Wednesday, June 17, 1992The Hereford Brand*Hustlin' Hereford, home of Maggie Guerrero*91st Year, No. 246, Hereford, Deaf Smith County, Texas*10 Pages*25 Cents*City may get $35 million plant

Hereford is being considered as the site for a cheese plant and a local industrial development group has already obtained an option on land and met with company officials, it was revealed Tuesday.

Associated Milk Producers, Inc. (AMPI), the nation's largest dairy farmer cooperative, is proposing to build the $35 million cheese processing plant. AMPI had corporate sale in 1991 of $2.8 billion. It has 18,400 member farms in 20 states.

It is estimated the plant would process 100 million pounds of milk a month and employ about 125 people. Gross sales of $15 million a month are projected.

The contact with the company was initiated by John Hafliger, county dairyman. He said the firm was talking about locating a plant at Clovis or Portales, N.M. He solicited the help of Henry Reid, Dr. David Purdy, Wayne Winget and Mike Hatley to study the possibilities of getting the firm to locate in Hereford. The group asked Speedy Nieman, who served as the prison task force chairman, to act as temporary chairman of the study. He is current chairman of the chamber's industrial development committee.

A meeting has been held with interested community leaders, including representatives from the city, county, chamber and Hereford Industrial Foundation. The group has obtained an option to purchase 386 acres of land for use as an industrial park.

The site, approved by AMPI should the plant be located here, is the Flowers farm, which lies south of Caviness Packing and runs along the railroad track west for about a mile. The legal description is Section 131, Block M-7. AMPI wants a rail spur at its site.

Nieman said the group is awaiting other specific information from AMPI, and will probably elect a task force chairman and committee leaders at the next meeting of the group.

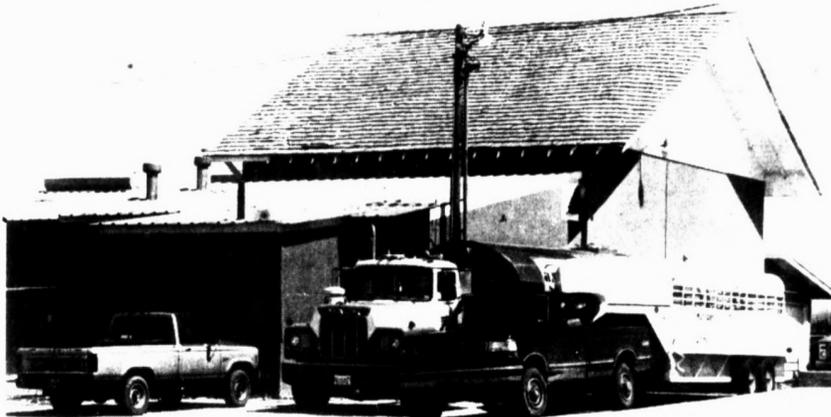

Louis Hinders, a Canyon dairyman and board president for AMPI's southern region, said the West Texas and eastern New Mexico area boasts the fastest growing dairy industry in the U.S. In 1991, AMPI members in this area produced 41,400 truck tanker loads, an increase of 46 percent in milk production over 1990.

Dairyman are moving to the area because environmental regulations are less stringent because of low rainfall. The ability to control waste material is enhanced because dairies aren't close to rivers and streams.

Hinders said the plant could open at full production because 40 dairy farmers are committed to signing on with a new plant in this area. He pointed out that this is not a seasonal industry; the labor force associated with dairy farms and plants will work 365 days per year.

In addition to the estimated 125 plant employees, AMPI anticipates 100 drivers would be needed, as well as an increase in the number of dairy farm labor jobs. And, total sales would increase for business in the community, such as tractors, trailers, tires, fuel, farm equipment, animal health products, and more.

Dairy industry: booming for region

Hafliger Dairy, one of three in the Hereford vicinity, could help Hereford land a new $35 cheese processing plant. Associated Milk Producers Inc. (one of their trucks is parked just behind the pickup and trailer) is seriously considering locating the plant near Hereford.

DSGH okays doctor contracts

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District board Tuesday authorized hospital administrator Ron Rives to negotiate contracts with three physicians now in residency training.

The three will be offered stipends during their residencies in return for a commitment to set up practices in Hereford on completion of their training. All three doctors and their wives recently visited here.

Rives said the physician recruitment task force and members of the medical staff have met with three other doctors seeking a place to start practice immediately. Two are still considering Hereford, while one decided to set up a family practice in Oklahoma.

In other business Tuesday night during the regular monthly board meeting, directors reviewed the operations report, approved the payroll and accounts payable report, accepted the resignation of Raymond Schroeder, and tabled board committee appointments due to the absence of board president John Perrin. Mal Manchec, vice president, presided at the meeting.

Schroeder, Hereford Junior High principal, will be moving from Hereford after accepting a high school principal's job in Longview. No action was taken on his replacement on the board.

The three doctors who may commit to practicing here include Dr. Glen Alford, who will complete his training in Odessa in two years; and doctors Bruce Clarke and Steve Lawless, who have three years of residency remaining. Dr. Clarke, a Hereford High graduate, will be training in Boise, Idaho, and Dr. Lawless will be in Chapel Hill, S.C.

The financial report showed net patient service revenue for May was up about $100,000 over April. The year-to-date total is slightly over $3 million, compared to $2.9 million a year ago. An operations loss of $19,070 was recorded, compared to a loss of $209,336 last month. With tax revenue added in, a net of $38,183 was reflected for May. Year-to-date totals show net revenues of $903,786, compared to a loss of $43,656 a year ago.

Average daily census at the hospital is still below comparative totals a year ago. May's average was 10.4, down from 13.2 in April. Year-to-date average daily census totals are 11.6, compared to 14.4 a year ago.

Rives reported an increase in activity for the Home Health Care department, with revenue totaling $40,155 in May. The EMS department made 102 ambulance calls during the past month and logged 83 transports. Revenue collected for May was $15,272.

The board is now receiving a physicians activity report, which shows admissions and revenue generation by each doctor on the staff.

Directors present for the meeting were Manchec, Schroeder, Dr. Robert Bidwell, Boyd Foster, and Merle Clark. Absent were Perrin and Paul Abalos.

WEINBERGER

Weinberger, two others are indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Iran-Contra scandal could offer up three politically embarrassing criminal trials in this election year, including that of former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The CIA's role in the Reagan administration's worst scandal will be laid out in detail if prosecutions go forward against two former high-ranking CIA officials. One of them, Clair George, the spy agency's retired operations chief, is scheduled to go on trial next month.

Weinberger's indictment Tuesday on five felony charges of lying and obstruction adds a new dimension to what prosecutors say has been a high-level coverup.

Weinberger is accused of concealing the existence of 1,700 pages of personal notes that allegedly contradict his congressional testimony of five years ago. He told Congress he knew nothing in 1985 about arms sales to Iran and was unaware of Saudi Arabian financial assistance to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Weinberger knew a lot about both, according to the federal grand jury indictment.

His notes also say he was told in November 1985 that President Reagan had authorized a shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran, according to the indictment. The notes also show that a few days after that shipment, Weinberger told Reagan that such arms deliveries were illegal, the indictment added.

The indictment also said Weinberger lied to FBI agents and Iran-Contra prosecutors when he allegedly told them he rarely took notes. Prosecutor Craig Gillen said his office discovered Weinberger's notes from 1985 and 1986 in the Library of Congress.

