Losing our roots

By ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

The rate of Hispanic growth in the United States is nearly five times that for the rest of the population, with half of that growth resulting from birth rates exceeding death rates.

As more Hispanics are able to say they were born in the United States, their Mexican roots are sadly forgotten as "Americanization" consumes their identities.

For 44-year-old Hector Villarreal, who crossed the Rio Grande River from Piedras Negras, Mexico, when he was 9, the assimilation to American life was easy.

"I just didn't stay long enough to miss Mexico," said Villarreal, who came to Texas with his parents, two brothers and one sister. "It was pretty hard on me to learn the language the first year I was here. It was embarrassing at times, but I was young and I picked it up fairly quickly."

The Villarreal family, like many others, were lured by the prospect of work in the United States. Some aunts and uncles already had made the move, so the transition from Mexico to Texas was inevitable.

"There was just a lot of farm work during the '50s and '60s here in Hereford. My whole family worked and when we got that check it was real good."

But money and invigorating labor weren't satisfying Villarreal, so when age 18 rolled around, he left the dust flying.

"I always said to myself that when I turn 18, I won't work in the fields because I wanted a steady job, steady income and I wanted to work inside where work didn't depend on the weather."

His first job was with Caviness Packing Company on the butchering line. Villarreal said this placated him for a while, but his check depended upon a time card and Villarreal longed to have a monthly salary not dependent on the number of hours worked.

But his lack of education was a roadblock.

"I dropped out of high school because, by then, I had my own car and I wanted to make money. So when I wanted to learn the manager's position, they told me I had to get my GED, and I got it that next week."

Villarreal was just one of the alarming number of Hispanic high school dropouts which the Census Bureau says is improving. In 1981, 45 percent of Hispanics completed high school. The latest figures say 51 percent have received diplomas.

"I think a lot of the reason Hispanics drop out of school is because they see their parents struggle to make money," said Villarreal. "Bringing home that check really helps, but nowadays, if you don't have that high school education, you get put aside on all the job applications."

After receiving his GED, Villarreal moved to Missouri Beef (now Excel Corporation) and slid into management within a year. He now is slaughter manager.

Villarreal said he never experienced the discrimination other Hispanics felt, possibly because of his light-brown skin.

However, the blue-eyed Hispanic said his wife, who is considerably darker than he, received a blow after they were recently married and looking for an apartment.

Villarreal initially spoke with a landlord about renting the apartment and wanted to discuss it with Lupe, his wife, before signing the contract.

"When I brought my wife in to make the deal and the lady saw that my wife was Hispanic, she said the apartment was already rented. I really didn't think that much about it but my wife was really hurt," Villarreal said.

For Consuelo Castaneda, being a dark-skinned Hispanic in predominantly Anglo Hereford during the 1940s was hard at times.

The 63-year-old mother of eight was born in Lockhart and moved to Hereford in 1946 to work the fields with her family.

"I remember there were only three or four other Hispanic families living in Hereford—the Griegos, Encinas. There were always good people to work for that treated you nice, but there weren't too many Mexican people here and the white people weren't used to us."

"When I first started going to St. Anthony's (Catholic Church), we'd kneel down with some white people and some would get up and kneel further down from you. I'd

'We're all created equal'

Hector Villarreal left Mexico for the United States when he was 9. He is now the slaughter manager at Excel Corporation and frequently inspects the beef in the cooler where he once worked when he was 18. "You always follow your dreams, and why shouldn't I do just as well as the other guy? We're all created equal."

Hereford Bi-Products wins civil settlement

Hereford Bi-Products Inc. and Southwest Hide Co. recently won an in-court settlement of $5 million from Amarillo Bi-Products Inc., defendant in a civil trial in U.S. District Court in Amarillo.

Garth Merrick, president of Hereford Bi-Products, issued a statement on the suit Friday because of his "concern that the general public is not aware of the outcome of the suit nor the fact that his company is not related to the Amarillo firm."

A shipwrecked sailor who had spend three years on a deserted island was overjoyed one day to see a ship drop anchor in the bay. A small boat came ashore and an officer greeted the sailor with a bunch of newspapers.

"The capatin suggests that you read what's going on in the world," said the officer, "and then let us know if you want to be rescued."

The Hereford Whitefaces opened the home football season on a big winning note Friday night, but at halftime we wondered if all the winning notes we were going to be played by the Mighty Maroon Band! Sparked by a gutty offensive line and a tremendous defense, the Herd turned things around in the second half and knocked off the potent Palo Duro team by 20-9.

It was a great opening-night crowd, including more fans from Amarillo than we've seen in some time. The band, twirlers and drill team put on a rockin' show at halftime that was a real crowd-pleaser. The HHS Band had the whole spotlight since Palo Duro didn't bring its band.

It will be a short week for the Whitefaces, since they open district competition at Lubbock Thursday night against the highly-ranked Estacado Matadors. Go, Herd!

Besides the start of school and the excitement of football, one other benefit of September may be that we have only two more months of political rhetoric to put up with on television. Some of it may be helpful but most of it offends a lot of voters' intelligence.

I've never doubted my wife's loyalty to newspapering, but she proved it again this week when she opened a political campaign letter which urged a contribution for the candidate's television time. She promptly replied: "Maybe you ought to try the local newspapers if you really want to inform the voters!"

Speaking of the political scene, we thought one of the best lines to come out of the Republican convention was that made by screen star Charlton Heston. At the Democratic convention, Teddy Kennedy led the Democrats in taunting George Bush for his supposed non-involvement in White House affairs, asking: "Where was George?"

Heston was among those who had a great answer: "George was sober, dry and at home with his own wife."

Are we having fun yet?

Post-polio suffering isn't over for victims of crippling disease

EDITOR'S NOTE — Poliomyelitis, the terror of decades ago, is a disease everyone assumed was over and done with. Not quite. It is staging a mysterious encore for those once afflicted. It's called post-polio syndrome and by any name it's a particularly cruel twist of the knife. The writer is one of thousands of ex-patients at risk.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
There is a terrorist, long believed dead, that is back on the street again. It is not a person. It is a disease or a phantom of it. The disease is poliomyelitis, the once dreaded infantile paralysis, which killed and crippled adults as readily as children, despite its name. Polio has returned in ways not thoroughly understood, as if to have a last laugh on those very victims it maimed 30, 40 and even 50 years ago. It is called post-polio syndrome or post-polio muscular atrophy. It is most likely not a recurrence of the disease itself. It is not fatal. It is or can be crippling. Its victims are only those who have already had polio.

A 43-year-old nurse in Plainfield, N.J., is now bedridden, her post-polio working days apparently over. A schoolteacher in Bridgewater, N.J., Joyce Houser, had lost 50 percent of the muscles in what had been her "good" hand. Polio survivors who have walked unaided for 30 years are back in braces again. Pain has returned.

There may be 500,000 polio survivors in the United States. Doctors have predicted that up to 25 percent of them will have some recurrence of pain, muscle loss, or both.

"It is not a real cheery picture," says Dr. Frederick M. Maynard of the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Houser has organized one of some 200 groups of polio survivors nationwide who meet to discuss the return of the malady and educate the medical community, which has sometimes misdiagnosed the symptoms as arthritis or aging.

There are 15 studies nationwide into the phenomenon. One at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md. is investigating whether the causes stem from some remnant polio virus. Others suspect muscles that have been overloaded to compensate for missing ones have begun giving way from overuse. There are theories that muscle nerve cells that survived have deteriorated from overwork and are not being replaced because polio left the system with a depleted supply. No one is sure.

"We're trying to inform the public, the former patients and the public," says Mrs. Houser, who persuaded Gov. Thomas Kean of New Jersey to declare Polio Survivor Week last June.

Polio, always insidious and indiscriminate, has left its survivors with bodies 20 years older than their actual ages. Mrs. Houser was told at a convention of post-polio groups in St. Louis last year. That is why PPMA is often mistaken for evidence of aging.

To the survivors, it is the return of a specter.

Summer in the years before Dr. Jonas Salk introduced his polio vaccine in 1955 was not just summer. It was the polio season. Mothers fretted over any telltale sign of headache or sore throat or stiffness in their children. Despite the heat, they kept the kids away from public swimming pools. Seemingly by whim the disease would become epidemic in scattered areas of the country.

The summer of 1949 was such a year.

That was the summer a friend from college and I were making a less-than-grand tour of Europe. At one point we took a night train from Paris to Heidelberg in Occupied Germany. Heidelberg was having a polio epidemic that summer.

Polio takes about 10 days to incubate. Ten days after Heidelberg we were on a small ocean liner heading home. After a day of deck tennis and a night in the ship's pub, I woke on the morning with, not unexpectedly, a splitting headache, stiff muscles and an uncertain stomach. Unable to handle lunch, I went back to our cabin to lie down. Several hours later I awoke and reached for the bunk light with my left arm. The shoulder didn't move and hasn't since. Self-diagnosis was easy: polio.

The legs still worked, so I set off for the sick bay.

Polio, once it surfaces, moves swiftly. There are no wonder drugs for it. Bulbar polio, which strikes towards the brain, can kill in hours. Non-bulbar victims lie helplessly as random muscles about the body cease to function, sometimes forever. The frustration is as great as the fear. Two days after I was playing deck tennis, I couldn't turn over in my bunk in the ship's surgery. A few hours after that I could only wiggle my finger and my toes. My breathing was becoming labored. A classic progression.

The only oxygen was in possession of the ship's welding department. It was rigged with a hose and a glass funnel to improvise an oxygen tent. It helped a little.

The case became something of a natural media event for those pre-Salk years: youth stricken with polio in mid-Atlantic. New York was radioed and a polio specialist was flown to Halifax, Nova Scotia. From there the doctor boarded a U.S. Coast Guard cutter to rendezvous with the ship in mid-ocean where a hurricane was blowing itself out.

He brought a portable breathing machine with him but didn't use it. The polio, again by whim, had gone as far as it was going to go. He surveyed his patient and said simply: "You'll walk again."

On landing I was taken to a hospital in New York that had turned over a whole ward to victims of that summer's epidemic.

Polio has one forgiving aspect. Paralysis is at its maximum in the first few days during the acute phase. From there on there is return of muscle, sometimes much, sometimes too little. This does leave room for hope.

The disease is an anatomy professor. Patients learn the names of muscles they may no longer have. Biceps: the arms flexer. Triceps: the arm straightener. Leg adductors. Pronators. Supraspinatus.

Knowing what muscle does or did what helps the patient weigh his future. No biceps? Trying to hold a plate in buffet line may be an invitation to broken crockery. Weak triceps? Pushing a heavy revolving door won't be easy. No adductors? Say goodbye to skiing.

The patient, as the deep and constant pain of muscle spasms gradually subsides and twinges of motion return, can begin to think of a longer future. This is not easy to visualize when trying to read a newspaper flat on your back with only wriggling fingers. It leaves you blanketed with pages like all the shrouds fit to print.

But eventually there comes time to make a survey: Will you ever be able to feed yourself? Open a door? Walk outside? Hold a job? Marry and have children? Will you drown in self-pity or challenge the world from a wheelchair? Polio can be rather instructive in the area of self-knowledge.

Gradually as movement returns — no more predictable than it went away — the survivor learns new tricks. A bow tie can be tied if the bad arm is braced against a door jamb. Revolving doors can be mastered by waiting for someone to enter first and do most of the shoving. The person in leg braces learns which steps in a friend's house to avoid. Learns to swallow pride and accept a piggyback.

If the muscles are weak, the determination for the polio survivor seems to be as strong in inverse proportion.

After some months, I did walk again, just as predicted. My last pre-polio round of golf had been 101. My first post-polio was 102. I had lost one stroke and a number of scattered muscles. The other day I tried to lift a box of heavy bolts off the top shelf of a ship chandlery. The weakened triceps and the absent deltoids weren't up to it, and the whole load cascaded over my head onto the floor.

