Junior Historians learn about history at 'Texas'

Junior Historians traveled to Palo Duro Canyon Monday to attend the 30th anniversary performance of the musical drama "Texas." They joined several large groups in being recognized during intermission.

An early arrival provided time for refreshments, limited hiking and for a short planning meeting about future activities for the chapter.

A date early in August was selected for a tour of the Deaf Smith County Museum followed by a pizza party and an ice cream social which will include the members participating in making ice cream in hand-crank ice cream freezers.

Attending the "Texas" performance and representing Junior Historians were Kris Friel, Trey Lusk, Ceyanne Wells, Jerry Baird, Kerris Montgomery, Audra Witkowski, Krista Warren, Emily Curtis, Josh Rowe, Carey Lyles, Mark Shacokius, Matt Irish, Michael Hall, Lacey Rowe, Ryan Leasure, Cristin Leasure, Sonya Gallegos, Timothy Valdez, Jana Baird, Luke Shurgert and Tan Nguyen.

Sponsors were Don and Carolyn Waters, Billy and Sherron Rowe, Ross and Linda Baird, Diederike Drake, Marilyn Leasure and Evelyn Wells and special guests Mr. and Mrs. D.B. Rowe and Jason Mines.

Granddaughter of residents is foreign exchange student

Ashley James, granddaughter of Pete and Wilma Carmichael of Hereford, has been accepted as an exchange student to Argentina.

Miss James is a junior at New Mexico State University and applied to be an exchange student through the International Student Exchange Program.

She will attend the University of Belgrano in Buenos Aires for the upcoming fall semester. She has a double major in Spanish and Latin American studies and will study basically the same courses that would be required at NMSU. However, all her classes will be in Spanish.

Miss James will depart for Argentina on July 24 and will live with an, as yet, unknown family during her semester in Argentina.

She is the daughter of Shari

Carmichael James of Alexandria, La. Her brother, Christopher, is a sophomore in the ROTC program at his El Paso high school.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Rhett" had been separated from his wife for four months when I met him while on vacation. We are both 37 and own our own businesses.

Rhett wanted to keep our dating a secret from his family until his divorce was final. It took 14 months. Although he has offered to come see me, he'd have to stay in a motel because I live with my family, this would be expensive, so I drive up every weekend to see him. He buys my gas and takes me to the finest restaurants. I spend Saturday, Sunday and Monday with Rhett. On Mondays, I cook, clean and do his laundry. His secretaries like me. So does his dog.

It has been four months since the divorce. He has not introduced me to his children, ages 10 and 14. My son knows Rhett, and they really like each other. Rhett's ex-wife is financially set and does not need to work. However, she frequently asks Rhett to cut the lawn and fix her car.

I have been divorced 13 years and would like to have a normal family life. Going back and forth to see Rhett is extremely tiring. I cannot leave clothing or personal articles at his place for fear his children will find them.

For the past 14 months, I've had to wait for him to call me every Friday afternoon to let me know if his children are coming over. If they are, it means I'm alone. All my weekends hinge on his kids' plans. This is upsetting, but I do admire a father who looks after his children. My son wasn't so lucky.

Am I wasting my time on a long-distance relationship? There are some local men who would like to take me out. -- S.P. in N.C.

DEAR S.P.: Rhett has been divorced for four months and you still haven't met his children? Mighty odd, lady. Meanwhile, you're doing his laundry and cooking and cleaning on weekends, and he's mowing his ex-wife's lawn and fixing her car. How nice that his dog likes you.

Give Rhett two weeks to let you out of the closet. Make it clear you want to make wedding plans. If he doesn't, tell him adios, and concentrate on the locals.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last weekend, guests at a dinner party shared experiences they had with ditzy retail cashiers. Everyone bragged about how they had taken advantage of a cashier's mistake.

"Ellen and Sam" bought several items in a hardware store, and the stressed-out cashier forgot to charge them for an $80 power drill. "Melinda" received change for a twenty when she had given the clerk a $5 bill. Her husband told about getting a 40 percent discount on a piece of luggage that was supposed to have been marked down 20 percent. They were all happy with their "good fortune" and unashamed to tell everyone at the table.

I think what they did was cheap and disgusting, but I didn't want to risk losing their friendship, so I kept quiet. It made me wonder if everyone but me thinks it's OK to cheat if you get away with it.

What could I have said to make the point without sounding like a Goody Two Shoes? -- Upright or Uptight in Los Angeles

DEAR UPRIGHT in L.A.: Stony silence can speak volumes. Instead of laughing with the group, a stern, unsmiling face could have conveyed the message nicely. Remember this for similar occasions.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Whenever I make a pie with meringue topping (lemon, chocolate, etc.), I always find an amount of excess water in the pie after it has cooled.