State officials tell schools: no new state funds

AUSTIN (AP) - State leaders are telling school superintendents not to expect a tax increase for public education in the next legislative session.

"There will be no new state money for public education next biennium and you can expect per pupil state aid to remain, at best, constant," said the letter signed by Gov. Ann Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

They said the state cannot raise the additional $3 billion that would have been required under the current funding law for 1993-94 and 1994-95. That law was found to violate the state constitution by the Texas Supreme Court, which gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993, to come up with a new plan.

At the same time, the letter says increases of $617 million in state funding and $626 million in county education district money should go ahead as planned in the upcoming school year.

It urges school districts to "make a fair accounting of this increase to their taxpayers and not to raise local taxes beyond what is necessary to maintain current per-student revenue."

But Dan Casey of the Texas Association of School Boards said holding to current revenues per student only makes sense "if you're faced with current costs per student."

That's not what's happening, he said, citing inflation and the cost of paying for required state programs.

Casey said that the letter "implies that school boards and school districts like to raise property taxes. That's not the case. They don't have anyone else to turn to when they are faced with rising costs."

The letter from state leaders was included in a Texas Education Agency budgeting packet, in which Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno told administrators that the $617 million in new state aid is not enough to fully fund current law.

Six men get probated sentences

Six men received probation Tuesday after entering guilty pleas to charges in 222nd District Court in Hereford.

Martin Diaz, 38, was sentenced to five years probation on each of two charges of felony driving while intoxicated to be served concurrently. He also was fined $500 on each charge, assessed community service of 160 hours, and his driver's license was suspended for 180 days.

A five-year probated term was given Oscar Gavina, 26, for felony driving while intoxicated. He was fined $1,500 and must provide 160 hours of community service.

Gilberto Martinez, 29, received a five-year probated term for driving while intoxicated. A fine of $1,500 was levied in addition to 160 hours of community service.

An eight-year probated sentence was given Paul Don Campbell, 33, for theft over $750 but under $20,000. He must perform 160 hours of community service and was fined $1,500.

Jesus Maldonado, 56, was given five years probation for tampering with government records. He was ordered to make restitution of $1,370.50 and serve 160 hours in the community.

Lawmaker wants inspection change for nursing homes

AUSTIN (AP) - A state lawmaker has suggested that Texas may want to look at subcontracting the job of licensing inspections of nursing homes to a private, non-profit group.

Rep. Jack Vowell, R-El Paso, raised the idea Tuesday, in the wake of complaints about inconsistent licensing inspections of nursing homes.

The Legislative Health and Human Services Board asked Richard Ladd, the state's new health and human services commissioner, to look at the idea along with other options for changing regulation of long-term care facilities. Ladd will make recommendations to the Legislature.

Vowell said there was concern that Texas Department of Health inspections of some long-term care facilities focused on technicalities rather than whether patients were happy and healthy.

He emphasized the state still would set standards under his proposal, and that licensing would be done by a group such as the one that currently licenses Texas hospitals, the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organizations.

Janice Caldwell, chief of the Department of Health's Bureau of Longterm Care, said staff could research Vowell's idea.

But she said she believes the plan would not be allowed by the federal Social Security Act, under which the federal government contracts with the state to do Medicare and Medicaid certification inspections.

She said waivers are allowed for demonstration projects, for example, but she did not know if one could be obtained in this case.

Ms. Caldwell said a training program has been instituted regarding licensing. "I know there are things we need to do better, and I'm working on them."

Under a state law reorganizing health and human services, the licensing of nursing homes is scheduled to be transferred to the Department of Human Services, which administers Medicaid funds. Ms. Caldwell said the same people still would be involved, but would work for a different agency.

Sen. Chet Brooks, who like Vowell serves on the legislative board, said he was concerned about reports of inconsistency in licensing inspections by Health Department survey teams.

Brooks, a Pasadena Democrat who heads the Senate Health and Human Services Committee, said some teams work with nursing homes to ensure quality care, but in other regions, "it's playing 'gotcha.'"

"They go out there and find all kinds of little nit-picking things," Brooks said, such as "a spot on the floor."

Pat Cole, Gov. Ann Richards' health and human services director, said the governor supports consistent surveys but that she had not looked at the idea of subcontracting the work.

Ms. Cole said there is now "tremendous inconsistency" in inspections.

"We hear from the nursing homes, and I know it's true, that there are times when the investigators look at very insignificant things in terms of patient care," she said. "What the governor wants is consistent enforcement and the maximum attention paid to those factors that truly affect health and safety."

Sara Speights of the Texas Health Care Association, which represents 850 of more than 1,100 licensed nursing homes in the state, called Vowell's idea "viable."

AMA encourages physicians to ask about battering

NEW YORK (AP) - Doctors should routinely ask women patients about domestic violence and help battered women find safety, the American Medical Association says.

The new AMA guidelines suggest asking women such questions as whether their partner has hurt them physically or threatened to, forced them into having sex, made them feel afraid, or kept them from leaving the house, seeing friends or getting a job.

Before asking, the doctor should make an opening statement like, "Because abuse and violence are so common in women's lives, I've begun to ask about it routinely," the guidelines say.

The document suggests such screening of all women seen in emergency, surgical, primary care, pediatric, prenatal and mental health settings.

In fact, "this is for every doctor in this country," AMA Vice Chairman Dr. Robert McAfee said after the guidelines were released Tuesday.

Surgeon General Dr. Antonia Novello called the guidelines a beginning. "I still believe we have a long way to go," she said.

Doctors must overcome denial and apathy about domestic violence, she said. "I think the time has come to take the issue of domestic violence out of the shadows and out of the closet," she said. "We can be part of the solution."

She also stressed that domestic violence can occur outside of a marriage, in dating or in relationships that have ended in divorce or separation.

The guidelines say that a doctor who finds that a woman has been battered should inquire about her safety and discuss options for safety before she leaves the office.

The patient should be offered written information on legal options, counseling, shelters, crisis intervention programs and community services, the guidelines say.

Domestic violence is a pattern of coercion that can include repeated battering and injury, psychological abuse, sexual assault, progressive social isolation, deprivation and intimidation, the AMA guidelines say, and it "cuts across all racial, ethnic, religious, educational and socioeconomic lines."

Nearly a quarter of women in the United States will be abused at some point in their lives, and 30 percent of women murdered in 1990 were killed by husbands or boyfriends, the guidelines say.

They also say doctors should consider the possibility that a woman was assaulted if she offers an implausible explanation for an injury, or if there was a delay in seeking medical care for an injury. The stress of living in an abusive relationship may also cause such problems as chronic pain, gynecologic troubles or disturbances in sleep and appetite, the guidelines say.

The AMA also released a study from this week's Journal of the American Medical Association that said a brief survey could detect abuse during pregnancy. The survey asks whether the woman has been physically hurt or forced into sex.

When used with 691 women receiving prenatal care at public clinics in Houston and Baltimore, it found a 17 percent rate of physical or sexual abuse during pregnancy. That is more than double the rates found in previous reports, the researchers said.

In response, the March of Dimes Birth Defects Association said prenatal care should include routine assessment for physical abuse.

Richards says Bush lags on energy policy

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards says the Bush administration cannot form a national energy policy because it practices divisive politics.

