior, you're going to pay a price,'" said the governor's press secretary, Karen Hughes. "It fulfills basically all of his major campaign pledges in the area of juvenile crime," she said. The juvenile crime rate in Texas has skyrocketed 281 percent since 1987. In 1993, more than 77,000 youths were arrested. Goodman said the bill would allow authorities to lock up violent youths longer and provide for rehabilitation. "It'll give us a place to remove some violent, predatory kids and give us enough time with them to maybe make a difference," he said. "It's probably the best piece of legislation on juvenile law in this country." Opponents said the bill doesn't go far enough to prevent juvenile crime. "There's not enough funding for preventative measures," said Rep. Al Edwards, D-Houston. Edwards, who heads a coalition of black House members, said the legislation would hurt teens - particularly black and Hispanic youths, because they comprise the majority of those entering the juvenile justice system.

"We're providing more beds for a bunch of little bad blacks and browns and poor whites, but that's not saying we're here to correct the problem," Edwards said. Minority lawmakers cast all 10 votes against the bill. The bill lowers the age at which a juvenile can be tried as an adult from 15 to 14. It toughens penalties and sets maximum and minimum sentences for serious crimes, from two years to 40 years. The current average stay at juvenile facilities is about eight months. Under the measure, the number of detention beds for youths would increase from 2,500 to 6,300 over the next four years. For violent teens, the bill expands from five to 12 the crime categories under which they are eligible to be sent to the adult prison system. Those include murder, aggravated assault, certain drug offenses and sexual crimes.

The bill also would lower from 18 to 16 the age at which juveniles are eligible for transfer to adult prisons. The measure would authorize counties and general-law cities to enact curfews. Goodman, disputing opponents' contentions that the bill includes few preventative measures, said the legislation provides counseling and family services to children as young as 7 with behavioral problems. It would allow counselors or the courts to order parents to participate in counseling, tutoring, mentoring or treatment. In addition, the bill includes a youth boot camp program, expanded services for runaways and at-risk youths and a training program to assist offenders as they try to rejoin society. The proposed 1996-97 state budget would increase spending on juvenile crime by $218 million.

Book presentation

West Central Intermediate School fifth-grader Taylor Charest presents a copy of the Reader's Digest book Story of the Great American West to librarian Bera Boyd, left, while Ruth Newsom of the Los Ciboleros Chapter of the DAR looks on. The book was placed in Taylor's name after her essay, "Living in America in Colonial Days: 1607-1775" was selected as the 1995 Outstanding American History Essay by a panel of judges. The book presentation was made to the school during a Friday morning assembly.

Dismissal of eighth juror causes concern about dwindling pool

By JEFF MEYER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - The dismissal of an eighth juror again brought the lumbering O.J. Simpson trial to a halt, shifting attention from a decision about the admissibility of Simpson's police statement to fears that the dwindling alternate pool may run dry. After an unplanned, five-hour meeting with the judge Thursday, defense attorneys were all smiles, apparently happy with the ouster of the panelist who will be replaced today. Prosecutors, on the other hand, looked grim as they rushed out of the private session. Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden told reporters, "Get a life, guys." The alternate pool has dwindled from 12 to just four, with months to go in the marathon murder trial that has been rocked by wide-ranging jury complications.

"This bodes very badly for the future of this trial," said law professor Robert Pugsley of Southwestern University. "I don't see realistically how they're going to make it." No reason was given for the dismissal, and the identity of the juror wasn't announced. Both sides said they had been ordered to withhold comment about the dismissal. Jury selection began Sept. 26, and the panel has been sequestered for more than four months, since Jan. 11. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's decision to stop testimony for half a day was remarkable given his new get-tough policy aimed at keeping the trial moving quickly. Jurors have been impatient with the slow pace and suggested last week that more hours be added to the court schedule. Myra Raeder, a Southwestern University law professor, thought Ito would head that request. "It would not surprise me if Judge Ito decides to lengthen those hours in order to ensure the best possibility of attaining a verdict," she said. "A blow like this is bound to reinforce the need to keep that testimony flowing."

If the number of jurors drops below 12, it would take an agreement by both sides to continue. Otherwise, a mistrial would be declared. A few dismissed jurors have described a troubled jury divided along racial lines. Explosive comments by one former panelist about some of her colleagues and deputies who guard them led to an investigation by the judge. Before the latest ouster, the jury included seven blacks, three whites and two Hispanics. There were nine women and three men. The alternate pool consisted of four blacks and one white; four women and one man. The trial was interrupted as more arguments were to begin on the admissibility of Simpson's statement to police on June 13. If the defense succeeds in telling jurors about the audiotaped statement, it could mean that Simpson's story could be relayed to jurors without him having to take the stand and endure hostile cross-examination.

Plea bargain considered for friend of McVeigh

By PAUL QUEARY
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - A friend of bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh's who allegedly inspected the federal building with him is negotiating a plea bargain with the FBI, the Los Angeles Times reported today. Michael Fortier of Kingman, Ariz., has been cooperating with authorities in Oklahoma City as they seek a broad conspiracy indictment, the Times quotes three unidentified federal sources as saying. Officials have spent a week discussing a written agreement for Fortier, 26, to plead guilty to limited charges and become a key witness against McVeigh and Terry Nichols, the newspaper said.

The newspaper's sources said Fortier could face charges ranging from having knowledge of the bombing conspiracy to giving false statements to authorities. Those charges carry minimum five-year prison terms. Fortier and McVeigh became friends in Kingman, where they worked in a hardware store following their service in the Army. Both men traveled to Oklahoma City and posed as job applicants to inspect the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, unidentified sources told the Times.

Mack Martin, an Oklahoma City lawyer representing Fortier, wouldn't comment on the meetings. So far, McVeigh, 27, and Nichols, 40, are the only people charged in the April 19 attack that killed at least 167 people. They face the death penalty if convicted.

Pioneers gather here Saturday

The annual Mid Plains Pioneer Celebration will be held here Saturday at the Bull Barn. Registration begins at 9 a.m. A meeting will be called to order at 11:30 a.m., followed by a covered-dish luncheon. Meat, bread and drinks will be provided. Each person is asked to bring a covered dish. Dues for the association are $3 a person.

