Local student serves as page in U.S. House

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

Wondering if politics had any part in his life, Nathan Diller a Hereford High School senior, applied for the chance to serve as page for U.S. Representative Larry Combest this past summer.

He was selected to be a congressional page and then selected by House Speaker Newt Gingrich to spend July in Washington, D.C. working with students from across the country.

The opportunity was an excellent way for Diller and other students to get a firsthand look at how Congress works.

He was chosen because of his excellent academic standing as well as his involvement in extracurricular activities.

Prior to that experience, Diller took part in the American Legion of Texas Boys State in Austin from June 3 through June 9.

He and fellow classmate, Jeb Skiles, were chosen for Boys State through the Hereford chapter of the American Legion Post.

He and other students stayed in the O'Neill House office building during their stay in Austin.

The students took part in simulated government activities.

"We set up state government," Diller said. "We organized precincts, counties and states. We were then randomly selected to serve on two different parties."

Diller was elected as a state representative. He was then elected by the representatives to be Speaker of the House.

He was given a gavel to commemorate his election as speaker.

"We divided into committees and wrote bills. On the last day we met in the state chamber and were able to debate and pass some of those bills," he said.

"After the legislative session Governor Bush and Speaker Pete Lancy came in and visited with everyone," Diller said.

After his stay in Austin, he went to Washington, D.C. and worked as a page from July 7 through August 5.

As part of Diller's duties, he worked on a daily basis with members of Congress on the floor of the House of Representatives, as well as throughout the United States Capitol Building and the House Office Buildings, helping wherever he was needed.

He had the opportunity to meet many of the members of the House and watch them work.

"One of the highlights of my time in D.C. was the opportunity to be on the floor of the House of Representatives and watch the debate and see actual legislation being passed," Diller said.

He met many members of Congress as well as President Bill Clinton.

While in the nation's capital he found that many of the politicians were normal people.

"The members are actually real people. They seem like really nice, normal people," he said.

On the last day, he and other pages had the opportunity to eat lunch with Combest and his staff. Combest, a Drive to create special park gathers support, first donation

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A drive to create a special park surrounding the new Hereford Aquatic Center is more than gathering financial support. It's designed to bring the community together, working toward a common goal.

Only a few days after the City Commission announced plans to put a Priority One stamp on the project and seek help from citizens, a Hereford family made the first donation to the fund.

Lola Curtsinger of Hereford, her son, Sam Curtsinger of Hereford, and her daughter, Joyce Curtsinger Powell of Amarillo, sent $40 to the city in memory of O.C. Curtsinger.

Mrs. Curtsinger said the donation represented a dollar for every year her husband worked for the City of Hereford.

Dedication like this is what the City Commission hopes to encourage.

Mayor Bob Josserrand has emphasized the hope that the park campaign "will bring us together as a community."

The City Commission gave the drive a boost by authorizing an extra $15,000 expenditure in the budget for next year to place a fulltime employee at work at the park.

And, the commission has called on citizens to join in the effort to make the park, estimated at approximately 12 acres, a "showplace" in Hereford.

Some funding for landscaping was earmarked in the Hereford Aquatic Center project and some trees and plants already have been purchased, City Manager Chester Nolen reported.

But the space at the park is too large for the amount of money available to the city.

Some imagination is needed to see a park where now only raw earth is dotted with the usual assortment of West Texas weeds.

The area bounded by 14th St. and 15th St. on the south and north and Avenue C on the west has a way to go before it can be called a "park," in the true sense of the word.

Sooner or later -- city officials like to emphasize sooner -- the area will feature a walking path, picnic shelters, play areas for youngsters, benches and lots and lots of grass and trees.

Taking advantage of a natural depression in the park area, a fishing pond for children has been created. Besides the recreational use, the pond will have a practical value. Runoff from heavy rains will be channeled into the pond.

A bridge already has been built and installed over a narrow water path between the two parts of the pond. When the time comes, fish will be stocked.

Mayor Josserrand observed that the Curtsinger contribution is the kind of response he and the commission hope will come from Hereford residents.

In her letter to the city with the donation, Mrs. Curtsinger pointed out that her husband "took such pride in every new accomplishment for Hereford."

Curtsinger, who died almost three years ago, went to work for the City of Hereford in 1946, she said. "I know how proud he'd be of this great achievement," she said about the Hereford Aquatic Center and park.

During City Commission discussions on the project, Commissioner Wayne Winget suggested that residents consider donations to the development fund as memorials to members of their families.

Commissioners emphasized that an appropriate acknowledgement of each gift will be made.

The enthusiastic reception given by city residents to the new aquatic center is a springboard for the park project, indicated Commissioner Roger Eades.

With the $1.25 million aquatic center as the focal point, Mayor Josserrand said, the project not only will produce a showplace but give residents an opportunity to display unity of purpose.

A fulltime employee "will get it shiny" for the community and visitors, he remarked. "This can do a tremendous public relations job for Hereford," Josserrand added.

While the city is placing special emphasis on the aquatic center park, there is no let-up in determination for improvement in all city parks. At a recent meeting, commissioners reviewed accomplishments made in the last year.

Funding for the program set one year ago is from the $1 per month voluntary park assessment by city utility

School budget hearing, meeting slated Tuesday

A Hereford Independent School District public hearing and trustees meeting that were postponed last week will be held Tuesday night in the school administration building, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue.

The public hearing will be at 6 p.m. and will relate to a proposed tax revenue increase by the school district.

Following completion of the hearing, the board will enter regular session at 6:30 p.m.

Both meetings are open to the public. Handicap parking is available and the building is wheelchair-accessible.

Included for consideration during the regular trustees meeting is a 10-item action agenda.

Trustees will be asked to vote on a variety of issues, including action on a lawsuit against the school district.

In addition, they will consider bids for replacement of the track at Whiteface Stadium, plus bids on the demolition or purchase of Old Central School.

Trustees also will be asked to vote on a plan to videotape board meetings; will consider campus improvement plans; and will consider a request for use of the district's gymnasium; and will hear a report from a city/school committee regarding an auditorium.

Also on tap is a six-item discussion agenda, which includes talk about administrators' contracts, agenda format, neighborhood schools and a proposed tennis facility.

Items on the discussion agenda may not be brought for a formal vote, but may be moved to the next month's action agenda on consensus by the board.

The meeting will also include a time for public comments, general reports and assistant superintendents' reports.

Fire appears contained in posh New York area

EASTPORT, N.Y. (AP)--With winds dying down, firefighters expected to contain a brush fire that scorched 6,000 acres over two days in this posh resort area.

Despite flames leaping 40 feet high, the 12-square mile blaze destroyed only one home and a lumberyard, and no serious injuries were reported.

Gov. George Pataki said Saturday morning there is "a real likelihood" the fire will be contained today.

"The worst is clearly behind us," the governor said at a news conference at the fire command center. He described the firefighting that remained to be done as a "mop-up operation."

From the command center, there were few signs this morning of the fast-moving fire that had threatened million-dollar real estate and closed roads and rail lines at the height of the summer tourist season.

The giant plumes of smoke were gone, and the sky was blue. As the fire weakened, authorities were investigating the possibility that it had been intentionally set. Neighboring Nassau County dispatched a specially trained dog to sniff for traces of accelerants.

"The fact that the winds have died down is a godsend," said Tim Ryan, a Suffolk County spokesman. "We still have not had any precipitation in 19 days. We need rain."

No residents were hurt, but 40 firefighters suffered minor injuries, including smoke inhalation and exhaustion, said Sara Gaffney, a spokeswoman for Pataki.

The numbers didn't account for frayed nerves, as homeowners watched billowing smoke clouds rise above a wide arc of flames.

More than 1,500 volunteer firefighters continued today to wage a ground war against the fire with hoses, shovels and picks. Five helicopters had earlier dumped 200-gallon loads of water, pumped from a nearby lake, onto the 5 mile long, 1 1/2-mile wide fire zone.

Erdmann, ex-Texas pathologist, convicted of weapons violation

SEATTLE (AP)--Former Texas pathologist Ralph Erdmann, convicted Friday of felony machine-gun possession, will be returned to his home state after he has served his sentence, one of his attorneys says. Erdmann, who lost his job in Texas for faking and botching autopsies, faces up to a year in prison at sentencing Sept. 22 before King County Superior Court Judge Patricia Aitken.

Defense attorneys will ask that he be sentenced to time served, said Juanita Holmes, a public defender. Friday marked Erdmann's 115th day in custody since his May 3 arrest in the weapons case, she noted. Bail had been set at $100,000.

After sentencing, "I think we probably will appeal," Holmes said. "There are issues about the jury instructions that were given and pretrial motions and some of the court rulings on admission of evidence that we might want to appeal," she said. "We need to talk to Dr. Erdmann about that."

After he has served his sentence here, Erdmann "will be immediately extradited to Texas," she said. "He's already signed a waiver of extradition."

Erdmann, 69, was placed on 10 years' probation in Texas after he pleaded no contest in 1992 to felony charges that he fabricated a few autopsies and bungled others. Authorities there say possession of firearms is grounds for revoking his parole.

The machine-gun verdict, reached after less than a day of deliberation, is one in a series of blows to Erdmann, once well-known and widely respected for handling autopsies and related forensic work in more than 40 counties in west Texas.

In May, he was indicted in Randall County, Texas, on charges of aggravated perjury and tampering with evidence during a 1992 capital murder trial. The defendant, Johnny Lee Rey, had been sentenced to death but was granted a new trial earlier this year.

Erdmann moved to suburban Redmond about three years ago. Police there came across the machine gun by chance while investigating an unrelated matter.

He initially was arrested for investigation of being a felon in possession of a weapon, but that charge applies in Washington only to felons convicted of a violent crime.

He testified Wednesday that he forgot the gun, an M-16 he bought in the mid-1980s for his extensive gun collection, was among the guns he brought with him in the move from Texas.

Reception set for new doctor

Hereford's newest physician, Dr. Bruce Clarke, will be welcomed to town on Tuesday with a reception co-sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce and Hereford Regional Medical Center.

The reception is open to the public and will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 29, in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

Defense attorney Steve Witchley noted that Erdmann's wife was ailing with cancer when they relocated to Washington, the gun was purchased more than 10 years ago and several people were involved in moving the gun collection into storage.

Holmes said possible grounds for appeal include the definition of "constructive possession" in the jury instructions, which said it "occurs when there is no actual physical possession but there is dominion and control over the machine gun."

The weapon was in a storage locker about four miles from Erdmann's home.

Another possible challenge concerns "who bears the burden of proof in an unwitting-possession defense," Holmes said.

Aitken ruled the defense had the burden of proving it was more likely than not that Erdmann did not know the gun was in his possession.

"We felt that once we raised the issue, the state should bear the burden of disproving it," Holmes said.

In closing arguments Thursday, Deputy Prosecutor Lynne Kalina dismissed the possibility Erdmann did not know the M-16 was here.

He prided himself on his gun collection, knew exactly where the weapon was and could access it at his convenience, she said.

Nine Texas substance abuse centers win reinstatement

AUSTIN (AP)--Nine substance abuse treatment providers have won reinstatement of state funding after promising to reimburse the state if an ongoing investigation shows any prior grant money was mishandled.

The nine treatment centers are among 35 that were identified in an audit last month as possibly mispending more than $20 million in state money.

"This is a way to make certain the state is protected but at the same time to get these providers back on line to serve their clients," said Jerry Neef, executive assistant of the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Neef said the programs have not been cleared of misusing funds and that TCADA "absolutely" believes all nine programs had questionable spending.

Officials of the three Austin programs among the nine centers said the amount they owe the state will be small, compared with the amounts that TCADA auditors initially identified as questionable.

Bill Perkins, executive director of Greenbelt Transportation in Austin, said his company ultimately will reimburse the state about $4,000 -- one-tenth of what TCADA investigators initially said was owed. Perkins said the investigation smeared his reputation.

"I will sack groceries before I get involved with the state again because what they did was arbitrary and capricious," Perkins said. "I'm a red-blooded, 60-year-old patriot, for God's sake, and this thing has scared me about the process of government."

The TCADA, with an annual budget of about $180 million, provides drug and alcohol education to 2.7 million Texans a year and also funds programs that last year treated 65,000 Texans for addiction.

In addition to Greenbelt, programs whose funding were restored are Texans' War on Drugs and Workers Assistance Program, both of Austin; Land Manor Inc., Beaumont; The New Place Inc. and Nexus Inc., both of Dallas; Aliviane, El Paso; and Texas Alcoholism Foundation and The Institute for Healthy Families and Community, both of Houston.

Funding for the remaining 26 agencies could be reinstated later, TCADA officials said.

Neef said one program gave TCADA a lien on a building and others placed money in escrow.

A legislative task force is continuing its investigation of TCADA-funded programs.

Judge Ito warns attorneys that Simpson jury 'nearly tapped'

LOS ANGELES (AP)--A forensic scientist ended three days of questioning by O.J. Simpson's attorneys with the ambiguous declaration that there was "something wrong" with evidence collected at the murder scene.

Judge Lance Ito, meanwhile, again warned attorneys that sequestered jurors were nearly tapped.

"My impression is that they are tired. I wouldn't say close to the brink, but they're within eyesight," Ito said Friday.

During his testimony, Henry Lee pointed to smudges on packaging that held supposedly dry blood samples collected near the slashed bodies of Simpson's ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

"There may be reason to explain it," said Lee, considered the nation's top forensic scientist. "I don't know."

His testimony is designed to bolster defense theories of evidence tampering. The blood sample in question was taken from a drop found near the bodies. Police tests show it contains Simpson's genetic markers.

The blood was collected on cotton swatches one day after the June 12, 1994, murders. The swatches were left to dry overnight in a lab cabinet before being inserted into a paper packet, called a bindle.

In his experience, Lee said, evidence swatches always dry overnight, and it was questionable how a damp swatch ended up in Simpson's packaging.

"The only opinion I can give under these circumstances: something wrong," said Lee, who returns to court Monday for cross-examination.

Lee's comments capped a week dominated by developments outside the jury's presence, involving Mark Fuhrman and his ribald taped interviews.

Ito said he was spending the weekend reviewing the tapes and preparing for Tuesday's hearing on their admissibility. From 1985 to 1994, Fuhrman gave a series of recorded interviews to a North Carolina professor who turned them into a screenplay.

In them, Fuhrman boasts of on-the-job brutality and uses the word "nigger" more than 30 times. The tapes have not been officially released, but parts of them have been leaked to several news agencies.

Last summer, Fuhrman testified he found a bloody glove on Simpson's property and said he hadn't used the racial slur in reference to blacks in the past 10 years. The defense claims he is a racist capable of planting evidence. Ito has shown increasing concern about the trial's glacial pace and its toll on jurors sequestered since Jan. 11.

On Friday, he told them they had set a state record for most time spent under guard as a jury. The previous record holders: jurors in the Charles Manson trial more than 20 years ago.

customers. Approximately two-thirds of water-sewer users contribute to the fund.

In the last year, projects costing approximately $57,000 have been completed. Work costing about $50,000 and originally on the list for the current year will be finished during the coming year, along with about $40,000 in projects earmarked for 1995-1996.

Among improvements in the first year of the plan that have been completed are fencing at Veterans Park and Buena Vista Park; trees at Buena Vista, City Park and Ironwood Park; picnic tables at Buena Vista, Jaycee, Central and Langley; barbecue grills at Buena Vista, Central, Dameron and Langley, and benches at several locations.

Major expenditures still on the agenda will be in lighting at Buena Vista, Langley, Central and Dameron. Restrooms also will be built at Dameron.

Maintenance of the park system is a budget item along with expense of salaries and equipment. The city has earmarked $198,000 for the 1995-1996 fiscal year for the park department.

None of the voluntary assessment fund is spent for the regular budget items.

Since the scope of the landscaping job at the Aquatic Center is too large for funding from the voluntary fund or the city budget, the commission came to the conclusion that the public should be asked to help.

Tour firm lets modern people taste history

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The band of black soldiers rides up on horseback one recent evening in the full-dress uniforms U.S. cavalrymen wore a century ago, plumes bobbing on helmets above dark blue suits sparked with gold braid.

The riders at a reproduction adobe fort and restaurant in the mountains a half-hour west of Denver are re-enacting the lives of the legendary Buffalo Soldiers, who served in the Army beginning after the Civil War.

It's a long way from cocktails on the beach. But this is the start of a weeklong vacation for 18 people following the trail of the Buffalo Soldiers on the northern plains of Wyoming, Nebraska and South Dakota, courtesy of Dallas-based HistoryAmerica Tours.

HistoryAmerica devises trips based on sometimes obscure historical themes that may lead far off the beaten path.

"It's a learning vacation," said Pete Brown, who owns the company, a division of wife Julia's Tailored Tours Inc.

The couple run their business from the spacious den of a home in far north Dallas where Pete's daughter and son-in-law live and run a small business of their own.

Brown, 52, majored in history at the University of New Mexico, but didn't indulge his lifelong love until he was inspired by Ken Burns' 1990 Civil War series on public television.

Brown decided to join the line of work his wife had entered in 1987, when she started Tailored Tours, focusing first on tours for the disabled and later adding specialty tours.

"I just decided I'm going to take a leap at something I love, and I did it," Brown said.

HistoryAmerica offered its first trip in October 1991 and has become the busier part of the Browns' business, running 17 tours and cruises this year to Tailored Tours' seven or eight annually.

All of HistoryAmerica's tours are hosted by historian guides and include a suggested reading list. Many focus on the Indian Wars, such as the "Crazy Horse & Custer" trip out of Billings, Mont. Next month, a five-day tour from Amarillo follows warfare with Native Americans on the southern plains of the Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma, including a hike and campout at the Palo Duro Canyon.

Other journeys walk the footsteps of the Civil War, including "Riding With Forrest," which originates in Memphis, Tenn., and follows the career of Nathan Bedford Forrest, a controversial cavalryman and founder of the Ku Klux Klan.

Most of the tours last about a week, with land costs between about $130 and $160 per day, single occupancy. The Buffalo Soldiers tour, which ended Aug. 18, cost $895 per person.

This kind of niche marketing is a growing part of the $416 billion U.S. travel industry, said Shawn Flaherty, spokeswoman for the Washington, D.C.-based Travel Industry Association of America.

"Everyone is looking for a new way to cater to the traveling public, and with the advent of technology and communications it's a lot easier for them to provide a very specific product, which would cater to a specific interest of a specific group," Ms. Flaherty said.

"The mature market, and baby boomers too, are very interested in historical and cultural travel," she said.

In addition, many tour operators are taking part in a trend away from simple sightseeing and toward more educational and interactive travel, said Jerry DiPietro, president of the National Tour Association, based in Lexington, Ky.

HistoryAmerica - owned by its only two employees, the Browns - has seen its revenues double each year, to about $600,000. This is the first year it has been profitable, Brown said.

He expects profits to increase now that the company has conquered its fixed costs, built its direct mailing list to 30,000 - saving on advertising - and lured crucial repeat customers. Eighteen of the 24 people on a recent Kit Carson tour, for instance, have been on HistoryAmerica tours before.

"The topics isn't the problem. I've got tons of ideas. The marketing is the problem. And getting known and getting people to trust you - people are real leery of a new tour company," Brown said.

Two of the company's loyal customers are Kathi Plauster and her friend Rose Gregorich, nicknamed "Laverne and Shirley" in honor of their Milwaukee home. Ms. Plauster, a county employee, is scheduled to take her fifth trip next month.

"It's just a great group of people that you meet and it's a nice way to learn while you travel," she said. "And of course every tour we go on we're meeting more and more people. ... It's sort of like a happy family."