"This White House has been really experienced in dividing Americans," Richards said Tuesday. "I don't think they know how to bring Americans together. In the instance of an energy policy, that's exactly what has to be done."

Speaking to the Texas Energy Policy Partnership, Richards blamed President Bush the lack of a national energy policy, and urged states to develop their own energy programs to try to force the federal government's hand.

"No single state can dictate the foreign policy of this nation, but with the vacuum that we have seen existing and the unwillingness to face controversy ... it has become incumbent on the individual states to do it," she said.

The energy group is headed by Texas Railroad Commission Chairwoman Lena Guerrero and is trying to put together a state legislative package to strengthen the energy industry.

"I never understood why it is the federal government has been unwilling to address what to me is a very basic and fundamental issue for this nation, and that is a national energy policy," Richards said.

"It's the most peculiar behavior that I've ever seen. It's irresponsible," said Richards, a Democrat who supports Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton for president.

She said that after the Persian Gulf War she thought there would be a move to strengthen the domestic energy industry to avoid dependence on foreign oil. "But nothing has been forthcoming," she said.

She said the Bush administration's policy seems to be to buy foreign oil, which is more expensive in the long run when factoring in the costs of defending that supply.

Later Richards told reporters, "The sad part of it is that we will continue on this pattern that we would use war as a substitute for a national energy policy."

Richards said she didn't want to "say anything unkind" about Bush, but added, "It has either been a myopia, and a rather cynical myopia, or it has been a situation where he simply doesn't like to address controversial issues."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have just seen another program on television involving incest between a father and his daughters.

I have questions about this subject that have bothered me for a long time. Please tell me why mothers don't protect their daughters from this kind of sexual abuse. Most mothers must be aware of what is happening, yet they stand by and do nothing.

Are they in denial? Are they so dependent on their husbands financially that they are afraid to rock the boat? Are they grateful to be relieved of their sexual obligations? Are they afraid of the shame that would result if the situation became known to outsiders? Or are they so self-absorbed that they really don't care about anyone but themselves?

It appears that many mothers are shirking their responsibility to their children. Why can't they love their daughters enough to risk confronting their husbands and even take legal action if necessary? Why must girls be victimized and left feeling abandoned by those they depend on?

Please do not use my name or address if you print my letter. Just give me some answers.--East Hanover, N.J.

DEAR N.J.: The possibilities you've come up with are as good as any I know of. But don't assume that all mothers are too cowardly or self-absorbed to take action.

I've had women write and tell me that they've kicked out husbands who sexually abused their young daughters. Some of the women even say that if their husband so much as comes near the girls again they'll kill him and pay the price, whatever it might be.

I'm always heartened when I hear from those mothers because father-daughter incest creates such enormous psychological damage and is so crippling that it often takes years of therapy to set the girls straight.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What can be done about a person who never stops talking?

My husband wakes up in the morning with his mouth in gear. If I turn on the radio for the news, I can't hear it because my husband is talking. Ditto for the TV. If I try to read the newspaper, I can't concentrate because he won't shut up. He just loves to get the news first. If I happen to learn about something first, he says, "I already knew that."

The man thinks he's an expert on every subject from the trivial to the crucial. He comes up with the damdest arguments to positions expressed on TV by genuine authorities. His rebuttals can go on for hours. When he finds himself without an audience, he talks to himself. He insists on answering the phone every time it rings because it gives him an opportunity to indulge in his favorite sport--talking.

Bedtime offers no relief from his marathon monologues. If I turn in early in an effort to escape his chatter, he wakes me up to talk.

In all fairness, I should tell you that the man has a lot of charm, is well-informed and possesses many good qualities, but he leaves me no space. Any ideas on how to escape? No name, please, just--Mrs. Weary Ears in the west

DEAR MRS. W.E.: If you haven't tried the radio with earphones, I recommend it. When Motormouth gets to the annoying stage, plug the radio in and tune him out. I realize this is an extreme measure, but the man sounds impossible.

Gem of the Day: A good motto for overly busy people: Don't just DO something. Sit there.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Residents' daughter invited to publish

Karol Cox of Belton, daughter of Philip and Rose Mary Shook of Hereford, was invited to publish an article she wrote with the Journal of Instructional Psychology magazine.

Cox, an 11th grade counselor at Belton High School, had submitted her work to the magazine for a requirement in a class she was taking at the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor where she was working toward her masters degree. She graduated from UMHB on May 16, ten weeks after giving birth to her daughter, Kayci Lynn.

Cox's article, entitled "Obsessions? Compulsions? Do Educators Contribute?", is about obsessive/compulsive personality disorders and raises the questions: do educators and the educational system contribute to its onset? Do they unknowingly encourage it in their students?

Cox said that she hasn't decided whether to accept the magazine's offer or not. If she does, the paper will be published in the Journal's March, 1993 issue. She said, "If I let them publish it, I think it's be referenced in the Library of Congress...on microfiche and everything."

A 1981 Hereford High School graduate, Cox graduated from West Texas State University in 1986. She has taught at Copperas Cove for three years before coming to Belton four years ago. After teaching for three years, she moved into the 11th grade counselors office at the start of the school year. In addition to her masters work, she has been working on certification as a licensed professional counselor. Her high school principal at Belton is Pat Hughes, her former Hereford junior high school principal.

Bran bread rises first at food show

Producing a dish with "a lot of nutritional value" was what prompted a Johnson County 4-H member to make bran bread for a winning entry in the Texas 4-H Food Show June 9 at Texas A&M University.

Joy Davis of Grandview said she made the dish, which won first place in the breads and cereal category, because she realizes how important nutrition is when it comes to health.

"Without proper nutrition, you are more susceptible to diseases and your body will not function properly," she said. "Bran bread is a good choice to add to any meal. It's simple and just about anyone can make it."

Joy, the daughter of Ken and Missy Davis, will be a junior at Grandview High School this fall. The 16-year-old gives credit to her mother, who is also her volunteer leader, for inspiring her to pursue her goals. At a separate event, her mother was honored the same day during State 4-H Roundup with the Salute To Excellence Award for outstanding leadership.

Joy has participated for eight years in 4-H activities in Johnson County. Besides foods and nutrition, her projects include beef, sheep, public speaking, clothing and electric energy.

Last year, she placed third with her electric energy demonstration on smart houses at State 4-H Roundup. In her talk, Davis discussed how people could reduce electric bills and some of the safety features for children and the elderly that could be included in homes.

She is the recipient of the Gold Star Award, the highest achievement award given by a county, and chairman of the Johnson County 4-H Council.

Although graduation is two years away, Davis wants to attend Texas A&M University and major in genetic engineering.

By being able to participate in so many different projects and activities, Davis says that she has learned a lot through 4-H and enjoys the opportunity to meet people from throughout the state. However, the public speaking project has been most beneficial.

"The most important thing that I've learned by being in 4-H is how to speak in front of a group without being nervous," she said. "And even if I am nervous, I know how to turn that to my advantage."

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - Former "Romper Room" host Sherri Chessen says she hopes a new movie on her decision to have an abortion 30 years ago will draw attention to abortion rights.

Abortion was illegal in Arizona in 1962 when Chessen decided to have one after discovering a tranquilizer she had been using contained thalidomide, a drug that caused severe birth defects. She had the abortion in Sweden.