ELSIE M. SHAMBECK
May 22, 1995
Elsie M. Shambleck, 94, of Lubbock, mother of a former Hereford resident, Leona Kimball Scheihagen of Huntsville, died May 22. Memorial services were held last Monday in Shepherd King Lutheran Church with burial in Tahoka Cemetery, by Franklin-Bartley Funeral Home. Mrs. Shambleck was born in Hallettsville and had lived in Lubbock since 1952. She married Louis George Shambleck in 1917 in Tahoka. He died in 1944. She was a member of Shepherd King Lutheran Church where she taught Sunday school for 50 years. Survivors, in addition to the daughter, are three sons, another daughter, a stepdaughter, a brother, 20 grandchildren and 27 great-grandchildren.

Supreme Court upholds ruling on Lubbock case

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The city of Lubbock must pay $1.52 million in overtime to three fire investigators, the Texas Supreme Court says. The court Thursday upheld an appeals court decision that awards overtime to the three officials, who were on call virtually 24 hours a day to investigate arson cases. The payments cover a period from April 1984 to Sept. 1, 1987, when state law changed the way overtime is calculated for police officers and firefighters. The lawsuits were filed in 1987 and 1988. "Definitely I'm pleased," said one of the plaintiffs, Assistant Fire Marshal Harold Eckles. "This has been going on for 7-1/2 years." A lawyer for the city said he is unsure whether city officials will ask the Supreme Court to reconsider.

Cleaning up
Hereford firefighters use truck water to hose themselves off after walking into a spray of water and foam to shut off a fuel leak on a gasoline tanker following a one-vehicle accident Thursday. The truck driver suffered minor injuries in the accident, and firefighters used clamps they made to seal off the tank and stop fuel from leaking into the ground.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been a veterinarian for over 20 years. I want to comment on the letter from the "Good Samaritan" who complained about the vet's fees to treat an injured cockatiel.

There is no reason to conclude that the case was misdiagnosed. The initial diagnosis and the final one often differ. The bird could not speak, so there was no way the veterinarian could have known the full extent of the injuries.

It is also not out of line for a vet to ask a first-time client for a $50 deposit. "Samaritan" refused to pay the final $85 charge for recommended x-rays, surgery and medications. I'm willing to bet those tests cost a lot more than $85.

Veterinarians are not magicians. We must study and stay current in medical advancements for dogs, cats, birds, ferrets, hamsters, guinea pigs, gerbils, rats, mice, cows, sheep, pigs, horses, goats, ostriches, llamas and whatever else people bring through the front door. Our services have value, and we deserve to be reimbursed for our time and materials. We love our patients, clients and profession, but in order to continue to practice, we must create a fee structure that is both sound business and affordable to the pet owner. This is a tough tightrope to walk.

You blew it, but we'll give you only five lashes with a wet noodle since you got it right almost all of the time. -- RAB, DVM

DEAR RAB: Sorry I blew it. Thanks for being so generous.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read the letter you printed about the husband who went to play golf while his wife had gallbladder surgery. I, too, had gallbladder problems, but I was feeling pretty good anyway.

My husband and I were planning to travel 4,000 miles round-trip by car to his 52nd high school reunion. But then, the doctor called and said I should have a gallbladder operation as soon as possible -- that if it ruptured, I could die.

My husband of 43 years left, in our new car, and drove to his reunion, visiting many friends across the country on his way. In the meantime, my neighbor took me to the army hospital, where I was listed as an "unmarried widow" since no husband showed up.

The operation went well, but I felt deserted by my AWOL husband. Do you have any advice for me, Ann? -- El Paso, Texas

DEAR EL PASO: If you've lived with the guy for 43 years, you don't need any advice from me. Maybe you should be writing a column.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you are against able-bodied people using bathroom stalls provided for the handicapped, but honestly, they are a godsend for those of us who have toddlers.

Will you please say it is OK for us mothers to use them? These days, I wouldn't dare leave my children unattended in a public bathroom. -- Hanover Park, Ill.

DEAR HANOVER: Circumstances alter cases. I do feel that you should be given the green light on this one. If anyone complains, you can lay the blame on me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Often the simple things in life can make the most difference. For example, when someone asked Mother Teresa how people without money or power can make the world a better place, she replied, "They should smile more." -- Prince George, British Columbia, Canada

DEAR PRINCE: What a splendid response. Thank you.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. ## Bud to Blossom Club sponsors poster contest

Bud to Blossom Garden Club met recently at Hereford Senior Citizen Center for its final meeting of the club year.

Roll call was answered with "my plans for a summer garden".

President Phyllis Brown reported that she, Wilma Bryan and Naomi

Hare had assisted with the April birthday party at Westgate Nursing Home. Also, the club will furnish a centerpiece, to be made by Wilma Bryan, for the head table at the Pioneer Day luncheon on Saturday.

The club sponsored a poster contest for third and fourth graders in Joan Culp's class at Community Christian School. The theme was "Taking Care of our Environment" and winners were Celeste Louder, first place; Brian Taylor, second place and Chelsea Blain, third place. They were given McDonald's gift certificates.

Patricia Robinson presented the program on raising different varieties of pepper and how to use them in cooking.

Present were two guests, Tracey Duncan and Billie Jo Gee, and members Brown, Robinson, Bryan, Hare and Mildred Fuhrmann.

Lapidary Club hears report

The Deaf Smith County Lapidary Club met recently in the county library.

Dale Henson presided over the business meeting. Reports were given on absent and ill members.

The door prizes were furnished by Ruth King and won by Dale Henson and Helen Nunley.

Hosts for the meeting were Bobbie Roberson and Ralph and Jane Packard.

Jack Nunley reported on the Amarillo Gem and Mineral Show held in May. He showed an assortment of tumbled rocks and talked about the kind of rocks and where they were found.

Lurline Cawthon showed the first in a series of new videos from the library's collection.

The next meeting will be June 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the Deaf Smith County Library. Interested persons are invited to attend.

It is easier to know man in general than to know a particular man.

Mother, son graduates

Karen Flood, left, and her son Keith are both May graduates. Mrs. Flood graduated from West Texas A&M University May 13 and Keith will receive his diploma from Hereford High School Friday night.

Mother, son celebrate graduation this month

"I'm about 20 years late, but I made it," said Karen Flood.

Mrs. Flood was referring to her college graduation. She graduated from West Texas A&M University May 13 with a degree in elementary education.

Her oldest son, Keith, will graduate from Hereford High School Friday night.

Mrs. Flood graduated from Plainview High School in 1973 and started college that fall. However, marriage and raising a family interrupted her schooling.

But she enrolled at WTAMU as a "recycled" (returning) student and successfully achieved her goal.