"We enjoy them a lot, and we're learning, too. I think I've read 11 or 12 books, and that's amazing, because I wasn't reading before," Ms. Plauster said.

Brown also hopes to continue broadening the business. The Buffalo Soldiers trip was created in a successful attempt to win more black customers, while an early August trip focusing on pioneer authors Willa Cather, Mari Sandoz and Laura Ingalls Wilder was geared toward women.

Karen McKellips, a professor at Cameron University in Lawton, Okla., said she was thrilled on the "Pioneering Women" tour to actually see the spots described in the authors' books, such as the Ingalls' South Dakota home depicted in "By the Shores of Silver Lake."

"It's just kind of eerie. There's the cottonwoods that Pa planted," Ms. McKellips said.

"I thought it was an excellent tour, a wonderful experience, and I'd like to go back with them again. It's my kind of touring," she said.

At least one other company does organize trips similar to HistoryAmerica. Campaign Tours, part of Danvers, Mass.-based Yankee Holidays, conducts historian-led battlefield tours, mainly on the Civil War.

"The last couple of years, with the addition of HistoryAmerica, the Smithsonian, and a lot of guys who were doing one tour a year out of their basement, the pieces of the pie are getting smaller," manager Brian Crowley said. "Definitely, the audience is really limited. They're highly focused tours. They're not really for your average traveler."

"The Civil War is my favorite subject. I just enjoy the job. I'm not going to get rich at it and I don't think anybody is," Crowley said.

The Browns voice similar sentiments.

"I don't think we're ever going to get rich at this thing, but it's worth it if you look at it in terms of the emotional fulfillment and the creativity of it. There's no business in the country just like this business. It came out of our heads," Brown said.

"It's work and love at the same time, and not everybody can say that about their jobs," said Mrs. Brown, 46. "It's just a good feeling at the end of the trip."

As congressional majority, GOP leading in campaign fund-raising

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - To the victors go the spoils.

After breaking the Democrats' 40-year grip on the House of Representatives last November, Republicans are reaping the rewards.

A check of campaign finance records for the first six months of 1995 shows that Texas Republicans, several of whom hold prominent leadership positions, are raking in contributions at a far faster clip than when they were in the minority.

Texas Democrats, meanwhile, are holding relatively steady in receipt of money from individual contributors and political action committees, according to Federal Election Commission campaign filings.

It's a well-documented phenomenon that money follows the ebb and flow of power on Capitol Hill.

"Given the dramatic shift of power that took place last November, it would be expected that you have a lot of institutional donors, PACs, the wealthy donors who give access contributions ... throwing money hand over fist, quite frankly, at the Republican leadership and Republican members in general," said Josh Goldstein of the Center for Responsive Politics, which tracks the flow of campaign funds.

In part, donors are playing catch-up, Goldstein said. "Because, to a certain extent they have been so focused on the Democrats for so long they need to cement either new or continued relations with this new majority," he added.

Dan Morgan, a Virginia-based fund-raiser for 40 congressional Republicans, acknowledged that the GOP landslide is making it easier to woo donors.

"The bottom line from the standpoint of fund raising is we are the kid in the candy shop - we want to take advantage of it," said Morgan, whose clients include House Majority Leader Dick Armey and fellow Texas Reps. Joe Barton of Ennis and Henry Bonilla of San Antonio.

"It's our turn now."

The power changeover has been especially kind to Rep. Tom DeLay, a six-term Republican from the Houston suburb of Sugar Land. With the GOP victory, DeLay ascended to the No. 3 leadership slot in the Republican firmament.

The pro-business, anti-regulation lawmaker's campaign receipts have swelled greatly amidst the changed political landscape - more so in absolute dollars than any other in Texas' 30-member House delegation.

DeLay took in $299,521 in PAC contributions for the first six months of this non-election year, compared to $58,010 during the first six months of 1993. Overall, he amassed $481,758 from January through June, compared to $72,990 for the similar period in 1993.

Three fellow Texas Republicans - Arney of Irving and powerful subcommittee chairmen Barton and Jack Fields of Humble - also have seen their campaign contributions soar.

Barton, who chairs a Commerce oversight subcommittee with broad investigative powers, made big strides. From a $23,000 PAC total for the first six months of 1993, Barton's PAC receipts climbed to $168,909 by this June. His totals went from $26,251 to $315,170.

Fields, who chairs the influential Commerce subcommittee orchestrating the rewrite of the nation's telecommunications laws, also has seen his fund raising jump. His PAC receipts vaulted from $30,500 to $105,500, with total fund raising climbing from $49,205 to $152,569.

In 1993, however, both Barton and Fields were vying for the Senate seat once held by Democrat Lloyd Bentsen - meaning that little of their attention was focused on House fund-raising.

"I don't see that much difference in terms of our overall fund-raising effort," said Barton's spokesman, Craig Murphy.

When compared to his 1991 off-election year fund raising, the gains made by Barton this year are more modest than when balanced against 1993. Fields' 1995 receipts far outpace both 1993 and 1991.

For many, the fund raising has picked up.

Arney, the No. 2 House GOP leader behind Speaker Newt Gingrich, raked in $159,600 in PAC money, up from $38,112 two years ago. His total fund raising for the period hit $191,253, compared to $112,833 two years earlier.

One powerful Texan isn't jumping on the bandwagon. Thirteen-term veteran Bill Archer, the Houstonian who chairs the influential House Ways and Means Committee, doesn't accept PAC money. His total fund raising so far this year is $7,565. Archer, however, isn't pressed for cash. As of midyear, he had a sizeable $734,765 war chest.

While many Texas Republicans are fattening their campaign coffers, most of the state's Democrats appeared to be holding their own, though several did see their fund raising dip.

Nine-term Dallas lawmaker Martin Frost, who chairs the House Democrats' campaign committee, is quickening his already rapid fund-raising pace in anticipation of yet another tough race in 1996. Frost has taken in $262,686 this year, up from $191,283 two years earlier. His PAC receipts hit $148,150, up from $105,460.

Senior Democrats and those with plum committee assignments aren't likely to see their contributions dwindle, Goldstein said.

"It's not so much political party but being in a position to influence legislation" that attracts campaign cash, Goldstein said. "Republicans are now in a better position to do that, but Democratic incumbents still have some degree of power."

Bernadette Budde, senior vice president of the Business-Industry PAC, said that PAC managers look at far more than party affiliation in deciding where to channel their money.

With the huge changeover in recent years - with half of Congress' 535 members elected since 1990 - and PAC budgets remaining relatively stable, PAC managers face added complexities in deciding where to donate, she said.

For that reason, PACs are placing a premium on examining candidates' loyalty to key issues, their influence and the competitiveness of races, she noted.

"You will attempt to support your friends, but it may mean you need to develop a stricter criteria for determining who your friends are," she said.

Message about drugs brought by balloonist

SAN MARCOS, Calif. (AP) - When he visits schools, churches and community groups with his hot-air balloon, Pat Murphy brings a message - and a memorial.

"I tell kids to stay away from drugs," said Murphy, president of the San Diego Balloon Association. "There's too many things like this in life to experience. You can get plenty high off a hot-air balloon."

He dedicates his visits to the memory of his stepson, Adrian Marshall, who was murdered in Vista last year after slipping in and out of drug abuse for years. Murphy said he hopes to inspire children to avoid a similar fate.

One of his recent hot-air balloon spectacles was at Paloma Elementary School, where he topped off a lesson that touched on everything from geography and math to science and art.

As about 100 students looked on in awe, Murphy and a handful of teachers and students took brief rides in a medium-sized hot-air balloon that was tethered to the ground.

Wide-eyed students were impressed by the balloon's size and the loud, blowtorch-like whoosh as burning propane heated the air inside the balloon.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says it's sure hard to take advice from folks who need it so badly themselves.

Parents should learn to laugh at themselves a lot. After all, their kids do.

Craig Smith, president of Hereford State Bank, called this week and asked if I thought it would be considered big news if HSB closed. "Sure," I said, "that would qualify for a fairly big headline."

"How big?" asked Smith. By then, I was wondering where the conversation was going. "Is HSB closing?" I asked.

He laughed and said, "No, but First National Bank did today." He was referring to Thursday's name change, with FNB becoming FirstBank Southwest. I just thought it showed the good-natured rivalry which exists here between the two banks.

As we visited, Smith went on to say he thought the merger added strength to an already strong organization.

We join others in the community in expressing our sympathy to Don and Linda Cumpton on the untimely death of their son, Brent. Many of those in mourning didn't know Brent, but they know Don and Linda.

Some of us have not dealt with the loss of a son or daughter...we cannot truly say "we know how you feel" ...but our hearts ache for them and we utter a silent prayer on their behalf.

We know the Cumpions will feel the love and concern of many friends in this community.

Dickie Geris, Uvalde banker and former Hereford resident, has been named a director of the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority, we noticed in a news item this week. Gov. George W. Bush made the appointment for a term to expire Jan. 1, 1997.

The authority provides financial assistance for the expansion, development and diversification of production, processing, marketing and export of Texas ag products.

Geris was with First National Bank of Hereford for 11 years and was active in community affairs here. He is a former director of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and a member of the National Cattlemen's Association. He is currently the executive vice president of First State Bank of Uvalde.

We read a story about a minister and his wife, reported by Roger Enloe, editor at Granbury, and it's worth passing on.

The minister and his wife had been married 45 wonderful years, when she faced major surgery. Just before being wheeled into the operating room, she whispered into her husband's ear:

"I want to tell you something, just in case things go wrong and I don't make it. I want you to look under our bed at home and you'll find a shoe box. But please promise me that you won't open it unless I pass away."

"Okay," said the preacher, "I promise."

The woman had the operation and everything went well. During her days of recovery, however, her husband couldn't stand it any longer. He had to see what was in the box.

He reached under the bed, grabbed the box and opened it. Inside were three eggs and $10,000 in cash.

When his wife fully recovered, the husband admitted to her that he had opened the box. "I saw what was in the box," he confessed, "and I have to ask you, why three eggs and all that money?"

The wife hesitated, but answered. "Each time I thought you preached a bad sermon, I put an egg in the box," she explained.

Well, the preacher thought to himself, "Only three bad sermons over 50 years...that's not bad at all."

"But honey," the husband persisted, "What about the $10,000?"

She answered quickly, "Each time I reached a dozen eggs, I sold them."

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Remember all the stories about the migration to California during the Dust Bowl and Depression Days. Texans, Okies, Arkies and other assorted types packed their meager belongings in rundown vehicles and hit the road. John Steinbeck made lots of money writing about those people.

Now it looks like their descendants or moral heirs are turning it all around.

The reason all this jumped up and bit me was a passenger on the same airline flight I took out of San Antonio confessed he moved to the Alamo City from the Los Angeles area to get out of the mess.

A few days earlier, while in northern New Mexico, I heard that a goodly number of Californians is moving to New Mexico and commuting on weekends to get their families out of the heavily populated areas.

Now, there is some difference in the 1930s and the 1990s. For one, the eastward move is for reasons far different from the earlier migration.

People on the West Coast, we're told, are looking for a less stressful way of life when they move toward the center of the nation. In the face of this shift in population, property values in some areas are skyrocketing. Schools that serve neighborhoods are becoming overcrowded. Certain services are strained to their limit.

In other words, the emigration is in danger of creating the same kind of situation the newcomers want to leave.

When the westward migration occurred in the '30s, the reasons were a whole lot different. But in the main, people were looking for a way to make a living, whether it was picking fruit or cleaning streets.

The Dust Bowl, though, created a special toughness in those who stayed put. Farmers, especially, were bombarded from all directions -- the lack of rain, low prices for the less than bountiful crops they grew and erosion of the land all added up to hard times.

Fallout from these circumstances stayed around for years. Even when World War II came along and boosted the economy (at what price?), people remained apprehensive about their family finances.

Growing up in the Depression was not an inconsequence for me. I didn't know any better. My mother made my clothes and cooked good meals, quite often with vegetables grown in a home garden and canned for winter use -- and my father worked at carpentry wherever he could find a job.

One year, he went to the Gulf Coast of Texas to work on a big construction project. The company offered him a permanent job, but he declined, preferring not to move as often as the work would have required.

So, the family stayed in the Panhandle, where we had our roots, a decision I've looked on with some ambivalence. Would it have been nice to have a taste of life in places other than West Texas? But, wasn't it nice to stay around grandparents, aunts and uncles and cousins?

We toughed it out. My grandfather went broke for the third time during the Depression, but recovered to dislike, heartily, both Hoover and FDR.

Although a lifelong Democrat, after the antics of FDR in the early days of his first administration, he declared he'd never vote for another Democrat for President.

As far as I know he lived up to his promise. He was a hard-headed man. He also was highly opinionated. When county politics didn't go to his liking, he decided to run for sheriff. He didn't win.

No one ever told me outright that he ran for office. I found out when I was doing research in old newspapers. Then, I hadn't the courage to ask my grandmother why he ran or why he lost. It must have been a family story that didn't get better with each telling.

Back to the eastward migration. Maybe what's happening is just history repeating itself. People look for better living and economic conditions.

As the saying goes, the grass always seems greener on the other side of the hill.

Last March, Reader's Digest magazine printed an article by Rowland Evans and Robert Novak titled "Clinton's Yo-Yo Diplomacy."

It looked at several areas where President Clinton is -- shall we say -- lacking in the field of international affairs.

While I am not Evans or Novak (neither am I a John Kennedy!), I thought it'd be interesting to look at these and see if anything's changed.

1. They say his foreign policy is characterized by "subordination of national security to domestic politics."

They cite the example of reversing the U.S. position on Cuban refugees so Lawton Chiles would win reelection as governor.

How about this one. When California (an important state for him in election politics) was going to get hit hard by job losses when bases closed, Clinton did everything he could to privatize military jobs to keep employment up (and voters happy) there. At the same time he virtually ignored Texas, which faces similar losses, but is not a politically feasible state for Clinton.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

2. The authors say his foreign policy suffers from "presidential indifference."

From what I've seen, Clinton has yet to take a decisive stand on any foreign policy decision, whether it's North Korea, Bosnia, Somalia or whatever.

Sure he interrupts his vacation to memorialize peacekeepers killed in Bosnia, but he has done nothing to make the world a safer place to live.

3. "Misguided multilateralism." Hillary Clinton is preparing to rush off to a U.N. conference on women in China (that bastion of women's rights!!!!).

Never mind the mandatory abortions, kidnappings into prostitution, assorted human rights violations involving Tiananmen Square and the treatment of Harry Wu.

The conference reportedly will advocate propagation of five "genders" instead of two (heterosexual male and female, homosexual male and female and transsexual), and will force hiring quotas on employers throughout the world (exactly half of all employees must be women).

4. "No global strategy."

It seems like Clinton is usually running around pushing domestic programs instead of thinking of foreign affairs. He attended D-Day festivities in Russia, but not in France and advocates re-naming VJ-Day. While I agree that the United States needs to put its energy into improving its own economy and country, we are the only world power left and need to be aware of what's going on.

President Reagan was accused of being out of touch during his two-term administration, yet he presided over the collapse of communism and the tearing down of the Berlin Wall.

All Clinton has seen is the continuing hostilities in the former Yugoslav Republics and the Russian slaughter of Chechens. Not to mention nuclear threats from North Korea and the revelation that Iraq has (or had) chemical weapons during the time of the Gulf War.

So, how does Clinton grade on foreign policy?

I think it's a low D- or high F-plus. In other words, his work on domestic policy -- political minded, fragmented and self-serving.

Can we handle four more years of this?

I'll leave that to you to decide.

An AP news analysis

Want to be president? Did you play football?

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) - Reforming college football doesn't sound like a topic for presidential intervention. It was one, though, for Theodore Roosevelt when he was in the White House, and for Woodrow Wilson, who would be.

"In their styles of promoting football reform, both Roosevelt and Wilson showed approaches that coincided with their strategies for political change while serving in the presidency," according to John S. Watterson III, adjunct professor of history at James Madison University and the University of Virginia.

With that handoff to link the sport and the substantive, he writes in the scholarly journal "Presidential Studies Quarterly" of football summit talks in Roosevelt's time, and of Wilson's intercession when there was pressure to ban the game as too violent.

As Watterson notes, college football isn't essential for a presidential resume. But it appears in a half-dozen, sometimes with portents of the style that would apply in office.

Ronald Reagan's, for example. He played right guard on his Eureka College team, no all-star by the account of his own coach, who said so after he got famous. But he was said to have been a guy who got the team loose, talked it up, joking and urging on the rest of the squad. A sort of locker room great communicator, by later accounts.

Or the dogged Richard Nixon, who wrote in his memoirs that he made the freshman team at Whittier College because there were only 11 eligible players. He warmed the varsity bench, playing only in the final minutes of games that were already won or lost.

Gerald R. Ford was the most successful of presidential players, linebacker and center on University of Michigan championship teams, and their most valuable player in 1934. When Ford was House Republican leader, Lyndon B. Johnson was said to have sniped that "he played football too long without a helmet."

Dwight D. Eisenhower was billed as one of the most promising backs in the East when he played at West Point, but a knee injury worsened in a cavalry drill forced him to quit the game.

Herbert Hoover was team business manager at Stanford University, type-casting for the managerial style that kept him involved in reorganizing the government long after his Depression-truncated presidency.

John F. Kennedy tried football at Harvard, but his trademark was touch football, the family sport that no Kennedy liked to lose.

Neither Roosevelt at Harvard nor Wilson at Princeton played college football, but both were dedicated to the game, by Watterson's account. It had been played with few officials and few enforced rules, so violently as to prompt recurrent moves to ban it. Walter Camp of Yale, their contemporary, engineered the rules that shaped the modern game.

With Harvard's president and faculty bent on suspending football, Roosevelt asked representatives of his school, Yale and Princeton to the White House on Oct. 9, 1905. Six football experts, Camp among them, sat with the president at the White House dining room table while Roosevelt talked about the problems of the game and the unfair practices that persisted.

They didn't all concur, Watterson writes, but Roosevelt got them to draft a statement pledging their school teams to fair, sportsmanlike play.

"Roosevelt in football as in social and economic reforms preferred to allow those entrusted with power, in this case the football establishment, to operate without interference as long as the excesses were held in check," according to Watterson.

But they weren't. The violence continued, reaching crisis with the death of 25 players in eastern college football. Roosevelt met and corresponded with coaches and officials in the movement that led to sweeping rules changes, among them the forward pass.

That still didn't do it; there were more deaths and more demands for abolition. Wilson, then president of Princeton, joined other university presidents in another effort at rules reform. "New rules are doing much to bring football to a high level as a sport, for its brutal features are being done away with and better elements retained," Wilson, then governor-elect of New Jersey, told the Princeton team on Nov. 10, 1910.

But those aren't the only elements retained, even now.

Watterson cited an investigative series of the era that showed improper recruiting, cheating on entrance exams, special financial aid, and payments to star players.

Nor have alumni interests changed much. Wilson, as a Princeton faculty member a century ago, told graduate groups that the university was world-noted for football, baseball and instruction.

"I suppose the first of these is what you want to hear about," he said.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

My family and I are trying to trace our grandfather who supposedly disappeared around 1925. His name was George Earl Woods.

We have info that on Oct. 16, 1918, he married a Pearl B. Lusk (or Rusk). I would like very much to hear from any of your readers who have any info on any of the family.

If anyone knows the whereabouts of any of the family, please write me. B.J.(Woods) Griffin Box 273 Quitaque, TX. 79255

Dear Editor:

I am writing as a concerned citizen of Hereford. I do not understand the destruction of old Central School. So many Hereford residents have received their education partly at Old Central. Can these students not rally to save their memories?

