Dairy business is booming Local plant would help fill big niche in region

Local residents are expected to meet with officials from Associated Milk Producers Inc. this week to begin negotiations for a cheese processing facility that may be built southwest of Hereford.

AMPI is the nation's largest dairy farmer cooperative. It had sales of $2.8 billion in 1991.

A plant that may be built here or at Clovis would process 100 million pounds of milk a month and employ about 125 persons. The company's early projections call for gross sales of $15 million a month.

Besides the 125 persons directly employed by AMPI, there would be a need for about 100 truck drivers. More dairies may be located near Hereford, also increasing the work force demand. Louis Hinders of Canyon, AMPI's southern region board president, said the West Texas-Eastern New Mexico area has the fastest growing dairy industry in the nation. Dairies are relocating in this area specifically from California because of less-stringent environmental concerns. Since rainfall is lower than most of California, dairymen aren't faced with as much runoff into streams and rivers.

At least 40 dairy farmers are already committed to a plant near Hereford or Clovis, Hinders said.

Hereford Industrial Foundation has an option to purchase land for the proposed plant.

A plant in this region may be built in two stages: a reverse osmosis facility that will take much of the water from raw milk would be built first and should be constructed within four to six months after negotiations are finished. The rest of the plant could be built in the year afterward.

A plant here or at Clovis would fill a huge niche in the Texas market. Texas Agricultural Extension Service officials say the dairy industry will continue to boom in Texas, since more persons are eating milk and eating ice cream, cheese and yogurt.

"Consumption should remain constant, but increased population will drive up total demand," said Max Sudweeks, dairy specialist with TAES. The agency says Texas will grow to 20 million persons by the year 2000. Sudweeks said Texas now consumes the equivalent of 66 gallons of milk as dairy products annually. The state's dairy industry could be producing another billion pounds of milk in the next eight years to meet dairy product needs.

Texas is already sixth in the nation in dairy production, with more than 5 billion pounds of milk in 1991 worth $686 million. Texas dairymen get 14,258 pounds of milk a year from each cow, more than double the milk produced per cow 20 years ago.

In 1991, the dairy industry was third in gross ag receipts in Texas, exceeded only by cattle and cotton. The dairy industry represented 6.8 percent of receipts for all Texas farm products.

The dairy industry in Texas

Texas ranks sixth in the nation in dairy production with more than 5 billion pounds of milk in 1991 valued at $686 million. The annual average of 14,258 pounds per cow is more than double the milk produced by a cow 20 years ago. With per capita consumption at 66 gallons of milk as dairy products annually, the Texas dairy industry is expected to grow as the state's population increases.

Travis quits police force

An officer who was the focus of considerable controversy in April has resigned from the Hereford Police Department.

Tim Travis submitted his resignation to Chief Caydon Brush, effective Friday, when he had received credit for "comp" time due him.

Travis, who came to Hereford about two years ago from the Williamson County sheriff's department, drew attention in April as a participant in an incident at Hereford High School.

He was working during off-duty hours as a security officer in the HHS parking lot on April 10 when he broke up a water fight among students.

One of the students, Colby Fangman, claimed Travis searched his pickup without permission, finding a martial arts instrument, nunchucks, under the seat. Fangman said he didn't know about the nunchucks.

A patrol officer arrived on the scene and Fangman was handcuffed and taken to the Deaf Smith County jail where he was booked for a

Any old car is NOT any old car for White

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

An old car is an old car. Right? Wrong.

When the Great American Race cars show up here on June 30, Hereford residents will see a collection of vintage cars that have been kept or restored to their original glory.

On the other hand, nearly every day H. Wayne White of Hereford tools around town in a 1928 Ford that, by his admission, bears little resemblance to the real thing.

White is a "street rod" fan and through the years, he's built 18. Right now, besides the '28 Ford, he has a 1938 Chevrolet that he thinks will be on the streets by the end of summer. He also has a pickup waiting for his attention.

Restored vehicles such as those in the GAR are as much the same after restoration as they were when they came off an assembly line.