The donor of the 4-H Food Show Scholarship, Milton Hill, president of the Morrison Milling Co. of Denton, presented the $750 award to Davis and first-place winners in three other categories.

Other recipients, divisions and recipes were: Marshay Wuest of Gillespie County, main dish, with "Austrian Chicken Strudel;" Amy Terry of Smith County, fruits and vegetables, with "Savory Stuffed Squash;" and Courtney Hopper of Hale County, nutritious snacks and desserts, with "Light and Luscious Cheesecake and Strawberry Sauce."

Randall comes back, beats Hereford 10-9

Hereford took an early lead on Ruben Ramos' three-run homer, but Randall came back to win 10-9 in a West Texas Summer Baseball League game Tuesday at Randall High School.

Hereford scored five runs in the first inning and added two in the second, but Randall scored in every inning. Randall went into the bottom of the seventh trailing 9-8 and scored twice to win.

For Hereford in the first, Stacey Sanders and Ralph Holguin walked and Tab Hathaway's double chased them home. Russ Watts walked, and Ramos homered.

In the second, Richard Sanderson walked and stole second base. Rene Cano singled, driving Sanderson home, and stole second. Sanders' double plated Cano.

In the third, Ray Hastings walked and came around to score on an error and two passed balls. That gave Hereford an 8-4 lead, but Randall scored single runs in the fourth and fifth and two in the sixth. For Hereford in the top of the seventh, Shama Hernandez singled, stole two bases and scored on Ramos' sac fly.

Hereford hosts Plainview in a single game Saturday at 12:30.

Bulls fans celebrate team's second title

CHICAGO (AP) - Twice is nice, but three times is the charm, the Chicago Bulls told thousands of cheering fans celebrating the NBA champions' victory at a rally in a downtown park.

"The first time was neat, the second time was quite a feat ... the third time will be, oh, so sweet," center Will Perdue said at the city-sponsored rally celebrating Sunday's win over the Portland Trail Blazers for the Bulls' second straight NBA title.

Tens of thousands of people turned out for the celebration, many on their lunch hour from office buildings in the downtown Loop. Fans turned out as early as Monday night for a shot at one of 5,000 seats and others climbed to a better vantage point on the surrounding trees.

"This may never happen again," said Lora Boburka of Chicago, who stood atop a cooler. "We missed it last year, so we weren't going to miss it this year."

Many wore Bulls T-shirts and caps

YMCA offers tennis lessons

The Hereford YMCA is offering tennis lessons June 22-26. The lessons will be taught by Hereford High School tennis coach Natalie Sims at Whiteface Courts.

There will be two classes offered--one starts at 9 a.m., the other at 10:30--each lasting an hour. Class members need to bring their own rackets and tennis shoes.

The classes are limited to 16 members, and there must be eight for the class to be held. Entries cost $15 for YMCA members and $25 for non-members, and are due June 19.

George Brett's American League batting title average of .329 in 1990 increased by 71 points after July 4.

In 1990 Wade Boggs of Boston reached first base 275 times but never stole a base.

In his first 1,000 major league games, George Bell did not have a sacrifice bunt.

in combinations of the team's colors - black, red and white. Some in business suits wore fake Bull horns.

"I called in sick to work just to be here," said Vinnel Thomas of Chicago. "This is great. The first is always the best, of course, and the third will be sweeter."

And the Bulls say they'll do their best to repeat the rally again next year.

"Last year, I talked about how nice it would be to be back here," guard John Paxson said. "We got our first in '91, our second in '92 and maybe our third in '93."

The rally was similar to last year's victory celebration, although there was no motorcade this time. The crowd this year appeared to be smaller and more manageable than 1991, when the Bulls won the championship for the first time in the franchise's 25-year history.

The rally's entertainment began with taped music of "We are the Champions," "What I Like About You" and the Bulls theme song before actor George Wendt and another actor gave a short performance similar to the "Saturday Night Live" skit honoring "Da Bulls."

The crowd roared as each player was introduced. But the biggest cheers were saved for Michael Jordan, who carried the NBA's O'Brien Trophy on stage.

"Without you guys' support, there's no way we would have done it twice," Jordan said.

Riders club to host roping

The Hereford Riders Club will host a jackpot team roping June 19 at the Hereford Riders Arena. There will be No. 6, No. 3 and No. 4 ropings. Books open at 6:30 p.m., and the roping starts at 7.

Holyfield didn't expect Holmes

LAS VEGAS (AP) - If Evander Holyfield had his way, no one over the age of 38 would be allowed inside a boxing ring.

Which means Holyfield wouldn't be defending his heavyweight title Friday against 42-year-old Larry Holmes.

"If they put an age limit on these guys, I wouldn't have to fight him," Holyfield said. "People don't know how much pressure there is fighting an older fighter. It's a no-win situation."

Holyfield, appearing Tuesday with Holmes at the final pre-fight press conference, suggested an age limit of 38 for fighters. It's a subject Holyfield knows something about, having made his first title defense in April 1991 against 42-year-old George Foreman.

"It takes a lot of courage for a man of 42 to stand up to a man of 29," Holyfield said.

Holyfield, a 4-1 favorite, finds himself making his third title defense against a fighter he never wanted to meet.

When Holmes was mentioned earlier this year as a possible opponent, Holyfield told his handlers he wouldn't fight him because he had nothing to gain by beating another old fighter.

"I had already fought George Foreman, and just because he lasted 12 rounds people thought he was the greatest thing at 42," Holyfield said. "I didn't get anything out of winning the fight."

Holyfield, though, did agree to meet the winner of the Feb. 7 fight between Holmes and Ray Mercer in Atlantic City, figuring all along it would be Mercer he would be fighting.

Holmes spoiled those plans.

however, by recovering from a first-round near-knockdown to give Mercer a boxing lesson en route to a unanimous decision win.

"It wasn't my intention to fight Larry Holmes," he said. "I was kind of upset when he won because I didn't want to fight him."

Holmes, who was champion from 1978-85, used the Mercer fight as a springboard to the title fight he had been seeking since beginning a comeback 19 months ago. He will make $7 million for the scheduled 12-round fight.

"I feel I'm the best fighter available for this young man here," Holmes said. "There's no quit in me. I'm going to fight this man with everything God has given me."

If he wins, Holmes, at 42 years, 7 months, would be the oldest man to capture the heavyweight championship. That honor is now held by Jersey Joe Walcott, who was 37 when he knocked out Ezzard Charles in the seventh round to win the title on July 18, 1951.

Faldo wants to add Open to collection

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) - U.S. Open Champion.

"It'd look nice on the letterhead, wouldn't it?" mused Nick Faldo.

He smiled. But he wasn't kidding. "It's priority No. 1," the tall English ace said after a practice session for the 92nd American national championship that begins Thursday.

History, however, says the odds are stacked against Faldo, who has collected two British Open titles and a pair of Masters championships.

While European players - with Faldo among the leaders - have dominated recent play in the British Open and the Masters, Tony Jacklin in 1970 is the only European to win the U.S. Open since World War II.

"It's the numbers," Faldo said. "There are so few Europeans who qualify."

"It wasn't until 1983 that I was eligible."

"We have what? 11? 12? Europeans in the (156-man) field this year? And that's the most ever. It's just a matter of the numbers."

But this is a little different. "Pebble Beach will help us," Faldo said. "We have a better chance here. It is more European in character and atmosphere - a lot of character and atmosphere."