Old Central certainly holds historical significance to Hereford. Can the Historical Society not do something to save it? Can the building not be sealed off and saved for future generations to appreciate?

So many buildings share an important part of Hereford's historical makeup. These buildings must be preserved and appreciated. Our children and their children must have something with which to associate their past.

They must know where Hereford came from and where it has been to appreciate where it is now. This is part of Hereford's heritage.

I am appealing to past students of Old Central to work to preserve your memories, if not your own, then the memories of your parents. I realize it probably costs more to keep Old Central than it would to tear it down, but can a price be put on history?

Sincerely,
Kari E. Montelongo

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

"I am planning to have a funeral some day at which women faint, strong men sob in one another's arms, dogs howl, and everyone talks about what a wonderful human being I was." Me, too. So spoke Mr. Pewbrace, one of Henry's friends in I Tell A Lie Every So Often by Bruce Clements.

The book is aimed at adolescent readers, and is the story of a 14-year-old boy in old Missouri, his know-it-all 17-year-old brother Clayton, and what happens when Henry tells a lie about a white girl among the Indians to get his brother's mind off whether or not a neighbor girl sews padding into the front of her undergarments.

The story, told from Henry's viewpoint, is what happens to them on their way to rescue a cousin, supposedly taken by Indians. To tell the truth, I'm not sure whether I like the book or not, but I must have, or I wouldn't be writing about it. I think though, that the subtle humor and narrative style might be lost on a "young adult," but one that reads well would finish it in a day or two, so they wouldn't waste much time if they didn't like it--and they may like it better than I did.

Young adults are on our mind this week as we went to a workshop recently to find out how to better serve them. (Personally, I have a problem with calling a 13-year-old an adult of any kind, but that's the designation according to the book world.) There are a number of young people that use our library--even when they don't have to--and generally I enjoy working with them.

We have re-examined our young adult paperback shelf and made some room for some new material. Some items removed were duplicates, some were dated and had not been read in years, and some we felt would fit better in other areas.

There were some that had never been touched. The stories looked good to me, and I don't know why they haven't been read, but I decided to give them another chance, and put them in the "new" book racks.

A lot of current "YA" books, it seems, want to make some kind of statement about a social issue--divorce, AIDS, homosexuality, etc. Perhaps they are more realistic, but

I find them no less "preachy" than some of the moral stories and Horatio Alger tales of a hundred years ago we seem to be avoiding so desperately. A simple adventure is hard to come by, and many of the librarians at the workshop lamented that there are few good books that reach kids of the rural Panhandle--most are written for and about city kids.

Note that even great regional writers like John Erickson, D.R. Meredith, and Elmer Kelton have hit all around the young adult market. Part of the problem of course, is that this age group will rarely let anyone this side of 20 know what interests them, and they are even reluctant to admit to each other what they like to read--unless it's horror stuff like the works of R.L. Stine and Christopher Pike.

When I was in high school I thoroughly enjoyed Twain's A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court and All Quiet on the Western Front by Erich Maria Remarque. I believe that kids--boys anyway--would still enjoy those books and others like them if they would give them the chance. (I must confess--in spite of Remarque's attempt to show the horror of war, it was the blood and guts that appealed to me after reading an excerpt in history class.)

The little ceramic donkey sits in my house now, on a hall shelf that was designed for a telephone. It was the first gift, I think, that I ever bought my mother that I picked out all by myself. I'm not exactly sure why I chose a donkey for my mother, except that it was for Christmas and might fit with a nativity set she had, it was in my price range, and, probably most importantly, it appealed to me.

When I was a teen I noticed the donkey--among all the other valuable-only-to-a-mother items we had given her through the years (like the fat woman with the sign proclaiming "Want to lose ten pounds of ugly fat? Cut off your head!" and the miniature toilet ash tray)--and was embarrassed.

"Why don't you throw that away," I asked, "It was a stupid gift."

She was shocked. "I couldn't throw that away," she declared, "YOU gave it to me." I may have felt some secret pride then, but I don't think so. When she passed away a few years ago, and we divided her things, the first thing I asked for--and the only thing I would have demanded--was the little donkey. It was still proudly displayed with her other treasures. I pass it every day now, though I don't always notice it...but sometimes I pick it up and dust it off. I think about how worthless it was, and how priceless it has become, as I remember the one who, with a few simple words of affirmation, gave significance to a knot-headed, self-centered, insecure "young adult."

That's a tribute to my mother, and Mothersongs is a tribute to mothers in general. It's a collection of poems for, by and about mothers. Some are very old, but most are considerably newer. I tend to lean toward sentimentalism and traditionalism, and it seems this collection is a little thin on both, but there are some worthwhile.

Okay, this column's been a little heavy. Let's lighten it up with "If You Don't Have Anything Nice to Say...Come Sit Next to Me", a collection of "the most wickedly funny things the rich and famous have said about each other. Look up your favorite celebrity, and see who said what about him (or her): Of Clark Gable, Milton Berle said, "The best ears of our lives"...and Carole Lombard said, "Listen, he's no Clark Gable at home."

Of Bette Davis, Tallulah Bankhead said, "Bette and I are good friends. There's nothing I wouldn't say to her face--both of them." And I would love to tell you what Johnny Carson said about Chevy Chase, but this column has standards!

Have you noticed the parking lot? The Deaf Smith County Youth Home boys painted it before school started and it really dresses the place up. By the way, this Friday is September 1, so we'll be opening for business at 9 a.m. again. This Saturday and Monday we'll be closed for the Labor Day holiday. Summer is over for sure.

Names in the news

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)--George Bush returned to the scene of his high-flying youth and paid his respects to the Navy.

The former president and wife Barbara marked the 50th anniversary of V-J Day with a tour Monday of Norfolk Naval Base and Oceana Naval Air Station.

Bush, a decorated World War II Navy fighter pilot, was stationed at Oceana.

"It's a very emotional return for both Barbara and me. It's hard to describe it," he said. "It gives me a chance to say a belated thank-you to the people who are serving today. I love them. The spirit of the Navy remains the same."

YOUR EYES

YOUR ALLERGIES, YOUR EYES

In allergy season, high levels of pollen and dust in the air irritate the delicate tissues of the nose and eyes. Eyes burn and tear so much -- even with antihistamines -- that many contact lens wearers go back to eyeglasses for the season.

Occasionally the culprit in allergy attacks is food; then it's easy just to remove the allergen from the diet.

Another common irritant is eye makeup. The woman with itching, tearing eyes and swollen eyelids must consider this possibility, even if she has worn the same brand of makeup successfully for years. Not only do products change over the years; so does personal sensitivity to them. The wisest course is to go without makeup until the irritation eases. Then test a different hypoallergenic brand, one product at a time. Dab a little into the fold of the elbow, and leave it on overnight. If there is no redness, then it should be safe to try it in the eye area.

Friendship

She gave me a gift of Friendship
It lasted me all her life
I didn't know it's value
In this world of pain and strife

Her heart was big as Texas
And as pure as solid gold
But since I lost her friendship
My life grows dark and cold

To stand behind, and be a friend
Whether you are right or wrong
Is the hardest test, this life will give
It takes a love, that's strong

I must go on, for it's her will
It isn't over yet
For once I had, this greatest friend
I never will forget

We'll meet again, I know we will
Though her voice, in heaven rings
Friendship, is the gift that's tied
With nothing more than heart strings

F&K

You Smile - Therefore I Exist

You've taken control of this life of mine
The world doesn't matter, A bit
My heart and my soul, will do just fine
For into your world, I fit

The will to go on, and my happiness
Depends on how happy you are
For if you're sad, and your world's a mess
My heart will carry the scar

To bring out your best, to know your pain
I have to know why you're sad
Is it something I've done, That brings on the rain
Was that something good, or bad?

So hold my hand, and look in my eyes
Come sit with me for a while
See only the truth, the heck with the lies
I only live for your smile

Herd defense shines in first scrimmage

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

The Hereford Whitefaces, tired of hitting each other in pre-season practice, had a hard-hitting scrimmage session at Plainview Friday night against the Bulldogs of District 3-5A.

There is no official scoring in the controlled scrimmages, but the Bulldogs had four touchdowns--two by the first unit--and also returned a fumble all the way. Hereford put together one sustained drive for a touchdown late in the drills.

Coach Danny Haney was disappointed with the offensive showing Friday night, but he felt a little better about it Saturday morning after viewing the films.

"We had some problems with our offensive line. Some of that was just it being the first scrimmage," said Haney, "and part of it was Plainview putting seven or eight players up front to stop us."

Haney said he thought Marquise Brown and Josh Urbanczyk ran the ball well. "Our quarterbacks did a better job throwing the ball towards the end," noted the coach. He thought the receivers ran good routes "and caught the ball when we got it to them."

Haney said he was real pleased with the defensive effort in the first round of plays. "We gave up a couple of big plays in the second round, but it's about as good as we've played on defense for the first scrimmage. Our pass defense was good for the first time out."

The teams started a series at their own 30-yard line and ran 20 plays. If a first down was not recorded in three plays, the ball was returned to the 30. Each school put four teams on the field during the different series.

"Our main objective was to get a look at all the players. This is part of our valuation to determine who is on the varsity," said Haney.

The Herd opened on offense to start the session, and the first unit moved down the field on a 20-yard pass play from Todd Dudley to David Hicks and several good runs by Marquise Brown. Hereford was plagued by three fumbles after that, however, and didn't mount another drive during the first series.

Plainview, ranked fourth in the 5A district behind Monterey, Amarillo and Coronado, made a few first downs and then moved the ball into Herd territory twice before a fumble was recovered by Hereford's Tracy Montano at the 28.

Hereford's second unit started out good as Joseph Artho hit Trip Robison with passes of 5 and 15 yards, but two fumbles also blunted sustained drives. Dwayne Thomas had several good runs for the Herd, as did T.J. Robbins.

Plainview's speed showed up in their second unit as one of the backs broke tackles and went all the way twice--on runs of about 45 yards both times.

The Herd's third unit moved the ball well at times but failed to sustain a drive all the way. Quarterback Michael Garcia had a run of 22 yards and connected on passes to John Marty Galan for 12 and Nathan Gavina for 15. A pass to Galan also went for 5, but it was fumbled and a Plainview player scooped it up and went all the way.

Another series of the fourth units, or a mixture of third and fourth units, wound up in two scores for Plainview. They came on a 66-yard run and a 6-yard run. Hereford failed to move the ball much in that series, and a fumble and pass interception didn't help.

The first units took their second shots, with Hereford unable to mount a drive. Brown made several good short runs, and one pass covered 10 yards. However, Plainview tallied twice in this series--on a determined 18-yard run and on a 23-yard run.

Hereford's second unit, with Dudley and Artho at quarterback, put together a sustained drive for a score on the next series. It featured the passing of Dudley, who connected on four or five in a row to move the ball downfield.

Hereford went through the scrimmage without serious injuries. Jeb Skiles sustained a bruised hand and he may have it x-rayed. Linebacker Armando Zambrano, a key returning letterman, missed the scrimmage due to personal reasons.

Gallagher leads World Series of Golf tourney

AKRON, Ohio (AP)--Jim Gallagher Jr. avoided the pitfalls that befell playing partner Payne Stewart and retained a one-stroke lead Friday through two rounds of the World Series of Golf.

"Par's a good score, to say the least," Gallagher said after a 71 left him at 3-under 137. He started the round with a one-stroke lead over Stewart after opening with a 66 at parched and hard Firestone Country Club.

One shot back were defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal, Billy Mayfair and Mike Sullivan. Olazabal shot a 70. Sullivan had a 67 and Mayfair a 68, accounting for two of only eight subpar scores in the second round.

Woody Austin followed a 68 with a 79, Fred Couples a 68 with a 76 and Stewart had a 74 after an opening 67.

Alomar homer leads Indians over Detroit

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer
After Cleveland's Jose Mesa failed to save a game for the first time in 39 chances this season, all the Indians had to do was get to extra innings.

Then a victory was practically assured.
Sandy Alomar's homer with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning Friday night gave the Indians a 6-5 win over the Detroit Tigers, their ninth extra-inning victory this season without a loss.

The win, the Indians' 22nd in their last at-bat and seventh on a game-ending home run, came despite Mesa's first failure of the season.

Chad Curtis' solo home run with two outs in the ninth ended Mesa's record single-season streak and sent the game into extra innings.

In other AL games, Seattle beat New York 7-4, Baltimore beat California 11-2, Oakland beat Boston 6-1, Chicago beat Toronto 8-7, Kansas City beat Texas 9-4 and Milwaukee beat Minnesota 6-3.

Orioles 11, Angels 2
Scott Erickson pitched a six-hitter and improved his career record against California to 9-1.

Erickson (9-10) was supported by three-run homers by Rafael Palmeiro and Mark Smith, his first major league home run.

Mark Langston (13-3) lost for the first time at Anaheim Stadium since Aug. 3, 1994, against Seattle.

Athletics 6, Red Sox 1
In his third major league start, Doug Johns allowed two hits in seven innings as visiting Boston's winning streak was stopped at six.

Johns (2-0), who has been recalled from the minors four times this season, was helped by three double plays.

Boston's Jose Canseco homered for the fifth straight game, tying the team record held by Jimmie Foxx, Ted Williams, Dick Stuart and George Scott.

Rheal Cormier (6-4) allowed six runs in seven innings for Boston, which lost for only the third time in 23 games.

White Sox 8, Blue Jays 7
Chicago rookie Ray Durham hit his first major league grand slam, and Lance Johnson added a two-run homer as the visiting White Sox scored seven runs in the sixth to take an 8-0 lead.

Jason Bere (6-11) broke his three-game losing streak.

Devon White hit a grand slam for Toronto, but Pat Hentgen (9-11) allowed eight runs in six innings.

Royals 9, Rangers 4
Mark Gubicza, who beat Texas in Kansas City for the first time in nine years, was supported by rookie Joe Vitiello's three-run homer.

Gubicza (9-11) matched his highest victory total since 1991 and snapped a personal four-game losing streak against the Rangers.

Kenny Rogers (12-6), who hadn't allowed a run in Kansas City in 20 1-3 innings, gave up four in the first, capped by Vitiello's second major league homer.

Brewers 6, Twins 3
Rookie Scott Karl won for the fourth time in his last five starts, and was supported by John Jaha's three-run homer--his fifth home run in his last nine games.

Karl (5-2) allowed six hits and two earned runs in six innings, and Bill Wegman pitched one-hit ball in the final three innings for his second save.

Twins starter Mike Trombley (2-8) gave up five runs in four innings.

Race horse owner Virginia Kraft Payson was once a sports writer.

Reds batter Pirates to lead flurry of lopsided NL games

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer
The runs came in bunches and the scores were lopsided all around the National League.

Nineteen runs for the Reds, 17 for the Phillies, 12 for the Expos, 10 for the Mets. A 16-run victory for Cincinnati, a 13-run edge for Philadelphia, 11 for Montreal, five for the Mets and Cardinals.

Only one game was decided by less than four runs Friday.

The most one-sided game of them all was in Pittsburgh, where the Reds won 19-3, battering three Pirates pitchers for 19 hits, 12 in the final three innings. Reggie Sanders had a pair of two-run homers and six RBIs, Jeff Branson had a three-run homer and five RBIs and Thomas Howard went 4-for-5 while replacing the injured Ron Gant in left field.

In other games, Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 17-4, Montreal downed San Francisco 12-1, New York defeated San Diego 10-5, St. Louis beat Colorado 8-3, Atlanta topped Chicago 7-3 and Florida edged Houston 5-4.

Cincinnati scored at least 11 runs for starter Mark Portugal (8-8) for the third straight time. The right-hander had lost six straight decisions before winning his last three by a combined score of 41-10.

Steve Parris (6-5) took the loss for the Pirates, who ended a seven-game home winning streak and have lost three straight overall since winning six in a row.

Phillies 17, Dodgers 4
At Philadelphia, the Phillies pounded Hideo Nomo (10-5) for seven runs, six earned, on six hits in three innings. Nomo's shortest start of the season.

Gregg Jefferies hit for the cycle in his first four at-bats and pitcher Jeff Juden (2-1) hit a grand slam for Philadelphia, which won for the eighth time in nine games and moved within a half-game of Colorado in the wild-card race.

The Phillies' victory was tempered by an injury to catcher Darren Daulton, who may have torn cartilage in his right knee while rounding second in the fourth.

Expos 12, Giants 1
At Montreal, Sean Berry had two homers and six RBIs in his first game since missing four in a row with a bad back, and Pedro Martinez (12-8) scattered three hits in 7 2-3 innings and struck out nine.

Montreal ended its six-game losing streak, then announced a major lineup change after the game.

Shortstop Wil Cordero will be moved to the outfield, where he has never played. He will take the spot of Moises Alou, who was put on the 15-day disabled list before the game.

Cardinals 8, Rockies 3

At Denver, Bernard Gilkey homered on the game's first pitch, Ray Lankford hit a two-run homer, John Mabry had four hits and three RBIs and David Bell had two hits, including a game-breaking triple to help Mike Morgan (5-7) get his 100th career win.

Braves 7, Cubs 3
At Chicago, David Justice hit a solo home run, Fred McGriff added a two-run double and John Smoltz (10-5) gave up six hits and struck out six in six-plus innings.

Marlins 5, Astros 4
Florida won its 11th straight home game behind Andre Dawson's tiebreaking three-run homer. The Astros have lost eight in a row, their longest losing streak since 1983 when they began the season 0-9.

Mets 10, Padres 5
At New York, Carl Everett hit the first grand slam of his career and Butch Huskey added a two-run homer, all in the fifth inning, as the Mets won for the seventh time in eight games.

Hobert emerges as placekicker to spawn scoring rally for Raiders

By The Associated Press
Billy Joe Hobert was surprised to be called upon and stunned at how he fared.

The backup quarterback for the Oakland Raiders was pressed into emergency placekicking duties Friday night when Jeff Jaeger was injured. Hobert converted a 45-yard field goal near the end of a 25-point spurt in the fourth quarter that carried the Raiders past the New England Patriots 32-24. He also kicked three extra points.

"I couldn't believe it. I looked up and said, 'Did I do that?'" said Hobert, a placekicker and punter as well as quarterback during his prep career in Washington state.

"I didn't even think they were going to throw me in there. I don't have any technique. As soon as the ball got down, I kicked it as hard as I could, and that's all I had."

It was enough in a wild concluding quarter.

Trailing 24-7 heading into the final period, the Raiders (3-1) closed in behind two fourth-quarter touchdown passes by Vince Evans. Derrick Hoskins then intercepted Scott Zolak, and returned it 19 yards to the New England 30.

Oakland failed to get a first down, and after some apparent indecision, let Hobert try the field goal. He kicked a low line drive that just cleared the crossbar.

Bruce Pickens got the third interception of Zolak in the second half and returned it 18 yards for a touchdown with 28 seconds remaining.

Rookie Curtis Martin sparked an improved running game for New England (1-3), rushing for 92 yards on 18 carries. He also caught a touchdown pass and had runs of 37 and 24 yards negated by holding calls.

In other games, it was Jacksonville 23, Denver 17; Buffalo 20, Atlanta 14; the New York Jets 30, Cincinnati 24; New Orleans 24, Detroit 10; Green Bay 35, Washington 23; Tampa Bay 24, Miami 17; San Diego 17, St. Louis 9; and Cleveland 31, Arizona 17.

Browns 31, Cardinals 17
After Arizona cut a 17-0 deficit to 17-10, Mike Buck threw an interception that Mike Caldwell returned 38 yards for a touchdown. Browns quarterback Vinny Testaverde, who missed two weeks with a leg infection, hit eight of 16 passes. He produced a 10-0 lead against Arizona's first-string defense.