Well, polios from those pre-vaccine days of 30, 40 and 50 years ago have learned if nothing else to be philosophical about the world their limitations have left for them.

That's why post-polio muscular atrophy after all those decades of learning to cope seem to be a particularly cruel twist of the knife. I don't know if it's happening to me.

Battle vowed on textile bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is promising an all-out effort to block new curbs on textile, apparel and shoe imports approved by the Senate, even if it means a presidential veto just weeks before the November elections.

"We will do everything in our power to make sure that it does not become law," U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yentzer said Friday following 57-32 Senate approval of tighter import restrictions.

The bill is designed to protect American manufacturers from foreign competition, primarily in newly industrialized Asian countries.

Textile and apparel imports would be frozen at 1987 levels and growth would be limited to 1 percent annually from then on. The 1987 levels of non-rubber footwear would form a ceiling on imports, with no growth permitted.

"Business is business," declared say "What is going on here? This is a place of God. This should happen somewhere else. I've since tried to forget it," Castaneda, wiping a tear from her cheek, said.

In forty years, the situation has changed for the Hispanics in Hereford, said Castaneda, especially for the migrant workers who travel to the Panhandle each year to work in the fields.

"Now people that come to harvest are required to have houses. When I came, my husband had a house for me because he was already working here, but when my mom and dad came, they had nothing to live in."

The better situation, she said, is due in part to Jesus Moya, president of Texas Farm Workers Union who in 1980 rallied other migrant workers to require better treatment from the landowners.

"One good thing he did was require that we have toilets out in the field. It was really good what he represented, but I can't say I liked the way he did it," she said, referring to the picket lines and walkouts which caused many packing sheds to shut down.

Castaneda has just a sixth grade education and she admits she wishes she had finished high school. But one of her sons, Ernie, received an engineering degree from West Texas State University.

"I'm very proud of Ernie and the rest of my kids. All I can wish for them is that they have a good job, they're happy where they are and that people treat them right."

Villarreal's son, Randy, also is searching for more than a high school education. He's majoring in the sponsor, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., adding that from now on he will openly adopt the protectionist label.

Textile forces claim the bill is needed to save American jobs that would be lost to foreign competition. But critics say the industry has left its trade troubles of the early 1980s behind and is actually enjoying a boom.

They contend that most or the 300,000 textile jobs lost in the decade resulted from modernization brought on in large part by heightened competition.

The 57-32 vote was short of the veto-proof majority sponsors had sought, but there also was no guarantee that administration supporters could muster the 34 votes to sustain a veto against an override attempt.

At the White House, spokesman government at Angelo State University in San Angelo and hopes to attend law school at Boston College.

Randy longs for the drive and aggressiveness of the Anglo culture, and even though his father is happy with that, Villarreal said the Mexican heritage — Randy's roots — has been lost in the shuffle partly because he and his wife haven't nurtured that tie.

Villarreal said: "When I first came over here I spoke 100 percent Spanish. But over here, you have to speak some English, so I got to where I was speaking it half the time and Spanish the other half. But you can't do that because people will understand what you're saying only half the time, so I stick with English now. But because we don't speak Spanish a lot in the home, Randy is having to take Spanish classes at college.

"We as parents don't take the time to teach our kids where they came from. By the next generation, the heritage will probably be totally forgotten. The only thing they can say is 'My parents were from Mexico,' and that's it."

Fiestas Patrias, the celebration of Mexico's independence from Spain in 1821, will be Sept. 16.

"I wish I had stopped to explain what Sept. 16 really means to Randy and my other kids. They enjoy the celebration because of the dances and things, but I and probably most other Hispanic parents, haven't done a good job of explaining what it means to have Mexican roots," Villarreal said.

Marlin Fitzwater reminded reporters that President Reagan had vetoed an earlier version of the textile bill in 1985 and "will veto the 1988 version if it reaches his desk."

On the roll call, 17 Republicans joined 40 Democrats in support of the measure, while nine Democrats and 23 Republicans were opposed.

The Senate had voted 68-29 on Wednesday to limit debate on the bill to 30 hours, a move intended to counter opponents' stalling tactics. Friday's roll call thus represented an 11-vote falloff for the textile and apparel industries and their allies, the shoe manufacturers.

Seven Democratic senators who voted Wednesday to limit debate switched on Friday and voted against the bill itself. Five others who backed imposing a time limit did not vote at all on the politically sensitive legislation.

Senate approval of the legislation did not wrap up the bill in a neat package and clear the way for lawmakers to move on to other matters. Instead, it appeared that the bill will linger on the Senate floor through Tuesday if not later, even though it already has been passed.

That is because opponents are threatening to filibuster a second vote, required in this instance to send the bill to the House, which already has approved its own version and must now act upon Senate changes.

But there is no doubt that supporters have ample support to get the bill to the House some time next week, and no House obstacles have surfaced.

A veto battle on election eve, however, would be sure to claim the spotlight, especially in the South where the textile and apparel industries are major components of the economy.

MERRICK

Merrick added that an article in The Amarillo Globe-News this week brought his attention to the fact that area citizens—including some of his customers—were not aware of the reasons for the court case.

The Amarillo article reported that the Amarillo City Commission had ordered Amarillo By-Products to adopt an acceptable plan for treatment of its industrial waste and implement that plan by Dec. 1. The story also added that Amarillo By-Products had been a defendant in a Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization case, and that U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson had announced settlement terms of a $5 million payment to plaintiffs Hereford Bi-Products and Southwest Hide Co., with the payment to be hiked to $15 million if the $5 million was not paid by a certain date.

Merrick said the in-court settlement was announced on the fourth day of the trial on July 27. The suit filed by Hereford Bi-Products alleged, in part, that Amarillo By-Products "conspired to commit fraud and theft" of money and property against the plaintiffs and others. Some of the others allegedly damaged included Caviness Packing, Palo Duro Packing, Great Western Meat Co., and 66 Pack. Southwest Hide, co-plaintiff, is based in Boise, Idaho.

The suit claimed that the RICO act applied because "the racketeering activities participated in by the defendants include: daily forgery of business records and theft of both rendering materials and animal hides, which has been perpetrated, concealed and carried out by the transmission of forged, false and fraudulent documents through the U.S. Mail; ... by transmission of false and fraudulent information over interstate telephone lines; transportation, receipt and sale of stolen hides and rendering materials taken out of interstate commerce and shipped across state lines; ... the emulsification of water and sludge into shipments of grease through fraudulent and false pretenses; fraudulent giving low render yield test results."

Merrick explains that he did not seek publicity about the civil suit, "but the news media did not pick up on the case and little publicity was seen or heard by the public." He added there seemed to be enough confusion on the name identity of the companies involved that he should make a statement.

Hereford Bi-Products has other plants in Plainview, Friona, Muleshoe, Stratford, Spearman, Clovis, N.M., Guymon, OK., and Amarillo Canning Co. in Amarillo.

Tingling, Numbness In Hands Will Return Again & Again

BY DR. GERALD GLASSCOCK
Doctor of Chiropractic

Health News...

Dear Doctor: I am suffering from what I understand to be a "neuromedian disturbance." I say I "understand" but I don't!

First my hands started 'going to sleep.' Then I lost strength in one hand.

The writer of the above inquiry was referring to the median nerve which passes through a sheath in the wrist or carpal area.

Pressure on the nerve there can cause what is called the carpal tunnel syndrome, tingling, numbness, loss of strength in the fingers.

And, it is one of those "sure as the sun will rise" problems.

What I mean frankly, is that this is a problem that is going to keep returning, and with greater intensity, just as surely as the sun rises, if no effective treatment is obtained.

There are many contributing causes to the "carpal tunnel syndrome" ranging from low thyroid to menopause.

By far the most common cause is injury or excessive strain. And just as the leaves of an injured branch will wither, so too will a hand lose its usefulness if this problem goes unsolved.

There are many short range treatments for the tingling and numbness but all are something of a "band-aid" approach to the problem.

Simply trying to reduce or prevent the tingling and numbness is not a solution. Nor is immobilization a desirable goal. The only proper goal is restoration of use.

I'm not going to comment on the advisability of surgery for this condition, except to say that

Chiropractic has proven ever so effective in unlocking nerve pressure and restoring vital nerve flow.

I urge anyone who has this condition or notices occasional tingling in the fingers or numbness of a hand that frequently goes to sleep, to seek care from a Doctor of Chiropractic.

Paying his dues

While Hereford's Economic Development Council is being organized and becoming a legal entity, the industrial development committee of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce is going full speed ahead on the job of seeking new industry for the community.

The committee has been especially active this year and much of the credit, we believe, goes to one man. Ken Rogers, chairman of the committee, has provided the leadership and enthusiasm to pull together the volunteer group interested in the community's progress.

The work of such a voluntary group goes largely unnoticed. Some years the group is highly active; other years it is idle. The activity of such a committee is related to the chairman's resolve and the support of the chamber staff.

Since the chamber operates only on membership dues, there is very little funding in the budget for the industrial development committee. So, the work of the industrial development committee depends largely on members who are willing to give the time and talents that are needed in the pursuit of new industry.

Many community leaders are interested in making Hereford and Deaf Smith County a better place to work, live and play. But it takes someone to fill that leadership role and get them working together.

We salute Rogers for accepting that responsibility, and we commend all the other volunteers who are trying to make something happen for the betterment of their community.

Teacher pay

The Texas State Teachers Association announced this week that it will ask the state legislature for a $5,000 across-the-board pay raise for all Texas teachers and will work for a 20 per cent pay hike for other education employees.

One thing about it, TSTA leaders are not bashful in their demands.

The prospect of a $5,000 a year pay raise is mouth watering not only for teachers but for all other Texas employees, private and public, who would dearly love to have that kind of raise.

It will probably come as a surprise to TSTA president Charles Beard but teachers are not the only ones who have not seen their pay rise as much as they would like.

As a matter of fact, thousands of Texas workers have not had a pay raise in several years. Some have had a pay cut. Some have lost their jobs.

Pay raises have long been thought of as automatic and something to which every employee was entitled. During the Carter administration when inflation hit double digit marks, indeed regular pay raises were necessary in order to stay afloat.

In recent years, with inflation stalled almost to nothing, it has not been the custom to raise pay regularly.

Employees of Ochiltree county have not had a pay raise in several years. Employees of the city of Perryton received a small pay raise this year.

Employees at the Perryton Herald have not had a general pay raise in four years. This is not because the management would not like to give them a raise, but because there is not enough money to provide a raise. During this time, profits have steadily slipped and it is hard to stay afloat in a time of economic downturn.

Employees whose pay is funded by tax money have a different outlook on their pay situation. They are told by their leaders that just about everybody in the "private sector" is making more money and they deserve more. The taxpayer can be expected to stand still for a tax increase to fund pay increases for tax supported employees.

They do not like to acknowledge this, but teachers in most communities are paid decent salaries. They like to compare their salaries with that of other professionals, primarily doctors and lawyers, but this is not quite fair. Their salaries compare very favorably with other employees who also have a college education and who are no doubt as intelligent as teachers.

Everybody likes to make more money and no doubt teachers are entitled to higher salaries. But taxpayers have some rights, too.

Perryton teachers received a raise of $1,100 this year and that is more than probably 99 percent of other employees in this community received. Teachers have had their pay boosted through the career ladder program while employees outside the school have no such thing.

A statewide teacher pay raise will not come automatically and taxpayer resistance will be intense in this time of hard times.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek discusses billionaires this week, in an inexperienced way.

According to an article I read the other night while looking to see if there was an article in the paper on which candidate for President saluted the most times while in the armed services—the better to determine who was better qualified to balance the budget—anyway, according to the article there are 51 billionaires in the United States.