White said that street rod fans often help out the vintage car owners by selling, or giving, to them good parts they remove from their vehicles.

A Hereford High School teacher for 23 years, White became interested in street rods at the early age of 14 when his father gave him a sprint car.

"This stuff is addictive," he laughed about his hobby. It's also expensive, he admitted.

"I really don't know how much I have invested in the Ford," White said. "I kept a record but I just never totaled it up."

But, as an example of the costs involved, he pointed to a new instrument panel for the '38 Chevrolet.

"That cost $600. It's all digital," he said.

White's wife, Karen, a third grade teacher at Aikman School, said she enjoys her husband's hobby, in part because of the opportunity to meet other people from around the country.

They're going to Pueblo, Colo., for a street rod gathering that is expected to attract 1,200 to 1,500 cars. A week later, a meeting in Oklahoma City may have 2,000 to look at.

Besides the fun of looking and talking cars with others with the same interests, White writes articles for a publication of the National Street Rod Association. He illustrates articles with his own photographs, too.

The maroon Ford coupe with the white top with White behind the wheel is a common sight on Hereford streets. But it isn't limited to city driving.

"I wouldn't hesitate to drive it to California," said White.

The Ford has all the conveniences of a new model -- automatic transmission, updated engine and drive train, air conditioning and disc brakes.

The car is a running machine. "Let's say it would be at home on the Autobahn," White said. He has no trouble cruising the Texas speed limit.

When new, the '28 Ford would have been pretty simple, with a three-speed transmission and a four-

28 families may be hurt by likely scam

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

At least 28 Hereford families have spent $295 in hopes of landing a job building new American bases in the Marshall Island chain in the Pacific Ocean.

The operation may not be entirely legitimate. According to a report on Friday's "Hotline" segment on KVIL-TV in Amarillo, it could be a scam.

For some, the hopes of landing a new job at double or triple pay may cost more than the $295 deposit required by Americana Inc. Some of the persons who had already sent the deposit had given notice at their jobs in Hereford. Some had moved out of their homes, and at least one couple had placed household items in storage while waiting to leave for the middle of the Pacific.

The premise is this: the company is securing workers for contractors building new U.S. bases in the Marshall Islands because the U.S. must vacate the Philippine Island bases.

Americana Inc. promised:
--Refund of the $295 deposit.
--A $2,000 signing bonus.
--Transportation costs for all family members to the Marshall Islands and back.
--Free housing.
--Pay of $70,000 a year.
--$100 a month for each family (See SCAM, Page 2A)

The man refused to give his name or answer any questions for the Brand about the operation. One person who was considering the opportunity had been able to reach Americana Inc. on a previous Saturday morning and get full answers to all questions.

One person who had considered the offer but missed a deadline last week for sending the $295 said she had contacted the Better Business Bureau and the Florida attorney general's office. She said neither had received complaints about Americana Inc, but urged the woman to be cautious.

"They said Florida is a breeding ground for scams," the woman said.

The woman said she learned from some friends about the company and called for details. Later, she called back for the name of the specific island in the Marshall chain. The Brand has learned the island is off-limits to all but high-clearance military officers.

Perot plain-spoken, perhaps to a fault, about many topics

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ross Perot likes to call his blunt words "straight Texas talk" and says he fervently opposes discrimination of any kind. But increasingly, others see an insensitivity in some of his comments.

On subjects ranging from women to ethnic groups to homosexuals, Perot's comments to interviewers have raised eyebrows with a number of activist groups.

For example, Perot has at times referred to women as "girls," "gal" and "chick." When Perot is asked his views on women, he almost always says he believes women are smarter than men, but what he adds to that has at times angered women's groups.

"Absolutely, women in my experience are more talented than men," he said on CBS' "Face the Nation" in late April. "So my biggest problem in my computer companies is they keep getting married and leaving me."

During an April interview on CNN's "Larry King Live," Perot joked that he has "some really cute young volunteers" and gives an option to young men he hires: "I'll either introduce you to her or I'll pay you."

In a recent interview with TV Guide, Perot used the word "chick" in explaining why he would not knowingly hire an adulterer.