Rookie Ernest Hunter rushed for 131 yards for Cleveland (2-2).

Summary of new laws

By The Associated Press

Some of the areas touched by new laws that take effect Monday and Friday:

- ALIMONY
 - A court can order alimony payments to be made to an ex-spouse who can't support himself or herself, if the couple has been married at least 10 years.
- ANIMALS
 - It is prohibited to kill a dangerous wild animal that is in captivity or released from captivity for purposes of being killed in a so-called canned hunt.
- BREAST FEEDING
 - Breast feeding is recognized as the best method of infant nutrition, and a legislative finding is set forth saying that breast-feeding a baby is an important and basic act of nurture that must be encouraged. State agencies that provide maternal or child health services must provide information that encourages breast feeding to pregnant clients or mothers with infants.
- BUDGET
 - The state has a no-new-taxes budget of $79.9 billion over two years.
- CHILD CUSTODY-CHILD SUPPORT
 - It is assumed in custody decisions that appointing a child's parents to equally share legal and financial responsibility for the child is in the child's best interest unless there is evidence to the contrary.
 - Spouses who are past due on court-ordered child support can face suspension of state licenses, including driver's, professional and recreational licenses.
- CIVIL JUSTICE OVERHAUL
 - It's harder for people to sue, restrictions are put on where a case may be tried, punitive damages are limited and penalties are imposed on those who file frivolous lawsuits.
- CRIME
 - Anyone convicted of a list of sex offenses, including indecency with a child, who has two prior sex-related felony convictions will be automatically sentenced to life in prison.
 - Communities must be notified when a sex offender moves into the area.
 - Child safety zones are created to make such areas as school playgrounds off-limits to convicted child molesters.
 - Law officers can't require rape victims to take a polygraph exam.
 - A crime victim, or the victim's relative or guardian, is authorized to make a statement to a court and to the defendant after sentencing.
- EDWARDS AQUIFER
 - A board of directors is established to administer the Edwards Aquifer Authority.
- ELECTRIC UTILITIES
 - The state's wholesale electric market is deregulated, allowing independent power producers to compete with big utilities for sales to other utilities, municipal electric companies and rural cooperatives.
- GUNS
 - Texans can begin the application process for a concealed gun permit and certified instructors can begin offering the training classes required for a license. The right to carry a concealed gun begins Jan. 1.
 - Gun- and weapon-free zones are created around schools. People who carry weapons on the premises face a third-degree felony charge.
- HIGHER EDUCATION
 - Tuition for Texas residents is increased by $2 per semester credit hour for the next six years. Tuition for non-residents is raised to the average of the other five most populous states.
 - A prepaid higher education tuition program is established, allowing parents to pay tuition for their young children at today's rates. The program still is being developed.
 - Lamar University System institutions are transferred to the Texas State University System.
 - East Texas State University institutions are transferred to the Texas A&M System.
 - Higher education institutions can allow a senior citizen to enroll for credit in up to six hours of courses each semester or summer term without payment of tuition if space is available.
 - Certain students who receive welfare are exempt from paying tuition and fees for the first academic year in which the student enrolls at a higher education institution.
- INSURANCE
 - The state insurance commissioner is authorized to roll back insurance rates to reflect expected savings from a civil justice overhaul limiting lawsuit damage awards. If he doesn't, specific cuts automatically take effect.
 - People in the insurance business are prohibited from unfair discrimination.
- OPEN RECORDS
 - The Texas Open Records Act is updated to cover computer records along with paper documents.

Variety of laws set to take effect this week

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - People who thought life didn't change much in the wake of the Legislature's 1995 session might be in for a surprise this week: Hundreds of new laws kick in, affecting everything from Texans' pocketbooks to their safety to their divorces.

Topping the list - because state government programs can't function without it - is the $79.9 billion, two-year budget.

The budget represents a 6.2 percent increase over current spending. Critics said it doesn't do enough for the needy or education, but lawmakers said it was the best they could do without new taxes.

Texans' wallets also will be affected by higher education laws.

One will increase university tuition, while another gives parents a break: A program still being developed will allow the purchase of contracts to prepay tuition and fees for children under 18, freezing them at today's prices.

Older Texans may benefit from a law allowing higher education institutions to permit senior citizens to enroll in up to six hours of courses each semester tuition-free.

In other pocketbook issues, Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer gets the power to cut insurance rates to reflect expected savings from a civil justice overhaul limiting lawsuit damage awards.

An overhaul of Texas telecommunications laws, while partly deregulating the business, will require telecommunications companies to put $1.5 billion over 10 years into high-tech equipment at schools, hospitals and libraries.

And the cost of obtaining public records from the government will be affected by another new law, which provides for uniform pricing while updating the Texas Open Records Act to include computer records along with paper documents.

PUBLIC SAFETY: Texans' money isn't the only thing touched by laws taking effect Monday, which marks 90 days after adjournment of the 1995 Legislature, and on Friday's start of the state fiscal year.

Their safety is at stake, too. Lawmakers passed numerous anti-crime measures, including a package of laws sparked by a Dallas girl's murder.

"Ashley's Laws" are named for 7-year-old Ashley Estell, who was abducted from a park and murdered in 1993. Michael Blair, on parole after being convicted of burglary and indecency with a child, was convicted in her death.

Under one of the laws, anyone convicted of indecency with a child or other sex offenses who has two prior sex-related felony convictions will be automatically sentenced to life in prison.

Other laws require notification of communities when a sex offender moves into the area and creation of child safety zones to make such areas as school playgrounds off-limits to convicted child molesters.

Among other crime-related measures, the Legislature authorized crime victims to make a statement to a court and the defendant after sentencing; prohibited officers from requiring rape victims to take a polygraph exam; and moved to speed up the appeals process for death-row inmates.

Lawmakers also voted to allow Handguns, although there's dispute over whether that will make the streets more or less safe.

Would-be pistol packers may begin the application process for a concealed gun permit Friday, when certified instructors also can begin offering the training classes required for a license. The right to carry a concealed gun begins Jan. 1.

WELFARE: Texans who aren't crime perpetrators or victims also will be affected by new laws, including a sweeping measure to overhaul the welfare system - and do a few other things, too.

The welfare revamp requires recipients to abide by rules including working or studying to get benefits, which are limited to a maximum of three years. Some federal rule waivers are required for the bill to take full effect.

The legislation also includes provisions not strictly related to welfare.

Spouses who are past due on court-ordered child support can lose state licenses, including driver's, professional and recreational licenses, under the measure.

In addition, the law establishes limited alimony in Texas: A court can order payments to be made to an ex-spouse who can't support himself or herself, if the couple has been married at least 10 years.

LAWSUITS: Lawsuit reform measures like welfare reform by Gov. George W. Bush, also take effect this week to make it harder for people to sue, restrict where a case may be tried, limit punitive damages and impose penalties for filing frivolous lawsuits.

But some other legislation could pave the way for additional lawsuits. The Private Real Property Rights Preservation Act, for example, gives property owners power to sue state and local governments over action that devalues their property.

And the so-called veggie libel bill allows farmers to sue those who make unfounded allegations against their products. The farmer must prove the statements were false under the bill; which Bush allowed to become law despite his father's publicly voiced distaste for broccoli.

Regional water leaders developing new plan

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

The concern over water usage and the depletion of the Ogallala Aquifer has prompted regional water leaders to develop a High Plains Ogallala Regional Water Management Plan.

Co-chairman of the plan are High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 2 Manager A. Wayne Wyatt and Dr. Loyd Urban, Director of the Water Resource Center at Texas Tech University.

Taking into consideration that the Ogallala Aquifer is being used faster than it can be recharged, the chairmen feel it is important for all who are concerned with the water situation to be involved in a combined effort to ensure that the water supply meets the needs of the residents of the towns and cities in the area.

"Basically, the many different entities are doing a good job of conservation. The result however is fragmented," Urban said. "We are striving to accomplish an overall regional plan."

The plan was first conceived a year ago and Urban said the tentative finalization will take place sometime in the fall of 1996.

The area that will be involved is unique in that it shares a large regional aquifer (Ogallala) and several public surface water reservoirs whose combined yields have been able to keep up with the needs of the area.

Lubbock and Amarillo are the two largest cities in the region and agriculture, the largest water user, provides the principal economic base.

Consisting of 60 members, the team represents municipalities; industry; agriculture; educators; universities; federal, state, and local governments; as well as individual interested citizens.

"We are looking at a range of different topics," said Urban. "We are hoping to identify what will be more promising for the region - not only agriculture."

According to the conservation district, the farmers' use of improved water conservation equipment and technology has helped to offset well yield declines, making sufficient water available for crops.

Crop yields have remained high due to the effort of conserving the water.

The need for water-use efficiency became clear during the 1980s.

After the implementation of surge irrigation, partial drop center irrigation and especially the LEPA (Low Energy Precession Application) sprinkler systems between 1980 and 1990, increases in the aquifer's water level occurred over approximately 50 percent of the area.

The improved efficiency of water-use and above normal precipitation and the Conservation Reserve Program contributed to reducing the long-term depletion rate.

"We need to make agriculture producers aware that just because they increase efficiency, doesn't necessarily mean they will use less water," Urban said.

A producer may use as much, or more, water to produce a crop and think he is conserving water-use.

Unfortunately, the weather cycle in the area has changed from wet to dry recently.

The deficit in the amount of precipitation received had to be satisfied with water pumped from the aquifer; and also little or no water available from precipitation for natural recharge to the aquifer.

Concern that a rapidly declining water base will hinder the growth and development in the region, creating the need for a management plan.

"We have had a good deal of interest from groups and individuals at our quarterly meetings," said Urban. "Our goals are long with intermediate objectives to be reached."

The team has begun implementing programs and activities to accomplish those objectives.

The regional water management plan will provide information and guidance to secure the region's water supply base, for many years.

Pirate becomes available for area cotton producers

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - Cotton producers in the Concho Valley will soon be taking some heavy artillery into their battle against the beet armyworm.

Pirate, a potent pesticide that is believed to be the best weapon available for such a fight, likely will be available for farmers by Thursday or Friday, a Texas A&M University entomologist said Monday.

"The company was making the product this weekend," said Rick Minzenmeyer of the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center. "And they are making it as we speak."

About 60 West Texas cotton producers met Monday with officials at the center north of San Angelo to learn what they can do to beat the beet armyworm.

The worm appeared in the Concho Valley cotton patch earlier this month and it proceeded to consume it at such an alarming rate, producers may not be able to save it, even with Pirate.

The pesticide will be used on acres not yet severely damaged by the pests.

Runnels, Tom Green, Concho and McCulloch counties are eligible to use Pirate, Minzenmeyer said.

But only enough chemical for 30,000 acres has been allowed by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

"I don't know if we will be able to get Schleicher County added to that list," he said. "But we are going to look at what we can do to get that done."

The reasons Schleicher County was not on the list were unclear, but Minzenmeyer suggested it could be because less cotton is grown there or because the TDA has limited the amount of Pirate that can be used in the state.

Pirate will not be an all-out savior for producers still fighting the insect, he said.

"Pirate is not a miracle cure," he said. "It's not going to solve all the problems. No producer is going to go in and clean out his field with this stuff."

Some tests were done last Friday to determine Pirate's effectiveness on the beet armyworm, he said.

"At the maximum rate it did a good job of cleaning out the smaller worms," he said. "But it left the larger ones - a half-inch or larger."

Minzenmeyer used 17 ounces per acre in the test, but he noted that producers can only use nine ounces per acre under the Section 18 rules. The cost at that level is in the $14 to $15 per acre range, Minzenmeyer said.

Although most of the 200,000 acres of planted cotton in the Concho Valley are devastated beyond any hope, producers may be receiving some federal aid through a disaster declaration.

The chance for federal assistance money is slight because of new legislation which does not allow Congress to allocate money not already budgeted.

Property rights conference to take place in Austin

John E. Morris, CEO of the Westex Federal Land Bank Association of Dimmitt, encourages area landowners to take part in the Property Rights Conference slated for August 30 and 31 in Austin.

The conference will provide an up-to-date view of the property rights landscape and information on the latest developments in law and regulations affecting private property rights, including recent political developments.

Participants will receive a conference manual of source documents, case information and legal strategies.

Culture is not life in its entirety, but just the moment of security, strength and clarity.

Water-use efficiency

The implementation by agriculture producers to use water saving technology, such as the partial drop center pivot pictured, has helped to curb the depletion of the Ogallala Aquifer. Most producers need to be aware that efficiency doesn't necessarily mean conservation. The development of a High Plains Ogallala Regional Water Management Plan by regional water leaders is geared to educate and guide water users to secure the region's water supply.

"The journey of a thousand leagues, we say, begins with a single step. So, we must never neglect any work of peace that is within our reach, however small."

Extension Agent's Notes

Exports of red meat move at record-setting pace

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - Ag
 All of us in Deaf Smith County know that the livestock industry, especially the feedyard industry, is at the heart of our local economy. Those of us involved, also know that this industry has faced tremendous changes in the last 10 years in the area of environmental issues. These issues include odor control, dust problems and water runoff problems. Millions of dollars have been spent by these feedyards to correct what many in our society see as a threat to our environment. What most people that are not involved in this industry fail to understand is the vastness of our cattle industry and the tremendous amounts of waste that naturally comes when hundreds of thousands of cattle are confined.

I personally feel that the cattle feeding industry has done a tremendous job in improving its environmental management and controls.

We in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service have joined forces with a number of other agencies and groups including the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas A&M University, the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission, USDA Natural Resource Conservation Service, Texas Cattle Feeders Association and others in sponsoring a statewide Livestock and Poultry Waste Management Conference on September 6-7 at the Wyndham Hotel - Southpark in Austin.

The conference is targeted at professionals who deal with environmental issues related to animal agriculture. Livestock and poultry producers from throughout the state are also encouraged to participate.

Dr. Terry Nipp of Washington, D.C. has been invited as the guest speaker at the luncheon which kicks off the program at 11:30 a.m. of Sept. 6.

Nipp, a consultant with AESOP Enterprises Ltd., will be talking about the Clean Water Act and environmental and natural resources issues relating to the 1995 Farm Bill.

Topics in the afternoon session include current and new developments in water quality management policies and programs; the selection criteria for watersheds; using the watershed approach to maintain the quality of river basins, hydrologic units and micro-watersheds; and the management of watershed nutrient balances.

On September 7, the morning speakers will discuss how to best plan production systems, such as nutrition alternatives and feeding facilities; compare waste water treatment systems and composting technology; and outline how to market compost.

Afternoon speakers will talk about the measurement and control of odors, and methods for controlling dust and particulates for open lot systems and confinement buildings.

Registration will be from 8 a.m. until noon on Sept. 6. The fee for the conference is $85 and includes two luncheons, breaks, and a copy of the proceedings.

Livestock producers are also reminded that nominations for the Texas Ranch to Rail Program are due by September 1. If any of you cow-calf or stocker producers would like to nominate cattle for this feeding program, please contact the Extension office before September 1.

For more information on either of these programs contact the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at (806) 364-3573. Have a good week.

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. exports of red meat moved at a record-setting pace during the first half of this year, fueled largely by expanding beef production and declining prices.

Poultry exports also grew substantially in the first six months and are expected to set an annual record. The United States became a net exporter of pork during the period.

Producers exported $2.9 billion worth of meat products through June 30. The total for 1994 was $5.3 billion.

The figures were in a midyear report on livestock, dairy and poultry by the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service.

A sector-by-sector overview: BEEF: Exports are expected to reach 80 percent of import volume this year, considerably narrowing the beef balance of trade. In 1990, U.S. beef exports were 43 percent of imports.

In the first half of the year, beef exports were 9 percent higher than the same six months of 1994. Imports, meanwhile, declined by 13 percent, largely because of lower U.S. prices and larger supplies of lower-quality fed beef.

Japan remains the leading importer of U.S. beef. More than 55 percent of WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. rice yields this year are expected to be slightly below last year, and farm prices for the crop are projected to remain steady.

The Agriculture Department estimates average 1995 yields at 5,954 pounds per acre. Last year, average yield was 5,964 pounds.

The 1994-95 season average farm price is estimated at $6.75 per hundredweight, compared with $7.98 the previous year. USDA reported July's average monthly farm price at a preliminary $7.05 per hundredweight and said the price for 1995-96 (August-July) is projected to range from $6.50 to $7.50, about the same as 1994-95.

Prices are expected to remain steady through the end of the year, largely because of strong world trade and a demand for U.S. exports, USDA said.

 How insufficient is all wisdom without love.
 —Henry D. Thoreau

first-half exports went to Japan, 1. percent to Canada, 15 percent to South Korea and 5 percent to Mexico. Shipments to Mexico were off by 50 percent from 1994's first half.

Most U.S. beef imports come from Australia, but New Zealand may be on its way to becoming the leading beef exporter to the United States.

PORK: Exports soared 74 percent in the first half over the same period of 1994. The Pacific Rim, South America and Russia and other countries of the former Soviet Union all accounted for the increase.

Shipments to Japan - the largest destination for U.S. pork exports - were up 44 percent from a year earlier, buoyed by lower U.S. prices and a declining dollar relative to the yen.

Pork exports to Mexico were down by nearly half and are expected to remain weak through the year.

The total for the period exceeded 100 million pounds on a carcass weight basis.

POULTRY: First-half broiler exports were 36 percent higher than the previous year at 1.7 billion pounds. Shipments are expected to slow in the second half, but the 1995 total is projected to be 27 percent ahead of last year's record. Large domestic supplies are forecast to boost exports next year as well.

The largest increase was in shipments to Russia, which accounted for 36 percent of the first-half broiler exports and bought 90 percent more than it did in the comparable 1994 period. Shipments to China and Hong Kong accounted for 28 percent of the exports, up 50 percent from last year's first half.

Exports to Russia could slow in the second half if Moscow enforces import tariffs that increased July 1.

4-H News

By VANCE CHRISTIE
County Extension Agent - Ag
 Lately there has been a lot of "bad press" concerning the Junior Livestock Show. Several of the major media sources have been selecting a few isolated instances of ethics violations to feature in their news stories.

There have been articles that focused on reports of cruelty to animals, and unethical ownership of animals. I would like to state that these are definitely isolated instances.

Unfortunately due to the nature of our society today the general public likes to focus on the negative and down play the positive.

All of these articles list the down side of the Junior Livestock Program. The stories all fail to mention that there are thousands of other animals at the same show that were fed by the 4-H or FFA members for a set period of time, worked with daily, and for the most part have lived a life of animal luxury in their cozy pens and barns.

None of the articles state that all of the youth involved in the program learn valuable life skills that will benefit them for the rest of their lives.

Working with these livestock projects ensures that the participants learn responsibility, decision making, nutrition, health, and general animal care.

These projects also lead to quality family time, the opportunity to work as a team member, and communication among members.

Therefore the positive aspects gained by the many honest and dedicated 4-H and FFA members greatly outweigh the few isolated negative cases that have been focused on in recent months.

Many times in the community, I visit with parents that say I really enjoyed the Junior Livestock Program when I was growing up, but I don't want my children involved now.

The reasoning behind this is the few isolated instances above. This is not something new or different facing the stock show industry. It was happening when I was showing, and there were incidences when my parents showed.

If the situation was honestly evaluated, the vast majority of the members, parents, leaders, agents and teachers are all going the extra mile to ensure that these isolated instances are eliminated.

Through the new 1995 Texas Lamb and Pig validation programs, monitoring the ownership of these animals will be greatly improved.