"We think it's pretty special for both of us to graduate at the same time," said Keith.

He plans to attend WTAMU with a major in "the computer field".

"There are two other members of our family who are graduating now," said Mrs. Flood.

Randy Jones, her brother-in-law, just received a nursing degree from Amarillo College. And her niece, Tracy Flood, graduated from WTAMU.

"We even got to sit together at graduation. It was fun," said Mrs. Flood.

Clements, Dennis share Colonial lead

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)--Clark Dennis shot a 64 on the course that was his childhood playground and grabbed a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the Colonial National Invitation tournament.

"It's good to be home," Dennis said after the 6-under-par effort that gave him a tie for the top spot with Lennie Clements, who played without a bogey on the rain-softened Colonial course.

The tough old course on the banks of the Trinity River was robbed of its natural defenses by the absence of wind and some showers that slowed and softened fairways and greens.

"It's vulnerable, about as vulnerable as Colonial is ever going to be," the veteran Clements, who has yet to win in a 15-season tour career, said.

Dennis, whose parents were members of Colonial and who has played this layout "since I was a kid," agreed.

"It was there for the taking," he said. And golf's touring pros made the most of it.

Billy Andrade shot 65, while the group at 66 included Fuzzy Zoeller, Payne Stewart, Curtis Strange, Mike Hulbert, Jeff Maggert, D.A. Weibring and Australian Craig Parry.

But not all escaped without difficulty. Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, a two-time winner of this title, could do no better than a 75.

Nick Price of Zimbabwe, the defending champion and the top-ranked player in the world, was 3-over at 73. John Daly and South African Ernie Els, the U.S. Open champ, each had 71s.

The showers, in addition to taming the greens, were particularly beneficial to Clements.

"I played here Tuesday and I had real bad allergies," he said. "I had to quit after nine holes."

"I'm real happy we had that little bit of rain and the calm. It kind of washed out the pollen."

With his allergies under control, Clements said he "played about as good as I can play."

"I was putting for birdie on every hole. I missed one green, but that was just in the fringe and I was able to putt it."

"When you give yourself that many opportunities, you're going to make some of them," Clements said.

Hodges' Trojans set for Nationals with 38-0 mark

The Texas Trojans capped a perfect season by capturing the Boy's 12-and-under title at the West Texas AAU Regional Basketball Tournament in Amarillo this past weekend.

The Trojans, comprised of players from Hereford and Amarillo, will now take a 38-0 record to the AAU National Tournament to be held in Salt Lake City on July 21-29.

The Trojans won the regional title with a 68-51 victory Sunday at the Tascosa gym over Nuff Said, last year's regional champion.

Steve Hodges of Hereford is coach of the team. Players from Hereford are Slade Hodges, Cody Hodges and Chayse Rives. Amarillo players are Rex Emerson, Jeff Simpson, Bobby Nickum, Graham Bowmer and Dominique Perkins.

The team swept through eight tournaments in three states, compiling a 35-0 record over a four-month period, then finishing with a perfect record Sunday.

The team took other championships at: the Bi-State Shootout in Elk City, Ok.; the Ponies Spring Classic in Oklahoma City; the Albuquerque Spring Classic; the Lone Star Classic in Lubbock; Amarillo's Crown of Texas Tournament, and the Cuby Kitchens Classic in Hereford.

Orlando takes 2-0 lead by beating Indiana, 119-114

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)--They're young, bold, talented and up 2-0 on Indiana in the Eastern Conference finals.

The Orlando Magic, however, aren't making any rash predictions about the remainder of the best-of-7 series that resumes Saturday in Indianapolis, where the Pacers have to win at least once to avoid elimination.

Shaquille O'Neal & Co.'s impressive performance in Game 2 Thursday night prompted questions about the possibility of a sweep.

"I'm not a maid," the all-star center said after the Magic's 119-114 victory. "I'm not worried about sweeping."

Nevertheless, the Magic clearly is in the driver's seat after getting 39 points from O'Neal and another big night from Dennis Scott, Anfernee Hardaway and Nick Anderson.

This was a team the experts claimed was too young and inexperienced to go this far in the postseason. Now they've got the playoff-seasoned Pacers wondering what it'll take to stop them.

"Traditionally in the NBA, you've got to learn from losing. But this team is a team that believes in itself," said Orlando's Jeff Turner. "It's very cocky in what it can do and it shows. Maybe this team is so young that they don't know they have to pay their dues."

O'Neal scored seven of his 27 second-half points in the last two minutes to keep Orlando ahead until Anderson sealed Indiana's fate with a 3-pointer with 13.9 seconds remaining.

"If he's going to play like that, and make his free throws, they're going to be trouble for everybody," said Indiana coach Larry Brown, adding that one of the keys to getting back into the series will be finding a way to either contain O'Neal or shut off Orlando's outside attack.

Scott (25 points), Hardaway (19 points, 15 assists) and Anderson (17 points) hit 12 3-pointers, while O'Neal (averaging 35.5 in the series) did virtually anything he wanted inside against the Pacers' Rik Smits (19 points) and overmatched power forwards.

"We've got to take one or the other away--inside or outside," said Reggie Miller, who had 37 for the Pacers on 12-for-18 shooting. "They can't have both."

The Magic overwhelmed the Pacers with five 3-pointers in the first quarter, building an 11-point lead, and their perimeter shooters were left open in the second period to hit three more. Orlando's 173-point attempt in the first half tied the NBA record set by the Lakers and Seattle in a first-round game last month.

Miller, who had 16 first-half points, was hurt late in the second quarter when he fell out of bounds and a long-lens camera struck him in the lower back. After remaining on the ground for about a minute, he returned to the game and scored Indiana's last five points of the half, including a basket that cut Orlando's lead to 58-52 with 28.1 seconds left.

But McKey left Scott open on the right wing for a 3-pointer with 2.7 seconds left, and the Pacers trailed by nine at halftime.

O'Neal had 10 third-quarter points, but Indiana kept hanging around until the Orlando center went to the bench with four fouls. When he picked up his fifth with 7:24, the Pacers began their final push.

They took their only lead of the second half, 109-108, with 2:32 to play.

Rice, Texas baseball teams win in regionals

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)--Chris Boni's sacrifice fly ball deep to center in bottom of the eighth gave Rice an 8-7 victory over James Madison in the first round of the NCAA South Regional on Thursday.

It was the first lead of the game for Rice (41-17), the No. 3 seed in the tournament.