Off hand, the word "billionaire" is one of those words so out of touch with the rest of us it sort of fades away when you try to look it straight in the face. It's like trying to imagine a star out in space a million light years from Hereford.

To get a hold on it, I looked it up in the dictionary, and here's the way to pin it down; say you have a million dollars. You're called a millionaire. That's not much these days, nearly any Congressman can qualify, but it's still above the poverty level.

Now if you have not just one million but a thousand millions, you're a billionaire.

If you had it all in cash, and put it in banks, and wanted to keep each deposit at $100,000 so it'd be federally insured—and the way some banks are run you'd better have your money insured—then you'd have to scatter your deposits among 10,000 different banks, in order to sleep at night without worrying.

In addition to reporting there are 51 billionaires in the United States, the article said that altogether there are 129 billionaires in the world.

And up near the top of the list was, of all people, the Queen of England. Queen Elizabeth's net worth is put at $8.7 billion. I credit that to frugality. She hasn't bought a new carriage since she's been in office.

From a dollars and sense viewpoint, the Royalty business sure beats the political business.

Moreover, when Queen Elizabeth retires, there are already five of her kindred in line to take over. Each has a number and can move up without having to get elected. Also, the Queen's $8.7 billion is bound to be growing, if she hasn't bought any oil stocks, which makes the job even more attractive.

No wonder British Royalty keeps the job in the family.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

MEMORIES

I received an invitation to the 90th anniversary celebration of the First Baptist Church of Grove, Oklahoma. My first church job was in this church. While I was in college I served as music and youth director, even though I knew nothing about either music or youth.

They loved me anyhow and it was a time of good experiences and learning. It also was a time of one of my most embarrassing moments.

I did have a car and Grove was 250 miles from Shawnee, Ok., where I was in school. Every Friday I would get to Grove. I rode the bus or train when I had the money. When I did not have the money I hitchhiked. Getting back to Shawnee was another story. Nothing goes to, or through, Shawnee, Ok.

Baptists try to build their schools 50 miles from any known sin, and believe me Shawnee qualifies. After Sunday night church, someone would take me to Afton, Ok. I would sit in the train station until 3:30 a.m., ride the train until 8:30 a.m., get off at a town 30 miles from Shawnee, hitch-hike the rest of the way, and arrive in time for a 10 o'clock class.

I became an expert in sleeping on trains. Matter of fact I became too much of an expert. One morning the train was full so the conductor told me to sit in the club car. The club car also served as the diner for the train. When the train stopped in Tulsa, tables would be set up and food brought on board. As soon as the train left Tulsa breakfast would be served.

I settled down in the club car and evidently began a long winter's nap. When I woke up at 8 a.m., I was sitting at a table with a couple who were trying to eat breakfast and not let my presence spoil the event. Since the diner opened at 6 a.m., I have no idea how many people had the pleasure of my company with their eggs and sausage. To make matters worse my head had fallen to my chest and I had drooled all over my lapel.

For once in my life I was quick witted. I decided I had rather these folks think I was drunk instead of stupid. I got up, slurred my speech and staggered out of the diner. In the same setting I would do it again.

Editorial opinion from around Texas

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around Texas:

Summer of the Syringe on East Coast Beaches

It has been the summer of the syringe, when Americans discovered to their horror that it probably wasn't the sharks they had to fear at the seashore, but the medical waste.

Recent news reports indicate the problem has been around a long time, but little has been done about it. As far back as December 1978, the Environmental Protection Agency announced it would regulate infectious wastes as hazardous wastes under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. But when final regulations were issued in 1980, infectious waste was not included as a hazardous waste. In 1987, the EPA issued guidelines for biomedical waste management, but not tough regulations. Finally, this summer, the EPA asked for public comment on its handling of the biomedical waste issues, but critics say that's too little, too late.

Several bills have been introduced in the Senate and the House ... on the ... problem. A federal approach would be helpful since the current patchwork of state legislation makes it possible for dumpers to shift to states with more lenient laws. Still, more laws would not be necessary if the EPA would move more quickly to define medical waste and include it in hazardous waste regulations. ...

Whom Do You Trust?

Until this week, Assistant Texas Attorney General John Vasquez was the spearhead in the fight to make charitable trusts perform charitably. Now he is on his way out. Vasquez has resigned, effective Sept. 16 — to all appearances forced out by an elected official he served loyally and well.

Attorney General Jim Mattox wanted to make Vasquez move from his position as head of the charitable trust division to a post in the consumer protection division. Vasquez ... didn't want to switch. He says he had been trying to tell Mattox that since July. Mattox says he didn't know Vasquez was leaving, or had even wanted to talk to him. It is reasonable to assume this is bunk. On the other hand, if Mattox "didn't" know these things, why not? It doesn't say much for him as an administrator.

Vasquez, in his hard-hitting investigations into literally dozens of Texas charity operations, stepped on a lot of toes. No one ever questioned his honesty or zeal. He was just starting probes into the charity care given by Texas' non-profit hospitals, as well as how much bingo operations give to charity. ...

Texas may never know for sure why Vasquez was forced out, but it will not escape their notice that Mattox badly wants to be Texas' next governor. The possible reasons for Mattox's actions here thus come down to a choice between opportunism and incompetence.

State Should Ensure Access To AZT For AIDS Patients

The Texas Legislature, when it meets in January, will face an issue that is literally a matter of life or death. At risk are the lives of almost 600 Texans with acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Their only current hope is the life-prolonging drug AZT.

... The Texas Health Department is asking the Legislature for $48 million for AIDS prevention but not a dime for helping the stricken Texans obtain AZT.

The department should revise its request to include funds so that AZT would be available for the indigent. Texas lawmakers also should work with their federal counterparts in Congress to assure some form of continued federal assistance.

Texas Making Comeback

Comptroller Bob Bullock has produced some news. The state last week ended its fiscal year in the black after two years of red ink. The idea that the state's economy bottomed-out last year seems to be confirmed. But what's even more encouraging than the fact that the state isn't in hock is that the improvement has been across the board. Sales taxes, motor fuel taxes, the franchise tax, oil and gas taxes are all producing more revenue than had been expected. Business and industry have gotten to their feet in Texas, and consumers have more confidence in the future.

Letter to the Editor

Dear editor:

The members of the American Legion Auxiliary Hereford Unit 192 would like to take this means of expressing their gratitude to all who came on August 16th to the annual Country Lunch.

We sincerely appreciate the support given to our organization by The Hereford Brand and radio station KPAN to spread the word to Hereford and the surrounding area.

We would also like to say thank you to those very special friends of the Auxiliary who shared their vegetables and fruits with us.

With all the generous help we received, it was indeed our pleasure to prepare and serve another meal of Deaf Smith County products to our community.

Sincerely,
The American Legion Auxiliary

Dear editor:

On behalf of the Chamber of Commerce Agriculture Committee, we wish to express our sincere appreciation to those farmers who wrote letters regarding available acreage for growing contracted food corn. We are grateful to those who gave the time and effort to respond, thereby supporting this important effort.

The tremendous response (availing 44,000+ acres) by area farmers far surpassed the acreage projections of a prospective corn-buying firm, which is still considering this region for expansion facilities. Although we have no guarantees on the outcome of this effort, we are indebted to the growers for their willing participation on such short notice.

In representing agriculture's best interests, our committee will continue to focus its efforts on value-added processing of locally-grown food products, in addition to smaller-scale projects such as the new Farmers' Market.

We are committed to the belief that Hereford really does grow the best, and applaud the farmer for helping to make that statement a reality. We welcome your continued involvement in the Chamber as we work together to improve our community.

Sincerely,
Jerry Walsh

Watch Point Is your child in trouble?

(Information by We Are The Caring Helpers)

DO YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS IN TROUBLE?

Most parents are reluctant to pry into their teenager's life for fear of jeopardizing the mutual trust they have developed. However, when parents have reason to suspect their child is in trouble with drugs and/or alcohol, it may be necessary to collect information to confirm or negate that suspicion.

To not look more closely at what is happening is to risk the teenager's life. Parent's intuition is often a valid indicator that something is wrong and that they need to pay more attention to what is going on with their teenager.

A search of the teen's room for evidence of drug use should include looking under mattresses, in cluttered closets and drawers, under the carpet, and in the hollow spaces inside stereo speakers. Teenagers hide their drugs and drug paraphernalia in places they don't think their parents will ever look-in stuffed animals, ventilation systems, and empty tape cassettes.

Another way to check suspicions is to make discreet inquiries into the teenager's behavior. Parents can ask former friends who may have been abandoned in favor of a drug using group. However, teenagers are often afraid to speak out, even if they are very worried about their friends.

Parents who question their child's friends should be sensitive to this and honor the confidences they share. Others who can provide insight are the parents of other teenagers and school personnel who often know which students are "druggies."

If you have any questions or concerns, you may call Hereford High School and ask to speak to a WATCH Team member. You do not have to give your name, and anything that is said will be held in confidence.

Conkwright named to post at Kings Manor

Hereford native and longtime resident Jim Conkwright has been named Director of Development at Kings Manor Methodist Home effective Sept. 1.

The newly-formed, fulltime position was created by the Manor's board of trustees after 10-12 years of consideration. "There is now an acute need for non-profit organizations to have someone working with people in setting up charitable trusts," Conkwright said. "I hope to use my financial and business background to the benefit of the Manor."

Among Conkwright's duties will be developing and working on long-term goals of the Manor, promoting fundraising activities, and handling public relations of the Manor within Hereford and the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church.

A member of First Presbyterian Church, Conkwright is currently serving on the board of trustees of Amarillo Area Foundation and is on the board of directors of High Plains Underground Water Conservation District. He is also a member of the local Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center.

Born and raised in Hereford, Conkwright is the son of Dorothy Conkwright of Hereford and the late Colby Conkwright. He and his wife, Janice, are the parents of two daughters, Robin and Leslie, who are students at Austin College in Sherman and the University of Texas in Austin, respectively.

Conkwright's experience in public service and in the business world began years ago. He was recognized as the Hereford High School Honor Student upon his graduation from HHS in 1960. He received a degree in animal science from Texas Tech University in 1964, minoring in business.

Conkwright cites his past involvement with a large farming operation, investment banking, community and church activities as preparing him for his current role at Kings Manor. "I've also served on the board of trustees at Kings Manor for 12 years and was president of the board for three years," he said. "I was named an honorary trustee of the Manor and I've maintained a close relationship with the facility."

Among his civic achievements, Conkwright has served as president of such organizations as the Hereford Independent School District's board of trustees, Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, Hereford Rotary Club, and Llano Estacado Council of Boy Scouts of America, where he received the Silver Beaver Award in 1981, the highest award the organization bestows.

In 1975, Conkwright was among five individuals named Outstanding Young Texans and was recognized as Citizen of the Year by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce in 1979.

"I am really thrilled at becoming Director of Development of Kings Manor because it will give me a chance to work with people I have known most of my life," he said. "I hope to be an asset to the Manor and the individuals it serves."

Why Washables Are Labeled Dry Clean Only

When a plain, untrimmed cotton blouse or a polyester garment are labeled "dry clean only," it seems to defy common sense. Most consumers are well-aware that these are washable items.

But there is a reason for this direction. Federal Trade Commission laws require that manufacturers provide care labels after testing

DR. LAMB

DEAR DR. LAMB: I read the ingredients on food labels as you suggested.

I started to buy a base to make ice cream and the ingredients included monoglycerides and diglycerides. I know those are fats, but I don't know whether they are saturated or unsaturated. The package didn't list any grams of fat or calories or cholesterol. Are monoglycerides and diglycerides safe?