What causes this and how can I prevent this from happening? — S.L.S., Elizabeth City, N.C.

One reason is that since meringue contains a lot of sugar, it absorbs moisture from the air. Therefore, if it is humid or rainy, the meringue will soak up the moisture and then weep, and become sticky and limp.

This is why it is recommended that it be a bright, sunny day when you make a meringue pie.

To help minimize the amount of weeping, try putting the meringue over the pie while the filling is still hot. — Heloise

CAKE-PAN COATING

Dear Heloise: My big sister, Linda, is teaching me cake decorating. She has given me shaped cake pans, an icing spatula, covered cake carrier and a decorating kit that includes icing bags, tips and frosting tints. The best thing she gave me, however, has been what I have dubbed Linda's Goop.

Mix equal parts of vegetable oil, shortening and flour until smooth. Store in an airtight container in the fridge until needed. Linda gave me this recipe to coat my baking pans for cakes. This way, I don't get flour dusted all over the kitchen.

I've also used it for my other baking needs. I coat pans for macaroni and cheese, pies, and other foods that require a non-stick preparation.

"Neighbors Caring For Neighbors"

Bounty on squawfish is aimed at creating balance with salmon

By JOHN K. WILEY
Associated Press Writer
CLARKSTON, Wash. (AP) - Every day at dawn, Bob Hohnstein heads down to the Snake River to fish.

Using a hook baited with raw chicken parts, the retiree from Lewiston, Idaho, across the river, trolls the shallows along the bank for the northern squawfish.

Once considered a nuisance "garbage" fish, the giant relative of the minnow has become a multi-million-dollar industry. From May through September, Hohnstein and tens of thousands of others along the Columbia and Snake rivers seek the dusky-green fish with a long snout and large mouth.

Squawfish populations are being decimated by sport fishermen under a $5.4 million Bonneville Power Administration program aimed at curbing the squawfish's toll on dwindling regional salmon stocks.

Anglers are paid $3 for each specimen over 11 inches long. The graduated rate goes up to $5 per fish for those who catch 400 or more. The top angler in 1994 caught 2,300 squawfish and earned more than $13,000 in reward and prize money.

One day recently, Hohnstein, who has fished every day since the program began in 1991, caught 10 squawfish. "I get a little spending money," he said. "Basically, it pays for the gas."

The BPA budgets about $770,000 a year for reward payouts and prizes, said John Skidmore, a BPA fish-and-wildlife program analyst in Portland, Ore.

That's just a fraction of the estimated $500 million being spent this year by the federal power-marketing agency and others in efforts to ease the impact of hydropower development, and other projects on fish and wildlife.

Squawfish are one of the main finned predators faced by juvenile salmon and steelhead as they head downstream toward the ocean. Through the Northern Squawfish Sport-Reward Fishery Program, regional fishery managers hope to give those young fish a fighting chance.

The native squawfish, which can grow to 24 inches and nearly 6 pounds, thrive in reservoirs behind federal dams, where juvenile salmon and steelhead are slowed in their seaward migration.

With a fast digestive system that makes it one of the few fish able to swallow prey longer than itself, biologists say northern squawfish may eat as many as 1.6 million juvenile salmon and steelhead each year.

Smallmouth bass and walleye also have a taste for salmonids, but squawfish are believed responsible for 80 percent of the predation by fish.

The bounty program targets squawfish 11 inches or longer, which is about the size at which they stop eating insects and begin dining on finger-sized smolts. A mature squawfish can eat 8-10 salmon or steelhead smolts a day.

The program aims to reduce squawfish predation on juvenile salmon by as much as 50 percent, said Scott Smith, lead biologist for the state Department of Fish and Wildlife at Pullman, about 20 miles north of this town just west of the Idaho border.

"It's a cumulative effect," Smith said. "Every year you remove them, it has a greater effect."

Analysts with the Oregon Department of Fish and Game estimate the program already has reduced predation of juvenile salmon by 31 percent, he said.

The program has fallen short of its catch goals, so this year the reward fund was increased and cash-prize derbies are planned to encourage more participation.

The BPA and state fish and game departments have teamed with regional businesses to sponsor derbies where the angler catching the largest squawfish can win hundreds of dollars in cash prizes.

Combined with some Indian tribes' gillnet fisheries, the experimental program has taken more than 700,000 squawfish from the Columbia-Snake system in the past four years, Skidmore said.