And, in its present condition, it is a lot of golf course.

"It's pretty impressive," Faldo said.

Fairways have been cut to 30-35 yards in width. The rough is up. The greens are extremely hard and fast.

"This is the best U.S. Open course I've played."

"Obviously, there's going to be

YMCA starting softball league

Angels' Blyleven shuts down Rangers

By The Associated Press

Bert Blyleven pitched like a hero for California. In Boston, though, Jeff Reardon could only remember what that felt like.

Blyleven, the 41-year-old right-hander who missed last season because of major shoulder surgery, got to watch his California Angels honor returning hero Nolan Ryan before a game with Texas.

Then Blyleven put up some Ryan-like numbers, shutting down the Rangers on two hits over six innings with seven strikeouts in California's 4-1 victory Tuesday night.

Reardon, who became baseball's career saves leader a night earlier, gave up two runs in the ninth to blow a 2-1 lead against the New York Yankees. Fortunately, the Boston Red Sox came back to tie it in the third half of the inning on Phil Plantier's homer and win in the 10th on a bases-loaded single by Ellis Burks. "That's the way this job is. You're a hero one day, a goat the next," said Reardon, who was carried off the field at Fenway Park after breaking Rollie Fingers' mark of 341 saves Monday night.

It seemed the only one at Anaheim Stadium not convinced of Blyleven's return to form was Blyleven.

"I won't really feel I'm back until I pitch nine innings," Blyleven said after his 282nd career victory.

Blyleven didn't give up a hit until Jeff Huson bounced a slow roller between short and third with one out in the fifth. Blyleven lost his shutout in the sixth on a solo homer by Juan Gonzalez.

Ron Tingley's second homer of the season, a two-run shot off Jose Guzman (6-4) in the second, put California up 3-0.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

Danny Darwin (3-2), who struck out Danny Tartabull and Randy Velarde with the bases loaded in the 10th, didn't expect to pitch since Reardon usually finishes up.

"Nine out of 10 times he does, but everybody's human and he didn't have it," Darwin said.

Roger Clemens left after seven innings with 10 strikeouts and a 2-1 lead.

Indians 7, Orioles 5

At Municipal Stadium, Cleveland's Jack Armstrong (2-7) won for the first time in six weeks. He gave up four runs and six hits in 7 1-3 innings, striking out a season-high six. Steve Olin pitched the ninth for his 13th save.

Albert Belle hit his 14th homer in the fourth inning to end a string of 21 scoreless innings against the Indians by Ben McDonald (7-4).

Tigers 4, Blue Jays 3

At the SkyDome, Mickey Tettleton had three RBIs, including a tie-breaking two-run homer in the sixth inning.

Travis Fryman doubled off Jimmy Key (4-5) to start the inning and Cecil Fielder followed with an RBI single to tie it before Tettleton's shot.

Bill Gullickson (8-4) allowed two runs and five hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Royals 7, Twins 5

At the Metrodome, Mike Macfarlane, Brian McRae and Wally Joyner homered for Kansas City off Bob Kipper (2-3), who blew a 5-4 lead for starter Willie Banks. It was the first three-homer game for the Royals this season, and the consecutive shots by Macfarlane and McRae in the sixth were KC's first homers in seven games.

Brewers 10, Athletics 0

Paul Molitor scored four runs and Ron Robinson (1-2) gave up three hits in seven innings for his first victory since 1990. Milwaukee scored eight runs in four innings off starter Ron Darling (6-4).

B.J. Surhoff and Darryl Hamilton each doubled, scored a run and had two RBIs.

Mariners 9, White Sox 6

At the Kingdome, Seattle had its most productive inning of the season, scored six times in the eighth on Jay Buhner's two-run triple, Tino Martinez's two-run homer and Edgar Martinez's two-run double.

Buhner tripled to center off Terry Leach and Tino Martinez then hit his sixth homer of the season off Scott Radinsky (2-4).

Rookie Eric Gunderson (1-1) got the victory after entering in the eighth. Mike Schooler worked the ninth for his 12th save.

Angels retire Ryan's number

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - After having his No. 30 retired by the Angels and being inducted into their hall of fame, Nolan Ryan said he hoped to give the fans a good show on the mound tonight against California.

They actually might hope he's a little less effective against the Angels than he's been in the past.

Ryan, who pitched for the Angels in 1972-79, has made just three regular-season appearances at Anaheim Stadium since leaving California.

He's gone 26 innings in those three starts for the Texas Rangers, allowing just two runs with 36 strikeouts, two shutouts and three complete games - all of which were three-hitters.

In his first game back at the Big A, in July of 1989, he was a 3-0 winner over Kirk McCaskill. He beat Chuck Finley 2-0 later that season, then was a 2-0 loser to McCaskill at Anaheim in 1990.

Slowed by injuries this year and winless in 10 starts with two defeats, Ryan will oppose the Angels' Mark Langston (6-4) tonight.

Ryan, who threw four of his record seven no-hitters while with California, was honored by the Angels as only the third person in team history to have his number retired. The others are owner Gene Autry, who was given the honorary No. 26 as the "26th man on the team's roster," and Rod Carew, who wore No. 29.

And Ryan joined a select group of four others - Carew, Don Baylor, Bobby Grich and Jim Fregosi - in the team's hall of fame. Fregosi was the player the Angels traded to the New York Mets for Ryan in one of baseball's most one-sided deals.

"He is without a doubt one of the great ballplayers of all time," Autry said in the pregame ceremony for Ryan Tuesday night.

"I've had the pleasure of meeting a lot of baseball players over the years," Autry said, "and Nolan is the only pitcher who has the ability to throw a no-hitter every time he steps on the mound."

Ryan, who holds or shares 20 Angel records, thanked the season-high crowd of 51,401 at

He noted that, 10 years after he last pitched for the Angels, he returned to the mound at Anaheim Stadium for the first time with a certain amount of apprehension.

"I remember when I was with the Rangers and I came back here in 1989. On a personal basis, I don't think I've experienced a more special moment than when I walked out of the bullpen," Ryan recalled. "The ovation sounded like I had never left."

Carew, a member of the Angels' coaching staff, recalled how he and Ryan were once neighbors near Anaheim Stadium, and also remembered how Ryan wasn't always so neighborly when they were on opposing teams.

"I was No. 4 on his all-time strikeout list," Carew said, smiling. Ryan, who holds the major league record of 5,562 career strikeouts, said, "While Rod mentioned he was fourth on my all-time strikeout list, he didn't mention that he hit over .300 against me."

Ryan was presented a number of gifts during the ceremony, including a pickup truck, a fancy saddle, a giant portrait of him in action in an Angels' uniform, and, for wife Ruth, a necklace with "30" in diamonds.

Braves' 2 runs in 9th beat LA

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves are so hot right now they can even survive blowing a four-run lead in the ninth inning.

The Braves took a 7-3 lead into the ninth Tuesday night at Atlanta, only to see Los Angeles rally for five runs. But the Braves came right back with two runs in the bottom of the ninth to beat the Dodgers 9-8.

Rafael Belliard hit reliever Roger McDowell's first pitch to center field for a run-scoring single to cap the rally.

"I had never gotten a hit off him until now," said Belliard, previously 0 for 10 against McDowell. "Usually in that situation, they are looking to pinch hit for me, they're looking for a good hitter."