DEAR READER: Don't buy that product. Fats are glycerides — triglycerides, diglycerides and monoglycerides, meaning they contain three, two or one fatty acids, respectively. But their fatty acids may be saturated, monounsaturated or polyunsaturated. Just providing the term mono-, di- or triglyceride does not provide any information at all regarding whether the fatty acids are saturated or unsaturated.

A company that does that could very well not bother to mention the cholesterol content, if any.

which care procedures are safe for the garment. But they only need to give one method, even if others are safe.

As a result, many manufacturers choose the safest method, which is usually drycleaning, to put on the clothing label. This protects them against complaints and legal claims.

So what's the consumer to do? To avoid large drycleaning bills, you have to use your judgment. If the item is expensive, take it to your drycleaner and ask for advice. The cleaner may want to try wetcleaning, depending on the garment and the type of soil and stains, or you may need to protect your investment by having it drycleaned each time.

If it's an everyday cotton, synthetic or blended garment, you may want to wash it using standard procedures for those fabrics. Or you could have it drycleaned when it's new and then switch to washing the garment as it gets older and you're less concerned about possible damage.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

YOUR EYES

CHILDREN'S VISION PROBLEMS

The most common problem affecting children's vision is (myopia) the inability to see objects clearly at a distance. However, there are children who may be hyperopic (far-sighted). These children see more clearly at distances, but close-up objects appear blurred. Both conditions are often accompanied by astigmatism — an atypical shape of the cornea that may cause objects to look blurred or partially out of focus.

Vision performance inadequacies, however, are not so easy to detect in the simple "vision" test given in school. "Vision performance" covers eye movement, focusing control, and the ability to use the eyes as a team. When vision performance shortcomings go uncorrected, the child is frustrated at school because his or her reading performance is often poor and stress-producing. Sometimes the student expresses vision frustration through poor behavior.

That is why every child should be examined professionally before school begins. Glasses and/or vision training will generally correct vision defects and vision performance problems so that learning difficulties may be avoided.

Of course, the first thing you'll notice when you decide to buy a new car is just how many there are to choose from — not to mention the gas mileage, the warranty, size, color, make, model and cost. ## Herd blitzes PD in fourth for 20-9 win

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

There were lots of things worn out after Friday's Hereford-Palo Duro football game at Whiteface Stadium in Hereford.

There was the scoreboard. The clock quit working in the middle of the third quarter. Then the final Hereford score wouldn't go on the board either.

And there's Hereford Head Coach Don Cumpston's voice, raspy after the game from a little too much yelling in the first half, a little too much celebrating in the second half.

And there's Cumpston's cap, which picked up about 40 yards in the first half for a number of reasons.

And there were the face muscles of the Hereford players from so much smiling after the game.

And a few places in the turf at Whiteface Stadium, where a frustrated Clifton Monroe of Palo Duro repeatedly flung his helmet after the game.

You see, Palo Duro thought it was supposed to win. A lot of other folks thought the Dons would win, too, including a few stunned Hereford football fans who stood, a disbelieving look on their faces, as the final whistle blew and Hereford had a 20-9 win over the Dons.

"We knew we couldn't lose at home," said Hereford's Clint Cotten after the game.

Hereford didn't lose at home, but when Palo Duro had a 9-0 lead in the middle of the third quarter and was driving the ball, it looked as if the Whitefaces wouldn't fare so well.

Palo Duro had moved the ball well in the first half enroute to a nine-point halftime advantage. The Dons moved 90 yards on 12 plays in the first quarter for the first score, with fullback Clifton Monroe carrying the last seven yards for a touchdown.

With 5:32 left in the first half, PD's Jose Carrillo kicked a 32-yard field goal to cap a drive that began at the Hereford 38 after Lico Chavira had intercepted a Jason Scott pass intended for split end Pat Mercer.

Palo Duro had two other threats. The first Don possession was stoped when linebacker Moses Casas recovered a bad pitch at the Hereford 48, and Stuart Mitts stopped Monroe at the line on third-and-4 at the PD 44 late in the second quarter.

At the half, PD had picked up seven first downs and 128 yards, all on the ground. Hereford had managed four first downs, 54 rushing yards and 33 passing yards.

"We didn't get a whole lot of breaks in the first half," said Cumpston. "It seemed like every time we made a good play we'd have a penalty. We had an 18-yard pass to Keith Brown on third-and-20. Nothing really went our way."

So did Cumpston give a fire-and-brimstone speech at halftime?

"Coach told us if we played hard in the second half something good would happen to us," Keith Brown said. "It did."

It almost didn't.

Brown fumbled a pitchout from quarterback Jason Scott that Palo Duro's Lawrence Brackens recovered at the Hereford 48. Palo Duro moved to the Hereford 17 where, on second-and-7, PD quarterback Carleton Franklin threw to tight end Daniel Johnson in the end zone. Johnson looked like he was wide open.

He was. Until Cotten scooted over in front of Johnson, outleaped him and made a one-hand catch to give the Herd the ball at their own 20.

"We were in cover 2 (zone coverage)," Cotten said. "I was a little late picking him up, but he was my man all the way."

"I don't know if that was the turning point in the game, but it was all in our hearts to come back on them. We just reached down and got it."

"That interception was a great play. I think it was the turning point for us," Cumpston said. "That was just a great play. I don't know how he caught that thing, but he did, and I'm glad. They were fairly close to scoring."

There began Hereford's long, long march to its first touchdown. The clock was still working: 6:20 to play in the third quarter. By the end of the quarter, Hereford was still driving, with the ball at the PD 11.

Scott got the Herd out of a hole with a 13-yard scramble to the Hereford 35, then hit Cotten on a 12-yard pass. Running backs Glenn Parker, Kyle Andrews and Brown hammered the ball to the PD 39, then Scott scrambled for another 13-yard gain and first down at the PD 20.

Two plays later, Scott was sacked by Monroe at the PD 32, but Monroe was flagged for a flagrant face mask foul. Instead of third-and-22, the Herd had first-and-10 at the 11.

Three plays later, Hereford found his old friend Pat Mercer. Mercer had been double-covered most of the night, but a change in tactics freed him up.

"They had been double-covering me all night," Mercer said. "I guess because of last week, they double-covered me on every down."

"We decided to go to an unbalanced line," Cumpston explained. "We moved Clint (tight end Cotten) to the same side as Pat, and that put our two tallest people on the same side of the line. They couldn't double-cover Pat that way."

On third down, Scott threw to Mercer, who jumped in front of a PD defender in the end zone. The defender pushed Mercer out-of-bounds while Mercer was in the air, and Mercer was awarded the touchdown.

Could Mercer have come down in bounds if the defensive back hadn't pushed him out? "I really don't know," Mercer said. "Jason did a good job getting the ball there, and the line did a great job giving Jason time. It was my job to catch it, and we got six points."

Kyle Andrews kicked the extra point to cut Hereford's deficit to 9-7 early in the fourth quarter.

About two minutes later, Hereford punter Brian Fowler pinned PD at its own 9 with a 34-yard kick that hit the PD 5 and took a backwards bounce. Defensive end Tate Smith, subbing for an injured Brad Smith, stopped PD's Michael Westmoreland at the 17 on third-and-six, and a Palo Duro punt went just 17 yards to give the Herd the ball at the Dons' 31.

On third-and-six after a timeout, Scott hit Mercer on a 20-yard pass for a first down. Two plays later Brown, behind a block by guard Eddie Tijerina, scooted around the left side for the go-ahead touchdown. Andrews added the extra point to give Hereford a 14-9 lead with about five minutes to play.

PD moved from its own seven to the 29 when linebacker Joe Medrano recovered a fumble at the Dons' 32 to set up the insurance touchdown.

Two tries into the line by Parker netted nothing, so on third down, Scott pitched out to Brown.

"I was just going for the first down," Brown said. "Coach had told me to read the defensive tackle on that play. I went down the line, saw what he was doing, and just cut outside."

When he cut outside his lead blocker, fullback Andrews, cut down a PD defender. Brown was then on his own.

Mission: Possible

Looking for protection

Hereford quarterback Jason Scott (1) looks for some protection from teammate Bud Shirley (70, at left) during Friday's Palo Duro-Hereford game at Whiteface Stadium. Bearing down on Scott is PD's

Paul Bustamante. Scott had a touchdown pass, 78 passing yards, and 17 yards rushing as Hereford dumped Palo Duro, 20-9.

Where did he go?

Hereford defensive tackle Billy Burnam tries to fight through a Palo Duro blocker as running back Doug Washington (23) cuts through the hole in Friday's game at Whiteface Stadium. Washington had 26 yards on the night for PD. Burnam and his teammates came through in the second half for a 20-9 win.

GREGG & LOMBARDI

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Forrest Gregg, former coach of the Green Bay Packers, was termed by the late Vince Lombardi the greatest offensive tackle he ever saw. Gregg played for Green Bay from 1956 to 1970, nine of those seasons under Lombardi.

Gregg, a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, recalled that he had heard Lombardi was a mean man before Vince took over at Green Bay in 1959.

One practice session changed Gregg's mind. "Vince was all over the field," Gregg said. "He yelled at anybody — no matter how big a star — for not hustling. I knew immediately he was special."

GOOD FOR K.C.

BOSTON (AP) — When K.C. Jones retired as coach of the Boston Celtics at the end of the 1987-88 NBA season, he concluded it was good for everybody.

"It's good for me," he said, "good for my family, and good for Jimmy Rodgers."

Rodgers succeeded Jones as coach of the Celtics.

Jefferies paces Mets

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

When he was called up from the minors recently, Gregg Jefferies thought he would be only used as a pinch-hitter for the New York Mets. As it turned out, he's truly hitting in the pinch.

"He gave a hitting clinic out there," Montreal Expos manager Buck Rodgers said Friday night after the red-hot rookie hit a two-run homer and collected three hits in the Mets' 7-3 victory.

Along with his homer, Jefferies had a double and triple, pacing a 14-hit attack, as he raised his batting average to .422 since being called up from Triple-A Tidewater on Aug. 25. It was the second game in which Jefferies collected a homer, double and triple.

"To tell you the truth, I didn't even think I would play when they called me up," said Jefferies. "I figured I would just pinch-hit."

With the victory the Mets maintained a nine-game lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates, who beat Philadelphia 5-2, and reduced their

"magic number" for clinching the NL East to 15.

Meanwhile, the race tightened up in the NL West with the division-leading Los Angeles Dodgers losing 5-2 to the Cincinnati Reds. Coupled with Houston's 4-3, 12-inning decision over San Francisco, the Dodgers' lead dropped to four games over the Astros. The third-place Reds, meanwhile, moved within five games of the Dodgers.

Elsewhere, Atlanta trimmed San Diego 5-4 and St. Louis stopped Chicago 6-2.

Pirates 5, Phillies 2

Pittsburgh tied a National League record with four sacrifice flies to help Mike Dunne win for the first time in two months.

Dunne, 7-11, ended a four-game losing streak that covered eight starts since the All-Star break. His last win was over Los Angeles on July 9. He gave up five hits before needing relief help in the eighth from Jim Gott, who posted his 28th save.

Reds 5, Dodgers 2

Danny Jackson scattered nine hits for his 11th victory in his last 12 decisions and Eric Davis and Paul O'Neill hit consecutive two-run doubles in the fourth inning as Cincinnati beat Los Angeles.

The victory tied Jackson, 21-6, with Minnesota's Frank Viola for the major league lead in wins. The Reds have five games left with the Dodgers.

Astros 4, Giants 3

Alan Ashby's two-out single in the 12th inning broke a tie and lifted Houston over San Francisco. The slipping Giants lost for the 13th time in their last 16 games.

Right-hander Scott Garrelts, 5-9, got two outs in the 12th before Buddy Bell started the winning rally with a single. After Craig Smajstrla ran for Bell, Terry Puhl doubled and Ashby followed with his game-winning hit.