The goal is not to eliminate squawfish, but to create a better balance with the salmon population, he said. "We're skimming off the top of older, more precocious fish and restructuring the population to smaller, younger fish."

That's why the per-fish payment shouldn't be called a bounty, said Maria Holmes, a seasonal Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife worker who runs the sport-reward registration station at the Clarkston Greenbelt boat ramp.

"Bounty makes it sound like 'wanted: dead or alive.' We don't want to wipe out the species, only the big fish that eat lots of salmon and steelhead smolt," she said.

Holmes said the BPA program pays not only for fish, but also for the biological data their carcasses provide. In addition, each angler is given a questionnaire asking where and how long they fished, what types of baits they used and other questions.

Workers at the 14 registration stations then weigh and measure the fish, take tissue samples and give the fishermen cash vouchers. The stations dot the Columbia from its mouth to Priest Rapids Dam near Vantage, and the Snake from its confluence to Hells Canyon Dam south of Lewiston, Idaho.

Finally, the fish carcasses are made into fertilizer. Squawfish are edible, with a taste similar to that of steelhead trout, but they are extremely bony.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 77 and just had cataracts removed from both eyes. I have new lens implants in both. I'm curious as to how long these implants last. Do they ever need correction or replacement? I imagine a lot of oldsters have worries on this score. I can now see OK at a distance, but am having trouble reading fine print. I am told this should improve with some new spectacles. — H.E.

ANSWER: Lens implants should last forever. They seldom need to be removed or altered. That might happen, though, if one were to slip from position.

My guess is that you will be reading fine once you get your new glasses.

I should explain that the lenses H.E. refers to are artificial substitutes designed to serve in place of the old blurred cataractous ones. The new one is inserted into the space once occupied by the old one.

For many, the artificial lenses offer a brand-new view of a formerly dimmed world. They are modern miracles, but they aren't cure-alls.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 35-year-old woman diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis. I would like to know if there are many young women like me. I am struggling with the arthritis because of the pain. I am taking Tolactin, which helps sometimes. It is difficult getting out of bed, and sometimes I feel like I've been hit by a truck. Are there support groups for this disease? My husband says he thinks it's psychological. — G.R.

ANSWER: Many women in their 30s share your burden. Most rheumatoid arthritis patients have first symptoms between the mid-30s and mid-50s. Women are three times as likely to get rheumatoid arthritis as are men. All told, about 2 percent of the population has it.

It is not in your mind but in your joints, which are inflamed and painful. In fact, given your apparent great trouble, you should seek expert help. See a rheumatologist, who can get you on a structured program of control.

Tolactin is but one of many medicines to control your joint inflammation. There are others, such as methotrexate, that suppress the immune system, which takes part in joint inflammation.

No program is complete without some attention to exercise. Most patients can manage mild exercise and thereby help extend the range of joint motion without pain.

I would look around for a local chapter of the Arthritis Foundation, where you might locate a local support group and get reading material to keep you abreast of new thinking on the subject. The foundation's toll-free phone number is (800) 283-7800.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I understand breast enlargement in a man can occur from certain drugs. An example, you said, is Tagamet. I understand there are others. Which? — N.R.B.

ANSWER: For sure, many drugs are associated with gynecomastia, enlargement of the male breast. Excessive alcohol does it. So does marijuana. Anabolic steroid drugs that are used illicitly by some in muscle building, also are culprits.

Many prescription drugs can be involved, in addition to Tagamet, which I did mention recently. They include digoxin, furosemide, beta blockers, spironolactone, cimetidine and ketoconazole. Gynecomastia is not a universal reaction to such medicines — only a few patients have it — and it subsides when the drug is withdrawn.

Education is the best provision for old age.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) - Memo to Ben Thomas, Roseanne's husband No. 3: Hide the steak knives.

"I think women should be more violent, kill more of their husbands," Roseanne says in a lengthy profile in The New Yorker's July 17 issue.

"I like the fight. If people are comin' at you, you don't just sit there and lay down and go. 'Oh, bless you.' That's not in the human arsenal. To say that women shouldn't do that is to say women aren't human."

Roseanne also attacks Hollywood's most prominent liberal women, saying they have little connection to the working-class women she says the feminist movement needs to target.

Jodie Foster, Susan Sarandon and Meryl Streep "don't have any subtlety to anything they say," Roseanne says. "They are, in effect, castrated females - excuse me, but that's what they are. They're just too middle-class white."

All-Stars remind that baseball can be fun

Solo shots by Biggio, Piazza, Conine lift Nationals to 3-2 victory

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - It was just what baseball needed: a game to remind everyone how fun the sport can be.