It was Atlanta's season-high sixth straight win and 15th in 17 games. The Dodgers, meanwhile, lost their sixth straight and 11th in 14 games, falling 10 1/2 games behind first-place Cincinnati in the NL West. The Braves are 3 1/2 out.

The Braves tied it 8-8 on a pinch single by Jerry Willard, scoring Terry Pendleton, who led off the inning with a single against Jay Howell. After Pendleton's hit, Howell retired Ron Gant and John Candelaria (0-1) came on and walked David Justice.

Jim Gott relieved and Willard blooped a single to center field. Gott then struck out Damon Berryhill, but walked Mark Lemke to load the bases, bringing on McDowell.

Juan Berenguer (3-1) got the victory despite giving up a two-run homer to Eric Karros to put the Dodgers ahead 8-7, capping their five-run ninth.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Chicago 2, St. Louis 1; Cincinnati 5, San Francisco 3; New York 5, Montreal 2; Houston 11, San Diego

0; and Pittsburgh 6, Philadelphia 5 in 12 innings.

Astros 11, Padres 0

At the Astrodome, Brian Williams pitched six shutout innings for his first major league victory and hit a two-run double. The Astros had a season-high 15 hits, including the first three hits of catcher Scooter Tucker's major league career.

Williams (1-0), called up from Triple-A Tucson on Friday, gave up six hits, struck out five and walked four. Xavier Hernandez pitched three innings for his first save, finishing the combined seven-hitter.

Losers Rich Rodriguez (3-2), making his first start of the season, pitched four innings.

Cubs 2, Cardinals 1

At Wrigley Field, Ryne Sandberg, who tripled and scored the tying run in the fourth inning, homered in the sixth inning off Mark Clark (0-2) to help Chicago win its sixth straight game.

Sandberg's homer made a winner of Bob Scanlan (2-3), who took over for Jeff Robinson in the top of the sixth.

Donnalley pioneered tennis for women

By CLIFF NEWELL
Kerrville Daily Times
KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) - There have been more famous tennis players than Mary Jane Donnalley, and some with longer associations with the game, but few have done more pioneering in the sport.
In the 1950s and '60s, when tennis was almost totally a male-dominated sport, Donnalley often was the only woman on the scene as a player, coach, organizer, writer, broadcaster, educator, and innovator.
"I was way ahead of my time," Donnalley says. "I've been that way in everything I've done."
Donnalley was a polite pioneer, not a fist shaker. "What you do is try to do a good job and like people."
Her love affair with tennis began with a $1 racket her father bought for her at Walgreen's. She used the racket to win a tournament in her native Denver, Colo., and her prize was five free tennis lessons. With those lessons under her belt, she proceeded to win the city tournament.

That was the start of a brilliant junior career for Donnalley that eventually sent her on a trip East and eventually a match against Alice Marble, the premier player of her time.
"She trounced me, of course," said Donnalley. "But it was an honor."
Donnalley went on to Rollins College, which became known as "the tennis college" for producing such greats as Pauline Betts and Dorothy Sutton Bundy. "We never lost any matches," Donnalley remembers.
Donnalley, herself, was expected to join the ranks of the greats. But things happened.
"People thought I was going to be another Alice Marble," she said. "But World War II came crashing along, and I got married and had a family."
In most cases, that would have meant the end of a woman's tennis career. But not for Donnalley.

"I decided if I couldn't be the best player, I wanted to be the best teacher," she said.
Donnalley's career really began to hit its stride when she became tennis coach and athletic director at Mary Baldwin College in Virginia. There she designed the first physical education program that emphasized sports people could carry on after college, such as golf, swimming, horseback riding, and something that was really ahead of its time, slimmastics - the forerunner of aerobic exercising.
Tennis, though, was the "big gun" that would be used to recruit people. To do it, a nearby mountain top was literally chopped off in order for a tennis complex to be built. It was Donnalley's team that came to dominate the event. Wearing outfits designed by tennis great Fred Perry, the Mary Baldwin women proceeded to go on an incredible 10-year unbeaten streak.
To list all of Donnalley's accomplishments and honors in tennis would be too lengthy. Just to hit some highlights: coaching the U.S. Junior Wightman Cup team; authoring "Net Results," a popular children's tennis book; making key innovations in teaching group tennis; along with Billie Jean King and Chris Evert, she was honored in 1990 for her contributions to tennis; running the first National Women's Collegiate Tennis Championship.

A long-time proponent of open tennis, Donnalley was honored with invitations to play when the first open major tournaments finally arrived in 1968 at Wimbledon and Forest Hills.
As great as her tennis accomplishments are, Donnalley is prouder of her accomplishments off the court, which include earning her doctorate at the University of Virginia and designing a number of educational programs at colleges.

"Sooner or later I knew I couldn't stand on the court, and I knew I would have to use my brains," Donnalley said, adding that she would advise any up-and-coming player to take the same path.
"We've had such breakthroughs in women's tennis that it is unbelievable, but only the top 10 players or so achieve the type of financial independence you need," she said. "You've got to have another rudder for your canoe. You can't sacrifice everything for tennis."

Donnalley, who retired to Kerrville two months ago, has already made a contribution to the local tennis scene by writing articles about the competition in the recent Kerrville Senior Games.
Here some of her tennis tips:
- Enjoy the game. Understand the basic fundamentals to be a winner. Start on the right track and it will increase your chances for success.
- Try to achieve a waltz rhythm. The better you play, the faster the waltz.
- If you lose, just shake hands with your opponent and don't be discouraged. There will always be another match.
That last statement isn't just a tennis tip. For Mary Jane Donnalley, it is a philosophy of life.

Former AFL star Nance dead at 49

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) - Moderation was not the way of life for Jim Nance, the holder of an American Football League rushing record as a Boston Patriot, who died of acute cardiac arrhythmia at his home Tuesday at the age of 49.
Nance, who set an AFL rushing record of 1,458 yards in 1966 and was the old league's most valuable player that year and the next, suffered a stroke during a touch football game in 1983 and a heart attack the next day.
His left arm was partially paralyzed and doctors said he might not walk again. Nance proved them wrong.
"As a player, Jim was a tough, powerful running back," said Sam Jankovich, chief executive officer for the New England Patriots of the National Football League. "He gave it everything he had on the field. And in his lifetime, he battled back from adversity."

"The key to life is moderation," Nance told The Boston Globe in 1985. "And that's something I've never been able to do. You do things 110 percent or you don't do it at all."
The son of a coal miner from Indiana, Pa., Nance starred at Syracuse University and twice was the NCAA heavyweight wrestling champion.
He played for the Patriots from 1965 through 1971, the year the team became the New England Patriots, and is the team's second-leading all-time rusher with 5,323 yards on 1,323 carries, behind Sam Cunningham's 5,453 yards.

Nance rushed for 45 touchdowns and caught 133 passes for 870 yards and one touchdown. He is sixth on the Patriots' all-time scoring list.
Nance was traded to the Philadelphia Eagles after the 1971 season but sat out the 1972 season. He then signed with the New York Jets and rushed for 78 yards in seven games and caught four passes for 26 yards. He also played two seasons in the World Football League.
Nance leaves his wife, a daughter and nine brothers and sisters.

New flower designs subject of program

Members of Bud to Blossom Garden Club met recently at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center for their final club meeting of the year.