Danny Darwin, 7-11, worked the final two innings for the victory. Cardinals 6, Cubs 2

St. Louis won for the fifth straight time, scoring five runs in the sixth inning as Ozzie Smith and Pedro Guerrero hit two-run doubles.

The Cardinals rallied against Calvin Schiraldi, 3-11, who retired St. Louis' first 15 batters. Greg Mathews, 4-5, helped set up the Cardinals' rally with a one-out bunt single.

Braves 5, Padres 4

Ozzie Virgil singled in the game-winning run in the 11th inning and reliever Bruce Sutter earned his 300th career save as Atlanta defeated San Diego.

Reliever Mark Davis, 5-8, who gave up the game-tying run in the eighth inning, gave up a leadoff single to pinch-hitter Jim Morrison in the 11th. Morrison took second base on shortstop Dickie Play's throwing error on the play. Virgil followed with a single over second base to score Morrison and give Jose Alvarez, 4-6, the victory. Sutter pitched the 11th for his 14th save of the year.

Gramm will keynote TCFA convention

Sen. Phil Gramm (R-Texas) will deliver the keynote address at the 1988 Annual Convention of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association (TCFA). The convention, with the theme, "Celebrate," will be Oct. 9-11 at the Hyatt Regency in Dallas.

Gramm will speak during the Opening General Session of the TCFA convention, Monday, Oct. 10. He will address political events and their economic impact on cattle feeders.

Also speaking during the Monday morning general session will be TCFA President Clark Willingham of Dallas and Stanley Marcus, chairman emeritus of Neiman-Marcus.

Willingham will look at the reasons cattle feeders have to "Celebrate" their industry. With the passage of the $1-per-head-checkoff and the opening of the Japanese market to more beef, 1988 could well be a pivotal year for cattlemen. Marcus, speaking on "Quest for the Best,"

will tell how he built Neiman-Marcus into a world-famous department store and how those techniques might apply to the cattle industry.

Cattle feeders attending the 1988 TCFA Convention will also hear a strong line-up of speakers Tuesday, Oct. 11.

Roger Staubach, former quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys, will start the day at the prayer breakfast. Staubach will relate how a "Winning Attitude" can help cattle feeders succeed in their endeavors.

Following the prayer breakfast, three breakout sessions are planned. Phil Seng, vice president of international programs for the U.S. Meat Export Federation in Denver, will discuss "Cracking the Japanese Beef Market." Dr. Jeff Savell and Dr. Bill Mies, both with Texas A&M University, will update cattlemen on differences in the value of cattle in their discussion "Okies vs. Exotics, Steers vs. Heifers." Suzanne Boswell, an image consultant, will help cattle feeders put their image forward in her talk "What Do You Say Before You Say Hello."

Cattle feeders will hear the views of their competition when Lonnie "Bo" Pilgrim, chief executive officer of Pilgrims Pride, discusses "Beef vs. Chicken—Who's No. 1?" during the Tuesday afternoon general session. Then, cattle feeders will join in "A Salute to Charlie Ball." Ball, who has been TCFA executive vice president for 16 years, will retire at the end of 1988 and TCFA members will have a chance to pay tribute to his lifetime of accomplishments and contributions to the cattle industry.

TCFA represents cattle feeders in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. Last year, this three-state region produced more than 6 million fed cattle—23% of the nation's fed cattle production.

Townsend named Garrison manager

BILL TOWNSEND

Bill Townsend has been named vice president and general manager of Garrison Seed & Co., Inc., according to an announcement by S.L. Garrison, president.

Art Stoy, formerly vice president/general manager and one of the founders of the company, will remain active in the company, devoting his energy to the grass seed division.

Townsend's career in the seed business began in 1970 with Horizon Seed Co. in Hereford, Texas where he was production manager for two years. Townsend joined Garrison Seed in 1972 as research and production manager. In 1979 he was promoted to operation and production manager in 1981 he was named secretary of the corporation.

Townsend earned his Bachelor of Science degree from New Mexico State University. He is a member of the Texas and American Seed Trade Associations and the American Society of Agronomy.

TCVA convention Sept. 19-22

The 46th annual Texas Citrus and Vegetable Association convention will be in Austin Sept. 19-22.

"Our primary reason for having the convention in Austin is that it is a central location in the state which keeps the convention costs to a minimum," said TCVA Executive Vice President Bill Weeks. "We have reduced the registration fee to the lowest it has been in years in hopes that we will have more participation from our member companies."

Previous conventions were held in California, West Germany, Hawaii and London.

Convention Chairman Jack Radde said, "The depth of this year's program is stronger than ever before. We have brought together two of the state's most powerful politicians and two dynamic business seminar leaders to keep the industry up to date on political and business issues."

With the theme of "Investment in the Future," the convention program will direct the Texas produce industry's attention to financial, sales and management planning.

Joseph J. Charbonneau's seminar on "The Totally Effective Sales Professional" and Hal Lefkowitz's "Leading Edge Management" seminar will help executives improve their business strategies.

With the state capital as the setting for this year's convention, Texas politics will be a hot topic. Breakfast speakers, Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby and Texas Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance will provide convention participants with interesting insight into Texas government.

Many tours and activities are planned for the convention including a trip to Johnson City, birthplace of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, to view the famous LBJ ranch and to Fredericksburg, a quaint German town full of gift, specialty and antique stores. Other tours will include a visit to the State Capitol, the LBJ library and museum then a drive through the historical homes of West Austin. Also scheduled is a trip to the Umlauf Sculpture Garden, a collection of more than 250 sculptures by world-famous artist Charles Umlauf.

Optional golf and tennis tournaments are scheduled as well as an afternoon of shopping at Austin's Arboretum Mall and Antique Mall.

The Texas Federal Inspection Service will hold a special TCVA convention reception Tuesday night to provide participants with an opportunity to talk informally with others in the industry.

AN OLD WORD
SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The 15th century, according to "Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary," was the first time "vote" was noted in print in its modern meaning.

"Vote", from the Latin word for vow or wish, was used in this sense primarily in Scotland prior to the 1500s when its present meaning came into general use. Today, "vote" means a formal expression of opinion in response to a proposed decision.

"Voter" came into English use in 1578, and "voteless" (having no vote) appeared in 1672. "Suffrage," the right to vote, became part of language in the 14th century and is ultimately from a Latin word meaning vote or political support.

FIRST THE SEED

Without a doubt, the one thing that determines the outcome of any crop is the seed that you put into the ground. Good seed produces a good crop - bad seed fails you.

We believe that insect and disease problems this last year have created a need to look at the crops and varieties you plant and your harvest intentions.

Conservation tillage methods save moisture and extra costs. Some farmers are putting most of their cropland into reduced tillage to save topsoil and valuable water. In areas with winter snow, wheat and sorghum stubble will hold in the moisture, for the next crop, if the stubble is not plowed. Conservation tillage methods combined with the testing for efficiency of irrigation wells can also reduce irrigation costs. With reduced plowing, savings are also made in the cost of equipment, labor and fuel costs. Most farmers using this method do caution that without plowing, weed and grass control must be left up to a modern chemical program. Farmers using chemical weed and grass control must carefully time applications to get the optimal affect. While farmers using the conservation tillage method are impressed with their savings, in soil, water and economic factors, they warn the system is not without problems.

1988 hay crop most expensive ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — The drought-toasted 1988 hay crop is expected to be the smallest in 12 years and prices are likely to be the highest since the Agriculture Department began keeping annual figures in 1909. Preliminary figures show that hay prices at the farm in August averaged $83.10 per ton. Although that was unchanged from July, it was an increase of 36 percent from $61.00 per ton in August 1987. No dramatic declines in hay prices are in sight, say department economists. The supply is tight and demand is strong, meaning that prices probably will remain high until spring.

According to USDA records, the record for hay prices over an entire season was $75.80 per ton set in 1983, another drought year. That was an increase of less than 10 percent from the 1982 average of $69.30 per ton.

Historically, however, there have been larger year-to-year percentage jumps in hay prices. In 1934, for example, hay rose 82 percent to $11.70 per ton from $7.70 in 1933. But a year later, in 1935, prices plummeted just as fast to $7.80 per ton.

The latest USDA production estimate on Aug. 11 put this year's hay harvest at 190.5 million tons on 66.2 million acres, down 12.5 percent from 1987 production of 149.1 million tons on 60.7 million acres.

It also is the smallest since the 1976 crop of 120.1 million tons, says the department's Economic Research Service in a new outlook report on the feed situation.

"Acreage harvested as reported in the August crop production report is almost 2.8 million acres more than the area indicated for harvest in the July report," the agency said. "This increase likely reflects in part the emergency haying rules (for conservation land) under USDA's drought assistance measures."

At the beginning of the hay marketing year on May 1, the U.S. inventory was estimated at 27.3 million tons. Counting this year's production, that makes a total hay supply of 157.8 million tons for 1988-89, down 13 percent from last season.

Meanwhile, the number of cattle and other "roughage consuming animal units" will be about the same as last year, meaning there will be less to go around.

If each animal eats as much hay as it did last year, the U.S. hay stockpile will be chewed down to only 3.8 million tons by May 1, 1989, a record low. Thus, the report said, it seems more reasonable that producers will reduce hay portions to ration available supplies.

"Hay use will depend on a number of additional factors," the report said. "Silage yields will be sharply reduced by the drought. However, the area of silage harvested likely will be increased, because of abandonment of areas intended for harvest as grain."

The report added: "More straw likely will be baled this year to stretch out forage supplies. Fall pasture growth, or lack thereof, and spring pasture conditions also will be important to hay use. Good fall rains and pasture, and good early spring pasture would do a lot to ease the pressure on hay supplies."

On the other hand, "converse conditions would intensify supply pressures" and push up hay prices even further, it said.

US losing share of wheat market

WASHINGTON (AP) — An expected 11 percent drop in wheat exports in 1988-89 will cut into the U.S. share of the world wheat trade, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

"World market share may fall from 43 percent in 1987-88 to about 40 percent," says the department's Economic Research Service. "Reduced sales to the Soviet Union are expected to account for most of the decline in volume."

The drought-battered Northern Plains, which produces most of the spring-planted durum wheat used in spaghetti and other pasta products, suffered low yields this year. The report said tighter U.S. durum supplies may result in some market loss in North Africa.

Some renewed activity in wheat sales resulted from the department's Export Enhancement Program, or EEP, which provides subsidized sales to selected foreign countries, the report said. New offerings were made this summer to India, China and Algeria.

A rise in world grain prices has resulted in a reduction in EEP subsidies, the report said. The subsidies, or bonuses, are paid to exporters in the form of government-owned surplus commodities so the companies can sell wheat at reduced prices to meet foreign competition.

Bonus levels have declined, averaging $17.80 per metric ton of wheat between Aug. 1 and Aug. 22, only about half that of a year earlier.

"The rising export price for wheat and the smaller EEP bonuses imply that EEP importers are picking up a greater share of the total cost," the report said.

The European Economic Community, which is expected to produce a bumper wheat crop this year, is expected to be the major U.S. competitor in many export markets. However, the EEC was said to have limited exports through this month due to budget constraints and relatively tight wheat supplies.

"Other major competitors will not have the supplies to compete effectively with the United States in many markets," the report said. "Canada's carrying (beginning inventory) stocks are low and the drought is expected to leave Canada with only 16 million tons of exportable supplies. Canada's exports at this level would be 32 percent below the 1987-88 record and the lowest since 1979-80."

Australia and Argentina were also said to have reduced or below-average wheat availability for export in the coming year.

But higher wheat prices are expected to encourage minor exporters, such as Eastern European countries and Turkey, particularly for durum wheat, the report said. Primary markets for these exporters will be North Africa, the Middle East and the Soviet Union.

