Local roper heading to Super Bowl of rodeo Purcella, partner among top team roping duos; earn trip to National Finals Rodeo

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer
After only five months as roping partners, Steve Purcella of Hereford and Steve Northcott of Odessa are headed to the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas on Dec. 1-10th. They will be competing against the top winning roping teams in the United States.

To those who are not familiar with the sport, this annual event is the Super Bowl of rodeo. To qualify, the pair had to be top money winners in 1995, and only 15 teams will make the cut. Purcella, the header, said his earnings are just over $61,000 for the year and Northcott, the heeler, earned more than $51,000. Accomplishing that feat was not an easy task. Purcella had to attend -- and win -- many rodeos to come away with that much money.

"I entered about 93 rodeos and made 85," said Purcella. The team is not going into this year's finals without experience. Purcella has qualified for the finals two times before. Northcott will make his first trip to the Las Vegas event. "I've been there before. This will be my third time to go," Purcella said. "I've placed fifth the other two times."

Purcella, with his best horse Butterbean, and Northcott, with his best horse Peppy, plan to leave for Las Vegas Tuesday. Although the team is relatively new, they seem to click together. When asked if the other was the best partner they have had, they both replied with a big grin, a small laugh, and a "yeah."

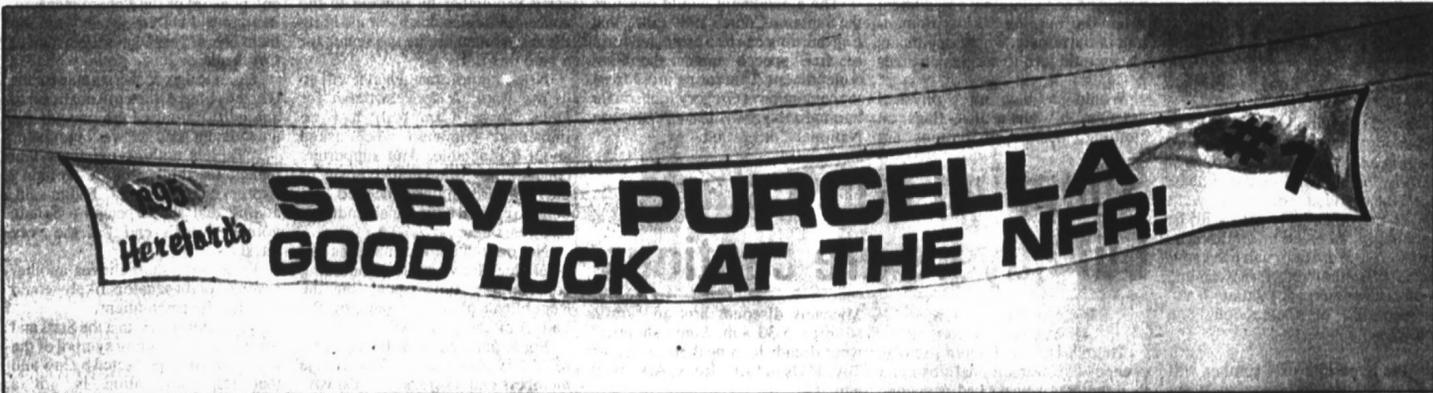

"Of course that's what we are going to say with the other one sitting here," laughed Northcott. "We probably wouldn't be going as a team if we didn't think that." In preparation for the big event they have been practicing three to four hours a day. "That's long enough," said Purcella. "We can run through about 80 steers in that amount of time."

The team said they shoot for about 4.0 seconds, but 3.8 is their best time ever. "4.0 is really fast, so that is why we try to make that time," said Purcella. At Nationals, they will compete for 10 straight nights. There will be a winner each night and then a cumulative winner on the last night. "After one bad night you're not out of the running," said Purcella. "That is the good thing about the Nationals. You have a chance to make up for it the next night."

When asked who he looked up to on the roping circuit or who he patterned himself after, he said, "Nobody, really. I just try to do the best job I can do. That's all." Northcott added that a good roper always pays attention to the winning teams in order to pick up new tricks of the trade. "Of course, we always watch the winning teams like Clay O'Brien Cooper," he said. "We will be roping against him at Nationals."

"You are just thinking about what you need to do to get the best time," Purcella said about what goes through his minds when a steer comes out of the chute. He went on to say that a good roper doesn't worry about missing, he just worries about what needs to

Election year to get started with opening of filing period

Politics takes on local meaning in a few days when candidates for elective office begin the process toward primary elections next March. The filing period for county and state candidates begins Dec. 3, and ends on Jan. 2. Primary elections will be held March 12. Deaf Smith County officials whose terms end next year are Sheriff Joe Brown, Tax Assessor-Collector Margaret Del Toro, County Commissioner Tony Castillo of Precinct 1 and County Commissioner Troy Don Moore of Precinct 3. Although the list of state and local officials whose terms expire next year is limited, the main interest will be in the Presidential sweepstakes.

The U.S. Senate seat held by Phil Gramm will be up for election. Although Gramm is an announced candidate for the Republican nomination for President, he also is expected to file for re-election to the senate. Terms of U.S. Representative Larry Combest of the 19th Congressional District and State Representative John Smith of the 86th District also expire next year. At the state level, a railroad commissioner, member of the State Board of Education, chief justice and justice of the state Supreme Court and chief justice and justice of the Court of Appeals will be elected in 1996.

Candidates will file applications to have their names on primary ballots will party chairmen. The Democratic county chairman is Roddy Allred. GOP county chairman is Fran Tooley. Designation of a campaign treasurer also must be filed in the office of Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland. Voter registration will be conducted in Ruland's office, also. Deadline to register for voting eligibility in the March 12 primary elections is Feb. 12. Party primary runoff elections will be conducted April 9. General election day is Nov. 5.

Clinton hesitant about offering specific budget-balancing plan

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Asked by Republican congressional leaders for specific budget proposals, the Clinton administration is hedging until formal negotiations begin and providing only general "principles" for now. Since a truce that allowed the government to end a six-day partial shutdown was declared, senior presidential advisers and Republicans in Congress have been sniping at one another in preparation for intense bargaining over the budget next week. On Wednesday, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and the chairman of the House and Senate budget committees asked President Clinton to provide "specific legislative proposals on how you would accomplish (a budget) balance in seven years." The president has said he will veto the GOP plan, which calls for balancing the budget by 2002, but which includes squeezing $270 billion in savings from Medicare and a tax cut of $245 billion. As part of a temporary spending bill, Clinton and the congressional Republicans agreed to a seven-year budget plan, but also to protect Medicare, education, the environment and other spending programs the president considers important. "We cannot begin to resolve our differences until we first know what they are," the Republican lawmakers wrote Clinton. In a response Friday, White house chief of staff Leon Panetta wrote that neither the president's budget nor Congress' plan satisfies the objectives of the fragile agreement reached last Sunday. But he said he was not prepared to cite specific disagreements.

"Each of us could take the position that we cannot begin talks until the other side shows in detail how it can meet all of the demands of the other," he wrote. "But such a position is unreasonable and unproductive." Panetta instead listed nine "principles" Clinton would adhere to in negotiating a balanced budget "so that there is clarity as to what some of our primary concerns are."

HRMC to hold luncheon forum

The public is invited to attend a Brown Bag Luncheon on Tuesday sponsored by Hereford Regional Medical Center and to be held in the Community Center. The session will be during the lunch hour. Participants should bring their own lunch; the hospital will provide drinks and desserts. "We conduct these meetings each year to gauge our progress in the community," said Administrator Jim Robinson. "The information we obtain from the meetings is vital in helping us plan future programs and identifying needs in the community." Robinson said attendees will be asked for comments about the future of the hospital and medical care in the community. "We planned this during the lunch hour, hoping to attract more people to the meeting," Robinson said. "There are so many activities planned during the evening that we hoped this would be more convenient for those who are interested in the hospital." Robinson said the meeting is part of a procedure the hospital must

The Hereford ISD board of trustees will meet in their regular monthly action session at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the school administration building, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue. There are three items on the action agenda -- bids for the tennis facility, a proposed tax abatement for Arrowhead Mills and a request to present the "Aim For Success" program to school children. Also on the agenda are reports from professional organizations and the HHS student council, plus general reports, the superintendent's reports and public comments.

DPS offers phone line to receive assistance

AMARILLO -- Motorists who find themselves with car trouble in Texas can now receive assistance through a Department of Public Safety motorist assistance line.

"If your transmission gives way halfway between Amarillo and Ozona, and you have access to a cellular phone or any other telephone for that matter, you can reach our headquarters in Austin," said Trooper Wayne Beigle of the Texas Department of Public Safety. "They in turn will notify the nearest DPS office to get someone out there to help. We'd like to encourage motorists to call when they see someone else in trouble as well."

PURCELLA

Northcott said that as long as he has a good partner he just concentrates on what he needs to do. "If my header does his job I know what I've got to do," he said. "I don't worry about what he may do wrong. I concentrate on me." The adrenaline can be a plus too, said Northcott. Both men agreed that the adrenaline rush right before a cowboy breaks the bearer helps them to concentrate on their jobs. Purcella is a native of Roswell, N.M., where he learned his trade at a later age than most cowboys. He began roping at age 14. "I started roping to get out of running the chute," he said. "My dad and brother and me ran a roping operation as a side job and I got tired of running the chute, so I said give me a horse and I'll rope." He said it was something that just came naturally to him. "I always had an easy time with it and I did pretty good when I first started," he said. He had to be good to choose it as his profession. If you don't win you don't make money. "We go out and practice just like anyone else would go to their job," Purcella said. "It's no different. You have to work at it to come away with any winnings." Northcott grew up around horses and roping. His brother and father still rope. Purcella is still in awe of the support he has received from the community. He said he appreciated all the encouragement. Purcella and his wife, Carla, make their home in the Westway community. Northcott, his wife Shelle, and their two children, Destiny, 6, and Stephanie, 8 months, live in Odessa.

follow in order to receive Medicaid Disproportionate Share funding from the state. "We are required to do a survey and conduct public meetings," he said. "However, even if this was not required for the funding, we would continue to hold the meetings. In the past we've used the information gained through these meetings to determine future strategy, identify underserved areas and fine tune our services to more nearly satisfy the needs of the community." The establishment of a rural health care clinic and recruitment of visiting specialists have been a result of information provided at past community meetings, Robinson said. "The input of concerned citizens really is vital. I hope anyone interested in our hospital will take the time to come to this meeting," he said.

Flag protection amendment stalls in Senate after breezing through House

By MARCY GORDON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - After cruising through the House on an overwhelming vote this spring, a proposed constitutional amendment to ban flag burning has lost momentum in the Senate, where opponents say it could lead to serious disputes in states.

Would a ban on "physical desecration" mean that flags on clothing, posters or buttons are protected by law - or not? The tersely worded proposed amendment would leave it to the states to further define desecration, the opponents say. The amendment would overturn the Supreme Court's 1989 ruling that flag-burning can be a protected form of free speech under the First Amendment. That ruling arose from the conviction of Gregory Johnson for burning a flag at the 1984 Republican National Convention.

Shopping crush starts, but buyers are cautious

By RACHEL BECK
AP Business Writer
The Christmas shopping season opened with the traditional crush, and though stores were packed, economic uncertainty had many shoppers looking, not buying. "It's just tougher times," said shopper Sharon Sky in Denver. "It seems as if my dollar doesn't go as far."

Retailers are betting on the Christmas sales to help turn around what has been a dismal year. Yet some consumers are showing caution about spending, citing an uncertain economy and overextended personal budgets. Many retailers, anxious about grim sales forecasts, opened their doors before dawn Friday, hoping to draw in day-after-Thanksgiving crowds with bargains and giveaways. "We're all crazy," said shopper Millie Ruffino at the Wal-Mart store in South Philadelphia, where crowds began forming at 6 a.m. "It's one time of year, but you have to do it." Crowds bolted into stores around the country as early as 5 a.m., with big discounts making early morning shopping the way to go. In Columbus, Ohio, Christmas trees already had been sold at

Michael's discount arts and crafts store by 5:30 a.m. Some shoppers were already loading their cars at the Toys R Us in Little Rock, Ark., by 8 a.m. The nation's retailers launched major promotions this holiday season to spur interest in wary consumers after months of depressed sales. Prices were slashed as much as 50 percent on everything from clothes to computers to sporting goods. "The retail banner years are long gone," said Dan Skoda, president of Marshall Field's department stores in Chicago. "I don't think anybody's looking for a banner year.... We look for market share. We just hope for a bigger piece of the pie."

Some consumers are also thinking twice before saying "charge it" because they're already behind on credit-card repayments. The government reported last month that banks are seeing more consumer delinquencies in credit card and other installment loans. "A couple years ago I charged all the Christmas presents thinking that would make it easier," said Felicia Bumgarner, who was shopping at Bass Pro Shops in Springfield, Mo. "Man, you're paying Christmas off till June with the high interest rates."

There have been an average of eight flag-burning incidents a year since the high court's decision. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole opened his presidential campaign in early September by vowing to the American Legion that he would bring the amendment before the Senate for a vote this fall. Now, it is not clear when it will go to the floor. A spokeswoman for Dole, Joyce Campbell, had no immediate comment when asked about a timetable. And supporters concede they're several votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed. The Senate rejected a similar amendment five years ago.

Not only that, the Senate has had a full legislative plate - including considerable time spent on the Republican plan for balancing the budget by the year 2002. For an amendment to become part of the Constitution, 290 House members and 66 senators must vote for it and 38 state legislatures must ratify it. There is one vacancy in the 100-member Senate, that of Bob Packwood, R-Wash. The House vote for the measure was 312-120, well above the two-thirds majority needed. Forty-nine states - all but Vermont - have passed resolutions urging Congress to support the amendment. At last count there were 56 co-sponsors of the Senate measure, including 11 Democrats - among them liberal Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California. Susan Ridge, spokeswoman for the Citizens Flag Alliance, a coalition of about 100 groups lobbying for the amendment, said she was optimistic. "There's nothing out there that makes us think that it wouldn't happen in November," Ridge said, adding that she expected a Senate vote by year's end "at the very latest." Ridge said she believes another seven or eight senators likely would vote for the amendment. Supporters assert that the Stars and Stripes, as the binding symbol of the nation, must be protected by law and that flag desecration is not a free-speech activity protected under the Constitution's First Amendment. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who sponsored the measure with Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., calls the flag "a unique symbol in our country."

Police investigating burglary of building

A police investigation in continuing into an incident Saturday involving a burglary at a local business. According to a police department news release, a 20-year-old male and a 15-year-old juvenile were arrested at the unidentified business in connection with a burglary. The release said the pair was caught in the process of burglarizing the building. The suspects will be questioned at a later date in connection with the incident.

Daughter of former caretaker offers memories of living at state cemetery

AUSTIN (AP) - A canopy of blue morning glories once covered Confederate soldiers' graves in the Texas State Cemetery. Large goldfish swam in the graveyard's fountain. Five milk cows helped keep the grass down.