All 4-H and FFA members are being trained in ethical show practices. As a result of these efforts the Junior Livestock Show Program continues to grow and get better and better each year.

If you are interested in learning more about the Junior Livestock Program or any other 4-H programs, please call the Deaf Smith County Extension Office (806) 364-3573.

Also if you are interested in showing, but do not have a place to keep and animal please contact the office to visit about possible places to feed a project.

Educational programs of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age or national origin.

Agriculture Briefs

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) - Temperatures topping 100 degrees and heat index readings up to 110 degrees are killing thousands of chickens in the nation's top poultry-growing state.

"Most of the 74,000 poultry deaths that have been reported to us have been due to power failures," said Don Speer, chief investigator for the Arkansas Livestock and Poultry Commission. The outages have occurred mostly from power overloads.

A similar heat wave a few years ago killed many more birds, said Dewayne Kimbrell, assistant director of the livestock commission. Improved equipment and cooling systems have helped cut down on deaths, he said.

In many of the current systems, ventilation curtains "are designed to fall and let the air in. ... When they don't because of an electrical problem, the chickens sit and get too hot before someone can hit the circuit breaker," Speer said.

Phillip Hargis, a poultry specialist with the Cooperative Extension Service, said the normal death rate in poultry houses is between 4.5 percent and 4.6 percent. But during the last week, the rates have been more than 7 percent in northwestern Arkansas. "Everybody is losing them in increasing numbers," he said.

Nothing that was worthy in the past departs, no truth or goodness realized by man ever dies or can die.

Son's behavior shows possible danger signs

DEAR READERS: I am on vacation, but I have left behind some of my favorite columns that you may have missed the first time around. I hope you enjoy them. -- Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son, age 16, started to collect Nazi items about three years ago. He has two Nazi flags and German medals all over the place. He also has a German gun, a helmet from World War II and other souvenirs he thinks are "nifty." What bothers me most are the pictures on the wall of Adolf Hitler. I am ashamed when people who come to the house see our son's room. I try to keep his door closed, but when he's at home, he invites them in.

Some of our friends have asked him why he collects these things, and he says he "likes history."

Our son is a good student and has never gotten into any trouble. He has very few friends, however, and this worries me. When he was younger, he had several pets, but he was cruel to them, and I said, "No more pets." Two years ago, he found a stray kitten and begged me to let him keep it. Three days later, he killed the kitten by dragging it to death behind his bike.

Do you see any connection in the facts I've outlined in this rambling letter? Please advise -- Worried Mother

DEAR MOTHERS: I certainly do, and I urge you to waste no time in getting this boy to a doctor for a psychiatric evaluation. There are several clues that even a lay person can recognize as potential danger signals.

Get going and good luck.
DEAR ANN LANDERS: A few days ago, my best friend died. He was my teacher, my idol, my symbol of strength and protection. He was also my father.

Last year on my 17th birthday, I obtained my driver's license. Three weeks later, I had a minor accident. I was scared to death of what my father would say when the police called him. I wasn't hurt, but I had a few scratches and was dazed by the impact.

The moment he saw me, he hugged me and tried to calm my ragged nerves. I kept repeating, "I'll never drive again." He said, "Oh, yet, you will. In fact, you are going to drive me home."

Then, he told me about Thomas Alva Edison and how he made the first electric light bulb after seven years of hard work and experimentation. Edison handed the precious bulb to his laboratory assistant to put away. The assistant accidentally dropped it. Of course, the bulb broke into a thousand pieces. Edison went to work on a second bulb. After he had completed it, he handed it to his assistant again, to prove that he had confidence in him. I knew how the assistant must have felt when I was behind the wheel of that car, driving my dad home.

This was only one of the lessons I learned from this remarkable man. I am thankful to have had him for 18 years. I hope you will find room in your column for my letter. Perhaps after reading it, the lucky ones who still have a dad will appreciate him a little more. -- A Loving Daughter

DEAR DAUGHTER: What a beautiful tribute. When I read your letter, I thought about my own father. He, too, was a remarkable man, and I miss him every day of my life.

Military Muster

Marine Pfc. Kevin T. Kelso, son of Newton D. and Mary L. Kelso of Hereford, recently reported for duty with 2nd Assault Amphibious Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Kelso's new assignment is an example of how Navy and Marine Corps men and women are assigned to ships, squadrons and shore stations around the world. Whether serving in the Persian Gulf near Iraq or in the Adriatic Sea near Bosnia, people like Kelso are making a difference as they work to improve their knowledge and skill as part of the most highly technical naval force in history.

The 1992 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Marine Corps in December 1994.

Romanian assignment suits Hereford native

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

Bucharest, Romania, is a long way from Hereford, but Hereford native Dale West is director of the American Cultural Center in Bucharest.

"The center is a facility whose goal is to be a source of information about America," said West.

The center is operated by the United States Information Agency, an independent foreign affairs agency within the executive branch of the U.S. government. The agency promotes mutual understanding between the United States and other nations by conducting educational and cultural activities.

"The State Department handles government-to-government diplomacy but our special role is to work with the foreign public," said West.

"The center has a small library, an auditorium where Romanians can come to here presentations by American speakers or companies, and an exhibit space for art, photos and such by American artists."

An exhibit is being planned for the near future that will display work by Romanian artists which will depict their ideas of America.

According to West, 80 percent of the Romanian population have a favorable opinion of the United States and "whatever happens in America is news, including holidays such as the 4th of July and Thanksgiving."

Under Communist rule prior to 1989, there was only one television station and it was allowed to broadcast for two hours a night.

"But now there are several private stations and even cable with a cartoon network," said West.

One responsibility of the center is to provide accurate and timely information to the foreign news media.

"We have recently started to focus on small businesses and become a source of information for them on American-made products," said West. "This will aid both their economy and ours."

Romania is primarily an agricultural country about the size of Oregon. Crops are similar to those grown in this area, including corn, wheat and sugar beets.

"The sugar beets are harvested by hand, loaded in a cart and hauled to the railroad depot to be exported," West advised.

West is part of a team of six Americans assigned to the Cultural Center in Bucharest. Before taking the assignment, he spent six months learning the Romanian language.

He has completed two years of his three-year assignment in Romania. He would like to be assigned to a post in Latin America next even though it would mean learning another language.

West graduated from Hereford High School in 1987 and from the University of Texas in 1991. He had applied to join the Foreign Service before graduation but his application was not approved for another six months.

West and his wife, Mendi, have a one-year-old daughter, Emma.

Family members in Hereford include his dad, Joe West; his mother, Mary West; his sister, Jill McCracken; and his grandmother, Betty Sue Worthan.

Greenawalt, Secret are united in marriage during evening ceremony in local church

Laura Iris Greenawalt and Leonard Archie Secret exchanged wedding vows Aug. 19 in an evening ceremony in Central Church of Christ in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Charles and Barbara Greenawalt of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Lana Chappell and Wynn Secret of Hereford and Tyke Secret of Rapid City, S.D. He is the grandson of Vera Secret of Hereford.

Tom Bailey, minister of the Central Church of Christ, officiated.

Decorations in the church centered around a grouping of ficus trees intertwined with small white lights and framed by a pair of arch candelabra with white tapers and greenery. There were three bouquets of white gladiolus, white casablanca lilies, baby's breath, monte-casima and white snow crystals. On each side was a spiral candelabra with white tapers and greenery.

Brenda Schaffer, sister of the bride from Amarillo, was matron of honor. Heath Secret, brother of the groom from Rapid City, S.D., was best man.

Bridesmaids were Anna Lee Simpson, cousin of the bride, of Rio Hondo, Dedra Hardy of Floydada, Tracie Gilbert of Lubbock, and Kinann Campbell of Lubbock.

Junior bridesmaids, both cousins of the bride, were Nicole Wilson of Bloomington and Natalie Simpson of Rio Hondo.

Serving as groomsmen were Trey Skiles, Chris Woodard, Will Jones, all of Hereford, and Chuck Reinaur of Canyon.

Ushers were Jeremy Paetzold and Todd Reinart of Hereford. Serving as ushers and candle lighters were Robert Greenawalt, brother of the bride, of Lubbock, and Michael Schaffer, brother-in-law of the bride, of Amarillo.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown. The open vee neckline was complimented with long taper sleeves. The princess bodice was adorned with schiffli lace, pearls and sequins. The basque waistline allowed the ball gown skirt to fall to the floor and sweep into a cathedral train. A candy box bow adorned the back waistline. Delicate lace motifs and beading decorated the train and skirt along with solo pearl studs. Scalloped schiffli lace finished the hemline of the gown and train.

She wore a double layer veil of illusion attached to a tiara of flowers and pearls with a tulle pouf. The veil was fashioned by the bride's mother.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white casablanca lilies, bridal white roses, stephanotis, miniature dubonnet carnations and baby's breath, tied with white satin ribbons.

Bridal attendants wore black gowns accented with white and each carried a single red rose, tree fern and baby's breath tied with black, white and Forever Yours satin ribbons.

The couple was honored with a reception at the church.

Janette Simpson of Rio Hondo and Mary Pletcher of Bloomington, aunts of the bride, served cake. Leslie Campbell of Harlingen and Jimmie Greenawalt of Abilene, aunts of the bride, served almond punch and coffee.

Bridgett Secret, sister of the groom of Rapid City, S.D., attended at the guest register. Others assisting were Dolores McCuistian, Dorothy Brownlow, Cindy Sublett, Betty Wilcox, Maureen Self and Pat Lange, all of Hereford.

The bride's table was covered with a white cloth with a white lace overlay with crystal appointments. Her cake was a three tier white cake with white icing with scallops and Austrian lacework and fresh flowers. It was topped with a cowboy groom and bride, with wooden horseshoe and cotton bolls.

The groom's table was also covered with a white cloth with lace overlay and silver coffee service. His horseshoe shaped chocolate cake had chocolate icing and chocolate dipped strawberries.

After a wedding trip to Taos, N.M., the couple will be at home in Canyon.

The bride, a 1993 graduate of Hereford High School, is a student at West Texas A&M University majoring in elementary education. She is employed by University Pediatric Group in Amarillo.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent - FCE
Every year, over 17 million Americans suffer from depression. More than 80 percent of all cases can be successfully treated if such treatment is sought.

Clinical depression is a medical condition thought to be caused by biochemical disruptions in the brain.

Chemical messengers, known as neurotransmitters, which relay impulses from one nerve cell to another are believed to be off balance in persons suffering from depression.

Particularly three neurotransmitters, serotonin, norepinephrine, and dopamine, have been shown to be altered in depressed persons. An insufficient amount of one or more of these chemicals is thought to lead to depression.

The very symptoms caused by depression, however, may make it difficult for a depressed individual to recognize or act on the problem. Watch yourself and your loved ones for any of the following symptoms.

Consult your doctor if five or more of these symptoms (including at least one of the first two) persist every day for two weeks or more:

- *Persistent feelings of sadness, hopelessness, or pessimism
- *Loss of interest or pleasure in ordinary activities
- *Inappropriate feelings of guilt, worthlessness, or helplessness
- *Reduced interest in sex
- *Sleep disturbances (sleeping too much or difficulty sleeping)
- *Changes in appetite or weight
- *Restlessness or irritability
- *Thoughts of death or suicide
- *Difficulty concentrating, remembering, or making decisions.

Chronic pains that do not respond to treatment or have obvious physical causes. Keep in mind, depression is not a case of the "blues" or the grief of loss, which is accepted with time and causes periodic sadness. Rather, critical depression does not improve over a short period of time or when circumstances change.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

If a person learns how to obey they will one day know how to command. Seventh graders have been involved this first week of school in becoming acquainted with the "rules and regulations" of junior high. This has been done through various activities, including hands-on projects.

HJH welcomed several new teachers this year, including: Kay Richard, Superlab/Content Mastery; Amy Scott, Math 7, Yellow Team; Denise Mason, Math, Purple Team; Ray Baca, Girls PE/High School Girls Athletics; Adrienne Morris, Art; Mike Purcell, Texas History, Purple Team; Sandra Saul, HOSTS Math; Margaret Williams, Choir, HJH and HHS; Kathy Whipple, LVN Nurse; and Karen Flood, Long Term Substitute. Mrs. Flood will be teaching Ceramics this semester, taking Mrs. Goodin's classes while she is on leave-of-absence.

Texas history classes will begin a geography unit late this week and will be learning how the history of an area depends very much on the geography of the area. Parents becoming knowledgeable of the geography terms for each grade in their child's education would be a plus for both student and parent. Each grade stresses the same basic terms and then adds to the list!

Students and parents are to receive good grades for the first of school for their effort to "look nice and neat" for the beginning of the school year. We've never seen so many new shoes and fresh haircuts! Good job!

Thanks are extended to Mrs. Shook for taking my classes Monday through Wednesday and then Mrs. Solomon's duties Thursday and Friday. Having been a classroom teacher and a librarian, we feel she felt "at home".

And speaking of "at home", my husband Don is home again and recovering nicely from surgery. Thanks again to all of you for your prayers and concerns.

A reminder to parents, contact your student's team if and when you feel that there is some need, either for you or your child. We'd like to keep close contact with you.

"The wise in heart accept commands, but a chattering fool comes to ruin." Prov. 10:8 NIV

HRTA seeks new members

The membership drive for the Hereford Retired Teachers Association is now underway, according to Dempsey Alexander, vice president and membership chairman.

"Your HRTA membership is very important," said Dempsey, "so that we have a voice in Austin to make sure our retirement funds are maintained as intended." He pointed out that members received an increase in retirement annuities recently.

All teachers and former HISD employees can call Mary Dziuk, secretary, to join the association or seek further information, said Alexander.

The association meets the second Monday of each month, beginning Sept. 11, at the Senior Citizen Center. The meetings start at noon, or 11:30 a.m. for those wishing to eat lunch.

Reception will honor local couple

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Hanna will be honored at a reception on Sept. 3 in recognition of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The reception will be held from 2 p.m.-4 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church in Hereford.

Grant and Troyce Hanna were married Sept. 17, 1945, in Hereford where Mrs. Hanna was reared. Mr. Hanna, a native of Pilger, Neb., was stationed at the POW Camp. They met at the USO where she worked and were married at the end of World War II.

Their daughter, Cynthia Shattles, lives in Perryton and has a daughter Michelle. Their younger daughter Joette resides in Dallas.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP)-

A security guard carried a sobbing Courtney Love off the stage after the leader of the rock band Hole twice jumped into the audience to attack fans.

"Louder, you -!" she exhorted, apparently unhappy at the audience response on Friday's closing night of the summer Lollapalooza tour of alternative bands.

Love is the widow of former Nirvana lead singer Kurt Cobain, who committed suicide in April 1994.

Before the fracas with fans, Hole led the audience in a "Happy Birthday" sing-along for her daughter, demanding "respect for Frances Bean Cobain, who's 3 years old today."

5 VALUABLE VIRTUES

The glory that goes with wealth and beauty is fleeting and fragile; virtue is a possession glorious and eternal - Sallust

The dictionary defines virtue as: General moral excellence, right actions and thinking and personal qualities of merit and high regard. Virtues are the elements by which we should measure our heroes.

However, as I consider the individuals our youth, society and media hold in high regard, I see wealth, beauty and fame, but little virtue. Our heroes today are sports stars with huge salaries and wondrous talent, who abuse their bodies and minds with drugs, alcohol and sex. And, entertainers who have wealth, fame and beauty, but morals and values that would disgrace an alley cat.

And, public officials who have status and power, but couldn't tell the whole, unvarnished truth if their lives depended on it.

I am aware that I'm generalizing and perhaps even stereotyping. Yes, I know we have sports stars with virtue, entertainers with admirable qualities and politicians with integrity.

However, I suggest you look at published lists of our "heroes," and see who is on each list. You can decide if their personal lives exemplify qualities that are glorious and eternal, or vain, fleeting and fragile.

To guide you in your determination, I'd like for you to consider the qualities I've listed below. These virtues are centuries old, but up to date. They are narrow, but not confining. They are specific, but universal. You can use them to build a positive and powerful life.

Tried-and-true advice

- Don't rush to speak all you know. There is a proverb that says it is better to be thought a fool than to open your mouth and remove all doubt. Cautious silence allows you to listen and form opinions after you've heard all the facts.

- There is virtue and strength in quietness. By not declaring all you know immediately, you can keep folks guessing and improve your negotiating position.

- Don't exaggerate to impress others. When my mother would hear a group of people exaggerating and bragging she would say quietly to me, "The first liar never has a chance." She knew that one exaggeration leads to another and then another.

- Today, exaggerating is a politically correct form of lying. However, if you wish to possess the glorious and eternal, tell the truth. If you magnify and enlarge the facts, you soon lose your credibility. Your reputation for honesty is of greater value than any gain you'll ever get from embellishing and truth. Don't complain. Gripping and grumbling never solve a single problem. People who constantly find fault and express their dissatisfaction are never held in high esteem. Usually, they are avoided or joined by other constant complainers who form a mutual admiration society.

Rather than developing a reputation of complaining, work toward eliminating the sources of complaints. Strive to solve problems rather than pointing them out to others. Don't be a bore. Value the time of others in conversations, companionship and in the written word. Be brief and to the point. A good speech is twice as good if short. Long letters to lonely friends are acceptable, but in other writing don't use two words when one will do. Don't talk about yourself. No one else is ever as interested in that subject as you are.

- Expect the best, but plan for the worst. A positive attitude is a virtue when balanced with common sense and purpose. In good times, enjoy your prosperity. However, remember to set a little aside for a rainy day. I'm not just talking about money, but also love, friendship and service.

There they are, five valuable virtues. How do your heroes measure up?

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR WASTE DISPOSAL PERMIT RENEWAL
WARREN AND BOBBY OWEN, 340 Elm, Hereford, Texas 79045 has applied to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (Commission) for renewal of Permit No. 03232 which authorizes the disposal of waste and wastewater from a cattle feedyard. The cattle feedyard consists of an average daily maximum of 2,500 feeders. The waste treatment facilities include 1 storage pond for waste and wastewater retention. Wastewater from the ponds is disposed of by evaporation. Manure and solids are applied as fertilizer on agricultural land through contract manure haulers. No discharge of pollutants into the waters of the State is authorized by this permit.

The cattle feedyard is on the southeast corner of the intersection of Progressive Road and Dairy Road. The site is east of Hereford, Deaf Smith County, Texas. This location is in the drainage area of the Upper Prairie Dog Fork Red River in Segment No. 0229 of the Red River Basin.

The Executive Director of the Commission has prepared a draft permit which, if approved, will enforce existing applicable rules and regulations. It is proposed that the expiration date of the renewed permit be specified as midnight, five years after date of Commission approval.

Legal Authority: Section 26.028 of the Texas Water Code and 30 TAC Chapter 305 of the Rules of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

This application is subject to a Commission resolution adopted August 18, 1993, which directs the Commission's Executive Director to act on behalf of the Commission and issue final approval of certain permit matters. The Executive Director will issue this permit unless one or more persons file written protests and/or a request for a hearing within 30 days after publication of this notice.

If you wish to request a public hearing, you must submit your request in writing. You must state (1) your name, mailing address and daytime phone number; (2) the permit number or other recognizable reference to this application; (3) the statement "I/we request a public hearing;" (4) a brief description of how you, or the persons you represent, would be adversely affected by the granting of the application; (5) a description of the location of your property relative to the applicant's operations; and (6) your proposed adjustment to the application/permit which would satisfy your concerns and cause you to withdraw your request for hearing. If one or more protests and/or requests for hearing are filed, the Executive Director will not issue the permit and will forward the application to the Office of Hearings Examiners where a hearing may be held. Commission public hearings are evidentiary legal proceedings similar to civil court non-jury trials. Although general comments from the public may be submitted either in writing prior to the hearing, or orally at the start of the hearing, the law requires that the Commission's decision about whether to approve or deny the application be based on evidence and testimony submitted during the public hearing, presented under oath and subject to cross-examination by the other parties. Public comments are not evidence and cannot be the basis for the Commission's ultimate decision. In the event a hearing is held, the Office of Hearings Examiners will submit a recommendation to the Commission for final decision.