Aeration essential for stored grain

Aeration is essential for maintaining the quality of clean, dry stored grain and must be properly understood.

Aeration is the practice of forcing small amounts of atmospheric air with desirable temperature and moisture conditions through stored grain to cool and equalize temperatures, said Richard Withers with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

The air delivery system to handle this task should be well-engineered and properly installed and managed, said Withers, agricultural engineer. This requires an understanding of the aeration process.

When atmospheric air moves through stored grain, both heat and moisture are exchanged until air and grain have comparable temperatures and moisture contents, the engineer said. Once this equilibrium condition exists, the moisture content of stored grain is known as the equilibrium moisture content (EMC). The relative humidity of the atmospheric air in equilibrium with the grain is called the equilibrium relative humidity (ERH).

For any given set of temperature and relative humidity conditions of the atmospheric air, there is a corresponding EMC for the stored grain, said Withers. From a practical standpoint, this known relationship can be used to determine if stored grain will gain or lose moisture when it contacts atmospheric air.

When the air's relative humidity is below that of the ERH, moisture will be evaporated from the grain during the aeration process, and the grain temperature will decrease due to the evaporative cooling effect, said Withers. The amount of cooling resulting from evaporation may be as much as 50 percent or more of the total heat removed.

In some cases the air's relative humidity is higher than the ERH but decreases as heat is transferred from hotter, stored grain to cooler, aeration air. Where initial grain temperatures approach 100 degrees F., evaporative cooling can reduce the temperature 10-15 degrees in about half the time required for the same reduction in grain with a temperature of 50 degrees F.

Grain placed in storage during warm months loses heat slowly as the weather gets cooler. Under these conditions, air in the grain near the surface and next to the bin walls cools first, while that in the center of the bin remains warm, said the engineer. This temperature differential creates slowly moving air currents, with the cool, dense air near the walls moving downward and forcing upward the warm, lighter air in the center.

When warm air reaches cold grain near the surface, condensation may occur. If this continues, accumulated moisture may promote insect activity, mold growth and spoilage in upper layers of the stored grain, Withers said. This problem can be controlled by using aeration to equalize temperature throughout the grain mass.

Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 355 million bushels of surplus feed grains owned by the Agriculture Department have been set aside as a reserve to meet potential demand for emergency livestock use under the recently passed $3.9 billion Drought Assistance Act.

Deputy Secretary Peter C. Myers said Thursday the grains are owned by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. and are being held in warehouses in 40 states. The grains include 250.4 million bushels of corn, 79.7 million bushels of sorghum, and 25 million bushels of barley.

Myers said additional stocks of CCC feed grains can be made available if demand from eligible farmers proves greater than current projections.

The drought relief measure was signed by President Reagan on Aug. 11. Myers said final rules as to eligibility requirements for the grain will be issued in the near future. The program will be carried out by county offices of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has announced allocations totaling $110 million for 46 projects under the Targeted Export Assistance program for the fiscal year that will begin Oct. 1.

Under the program, various trade organizations get money to carry out overseas promotion of designated agricultural products. The program is aimed at countering or offsetting adverse effects of unfair foreign trade practices on U.S. exports.

In most cases, the sponsoring organizations put up some of their own money in carrying out a specific project, although the amount of those contributions vary and are subject to negotiation with the department.

The $110 million for 1989 is the same as for this year, a level set by Congress in the 1985 farm law.

Officials said Wednesday the biggest amount, $8.9 million, will go to the U.S. Meat Export Federation to promote red meat, variety meats and related products. Other lending recipients include American Soybean Association, $8.8 million; Cotton Council International, $7.9 million; and the California Raisin Advisory Board, $7.7 million.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm-raised catfish production continues to rise above year-earlier levels, according to Agriculture Department reports.

In July, production was an estimated 23.7 million pounds of live weight delivered to processors, the department reports. The July average price paid to growers was 29 cents per pound, up 19 cents from the same month in 1987.

MRS. JAMES ALAN MOTLEY
...nee Marsalyn King

Residents' daughter marries in Dallas

During an intimate family wedding, Marsalyn King of Dallas became the bride of James Alan Motley of Bedford Saturday afternoon in the Sude George Chapel in First Presbyterian Church of Dallas. The marriage was officiated by Dr. Davis Cecil of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene M. King of 344 Elm St. are the parents of the bride and the bridegroom's mother is Barbara Ottsan of Longview.

The church altar was adorned by two 15th century spiral candelabra from Vienna and a unity candle accented by greenery and baby's breath. Ivory bows marked the front church pews.

Linda Graham, pianist, played the prelude and postlude.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a delustered ivory satin gown featuring a gathered tea-length skirt bordered in alencón lace. The lowered scalloped bodice of beaded alencón lace had a Sabrina neckline cut to a V-shape in back. A triangle of lace held the gathers of the very full elbow-length puffed sleeves.

The bride carried two red roses enhanced with baby's breath and greenery and tied with ivory streamers. She also carried a lace handkerchief belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. Ruby Carpenter, and wore pearl earrings belonging to her mother.

Wedding guests were welcomed by the bridal couple at a dinner and reception in the Monterey Room in the Doubletree Inn in Dallas.

The Italian cream wedding cake decorated with red roses was placed on a table accented with a hurricane lamp on glass tile and a red rose and ivory ribbon.

The couple will make their home in Arlington after a wedding trip to Nuevo Vallarta, Mexico.

The bride, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, received her B.B.A. in accounting in 1986 from Texas Tech University. She is currently employed as a CPA at Price

Waterhouse in Dallas.

The groom, a 1982 graduate of Longview High School, graduated summa cum laude in 1986 from Texas A&M University where he received his B.B.A. in accounting. He is a CPA with Price Waterhouse in Fort Worth.

Cains' 50th anniversary celebrated

Mr. & Mrs. B. Frank Cain and Dr. and Mrs. Phillip Cain hosted a dinner party celebrating the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents', Morgan and B.F. Cain, at the Colonial Country Club in Fort Worth on Saturday, Sept. 3.

Family and friends in attendance included the couple's seven grandchildren.

On Sunday morning, a group of family members attended the infant dedication service of their granddaughter, Callie Morgan Cain, daughter of Frank & Terri Cain, at the University Christian Church in Fort Worth.

WHAT'S IN A WORD?

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — "Election," meaning the act of selecting by vote, is one of our oldest words. "Eleccionem," coming from the Latin word for choice or selection, was first used in writing in the 13th century, says "Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary." "Election" actually predates the verb "elect" by two centuries.

Telling it like it is Lajeane Henry, president of the Deaf Smith County United Way, and Jim Arney, owner of Edward's Pharmacy, listen intently as these short, funny-looking "people" explain about epilepsy. "Our friends," puppets provided by High Plains Epilepsy Association, a United Way agency, are featured in one of the educational programs provided by HPES. Residents have an opportunity to donate to the UW during the 1988-89 campaign drive which is underway. Money received will be used to help fund 12 local agencies.

High Plains receives support

"Love and You Are All We Need" is the theme of the 1988-89 Deaf Smith County United Way campaign drive which is currently underway.

This year's goal has been set at $123,500. All money received from the drive will be used to help fund 12 agencies including the High Plains Epilepsy Association.

Among the educational programs offered by HPEA is the "Our Friends" puppet presentation. The short play features a child with epilepsy explaining to her friends what having the illness is all about. The character also stresses that children with epilepsy are no different from anyone else.

Funding from United Way of DSC allows High Plains Epilepsy to bring the puppet show to local residents including schools, civic group and other organizations. Hereford resident Janet Moody, who is an epilepsy volunteer, assists caseworkers Teresa C. Solis and Jana Johnson in staging the presentation.

The Palo Duro Chapter of the American Business Clubs also assisted with the funding of the puppet program. The booth was built and donated by members of Area Community Theatre, Inc. (Act I) in Pampa, and the format for the script was designed by the drama department at Amarillo College.

Anyone interested in arranging a presentation of "Our Friends", should call High Plains Epilepsy Association at 806-372-3891. More information may be obtained by contacting Teresa C. Solis or Jana Johnson, High Plains Epilepsy Association, 806 S. Bryan, Room 213, Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Called meeting Thursday

Members of Sweet 'n' Fancy Cake Decorating Club are urged to attend a called meeting at 9:30 a.m. Thursday in the Hereford Community Center.

TUSCAN DRAWINGS

DETROIT (AP) — A loan of 100 rare drawings from the Uffizi Gallery of Florence, Italy, will be on view at the Detroit Institute of Arts Oct. 16, 1988-Jan. 8, 1989.

The museum says "16th Century Tuscan Drawings" is a "panoramic view of a supreme movement in Italian art, when drawing was considered the parent of architecture, sculpture and painting." The drawings also "offer an insight into the passionate collecting of the Medici dynasty, which ruled Tuscany for more than two centuries."

Making donation

Armanda Beltran, owner of La Mexicana Restaurant, presents a check to Esrael Silva, a D.A.R.E. officer with the Hereford Police Department. The money will help fund the D.A.R.E. program, which will be taught to all Hereford sixth graders this year.

Girl Scout registration set

Girl Scout Registration time is here again. Hereford girls, ages five through 17, are encouraged to attend a registration meeting at the Hereford Community Center Thursday, at 7:30 p.m.

Parents should accompany their daughters to this meeting where the purpose and program of Girl Scouting will be explained. Returning Girl Scouts and new members are both invited. If it is impossible to attend the registration meeting, please contact Linda Vermillion at 364-4019 or 364-3211.

Dinosaur tracks have shown that dinosaurs were able to run at speeds from 6 feet to 39 feet a second. Human athletes can achieve speeds of 33 feet a second. A horse can run more than 58 feet a second. Eighty-eight feet a second equals 60 miles an hour.

PENNY OLSON, HOWARD REINING

Couple to wed

Penny Lynn Olson of Amarillo and Howard Reining of Panhandle plan to exchange wedding vows Nov. 12 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Olson of Hereford and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Reining of Panhandle. Miss Olson is a 1981 graduate of Hereford High School and is employed by Taylor Petroleum, Inc. in Amarillo.

Reining is a 1979 graduate of Panhandle High School and is presently employed by K&K Inc. in White Deer.

White recognized by Texas Plains Girls Scout Council

Jane White of Hereford was honored recently during the annual meeting of the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council held in Plaza II of Amarillo National Bank.

White was presented a nationally recognized honor pin for service rendered to girls in the Hereford Service Unit and to the Council as a whole through service on the membership operating unit.

Having reared three daughters in Girl Scouting in years past, White was eager to be involved when Hereford organized its first Girl Scout troops a few years ago. "I guess the real love of my life has been watching girls grow in Girl Scouting," she explained.

In addition to being involved in Girl Scouting, the Hereford resident enjoys playing bridge, riding bicycles, volunteering in Republican politics, caring for the three family dogs and working in her yard and garden. She has also been employed by various eye doctors in the Panhandle area. She and her husband, Bob, reside at 535 Willow Lane.

JANE WHITE

White has been described as exemplifying the volunteer who makes a difference in the life of Hereford girls and girls across the seven counties served by Texas Plains Girl Scout Council.

Hereford couple renews wedding vows Saturday

MR. AND MRS. ERNEST GRIEGO

Rite of Installation to be conducted today

Monsignor Orville R. Blum will officially accept the duties today as pastor of St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Leroy T. Matthiesen, Bishop of the Diocese of Amarillo, will conduct the rite of Installation as Pastor, at the 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. liturgy services. The symbolic ceremony reflects the present day emphasis within Roman Catholic Church law concerning the role of the ministry of pastor.