The sacrifice fly came after Jeff Venghaus' triple which brought on left-handed pitcher Mike Venafro for James Madison (42-16). Venafro hit the first batter he faced then walked the second to set up Boni's RBI.

After trailing since the second inning, Rice tied the game at 7-7 in the seventh. Starting James Madison pitcher Brian McNichol walked the first two batters on the inning before being pulled for Casey Brookens.

Brookens (7-2), who took the loss, gave up a RBI single to Mark Quinn, the first batter he faced.

James Madison, the No. 4 seed, scored one run in the first, one in the second, three in the third, one in the fifth and one in the seventh to build a 7-5 lead going into the bottom of the seventh.

James Madison will play Northeast Louisiana at 11 a.m. cdt Friday. Northeast lost 7-6 to Cal State Fullerton in game one Thursday.

Rice will play the winner of the LSU-Central Michigan game Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Alderete, Bradley lead first round at Corning Classic

CORNING, N.Y. (AP)--Loretta Alderete has been around the LPGA for 10 years and has never known the feeling of a leader. For Pat Bradley, anything less is not good enough.

The two players shot 5-under-par 67s Thursday and share the lead going into today's second round of the $500,000 Corning Classic, but that might be all they have in common.

Alderete is a non-exempt member of the LPGA tour and has played in just one previous tournament this year. She has earned only $77,943 since turning professional in 1985 and had never led a tournament.

"I've never been in the hunt," Alderete said.

The leaders were one stroke ahead of Allison Finney, who finished with a 68 after missing a 2-foot putt for par on No. 18. Suzanne Strudwick, Melissa McNamara and Missy McGeorge were two shots back at 69. Defending champion Beth Daniel and JoAnne Carner were among a group of players at 70. LPGA champion Kelly Robbins was among 17 golfers who shot 71.

Swoopes named to elite team

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER
AP Sports Writer
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) - Dawn Staley chatted happily. Rebecca Lobo beamed. Katrina McClain breathed a sigh of relief that it was over.

And Teresa Edwards, the most decorated, the most experienced and the oldest of them all, cried - for herself and for everyone who had stood by her.

They were among 11 players named Thursday to a pioneering women's national basketball team that will form the core of the 1996 U.S. Olympic team. All had reason to celebrate but none seemed more caught up in the moment than Edwards, who already has played in three Olympics and won two gold medals.

The team includes both the old and new in women's basketball for this country internationally - from Olympic veterans Edwards and McClain to Lobo of Connecticut and Nikki McCray of Tennessee, both 1995 All-Americans.

Recent college stars Lisa Leslie (Southern Cal), Sheryl Swoopes (Texas Tech) and Staley (Virginia) also were picked, along with Jennifer Azzi, Katy Steding, Ruthie Bolton and Carla McGehee, all veterans of international play.

The actual Olympic team will have 12 players and will be formally announced in May.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)--J.D. Sharp threw a complete game and Texas scored six runs in the eighth inning Thursday to beat the rain and Ohio State 10-5 in the first round of the NCAA Midwest II regional.

The Longhorns (43-18) will play Friday against the winner of the late game between host Oklahoma and Indiana State. Ohio State (40-22) plays Auburn on Friday and must win to stay alive.

Sharp (14-4) allowed nine hits and four earned runs. He worked out of trouble after giving up the lead in the eighth, then his teammates bailed him out in the bottom half of the inning.

The Buckeyes scored twice in the eighth to take a 5-4 lead. One run scored on a sacrifice fly by Brian Mannino and the go-ahead run came across on a throwing error by third baseman Chad Blessing.

Ohio State had the bases loaded when Sharp got Alex Eckelman on a groundout to end the inning.

Buckeye starter Kevan Cannon (8-6) got into trouble in the bottom of the eighth by walking the first two batters. After a sacrifice put runners at second and third, an intentional walk loaded the bases.

Kip Harkrider then drew a walk to force in the tying run. Reliever Bob Spears came on and gave up a sacrifice fly and two straight run-scoring singles as the Longhorns took control.

Angels drub Yanks, keep AL West lead

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer
The American League West has turned from the laughingstock of the three-division alignment last season into the class of the league.
And no team symbolizes the turnaround from AL Worst to AL Best better than the California Angels.

The Angels, in the cellar when last season's strike hit, kept their first-place lead Thursday with their seventh straight victory, a 15-2 drubbing of the New York Yankees.
"It's a lot of fun right now, a lot of excitement, and it's something that we're trying to hang on to and ride as long as we can," third baseman Spike Owen said. "Right now we're on an emotional high, a lot of confidence building, and we have to try and maintain that."

In 1994, none of the four teams in the division could win as many games as it lost. This season, all are above .500. The Angels, at 18-9, are tied with Cleveland for the best winning percentage in the league and have a three-game lead over the Athletics.

J.T. Snow's second career grand slam ignited a nine-run second inning as the Angels earned a three-game sweep over the Yankees, preseason favorites to win the East.

In other American League games, Minnesota beat Detroit 4-3, Oakland topped Baltimore 9-6, Seattle nipped Boston 4-3 and Kansas City beat Milwaukee 3-1.

The Angels swept the Yankees in a three-game series at home for the first time since August 1990, outscoring them 28-3 and extending New York's road losing streak to five games. The winning margin was the Angels' largest ever against New York.

California's Mark Langston (3-0) allowed four hits over six innings, struck out six and walked four.

Melido Perez (2-1) surrendered all nine runs in the second inning, and allowed five hits and four walks.

Athletics 9, Orioles 6
Terry Steinbach hit his second grand slam this season as Oakland rallied to defeat visiting Baltimore.

With the Orioles ahead 6-5 in the eighth, Armando Benitez (0-3) walked three straight batters before Steinbach hit his sixth career slam.
Kevin Bass' two-run homer off Rick Honeycutt (1-0) had given the Orioles a 6-5 lead an inning earlier.

Mariners 4, Red Sox 3
Seattle catcher Chad Kreuter, making a rare start, drove in his first two runs of the season as visiting Boston lost its fifth in six games.

Tim Belcher (2-0) outpitched Zane Smith (0-1) in a battle of veterans making their second starts for new teams.

Twins 4, Tigers 3
Visiting Minnesota's stopped a four-game losing streak when Pedro Munoz doubled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning.

Detroit's Joe Boever (3-1), pitching for the fourth time in five games, allowed a leadoff single to Chuck Knoblauch before Munoz doubled off the fence in right-center.