State officials learned this from Viola Barnes, 93, who stepped forward to share her memories of living at the cemetery while her father was its caretaker in 1912-1950, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

"It has made it alive," Gerron Hite, preservation architect with the Texas Historical Commission, said of details provided by Ms. Barnes about the 144-year-old cemetery.

The State Cemetery - final resting place of governors, war veterans and other Texas notables - is undergoing a $4.7 million restoration. Ms. Barnes contacted the state in response to an appeal for information about the cemetery's past.

Her memory and her collection of childhood photographs have "really been the best" information source, Hite said.

Photographs show the cemetery once was surrounded by a fence of concrete bricks, which Ms. Barnes said were made on the grounds. She said her job was to stand guard at the fence to keep out neighborhood children trying to climb it and attend funerals.

"They were curious; they were just children. I'd say, 'No, you can't come in here. No you will not. If you come in, I'm gonna call the police,'" she told the newspaper.

Officials learned from Ms. Barnes that a state-owned mule named Kit lived on the grounds. The animal pulled a mower and was buried on the property when it died. The grave hasn't been located.

Ms. Barnes' collection of about 75 photographs shows a well-manicured cemetery with many trees that don't currently grow there.

Her father, Ernest Robert Barnes, liked to make a flourish with flowers, growing chrysanthemums, roses, hollyhocks, pansies, sweet williams, phlox and other blooms.

Colorful flower beds shaped like a star and an anchor adorned the grounds.

"When we went out there, there was nothing. He made the place look like something," Ms. Barnes said.

Ms. Barnes also remembers a special task that had to be done every time it rained: Sheltering a bronze wreath that hung on the monument to Stephen F. Austin.

"When the weather got wet and all, it was staining up the marker, so we would take it home" until the rain stopped, she said.

No one knows where the wreath is today. Only its broken stem is on the monument.

"We'd heard there was a wreath. We didn't understand why it wasn't permanently mounted. There is just a hook there now. Without the photograph (from Ms. Barnes), you'd never know what it was for. Now, everything sort of falls into place," Hite said.

Growing up in a cemetery didn't frighten the Barnes children, Ms. Barnes said. To them, it was home and a place to work. The seven children helped their father by trimming the grass around the tombstones by hand.

"I got down on my hands and knees and cut around them with a pair of scissors. It saved the state money and gave us knowledge, too" about historical figures, Ms. Barnes said.

She added, "Every last one of us worked in that cemetery, even my mother."

Ms. Barnes, who has visited the cemetery with Hite, said she's willing to help officials any time.

"I'm still working, you might say," she said.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says when a man points a finger at someone else, he should remember that three of his fingers are pointing at himself.

A little prayer is like a spiritual glass of iced tea on a hell of a day.

History repeats itself because nobody ever understands what it meant the first time.

The shutdown of the federal government this past week was caused by some big egos fighting over power. The taxpayers had to pay a big admission price to watch.

Now, the battle really begins to define the direction our government will take for the next decade. If the Republicans are successful in that process, it could mark the end of 30 years of rapidly expanding federal bureaucracy and ever-increasing tax burdens on the American people.

When President Clinton and some of the liberal Democrats go on TV and proclaim that they are saving the poor and downtrodden from the evil Republicans, it makes me realize that the Democrats didn't get the message in the last election.

Last November, the voters said they wanted change in our federal government. They wanted less spending, lower taxes, and a smaller government with a balanced budget.

Why do politicians thrive on half-truths or downright lies? Could it be to appeal to as many voters as possible?

"Republicans want to cut Medicare spending," they proclaim. That's a half-truth, at best. Only a liberal dogooder would call increasing Medicare spending from $4,800 per year per recipient to $6,700 per year a "cut" in spending. The GOP budget slows the rate of increase in Medicare spending, but more money will be spent each year on the program.

We may have to grit our teeth to achieve a balanced budget, but it's the only way to stop mortgaging the future of our children and grandchildren.

Statistics can be boring, but now and then we run across some interesting numbers. The Census Bureau provides many nuggets of information about the United States and its residents.

Where else could you learn that more than 24 million Americans took to the golf course at least once during the year? Or that annual snowmobile sales were expected to hit $530 million? Or that the domestic fishing industry snagged 162 million pounds of squid in one year?

The article also listed these tidbits about Texas:

--Eight percent of Texas households don't have access to an automobile.

--Texas has 2,824 of the nation's 40,368 shopping centers; and 35,370 of the nation's 453,308 car dealers.

--Almost 64 percent of Texans are believed to be Christian adherents; much higher than the U.S. average of 53.7 percent.

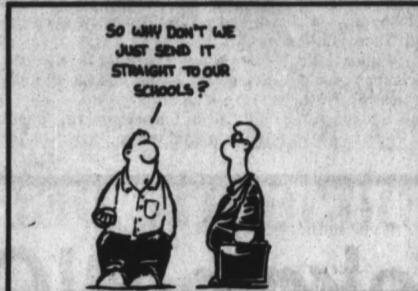

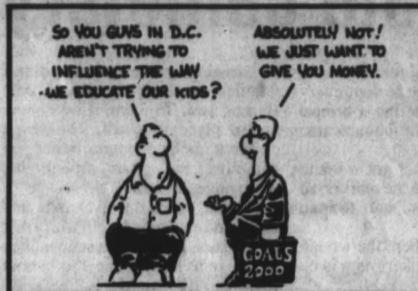

--Texans recorded higher death rates from accidents, diabetes and suicide than the national average, but a lower mortality rate from heart disease, cancer and pneumonia.

--In 1993, a total of 185,600 Texans were married, while 98,700 dissolved their vows.

--Texas recorded a far lower abortion rate than the nation as a whole. For every 1,000 live births in Texas in 1992, there were 297 abortions--compared to a national average of 379.

--There are 85,000 Texas homes without complete plumbing (1.2 out of every 100); only eight percent are without a telephone.

--The state's 18.3 million people live in 6.5 million households, with an average household size of 2.75 people.

A holiday message from Uncle Screwtape

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

(EDITOR'S NOTE: I cannot say how the following correspondence came into my possession, I simply present it for your information. I must remind you that the Devil and his servants are liars. Thus I must caution you to realize that what Screwtape wrote here may be exaggerated, embellished or even fabricated entirely.)

My dear Wormwood:

As you are no doubt aware, the coming days and weeks are, for those of us in service to Our Father Below, very important if we are to continue to harvest humans for our sustenance and pleasure.

But at the same time, these are very dangerous days, as many of those self-same humans use the days between the end of November and the end of December to (fools that they are) focus their thoughts and attention on the Enemy and the dastardly move He made against Our Father Below.

Despite the depths to which the quality of education at the Training College has fallen under old Sluggob, this disgusting time of year has actually become far better for you young tempters than it was in my days before I moved into Administration.

Because, you see, much work has been done in Research and Development to take the humans' eyes off the spiritual ramifications of this time of year and return them to the physical.

When I was a young tempter, there was nothing like "X-mas." We were not able to distract our patients with trips to see Santa Claus, the promise of all-day football -- we couldn't even rely on fears about credit card debt, holiday loans or fighting the holiday crowds.

It has only been within the past few decades that Research and Development has been able to weaken the Enemy's hammerlock on December by introducing commercialism, gluttony and the like.

Make no mistake -- those character strengths (although the Enemy calls them shortcomings!) have been around for centuries. We just have not been able to adapt them to the holidays until recently.

In fact, I must say with no little pride that I played a large part in the development of X-mas and the introduction of that alternative holiday into mainstream society.

You see, I had a patient, a materialistic man most of the year, whom I nearly lost one December when the pastor of a local church called to invite him to services.

This man's mind (despite my most skillful attempts at changing it) focused on the spiritual aspects of the season.

He actually made it all the way to the church and was seriously considering defecting to the Enemy (during the singing of what humans call "carols") when I was finally able to successfully distract him from the Enemy and place his thoughts firmly on the physical attributes of the soprano in the front row of the choir.

It was a close call and that patient is now safe in Our Father's house.

I realized we needed something to counter the spiritualism of the season.

I applied for transfer to Research and Development, which Our Father Below granted, and immediately got to work on the subject.

After many trials and travails, those of us in the department (which was headed by good old Wortgobbin at the time) hit upon the idea of materialism. We began working to convince humans that their holidays would be unfulfilled if they did not go all out to buy more than anyone, to have more garish house decorations than their neighbors and to put it all on their charge cards to pay for next year.

As a result, we are now able to present many souls to Our Father Below who might otherwise have gone to church and slipped from our grasp altogether.

So your job at this time is to make sure your patient forgets the manger, the shepherds and the (ugh) Virgin Birth and make your patient focus on the layaway line, the X-mas tree lot and Santa Claus.

While materialism will not necessarily of its own merits ensure our harvest of a soul, our plan can help you through a most difficult time of year.

Enough for now, my dear Wormwood.

Your affectionate uncle,

Screwtape
P.S: Humble acknowledgment goes here to the great Christian apologist C.S. Lewis, who originally created Screwtape and Wormwood 53 years ago.

Through his book "The Screwtape Letters" (available at the county library) we can see our tempters and the temptations they throw our way and thus better stand against the "wiles of the Devil." (Eph. 6:11)

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Look out. Here comes Christmas shopping... how many days 'til the big one? ... and all kinds of horror stories can come out of the season.

But, there is a story I must tell about a lady I met at one of the most famous shopping emporiums in the world, Macy's.

As a country girl transplanted to the biggest city in the country in November, I was faced with the task of getting Christmas delivered to several addresses in the southwest.

Let me set the scene: we were a family of four (including children ages four and two) living in a New York City hotel while waiting for an apartment to be readied. The countdown to Christmas was becoming critical. Less than three weeks.

Go, I was told, to Macy's and see if everything I needed couldn't be purchased and mailed from there.

Off I went, never envisioning what kind of mess I would get into. My first stop was to buy pajamas for my 14-year-old sister. As I checked out, I told the clerk that I wanted the store to mail the package.

Her eyes rolled back in her head and I knew immediately that I had said the wrong thing. But what? She turned and almost ran, saying that she would be right back. As good as her word, she reappeared, with a rather large woman bustling along in her wake.

It turned out the woman was the floor supervisor and her accent immediately told me there had to be goodness in her. She wasn't straight off the boat from Ireland, but it hadn't been long.

She informed me that the mailing room of Macy's was so backed up that it might be Easter before my Christmas presents were mailed. However, she had a solution. Gather up all the items I intended to buy, put them in shopping bags and deposit the bags in her office as I filled them, she instructed.

Minding her words, I trooped all over Macy's (actually, I was lost as much as I was found), checking off names and purchases, and making regular trips to the supervisor's office to leave filled shopping bags.

After several hours, I determined the list was finished for all the gifts that had to be mailed, so I returned to my Irish angel and reported I was through.

The next thing I knew she had me at the end of a counter, sorting out items and putting them in stacks, depending on their ultimate destination. We couldn't bother with individual gift wrapping. That would take too much time.

The supervisor and her assistant took over the whole counter, except for my little corner, to wrap my Christmas for mailing. Periodically, she would send a customer to another cashier's counter and mumble something about, "hope I don't get caught doing this."

In my heart, I knew it wouldn't matter if she got caught. Her lips had brushed the Blarney Stone. She would talk her way out of it and she'd have made a friend for Macy's for life.

Once all the gifts had been wrapped and addressed for their ultimate destinations, my new friend called for a porter. He piled all the packages in a basket and led me to the post office on the mezzanine of Macy's.

With profuse appreciation, I left that Irish Samaritan. She admitted she took pity on me because she had in the past found herself in trouble about getting packages off to Ireland on time.

By the time I got to the post office window, I was so tired that almost anything made me giggle. The postal clerk had to look up rates for such cities as Austin, Corpus Christi, Marfa, Dumas and Midland. He'd ask where these places were.

Then, the last, one I would have bet he would never recognize, much less pronounce, was the easiest.

"Oh, I know that one -- Tucumcari, New Mexico," he declared.

I couldn't help myself. I burst into laughter. It was so incongruous. He didn't know Austin or Corpus Christi but he knew Tucumcari!

House Republicans love freshmen determined to shrink government

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - House Speaker Newt Gingrich suggests their demands contributed to the government shutdown. Rep. John Kasich calls them out of control. But don't get these guys wrong: They love their freshmen.

"They're our failsafe," says Kasich, R-Ohio, chairman of the House Budget Committee. "These people are just petrified that we're not going to get the job done."

The "job" is shrinking government, and the Republican Party took a big step in that direction with passage of its balanced budget bill. The "petrified" people are the 73 House Republican first-term members operating in what one called a "constructive tension" mode with their leaders.

The huge class gets most of its headlines when it threatens to revolt, or actually does, against Gingrich & Co. This has happened on issues as specific as a committee chairman's attempt to punish a freshman and as broad as a bill to extend the nation's borrowing authority.

But as many times as the class has goaded and infuriated House Republican leaders, its militance on certain issues has been a useful tool for those same leaders.

"The speaker one day says 'I have no flexibility, these people are telling me what to do,'" says Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif. "The next day he's holding all their votes in the palm of his hand. He's playing it both ways."

Republican leaders struck a short-term budget deal Sunday, two days after their junior members had furthered their reputation for ferocity -- and strengthened the GOP negotiating hand -- at a hard-line news conference on the budget.

It's a role they have played throughout the crisis.

Gingrich outlined a "they-made-me-do-it" scenario last week in explaining why two short-term bills went to Clinton loaded with veto bait, ultimately leading to the partial government shutdown.

The freshmen didn't want to extend government borrowing or spending authority, Gingrich said, because they are committed to balancing the budget as soon as possible.

"So we had to go to the freshmen and say we're going to put death penalty reform on it in order to get your vote, we'll put regulatory reform on it in order to get your vote, and we'll have seven year balanced-budget language in order to get your vote," the speaker said at a breakfast last week.

He also said the freshmen were way ahead of the House leadership -- too far ahead -- in trying to eliminate the Commerce Department, restrict lobbying by federal grant recipients, and make it much harder to regulate health, safety and the environment.

"Some places, frankly, they moved a little faster than they should," Gingrich said. "We mishandled the environment all spring and summer."

In the end, nearly everything Gingrich added to please the freshmen disappeared in negotiations with the Senate and the White House. The freshmen, touting their maturity, said they would focus on the balanced budget for now and worry about the rest later.

"We are flexible. We realize we have to back up from time to time, take another approach. We haven't abandoned those other issues such as welfare for lobbyists or elimination of the Commerce Department," said class president Rep. Roger Wicker, R-Miss.

"These are the 1990s conservative ideas," said Rep. David McIntosh, R-Ind. "Newt's embraced them, he's said they're good. It's just going to take the natural cycle" of months or years to win public support for them.

He added, however, that "our base wants us to move quickly on these things, so you see the freshmen saying let's get as much done as we can now. And I think you'll see constructive tension between the freshmen and the leadership as they move slower on some of these issues."

The Senate -- particularly its Republican moderates -- dealt severe blows to several freshman initiatives. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., called the class the main obstacle to what she said has "become a dirty word" -- compromise.

"You have to know how to pick your fights," Kassebaum said last week as the budget impasse stretched on.