All it took was this: Let the greatest players do what they do best and let everything else fall into place. No agents, lawyers, owners or arbitrators. No fighting, no nonsense. Pure baseball. The kind of baseball that just might be a springboard to the sport's recovery from the disastrous strike of 1994-95.

If the game is to rebuild goodwill, it needs more of what it had Tuesday night - an All-Star game that was exciting, dramatic, quick and simple with so many of the elements that make the game special: new stars, the suspense of a no-hitter, the thrill of home runs, the tight ninth inning.

The National League beat the American League 3-2 behind three solo home runs and an impressive display of pitching and defense. The deciding hit came in the eighth inning when Jeff Conine hit a pinch-homer over the wall in left to break a 2-2 tie.

The buzz lasted from the pre-game introductions when Hideo Nomo bowed to his teammates and slapped hands with a hundred kids to the moment Randy Myers got Mike Stanley, the potential winning run, to fly out to right field.

Two hours and forty minutes worth watching. Even in 96 degree heat.

"It was a good show. It wasn't the kind of game where people can say it wasn't interesting. This isn't going to solve all our problems, but it could be a start," said San Diego's Tony Gwynn, playing in his 11th All-Star game.

"The fans saw power, defense and pitching. I don't know what else you could ask for. The feeling on the field was great. Everybody was jacked up and so were the fans," said Kevin Seitzer of the Milwaukee Brewers.

Nomo was the main attraction as the game got under way, and he wasted no time showing everybody why he's become such a phenomenon in his first year in the major leagues.

The first Japanese player to appear in an All-Star game struck out Kenny Lofton on a forkball that dropped to the ground, then got Edgar Martinez flailing at a change-up, earning him a greeting of high fives from his teammates as he came back to the dugout.

The reception was the same after the second inning when he retired the side in order, setting down Frank

Thomas, Albert Belle and Cal Ripken.

AL starter Randy Johnson matched Nomo, also striking out three in the first two innings with his display of overpowering fastballs.

Thomas gave the AL a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning, hitting a no-doubt-about-it homer into the stands in left with Carlos Baerga aboard.

By the time the fifth inning ended, the NL was still without a hit. And when Barry Larkin and Vinny Castilla made the first two outs of the sixth, it set a record for the longest a team had gone without a hit.

"You look up there and you see the zeroes. We knew we didn't have any hits," said Craig Biggio, who ended the drought with a solo homer to left off Dennis Martinez, making it 2-1.

"Biggio got us going. We were dying there until that home run," Mike Piazza said.

One inning later, it was Piazza who swung the momentum to the NL's side. He did it with what looked like a high fly ball to right field. It carried, kept on carrying and cleared the fence for an opposite field home run.

"It felt great. It was the first time I hit the ball well and in the air at the All-Star game," he said.

Just like that, two swings and two homers. Tie game.

By this time, the non-Nomo members of the NL staff were working out of trouble time and again. After back-to-back singles in the fifth, rookie Tyler Green got a strikeout and two grounders.

Baerga had a leadoff double in the sixth, but Denny Neagle got the next three hitters out and Baerga never moved.

In the seventh, Ripken singled and Manny Ramirez drew a one-out walk before Heathcliff Slocumb came in and struck out Ivan Rodriguez and Jim Edmonds.

Conine, the only NL position player who didn't get into last year's All-Star game, pinch-hit for Ron Gant to lead off the eighth and faced Steve Ontiveros of the Oakland A's.

"I talked with Matt Williams and he gave me a scouting report. He said look for breaking balls. If he throws you a fastball it'll just be to show it.

Nomo performs well in All-Star Game start

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Hideo Nomo's All-Star experience Tuesday began with a bow and ended with American Leaguers learning they can't hit him, either.

The rookie phenom from the Los Angeles Dodgers via Japan was as good as advertised in his All-Star start, getting swinging strikeouts on three of the six batters he faced and allowing just one hit in two innings.

"No change at all, just the same as always," Nomo said, describing what it was like facing American Leaguers instead of the National Leaguers he's dominated the first half of this season.

Nomo, the second rookie starter and first since Fernando Valenzuela in 1981, had no trouble retiring some of the game's biggest boppers. It took him only 25 pitches to get through his two innings.

The second inning featured the headline confrontations of Nomo vs. Frank Thomas and Albert Belle, the two finalists in Monday's home run derby.

After Thomas fouled out to catcher Mike Piazza on a 1-1 pitch, Belle put on a better show. He fouled off several pitches, then finally went down swinging at a 2-2 pitch.