If no protests or requests for hearing are filed, the Executive Director will sign the permit 30 days after publication of this notice or thereafter. If you wish to appeal a permit issued by the Executive Director, you may do so by filing a written Motion for Reconsideration with the Chief Clerk of the Commission no later than 20 days after the date the Executive Director signs the permit.

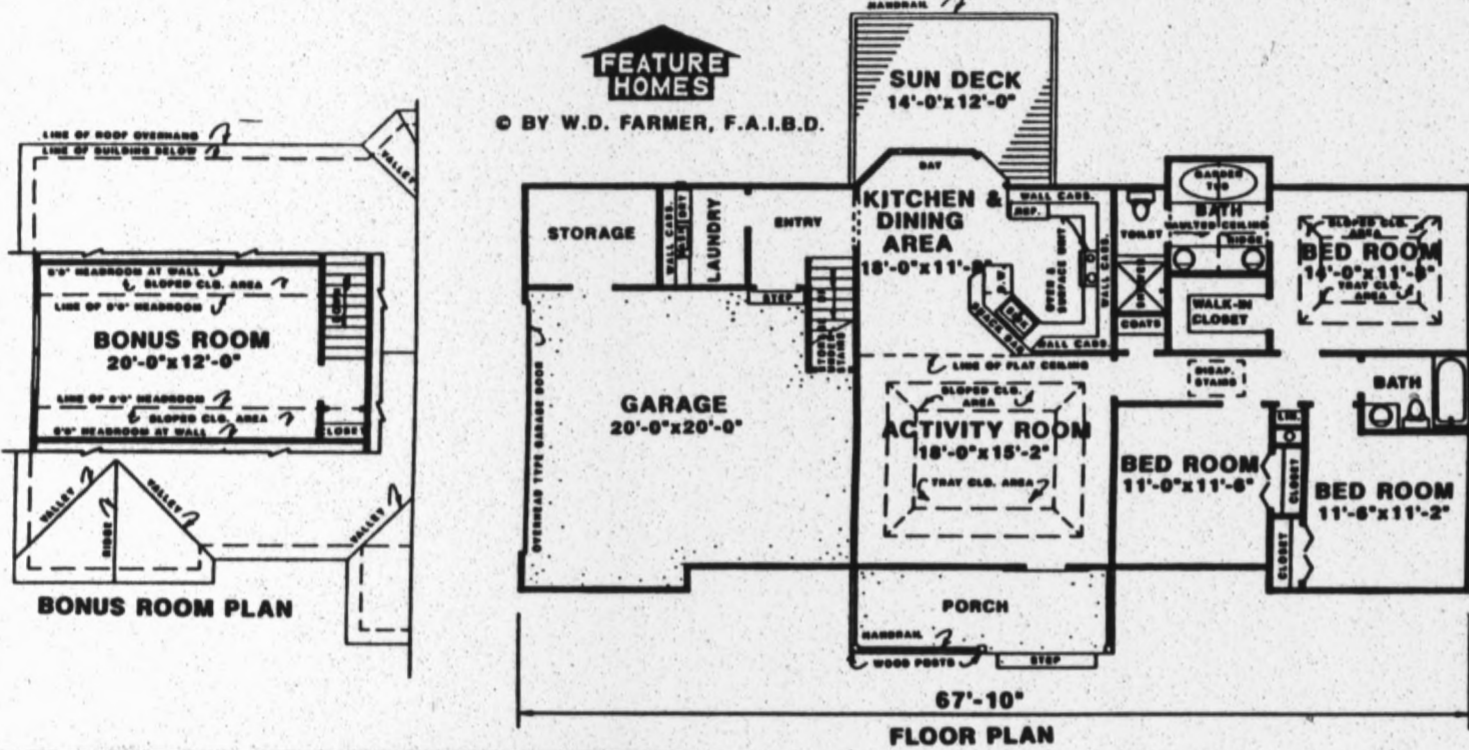

Requests for a public hearing on this application should be submitted in writing to Chief Clerk's Office - Mail Code 105, Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, P. O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711, Telephone (512) 239-3312. Information regarding hearing procedures may be obtained by contacting Kerry D. Sullivan, Assistant Chief Hearings Examiner - Mail Code 102 at the same address or by telephone at (512) 239-4100. Information concerning any technical aspect of this application can be obtained by writing Andrew W. A covered front porch introduces this home which offers both comfort and economy. The luxurious great room has a tray ceiling and is of generous proportions. The broad vista across the great room and kitchen-dining area of the home adds a sense of spaciousness. The dining area has a bay window and a door is provided leading to the rear sun deck. The kitchen includes wrap around counters with a useful snack bar below the sink over-look.

Alongside this area of the home is a stair leading up to the spacious bonus room over the garage, providing plenty of optional living space. Also adjacent is a large laundry room and double garage entry. The bedrooms of the home are located in a wing of their own providing seclusion for sleeping members of the family. There are three bed rooms, two of which are at the front of the home and share a family bath at the end of the hall. The master suite is particularly impressive for a home of this size. The bed room is topped off with a tray ceiling and the garden bath has a vaulted ceiling. An oversized walk in closet adjoins this bed room.

The exterior of the home has an elegant flair with triple gables to the front. It is constructed of a combination of horizontal siding and stone. The plan is available with crawl space or slab foundation and includes details necessary for FHA and VA approval. Special construction details for energy efficiency are also included. Plan number 388 includes 1,396 square feet of heated space plus 316 square feet of space in the bonus room, which can be finished later. For further information on plan number 388 write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

Vinyl is attractive, economical option for home exterior siding

Re-siding is a home improvement that should enhance the looks of a home. Choose the right kind and it should be an economical and durable improvement as well.

Of all the different types available, solid vinyl siding remains the most popular because it is attractive, economical, durable, easy to care for and can be installed over existing walls.

Since it has color throughout, there's no surface color to wear off which means the cost and bother of painting every few years is eliminated. Because of this, the cost of installing vinyl siding should eventually pay for itself.

Suitable for architectural styles ranging from traditional Colonials to contemporary ranches, vinyl siding comes in horizontal or vertical styles and in various clapboard widths. In general, says the Vinyl Siding Institute, vertical siding is used on contemporary homes or in combination with horizontal siding to blend modern with traditional styling.

Available in smooth or woodgrain textures, scratches won't mar the appearance of vinyl siding. Nor are there any blistering or peeling problems. An occasional rinse with a garden hose or mild detergent and water is about the only maintenance required.

Vinyl siding also comes with matching accessories such as shutters, gutters, downspouts, soffits, fascia and other trim for additional economical, durable, low-maintenance protection.

Decorating room is tall order

Whether starting from scratch with a nursery or transforming an adolescent's room into a sophisticated pre-teen's retreat, decorating a child's room is a tall order. Thibaut, a leading manufacturer of wallcoverings and fabrics, compiled these tips to help parents create rooms kids of all ages can call home.

• Make it a family affair — Involve your child in the decorating process, but make sure this is a room that you can live with too. Shop around first and then share your choices with your child. You might even tack wallpaper samples and fabric swatches to the wall and have a family meeting to discuss your options.

• Pick a theme — Personal touches, such as a child's original artwork or treasured toys, are good inspirations for themes. It's easy to create a coordinated look with the wide variety of wallpapers, borders and companion fabrics available. Thibaut's "Imagination" collection offers everything from celestial and circus motifs to bold stripes and checkerboard patterns.

• Plan for growth — You'll find basic patterns, such as geometrics or stripes, make classic statements that will last throughout childhood. If the room is set aside as a nursery for younger siblings, or you plan to redecorate as your child grows older, try more traditional juvenile patterns.

• Think like your child — Your tastes are not necessarily your offspring's, so you may make compromises on the overall theme, but both of you can still have fun with a little creativity. Suspend coordinating fabrics from the ceiling as an alternate to a canopy bed, make a fort in a room with an Old West motif, or revive an old toy chest or favorite chair by covering with wallpaper borders.

• Seek advice — You'll find retailers a helpful source for good decorating advice. Store displays, wallcovering books and magazine articles are also great inspirations.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

We will be having our annual business meeting Monday, Sept. 11 at 7 p.m. Another year has come and gone and time to elect three new directors. According to our By-Laws, a director is elected for three years.

The directors elect their President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer.

We will be losing three very good members of our board. Shirley Garrison has served as president, Truman Thurston, vice president and Wayne Amstutz, treasurer. These men have been good workers as well as good board members.

We are always amazed at how well our board members work together for the betterment of our organization. They not only work with our program but also the community.

There is one requirement to vote in the annual election. You have to be a member of HSCA. So bring your membership card.

Guess What? Old Blue, our 1980 Chevy Van needs to retire! The Board has voted to buy another mini-van to replace her. But as you know we need money. Our 1993 Dodge was funded by Emily Suggs, Shirley and Mildred Garrison and the Amarillo Area Foundation.

The 1994 Astro mini-van with a lift was given as a memorial for Homer Garrison by his family and friends. We appreciate the people who made it possible for us to have these two new vans.

We are now starting a fund for this replacement. It will be used to deliver meals and transport our people who cannot drive or are not able to.

FALL TOUR! We have a tour planned to Branson, Eureka Springs, down Highway 7 through Harrison, AR to Hot Springs. This should have some interesting sights. We need your reservations soon. Let me know. Call 364-5681.

See you at the center.

Woman minister laughs over name coincidence

By ROY A. JONES II
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas - It was no attempt to hide their gender but the first two ordained women to pastor any United Methodist church in Abilene were Sammie and Joe.

Well, actually, the current pastor of Epworth United Methodist Church goes by the nickname, Jo. But the Rev. Jonette Gay admits with a laugh that she was named after Little Joe Cartwright, the TV character played by the late Michael Landon.

"I'm embarrassed to say that because it sounds so country," the congenial pastor said in a joking,

Festus Hagin drawl. "But Daddy loved 'Bonanza' and he already had three daughters when I came along so I was always his 'Little Jo.'"

Reckon the nickname had any subconscious effect on her drive to serve God in a role dominated by men for some 200 years, a role still opening more slowly in the heart of the Bible Belt?

Gay just laughs, but admits that "external pressures" certainly caused her to miss some signals that God was sending her way as a teen-ager. Such signals are much

Crafts to be on Wednesday

By PEGGY MAXWELL
Activities Director

Every Wednesday will be Craft Day at the senior center. We will do all kinds of hand crafts from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Ann Carroll will be our instructor-advisor. Bring what you are working with or try a new craft. We welcome anyone to come with the crafts and visit.

We always like to admire your projects and learn how you do your craft. Ann will help us to read all directions and start us on new crafts.

Come join the fun, activities, and friendship.

Also, we have a ceramics class on Wednesday afternoon. We would love to have more participants.

With the holiday seasons coming, you may want to make some new items or help us prepare for the Festival of Trees bazaar.

President's Corner

By Shirley Garrison, HSCA President

It's once again time for signing up the sponsors for the Festival of Trees. I am happy to report that the job is 95 percent complete. A big thanks to Eldred Brown and Hershell Black and all the willing business entities for their support.

This is the Senior Center's major fundraiser each year and is crucial to its operating in the black. I understand from the tree decoration's chair person that she would welcome more decorators, whether individuals or clubs. Each year the Festival gets bigger and better.

Let's make this one the best of all.

As you all know I farmed most of my life and I still have an interest in the well being of our servants of the land. I read an article recently that stated if our grain prices had escalated at the same rate as the Japanese yen since the 1970's that wheat would be $10 per bushel.

Fortunately, it is around $4.40 per bushel this year due to world wide shortages. Cattle prices have not improved and fat cattle are losing money. At these prices it seems there is no shortage of red meat. Get out those grills and eat up as beef is a bargain.

In closing, by this time next month we can announce the three new board members who will be leading the HSCA for the next three years.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
RD/LD

Its full name is DIABETES MELLITUS and is a term for a group of chronic diseases in which the body fails to complete conversion of certain foods into energy.

During digestion, normally, the body changes sugars, starches, and other foods into a form of sugar called glucose. The blood stream carries this glucose to the body cells, where, with the help of insulin (a hormone produced in the pancreas), it is changed into a quick energy for immediate use, or stored for future needs. This process of turning food into energy is crucial, because the body depends on energy for everything from thinking to physical activity.

In diabetes, something goes wrong with the normal process and glucose can't enter the body cells. While the food is turned into glucose readily enough the problem is with the insulin, which helps the glucose enter the body cells.

The most common forms of diabetes are Type I and Type II. In Type I, the person's pancreas doesn't produce enough insulin, so the supply of glucose can't be used, and high blood sugar results. In Type II, the pancreas produces enough insulin, but the body cells can't use it properly. This means that the unused glucose once again causes high blood sugar levels and high blood pressure.

High blood-glucose levels cause the many complications associated with diabetes. And right now, there is no cure for this disease.

About 14 million Americans currently have diabetes, and each year, that figure grows, as more than 700,000 others learn they have some form of the disease.

Diabetes and its complications are the third leading cause of death in the United States. It is the major cause of blindness in adults and heart attacks. The life expectancy for those with some kind of diabetes is one-third shorter than that of the general population.

The most important thing is to recognize diabetes early so that treatment can start before the disease has a chance to damage your health. Right now, about 7 million people have diabetes and don't know it. They could be helped if they knew the warning signs.

The causes and cures for diabetes remain a mystery. Who's most likely to get diabetes? People who are overweight, those with a family history of diabetes, people over age 40, women are 20 percent more likely to be diagnosed than men, blacks have a 33 percent higher chance of developing Type II diabetes and Hispanics more than 300 percent.* (1

Warning Signs of Diabetes:

Type I

(Usually develops quickly and is common in children and young adults)

- *Frequent urination
- *Excessive thirst
- *Extreme hunger
- *Dramatic loss of weight
- *Irritability
- *Weakness and fatigue
- *Nausea and vomiting

Type II

(Can develop over time)

- *Any of the Type I symptoms
- *Excess weight
- *Drowsiness
- *Blurred vision
- *Tingling, numbness in hands and feet
- *Skin infections
- *Itching
- *Slow healing cuts (especially on feet)

Some terms you should know:

Hyperglycemia - This is high blood sugar and occurs when blood glucose levels are too high. When diabetes is under control, this condition isn't present, but it can happen to diabetics when too much food is eaten or not enough insulin is taken. It also may happen to diabetics in treatment who become ill or who are under stress.

Hypoglycemia - This is low blood sugar, sometimes called "insulin shock". It can happen quickly in people using insulin if too little food is eaten, if a meal is delayed or if extra exercise is done. Low blood sugar must be treated as an emergency because it can lead to unconsciousness. Sugar or sugary foods should be taken.

Ketoacidosis - This is called "diabetic coma", and is a condition of too little insulin or too much sugar. This problem builds up gradually and is characterized by ketones in the urine. High levels of ketones are dangerous but fortunately this condition can be controlled before it becomes life threatening.

Diabetologist - This is the name of the specialist physician who trained to evaluate and care for people with diabetes or suspected of developing diabetes.

Secondary Diabetes - This is caused by drugs or chemicals which damage the pancreas or other endocrine glands. Certain medicines and diseases of the pancreas (such as cancer) can cause this form of diabetes.

Gestational Diabetes - This type is developed by some women during pregnancy. The condition usually goes away after the baby is born, but mothers should be checked to make sure. About 30-40 percent of these women will develop Type II diabetes within 5 to 10 years.

Impaired Glucose Tolerance - This used to be called borderline diabetes, but it's no longer considered to be an actual form of diabetes. But people with this condition have an increased risk of developing diabetes. If you have this diagnosis, it means that your blood levels fall between normal and diabetic. This condition can be treated by diet and weight loss to prevent it from progressing to diabetes.

Food's role in diabetes is important and essential in managing this disease. The nutritional needs are basically the same; well-rounded meals to help improve overall health and help in efforts to maintain ideal weight. In general your daily intake should include: 55-60% carbohydrates, 30% or less fat, and the remainder from protein. Always remember each person with a diabetic condition needs individualized guidelines and diet instructions.

Exercise is an essential part of a balanced treatment program. It can decrease your need for insulin or medication, decrease appetite and burn body fat. Regular exercise can make you feel better and is a great way to reduce stress.

Maintaining a healthy lifestyle is a good idea for everyone. As one of the many sufferers of diabetes, you must be especially aware of the ways in which your lifestyle affects your health.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I have a 16-year-old girl in my neighborhood clean my house once a week. Am I required to pay Social Security taxes on her wages?

A: If you pay a household worker $1000 or more in cash wages during the year, the work is covered by Social Security. However, earnings for household workers under age 18 are exempt from Social Security tax unless household employment is the worker's primary occupation. For more information, contact Social Security or the Internal Revenue Service.

Q: I've paid Social Security taxes all my life and plan to start receiving checks next year when I become 62. However I recently heard that Social Security pays check to people who are disabled and have never worked and paid Social Security taxes. This disturbs me. Is it true?

A: No. Social Security taxes pay only for Social Security payments and Medicare hospital insurance payments. These payments are for people who have paid in enough to be insured or to their dependents or survivors. The Social Security Administration does have responsibility for administering the Supplemental Security Income program, which pays checks to people who are aged, blind, or disabled, and who have limited income and assets. However, the money used to pay these checks comes from general revenues of the federal government, not from Social Security revenues.

Q: Will Medicare pay for a chiropractor's services?

A: When furnished by a licensed chiropractor, Medicare will help pay for the manual manipulation of the spine to correct a subluxation that can be demonstrated by x-ray. That is the only chiropractic service covered by Medicare.

Q: I started getting Social Security checks in January. I work part-time, but my hourly wage just increased. Do I need to report this to Social Security now, or, since it is late in the year, can I wait until I get my W-2 form next January?

A: You should report this change in earnings right away. When you filed for Social Security payments to start in January, you gave an estimate of your expected earnings for 1995. The amount you expect to make in 1995 has changed as your hourly wage has changes. We encourage you to report immediately any change in earnings. The longer you wait, the greater the chance you will be overpaid Social Security checks. The law requires you to repay any overpayment, so it is best to prevent their occurring.

Q: My wife is 10 years younger than I am. She is 65 and now receives a wife's check on my Social Security record as she has never worked. What happens to her Social Security check if I pass away?

A: Your wife's payment would increase to a widow's amount. If your payment started when you were 65 or older, she would receive 100% of the amount you are getting at death. If your payment started before you were 65, her payment as a widow will be reduced somewhat from that 100% amount. The amount of the reduction depends on the age at which you started getting Social Security. If, for planning purposes, you would like to know the exact amount, contact Social Security at 1-800-772-1213.

If you wish to have your questions answered in this column, please write to Byron Sansom, district Manager, Senior Scene, Social Security Administration, 3501 W. 45th, Suite E., Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Social Security

By JIM MCDANIEL
Social Security Manager

Retirement is not everyone's cup of tea. While some look forward to complete freedom from the workplace, others find that working fulfills some aspects of their lives. Some need the additional income, while others simply need to have the hours filled. In either case, you should know that you can do some work and still receive your Social Security retirement benefits.