The freshmen and some of their elders, Gingrich included, see the world differently. To them, the government shutdown was useful both as a pressure tactic on the White House and from the practical standpoint of proving the country doesn't need all this government.

House GOP leaders will no doubt be depicting the freshmen as an unmanageable force of nature in the next few weeks as long-term spending decisions are made. Asked recently if they were under control, Kasich replied: "I hope not."

Texas playwright draws on experiences for work

Horton Foote started as actor, changed directions on advice of actress-friend

By FRITZ LANHAM
Houston Chronicle

WHARTON, Texas - Horton Foote directs his visitor to a book high on a shelf in his study.

"I think this pretty much sums up what I'm trying to tell you," he says as the book is retrieved and put in his hands.

He's been talking about how, as a boy, he absorbed the stories told by his elders and how those stories percolated through his mind and memory and gave him the material he's been transmuting into art for 55 years.

The book is Elizabeth Bishop's "Collected Poems." In his soft, Southern accent, the 79-year-old playwright begins to read from "The Moose," from a passage in which the narrator, on a long-distance bus trip, overhears two old people sitting in the back, talking quietly:

...uninterruptedly talking, in Eternity: names being mentioned, things cleared up finally; what he said, what she said, who got pensioned:

deaths, deaths and sicknesses; the year he remarried; the year (something) happened. She died in childbirth. That was the son lost when the schooner foundered.

"They never hid anything from me. That was another extraordinary thing."

— Horton Foote

Foote reads in a practiced voice, hitting the cadences exactly right, evoking the crystalline clarity of Bishop's verse. It's the voice of an actor, a man of the stage.

He took to drink. Yes. She went to the bad. When Amos began to pray even in the store and finally the family had to put him away.

He closes the book. "They never hid anything from me," he says, of his elders. "That was another extraordinary thing. They never said leave the room. They never shielded me from things they didn't think a child should hear. "So I got educated early."

Outside, the summer day is overcast and muggy, but Foote's study is dark and cool. The rectangular room is actually the enclosed back porch of the 78-year-old Foote family home in Wharton, a Gulf Coast farm town 60 miles southwest of Houston, off U.S. 59. The playwright was raised in this large two-bedroom wood-frame house - he was 1 when his parents moved in.

As a young man he wrote his first full-length play in the living room. In the back yard of the house next door stands a 300-year-old pecan tree whose branches he scrambled over as a boy. These days he spends about six months of the year in Wharton, living the rest of the time in a Greenwich Village apartment.

The study is furnished simply. At one end is a large wooden desk where he often writes. On the wall are books - poetry on the left, plays on the right. Two vinyl-covered stuffed chairs fill the other end of the room, and it is here Foote sits today, talking about his life and long career. In a corner, next to the window, stand his two Oscars, both for best screenplay: "To Kill a Mockingbird" (1962) and "Tender Mercies" (1983).

Foote is affable but with a reservoir of polite reserve - "courtly" is the adjective often and accurately applied to his manner. He's medium height, with bushy white eyebrows and a square face topped by white hair. He moves slowly, but speaks with vigor.

No, he says, his life hasn't changed much since winning the Pulitzer Prize for drama last year. That honor had one excellent result, though. It set his Pulitzer-winning play, "The Young Man From Atlanta," which had its premiere at the small Signature Theater in New York in January, on the road to Broadway. That journey will take it first to Boston's Huntington Theater, where it opens this month, and to Houston's Alley Theater, where it will run Feb. 16-March 16, 1996.

Foote has written more than 40 plays and seems as active as ever. In addition to working closely with director Peter Masterson on the Broadway-bound production of "The Young Man," he's mulling over a screenplay for a film based on William Faulkner's short story "Old Man." Foote adapted the story for television in 1958.

Actor Eddie Murphy's production company has commissioned him to write an original screenplay based on the experiences of blacks in the Wharton area. And Foote hopes to continue filming his "Orphans' Home Cycle," nine plays based loosely on his parents' early lives. Small, independent films of four of the nine - "1918," "On Valentine's Day," "Courtship" and "Convicts" - have been made during the past 10 years.

Foote is one of those writers whose work is rooted in a sense of place. He doesn't write about New York or New Hampshire, both places he's lived much of his adult life, but about Wharton (called Harrison in his plays). He writes about the moral and existential conflicts of mostly ordinary people, about broken dreams, love gained and lost, courage in the face of disappointment. There's nothing flashy or histrionic about his work, but it is invested with a deep humanity.

"Early on I said to myself that I would like to write a kind of moral and spiritual history of a place," Foote says. "I don't often say that because it sounds a little pretentious, I know. But that's really what I set for myself."

Foote is a fifth-generation Texan, with deep roots in Wharton and the state. On his father's side of the family, there were the Hortons and the Footes. The Hortons came to Texas in 1834 and had a large plantation outside Wharton. When Texas was admitted to the union in 1846, Albert Clinton Horton became the state's first lieutenant governor, serving as acting governor for some months while James Pinckney Henderson was fighting in Mexico. The Footes came to Galveston sometime before the Civil War and owned shipping fleets. Both families lost their fortunes during the war.

Foote's mother's family had better luck. The playwright's maternal grandfather bought a large amount of cotton farmland around Wharton after the Civil War. Foote's father ran a clothing store just off the town square and managed the farms his wife had inherited. The couple had three sons. If not rich, the family was well-to-do.

"We had our ups and downs, typical of a small-town family in those days," Foote says of life in the extended family of his boyhood.

"It was very hard on the males because there was so little to do. My uncles were just never very ambitious, and they had difficult and tragic lives in many ways. Most of them inherited land, but they never farmed it; they had people working it, so they didn't have much to do.

"My aunts, on the other hand, were extraordinary women, very strong, and all had very fulfilled lives."

Foote's father told stories, and he heard men spinning yarns when he helped at his dad's store. But the women were the great storytellers of the family, he says. One aunt - Louisiana Texas Patience Horton - "could really make the hair of your head stand up." They talked about their own lives, about their neighbors, about the past and the present, about "what he said, what she said," as Elizabeth Bishop put it.

Foote learned about point of view, about how the angle from which events are seen can be as interesting as the events themselves. "Sometimes it was almost like a riff," he says, drawing a term from jazz. "They would tell the story, and then tell it the next night with variations."

At the time the young Foote didn't know how he would use the stories he was hearing. But he did decide, at the age of 11, that he wanted to be an actor. Why is something of a mystery to him even today. It wasn't as though

Wharton in the 1920s was some hotbed of the dramatic arts.

The best Foote can say is that, like an East Texas preacher, he "got the call." He resolved that after graduating from high school he would go off and become an actor. On graduation day, he would be just shy of 16.

His parents were remarkably supportive about the whole thing.

Emmitt's knee injury won't end his season

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - Thanksgiving came one day late for the Dallas Cowboys.

A medical report contained good news on Emmitt Smith's left knee, injured during the third quarter of Thursday's 24-12 win over Kansas City.

Smith, who has missed only one game due to injury in his pro career, sustained a mild sprain of the medial collateral ligament against the Chiefs and could play Dec. 3 when Dallas plays host to Washington.

"Doctors said Emmitt will be listed as probable day-to-day and he could play next week," said Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple. "Doctors will know more next Monday about his availability against the Redskins."

Smith rushed for 56 yards and scored on a 15-yard run before his injury. The touchdown was his 21st of the season, leaving him just three behind John Riggins' NFL record.

It looked like the NFL's rushing leader was gone for the season when he was carted off the field. He went down untouched after planting his shoe on Texas Stadium's artificial surface, which hasn't been replaced since around 1980.

But an MRI performed at Baylor University Medical Center on Friday "showed no serious damage," Dalrymple said.

"Emmitt's MRI is something we can all be thankful for," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "Everybody knows his value to this football team. We're not going to rush his recovery."

"We've got 10 days before our next game and we're going to treat his knee and rehab it so that when he returns, he'll be 100 percent. Our medical staff is not setting a date for him returning to practice."

Owner Jerry Jones, who two years ago found out the hard way about Smith's value to the team, said, "We're thrilled about the news about Emmitt."

Smith missed the first two games of the 1993 season because of a contract dispute with Jones, who quickly yielded to Smith's demands after Dallas lost the two games without him. The Cowboys then rallied to win a second consecutive Super Bowl.

While the news was good about Smith, reports were disastrous on center Ray Donaldson.

The 37-year-old starter, signed after Pro Bowl center Mark Stepnoski went to the Houston Oilers during the offseason, is out for the season and the playoffs with a broken right ankle. He underwent two hours of surgery Friday.

Guard Derek Kennard will take over at center. Jones had refused to accept Kennard's retirement announcement this summer and enticed him into signing with the Cowboys.

Cornhuskers race by Oklahoma

By DAVE ZELIO
Associated Press Writer
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Don't expect the celebration of a third consecutive undefeated regular season to last long. No. 1 Nebraska has the Fiesta Bowl and a third straight national championship game just five weeks away.

The Cornhuskers (11-0, 7-0 Big Eight) will relax today, and many will watch No. 6 Florida State at No. 3 Florida on television. If the Gators win and beat Arkansas in the Southeastern Conference championship, they will play Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 2.

Center Aaron Graham will be watching, but he was looking ahead to Tuesday's practice so the team can work on "the things we need to do to win another national championship."

Like run the football. Friday's 37-0 victory over Oklahoma saw the Huskers held to 271 rushing yards, their third-lowest total this season. Nebraska's offense didn't score a touchdown until 14:12 left in the game.

It didn't matter. The Nebraska defense scored two touchdowns and held Oklahoma to 241 yards, 144 below its average. Oklahoma had not been shut out by Nebraska since a 7-0 loss in 1942.

"Sometimes the offense carries us, but I thought we did a pretty good job," defensive tackle Christian Peter said. "I think we've showed throughout the year that we have a great offense, but we also have a great defense."

Nebraska needed it as quarterback Tommie Frazier and the Huskers offense sputtered. Frazier, considered a Heisman Trophy frontrunner along with Ohio State tailback Eddie George, completed 12-of-25 for 128 yards with one interception and a 38-yard touchdown pass.

"I don't think I played a bad game," said Frazier, who improved to 32-3 as a starter. "I did everything I normally do. It's just that things didn't fall into the right places for me today."

The teams combined for seven fumbles, 12 penalties and 14 punts, but Oklahoma (5-5-1, 2-5) paid the most for its mistakes. Of its 14 possessions, 10 ended in punts, two in interceptions, one in a fumble and the other on downs. Oklahoma managed just 51 rushing yards, 162 below its average.

Oklahoma, which averaged 2.6 turnovers per game, also had nine penalties for 97 yards in the final game between two Big Eight Conference teams. Next year, the expanded league will be known as the Big 12.

"Our football team played giveaway throughout the year, and that was the story today," Oklahoma coach Howard Schnellenberger said. "I'd really like to see these two teams play with us taking out all our giveaways."

Nebraska opened the scoring on a 31-yard field goal by Kris Brown. On the ensuing drive, linebacker Jamel Williams picked off the third pass by Oklahoma redshirt freshman Eric Moore and returned it 31 yards for a touchdown. It was the fifth interception return for a score by Nebraska this season.

The Huskers added a 27-yard field goal by Brown, but punted three times and failed on a fourth-and-15 play on their other first-half possessions.

Memorial team roping held

A Memorial Team Roping was recently held in the B Bar S Arena with proceeds being endowed to The West Texas A&M University Spicer Gripp Rodeo Scholarship.

The event was the first of five annual team roping planned to boost the endowment for the WTAMU Rodeo Club.

Gripp was a well-known and respected cowboy from Hereford.

Funds from the roping and pledges from friends will total about $4,000 for the endowment, according to Kelvin Sharp, rodeo team adviser and mathematics instructor at WTAMU.

To contribute to the Spicer Gripp Rodeo Scholarship, contact Kelvin Sharp by mail to WTAMU Box 787, Canyon, Texas 79016 or phone (806)656-2547.

"They were doing some things that caught us off guard," Frazier said.

The Sooner offense never got started. Senior Garrick McGee, who replaced Moore after Oklahoma's third possession, completed half of his 30 passes for 159 yards with one interception.

Nebraska opened a 20-0 lead midway through the third quarter when safety Tony Veland picked up James Allen's fumble and ran 57 yards for a touchdown.

HELP FOR THE LEGALLY BLIND

The designation "legally blind" indicates that an individual has severely limited vision that cannot be corrected better than 20/200. Once certified legally blind, the person is entitled to state and/or federal assistance for vision services to maximize effective use of remaining vision.

The optometrist, an eye professional qualified to certify this condition, can prescribe and provide helpful low-vision aids. The wide panoply of assistive devices include hand-held magnifiers and prisms, plus telescopic lenses and microscopic segments for regular lenses. There are also systems that utilize computer screens to greatly enlarge reading matter.

The legally blind are not blind. With the help of low-vision aids, many of these people are able to read and take care of themselves. Your optometrist can provide needed support to help the patient adjust and outline any special benefits available.

Oilers must contain Broncos' rookie RB

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - The best defense against Denver rookie running back Terrell Davis may be canceling his wakeup call.

Davis, a sixth-round surprise from Georgia, enjoys 10-12 hours sleep per night almost as much as he relishes gaining yards for the Broncos.

"I must be part bear or something, but I'll be in bed by 7:30 or 8 tonight," Davis said. "I've always needed a lot of sleep. Sometimes I read, but sleeping is the most relaxing thing I do."

Davis started preseason hoping he could make the Broncos' practice squad. Yet he'll be making his 12th start of the season Sunday when the Broncos play the Houston Oilers in the Astrodome.

Davis is a key reason the Broncos offense has added efficiency this season. He gives defenses more to think about than just stopping John Elway. He's rushed over 100 yards two of the last three weeks and needs 117 yards to reach 1,000.

"When you have a quarterback who can do the things downfield like Elway with Shannon Sharpe, you have to concern yourself with what they can do," Oilers coach Jeff Fisher said. "And that does a lot to open up your running game."

The Broncos haven't had a 1,000-yard rusher since Gaston Green in 1991. Davis had his best day Nov. 19 with 176 yards on 30 carries, the second in the NFL this season behind Marshall Faulk's 177 yards for Indianapolis against St. Louis on Oct. 1.

"We've been more productive the last couple of weeks than we have all year," Broncos coach Mike Shanahan said. "Terrell has everything you look for in a running back. He's a good blocker, he has excellent hands and he gets stronger as the game goes on."

Shanahan became head coach last Jan. 31 with a new coaching staff and an open mind. He began preseason without naming a starting running back.

"We had no preconceived notion that one guy was going to be the guy," Shanahan said. "We evaluated throughout the preseason, and by the end there was no question that this guy was the most productive running back."

Davis has progressed each week. He got 135 yards against Arizona on Nov. 5 for his first 100-yard game as a pro and he knows who helped him get there.

"You look at the holes I'm running through - and who couldn't run through them?" Davis said. "It was just a matter of me getting adjusted to them. Early in the year, I was running where I wasn't supposed to run and now I'm more patient, waiting for the blocks."