Mark Guthrie (2-2) struck out a career-high 12 during six innings of relief. Rick Aguilera, who hasn't allowed a run in nine appearances this season, pitched a perfect ninth for his seventh save.

Royals 3, Brewers 1
Only 8,639 fans at Milwaukee's County Stadium watched as Chris Haney (2-1) scattered three hits in 7 2-3 innings and Gary Gaetti and Pat Borders homered for Kansas City.

Milwaukee's left-hander Sid Roberson (0-1), making his first major-league start, took a two-hitter into the seventh inning before surrendering a two-run homer to Gaetti.

Elie decides Drexler trade best for team

HOUSTON (AP)--At first, Houston Rockets guard Mario Elie didn't like the Otis Thorpe-for-Clyde Drexler trade.

Now he realizes it's made him a better player.

"Sam (Cassell) made a big three yesterday (Wednesday), Robert (Horry) made the big shot in Game 1 (against San Antonio) and I had the big shot against Phoenix in Game 7," Elie said.

"But it was all because of Hakeem and Clyde. The plays were designed for those guys, and when they get double-teamed, they do a good job of rotating the ball. They make the game easy for the other guys."

Elie's 3-point basket with 7.1 seconds left in Game 7 of the Western Conference semifinals against Phoenix was the highlight of his much-traveled NBA career.

"We've got two premier players in Clyde and Dream (Hakeem Olajuwon), so you get wide open shots and we've been knocking them down," Elie said.

Unexpected big shots from their role players have been happening regularly for the rejuvenated Rockets, who lead San Antonio 2-0 in the West finals.

Elie feared the Feb. 14 trade that brought Drexler from Portland, would make the Rockets an even weaker rebounding team.

"Nobody liked the trade," Elie said. "We needed a four (power forward) and we struggled a little. 'Four' men are tough in the West, and I just didn't know where we would get rebounds."

With the Rockets on a five-game winning streak going into Friday night's Game 3 against the Spurs, Elie is comfortable with the new Rockets.

"We're playing better than we did last year," he said.

Padres break losing streak against Expos, win by 4-3

By The Associated Press
Finally, two years after their last win over the Expos, the San Diego Padres beat Montreal again.

"If we would have lost this one, I think I would have jumped out of a plane," Padres manager Bruce Bochy joked. "It didn't come easy."

Ken Caminiti hit a two-run homer and Scott Sanders allowed two hits in 7 1-3 innings Thursday night as San Diego ended a 15-game losing streak against Montreal with a 4-3 victory.

"I came to the ballpark wanting to pitch good enough to get us into the late innings," Sanders said. "I wanted to end this streak. It's been a long time."

San Diego hadn't beaten Montreal since July 24, 1993. The Padres had lost 14 straight at Olympic Stadium since July 19, 1992.

Caminiti, acquired from Houston in a 12-player trade last December, said he was fully aware of the Padres' string of futility against Montreal.

"I wasn't party to it before, but I'm part of it now," Caminiti said. In other games, Los Angeles beat New York 3-0, St. Louis beat Atlanta 4-1, Pittsburgh beat Florida 3-1, Cincinnati beat Chicago 6-2 and San Francisco beat Philadelphia 3-1 in a game shortened to 5 1/2 innings by rain.

Sanders (3-0) allowed two hits in 7 1-3 innings. Trevor Hoffman pitched the ninth for his fourth save. Butch Henry (0-3) walked Sanders with the bases loaded in the second. Caminiti's fourth homer of the season came in the fifth after Steve Finley doubled leading off.

Dodgers 3, Mets 0
Tom Candiotti (2-3) pitched a five-hitter and got his 11th shutout and 64th complete game. He struck out five and walked two.
Tom Prince hit his first homer and an RBI double as Los Angeles shut out New York for the second straight game. The Mets, who have lost five straight, are scoreless in 23 consecutive innings. The Dodgers swept their first three-game series at Shea Stadium since Aug. 8-10, 1975.

Pete Harnisch (0-2) allowed two runs and seven hits in seven innings.

Cardinals 4, Braves 1
Ken Hill (3-0) allowed six hits in 6 2-3 innings and had two hits and an RBI as St. Louis stopped visiting Atlanta's six-game winning streak.
Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his ninth save, completing a six-hitter that gave the Cardinals just their third victory in 10 games.

Catcher Tom Paganuzzi, given a rest Wednesday so he could face Steve Avery (1-2), had two doubles, an RBI and scored twice. Paganuzzi is 10-for-27 (.370) against Avery.

Pirates 3, Marlins 1
Orlando Merced doubled in Jay Bell to break a 1-1 tie in the eighth, giving Pittsburgh its second win in 10 home games.

Bell opened the inning with a double off Bobby Witt (1-3) and scored despite falling after stumbling in mud around third base. Merced, who went 3-for-4 and has nine hits in his last 15 at-bats, advanced on a groundout and scored on Jeff King's sacrifice fly.

Dan Plesac (2-0) pitched a scoreless eighth and Dan Miceli finished for his fifth save in six chances.

Reds 6, Cubs 2
Eddie Taubensee drove in two runs, Reggie Sanders homered and visiting Cincinnati took advantage of two errors to win for the 14th time in 17 games.

John Smiley (2-0) allowed eight hits in 7 2-3 innings, and Xavier Hernandez finished for his second save.

Cincinnati took a 3-2 lead in the sixth with two runs off Mike Morgan (0-1), making his first start since July 27.

Giants 3, Phillies 1 (5 1/2 innings, rain)

Mark Leiter scattered four hits in 5 2-3 innings as San Francisco snapped a three-game losing streak in a game called after a delay of 2 hours, 49 minutes.

It was the Phillies' first loss in five games and only their second in the last eight.

Leiter (2-1) gave up a solo homer to Dave Gallagher, the first batter he faced.

The Giants scored off Tyler Green (3-3) on Matt Williams' RBI single, a wild pitch and Royce Clayton's sacrifice fly.

Orville Moody, a veteran of 14 years in the Army, won the 1958 All-Army golf title and the 1962 All-Service championship.

Attempts to harness Panhandle wind fall short of goal

Latest experiment in generating energy comes to end after spending $1 million

By MAX ALBRIGHT
Amarillo Globe-News
AMARILLO, Texas - Windmills were, and are, an economic success in the Texas Panhandle.
Windmills, actually wind-driven pumps, draw water up from Ogallala Aquifer. These picturesque machines changed the industry and the image of this region, which once was known as the Great American Desert, and now is a center of agriculture.