Master Judge Patricia Robinson presented a program on new creative design in flower arranging and also displayed three of her own creations.

Roll call was answered by members showing a picture of a favorite design of flower arranging.

During the business meeting with President Phyllis Brown presiding, Robinson reported on the recent Texas Garden Club Spring Convention held in Dallas. Also, reports were heard on the recent plant sale at the Hereford Garden Center.

Maria Escamilla gave the conservation series on "How to Photograph Flowers."

Brown reported that three rose bushes had been planted at the Hereford Garden Center in memory of Mildred Brown, Allie Thompson and Emma Robinson. A flowering pear tree was also planted in Mother's Park in memory of Joanne Blackwell who had served as the club's Arbor Day chairman.

Following the meeting, a white elephant sale was held to benefit the club treasury and members exchanged plants and packages of seed.

Natha Carroll was welcomed as a new member by Phyllis Brown, Patricia Robinson, Maria Escamilla, Billee Johnson, Wilma Bryan, Naomi Hare, Mildred Fuhrmann and Pauline Mandina.

Non-residential beauty spot

Fuller earns degree

Darla L. Fuller of Canyon, former Hereford resident, earned a bachelor of science degree in art education from West Texas State University. Degrees were confirmed at commencement exercises May 10 at Cal Farley Civic Center Coliseum in Amarillo.

Fuller is the daughter of former Hereford residents, H.S. and Cecelia Fuller of Canyon. She is also the granddaughter of Jessie Fuller of 404 Roosevelt.

Fuller graduated in 1987 from Hereford High School.

In 1872, the U.S. Congress passed a bill to establish Yellowstone National Park, the world's first national park.

Help child get 40 winks

"I had a bad dream," "I need a drink of water," "There's a monster under the bed," "It's too hot," "I don't feel good."

These are just a few of the reasons children don't sleep well at night. All children have trouble sleeping sometimes, but you can help your child sleep better.

The mattress he or she sleeps on is a good place to start. In fact, what your child sleeps on directly affects how he or she sleeps.

Parents should be certain their child's bed ad mattress contribute to sound sleep and proper support for a growing body. Consumer expert, Elaine Deaver, offers the following tips to ensure that your child has a proper foundation for healthy sleep:

*When a child is able to climb out of the crib, it's time to move to a "grown-up" bed. Most children need to make this change between age 20 months and three years.

*From the crib, move the child to a mattress of the floor. Place the mattress (without the box springs) on the floor, and against a wall. Sleeping this way makes the child feel both secure and independent. He or she isn't afraid of falling as is able to get out to bed without help from an adult.

*Moving for crib to bed can be a big adjustment, especially if a second child will occupy the crib. Position the move as a reward or "rite of passage" into a "big girl" or "big boy" bed. If there is a second child on the way, move the older child from the crib at least two months before the second child is due.

*When the child is ready to move into a standard bed, consider detachable safety rails. Guard rails are comforting because they simulate the bars in the crib. The rails also discourage climbing and keep the child from falling out of bed.

*Don't saddle your child with hand-me-down bedding. After 8-10 years of use, a mattress no longer provides the support and comfort a growing child needs.

*Cover the mattress with a mattress pad to protect it from stains and spills.

*Consider a Double bed, instead of a twin. Sleeping in tier own double be discourages some children for wanting to sleep in their parents' "big bed." A double bed offers more freedom of movement during sleep and is more comfortable for bedtime reading or quiet time with parents. Also, a double bed provides a place for overnight guests.

*From the start, tell your child that a bed is for sleeping-not for jumping. The mattress will sag and wear out prematurely if it's used as a trampoline.

*If your child is 2 1/2 years or older, he or she should be taken "shopping" for the new bed. (Shopping, with young children, means showing them the bed you've already selected." If the child feels like he or she is part of the decision, the adjustment will be easier.

*Be sure the mattress feels firm. The final curvature of a child's spine can be affected by the mattress he or she sleeps on. But remember, a firm mattress is not necessarily a hard mattress. Look for the feel your child likes with the support he or she needs.

AMWA helps women make health purchases

You may have noticed that there is nothing "speedy" about making a quick trip to your local pharmacy. Because there are so many products available, selecting appropriate health care products can be overwhelming, to say the least. However, the American Medical Women's Association (AMWA) may have a remedy.

With a membership of more than 11,000 female physicians, AMWA is committed to programs that specifically encourage women to become educated health care consumers. The Product Acceptance Program is one which helps consumers make informed decisions about health care products in some over the counter (OTC) product categories. The Acceptance Program also encourages manufacturers health care products to ensure sound and thorough research. By seeking out the AMWA Acceptance Seal and statement, consumers can now select and purchase AMWA-accepted products with confidence.

Recently, the AMWA Acceptance Seal was granted to Schering-Plough HealthCare Products' GyneLotrimin, the first prescription-strength antifungal available OTC to treat recurrent vaginal yeast infections. The AMWA Acceptance Statement, which accompanies the Seal, reads, "Gyne-Lotrimin is recognized and accepted by the American Medical Women's Association, Inc. as a product that, when used as directed, enables a woman to effectively treat most vaginal yeast infections herself."

As a result of this award, women cross the country can now have assistance in confidently selecting an effective treatment for this common condition.

TV mania reaching new heights

If you lined up every television set in U.S. homes side by side, they would circle the earth's circumference approximately 2.7 times. If you piled them one on top of the other, they would be over 12,000 times taller than Mount Everest.

According to the experts at Sharp Electronics Corporation, there are approximately 53 television sets per square mile in homes in the U.S. In fact, there are more than twice the number of TVs in U.S. homes than there are miles between the earth and the sun.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: You wrote that long-term use of Zovirax (acyclovir) is a help to herpes patients. Would it help or prevent fever blisters on the lips? I always have one or more during the winter months. Last year they were more severe than ever before, with my lower lip swelling and rolling out. It looked horrible. It happened like that twice only a few weeks apart.

My husband has fever blisters more often through the year, and they seem to be getting more severe and painful.

Our pharmacist said to drink buttermilk and take L-lysine. Others say to take Alka-Seltzer when the first symptoms start. What do you think is the best treatment or preventive? Could it be a B-vitamin deficiency? Besides the ugliness, it really bothers me to have my lips sore for three weeks at a time. We are near 60 years old and work every day.

DEAR READER: Cold sores are herpes — usually herpes simplex 1 or oral herpes. You may have read my comments about herpes simplex 2 or genital herpes. Zovirax (acyclovir) is used to treat either form of herpes simplex and is an anti-viral agent. Oral medication is best for recurrent herpes simplex infections, although salves and lotions are useful with the first attack. For the best results, it is advisable to start acyclovir with the first sign of an outbreak. There is some thought that if it is given early enough, it will slow or prevent further multiplication of the virus in the skin that causes the sores.

It is also used on a long-term basis for prevention. However, I'm not sure you would want to do this for only one or two attacks a year. Since your husband has frequent attacks, he might benefit from long-term preventive therapy with acyclovir. Initially, it was recommended only for short-term use, but further studies have shown it is safe for long-term prevention as well. It doesn't kill the viruses, and they remain dormant in the nerve cells. When the acyclovir is stopped, attacks often recur again.

For more details, read my new Special Report 116, Do You Have Herpes?, which I am sending to you. Others who want this special issue can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/116, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 0807.