Partial benefits may be payable when you're employed and eligible for retirement benefits (the earliest age is 62) or widow(ers) benefits (at age 60 or older). If you're under age 70, you'll be subject to an annual earnings limit. If your earnings exceed the limit, part of your benefits will be withheld. In 1995, the earnings limit is $8,160 if you're under age 65; $1 is withheld for every $2 you earn over that amount. If you're over 65 but not yet 70, $1 will be withheld for every $3 of earnings that exceed $11,280. If you're 70 or older, you can collect full benefits no matter how much you earn.

Here's an example of how this could work for you. Let's say, you are 63 and eligible to receive $800 a month in Social Security benefits -- that's $9,600 a year. You have a job that pays you $20,160, which is $12,000 over the 1995 earnings limit of $8,160. Because you earn $12,000 over the earnings limit, we would withhold $1 from your Social Security benefit for every $2 you earn over the limit. In your case, we would withhold $6,000 of your benefits. However, you would receive $3,600 from Social Security while earning $20,160 on your job. Your total income from work and Social Security for the year would be $23,760.

Next year, if you were still working, you could be getting even more money. The annual earnings limit rises each year. Therefore, a smaller amount of your earnings would be withheld if you exceed the limit. And, because Social Security refigures benefits each year to consider additional earnings, you could get a higher benefit.

If you want to find out if you can work and collect Social Security benefits at the same time, call the toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 (between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.) to make an appointment to talk with a Social Security representative.

The first gift coupons were introduced by Benjamin Talbert Babbit of New York in 1865 to discourage purchasers of his soap from the idea that they were paying for the wrapper. Each wrapper was printed with the word coupon and ten coupons earned you a lithograph picture.

more obvious in hindsight, she added. When Bishop Alfred Norris, the Northwest Texas Conference's first black bishop, made the appointments two years ago it was reported that Gay apparently was the first woman appointed pastor of an Abilene United Methodist church.

If detected by anyone, the error went uncorrected in print until now. The Rev. Sammie Ellis Rainey, now pastoring in Borger, was so far ahead of her time that her Abilene service was simply overlooked. She led the same congregation as Gay, only 15 years earlier.

Reared near Buna, in the pine thickets 50 miles from Beaumont, the 32-year-old Gay joked that she lived in the same room for the first 18 years, but has moved nearly every year since.

"I've talked to a lot of men clergy who really didn't have any obstacles. At 12 years old they decided they were going to be a pastor, and went out and became a pastor," she said. "But every woman I've talked to has struggled with the call: 'Is this really what God is telling me to do?'"

"Church was always my whole life," she said. "I remember during my senior year in high school the pastor was talking about a call to the ministry and I thought, 'Yeah, everything you are saying I am experiencing, but you can't be talking about me. I'm a woman.'"

"It didn't occur to me that God was speaking to me, through him, at that moment," she added.

Although she was unsure what she wanted to do she followed her mother and an older sister into teaching, earning a bachelor's degree at Stephen F. Austin University in 1985.

"Teaching seemed like a nice womanly thing to do, but I realized during student teaching, 'This is probably not it,'" she said. Still searching, she served as youth pastor for a church in Tyler for a year, but found even the lay ministry "was not enough."

While teaching remedial reading in Midland for a year, she decided to remedy a personal itch: she enrolled in Asbury Theological Seminary in Kentucky. Still, she said, she was unsure if God really wanted her to pastor. While there were several women in many of her seminary courses she was the only one in preaching classes.

"One night we were talking in class about external opposition - the fact that many churches really don't believe in women in ministry. I told the teacher, a woman pastor, that it was not the external opposition that was keeping me from it; it was my internal fear."

"From that moment I realized I couldn't disobey God anymore," she said. "It was a real turning point for me."

She went on to earn a master's degree in divinity from Asbury in 1991. Her first pastoral appointment, was to a 20-member church in tiny Darrouzett, "60 miles from a Wal-Mart and only three miles from Oklahoma," she said.

"It was hard being a single pastor in the middle of nowhere, but it was a learning experience," she smiled. "I know I have not wasted my time in whatever I did, even teaching school. I was learning and growing and it helped prepare me to serve God better."

She also ministered in Anton for a year before being assigned to Epworth. She loves the 200-member congregation, but wants to attract more younger families and youth. The planned hiring of a part-time music minister should help, she said.

Eventually, she should like to write more, perhaps a book. Right now she's content to preach and teach, which she considers her best spiritual gift.

"And I love visitation, too," she said. "Sometimes I go home and think, 'Wow! And I get paid for this!'"

Thank you to all of the Hereford Senior Citizens. You truly are a wonderful family, and it is a great pleasure to work for you. The following is just a few of many memorable thoughts to honor you.

The hours of a day go by so quickly.
When did eight to five become a time of joy?
The work I do doesn't feel like work at all, but by the end of the day I feel an exhaustion I never knew.
I run all day to keep up with you - the endless energy you have is always amazing to me.

Your body may be over sixty, but your spirit is a healthy twenty.

Your good will towards others is always near - never a moment should someone fear they are alone.

You are a family that has survived so much - and yet you laugh and play like innocent children.

There are those who forget why we have come so far.

It is you my friends that have made this great little town.

A good laugh several times a day I hear - is great for the soul.

Come join us in a game of cards or dominoes - or maybe ceramics, quilting, or dancing is more your style.

Whatever your desire may be - there's always a warm welcome here for you.

We're always glad to see you - did you know you "make our day"?

If you're unable to come join us my friend - don't you fret.

We'll be seeing you real soon.

Yes, you all are very dear and close to our hearts.

Your warm smiles make everything alright.

I work for you my friends hoping to give back a little of what you have given to me.

A future - is your gift. I only hope I can give the same to the babes of tomorrow.

Gees! I sure is quiet now. I guess everyone went home.

The day has finally come to a close - "Please Lord, be with my friends tonight".

Hummm? I wonder what tomorrow will bring?

Roosevelt's old Social Security Act to be measured

"We can never insure one hundred percent of the population against one hundred percent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life, but we have tried to frame a law which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and to his family against the loss of a job and against poverty-ridden old age..."

Franklin D. Roosevelt

When President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act on August 14, 1935, he stated his vision for America. On the occasion of the 60th Anniversary of the program, we have a rare opportunity to measure the vision against the reality. In doing so, I would like to first focus on the elderly as a primary target of the Social Security Act. In a later column, we'll measure the status of other groups against the Roosevelt vision.

Historian Arthur Schlesinger described the times in his book, The Age of Roosevelt. The great Depression had an even more devastating impact on the elderly. Unemployment among older workers was estimated at 30 percent. Fewer than 18 persons out of 100 were covered by a pension plan.

The law Roosevelt signed met the problems of old-age by a federal system of old-age benefits for retired workers who had been employed in industry and commerce. It also provided for federal grants in aid to the States to help them give financial assistance to the aged, as well as the blind and disabled.

The next major program change for the elderly came in 1965 with the passage of the Medicare program. It had become clear that for the elderly, the cost of health care was the number one enemy. It depleted income and savings and eroded whatever financial security the Social Security benefits provided. Medicare initially provided protection for people 65 and over. It includes two parts -- Part A for hospital bills and Part B for doctor bills and other bills not paid under the hospital insurance coverage.

In 1972, two changes occurred that had a major impact on the economic status of elderly Americans. First, the Social Security benefit formula was changed to provide automatic cost-of-living increases to help benefits resist inflation. The idea was to take the program out of the realm of politics by making unnecessary the periodic increases the Congress was forced to legislate and to provide greater security for beneficiaries.

A second change transferred the State adult assistance programs under the Social Security Act for the aged, blind, and disabled to the federal level, administered by the Social Security Administration. A new program was created -- "Supplemental Security Income" -- or SSI. SSI payments were designed to provide a nationwide, uniform, floor of income protection for aged, blind and disabled persons with limited income and resources. The SSI program is financed from federal general revenues, not from Social Security payroll taxes.

Today, 95 percent of workers 65 and over are eligible for retirement benefits. Nearly 60 percent of the elderly depend on Social Security for over half of their income, and almost one-third rely on it for their sole income. Medicare has taken the burden of health care off the backs of the elderly.

When the Social Security Act was signed, 35 percent of the elderly were in poverty. Today less than 15 percent of the elderly have incomes below the poverty line. And people 65 and over with little income and resources may qualify for help from SSI.

Roosevelt's vision was the beginning of a process that would make poverty ridden old age less of a risk for Americans. To most Americans, this vision has become a reality.

Harvard Beets

2 pounds fresh beets, untrimmed
1/2 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

1 1/2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 1/2 teaspoons acceptable
margarine*

Trim leaves off beets, leaving 1-inch tops. Do not cut off root end. Rinse thoroughly but do not peel. Place beets in a saucepan over medium-high heat. Cover with water and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and cook 30 minutes, or until knife pierces beet easily. Remove beets from heat and drop into cold water. Slip off skins and dice beets into cubes. Set aside.

In a saucepan, combine remaining ingredients except margarine and bring to a boil. Add beets and stir and cook 2 minutes more. Stir in margarine and serve.

Microwave Method: Cook and dice beets as directed above. Set aside. Combine sauce ingredients, except lemon rind, in heat-proof glass bowl and cook on high 3 to 3 1/2 minutes, or until sauce bubbles and is thick. Add lemon rind and diced beets. Cook 2 minutes on high. Stir in margarine and serve. Serves 4; 1/2 cup per serving.

Multimedia service campaign helps citizens with social security

"For the times that count, count on Social Security." That's the theme for Social Security's new multimedia public service campaign.

The campaign is designed to encourage people to learn more about what their Social Security tax dollars are buying, according to Jim McDaniel, Social Security Manager in Amarillo.

"Unfortunately, many people think of Social Security as a retirement program, but Social Security actually is a program for people of all ages," McDaniel said. "It pays benefits to people with disabilities and to the families of deceased workers."

"Young people who worry about whether Social Security will be there when they're ready to retire don't realize that it protects them right now," McDaniel said. "For example, if they became disabled and couldn't work for a year or longer, they could get monthly benefits."

More than 4 million people with disabilities and another 1.6 million of their dependents get benefits, too.

Campaign materials encourage people to call and ask for the booklet Basic Facts About Social Security. People who do will learn that:

- * younger Americans face roughly a one in five chance of dying before reaching age 65;

- * more than seven million people get survivors benefits and two million of them are children;

- * the average monthly payment to a disabled worker with a spouse and two children is $1,100.

They'll also learn where they can get additional information, including a Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement.

The statement gives workers an estimate of what their retirement, disability, and survivors benefits might be and can help them plan financially for them and their family's future.

Social Security was never intended to be the sole source of income.

It should be supplemented with pensions, savings, and other investments. "By telling people what they can expect from Social Security, we hope they'll be in a better position to secure their financial future," McDaniel said.

The campaign includes television, radio, and print public service announcements in English and Spanish.

McDaniel said that people who want Basic Facts About Social Security can call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213.

"Our lines are busiest early in the week and early in the month so, if you're calling for the booklet, try calling later in the week and month," McDaniel added.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Readers: Summer is a favorite time to barbecue, so here are some hints about food safety to keep in mind.

If meat is going to be marinated, leave it in the refrigerator, not out on the counter. If the same marinade is going to be served as a side dish, set some aside. Don't serve the liquid that the meat has been marinated in.

If food is precooked before grilling, then barbecue the meat, chicken or fish immediately because bacteria can start to grow if there is a time lapse between cooking methods.

Raw and cooked meats should not be placed on the same dishes or cutting board. Bacteria can be transmitted by using the same plate to carry the raw meat to the grill and then bring the cooked meat back from the grill.

In warm or hot weather, don't let food sit out for more than an hour. All leftovers should be put in the refrigerator promptly.

Dear Heloise: What can I do to remove the slimy residue caused by liquid fabric softener in the plastic dispenser in my washing machine? You've addressed this problem before, but I can't remember what you said to do. — Gloria Lowrey, Winston-Salem, N.C.

This is an often-asked question and the best part is the residue is easy to remove.

Pour some very hot tap water into the fabric softener dispenser to help dissolve the gunk. Follow by using a long bottle brush to scrub out any stubborn stuff. It may take several times.

American Orient Express provides vintage service

By SHIRLEY JINKINS
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas - They're unmistakable, those quaint, royal blue and beige rail coaches in line behind a mammoth gray Amtrak column, bringing up the rear and bringing out the beauty of bygone train travel as they pull out of Fort Worth's downtown depot.

American Orient Express, they're labeled, in that distinctive block script. It's the Branson Limited, plying its way into the Missouri Ozarks from San Antonio on the South Texas prairie. And even though the Branson destination is down-home, the American Orient Express service, surroundings and atmosphere are straight out of an old movie or vintage mystery novel.

Late-afternoon sunlight gilding the starched-white tablecloths of the dining car has a golden, parchment quality. Leaving the city behind, gliding into timeless countryside, the numbing sensation of slipping back 50 years is palpable.

Train travel like this isn't designed for anyone who's in a hurry to get there. Schedules, like babies, don't keep, and lengthy waits on sidetracks as freight trains went by were commonplace. But, out there in rural America, small boys still chase the Branson Limited, and farm families on front porches still wave as the early morning train cruises by.

If you treasure solitude, the Branson Limited may not be your ride, either, though one could stay closeted in a private compartment the entire time. But companionable conversation flows in the public cars, and fellow travelers are a big part of the fun.

The scenic route is especially beautiful from Little Rock on into Hollister, the quaint Missouri station where the tour culminates, two miles from Branson. It was once the route of Missouri Pacific Eagles through Texas and following the White River of Arkansas for more than 100 miles before reaching the Ozarks.

According to one rail enthusiast on the return trip, the Branson-to-Newport, Ark., stretch is a must-ride. The scenery's great, and the cast rails are remarkably smooth. Add to that, the distinction of being in the New York car (he immediately seated himself on the rear circular lounge and removed his shoes) and you've got a memorable, aficionado's trip.

The train at its capacity can accommodate 112 passengers in 11 cars: six sleepers, two club, two dining, and the New York parlor/observation lounge. A recent Branson excursion in April included four sleepers, the Chicago dining car, St. Moritz club car and New York parlor/lounge.

The cars were renovated, of course, in 1989: most were built between 1948 and 1958 by the Pullman Standard Co. in Chicago, the St. Louis Car Co. and American Car and Foundry.

The sleeping accommodations, with car names like Berlin, Vienna, Paris and Istanbul, are like napping in your favorite old movie. Paneling is all mahogany, and each sleeping compartment includes a water closet (snug, yes, but private), upper and lower berths that make into a day couch, a vanity with a sink, and an irresistible picture window.

The Chicago dining car looked especially welcoming at the Hollister station at dusk, each small table lamp alight through the curtained windows and each setting of china, crystal and white linen ready for a meal.

Passengers looking for upscale, cocktail-lounge opulence on the rails settle in the stylish St. Moritz art deco club car. Life here revolves around the ebony grand piano and marble beverage bar, sumptuous brocade sofa and armchair seating, and card table.

But most people gravitate to the rear of the train, where the most well-known car glides along the rails like a swan.

The New York parlor/observation car was dedicated in 1948 by Dwight Eisenhower, and served two decades on the famous 20th Century Limited. Now, it's a monument to gracious travel, its bullet-shaped rear offering an all-around scenic panorama. The red velvet circular seat is pleasant any time of day or night, but makes an especially great spot to read during the early morning before the big wraparound bar opens nearby. Less opulent than the St. Moritz, the New York is the most user-friendly car on the train, a lovely old rolling living room in which to curl up and daydream.

The American Orient Express operations and reservations center is headquartered in San Antonio's historic Sunset Depot. It is a joint venture with the Swedish company that operates the original Nostalgic Istanbul Orient Express, and Trans-Texas Rail Inc. of San Antonio.

This month the train dropped its Branson Limited designation and began running transcontinental, from San Antonio to San Francisco, and from San Francisco to Washington, D.C.

Branson trips pick up again in October. New Orleans excursions are offered during the spring.

It's not a cheap trip. Fares run $1,225 per person, double occupancy, for the five-day package, which does include two nights' accommodations in Branson, show tickets, breakfasts and dinners, and an excursion on the new Showboat Branson Belle.

You can get to Branson on a bus tour for about half the cost and even less, but no diesel-belching box can compare to the genteel appeal of a vintage train on the rails.

After all, people don't line up alongside the highway to wave at just another bus.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Those in our bridge club are all having sleeping problems. We have tried warm milk and scotch and other home remedies. No luck. Could you possibly help us? We are 70 to 76 years of age.

ANSWER: After years of answering such appeals, I have settled on an eight-step program to overcome ordinary insomnia.

Here it is:

- Have a consistent rising time. Stick to it, no matter when you're tired or awoken.
- Don't nap. Day naps rob night sleep.
- Never lie sleepless longer than a half-hour after retiring. Read a book, an insomniac's bedside friend. No television, which is for losers who are beyond help.
- Daily exercise helps. Exercise in the daytime, not the evening.
- Avoid evening alcohol. It makes you groggy and leaves your body groping for sleep later. Warm milk's all right. Scotch worries me.
- Stay away from caffeine after noon.
- Take a hot bath an hour or two before bed.
- Correct physical and emotional bars to sleep. They include depression and arthritis, either of which silently works against the body's rest needs.

Intransigent, chronic insomnia should prompt a general health examination. Insomnia occasionally augurs otherwise silent illnesses.

For more on sleeplessness, see my report on the subject. For a copy, write: Dr. Donohue — No. 30, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: One of my patients insists I ask you about her chronic pruritus. She has seen multiple dermatologists and myself with no relief or diagnosis yet. Apparently she thinks you might know something about this and, if so, we would appreciate any information you might share. — C.J., M.D.

ANSWER: By now, you and your colleagues certainly have entertained many possible causes of chronic pruritus — body itch. They include Hodgkin's disease, kidney failure, liver disturbance, thyroid problems, diabetes and polycythemia.

My usual advice to readers homes in on what I tell them is probably a universal if homely part of the problem: the dryness. Most patients tend to ignore simple steps. I tell them to take fewer showers or baths. Use soaps only under the arms and around the groin. Blot dry. Many patients, as you know, irritate an already inflamed dermis.

My files burst, as must your own, with skin applications. I favor softeners such as Eucerin, Lubriderm or plain old petroleum jelly.

I usually suggest a switch to the mildest laundry detergents.

I find use of antihistamines not a bad idea for itch control, especially newer types that permit use without sedation effects.

If you or I ever find a magic bullet, either of us will be guaranteed a wing in the medical hall of fame.

When you steal from one author, it's plagiarism; if you steal from many, it's research.

—Wilson Mizner

Fasten seat belts as Fox's fall lineup takes off this week...

BY AMY HIBBERT

Fox is off to a flying start when it begins its new fall lineup this week.

While the other networks are busy wrapping up reruns, Fox blasts off on Thursday, Aug. 31, with two season premieres and a series debut.

Viewers should fasten seat belts and return trays to their full, upright position for the launching of The Crew. The new comedy explores the lives of four young, single flight attendants.

Maggie is a friendly, happy-go-lucky conservative young woman. Although she and Jess are very different, they are still close pals.

Their good friends and co-workers are Randy Anderson (Charles Esten) and Paul Steadman (David Burke). Randy, a handsome Southern gentleman, can't seem to stay in a relationship. Paul, a warm and friendly guy, would like to settle down - if only he could find the right man.

Rounding out the cast are Christine Estabrook as the passive-aggressive supervisor, Dondre T. Whitfield as MacArthur "Mac" Edmundson, owner and bartender of a local hangout for the flight attendants, and Lane Davies as the ruggedly handsome pilot.

The concept of exploring the attendants' job pressures and their turbulent personal relationships is not new. And while there are a few good one-liners, the majority fail to take off.