However, most attempts to rope the wind and tame it as an energy source have failed.

Southwestern Public Service Co. reports that its recent $1 million, 2-1/2-year experiment to generate electricity from the wind showed some promise but also many problems.

"For future wind projects, Southwestern's experience will enable it to make better, more knowledgeable choices," Stephen Jones, a strategic analyst for SPS, said in his report about the project.

So, for today, the Texas Panhandle wind remains a plentiful, seemingly inexhaustible and largely untapped natural resource - and it's still wild and free.

The "Wind Resource Atlas of the United States" shows the High Plains, particularly the area around Amarillo, as rich in such resources. Right now, if the wind is blowing, some of the electricity used in Amarillo homes, businesses and churches is being generated by wind driven turbines.

The $1 million experiment by Southwestern Public Service Co. and the state of Texas to use the legendary Texas Panhandle wind to generate electricity has come to an end. However, the three, 16-ton generating turbines, mounted on 160-foot-tall poles outside of town, are still intact and will continue to operate.

If the wind is blowing at least 10 miles per hour, these turbines should be turning and putting electricity into the SPS system, said Jones.

SPS found many problems in producing wind-generated electricity, according to its study on the demonstration.

While the wind blows in the Texas Panhandle, it doesn't always blow with enough force to turn the turbines - and sometimes the wind doesn't blow at all, Jones said.

Also, the yearly wind patterns don't match SPS's need for electricity, making it difficult for wind generators to backup the traditional coal and gas driven turbines during peak times of power use.

For instance, SPS's customers use the most electricity in the summer.

But the wind here blows more frequently in spring, less so in summer, Jones said.

But even in springtime the winds come and go.

On a spring day chosen at random - May 15, 1994 - National Weather Service records show the wind speed reached 30 mph at 8 a.m., then, hour by hour: 31 mph, 23 mph and 27 mph at 11 a.m. It continued to slow down. But by 7 p.m. the wind was calm; 8 p.m. calm; then increased in speed to 3.5 mph, 4.5 mph and 5.5 mph, reaching 7 mph at midnight.

SPS does not store electricity, but generates and sells its product on demand with the flip of a switch, said Phil Roth, public information supervisor for SPS. So electricity made on windy days can't be saved for calm days, he said.

Besides providing the wind, weather played other important, mostly damaging roles.

High winds, estimated to gust between 68 and 96 mph, broke one of the 38-foot long blades on one of the turbines on June 28.

Lighting and severe weather caused shutdowns. The turbines, suspended in the air, often vibrated and shut down. At one point all three units shut down because of excessive vibration.

To get the wind machines repaired, SPS had to call out of town, to Burkburnett, near Wichita Falls.

There was not an adequate supply of spare parts, and the company that installed the wind turbines went out of business in the United States.

The Texas Governor's Energy Office put up $594,888 for the 2-1/2-year demonstration of wind power. The money came as a result of an overcharging lawsuit settled with Exxon, according to the SPS report.

SPS put up $450,000 and agreed to operate and maintain the wind machines for 2-1/2 years and publish the results in a report.

With the total $1,044,888, each kilowatt hour produced by the windmills cost 10.9 cents, according to the report. This compares to 3.7 cents, the usual SPS production cost, Roth said.

Despite the problems and the high costs, the 2-1/2-year experiment did provide electricity for about 200 residential customers each year, Jones said.

Still that's just a whistle in a whirlwind, as SPS serves 356,000 customers.

In 1992, SPS sold 18.3 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity, but only about 1 million kilowatt-hours were produced by the wind.

Jones said SPS now has more understanding of wind and wind-turbine performance, operations and capacity. It was the utility company's first venture in owning and operating such equipment.

If wind is ever used to generate electricity on a mass scale, it will come after more than 100 years of trial and error. Off and on, the windmill has been used as a source of electrical power since P. La Cour's mill was built in Denmark in 1890, according to historical sources.

One of the many stories from the early days of Amarillo, during the 1890s, is a bellowing tale of a wind-powered wagon.

One day, according to the account, Amarillo residents looked out with awe and wonderment at an odd-shaped object drifting across the short-grass prairie.

Coming in from the east of town, this High Plains rambler was a stripped down wagon with wind-filled sails.

The tongue of the wagon was being used for steering.

L.B. Wallace, a former sailor, was the pilot of the wind wagon, according to "In The Cattle Country: History of Potter County" by Della Tyler Key.

Wallace and brother-in-law William Thorne had traveled from Washburn and were on their way to Deaf Smith County when they came to Amarillo.

According to the story, the wind wagon blew on and nearly gusted to Canyon, before the winds went calm and the sails folded.

The wagon was lassoed and brought back to Amarillo.

Students experience effects of drunk driving, but consume not a drop of alcohol beverage

By DAVID GOODMAN
Associated Press Writer
FARMINGTON HILLS, Mich. (AP) - Stephanie Hillman got a taste of what it feels like to drive drunk - without taking a drink. She didn't like it much.

"It was really scary," the senior at Farmington North High School said after taking a spin in Chrysler's Drunk Driving Simulator. "It gives you a feeling for what it's like to be out of control in a moving vehicle."

She and hundreds of other Farmington public school students recently took turns on a driving range in a specially modified Dodge Neon.

There's reason for educators' and parents' concern.

In 1993, 158 teen-agers died in Michigan traffic accidents, according to the state Office of Highway Safety Planning. Fifteen percent of those teens (in Michigan) had alcohol in their blood at the time of the accident.

Nationwide in 1993, 5,413 teen-agers nationwide died in traffic accidents, according to the Insurance

Institute for Highway Safety. Of the teen victims, 2,354 were driving, and 484 of them - 21 percent - had at least 0.1 percent alcohol in their blood, the institute said. That is the definition of drunkenness in most states.

About 41 percent of the total 1,269 fatal crashes in 1993 in Michigan involved alcohol, the office said. The figures are the latest available.

Nationally, alcohol was a factor in 17,461 crash deaths in 1993, or 43.5 percent of all traffic deaths that year, the National Highway Traffic Safety Institute said.

The modified Dodge Neon simulates the effect of alcohol on the ability to drive. An operator in the front passenger seat programs the car's brakes and steering to mock the slower responses of someone who has been drinking.

"As soon as it clicks in, the steering wheel is harder to turn, the brakes barely kick in," said senior John Aratari, who drove the car May 11.

At least one student could vouch for its realism.