"I want a person who's in a senior position busy serving the people, not chasing around at night, trying to toe-dance between his responsibilities to his family and his latest hot chick," Perot said.

"He has sort of a throwback style that may not wear well," said Harriett Woods of the National Women's Political Caucus. "Many women like the no-nonsense, independent style but the Texas macho-man image puts women off and that's why they haven't embraced his campaign more fully."

In virtually every interview he grants, Perot makes a point of saying he opposes discrimination of any kind.

"I just say each person has their individual rights in this country," Perot told Public Broadcasting Service interviewer David Frost.

But Perot also has said he does not believe homosexuals should be allowed to serve in the military and that he would not appoint a gay person to certain Cabinet posts.

"I don't want anybody there that will be a point of controversy with the American people," he told ABC's

"2020." "It will distract from the work to be done. See, as far as I'm concerned what people do in their private lives is their business."

Gay-rights groups viewed those comments with scorn.

"Your comments seem to endorse discrimination against gays and lesbians because others feel the need to act on their prejudice," the Human Rights Campaign Fund said in a letter to Perot. "Such an attitude legitimizes bigotry and empowers those who hate."

Gregory King, spokesman for the group, said Perot's "words send a message that is insensitive if not outright bigoted."

The Japanese American Citizens League sent Perot a protest letter after Perot made what it viewed as a "Japan-bashing" comment in an ABC interview. Perot was discussing how the Japanese give foreign aid predicated on much of it being spent on Japanese products, while the United States has no similar discipline.

"We give money and say 'rots o' ruck' fellows," Perot said.

Joy Morimoto, a spokeswoman for the Japanese-American group, said Tuesday that neither Perot nor his office has responded.

Soon after announcing his intentions to explore a presidential run, Perot said he would quit clubs that had no Jewish or black members, but he did not initially state outright that such exclusions are wrong.

"If it bothers the people, I will quit," he said on the "Larry King Live" program in April. "It's a safe place for my family to swim and do things like that. We don't use it that much. ... You know, from my point of view, I'll save the dues. And if it bothers the people at all, I'm out of the club." In a later Associated Press interview, Perot said "No, No. Absolutely not," when asked if such clubs should be exclusionary.

In the TV Guide interview there was another example of how Perot's quick, witty responses sometimes include phrases some might find offensive.

"Sure, I go to church," he said when asked if he was a churchgoer. "But I'm not one of these guys who opens a meeting with a prayer. When I run into a guy like that, I just button my wallet, because he's going to pick it for the Lord."

Perot's spokesman, James Squires, was in a meeting and unavailable for comment, aides said Tuesday.

MUDSLINGING

Today's candidates are nothing compared to anyone on US money

EDITOR'S NOTE - When it comes to mudslinging, today's politicians are strictly minor league. Mud balls in presidential elections are as American as a cream pie in the face. Here is a sampling of some of the spurious insults spat at some of the nation's greatest heroes, as well as the not-so-great. And prepare to take a quiz.

By SID MOODY
 AP Newsfeatures Writer
 Politics never been dirtier? Well, ladies and gentlemen, where you been?

Here are some sound bites - bites with pointy, poisonous fangs - which claimed the presidential candidate was:

An ape, buffoon, fiend, lunatic, drunkard, perjurer, robber, coward, traitor, ignoramus and ghoul. And murderer.

His wife was possibly an enemy spy. His running mate was "an insolent, clownish drunk."

The year: 1864. The nominee in question: Abraham Lincoln. The wife: Mary Todd Lincoln. The vice presidential candidate: Andrew Johnson.

And for those who bemoan today's presidential campaigns featuring bimboistic lowjinks, character crevasses and generally dirty pool, let them take some solace from the White House race of 1928. This is known among cognoscenti of mud-ball politics as "the vilest campaign."

Unfortunately, mud balls in presidential elections are as American as a cream pie in the face. Or preferably in the back.

"Dirty politics have always been with us," says Gary Copeland, a professor in telecommunications at the University of Alabama who has co-authored a book on the subject. "Things aren't any dirtier today. They've just taken on new forms."