L-lysine received a spate of publicity and has some ardent followers, but properly designed research studies have failed to show that it has any benefits at all. I wouldn't put any faith in buttermilk, and Alka-Seltzer has no rationale.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I've acquired a taste for boiled water and a squeeze of lemon or grapefruit juice in place of tea or coffee. Can you tell me if there is any harm in drinking three to four cups a day and whether or not it has benefits in weight loss? I understand it is good to drink one cup first thing in the morning to burn off fat.

DEAR READER: Hot lemonade or hot water with fruit juice is a good, healthy hot drink for the morning. I have often recommended it. Of course, if you happen to have heartburn, which usually means an irritated lower esophagus, and it causes symptoms, you should avoid it. Otherwise, it is far better for your health than coffee or tea.

Now it has no value at all in helping you lose weight unless you substitute such a low-calorie drink for high-calorie beverages. Neither lemon juice or grapefruit juice "burn off fat." In fact, there is no food or beverage that "burns off fat." You eliminate fat by controlling calorie intake and increasing calorie use with physical activity.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am an inmate and am losing my hair. This all started when I first got locked up. I worry a lot about things, and the stress in here is hard on a person. The food is not that good either.

What can I do to stop the hair loss? I heard there is a drug that will make it grow back, but this drug can cause problems with having kids. I've heard that a lot of things will cause you to lose hair, but I don't have the hard facts.

I'm 27 and don't like losing my hair at this age. I just want to know what I can do.

DEAR READER: Yes, there are many things that can cause hair loss, and what should be done depends on what is causing it. It is true that stress may be a factor. So can diet and inherited tendencies. A number of medical disorders may also cause a loss of hair. So I can't tell you exactly what you should do without knowing what the cause really is.

There is a good likelihood that you have male pattern baldness, which is common in young men as well as those who are older. It may cause a receding hair line or a loss of hair at the top of the head. This is an inherited problem. The cells for the hair follicles that sprout hair have genes that cause them to convert testosterone to a form that results in a small almost invisible hair shaft and eventually no hair shaft at all. The hair follicles that have those genes are either at the hairline or the back of the head or both. Usually the hair follicles at the side of the head are spared.

Yes, Rogaine, a hair lotion, has been used to arrest hair loss at the top of the head, but is less successful in arresting hair loss from the hairline. I have discussed its use and limitations — which are many — in Special Report 49, About Your Hair, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/49, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

Women also have a form of male pattern baldness, but it usually causes thinning of hair at the front of the scalp rather than total loss of hair. And men with a receding hairline can also have a hair transplant.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A woman is suing Billy Idol, claiming the rocker tried to rape her and burned her with a cigarette in 1985.

The lawsuit by Cheryl Thompson, 30, seeks unspecified damages for injuries she said she suffered in five attacks over several months in New York and Los Angeles. She said she was dating a band member at the time.

Threats from Idol and his associates kept her from coming forward before now, she said Tuesday.

Idol's publicist, Sarah McMullen, denied the allegations.

"She's obviously a very troubled young lady," McMullen said from Los Angeles.

Recapture freshness, save energy when drying clothes

Remember how good laundry used to smell after drying outdoors?

You can recapture that freshness — and save the substantial energy a clothes dryer uses — with a simple clothesline, some clothespins and a few extra minutes. Here are some hints and tips:

- An ideal place for drying clothes is a screened porch with a southern exposure.

- To save space on the clothesline, hang small items in a multitiered hanger secured to the line.

- When hanging dark or brightly colored items outdoors, put them in a shady area or turn them inside out to prevent the sun from fading them.

- Hang drip-dry items by their hems to distribute the weight evenly and avoid clothespin marks.

- Hang bias, full or pleated skirts from the waistband to avoid wrinkling the body of the skirt. Clip a spring-type clothespin to the bottom of each pleat so they'll dry in place and need little ironing.

- An easy way to hang sheets is to fold them in half and hang them by the hems. If you want them to dry faster, drape them over two parallel clothes lines.

- To dry sweaters and other items that must be flat-dried, spread them out on a hammock; make sure they're out of the sun.

- When hanging sheer curtains on a windy day, weight them down every few feet with a spring-type clothespin.

- For ease, use an old baby stroller, child's wagon or grocery cart to hold laundry while hanging clothes on the line.

- Try using a plastic, hanging-plant pot as a clothespin container; rainwater will drain from the bottom. An onion or potato bag — the mesh kind — will do the same. You can also cut off the top of a plastic jug, punch holes in the bottom to let out rainwater, and hang by its handle from the clothesline. If you want something portable, use a shoulder bag.

- To clean a nylon clothesline, use a household spray cleaner. Wash a cotton line with soap and water. Either kind can be put in a pillow case and cleaned in the washer.

- Does your clothesline sag? Tie a short length of chain to one end of the line, then attach the chain to the hook by the link that provides the best tension.

- Clothes can be dried outdoors any time of year. To remove frozen clothes from the line, lift them gently and bring them indoors to thaw. Crumpling or folding them while they're frozen can break the fibers of the fabric.

- To keep your hands warm on a winter day, put a hot-water bottle in the clothes basket for occasional squeezes. Or wear cotton gloves covered with rubber gloves.

- For indoor drying, use an adjustable tension rod over the bathtub or shower instead of a clothesline.

- The skeleton of an old umbrella makes a great indoor drying rack. Hang it upside down by its handle from a sturdy, horizontal support.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Natalie Cole has filed for divorce from her husband, music producer and arranger Andre Fisher.

The Grammy-winning singer cited irreconcilable differences in her divorce petition Monday.

The couple married in 1989 and separated June 1. They have no children.

Miss Cole won seven Grammys in February for her "Unforgettable" album, a tribute to her late father, Nat "King" Cole.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: To clean the barbecue grill of all the burned buildup from the last cookout, I take about a 2-foot length of aluminum foil, wad it up and scrape the grill with it. Works well! — John D., Lubbock, Texas

Yup, sure does. A friendly earth recycling hint is to save foil and use it one more time, just like this. Glad you wrote. — Heloise

Other uses for plastic wading pools:
• As a delivery room for puppies.
• Plant flowers and vegetables in one.

• Place high chair in one during feeding time.
• Fill with ice and soft drinks for a party.
• Use as a temporary bed for baby when traveling.

HEMLINES
Q. I recently lengthened several washable skirts. How can I remove the previous hem line? Thank you for your help. — S. D., Laurel, Md.

A. Dirt can cause the hem line to be more prominent, so begin by washing the skirts.

Pour white vinegar on the hemline until it's damp, testing a hidden spot first. Then simply place a dry cloth over the line and iron with a medium-to-hot iron.

You won't need to rewash the skirt because the vinegar smell will quickly disappear.

I'm sending you a copy of my pamphlet, Heloise's Versatile Vinegar Hints. It's chock-full of uses for that wonderful product.

Anyone else interested should send $2 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents), long envelope to Heloise/Vinegar #1, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

WARRANTY NOTEBOOK
Dear Heloise: I'd like to add to a recent suggestion about keeping the warranty, installation and operating instructions for major appliances in a notebook.

I've found it's also a good idea to attach the receipt (or a copy of it) and write down the purchase date so it is readily available when needed.

I keep small receipts in a self-sealing plastic bag. Just punch a few holes in the side of the bag and place it in the loose-leaf binder. — J. B., Ponchatoula, La.