Prior to his move to Hereford Sept. 1, Rev. Blum served seven years as pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in southwest Amarillo. Another significant accomplishment on the clergyman's record of many accomplishments since his ordination in 1962 is that of professor and principal of Alamo Catholic High School in Amarillo.

Msgr. Blum holds a position on the Diocesan Vocation Team, their main focus being encouraging and educating candidates for the priesthood for the Diocese of Amarillo. Presently, two seminarians, John Valdez and Jose Luis Medina, will work within the local church family as part of their training in church ministry. Fr. Hector Madrigal, ordained in 1987, serves as parochial vicar (associate).

The new pastor comes to Hereford as the first diocesan administrator since the Atonement Friars of Graymoor, Garrison, N.Y., established the mission church here in 1920. The Friars recently resigned from their services in this locale, due to lack of personnel to staff such as a large congregation.

Msgr. Blum says that the focus of his role as pastor will include two activities: to teach the faith (the main need being adult education) and to build community, thereby forming a faith community which is scripture based and nourished by liturgy. Grounded in many areas of education, teaching is a priority to this mild mannered clergyman.

MSGR. BLUM

Growing up on a farm in northern Illinois as the oldest of the seven children of Raymond and Erma Blum, Fr. Blum is anxious to get amid the farming atmosphere of his present parish family. Having attended the Josephinum Seminary of Worthington, Ohio, whose early emphasis was on ministry to the German speaking people, he feels that he can relate to the cultural background of the numerous German families of this area.

The elder Blums, now of Amarillo, and perhaps the priest's three sisters who also live in Amarillo will be present at the installation service and the parish family dinner which will follow the 11 a.m. liturgy service.

Get the most from fall clothing dollar

If you didn't buy fall and winter clothes last year — especially dresses, men's and women's suits or coats—be prepared for "sticker shock" when you begin shopping.

Last fall consumers stayed away from the stores and for the first time in 20 years, annual sales of women's apparel fell, according to U.S. Commerce Department figures. The buying slump has continued through 1988, although retailers hope sales will pick up this season.

Industry sources have blamed the drop in clothing sales both on a rejection of recent clothing styles, such as last season's short skirts, and prices, which rose 7.3% in 1987 and continue to inch up this year.

"The higher prices may encourage consumers to be more conscious of what they're getting for their money, especially in the big ticket fall and winter clothes like wool suits," said Dr. Ann Beard, a clothing and textiles specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M University.

Although the price of raw wool has doubled in the past year, that's not the only cause for increasing higher wool clothing prices this fall, according to Rita Kourlis, director of wool marketing for the American Wool Council in Denver.

"The cost of the wool is only about 3 percent of this retail price for the finished garment. So in a $300 suit only about $10 goes for the wool," she said.

"There's somewhat of a trickier effect, with the cost of wool yarn and fabric increasing as the price for raw wool goes up," Kourlis said. "However, the labor to produce a garment is by far the greatest expense."

Rising clothing costs may mean consumers hang onto the clothes in their closets for another year, or adopt some different strategies for shopping.

"Consumers have a number of options for making sure they get the most for their investment in clothing," said Beard, who prepares educational materials for Extension consumer courses held throughout the state.

Use should be the first consideration, she said. Paying for high quality fabrics, good construction and classic styling is more important in those clothes you will wear frequently and expect to have for some time, rather than those worn only once in a while.

"Many retailers will feature winter clothes made with wool blends, rather than 100 percent wool, to keep consumer's costs down. Wool blends have many excellent features, but have less breathability than the pure wool fabrics," she said. "A lighter weight wool or wool blend may also be a better investment since it can be worn for a longer period of time in our Texas climate."

In addition to styling and fabric content, Beard suggests checking for signs of quality construction. "Some manufacturers of clothing in all price ranges may skimp on workmanship, materials or quality inspections to keep prices from rising faster."

"For example, check to see that seams are flat and wide enough to withstand normal stress, buttons or other fasteners are sewn on securely and all openings are smooth and flat," she said.

Hints from Heloise

MOTHBALL ODOR

Dear Heloise: Last winter I put mothballs in some of my dresser drawers. Now I can't get the odor out. I took them outside and put them in the sun. I also washed them down with a mild soap, but nothing worked.

How can I remove the odor? —Janice Lawrence, Denver, Colo.

Make a mixture of equal parts of rubbing alcohol and vinegar or lemon juice. This solution should counteract the odor of the mothballs. Moisten a sponge in the solution and wipe down the interior of the drawers. It may take several applications.

You can put the drawers out in the sun for a short while so the wood dries thoroughly. —Heloise

FIX BROOM

Dear Heloise: I've just gone through my third broom in less than six months. I can't imagine why the threads on my broom handle wear down so fast.

I tried gluing the broom back on the handle but it came apart. Can you tell me what I can do to salvage it? I hate the thought of buying another one. —Mary Kelly, Phoenix, Ariz.

Don't throw it away. It can be fixed very easily. Just wrap some adhesive tape around the threads of the handle and screw the handle back on. If it is still loose, add some more tape.

Circle to support cancer patients

A volunteer organization called the Circle of Friends is expanding its circle for new members in the Hereford area. Throughout the year, Friends work in support of cancer patients and the programs which benefit them. There are over a 1,000 Circle of Friends members in the Panhandle region.

The Hereford Circle of Friends will host a membership party for the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center Circle of Friends on Sept. 17 at 7 p.m. The party will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Witherspoon. Reservations are being accepted by Mrs. Milton Rudder, party chairman. Annual membership dues are $15 per person or $25 per couple.

The group provides needy cancer patients with financial assistance for out-of-pocket expenses not covered by insurance. Every year, more than $12,000 is donated for costs such as travel, nutritional supplements and lodging. An informational brochure is available so physicians, social workers and patients may be aware of the services available to them.

The Circle of Friends also helps support the research and patient care programs of The Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center in Amarillo. Over 218 patients from Hereford have received care at Harrington Cancer Center. Volunteers participate in special events and generate interest and support for the Cancer Center throughout the communities of the Panhandle.

The major fundraising project involves the sales of original Christmas card designs. Each year the Circle of Friends sponsors an art contest for Panhandle school children to create designs for the following year's cards.

The "Caring Touch" collection is distinguished by its "Good News" bear, a winning design from the first contest and perennial favorite. The Circle of Friends leadership recently negotiated with Neiman-Marcus to carry selected designs from the "Caring Touch" collection. The cards will be available in all 22 of the Neiman-Marcus stores across the country.

New yearbooks reviewed by La Afflatus Estudio Club

1988-89 yearbooks were reviewed when members of La Afflatus Estudio Club met Tuesday morning for their first meeting of the new club year and a brunch in the home of Emily Suggs.

During the business session members also examined the new 'eclectic' program year. The word eclectic means selecting or choosing from various sources; not following any one system but selecting whatever is considered best in the accepted idea.

The yearbook committee's programs were presented and accepted by the group and reports were heard from various members on their summer activities. It was announced that Mary Williamson will serve as new president. Members of the yearbook committee served brunch to members already mentioned as well as Alberta Higgins, Virginia Beasley, Bea Hutson, Lola Jewell, Lydia Hopson, Eva Gilliland, Etoile Manning, Aileen Montgomery, Pet Ott and Opal Eliston.

The next meeting was set Sept. 20 in the home of Mrs. Hutson.
The yearbook is dedicated to the memory of Treasa Hale who died March 29, 1988. She was honored by the club several years ago with a life membership.

Judds will be featured in upcoming special

NEW YORK (AP) — The Judds, the mother-daughter team that bounded out of nowhere to country music stardom less than five years ago, will get their rags-to-riches story told in a fall special on CBS. "People will have a chance to see us on the road and see what it's like to go through what we're going through, the pressures of being so close professionally and personally," says Wynonna Judd, 24. "We filmed all day long yesterday in Colesburg, Ky., where Mama's brother, who's a Baptist preacher, has a small church."

As the Judds toured on the country music circuit this summer, TV cameras also followed them to New York, Iowa, California and Tennessee.

Naomi Judd, who is 18 years older than her daughter but looks more like her sister, says, "The image we have right now is that we're almost joined at the lips. We share a common bond in music. We're alike in a lot of ways, but we're very different. The director thinks that's interesting enough to investigate in-depth."

The Judds popped into country music prominence in 1984. While Wynonna was in high school they had shunned honky-tonks and practiced at home, working on Wynonna's singing and acoustic guitar playing and Naomi's harmonizing, and the family image they wanted to project.

"We got signed at a live audition," Naomi says. "We didn't have biographies or photographs, had never had a band or played in public."

A deal was made with Curb Records and RCA. Brent Maher has produced all their albums, using arranger Don Potter, top country songwriters and sticking to the presentation the Judds already had worked out.

"When our first single ("Had a Dream") was on the radio, I was working full time as a nurse and Wynonna was a temporary secretary," Naomi says.

After the second single, "Mama He's Crazy," reached No. 1 on the country charts, the Judds still had flea-market furniture and unmatched dishes.

When the Country Music Association presented awards in October 1984, the Judds won the Horizon Award, essentially meaning "best new act." The CMA named them vocal group of the year and they also won Grammy Awards for best country performance by a duo or group, the following three years.

"Mom and I haven't always had it this wonderful," Wynonna says.

Naomi still turns off lights when she leaves a room and clips grocery coupons. "All my life I felt I was a face in the crowd, not having any money," she says.

Naomi has another daughter, Ashley, who has finished her sophomore year at the University of Kentucky, studying French, history and art history. She is not a singer, but Naomi says, "In the summer we like to take her out and slam her around on the road a little bit. I don't want her to think that it's easy. Last year I paid her $10 a day to be bus engineer. It meant cleaning the bus." Ashley declined the position this year.

Naomi took back her maiden name, Judd, after she was divorced in California and returned with her daughters to her native Kentucky. "We'd been in Hollywood seven years," Naomi says. "They were thinking Hollywood was home and normal. We went to Morrill, Ky. It had maybe 200 people.

"We lived on a hilltop, didn't have a telephone or TV. I wanted them to develop their imaginations and play together. They worked in the garden, learned about animals."

Naomi entered nursing school; Wynonna began singing.

"Mom had a guitar someone had given her," she says. "I had a friend who would teach me. Someone gave me a book. I guess I'm lucky to have an ear for learning. I would listen to the radio and try to get all I could, teaching myself.

"We would buy discount records. We didn't have the money for full-price albums. It caused us to discover all these weird but wonderful types of music. My first influence was Bluegrass."

Only Ashley lives with her mother now. Wynonna bought a small farm in Franklin, Tenn., "close enough to call Mom to say I'm coming over."

Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write, W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

FIRST DRUG PROGRAM

NEW YORK (AP) — The first residential drug treatment program in the Eastern United States was founded in New York in 1963.

Since then Daytop has treated more than 53,000 substance abusers. The program places the individual in a tightly controlled environment with a non-institutional setting under the supervision of former drug abusers and professional specialists.

Nearly 1,800 people are in treatment on a daily basis and some stay as long as 18 months. A five year follow-up study claims that 92 percent of Daytop's graduates have remained drug free, crime free and are employed on in school.