By way of proof, here is a brief quiz on presidential mudslinging and assorted slander through the republic's ages. Of what candidates was it said?

1. He was a closet "monarchist" and "His Mightiness" who effected royal tendencies by bowing a lot.

2. His election, predicted the president of Yale University, would "see our wives and daughters the victims of legal prostitution." Another said, "Murder, robbery, rape and adultery will be openly taught and practiced."

3. He installed "gambling furniture" in the White House, pimped for the czar of Russia, traveled on Sundays, had premarital sex with his wife and would turn the nation over to "the hands of public robbers."

4. He was ignorant, adulterous, a cockfighter, slave trader, bigamist, drunk and murderer whose mother was a "common PROSTITUTE" who married a mulatto and sold one offspring into slavery.

5. He wore corsets, ate off gold plates and slept in "an elegant mahogany eagle-mounted gilt French bedstead."

6. He was too cheap to buy decent clothes and swore at his subordinates.

7. He was a lousy soldier and hero "of many a well-fought bottle."

8. He had "nothing to say and keeps on saying it."

9. He had "too much brains and not enough whiskey."

10. He "wallowed in spoils like a rhinoceros in an African pool."

11. He was "a coarse debauchee who would bring his harlots with him to the White House."

12. He reminded Sen. Joseph Foraker of the River Platte: "Six inches deep and six miles wide at the mouth."

13. He had "all the salient qualities of a sphere."

14. He had "the brains of a guinea pig."

15. He was "an amiable Boy Scout."

16. He ran for office by "throwing his diaper into the ring."

17. He was a graduate of "the College of Cowardly Communist Containment." He in turn said of his accuser: "He's been worrying about my funny bone. I'm worried about his backbone."

18. He was a "product of 18th Century Fox."

19. He was a "bearded iceberg."

20. He was "as sweet a gentleman as ever scuttled a ship or cut a throat."

21. He was "a simple barefoot lawyer from Wall Street."

22. His sister was "a thespian, his brother practicing homo sapien who went to college where he (gasp) matriculated."

23. He "was utterly corrupt and shines and stinks like a rotten mackerel by moonlight."

24. He stood for "card playing, cocktail drinking, poodle dogs, divorces, novels, evolution, nude art, greyhound racing and modernism."

25. He was told to "keep yo' bowels open and yo' mouth shut."

26. He was a liar, grafter, windbag and "pot-bellied, mutton-headed cucumber."

Half truths have also been political weapons alongside outright slander. "A half truth is like a half brick," writes Bruce Felkner, former executive director of the Fair Campaign Practices Committee. "You can throw it twice as far."

Mary Todd Lincoln's family was divided, as many, by the Civil War and some fought for the Confederacy, which hardly made her a spy.

The campaigns that were "spectacularly dirty," according to Felkner, were: Andrew Jackson's second, 1828; Lincoln's second, 1864; Rutherford B. Hayes-Samuel Tilden in a near dead heat in 1872; Herbert Hoover and Al Smith, 1928 (Smith was a Catholic which stirred up the snakes) and Franklin Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie, 1940 (hatemongers had a field day whispering that FDR was president of the Jewnited States and ex-governor of Jew York).

Jackson, a short-tempered warrior who had killed a man in a duel for aspersing his wife, had to endure scurrilous attacks on his wife as a bigamist. She thought, correctly, her divorce to a loutish first husband was legal but some paperwork was cloudy.

By all accounts a saintly lady, she was literally mortified and died a few weeks after the election. Jackson had wanted to fight her accusers. His advisers convinced him that presidential candidates did not duel regardless of the outrage, a thick skin being a prerequisite for the nation's highest office. Such advice has been heeded, however grievous the provocation, with one exception.

Henry Clay, another frontiersman of the Jacksonian era and a three-time presidential loser (tied with William Jennings Bryan among the majors) was not so inhibited. When Sen. John Randolph called him a "blackleg," Jacksonian for a dishonest gambler (the latter assuredly, the former not proven), he dropped his cards and took up the dueling pistol, nicking Randolph's outer garments. They thereupon shook hands, Randolph remarking: "You owe me a coat, Mr. Clay."