"The success I'm having is actually everyone on the offensive line."

Shanahan has been most impressed with Davis' maturity.

"A lot of rookies come in and they get enamored with the media and their success," Shanahan said.

"We've just been watching film on them," Davis said. "They are a great defense and we know it will be a challenge to play against them."

But Davis probably won't lose any sleep over it.

Nuggets down Mavs in overtime

By The Associated Press
Lucious Harris is the latest member of the Dallas Mavericks to cost his team a victory by missing from close range.

Harris missed a layup at the end of regulation - just like Jim Jackson did earlier in the week - and the Mavericks went on to lose 112-109 to the Denver Nuggets in overtime Friday night.

"I misjudged it off the backboard," Harris said. "I should have just shot it straight. But that's how it goes."

Jackson missed a similar shot Tuesday night at the end of regulation against the Chicago Bulls and the Mavs lost that game, too, 108-102 in overtime.

"This was a huge win," guard Jalen Rose said. "Any time you come into another team's arena 2-8, any win is huge. We made plays down the stretch and found a way to win. We need to keep finding ways to win."

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf nailed 8-of-11 attempts from 3-point range and scored a season-high 39 points for Denver, which won for only the third time this season.

With less than 30 seconds left in the game, it looked like the Nuggets would win in regulation. But Jason Kidd's follow-up with 12 seconds remaining narrowed Denver's advantage to 103-101, and Kidd then stole the inbound pass and dunked with 8.3 seconds left for a 103-103 tie.

The Nuggets had trouble inbound the ball and Don MacLean threw a pass out of bounds with 1.5 seconds left to give the Mavericks a chance for the win. George McCloud completed a 40-foot inbound pass to Harris underneath the basket, but the layup attempt bounced out.

SuperSonics 112, Spurs 100
At Seattle, Hersey Hawkins scored 27 points and Shawn Kemp added 25 points and 17 rebounds as Seattle remained unbeaten at home.

Spurs center David Robinson was ejected for a punching foul with 3:17 left in the third quarter and Coach Bob Hill was ejected for arguing.

Sean Elliott led the Spurs with 32 points. Robinson had 11 points and eight rebounds before his ejection.

Kings 99, Lakers 98
At Inglewood, Brian Grant had 23 points and 10 rebounds and Mitch Richmond hit a clutch 3-pointer with 1:04 to play as Sacramento beat Los Angeles.

Olden Polynice added 17 points and 14 rebounds for the Kings, whose third victory in their last 26 visits to the Forum enabled Garry St. Jean to become the seventh coach in franchise history with 100 victories.

Hornets 116, Grizzlies 104
At Charlotte, the Hornets ended their five-game losing streak and extended Vancouver's string to 10 losses in a row.

Glen Rice scored 15 of his 20 points in the third quarter, including 11 in a 13-2 run to begin the second half that put Charlotte up 72-57.

Rice and Larry Johnson, who also had 20 points, sat out the fourth quarter. Dell Curry's 3-pointer gave Charlotte its biggest lead of the game, 114-88 with 4:15 to play.

Pistons 101, Sixers 78
At Auburn Hills, Mich., Grant Hill had 20 points and 10 rebounds in 24 minutes as Detroit routed Philadelphia.

The Pistons stopped a three-game losing streak while extending Philadelphia's losing streak to six games. Detroit has its largest victory margin of the season.

Allan Houston scored 23 points and Otis Thorpe added 18. Rookie Jerry Stackhouse scored 20 for Philadelphia.

Cavaliers 100, Pacers 93
At Indianapolis, Chris Mills scored nine points in the third quarter as Cleveland built a 22-point lead.

The Cavaliers hit eight of their first 10 shots in the third period and finished the quarter 9-of-13.

Terrell Brandon topped the Cavs with 24 points and Mills scored a season-high 22. Reggie Miller was high scorer for the Pacers with 27 points.

Bullets 110, Heat 94
At Baltimore, Robert Pack scored 13 of his 21 points in the third quarter and Juwan Howard added 18 points as Washington beat Miami.

George Muresan had 19 points and 15 rebounds for the Bullets, who won consecutive games for the first time this season.

Alonzo Mourning had 24 points and eight rebounds and Billy Owens added 22 points for Miami, which had won its previous three games.

Trail Blazers 99, Nets 87
At Portland, Clifford Robinson scored 23 points to lead Portland over New Jersey as the Blazers avenged a 20-point road loss to the Nets earlier this season.

New Jersey, which got no closer than 10 points after the first quarter, was led by Armon Gilliam's 20 points and 18 rebounds. P.J. Brown added 19.

Bulls 90, Jazz 85
At Salt Lake City, Michael Jordan scored 13 of his 34 points in the final 2 minutes, 23 seconds.

Chicago led 85-75 on two free throws by Jordan with 46.4 seconds left, but Jeff Hornacek and Chris Morris made baskets and John Stockton added a 3-pointer as the Jazz closed to 86-82 with 8.8 seconds left.

Magic 109, Timberwolves 98
At Minneapolis, Nick Anderson made 11 of his first 16 shots and scored a season-high 34 points as Orlando defeated Minnesota. Arfernee Hardaway finished with 22 points and 12 assists.

Warriors 101, Celtics 94
At Boston, Rony Seikaly had 23 points and 10 rebounds to lead Golden State to its first road win of the season.

Win over Baylor gives Longhorns new confidence

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas players say a Thanksgiving-night victory over Baylor is testament to a new, never-say-die spirit that has helped restore some prestige in the No. 9 Longhorns' program.

With quarterback James Brown, the Southwest Conference leader in pass efficiency and total offense, out of the game with a sprained left ankle, redshirt freshman Rich Walton opened against the Bears by spraying errant passes all over the field.

After six possessions, the Longhorns (9-1-1, 6-0 SWC) had 1 yard of offense, a turnover and no first downs. But Texas coach John Mackovic could be seen exhorting his players up and down the sideline.

"I kept telling Rich, 'You're doing just fine. Keep your tires pumped up because you're going to hit the groove,' and he finally did," Mackovic said of his team's 21-13 victory over Baylor (7-4, 5-2).

Players said recent Texas teams might have become discouraged and let the game slip away after such a poor start. But they said they have been toughened by adversities of the past couple of years: injuries, player suspensions, upset losses.

"In the past, I don't know that we would pull that game out," said cornerback Bryant Westbrook. "We might get our heads down and let it get away. But this team has been through a lot. We have more confidence, and we help pull each other through the tough times."

The sense rose to the challenge and shut down Baylor's explosive running attack, limiting the Bears to 164 yards of offense without a score in the first half.

The strong defensive effort gave Walton enough time to find a rhythm. He hit tight end Pat Fitzgerald on a 70-yard touchdown pass with 4:39 left in the first half.

The Longhorns went on to build a 21-0 lead before Baylor scored twice late in the fourth quarter.

Mascots form big part of SWC football legacy

Special animals provide focus for school spirit, target for pranksters

By TRAVIS TINGLE
 San Antonio Express-News
SAN ANTONIO - They have stolen fans' hearts. Fans have just stolen their heart, hair, hide and all. To many, mascots are as much a part of the Southwest Conference's football legacy as any player, coach or marching band.

Everyone has their favorites. And preferences don't always reflect school ties. "When it comes to mascots, I've always been partial to (Texas') Bevo and the (Arkansas) Razorback," said former SMU coach Ron Meyer. "At SMU, I always wished we had some big Clydesdale, you know, standing about 20 hands high, to run out on the field with us. Instead, we had this little old Shetland (pony) ... I never could understand that." If an SWC gallop poll was taken, SMU and Texas Tech easily would finish with the highest marks. Those schools' horses make the football teams' field entrance an electric moment.

The Mustangs' first Peruna, a 150-pound show pony, made his debut Nov. 4, 1932, after being donated by T.E. Jones, the owner of old Arlington Downs. Jones also provided a red saddle blanket to go along with the horse.

Unfortunately, after just two years of service as SMU's mascot, Peruna ran out into the middle of Mockingbird Lane near campus and was struck by a car and killed. The horse was buried at Ownby Stadium, where a small statue marks both his grave and all other Perunas who have trotted off to that big pasture in the sky.

Texas Tech unveiled the first Masked Rider, Joe Kirk Fulton, against Auburn in the 1954 Gator Bowl. After seeing Fulton, a black-and-red cape flapping in the air, and his trusty steed, Blackie, dash around the field in Jacksonville, Fla., an Atlanta newspaper reporter wrote: "No team in any bowl game ever made a more sensational entrance."

But the 40-year-old tradition of the jet-black horse and Zorro-like rider racing around the field at full speed after Red Raiders' touchdowns also endured a tragic setback in 1994.

Tech's quarterhorse, named Double T, lost its rider and died after smashing into the wall as it tried to leave Jones Stadium through the southwest tunnel. This season in Lubbock, the Masked Rider only darts around the field when the team first enters.

"The most exciting mascot is the one at Texas Tech," said former Texas A&M coach Emory Bellard. "It's always been pretty dangerous what they did. He would go around that field and get the crowd working up in a sweat. I always told our kids to be alert and that, if they didn't want to get run over by that horse, don't let 'em score."

If the SWC mascots could ever get together and produce their own yearbook, Bevo, Texas' Longhorn steer, probably would be voted "Most Likely To Be Stolen."

One of the more memorable steer-nappings happened in 1963. And, as was often the case whenever SWC mascots disappeared from their pens, cages or secret hiding places, Aggies proved to be the culprits.

That season, A&M cadets had managed to swipe the mascot from nearly every opponent on the Aggies' football schedule, with the exception of LSU's tiger, Mike, and the University of Houston's cougar, Shasta. But Bevo, of course, was seen as the final stroke in A&M's mascot-marauding masterpiece.

"They took the steer back to College Station and about mid-morning they confessed to the local Texas Ranger that they had taken it and told him where it was," said longtime UT sports information director Bill Little, who covered the caper as a student reporter for the Daily Texan.

"The Ranger goes out to this farm, and it wasn't there. So he comes back and it was kind of like the old saying, 'You in a heapa trouble, boy!' because what they had done was confess to what was at that time cattle rustling."

"All the other mascots they had stolen were relatively harmless. But when you stole cattle in the state of Texas back then, that was rustling and it was still punishable by hanging. I'm still not sure who was more relieved that the steer was eventually found safe and sound, the Texas fans or the Aggies that took him."

A Texas mascot heist during the early 1960s turned out far more disastrous. Some UT students once tried to swipe the Baylor bear cubs from their stone-laden den in Waco. It got ugly real quick.

"As they went through the fence, one of the cubs started scratching the guy who was carrying him and he wound up hitting it in the head, with a hammer or something, and killing it," Little said. "The kids involved in it ended up being expelled from school. It was just a case where the kid with the bear panicked."

Baylor's bear cubs, given names like Ted, Joe College, Barney and Bailey throughout the years, usually have gotten the best of any would-be thieves. And their track record against other mascots isn't too shabby, either.

Former Bears coach Grant Teaff remembers a non-conference tussle between the hedges in Athens, Ga., where the best thing his coaching staff later saw on the game film was a classic stiff arm from the cub.

"Georgia had an old grouchy bulldog, and the tradition was to take the other mascot over to meet him," Teaff said. "The old bulldog was slobbering up next to him, and that bear cub swatted that bulldog upside the head and knocked him silly. He must have rolled about 10 feet. We lost the game, but we won the mascot war."

One of Arkansas' wild hogs, Big Red II, snorted and drooled along the sidelines until it escaped from an animal exhibit in the Summer 1977. It didn't take long for an irate farmer with a shotgun to put an end to Big Red's piglet-fathering days.

"He got shot and killed for molesting that farmer's pigs," said Rick Schaeffer, Arkansas' sports information director. "He just thought it was another wild boar on the loose."

For obvious reasons, Houston always kept its cougar in a cage.

UH hasn't used a live cougar at its athletic events since 1988. Shasta V saw her last action that season. But the ferocious feline also was known for throwing a scare into the unsuspecting.

At a road game in 1975, the Cougar Guard, fraternity brothers charged with Shasta's care, rented its customary adjoining rooms at a Memphis, Tenn., hotel. With the management's blessing, Shasta was given a room to herself.

Given such vacation-like freedom, she loved to stretch out and take cat naps in the bathtub.

"We went out to get something to eat and forgot to put out the do-not-disturb sign on her door," said Calvin Speer, a former Cougar Guard member. "When we got back, the desk clerk told us that a maid had gone in there to clean the room. Apparently, she ran out of there screaming."

At least the cat didn't get her tongue.

When it comes to mascot pampering, though, A&M's Reveille is hard to top. She hardly ever has it all that ruff ... make that rough.

All six Reveilles have been given a variety of special privileges in Aggieland. The dogs eat in the corps dining hall, sleep in its dorm rooms and even attend classes with the members of the cadet outfit that take care of her.

The first Reveille, a skinny, black mutt hit by a carload of guilt-ridden cadets and nursed back to health, died at age 12 in 1944. She was given a full military funeral and buried just outside Kyle Field.

"That might be what a man wants to do, pass away and come back as Reveille," Bellard said. "She is royalty and treated in high esteem. That's the kind of dog's life you want to live."

Ranchers believe cedar uses precious water

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

HUNT, Texas (AP) - To Hill Country ranchers Travis and Mary Lee, cedar is simple. Clear the stubby trees from your land and more desirable grasses and oaks thrive.

"Cedar sucks up all your water," explained Travis Lee.

In slightly more technical language, university and government researchers in the region are saying much the same thing about mountain cedar, a native evergreen formally known as Ashe juniper.

A five-year study concluding this month has found clearing cedar yields some additional water, which seeps into the soil or becomes runoff, helping to replenish the underground Edwards Aquifer.

Bill Dugas, who has conducted the study for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at the Blackland Research Center in Temple, said for two years, two 40-acre pieces of property in eastern Uvalde County were studied for rainfall and evaporation before any cedar cutting was done.

In September 1992, chain saws were used to clear one of the pieces of land of small cedar trees. Mature cedar and cedar steep slopes that is considered habitat for the endangered golden-cheeked warbler were not cut.

Then researchers continued to measure rainfall and evaporation.

Scientists expected water loss would be less where the cedar was cleared, and that's what they found. About 60,000 more gallons of water per acre per year was discharged from the site cleared of cedar.

In the past year more water has still been yielded by the cedar-cleared land, though the amount has dropped to about 15,000 more gallons per acre per year, Dugas said.

"We've had a tremendous flush of growth of grasses and other woody plants. So we're getting less of a savings," he said. "It's why you can't do this for one year and know the answer."

Dugas conducted a similar study on mesquite trees in North Texas but did not detect the same water savings. The soil quality there is different, and grasses grow in place of mesquite almost immediately.

Dugas' cedar study is one of several within the state-federal Seco Creek Water Quality Demonstration Project.

Phillip Wright, Seco Creek project manager with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, said in a study about 1.5 miles from Dugas' work, researchers have found spring flow has been enhanced by cedar clearing.

On a 7.9-acre site, about 80 percent of the Ashe junipers were cleared. Again, larger trees that might be warbler habitat were left. Through 40 months of collecting data after the clearing, spring flow has increased.