The last out in the second was the only hard-hit ball off Nomo, a sinking liner to right that Tony Gwynn caught just above his shoetops.

The only other ball off Nomo that went into fair territory was a soft one-out single by Carlos Baerga in the first inning. Baerga was wiped out when he tried stealing.

Nomo's other two outs in the first were strikeouts. Kenny Lofton chased

After the second inning, Nomo slowly walked back to the dugout looking around The Ballpark as if to soak in his first All-Star experience. Barry Bonds and Len Dykstra shook Nomo's hand, then he waited just outside the dugout to greet Gwynn and give him a pat on the back for his nice catch.

"Not only tonight, but last night as well, it was a wonderful experience," Nomo said.

It should be of little surprise that Nomo and his back-to-the-plate motion baffled AL hitters. He's stymied the NL this year with 119 strikeouts in 90 1-3 innings and opponents are hitting .158 off him. He's 6-1 with a 1.99 ERA in 13 starts.

The All-Star Game was a grand achievement for Nomo, the first Japanese player to be in the contest and only the second player from his homeland ever to make the majors.

His every move all year has been closely followed back home, and his entire country was eager to see him matched up with the game's best Tuesday.

Before the game, Nomo reportedly received a faxed message from Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama that read: "We Japanese people are proud of your splendid achievement. Nomo, hang in there!"

Nomo definitely gave his countrymen reason to be proud with his actions off the field.

A 1-2 splitter in the dirt, low and away. Edgar Martinez, the AL's leading hitter, went down on a 2-2 pitch.

When Nomo returned to the dugout after each inning, he was graciously greeted by high-fives from nearly all his NL teammates.

Conine delivers when he gets chance

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Conine the Barbarian arrived in baseball's spotlight.

Last July at Pittsburgh, Jeff Conine was the only position player on either team not to get into the All-Star game. On Tuesday night, his eighth-inning homer off Steve Ontiveros gave the National League a 3-2 victory over the American League and won himself the All-Star MVP award.

"You grow up your whole life, sandlot ball, cup ball or Little League, you always put yourself in that situation," Conine said.

Conine, 29, was just 2-for-11 in his career as a pinch hitter when he batted for Cincinnati's Ron Gant leading off the eighth inning. With the score tied 2-2, Oakland's Steve Ontiveros had just come in to pitch for the AL.

Conine took a ball, then lined a slider 410 feet into the lower deck in left field. The NL had rallied from a 2-0 deficit.

"I knew it was gone when I first hit it," Conine said. "A hitter, you hit enough balls on the sweet spot to know when it's going to go."

With the Florida Marlins, Conine hasn't gotten that much national recognition. Some might know him best by the cute TV nickname.

In the bowels of the ballpark after the game, he was surrounded by camera crews, pleased that his name might become better known.

"I've got 80 people around me," he said.

Montreal Expos manager Felipe Alou, knowing that Philadelphia Phillies manager Jim Fregosi failed to get Conine into last year's game, had decided before the game he would use Conine on Tuesday night.

"If you can't do it in postseason, you want to do it in the All-Star game," Conine said. "Some of my buddies back in Florida said, 'If you get in the game, you've got to swing for the fences.' I wasn't thinking about it, but it happened."

He became just the 10th player to homer in his first All-Star at-bat, the first since Bo Jackson in 1989 at Anaheim Stadium. Conine was a teammate of Jackson's on the Kansas City Royals that year.

"My first game I was in, I had to follow him," Conine said. "He hit a 500-foot home run."

Pinch hitting hasn't come easy for the Florida Marlins outfielder, who had just one RBI in those 11 pinch at-bats. He's watched teammate Andre Dawson struggle this season coming off the bench.

"I pinch hit eight or nine games this year because I had a hamstring injury," Conine said. "It's a tough role to fill."

But as a starter, he's been superb. After hitting .319 with 18 homers and 82 RBIs in the strike-shortened 1994 season, Conine came up with a stellar first half this year. He's second in the NL in on-base percentage (.417), sixth in batting average (.322), seventh in slugging percentage (.559) and tied for ninth in homers (14).

In June, he was voted the NL's player of the month, hitting .340 with 24 RBIs, nine home runs and a .670 slugging percentage.

The 96-degree heat at The Ballpark in Arlington didn't faze Conine.

He was a little disappointed last year when Fregosi didn't get him into the game.

"I was so overwhelmed to be in the All-Star company," he said.

Before Conine became an All-Star, the AL had won six straight. Since he's arrived, the NL is 2-0.

"That's what it is," he said. "I'm a big rabbit's foot."