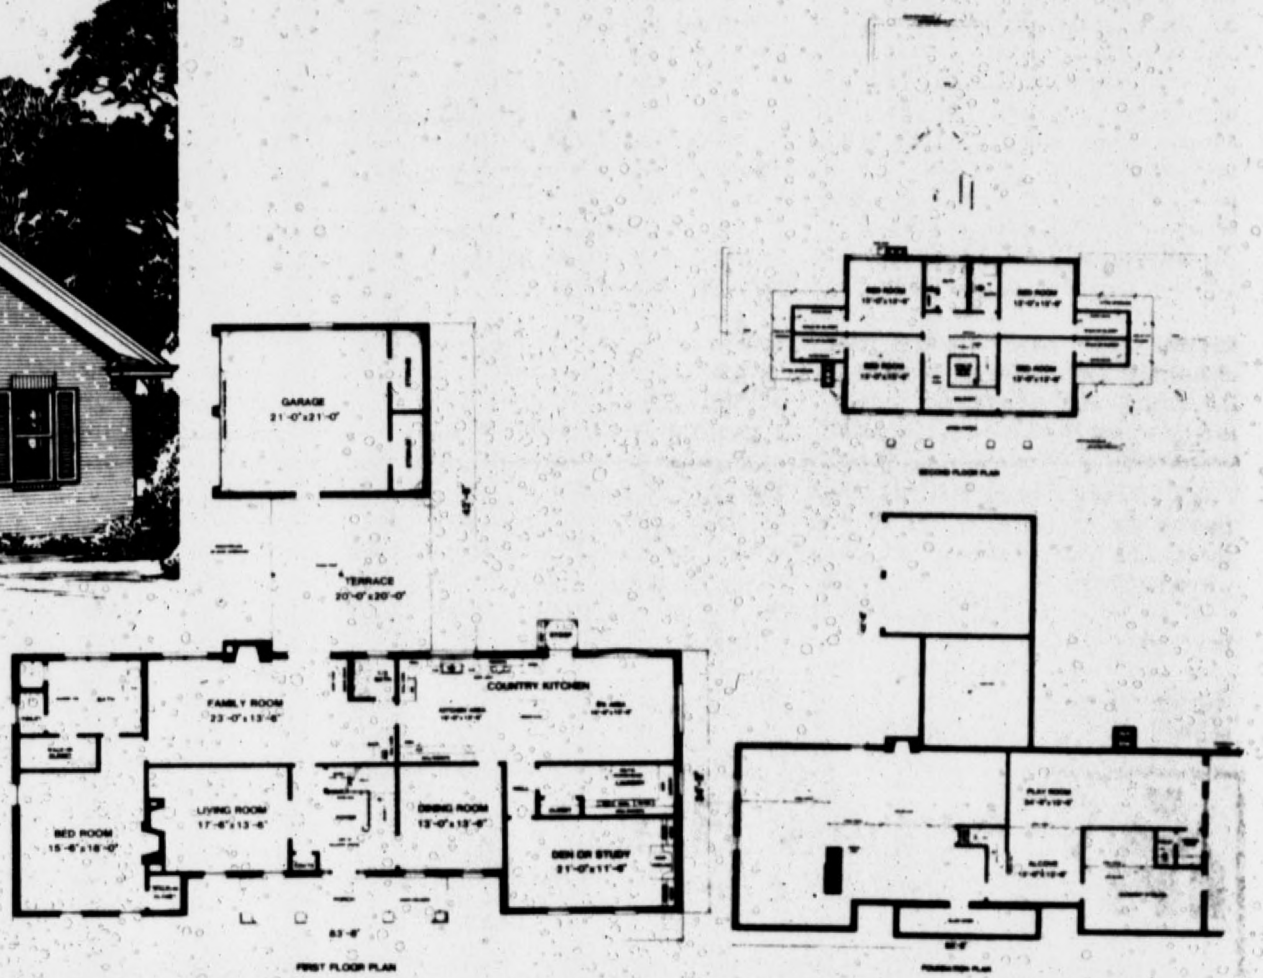

Some people once believed hitting banana trees would encourage their fruitfulness.

Coating, painting metal is a no-rust must

As nature abhors a vacuum, metal abhors the combination of air and moisture. Those two ingredients continually attack metal in the form of rust and corrosion. Keep them away from metal and the rust-corrosion process is stopped before it begins.

While paint is the traditional defense against rust because it seals out the corrosive forces, the fact is that such things as air conditioners, gutters, hinges, locks and hundreds of other items around the house are attacked and fouled by rust. Wear and the elements take their toll on paint. It requires only the tiniest break in the sealed surface to permit the entry of air and moisture. While air and moisture begin the corrosion, pollutants such as salt, carbon, sulphur dioxide and dozens of other chemicals and elements accelerate the deterioration. More and more we are resorting to coating systems that provide long-lasting, rust-fighting qualities. The idea is to prevent the rust, or, if it already has started, keep it from spreading.

While the new fast-drying coatings are ideally suited for use on metal, wood, masonry and galvanized iron and aluminum, it is vital the items being treated are cleaned and prepared prior to coating applications. The removal of loose rust is essential to the long-term performance of any rust preventive coating. Rust scale, loose paint or anything that isn't solidly attached must be taken off with a wire brush or scraper. Dust, grease and oil must be washed off with a detergent solution and rinsed with water. You then follow the manufacturer's instructions on the kind of primer to apply before the new paint or other finish is applied. The priming is especially important when your scraping or brushing has exposed bare metal. If any previous finish has any gloss to it, light sanding or steel wooling will remove the shine and enable the coatings to adhere.

Every so often, you may not wish to apply one of the rust-inhibiting color paints, electing instead to restore the original galvanized finish. This would be true, for instance, in the case of a trash container or a chain link fence. In that event, go through the regular wire-brushing system to remove loose rust, followed by a coat of primer. Then, instead of using a finish color of your choice, apply a galvanizing compound. It is quick drying and can be purchased wherever rust-inhibiting paints are sold. This compound is formulated to provide the same kind of protection as the original hot galvanized finish. Many persons, however, prefer to give the trash containers or chain link fences a new color, in which case silver and green are excellent choices.

Corrosion can occur when two different metals are in contact with each other and exposed to elements such as salt water, bleach or a strong detergent. Aluminum and steel in contact with each other produce harmful results. If, let us say, steel nails are used to install aluminum gutters, corrosion is almost inevitable. The same thing would happen if copper gutters were used with aluminum or galvanized downspouts. Many other such combinations produce corrosion, including what is called stress corrosion, which takes place if certain metals are used with certain chemicals.

What happens when a metal cannot be painted or otherwise coated? Some tool blades, for example, must remain very much as they are in order to cut properly. In that case, a light coat of oil or a spray lubricant will provide protection. Incidentally, in all cases of protection — paint, oil, lubricant or anything else — the item must be completely protected. If you paint, paint it all. If you oil it, oil it all. A single unprotected spot can permit the entrance of air and moisture, which means rusting is inevitable. It merely will take a little longer than if you left it completely unprotected.

Q. — I am a woman who has never had to fix anything in her life. Is there any place where I can learn about such things?

A. — Many educational systems have adult education courses. Check your local school authorities to see whether there is a course on home repairs. Also, go to your community library and ask to see some books on do-it-yourselfing for the novice. Your local bookstore is likely to carry such books. Several have come out in recent years geared to repairs women can handle, which means most of them.

A. — You recently said cleaning paint off the bricks on an entire house was a tough job that might better be handled by a company that does sandblasting. There is a contractor in our area who advertises a chemical cleaning system without blasting. Any opinion?

A. — Modern chemicals being what they are, no reason it should not work. One company which has come to our attention offers a free no-obligation demonstration. If you can get such a test and the price fits your budget, it might solve your problem.

Q. — Enjoyed your article on attic insulation. Thought I would pass along a tip, having insulated several attics over the years. Always work from the outer edges of the attic towards the center. In that way, whenever any cutting or fitting is necessary, it can be done at the center, where there is plenty of room, rather than at the edges, where there isn't.

A. — Thanks. —
A. — Our back porch is made of wood painted a kind of gray color. We notice the steps are a little slippery after it rains. Is there something we can put on the wood to make it less slippery under wet conditions?

A. — The easiest way to make the steps non-slippery is to apply some porch paint to the entire structure, including the steps. While the paint is still wet, sprinkle some sand on the parts that will be walked on. When the paint is thoroughly dry, the sanded portions will be non-slippery.

Q. — We have an old dining room table we would like to paint. Is it necessary to remove the old varnish finish?

A. — You can paint over varnish only if the remaining sheen is removed. This can be done by sandpapering or steel wooling the varnish or using a liquid chemical that accomplishes the same thing. Paint does not grip properly when applied to a glossy surface.

Q. — Squeaks come from the floor in our dining room. I read about how to eliminate them by going into the basement and working from underneath the floor, but my basement has a finished ceiling. I know about working from the top by driving nails into the squeaky areas through the joists, but I have no idea how to locate the joists.

A. — Professionals do it by sound. Place a block of wood over the suspected area and hit it with a hammer. If there is a joist underneath, there will be a solid sound. If there is no joist, there will be a hollow sound. Sometimes, it takes a while to get the knack, but if you test a few times you will notice the difference. Like studs, joists usually are spaced 16 inches apart. Also, they usually run at right angles to the floor boards. When it is necessary that the floor remain in good condition to the eye, hammer each nail until it is a fraction of an inch from the top of the floor, then drive it a little below the surface with a nailset. Cover the tiny hole with wood putty or wood plastic and sand smooth. After you locate the joists, drive in two nails at a time. Slant them so that the bottoms of the nails almost meet in the joist and form a V. This strengthens the connection.

Q. — The concrete floor in our garage is in bad shape and I want to put another layer of concrete over it. I have been told that only about an inch of new concrete is needed to provide a new, smooth surface. Is this so and will the new concrete adhere well to the old?

A. — Oddly enough, the rougher and more uneven the old concrete is, the better the new will cling to it. In fact, some professional workers deliberately roughen up the old surface with a cold chisel and hammer before adding new concrete. Just to be sure, though, you had better apply a special bonding preparation that is sold in home centers or wherever sand, gravel and the like are sold. It is put on just before applying the new concrete.

Q. — I had hoped to handle the wallpapering in an old house we bought recently but I cannot spare the time. I intend to hire a professional. Is there some way I can be sure of getting a good one?

A. — Use the standards you would apply to the hiring of a contractor for any job. The first thing you should do is to try for a recommendation from a friend or relative who has had similar work done. That's usually the best way to hire a contractor for anything. A local wallpaper dealer also may be able to help you. In any case, get two or three estimates. And remember the cost of the installation will depend on the kind of wallpaper you select. The U.S. School of Professional Paperhanging, 16 Chaplin Ave., Rutland, VT 05701, will provide you with a free copy of "A Guide to Professional Wallcovering Installation" if you send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope.)

Here's An Idea That Can Strengthen Your Family

Tonight at the dinner table, read something out loud to your family. Tomorrow night, let another member read something. A news story. A Bible verse. A Robert Frost poem. A cereal box panel. History. Humor. Anything. Each night a different family member can read a selection. Imagine the wide range of subjects your family will read in 365 days. What a stimulating way to have your children develop good reading habits. We have 23 million illiterate adults in America. We wouldn't have one, if each of them had been served reading as part of their nightly diet. It's non-fattening, but enriching. And it doesn't cost a dime.

Cutlass Supreme International Series

The Cutlass Supreme International Series is a new generation of Oldsmobile. It challenges the best the world has to offer, with built in advantages like front wheel drive,

OLDSMOBILE.

A proud sponsor of the

four-wheel power disc brakes, fully independent suspension and a multiport fuel injected V6 engine. A sophisticated ride and handling system, power rack and pinion steering and available anti-lock braking system add incredible responsiveness and control. State of the art aerodynamic design is combined with low-profile performance radials on aluminum styled 16-inch wheels, fascia mounted foglamps and wraparound glass to create style that's truly a step ahead.

What's more, on the inside, Cutlass Supreme International Series is just as striking as it is on the outside. An electronic digital instrument cluster translates every driving function. Climate and sound systems can be controlled with available steering wheel touch controls. And contour front bucket seats with power-operated lumbar and side bolster supports tune the seating for extraordinary driving comfort.

Cutlass Supreme International Series. The new world-class competitor. Visit your nearby Olds dealer for a test drive today. You'll agree that this generation of Oldsmobile will be hard to beat.