"We've seen an increase of about 20 percent in the flow with about 30 percent less rainfall," Wright said, adding that he has seen no decrease in water savings.

These water findings could have important implications for the Edwards Aquifer recharge zone, a boomerang-shaped region stretching from Austin up through the Hill Country to north of Uvalde.

"There is a potential to increase water yield for these cedar-infested rangelands by doing selective Ashe juniper control," Wright said.

Though it is native to the area, the density of Ashe juniper has increased over the years possibly because of grazing and a lack of natural wildfires, researchers say.

Grazing is a big reason rancher Travis Lee wants to remove cedar from his land. With cedar growth, one cow can graze per 50-70 acres; without cedar, that figure increases to one cow per 15 acres, he said.

The Lees' 1,600-acre ranch used to be owned by Mary Lee's grandfather. In his days, cedar clearing was a routine chore.

"He used to burn all the time and keep all the cedar down," she said.

Last year, as the Lees were clearing a 36-acre patch of property, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service recommended they stop so biological surveys could be done to determine if it is warbler habitat.

Their cedar clearing is on hold, they said, because they were warned that continuing with it could violate the Endangered Species Act. The Lees said they've never seen warblers on their property and that they were planning to leave the mature cedars - or possible warbler habitat - anyway.

Like the researchers with the Seco Creek Project, Travis Lee said he's seen a difference in water flow when cedar is cleared.

"We've got a couple of gullies, the water production is much improved if you've cut the cedar," he said. His main interest is in making the land more "productive" for grass and oaks.

"Grass will not grow under these cedar trees," he added. "It (cedar) chokes off the water from everything else."

Agriculture Department will conduct voluntary inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department says it will provide voluntary inspections to plants that slaughter and process the meat of large, flightless birds.

The announcement follows petitions sent to USDA asking that its Food Safety and Inspection Service expand voluntary inspections to cover emus and rheas in addition to ostriches.

"There's been an increase over the years in the raising of these animals for meat," Hedy Ohringer, a spokeswoman for the inspection agency, said Wednesday. "And the Emu Association has petitioned us to offer this fee-for-service inspection...the way we have been doing for ostriches."

The inspections will be given at plants that want to pay for them. Ohringer said some plants want the checks so they can get the USDA stamp that certifies their meat is safe to eat.

To get an inspection, Ohringer said, plants will have to apply for a grant of inspection. Then, after an inspection, USDA officials will decide whether to give the plant a stamp of approval.

Ostriches and similar so-called ratiite species and other exotic and game animals such as reindeer, elk, deer, antelope, water buffalo and bison are not included under mandatory meat and poultry inspection.

Inspection of those species is covered under the Agricultural Marketing Act, under which USDA can provide voluntary fee-for-service inspection for plants that want to pay for the service.

The Food Safety and Inspection Service has inspected ostrich meat through the experimental program on a fee-for-service basis since 1994.

The agency said it expects to implement voluntary inspection of ratiite species after it completes training and inspection guidelines.

Equine industry to be featured

As part of the Amarillo Farm and Ranch Show, the West Texas A&M University Division of Agriculture and the American Quarter Horse Association will sponsor the program

"Current Topics in the Equine Industry".

The free program is open to the public and scheduled from 9-11 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 28 in the Grand Plaza

Room in the Amarillo Civic Center.

The program will focus on Equine Welfare and Related Issues.

Guest presenters include Dale O'Daniel, Texas Animal Health Commission, who will provide an update on vesicular stomatitis; Ward Stutz, AQHA Animal Welfare Task Force; and Sandra McCart, Texas Cruelty Investigation Bureau/Humane Society.

Economic issues facing the horse industry will be addressed at 10:30 with Dr. Dennis Sigler, nutritionist for Muenster Milling, Inc., presenting and update on equine nutrition.

The programs are geared toward anyone involved with or interested in horses, whether they show them, race them, breed them, board them or just ride them for pleasure.

Gripp Rodeo scholarship receives endowment funds

A Memorial Team Roping was recently held in the B Bar S Arena with proceeds being endowed to The West Texas A&M University Spicer Gripp Rodeo Scholarship.

The event was the first of five annual team roping planned to boost the endowment for the WTAMU Rodeo Club.

Gripp was a well-known and respected cowboy from Hereford.

Funds from the roping and pledges from friends will total about $4,000 for the endowment, according to Kelvin Sharp, rodeo team adviser and mathematics instructor at WTAMU.

To contribute to the Spicer Gripp Rodeo Scholarship, contact Kelvin Sharp by mail to WTAMU Box 787, Canyon, Texas 79016 or phone (806)656-2547.

Fall potato crop to be lower

WASHINGTON (AP) - The country's fall potato crop is expected to be smaller than last year's record-setter, which should keep prices above those of 1994 through next spring.

The Agriculture Department estimates a crop of 20.1 million tons, down 5 percent from last year but still the second-largest ever.

Harvested acreage is slightly less than last year and per-acre yields are down about 5 percent, largely because of poor spring weather, early frosts and scattered outbreaks of blight.

The most notable declines in yield were in North Dakota, 13 percent; Maine, 12 percent; Colorado, 11 percent; and Washington, 6 percent, the department said.

"A combination of the smaller fall crop and continued strong demand from processors will keep fresh-market potato prices above a year earlier through next spring," USDA's Economic Research Service said.

PLAYWRIGHT

now, I don't know what they must have thought in their hearts," Foote says, laughing.

"If a 15-year-old child of mine had said to me 'I'm going to be an actor,' I'd have tied him to the bed. But they didn't. They said, 'Well, you're awful young, and we think you better wait for a year until you're 17. Then if you want to do it' - this is the Depression, you know - 'we'll try to help you get off to dramatic school.'"

And that's what happened. When Foote turned 17, he got on a bus to California, bound for the Pasadena Playhouse to study acting. Before that day he'd been to Dallas and Houston and New Orleans, but no farther. He saw his first mountain through the window of the Los Angeles-bound bus.

After a year in Pasadena, Foote moved to New York and studied acting with Tamara Daykarhanova, a protegee of Konstantin Stanislavski, the Russian founder of "the Method" school of acting. That emotionally and intellectually demanding regimen would prove a valuable preparation for a dramatist.

Foote acted in a number of roles in the late 1930s and early 1940s, among them the patriotic musical "Yankee Doodle Comes to Town." His decision to take up the pen came about almost by accident. He was a member of the American Actors Theater, a group committed to performing the work of American dramatists. He and his fellow actors often engaged in improvisations, drawing on their individual experiences, and Foote naturally drew on his memories of people in Wharton.

Actress Agnes de Mille happened to be in town and saw Foote performing one of these roles. "She said, quite casually, 'Do you ever think about writing?'" Foote recalls. "I said no. She said, 'You should.'"

He did. He wrote a one-act play called "Wharton Dance," which American Actors Theater staged in the fall of 1940. He played the lead. The response was positive enough that Foote saved his money and returned home to Wharton to write his first full-length play, "Texas Town," which was staged the following spring. He had launched his career as a dramatist.

He also started a family. In 1945 he married Lillian Vallish, and the couple had four children: Hallie and Horton Jr., both of whom grew up to be actors and have performed in their father's plays; Walter, an attorney; and Daisy, a playwright and screenwriter.

Lillian Foote died three years ago, and her husband's voice softens when he mentions her. Since her death, he's found it difficult to go back to the New Hampshire house where the couple lived for many years, although he still owns the place and, at the moment, his daughter Daisy is up there working on a screenplay.

The early 1950s saw Foote writing for the New York stage and for the new medium of television. His first job for NBC involved rewriting episodes of "The Gabby Hayes Show," a half-hour western children's series, but soon he was writing teleplays for the network's "Television Playhouse," a weekly prime-time anthology.

The first script he wrote for "Television Playhouse" was "The Trip to Bountiful," a quietly moving story about an old woman who feels trapped in the Houston apartment she shares with her son and shrewish daughter-in-law and who embarks on a bus trip back to her beloved hometown of Bountiful. Lillian Gish starred in the drama, which aired in March 1953. It proved a big hit, and Foote expanded it into a three-act play that had a two-month run on Broadway late that year.

Thirty years later, Foote rewrote the story a third time for the screen. Geraldine Page won a best-actress Oscar for her performance in the 1985 film "The Trip to Bountiful." Foote's friend Peter Masterson directed; Foote's screenplay was nominated for an Oscar.

During 1953 and '54, Foote wrote 10 plays for NBC, among them "A Young Lady of Property," "The Midnight Callers" and "The Death of the Old Man." This was the "Golden Age" of television, when serious, live drama found a place along with lesser fare on the tube. Actually it was a "partly golden" time, Foote told one reviewer.

"It was the time of the drug culture and the use of language that had not been permitted in the theater before, for good or bad."

--Horton Foote

There were lots of talented young actors hungry for roles. The network anthologies couldn't afford big stars so they made stars of the writers, who included not only Foote but Paddy Chayevsky, Gore Vidal and Rod Serling. "We felt pampered and wanted," Foote told one interviewer. He continued to write for television into the 1960s.

He was also writing for the stage. In 1954 "The Traveling Lady," about a small-town Southern wife married to a violent husband, opened on Broadway and made a star of Kim Stanley in the title role. And he turned to movies. In 1962 he adapted Harper Lee's best seller "To Kill a Mockingbird," about a black man accused of raping a white woman in Mississippi. Nominated for an Oscar, Foote didn't think he had a chance to win and didn't bother to attend the ceremonies.

He made a point of being on hand when he won his second Oscar, for "Tender Mercies." That film, about a famous country singer trying to beat the bottle and begin a new life with a new family in a small Texas town, also won an Oscar for Robert Duvall for best actor. Duvall and Foote had known each other for years. When Foote finished the screenplay for "Tender Mercies," he immediately realized it would be a good part for his friend. Duvall agreed after Foote read him a handwritten draft.

Foote's other screen credits include "Baby, The Rain Must Fall" (1965), based on his play "The Traveling Lady." It starred Steve McQueen and Lee Remick and was filmed in Wharton.

"With the 1970s came changes in Broadway. The kind of plays Foote wrote fell out of favor. "Hair," with its celebration of sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll seemed to be the new wave. Foote moved his family to a farm in New Hampshire. One account refers to this period as a "semiretirement," but Foote takes issue with that description.

"That really wasn't true. Everything was in such a state of flux and transition - the New York theater was changing. The Broadway that I had known was just collapsing, and off-off Broadway was beginning to flourish. It was the time of the drug culture and the use of language that had not been permitted in the theater before, for good or bad.

"I was interested in all that but did not feel a part of it. I wanted to continue writing my plays and felt that if we could live more modestly as a family, then that would be the best solution."

During this period he began his "Orphans' Home Cycle." He also wrote "Tender Mercies." "I was working very hard," Foote says. "I just wasn't being produced."

He also got occasional assignments. One of them was to write a screenplay based on a Faulkner short story. That became the film "Tomorrow" (1973) starring Robert Duvall (who thinks it's his best work, Foote says). Made for just $400,000, "Tomorrow" introduced Foote to small-scale, independent filmmaking. "It just opened a whole new world for me," he says. "I thought, if I do films, this is what I want to do."

He began shooting film versions of his "Orphans' Home Cycle" in part to capture the performances of his daughter Hallie, who is sometimes described as the leading interpreter of her father's works. A Tad Hershom photograph of a smiling Foote on the rural Louisiana set of "Convicts" has a prominent place in Foote's study and suggests his pleasure in moviemaking.

Foote plans to continue writing for screen as well as stage, although this past year has reminded him how much he loves the latter.

The off-off Broadway Signature Theater in New York staged "The Young Man From Atlanta" and three other Foote plays - "Talking Pictures," "Night Seasons" and "Laura Dennis" - during a seven-month period that ended last spring. The plays were mounted in a small, 75-seat theater, and despite playing to near-full houses, only 1,700 people saw "The Young Man From Atlanta" during its four-week run.

"You can't get too involved with the theater because you'll get your heart broken if you do," Foote says with a philosophical air. The statement seems to sum up the tenuous state of serious drama in America.

Writing is a strange process for Foote. "I've learned that you can't use your will," he says, describing how he puts himself into a quietly receptive frame of mind to court the Muse.

"Laura Dennis," first staged last spring, was something Foote had started in the late 1970s and then set aside. He was going through his archives, preparing to send them to Southern Methodist University, and came across the unfinished manuscript. He liked what he read, but still didn't know how to finish it.

In Wharton he took a ride one day and passed an old, boarded-up house.

"I suddenly realized that was one of the houses I was using (in the play)," he says. "I began to think about the life in that house and what it had been like when I was a boy, and it just opened up the whole thing for me. I was able to finish the play quite quickly."

There's really no pattern to how a Foote play gets started and finished. He usually has several projects going at once, and when he temporarily runs out of steam on one, he turns to another. He calls himself an obsessive writer, sometimes getting up in the middle of the night to work if the words are flowing easily. He writes in longhand, quickly producing a first draft. But considerable thought goes into a project before the pencil touches paper.

"When I first began writing, if I wasn't doing this" - he makes a scribbling motion with his hand - "I thought I wasn't writing. But I suddenly realized that one does a lot of thinking before one writes and that's also writing, although it may not look like it."

"What an unlikely thing to have chosen this town (Wharton) to write about."

-- Horton Foote

He's doing more of that thinking in Wharton these days. In New York there's always some museum exhibit to see or some performance to attend; the phone rings all the time. His house in Wharton, with its haunting, primitive-style portraits on the wall and colorful throw rugs on the floor and living-room mantel topped with family photos, is a refuge, he says. In the old days, he'd spend his frequent forays home visiting family and friends, replenishing that well of small-town lore from which he draws. Most of those people are dead now. Foote spends more time working and less time socializing.

He has "an abiding affection for this place," but not, he says, "a sentimental affection." He doesn't try to romanticize the past, and he's made his peace with the present, trying not to get too angry when somebody tears down another fine old Wharton home.

Of one thing, Foote is certain. Writers don't choose their subjects; their subjects choose them.

"What an unlikely thing to have chosen this town to write about," he marvels quietly.

"I was advised over and over again to give it up, to not pay attention, that people wouldn't be interested. But I just couldn't help it. If I'd never had a play staged or published or a film made, I still would have written about it."

Club kicks off annual holiday fund raiser

L'Allegria Study Club announces that Project Christmas Card for 1995 kicks off this weekend all over town.

Each year the club sponsors this fund raiser to benefit the Hereford Regional Medical Center.

Patrons are asked to decide how much they would probably spend on holiday greetings and postage to friends and relatives in the Hereford area, and instead of sending them, give that amount to Project Christmas Card.

In the Christmas issue of The Hereford Brand of Dec. 17, greetings from contributors will go out to the community in a special full page layout.

This year the proceeds from Project Christmas Card will be spent on a Colposcope for use in the Lighting contest open for entries

The public is invited to take part in this year's Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division Christmas Lighting Contest.

Entry forms for the contest can be obtained at the Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main St.