Yet, the unusual setting gives a fresh look to an otherwise overused idea of 20-something friends dealing with problems.

Thursday also features the season premier of Living Single and New York Undercover.

Living Single enters its third year with Queen Latifah, Kim Coles and Kim Fields as friends and roommates. Erika Alexander portrays another good friend who spends so much time at the apartment, she is considered a fourth roommate.

Michael DeLorenzo, Malik Yoba, Patti D'Arbanville-Quinn and Fatima Faloye return for a second season of New York Undercover. The drama centers around young detectives in the Big Apple. This year, Lauren Velez joins the cast as a new undercover cop.

The premieres of Fox's two new dramas and five other comedies are close behind.

The Preston Episodes, a comedy scheduled to kick off Saturday, Sept. 9, stars David Alan Grier as a newly divorced professor who begins writing for a gossip magazine.

Monday, Sept. 11, marks the scheduled premieres of Partners, starring Jon Cryer as a man whose best friend is getting married, and Ned and Stacey, with Thomas Haden Church and Deborah Messing as a couple in a marriage of convenience.

Strange Luck, a drama with D.B. Sweeney, debuts Friday, Sept. 15. Sunday, Sept. 24, Space: Above and Beyond premieres. A male's perspective on divorce and marriage is the focus of Misery Loves Company, debuting Sunday, Oct. 1. Buddy comedy Too Something also begins Sunday.

Premiere dates for other returning shows include Martin on Saturday, Sept. 9, and Melrose Place, which re-enters with a bang on Monday, Sept. 11. The answer to who shot Mr. Burns arrives Sunday, Sept. 17, in The Simpsons debut, and The X-Files is slated to return on Friday, Sept. 22.

Dondre T. Whitfield, Charles Esten, Kristin Bauer, Rose Jackson and David Burke (clockwise from top left) welcome viewers to Regency Airlines when The Crew debuts this Thursday on Fox, kicking off its new fall lineup. New York Undercover and Living Single have their season premieres Thursday, as well.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES - March 21/April 20
Cutting remarks will only serve to isolate you from the ones you care the most about. Use your honest nature to help instead of hurt. You're very self-involved lately. Look to others and identify their needs — then meet them. A good book highlights your weekend.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Don't put off until tomorrow what you can do today. Get organized. Complete all domestic tasks that you've been putting off. Clean the house, work in the yard and wash the car. The weight that comes off your shoulders helps start the weekend off right. Keep finances in order.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Don't lash out at others because of little things this week. Work keeps you more busy than usual. Avoid taking office problems home with you. A family member asks a special favor on Thursday. Do it without asking for anything in return. Catch up on correspondence.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Money is tight as the week starts, but an unexpected winning keeps you out of the poor house. Say yes to a social invitation, even if you're not in the greatest spirits. It will benefit you in more ways than one. Keep emotions at an even keel as jealousy and petty behavior builds at work.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Smile and spread your Leo charm this week. Whatever you do, people will notice. A special — yet surprising — invitation comes from a Libra. Don't jump too fast. (S)he might have ulterior motives. A visit from an old friend brings exciting news. Finances look good.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Stop letting money rule your world. It's time to put things in their proper perspective. Break out of your humdrum routine. Look forward to new adventures without worrying about what you may be leaving behind. Don't overstay your welcome with a new friend on Friday.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Quiet strategies will get you farther than outright plans. Practice without preaching. Libras tend to fall in love with the idea of falling in love. Learn the art of getting to know someone before you assess what they mean to you. Quiet wisdom becomes a new friend on Wednesday. Use it. A work promotion is likely.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Read deep into personal matters this week. There's more to friendly squabbles than has already surfaced. Your judgment will be questioned at work on Wednesday. Prepare to stand your ground. A mellow weekend fits the bill. A new friend will impress you in some way.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
If you're thinking about moving away, be sure to tie up loose ends before you go. An estranged friend makes an effort this week. Give her/him a chance. A Virgo tries to win your affection with lies. Don't be a pushover. Know your priorities when it comes to work.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
It's hard to keep your mind on your work this week, but it's important that you do. A phone call on Tuesday instills deadline fear. You must make social sacrifices to keep an associate calm. Get some much-needed rest over the weekend. A social event will be surprisingly fun.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
A new love steals your attention away from your work and family life. But, a new commitment can put a stain on an old friendship. Take a Leo's advice on matters of the heart. When actions speak louder than words, why aren't you listening? On Thursday, think before you speak.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Don't let your bad mood take others down with you. Put a smile on your face, if only for their sakes. Keep priorities in order both at work and at home. An athletic break in your routine helps clear your head. Keep your options open over the weekend. There could be good times in store.

YOUR BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

The next 12 months:
Choose your friends carefully this year. As a long-time romance ends, friends will play a monumental role in your life in the months ahead. Make sure you have positive influences and cheery attitudes surrounding you, you'll need them to bring you up when you're down. You will find better things are ahead this spring, as you start to get your feet on the ground. Work serves as both an ego boost and a constant this year. If you are career-minded, a focused approach will put you on the right track. Money matters improve faster than you can say Donald Trump.

Christopher Walken, Christopher Bell, Lexi Randall and Glenn Close (clockwise from left) endure a Kansas drought in SkyLark. The sequel to Sarah, Plain and Tall airs Sunday on ABC.

Cable covers rock stars to forces of nature

BY GORDON SACKS

Viewers can expect good vibrations from a profile of Beach Boy-turned-musician's musician Brian Wilson. The Disney Channel's Brian Wilson: I Just Wasn't Made for These Times, premieres Sunday, Aug. 27, during the network's free fall preview. As leader of the seminal '60s surf band the Beach Boys, Wilson was instrumental (and vocal) in changing the tenor of American pop music. Among those interviewed in the show, David Crosby of Crosby, Stills & Nash says, "(Wilson's music) was way in advance of what anybody else was doing at that point. I think the Beatles recognized that and I think every harmony group in the world recognized that." Wilson is back on the scene with two upcoming albums, one the soundtrack for the documentary, featuring rerecordings of Beach Boys and other solo material. The second album, a collaboration with composer/producer Van Dyke Parks, may disprove the assertion Wilson wasn't made for these times.

In other rock news, The Concert for the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame airs Saturday, Sept. 2, on HBO. Heavy hitters range from funk master James Brown and man-in-black Johnny Cash to diva Annie Lenox and the symbol-signified artist formerly known as Prince. The event, broadcast live from the Municipal Stadium in Cleveland, is a benefit for the public dedication of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. More big names crop up in A&E's biographical endurance event, a 26-hour alphabetical marathon, Biography A to Z begins Saturday, Sept. 2, starting with Atila the Hun. The marathon winds up with Darryl Zanuck. Insomniac celebrity hounds won't want to miss a letter. Violent Planet erupts onto TBS Sunday, Aug. 27, opening the fall season of National Geographic Explorer. The first segment - "Avalanche!" - examines the phenomenon of dangerous snow masses. "Fire!" features "smoke jumpers" parachuting into the most hazardous forest fires. The final segment called "Volcano!" focuses on the 1980 Mt. St. Helens eruption.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Just about everyone I know agrees John Lithgow is one of our finest actors, yet I can't seem to find anyone who agrees on the pronunciation of his last name. Can you settle this once and for all? --Ellen K., Flint, Mich.

A: Indeed I can, because I recently met and talked with the actor about his upcoming NBC sitcom Third Rock From the Sun, a midseason replacement series co-starring Jane Curtin.

The actor pronounces his last name to rhyme with "show," not with "how." At a press conference promoting the series, however, I noticed both Curtin and NBC executive Warren Littlefield got it wrong.

Q: My dad says Matthew Perry once played a ghost who returns to be a conscience to his friends. True? --Mollie Moore, Harrisburg, N.C.

A: Close, but no cigar. In the 1987-88 Fox sitcom Second Chance, Kiel Martin (Hill Street Blues) played a deceased ne'er-do-well sent back in time to counsel his younger self, played by Perry. It bombed, and the fantasy element was dropped when the show was renamed Boys Will Be Boys. It expired after a few more months.

Q: What are the members of the Kids in the Hall group up to now? --Kim Fujinaga, Honolulu.

A: The five guys are currently filming The Kids in the Hall Movie, in which they play 50-odd characters.

Dave Foley returns to NewsRadio in the fall. Mark McKinney is one of only two Saturday Night Live cast members returning to that revamped show this season -- no word yet whether Bruce McCulloch will continue to do short films for the show.

Scott Thompson has joined the cast of HBO's The Larry Sanders Show and is host of the next gay and lesbian comedy special on Comedy Central.

John Lithgow

Sorry, I have no information about other projects for Kevin McDonald.

Q: Seeing Arthur Taxier on Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman reminded me he played a police officer in an earlier series. What was it? --Edna Baragar, Fostoria, Mich.

A: Taxier played Lt. Carl Zymack on Midnight Caller.

Q: Why did they recast the role of D.J. on Roseanne after only one episode? And what happened to the original Becky? --Leona Gingras, Pawtucket, R.I.

A: It is far more common than you may think for producers to recast a show after viewing the pilot. Sal Barone, who was D.J. in the premiere, was replaced by Michael Fishman, whose uncanny resemblance to Roseanne has led several readers to ask me whether he really is her son (he's not).

Lecy Goranson left the series to attend college, but will return to play Becky in this, the show's final season.

The Elephant Man ★★½ (1980) John Hurt, Anthony Hopkins. A doctor rescues a monstrously deformed man from a freak show in David Lynch's adaptation of John Merrick's life story. 2:40. August 30 9:35pm.

Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex (But Were Afraid to Ask) ★★½ (1972) Woody Allen, Gene Wilder. A series of comic sketches spoofs Dr. David Reuben's best-selling book and other assorted targets. 2:00. August 31 11:30pm.

CHAMPIONS OF JUSTICE

Power Rangers making most of their 15 minutes....

Parents are wary of them. Teens sneer at them. Children across the country love them.

They're the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers, the new champions of justice on television.

No one can be sure just when their show, airing Saturdays on Fox, supplanted the syndicated Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles in their hearts, minds, lunch boxes and Jello-O molds of America's youth.

But one thing is certain: Saban Entertainment is making the most out of the Rangers' proverbial 15 minutes of fame.

This summer will see everything from a full-length feature film, Mighty Morphin Power Rangers: The Movie, to a live-action stage show already selling out arenas nationwide.

The deliberately campy action series has created such a delirium, such a craze, among its particular demographic that parents view the show much like adults viewed rock 'n' roll in its salad days.

They don't understand it, but they see how monkeyed up the show gets their children and they are definitely concerned.

Children just seem to come completely unglued when the Power

Rangers "morph" into their battle gear and begin fighting injustice, tyranny and the like in a flurry of dropkicks and karate chops.

Of course, this is nothing new: Action shows have been sending children into hysterical antics for decades. Shows like Batman, The Wild, Wild West and the Turtles have probably been responsible for more broken furniture among households with children than the sports of baseball, football and basketball combined.

So why the stink now? The bottom line is, regardless of which programs children watch, their parents must teach them to distinguish between television and reality. The show doesn't claim to be factual, but it does promote self-esteem, respect and proper behavior.

Good triumphs over evil, and the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers fight creatures, not people.

In reaction to the backlash, Saban created a series of public service announcements with the Rangers themselves decrying the use of violence to solve problems in the real world.

So until the next wave of children's entertainment washes up on our TV shores, it's "Go, go Power Rangers!"

Amy Jo Johnson stars in the wildly popular Mighty Morphin Power Rangers Saturdays on Fox. The mighty series is used to market a wide range of products.

ADULTS' FEELING GUILTY? Children's shows can be adults' guilty pleasures...

Sharing deep thoughts is...OK. That's what therapist Stuart Smalley of NBC's Saturday Night Live would say. But it's hard to share secrets about guilty pleasures - such as TV shows an adult might like that children love to watch too.

Well, so much for a suave venter of maturity cloaking the inner child, and that's...OK. Time to share: Steve Urkel (Jaleel White) rules! That's right. And Family Matters (ABC, Fridays) is the king of the current crop of family sitcoms when it comes to mystery. Really.

Police officer Carl Winslow (Reginald VelJohnson) hasn't noticed he started out the series with three children, but his youngest daughter, Judy, has been inexplicably missing for years. Then there's Steve, the human cartoon from next door. Isn't it kind of strange that Carl spends ore time with that geek than with his own son?

Jaw-dropping computer animation and cyperspeak propel Reboot

Bob of ABC's Reboot

(ABC, Saturdays). Evil MegaByte threatens Bob and the digital denizens of the city of Mainframe with deletion. Speaking of deletion, the people at NBC who canceled Star Trek in 1969 also deep-sixed Gumby. But, the clay-animated green goofball and his pal Pokey live on in syndication. Gumby embodies ultimate fantasies: He can't die, he can walk right into storyboard action and his world is full of neat toys. For campfire tales with tons of terror but zero gore, watch Are You Afraid of the Dark? (Nickelodeon, Saturdays). It's The Twilight Zone for children.

When a girl realizes she is an alien, or Charles Dutton (Roc) horrifies as a long-dead pirate, the imagination reels and a second-grader watching snuggles closer to her dad for security. And that's...OK.

SOAP TALK

Penghlis, Howarth, Bedi leaving daytime.

BY CANDACE HAVENS

There are more changes ahead for the Days of Our Lives cast. Thaa Penghlis (Tony) will be leaving the show later this year.

Producers say Penghlis is leaving for story-line reasons.

"It has been a pleasure working with Thaa the last two years," says Tom Langan, co-executive producer. "His unique talent and style have added more than a touch of class to Days. In the fast-paced and demanding world of daytime drama he has always presented himself as a gentleman."

Says Penghlis, "I think it is important to realize changes are an essential part of your growth. Taking charge of your journey helps you embrace the challenges ahead."

The actor has had a tough year. He lost both his mother and father and now his job. But Penghlis thinks it has all happened for a reason, and he is happy to move on.

In other news: Kabir Bedi, who plays Prince Omar on The Bold and the Beautiful, is leaving the show, also for story-line reasons.

Bedi was scheduled to work for 13 weeks beginning in July 1994, and he stayed a year with the show. The actor would like to return to soaps sometime in the future, but for now he is working on the Italian miniseries We Are Angels.

One Life to Live fans will be upset to learn Roger Howarth (Todd) is leaving in October. It is the actor's choice to leave. According to a source close to the show, Howarth was never comfortable with his character.

Howarth was anxiously awaiting the end of his contract so he could move on to something new. OLTL had recently begun to redeem the character, but it obviously wasn't enough to keep Howarth interested.

There is some good news on the set of As the World Turns. Greg Watkins, who plays Evan, is said to be making a full recovery from injuries sustained in a boating accident. Watkins suffered a broken arm, broken leg, five broken ribs and a punctured lung.

Send your comments to Candace Havens, Soap World, Features Dept., TV Data, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12804. Because of the volume of mail received, personal replies cannot be sent.

Margaret Hamilton, who played the Wicked Witch of the West in The Wizard of Oz, was a former kindergarten teacher.

The first laundromat was the Washateria opened at Fort Worth, Texas, by J.F. Cantrell on April 18, 1934. It had four washing machines that charged by the hour.

CHITTER - CHATTER

NEW YORK (AP)--Cindy Crawford and Heather Locklear have something in common besides their good looks: Both list champagne and caviar as sexy foods. But Drew Barrymore says it's macaroni and cheese and Jell-O that put her in the mood.

The three were among a bevy of stars who shared their thoughts on what's sexy for the September issue of In Style magazine.

Crawford said a back rub was the sexiest gift, while Jennifer Aniston, who plays Rachel on "Friends," answered: "a candlelit massage from a boyfriend."

But if you want to win Catherine Deneuve's heart, you'll need more. Her sexiest gift?

"It was just before New Year's Eve in Paris. Five men showed up at my door carrying boxes full of orchids and proceeded to create the most incredible arrangement around my fireplace, and all the way up to the ceiling. Yes, it was from a romantic suitor, but it was really mad, really wild, you know?"

VENTURA, Calif. (AP)--Keanu Reeves' band, Dogstar, could have a dog-doo sound as far as Keanu-philes are concerned.

Fans of the "Speed" star lined up for hours to see the actor and his band play Monday night at Ventura Theatre north of Los Angeles. At least a few were clueless about Dogstar's music, described as folk-trash.

"I don't care what his music sounds like. I'll learn to like it," said 18-year-old Rene Miller.

The crowd outside screamed and surged forward when Reeves stepped from his tour bus before the show. He signed a few autographs and went inside.

"I think he disproved the law that no one is perfect, 'cause he is," said Tricia Arnsdorf, also 18.

By show time, the line for the sold-out show wrapped around the block.

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) - Jerry Garcia's widow will get the largest single share of his estate, including his art and comic book collection.

Under the terms of his 16-page will, signed in 1994 and filed on Friday in Marin County Superior Court, Deborah Koons Garcia will get one-third of his estate, including many of the Grateful Dead guitarist's personal effects.

Garcia died Aug. 9 at a drug rehab center at age 53.

The value of the estate was not specified in the will. The Grateful Dead has been one of the nation's most popular concert acts for years, grossing more than $50 million in ticket sales last year.

His five-bedroom home on 10 acres in Nicasio was on the market for $2 million before his death.

WHAT TYPE OF WALLCOVERING IS BEST FOR KITCHENS AND BATHS?

#762-1050 Top Sidewall, #762-1053 Plaid Sidewall, #762B-1052 Border from "Kitchen & Bath Delights Vol. II" book.

Fabric-backed vinyl wallcoverings are extremely durable and can withstand wear and tear, in addition to fluctuations in temperature. They also have a lot of body which means they won't come apart or shrink as they're applied to the wall.

The vinyl covering is a moisture barrier that protects walls from steam and the fabric backing provides a material that adheres well to walls without raising or bucking in the presence of moisture, especially in the bathroom.

And when you're ready for a wallcovering change, you won't have to spend long hours scraping and stripping. Fabric-backed wallcoverings like Sanitas are very easily removed in a matter of minutes.

Visit your neighborhood Sherwin-Williams store, where you'll find hundreds of fabric backed vinyl wallcoverings in a wide range of patterns and colors that are perfect for your kitchen or bath.

WALL REPAIR

Q: We just bought an older home that needs a fresh coat of paint in every room, but the walls have lots of nail holes, cracks and a couple of very large holes. Can you help?

A: The right surface preparation really makes your paint job look professional and it's worth the time spent.

For small nail holes and silver cracks use a putty knife to spread Hadley® Shrink-Free™ Spackling over the hole or crack. Overfill the hole, let it dry and then sand it down until it's smooth and level with the wall. Use a damp sponge to eliminate the dust from sanding. To keep cracks from reappearing, spray your dried and sanded spackling with Good-Bye Cracks™ before you apply paint.

For big holes about the size of a doorknob or fist, overfill the hole with spackling, let dry and then cover the hole with FibaTape®. Overfill with spackling again, let it dry and sand until smooth and level with the wall. You may have to use several applications of spackling to prevent cracking.

For really big holes cut a piece of drywall slightly smaller than the hole, overfill the gaps with spackling and let dry. Then cover the hole with drywall tape, spackle again and sand until smooth and level with the wall. Our USG® Sheetrock™ Wall Patch Kit has everything you need to fill and finish a large hole.

MUST LATEX PAINT BE PUT ONLY OVER LATEX, AND OIL OVER OIL?

No. Each can be applied over the other with one important exception: Exterior oil paints do not perform well over the softer, more elastic latex coatings. The reason is because the latex film is very flexible and will expand and contract with the surface of the house. The oil film on top is more brittle and will resist the movement underneath, causing its film to crack and split.