"I am recovering. I have driven drunk," senior Steve Mehler said after his spin on the course. "I think this is really great. That's really how it is."

Drivers who safely navigate the range on their first, "sober" run leave a trail of overturned cones when they try to do it "drunk." Even experienced drivers such as teacher Linda Lethemon left mayhem in their trail.

Lethemon bobbed through the course, then failed to stop when a mechanical "pedestrian" popped up in front of her.

"Wow, she plowed him!" one student said.

Like most high schools today, North Farmington gives students a strong anti-drunken driving message, Principal Deborah Clarke said.

The school has an active chapter of Students Against Driving Drunk, or SADD, and the strong support of Farmington Families in Action, she said. The school plans to display the remains of a wrecked car to show the dangers of auto accidents.

But in the fight to get young people's attention, one simulator can be worth 1,000 dire warnings, according to Assistant Principal Kathy Kalapos.

"Educational research says with experiential learning, the retention rate is 75 percent," much better than talk or printed words, Kalapos said.

Students agreed that young people have trouble translating the known dangers of drunken driving to their own lives. They said they are well aware of the risks their classmates take with alcohol.

"People think it's not going to happen to them," said Aratari, who told of seeing a driver who had been drinking run a car over a curb. "The kids brag about it. A lot of kids, it doesn't hit home."

Odessa student earns high honor for personal experience painting

By SARAH WESTBROOK
The Odessa American
ODESSA, Texas - An emotional response to violence led an Odessa High School senior on a path to winning a national art award.

Jessie Madrid recently won the 1995 Hallmark Award, presented by the National Scholastic Art and Writing Awards, for his oil painting titled "In Memory Of."

The self-portrait, one of 3,000 entries in the competition, was chosen out of five nominees for the award. The painting is being shown at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

Madrid said he was flattered by the recognition. "I was real excited, real happy. I thought there was other ones that was better than mine," he said.

Madrid, who lived in the projects of El Paso, saw his best friend get shot. He said the painting was in response to how violence has affected him.

"When I finished it, it looked like I was thinking about all my friends that I lost ... and all the suffering that I went through and that my family went through," Madrid said.

Art has always been a part of his life, Madrid said.

"In the streets, I was always painting walls," he said. "But (instructor Polly) Ms. Sheehan brought it out in me."

"It's what I do best and it makes me feel good," Madrid added.

"It's the only way I can express myself."

As a result of the award, Madrid will receive a plaque and a $100 check.

Sheehan said Madrid's painting was chosen because of its potency. "It's very strong. It's so emotional," she said.

Sheehan said many students and teachers noticed the work at a Lubbock art show.

"Everyone that walked in the room did a double take," she said.

After the art show, Madrid received six letters from Lubbock and Amarillo students moved by the painting.

"It was very emotional to them and they said, 'I know where you're coming from.'" Sheehan said

The 16-by-20 inch painting shows Madrid thinking about how tragedy has touched him. Graffiti is in the background.

To create the painting, Madrid posed for a photograph and then copied it for the painting.

Sheehan said the art classes at OHS allow students to express their emotions.

'Pink Lemonade' classes used to impart manners

By LINDA LEAVELL
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Eight young ladies were enjoying pink lemonade and cookies together when the conversation veered toward the bleeding associated with losing a tooth and the cash that accompanies the event.

Not the best choice of topics for a class on table manners and etiquette.

Their teacher, Charlene Levering, gently reminded them that discussing money at the table "might embarrass the Tooth Fairy" and talking about blood could make some squeamish guests "get up and run to the powder room."

The 5- and 6-year-olds nod knowingly. They see the mistake.

It is just one of the lessons they will learn at Mrs. Levering's sessions, called Pink Lemonade. She has been teaching the classes - mostly to girls - at her home for 12 years.

While she loves instructing the girls in the proper way to hold a goblet, select a fork or fold a napkin, the gracious, soft-spoken teacher admits to starting Pink Lemonade for self-preservation.

As a first-grade instructor at Dallas' prestigious Hockaday School for girls, Mrs. Levering ate with the children during lunch.

"It was driving me crazy because the girls were sitting on their knees and sprawling around over the table and it was very uncomfortable to eat like that. So I started in with a few little suggestions and the mothers ... asked why didn't I do this in the summertime," she said.

The summer classes burgeoned into a year-round business. Last year, Mrs. Levering retired from Hockaday after 23 years.

Mrs. Levering began cultivating her interest in etiquette as a child. Her father was a florist and her mother always put her in charge of setting the table.

She attended Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, during the late 1940s. As a sorority officer, she was expected to prepare the pledges for social gatherings, particularly in terms of what they should or shouldn't discuss.

"Mainly, because the idea was to be discreet. It wasn't that we were trying to form an absolute yes or no way to converse with people. But we didn't want to embarrass people or to have them embarrass us," she said.

Contrary to some opinions, experts say, etiquette is not about snobbishness, but rather learning how to be kind and polite.

"I think unfortunately that a lot of people have the idea that etiquette is pretentious and elitist," said Anne Dudley, a Richmond, Va.-based etiquette consultant who conducts classes and seminars for business professionals, college students and children.

"I think if you really try to be thoughtful and be polite ... that takes care of a multitude of things."

Mrs. Levering agrees that teaching arrogance is not the objective. For example, there is nothing snobby about stressing that "you're welcome" always should follow "thank you" or that the girls should thank the adult hosts at a birthday party.

"The parents see this as an important part of their child's education. Not that they're trying to make their child be (elitist)," she said. "It's the fact that they really care about their children. They want them to be well-liked.

"And a well-mannered child is well-liked. And a poorly mannered child is tolerated."

Clearly, the concept of teaching etiquette extends beyond children. Several consultants, like Ms. Dudley, teach professional people how to behave in a business environment. Some colleges are offering classes to teach their graduates table etiquette and other manners for interviewing.

At Mrs. Levering's classes, the girls come dressed in their finest and a different one performs hostess duties each week. The hostess pours the drinks, serves the snack and sits at the head of Mrs. Levering's long dining room table, set with china and crystal.

During a recent class, 6-1/2-year-old Valen Chefchis did the honors. Her mother, Kay Chefchis, said Valen is a shy child who has no older siblings from whom to learn social graces.

The Chefchises enrolled their daughter because they want to make her feel at ease in various settings, improve her interpersonal skills and teach her to listen and respect others. Already, Mrs. Chefchis said, they have seen a new self-esteem in Valen.