Deadline to enter the contest is 5 p.m. Dec. 11. Judging will be Dec. 11-13 and winners will be announced Dec. 17.

Entries will be accepted in residential and commercial categories for total home or business or window/door.

hospital. This instrument will be used in cases of rape or sexual abuse as a tool to help the patient and to provide law enforcement with needed evidence.

Hereford Regional Medical Center is endeavoring to give the best care possible to these women and children who have already suffered too much.

The community can help by giving to Project Christmas Card.

Rebekah Lodge holds meeting

Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 met Tuesday evening with nine members attending.

Noble grand Nelma Sowell presided at the business session.

Eight visits to the sick, 45 cheer cards, five dishes of food delivered and two flowers were reported.

Christmas gifts for a needy family were discussed and voted on.

First nominations for new officers were made.

Susie Curtsinger read a poem, "A Cry from the Heartland," written by her daughter, Sue Andrews, at the time of the bombing in Oklahoma City.

Plans are progressing for the bazaar and sale set for Dec. 2 at the Odd Fellows Hall.

Rosalie Northcutt was hostess to Sowell, Curtsinger, Jessie Matthews, Irene Merritt, Ursalce Jacobsen, Peggy Lemons, Anna Conklin and Ben Conklin.

MIKE SABO
...at First Baptist Church

Sabo hopes to serve church, community

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

Mike Sabo received his call to serve the Lord while he was in Okinawa.

"I've always felt it was strange that I had to go so far to find the Lord," said Sabo.

This experience led him into the career that brought him to Hereford as the minister of music and education at First Baptist Church.

After graduating from high school in Colorado Springs, Colo., Sabo had traveled to Okinawa with his father who was in the U.S. Air Force.

On his return to the states, Sabo entered Howard Payne University and in 1978 received a bachelor's degree in theology with a minor in psychology.

He graduated from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1981 but since he never felt called to preach, he said he mastered in religious education.

Sabo plays the guitar and sings, so he uses his musical abilities as well as his religious training in his position at First Baptist.

"It is a benefit to the churches I serve to have someone who can do more than one thing," said Sabo.

In his duties as minister of education, Sabo hopes to "establish ministries that will meet the needs in Hereford."

Planning has begun on programs that Sabo hopes will help teach how to deal with the activities of daily living as well as assistance programs to help with community problems.

Regarding his music ministry Sabo said, "I'll never leave the old hymns but I want to incorporate new ones and have a variety of music that will meet the needs of everyone."

Sabo's wife Brenda is pianist at First Baptist Church and also teaches GED courses at the library.

The Sabos came to Hereford in September from The Woodlands, where Sabo had served for six years in the same position he holds at First Baptist.

The Sabos have two children. Their son Jared, who is 14, has William's Syndrome. He attends Hereford Junior High. Their daughter Emily is 11 and goes to West Central Intermediate School.

DEAR READERS: Recently, a man wrote to say his wife was no longer interested in sex. He said she thought this was perfectly normal because of my survey a few years ago. It showed that 72 percent of women prefer being held close and treated tenderly to "the act." He added, "That's why so many men are out looking for the other 28 percent."

The man asked me to put this question to my male readers: "How many of you males would settle for being held tenderly and be willing to forget about 'the act'?"

The response was overwhelming. To date, I have received 67,588 replies, and the mail is still coming in. Out of the 67,588, only 5,600 males, almost all over 60 years of age, said they were willing to settle for cuddling and forget about "the act." Here's a sampling:

FROM DALLAS: The older I get, the longer it takes, but I won't settle for cuddling until that's ALL I can do.

LAFAYETTE, IND.: Any man who would settle for holding his wife tenderly is getting some action somewhere else.

DALLAS: Being held tenderly is much more romantic than "the act." Any animal can perform the act, but only a loving person can experience the thrill of being held close. It says far more than words.

DES MOINES: Settle for being held tenderly? Are you kidding? No way. I am 74. My wife is 70. My sweetie pie is 55.

CHICAGO: After four children, my wife cut me off. I lived like a monk for three years, and then, I met a beautiful woman who was as unfulfilled as I was. Now it's the Fourth of July every week.

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICH.: The greatest pleasure is to GIVE pleasure. I'm sorry for men who don't know this.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.: Any doctor will tell you an active sex life helps men stay healthy. I'm hot to trot at 76.

OMAHA: I'm a widower with arthritis. The doctor says I should keep active. Sex is better than the Nordic Track.

ST. LOUIS: Bag "the act." Two hours of cuddling vs. 30 seconds of sweat. I didn't have to think twice.

TULSA: What's with these people who just want to be held? Are they dead? My wife said "no more" after our only child was born, so I found a fabulous "friend" who has made me very happy.

MIAMI: My wife claims that holding her close is nothing more than "upper persuasion for a lower invasion."

SAN FRANCISCO: I married a nun. "There will be nun of this and nun of that," so I hunted up an old flame.

PORTERVILLE, CALIF.: Don't those fools know that being held tenderly can lead to "the act"? It always does in our house.

KANSAS CITY: I'll answer for my husband. He doesn't do either. So where does that leave me? Up that well-known creek.

WORCESTER, MASS.: You once wrote, "Use it or lose it." I'm using it, and it's terrific. I'm an 82-year-old widower. (Please don't print my name. I have all I can handle.)

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

I don't like to drive. I do it because I have to.

I didn't want to learn to drive, but since we lived in the country when I was growing up, my mother insisted that I learn as soon as I was old enough to reach the pedals and see over the dash.

So I have been driving most of my life, but I don't like it because there are too many factors involved over which I have no control.

First, the very size of the vehicle, any vehicle I happen to be driving, is very intimidating. It is simply frightening to me to think that I am totally responsible for what a machine of that size is doing.

Second, my safety and the safety of my passengers depends on what every other driver I meet is doing. If I can't tell what their intentions are, then I may be in danger. (And I have never been good at mind reading.)

I frequently get very angry at other drivers. Maybe it isn't always their fault, but if I could tell what their intentions were I would feel a lot safer.

How often does a car pull out in front of you from a side street? And then proceed to drive 10 miles an hour under the speed limit?

It seems to me like any time a car pulls out in front of me it is always going to pull into my lane (even though there may be another lane available) and then the driver is very carefully going to drive slowly to the next intersection just in time to make it through the yellow light while I have to stop on red.

And this always happens when I am late for work or an appointment. Just like I always get behind someone at a red light who is signaling to make a right turn. And they don't turn right on red, even though it's legal and there is no traffic approaching from the left.

Or I get behind someone in a residential area who stops at every intersection regardless of whether the stop sign is on the street we are traveling or on the cross street.

Now, I feel that stopping for no apparent reason on a through-street is a very good way to get hit from behind. And I don't want to get hit from behind -- or any other direction -- if I can help it.

Well, perhaps I am exaggerating just a little when I say these things happen all the time. Maybe it's just the times when I am late that I notice such things.

I have observed since living in Hereford that there are relatively few accidents here. And that speaks well of the drivers as a whole.

But if some of the things I have mentioned hit home with you, please remember them the next time you are behind the wheel and be as considerate of other drivers as you expect them to be of you.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"I wish we would have peace all over the world." "I wish my family got along better." "I wish they'd find a cure for bad diseases." -- quotes from Yellow Team seventh graders while discussing the Thanksgiving holiday.

Did you see our retired librarian's picture, in color yet, on the front page of the Amarillo paper? Mrs. Gripp, you just can't stay away from school, can you?

Mr. Zimmerman's technology class is beginning independent projects. The students will be challenged to design and create a project on their own. The projects will be due by the end of the semester. Since students have completed several projects during the first two grading periods, this assignment will be a test to see how much they have learned.

Mr. Farr's American history classes are studying the colonial period prior to the American Revolution. Slides of Williamsburg, Philadelphia and Boston are being shown for enrichment. Key events of this period will be viewed in the video, "Johnny Tremain."

Advanced English, in Mrs. Buckley's classes, are currently reading the book Johnny Tremain by Esther Forbes. Students are compiling ABC journals as they read. Characters, locations and concept words from the story are described in paragraphs that begin with corresponding letters of the alphabet. Students elaborate on each choice in poetry form, prose and illustrations. After completion of the book, essays will be written to compare the book with the video.

Career Investigations students, taught by Mrs. Robbins, are preparing themselves for the future by identifying their interests, determining their skills and personality and understanding their values in order to identify the work cluster in which they will most likely be successful. This is being achieved by watching films, class discussions and textbook guidance.

Seventh grade reading classes are reading and discussing Where The Red Fern Grows. The dominant theme in this classic novel is love-love that includes blind acceptance, total devotion and unstinting sacrifice.

One of the hunters from Where The Red Fern Grows, says, "Some people call this loyalty. I don't. I may be wrong but I call it love-the deepest kind of love...it's a shame that people all over the world can't have that kind of love in their hearts...there would be no wars, slaughter or murder, no greed or selfishness."

Doesn't that sound like some of the junior high students' quotes? Let's not sell our young teenagers short. They, too, hope for a brighter and better tomorrow....

Kids! You gotta love 'em

Ninety-nine percent of the students in Texas' public schools did not commit crimes in their schools, according to a 1994 survey of the Texas Education Agency. Of the 887,641 students in the survey, most of the 9,497 offenders were between ages 12 and 18.

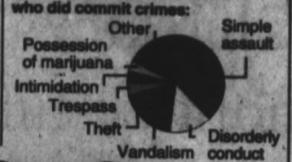

Of the 887,641 students in survey:

99% did not commit crime

1% of students committed crimes at school

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Our two children are asthmatics, and so is my husband. It is a constant search for ways to help them. Medication helps somewhat, but never enough. I look around our home and wonder what I can do. Asthma moms need a bill of rights. Begin, please, by telling me just what an allergen is. -- Mrs. J.L.

ANSWER: Allergens are what trigger asthma symptoms. Exposure to them by the asthma patient sets off a variety of reactions.

The answer lies in avoiding or eliminating allergens -- which is easier said than done.

Your main concern is with indoor triggers, which include dust mites, molds and animal dander. Tobacco smoke, although not technically an allergen, irritates the asthma airways with the same result.

Here's the beginning of your bill of rights for an allergen-free world:

- Enclose mattresses, bedsprings and pillows in zipper-tight synthetic-fiber covers. Switch from natural to synthetic material for pillows and comforters. Avoid wool at all costs.
- Remove carpeting. Damp-mop rooms regularly. Use washable throw rugs and hot-water-washable curtains to replace heavy drapes. Hot water is death to mites.
- Find homes for any pets.
- Discourage stuffed animals.
- Keep humidity below 50 percent. Dampness encourages mite multiplication. If you have a damp basement, get a dehumidifier.
- Bleach-wipe bath surfaces.
- Close windows to bar outdoor allergens, such as tree pollen.
- Dry clothing indoors with a dryer. Add to those suggestions your own common-sense amendments.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Thanksgiving is over and now we are all trying to decide what to do for Christmas, there is so much to do and so little time and money. There are a couple of books coming out this week that you may find useful. One is EASY DOES IT put out by Leisure Arts and LAST-MINUTE CHRISTMAS GIFTS by Carol Taylor. These books will give crafting ideas for quick and classy presents for everyone on your Christmas list. If you are into sewing FITTING FINESSE by Nancy Zieman and VINTAGE CLOTHING 1880-1980 may have something to interest you.

The fiction list this week begins with RED, RED ROBIN by Stephen Gallagher. This novel of suspense begins with Ruth Lasseter having to attend the company dance.

In order to mask her office affair she must find an escort that is able to play the part of lover. Tim Hogan seems suitable for the part. He is wistful and sweet, polite and boyishly handsome. What Ruth does not know is beneath the surface lies a rage, and a need for Tim to find the woman who can save him from his gruesome past. But if the woman fails she must pay the price.

Ruth narrowly escapes the hellish fate that Hogan has planned for her only to become obsessed with vengeance. Ruth wants to know who Tim really is and to do that she must uncover his dark past. As Ruth penetrates the heart of his madness, she finds herself locked in a chilling dance to the death.

HANGING TIME by Leslie Glass is a psychological thriller set in New York's upper West Side. Two blocks from the police station a sales woman is found hanging from the chandelier of a trendy boutique.

The woman is dressed in an expensive dress, but the heavy makeup leaves her face disfigured. Maggie Wheeler had been dead for two days when her body is discovered. Detective April Woo and Detective Sergeant Mike Sanchez are the first to arrive at the crime scene, but their investigation produces few clues. They are at a dead end until a few days later.

In a little shop on Second Avenue another woman is found hanging, her face masked by thick makeup and her body draped with an oversized dress. As April accelerates her inquiries she receives an unexpected phone call from psychoanalyst Jason Frank. Dr. Frank had helped April with her first big case, and now he is asking for her help. Dr. Frank's new client has a "whopping personal problem".

Successful architect Millicia Honiger-Stanton is trying to have her mentally ill sister, Camille, committed. Camille's mood swings range from catatonic to frenzied, and she is becoming more reliant on the brutally controlling man with whom she lives. Millicia fears that her sister may be in danger as well as being dangerous.

As April and Jason work together it will take all of their knowledge, training and wisdom to end this drama of emotional terrorism.

THE PERSIAN PICKLE CLUB by Sandra Dallas is full of laughter and surprise in this novel about the ties that bind women together through good and bad. The time is the 1930s and the bad times have hit Harveyville, Kansas. The crops are burning up under the hot summer sun and there are no jobs to be found.

For Queenie Bean and many of the other young farm wives, the highlight of each week is the gathering of the Persian Pickle Club (named after a favorite quilting pattern). The local ladies dedicated to improving their minds, and exchanging gossip meet together to put their "well-honed" quilting skills to good use. Queenie says, "It's funny how quilting draws women together like nothing else."

When newlywed Rita Ritter comes to their small community Queenie eagerly welcomes her into the club. However, Rita is anything but a country girl. Rita wishes to develop a career in investigative journalism and before long Rita's prying uncovers the secret the Pickles have sworn to keep.

HOW TO MURDER THE MAN OF YOUR DREAMS by Dorothy Cannell is a tale of hapless romance and suspicious death.

Since the birth of the twins, Ellie Haskell has stayed home, gained weight and taken up the romance-reading habit that keeps her up until the wee hours of the morning. Now that she has found Gerta, a Swiss nanny and Mrs. Mallory, a house keeper, Ellie is ready to get back to her design career. Ellie hopes for a settled existence for a while.

Arriving for the Chitterton Fells Library League meeting Ellie hopes are dashed when she discovers a corpse on the floor in the fiction stacks. Miss Bunch ran the library with an iron hand and now she is dead, with a copy of The Dream Lover in her hand. The librarian's death falls on the anniversary of the death Mr. Hector Rigglesworth, the library's ghost. Mr. Rigglesworth had a deep grudge against the romantic novels that kept his seven daughters endlessly holding out for the perfect suitor.

The Library League decides to commission a statue of the late librarian and asks the sexy king of the male romance cover, Karisma! to appear at the unveiling.

Things do not go as planned. The local lunatic, jilted at the alter years ago, appears babbling something about murder, a Library League spouse dies mysteriously, and the sexy hunk falls victim to food poisoning. Ellie is determined to solve the crimes, before she becomes the next victim.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a candlelight satin wedding gown which featured an off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline covered with alencon lace encrusted with pearls and sequins. The neckline was accented by pearl beading.

The small cap sleeves of alencon lace were embellished with pearls and sequins.

The basque waistline flowed into the bouffant skirt. A double tiered peplum, adorned with pearls and sequins on alencon lace, was situated at the back of the waistline. The main featured large alencon motifs scattered across the back with pearls and sequins.

The two tiered fingertip veil was made of alencon lace trimmed with pearls and sequins with ornate appliques on the side.

The bride carried a bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis, baby carnations and babies breath finished with a strand of freshwater pearls.

The bridal attendants wore midnight blue crepe dresses that featured a sweetheart neckline with a scoop back. Gathered folds extended from the shoulders and at mid-bodice of the opera length full skirt was a rhinestone brooch.

They carried an arm cascade of white lilies with ivory and navy ribbon.

Following the ceremony, Patricia Martinez invited guests to register at the reception which was held in the church.

The main table featured punch and finger foods and a white wedding cake with center tiers and smaller cakes at the side.

The cake was bordered by garland and lavished with pearls and topped with baby carnations and ivory lilies and fern.

Margaret Del Toro and Janet Elliot served cake and Janet Mott, Judy Baker, Deloris McNeely and Patsy Willy served punch and finger foods.

Cooper's prized possession is hot

BOSTON (AP) - When Gary Cooper's daughter had one of her father's prized possessions appraised, she found out it was a really hot item - as in stolen.

The 1777 letter written by George Washington was found to have been among 17 letters taken from the Massachusetts state archives in the 1940s.

Maria Cooper Janis, who was informed of the purloined letter by Christie's auction house, wrote state officials to say she would turn it over and explain "an unknown party" gave it to her father.

"The letter hung in the Cooper family library in Beverly Hills for many, many years," Janis wrote. "To the best of my recollection the letter was given to my father in the mid-to late-1940s."

Secretary of State William Galvin said Tuesday he suspects the letter, appraised at $24,000, may have been stolen by some of the people handling the documents at the time.

In the letter, Washington discusses when to release prisoners captured at the battle of Saratoga.

Even before holiday shopping swings into full force, the experts are trying to figure out the meaning of current consumer credit trends. Concerned that consumer-debt obligations have been growing twice as fast as wage and salary gains, the questions are why, when will it slow down and how will the slowdown affect the rest of the economy?

While credit use increased higher than expected over the summer months, more than twice as much credit card debt is available now than five years ago. Consumers seem to be drawn by lower minimum payments and the accelerated promotion efforts by the credit card industry.

Creditors are seeing consumers using more debt to maintain a desired lifestyle. Of particular concern is increased use of credit cards to buy groceries, health care and other services typically paid for by cash or check. As much as 10 percent of the U.S.A.'s credit card charges in 1994 were for such items. The delinquency rate for credit card payments is also on an increase in 1995.

The responsible credit card user does not use credit to buy consumable items that will be eaten, worn out or used up before they are paid for. Only when the charges will be paid in full within the grace period of the account should such items be bought with credit.

To avoid credit problems, consumers are encouraged to limit their credit commitments, excluding the home mortgage, to 20 percent or less of their take-home pay. This rule of thumb is best applied when the consumer pays the maximum rather than the minimum payment they can afford each month.

The big challenge comes during impulse sales and holiday shopping. A 30 percent off sale price will not be a 30 percent savings if the bill is put on a credit card and paid out at the minimum payment rate.

The best way to control credit use is to leave the cards at home. Plan the amount you can afford to spend for gifts over the number of pay periods you have between now and the end of the year. Decide how to spread your gift allowance over the number of gifts to be bought, and have fun finding the special gift that sends the message you want to send without sending yourself into unmanageable debt.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

ADVICE TO JOB SEEKERS

Recently, I visited with several people who were attending a business start-up workshop I was presenting. During the breaks and after the workshop, several of the attendees admitted that they were interested in starting a business because they couldn't find employment. For the record, going into business because you can't find work is not a very good reason. It often leads to a quick and painful failure.

A better alternative may be to reconsider the employment opportunities available. You might begin by conducting a thorough self-assessment to see why you're not getting hired.

Based on discussions with business owners and personnel directors, I'd like to share some thoughts for the frustrated job seeker. Here are some good ideas for getting a job that will make both you and your future employer happy.

Some "get-a-job" tips

- Polish your résumé. When it comes to résumés, one size does not fit all. Yes, you should have an attractive, accurate and error-free standard résumé. However, you should polish (customize) it to fit any specific job for which you apply. Tell the truth, but tell it well.
- Know where you want to go. The experts agree that the best potential employees aren't just looking for a job, they want to advance their career. By having some long-term career objectives, both you and your potential employer can more effectively judge your fit with the job.
- Become a personal marketer. You are the product. Who knows the product better than you? Develop a list of benefits you offer a potential employer. You should include your strengths, skills, education and special abilities. Compare your list with job requirements. The closer the match, the more likely the hire.
- Get smart about technology. Like it or not, technology will play an increasingly important role in future jobs. If you're not computer literate, take a continuing education class or college course. Use the time between jobs to learn all you can about using technology in the workplace.
- Network with others. Get out and meet people. Get involved with organizations. While you're working as a valuable volunteer, rub elbows with everyone you can. Don't be overly aggressive, but let folks know you are available.

- Dress appropriately. A human resources manager related this story. A young woman arrived for a critical interview in a skirt so short that it was nearly indecent. She had good qualifications, but was not hired because the length of her skirt caused a stir throughout the small company. "I couldn't hire her," the manager said. "She might get hired in New York, but not in our conservative community."
- Don't talk yourself out of a job. Answer all questions completely, but don't become a non-stop talker. Give the interviewer your undivided attention and listen carefully. Listening will help you understand complex questions, and in addition, is an impressive job skill.
- Understand the interview process. There are four parts to an interview. First there's the rapport building section, which includes a few minutes of chitchat so both parties will be comfortable. Next, comes the question and answer part. Respond honestly, and as completely as possible. The third part of the interview process is the selling part. You need to convince the interviewer that you are a good fit. The interviewer will try to sell you on the opportunity and the company. Finally, there's the close. Try to end on an upbeat note. You want your last impression to be a good one.
- Don't give up. Most of us know the frustration and disappointment that comes with rejection. However, you must keep applying. The only loser in this game are those who quit trying. Learn from past mistakes, use your free time wisely and don't give up.

LUXURY MASTER SUITE ON FIRST FLOOR

Careful Wall Placement Gives the Floor Plan an Open Feeling

Most empty nesters appreciate having a master suite on the first floor. This delightful master suite includes all the "goodies". A tray ceiling highlights the bed room and an oversized walk in closet is thoughtfully placed between the bed room and garden bath. The luxurious bath has a vaulted ceiling and includes a whirlpool tub, separate shower, double vanity, toilet compartment and linen storage.

The off center entry is recessed. The foyer directs traffic to the large great room with tray ceiling and fireplace, or to the formal dining room.

A large breakfast area with adjoining snack bar is open to the great room. The kitchen is designed to allow maximum cabinet and countertop space.

A U-shaped stair next to the kitchen leads down to the basement or up to the two family bed rooms. Half bath and laundry facilities are conveniently tucked away in this area. Double garage access is provided as well.

There are two large family bed rooms on the second floor, both with ample closet space. These bedrooms share an oversized hall bath.

A combination of stucco and brick veneer with multiple roof lines and window treatments complete the exterior.

NBC's Visitors of the Night explores alien abductions

BY AMY HIBBERT

A mother fears both she and her daughter might have been abducted by aliens in NBC's Visitors of the Night.

The sci-fi thriller, premiering Monday, Nov. 27, stars Markie Post (Hearts Afire) as Judith Heald, a woman who has been having terrible nightmares about strange creatures since she was a child.

When her teen-age daughter, Katie (Candace Cameron, Full House), starts acting strangely, Judith begins to think they both might have been victims of alien abductions.

Judith meets with a hypnotherapist and begins to uncover frightening memories from her childhood. She thinks she might be losing her mind, until her nightmares start becoming too real.

Bizarre things are happening in the town as well: strange crop circles, power outages and marks behind the cars of some horses that got loose from their farm. But Judith's friend, Sheriff Marcus Ashley (Dale Midkiff), believes they are just teen-age pranks.

In a startling conclusion, Judith and Katie realize they must keep their relationship strong and face their fears together.

One of the aspects that attracted Post to the science-fiction movie was the mother-daughter relationship.

"I thought the relationship between the mother and the daughter was really fun - for an actor, fun to play - and the fact that they were intelligent, normal people, who wanted to deny what had happened to them, rather than to go headlong into the experience of being abducted," Post explains.

The stories of many alleged abductees and the idea of aliens focusing on people who are related were used to create the characters of Judith and Katie.

"The (idea) was taken from people's experiences that have culminated in this story - those who have a common thread, a lot of it is in the movie," Post says. "I just thought it had some veracity and it was the best thing I had read in a long time."

Post chose not to interview any alleged abductees in preparation for her role, though.

"Actually, because this woman starts out completely as (someone who is) not a believer, and goes through this period of denial and disbelief, I wanted to stay just as 'ignorant' and let it evolve with the character," she says.

But, Post does have a fascination with stories of extraterrestrial life and abductions. She says she believes it would be interesting to have a close encounter with an alien herself.

"I think it would be sort of like what I expect dying is like: a good feeling, you know, that somehow fear is taken away because it feels natural and right," she comments. "I feel like that would be the way it was if it were ever to happen to me. Maybe it's because I'm sort of mentally prepared, so it wouldn't be so alien, as they say, to my experience."

Visitors offers viewers a chance to form opinions about whether there is life on other planets. Post has her own opinion.

"I definitely think there is life outside of our planet," Post believes. "I don't base my life on it, though. I think probably my faith in there being a God is stronger. I wouldn't deny that this could happen, and there is way too much evidence pointing to the fact that it does happen, and that it does exist."

"I would love for it to be true. Maybe my wanting it to be true makes me believe it."

Markie Post (top) stars as a mother who fears she and her teen-age daughter (Candace Cameron) have been the victims of alien abductions in Visitors of the Night. The made-for-TV science-fiction thriller, also starring Dale Midkiff, premieres Monday on NBC.

QUIZ: Do You Care About Your Health?

Are you concerned with what goes on inside of your body? Do you fill it with salty and sugary snacks, or healthy, nutritious foods - or are you somewhere in the middle?

Find out exactly how precious your body is to you.

1. My favorite place to eat is:
A. A restaurant with good hearty food.
B. A fried chicken restaurant.
C. A fast food restaurant.
D. The candy store.

2. If someone gave you a pillowcase filled with candy, about how long would it take you to finish it?
A. At the most, one or two months.
B. At the least, one month.
C. A few weeks.
D. Not very long.

3. Must you be forced to eat vegetables?
A. No.
B. Sometimes.
C. Yes.

4. If you were to make dinner one evening and have whatever you wanted, what combination would you choose?
A. Chicken, string beans, macaroni and cheese, salad, and fruit for dessert.
B. A big hamburger, french fries, a salad and apple pie for dessert.
C. Pizza, onion rings, potato chips and candy bars for dessert.
D. Just dessert.

5. Do you feel guilty after you've eaten a lot of candy, chips, soda and other sweets all at one time?

A. Yes.
B. Sometimes.
C. No.

6. My idea of a healthful snack is:
A. Carrot and celery sticks, fruit salad.
B. Cheese and crackers, peanut butter and jelly.
C. Two or three thick chocolate bars.

7. When you're really thirsty, what drink would you choose to quickly fill you up?
A. Juices.
B. Chocolate milk.
C. Powdered fruit punch.
D. Soda.

8. My favorite breakfast is:
A. Eggs, toast, hash browns, fruit, and juice or milk.
B. Cereal and juice.
C. A cereal with lots of sugar and coloring.
D. Whatever happens to be around, if anything at all.

9. When you don't like something on your plate, but you know it's good for your body, do you:
A. Force it down, because you know it's healthy for you.
B. Try to compromise with you parents - eat half and leave the other half for the dog or garbage.
C. Sit at the table until the food is cold, stale and inedible.
D. Pretend you are horribly sick.

10. Do you keep a constant supply of sweets stashed away for whenever you have a craving?
A. No.

B. Sometimes.
C. Yes.

All A's:
A totally healthy conscious person you are! You certainly do care about what goes inside your body. Even if you don't like a certain food - if you know it's good for you - you will manage to get it down. You will be grateful for the sacrifices you make in the long run.

Some A's, but mostly or all B's:
Your health is important to you, but sometimes you will allow yourself a treat, and that is perfectly fine! You have a fairly well balanced diet, so continue to keep it in check.

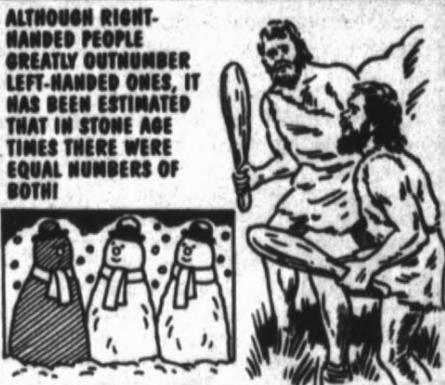

Some A's and/or B's, but mostly C's and/or D's:
Watch!!! You are slipping! Eating healthy foods only occasionally isn't enough; it should be the sugary and salty treats that are eaten with caution. You are consuming some nutritious foods, so try to cut down on the junk!

All C's and/or D's:
You are a walking glazed doughnut! Hope you enjoy visits to the dentist and doctor, because you'll end up at both offices quite frequently if you don't improve your eating habits. You think it's fine now to stuff yourself with junk food, but if acne, extra weight and cavities ever visit your body, they may never want to leave!

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ November 26 - December 2 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

An acquaintance or distant relative may seem unusually friendly all of a sudden. Be on your guard. There could be an ulterior motive - especially if you're financially well-off. If you're involved with a Scorpio or Leo, this could be an especially emotionally-charged week.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

A health concern should be addressed before it becomes a real problem. Even if it seems minor, you're better off safe than sorry. Don't waste time on someone who is bound to let you down. Give more credit and attention to those on whom you can rely. Think positively in matters of love.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Having a hard time focusing on your day-to-day tasks? Has your enthusiasm towards work dwindled? Need some excitement in your life? A new adventure is the perfect way to put a little spark back in your fire. Do something different. Try something new. What have you got to lose?

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Go the extra mile if you're working on an important project. It will most certainly pay off. Minor frustrations are better dealt with in a calm - rather than emotional - manner. Try not to take life so seriously. A new friend may not be all that (s)he seems to be. You may be in for a surprise.