Mrs. Levering knows that many parents would like to teach proper behavior to their children. But she fills in where busy parents cannot.

"It has to do with the culture of the family. If they put a high priority on table manners, they'll be here," she said. "If they put a higher priority on being a good soccer player, they won't be here."

America's best legitimate advertising buy is still the local newspaper that is involved in your community. Junk mailers don't contribute a dime to the betterment of Hereford. They take and don't give back.

265 Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS; CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

THEY MAKE A LOT OF NOISE WHILE TELLING AMOS HE SHOULD NOT GO!

AMOS - THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHECY
AGAINST THE ADVICE OF FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS, AMOS, THE HERDSMAN, INTENDS TO ANSWER THE CALL OF THE LORD AND TRAVEL NORTH TO ISRAEL IN ORDER TO PREACH TO ALL THE SINNERS....

HOW CAN I DISOBEY THE LORD'S COMMAND?! I MUST WARN THE SINNERS IN ISRAEL THAT THEIR TIME IS SHORT!

HAVING MADE THE DECISION, HE LEAVES IMMEDIATELY, WHILE HIS FRIENDS ARE STILL PREDICTING DIRE DISASTERS FOR HIM....

THE WAY IS ROUGH AND WILD AS HE TRAVELS TO THE NORTH....

...AND THERE ARE MANY HIDDEN DANGERS ON A JOURNEY SUCH AS THIS, NOT THE LEAST, ARE THE BANDS OF ROBBERS WHO WAIT IN THE WILD HILLS TO RELIEVE THE WEARY TRAVELER OF THE TASK OF CARRYING ANYTHING VALUABLE THAT HE MAY HAPPEN TO OWN!

Next Week
THE VIEW FROM A HILL!

AP Science Writer
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Obsessive shoppers who risk bankruptcy to buy things they don't really want or need can be helped by a pill already used to treat other compulsive behaviors, a preliminary study suggests.

It's the first formal study of medication for the condition, which has no standard treatment, experts say.

Compulsive shopping or buying affects approximately 1 percent to 6 percent of the American population. Truly serious cases probably appear in less than 1 percent, said psychiatrist Donald Black.

The problem appears to be more common in women, who mostly buy clothing, shoes and makeup, than in men, who tend to purchase electronic gear and clothes, Black said.

"Most of my patients are thinking about buying all the time," Black said. "They kind of arrange their lives around shopping."

But their euphoria in the store is followed by guilt and disgust when they think about what they've done, he said. The urge to shop can be so powerful that people go bankrupt or lose their job because they were too busy shopping to show up on time, he said.

Black, an associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Iowa School of Medicine in Iowa City, presented results of the treatment study Wednesday at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

He found that of the 10 compulsive shoppers in the study, nine cut their shopping at least in half after they started taking fluvoxamine twice a day.

Fluvoxamine is most commonly used in the United States to treat obsessive-compulsive disorder, a condition marked by intrusive thoughts and irresistible rituals like hand-washing.

The study was sponsored by two pharmaceutical companies that jointly market the drug in the United States, Solvay Pharmaceuticals of Marietta, Ga., and The Upjohn Co. of Kalamazoo, Mich.

After a few days to a few weeks on the drug, the patients were shopping less often and spending less money, starting to pay off debts and having fewer arguments with their spouses, which had frequently been triggered by the shopping bills, Black said.

Moreover, "if they had an urge to shop they could use willpower to control themselves, whereas before ... it just wouldn't work," Black said.

One man, who had been basically living off his wife's income while spending nearly all his take-home pay on clothes, cut his purchases to $200 a month from $800 a month.

Dr. Gary Christenson, an assistant psychiatry professor at the University of Minnesota who wasn't involved with the study, called it exciting because of the lack of a standard treatment.

"This is an impressive first study" that should be followed up.

Christenson said researchers now need to compare the effect of the medication to that of placebo pills, without the patient knowing which kind of pill is being used. That would show whether any effect of the drug is biological or just a psychological reaction to being treated.

Black said such a study is scheduled to begin within six months.

'Zhivago' star returns to native land, Egypt

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - It is arguably the greatest entrance in the history of film: a small speck in the shimmer of desert heat, growing imperceptibly into a galloping figure, finally arriving to face the apprehensive T.E. Lawrence.

"Lawrence of Arabia" in 1962 brought Omar Sharif instant stardom, an Academy Award nomination, and an international career that continues to this day. Three years later, he played the title role in another David Lean epic, "Doctor Zhivago."

The film is observing its 30th anniversary with the theatrical release of a fully restored print and a digital soundtrack. Turner Entertainment and MGM launched the rerelease with a gala screening at the Motion Picture Academy theater, attended by cast members Sharif, Geraldine Chaplin and Rod Steiger.

Sharif appeared for an interview during his visit here, and he seemed little changed at 63. Grayer, of course, but dashing handsomeness and with his wholesome, candid charm intact.

He has grown more philosophical with the years, analyzing his life with startling honesty.

"Being on the move for 30 years, I have no friends," he remarked.

"Hundreds of acquaintances, yes. But real friends, no. The only friends I have are the ones I knew in Egypt when I was young. For that reason, I moved back to Cairo on March 21. "Yes, Cairo is a difficult city.

When I left, there were 3 million people. Now there are 15 million. The city is dirty and overcrowded. But when the lights go on at night, you don't see the dirt. It is a beautiful city all over again.

"And I see my friends there. Good friends, ones you can pick right up with, no matter how many years have passed.

"People were amazed when I gave up the apartment I had in Paris for 20 years. It was easy. Paris has become a difficult city to live in. I still go there, but I am much happier in Cairo."

Of Lebanese parentage, he was born Michael Shalhoub in Alexandria and attended college in Cairo. When he converted to Islam, he took the name Omar El-Sharif. He worked in the family's lumber business until he was cast in a 1953 film. Soon he was Egypt's most popular star, and he caught the eye of Lean.

Sharif became an international star in good films ("Doctor Zhivago," "Funny Girl") and bad ("Che!" "Oh Heavenly Dog!"). Lately, he admitted, his work is mostly in television miniseries.

"With my age and accent, I'm not easy to cast in movies," he said with no hint of self-pity. "When you are over 60, producers aren't interested. Most of the pictures today are aimed at the kids. Action is what they want."

"No matter what the picture, I have to be a foreigner. It's impossible for me to play an American."

Here's some food for thought: Surveys show three out of four newspaper readers read the food and cooking sections.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message. People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.