LEO - July 23/August 23

What you think of as innocent teasing may be quite offensive to someone else. Think before you speak. A Libra friend will offer good advice to an ongoing problem. Family quarrels are likely to erupt at the drop of a hat this week. Keep a low profile on the home front.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Instead of trying to relieve the symptoms, you'd be better off looking for an immediate cure to an ongoing problem. Play it safe when it comes to finances. Gambling of any kind is out of the question. Try to be a better listener in a romantic relationship. Thursday will bring good news.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

A crisis situation at work will give you the opportunity to show what you're capable of. Your impressive reaction is sure to get noticed. Try to better understand a loved one who may need some time alone. This is especially true if you're involved with Cancer the Crab. Let him/her crawl into the protective shell.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

You can learn something from a young family member this week. Open your eyes and your ears and you may be highly enlightened. Older is not always wiser. Look before you leap when it comes to shopping this week. Caution will save you from frivolous spending.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

An associate you never thought of as a friend will show you a different side of his/her personality. You'll realize that this person is more complex than you thought. An unexpected delay on Friday may upset your entire weekend plans. You may take care of business before having fun.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Stand up for what you believe in and you'll be sure to get what you want. Give in, and frustration is certain. It's totally up to you. Set a good role for an impressionable youth. You can make a difference. Later in the week, you may find something that has been lost for a while.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

The accomplishment of a family member will be of significance this week. There may even be some type of celebration. A second chance on something you thought was a done deal gives you the opportunity to shine. A Leo with bad intentions may try to get the better of you.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Take the lead if planning a special event. Your creativity and imagination is sure to add the right touch. Keep a keen eye out for investment opportunities. There could be a diamond in the rough waiting for you. In matters of love, don't set yourself up for disappointment.

YOUR BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

The next 12 months:

Taking risks will lead you to greatness this year. Let your intuition be your guide when making risky decisions. Looking to make a change in career? Late winter is the best time to make a move. Focus and you will get far. Romance will have highs and lows throughout the year. If you are married or in a long-term relationship, you must remember not to take your partner for granted. Stable relationships need attention, too. Single? If so, new romance is likely in the spring. An attractive Leo is likely to steal your heart. There may also be a seductive Scorpio in the stars!

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Please tell me what you can about Mitzi Kapture of Silk Stalkings. -H.E.S., Erie, Pa.

Q: Where can I write to Mitzi Kapture? -Kathy Cross, Mooresville, N.C.

A: A native of Yorba Linda, Calif., Kapture grew up in Atlanta, where she studied at the Alliance Theatre. She landed guest roles on MacGyver and Lightning Force, as well as a Perry Mason movie of the week, after she returned to California.

Theatrical films include The Vagrant and Angel: The Final Chapter. Married to singer-songwriter Bradley Kapture, she is scheduled to direct several episodes of Stalkings this season.

A USA Network publicist advises fans to write to Kapture c/o Silk Stalkings, Stu Segall Productions, 4705 Ruffin Road, San Diego, Calif. 92123.

Q: Who is the handsome actor who played Almanzo Wilder in Little House on the Prairie? -Cynthia Herr, Bradenton, Fla.

A: That was Dean Butler, who later would play Rapunzel's Prince in the Broadway musical Into the Woods.

Q: I love JoBeth Williams, who I think bears a striking resemblance to actress Susan Hayward. Are they related? Also, is Miracle in the Rain available on video? -H. Grau, Hanford, Calif.

A: No on both counts. Sorry.

Q: I recently caught The Goodbye Girl on a local station. Is the little girl who played Marsha Mason's daughter now playing the police-woman on The John Larroquette Show? If so, what has she done between the two roles? -Nancy Chevalier, Mount Pleasant, N.C.

A: Despite a strong resemblance, these are two different actresses. Young Quinn Cummings copped an Oscar nomination for her work in

Mitzi Kapture

Goodbye, but her career sputtered not too long after that. Elizabeth Berridge, who played the put-upon maid in the NBC sitcom The Powers That Be and Mozart's wife in the film Amadeus, plays Officer Eggers on Larroquette.

Q: Why did Chad Lowe leave the NBC sitcom Spencer so soon? -Mister Kelley, Long Beach, Calif.

A: According to The Complete Directory to Prime Time Network TV Shows, "Lowe abruptly quit the show in a salary dispute after only a few episodes."

CLARIFICATION: I appreciate the many well-meaning letters I received "correcting" a recent answer about Fritz the Cat, but the answer stands, folks. The question was about a cartoon cat by Robert Crumb, the underground artist who created Fritz, NOT the more familiar Felix! The letter writer was looking for the 1972 adult animated film by Ralph Bakshi, loosely based on Crumb's feline creation.

Sports idols' stories are told in three-part TBS special

BY AMY HIBBERT

Some of the greatest sports idols in American history are in the limelight again when their stories are told in a three-part TBS presentation.

Idols of the Game, premiering Monday, Nov. 27, and continuing Tuesday and Thursday, Nov. 28 and 30, features profiles of great figures in baseball, golf, tennis, football and other sports.

Actor Dabney Coleman (Madman of the People) efficiently leads viewers through the special as Scribe, a generic and ageless sportswriter who has seen it all. Scribe provides a segue from one sports hero's story to another, offering interesting tidbits about each person, such as Babe Ruth's lack of shyness about doing an interview.

The life story of Jim Thorpe kicks off the first night of the special. Through colorful anecdotes, including one from his son, Jack, Idols explores Thorpe's many achievements, from playing football at the Carlisle Indian School to winning gold medals at the Stockholm Olympics in 1912.

The first night also dives into the biographies of some other idols, including baseball's Ruth and Jackie Robinson, and heavyweight champion Joe Louis.

Parts 2 and 3 feature profiles of such great athletes as Chris Evert, Mickey Mantle, Joe Namath, Shoeless Joe Jackson and Charles Barkley.

Their careers are explored through film clips and interviews with such people as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Jesse Jackson and Wayne Gretzky. The special also includes interviews with some of the idols themselves.

Besides providing facts about these heroes, the three-part special also examines how America shaped and molded some of them into larger-than-life gods. This is exemplified by the "Hope of Democracy" title Louis was given when he entered the ring to fight Max Schmeling of Germany in 1936.

Idols also explores attitudes toward men and how they differ from those toward women in athletics.

And Part 3 examines the role of money and the growth of commercial sponsors in sports, exploring the 1919 Black Sox scandal and Barkley's current commercial endorsements.

Hart to Hart: Two Harts in Three-Quarter Time (1995) Robert Wagner, Stefanie Powers. Blackmail and intrigue await Jonathan and Jennifer Hart when a request from their late valet leads them to Montreal. 2:00. ● November 26 6pm; December 2 7pm.

Headline Shooter ★★ (1933) Ralph Bellamy, Betty Furness. A cameraman on location to film an earthquake becomes romantically involved with a young woman he meets. 1:30. ● November 29 3am.

Hills of Home ★★★ (1948) Edmund Gwenn, Donald Crisp. A dedicated Scottish doctor tries to cure Lassie's water phobia in between caring for patients throughout the glen. 1:45. ● November 30 12:30pm.

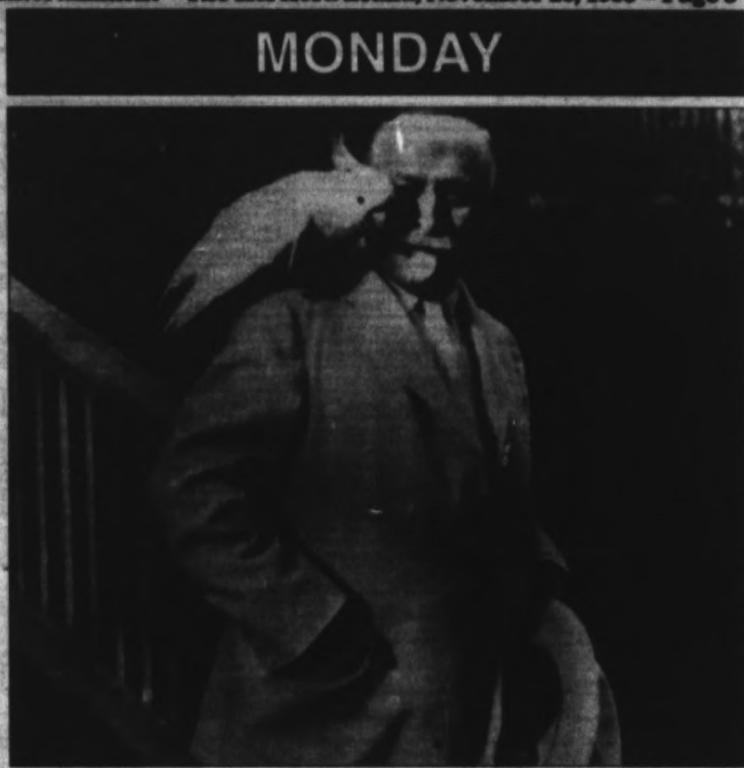

Hollywood My Hometown ★★★ (1965) A collection of behind-the-scenes film clips featuring Hollywood's finest actors and actresses in candid moments. 1:00. ● November 27 10am; December 2 4am.

Hollywood Without Makeup ★★ (1965) A compilation of home movies that captures some of Hollywood's celebrities in candid, off-screen moments. 1:00. ● November 29 10am.

Money, I Shrunk the Kids ★★★ (1989) Rick Moranis, Matt Frewer. Four miniaturized youngsters brave assorted dangers as they make their way to safety through an inventor's yard. 2:00. ● December 1 7:05pm. ● November 28 7pm.

Honkytonk Man ★★½ (1982) Clint Eastwood, Kyle Eastwood. An alcoholic country singer takes his young nephew to Nashville for a last-chance audition at the Grand Ole Opry. 2:45. ● November 26 12pm.

El Honor Victoria Ruffo, Cynthia Klibo. 2:00. ● November 28 11pm.

Dr. John Harvey Kellogg (pictured) and his brother, Will, are profiled in "The Kellogg Brothers: Corn Flake Kings," a special episode of Biography premiering Monday on A&E Network.

SOAP TALK

McLain leaves AMC; GL finds a Hart

BY CANDACE HAVENS

The rumors at ABC are running rampant that Cady McClain will not continue as Dixie on All My Children.

The actress has said she is ready to move on to other things. ABC will not confirm McClain's departure. Her contract is up in April, but there is a chance she could be going sooner.

Insiders say that AMC's executives brought back Marcy Walker as Liza in anticipation of McClain's departure.

McClain joined AMC in 1988. After only one year on the show she won a daytime Emmy for outstanding performance by a juvenile female.

In other news: The search is over at Guiding Light, and it certainly took long enough. The producers finally found a replacement for Leonard Stabb, who played Hart. Marshall Hillard is the new Hart.

Stabb left the role after suffering severe head injuries during a hang gliding accident in 1993. He was in a coma for several months and continues to recover.

Dear Candace: I have been a fan of The Bold and the Beautiful for a while. I really liked the story line with Taylor (Hunter Tylo) and Prince Omar (Kabir Bedi).

I have to say that since Taylor has moved back to Los Angeles I have really wanted her to get back with Ridge (Ron Moss). I think Stephanie (Susan Flannery) could do more to keep Ridge and Brooke (Katherine Kelly Lang) apart. -Erin Partrick, Greenville Junction, Maine.

Dear Reader: When Stephanie finds out that her ex-husband, Eric (John McCook), and Taylor were in love, she may not think Brooke is so bad.

It was somewhat amusing recently when Taylor was explaining her relationship with Eric to James. She told James that the relationship was one of the healthiest she had ever experienced.

Now remember: Eric is the father of her soon-to-be ex-husband, Ridge. Taylor needs to find a new man; preferably one she isn't already related to.

CHITTER CHATTER

NEW YORK (AP)--Better known for turning heads, supermodels like Elle Macpherson, Kate Moss and Naomi Campbell are being turned away from the runway.

Some big-name clothing designers are trying to stay away from the models during New York Fashion Week.

Nicole Miller is one of several designers who hope to add freshness to collections without the "same girls ... again and again and again." Instead, they're using unknown models and actresses.

The move is part economics: Miller said hiring a supermodel for the runway costs $2,000 an hour, while using others can cost as little as $550 an hour.

But those big-name beauties are not exactly passe.

Supermodels "just have that spark. ... They know how to sell clothing; the clothes look incredible on them," said Tony Longoria, director for designer Todd Oldham.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Spacey in life. Spacey in death. An asteroid has been named for Jerry Garcia, the Grateful Dead leader who died Aug. 9 at age 53.

Two Deadheads - Simon Radford at the Radio Astronomy Observatory in Tucson, Ariz., and Ed Olszewski at the University of Arizona's Steward Observatory - began searching after Garcia's death for a way to honor him.

Fellow astronomer Tom Gehrels offered an asteroid he found in 1985 but had never named.

The "Garcia" asteroid is 100 miles across, orbits between Mars and Jupiter and can only be seen with a high-powered telescope. The International Astronomical Union, keeper of celestial names, confirmed the name Nov. 7.

GARY, Ind. (AP) - Elvis fans have Graceland in Memphis. Now devotees of his son-in-law could get a shrine of their own, right here in Indiana.

City officials are pushing to turn Michael Jackson's modest boyhood home in Gary into a museum, surrounded by a rock 'n' roll amusement park.

"I've been to Graceland. I've felt the excitement," said outgoing

Mayor Thomas V. Barnes. "I think the dynamics of Graceland suggest how you can successfully build around a famous personality - and that's what we hope to do here."

Jackson family members support the project and investors are reportedly showing interest.

Jackson is married to Presley's daughter, Lisa Marie Presley.

Margarine was invented in the 1860's by Hippolyte Mege-Mouries, a French chemist.

COMMUNITY

DEAR MERVYN'S GUEST,
I'D LIKE TO SHARE WITH YOU SOME OF THE WONDERFUL WAYS MERVYN'S GIVES BACK TO OUR COMMUNITIES.

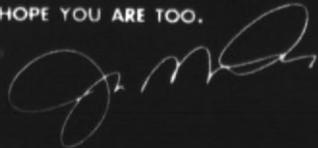

MERVYN'S GIVES 5% OF ITS TAXABLE PROFITS TO COMMUNITY CAUSES AND CHARITIES. EACH TIME YOU SHOP AT MERVYN'S, OUR COMMUNITIES LOOK BETTER AND OUR FUTURES LOOK BRIGHTER THAN THE DAY BEFORE.

THIS YEAR, MERVYN'S, IN PARTNERSHIP WITH THE BOYS AND GIRLS CLUBS OF AMERICA AND OTHER LOCAL NON-PROFIT SERVICE AGENCIES, KICKED OFF THE SCHOOL YEAR BY HELPING 20,000 ECONOMICALLY UNDERPRIVILEGED CHILDREN GO BACK TO SCHOOL WITH MUCH-NEEDED SHIRTS, PANTS, DRESSES, UNDERWEAR, SOCKS AND SHOES.

THROUGH THIS PROGRAM, CALLED "CHILDSPREE," MERVYN'S SERVES COMMUNITIES YEAR-ROUND.

I'M IMPRESSED BY THE WORK MERVYN'S IS DOING TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF LIFE FOR ALL OF THE FAMILIES IN OUR COMMUNITIES.

I HOPE YOU ARE TOO.