"In those days only men voted, and they kind of appreciated it when opponents got into the mud and wrestled," Copeland says. "Things hadn't gotten to the point where you had to be nice."

Copeland believes mud balls have become more honey-coated as the republic ages, but a shot to the head remains just that.

In 1884 Republicans made much of Grover Cleveland's illegitimate child born of the widow Maria Halpin. They chortled:

"Ma, Ma, where's my Pa?
 "Gone to the White House, Ha! Ha! Ha!"

Cleveland, a gentleman of the old school, manfully admitted the transgression, admonishing his managers to, "Just tell the truth." Cleveland thereupon broke all the rules when he threatened to resign as candidate if his supporters made public accusations of impropriety (unfair) about the marriage of his opponent, James G. Blaine.

Blaine himself had to wipe off the mud for shabby railroad dealings (probably true), including advising a correspondent in the matter to "burn this letter." But he almost certainly lost New York's Catholic vote, hence the state, hence the eyelash election, when a supporter six days before voting day said the Democrats were the party of "rum, Romanism and rebellion." Catholic Republicans among Blaine's supporters took it personally.

Another scurrility backfired in 1840 when William Henry Harrison was depicted by an opposition newspaper as a rube who sat outside his log cabin drinking hard cider all day. Harrison was actually of Virginia gentry born, a college graduate, had enlarged his Ohio log cabin (five rooms to begin with) into an estate and didn't drink. His strategists pounced on the opening, proclaiming Harrison was a log cabin man of the people. A Philadelphia distiller, one E.C. Booz, helped the cause and got himself into the language by putting whiskey into bottles shaped as log cabins.

The next election also added a word to the mother tongue. The Ithaca, N.Y. Journal printed a report from a fictitious Baron Roorback on his travels in America. Roorback said he had seen some 43 slaves at auction bearing the brand "JKP," standing for James Knox Polk. Polk won anyway, but a roorback became for years the term for a defamatory falsehood issued too late in a campaign for a candidate to refute it.

Probably the most frequent mud pie has been that the rival candidate is addicted to the bottle. Franklin Pierce and U.S. Grant suffered the charge with some justice, but so did many others, including Blaine, a teetotaler.

Sex, too, has never been far from the hustings. In 1800 John Adams' foes said he had sent his running mate, Charles Pinckney, off in a U.S. frigate to get two mistresses for each. Adams, with more humor than usually credited him, answered: "If this be true, General Pinckney has kept all four for himself and cheated me out of my two."

Gossip had it that Thomas Jefferson had sired children by his slave, Sally Hennings, a point still debated by historians. To avoid any roorbacks, Warren Harding's managers in 1920 sent his lover and her cuckolded husband on a trip to the Orient during the campaign. Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Harding were all rumored to have had Negro blood, and any number of candidates in early days were said to have been living with Indian squaws.

Newspapers and cartoonists have all contributed to keep things on a low plane. The Charleston, S.C. Mercury in the nation's most critical election in 1860 described Lincoln as "a slangwhanging stump speaker ... a horrid-looking wretch, sooty and scoundrelly, a cross between the nutmeg dealer, horse sweeper and night man." Thomas Nast skewered Horace Greeley in 1872 in a cartoon showing him turning in a black to a Ku Klux Klansman who had just lynched another black and knifed a Negro mother and child.

Dirty tricks are campaign staples, like torch lights and soap boxes. Stephen Dorsey, GOP national chairman in 1880, 92 years before Watergate, hired Pinkertons to spy on Democratic expenditures in Indiana.

"There is only one question about carrying Indiana," said Dorsey, "and that is a question of money."

Dick Tuck's pranks for John F. Kennedy have become legend. In 1960 he dressed up as a railroad engineer and told the throttle man aboard Richard Nixon's whistle-stop train to get moving just as Nixon was about to start a speech from the rear platform.

For all the smears, the point worth noting is that despite all the campaign dirt, most of it was swept back under the rug, forgotten, after the election. Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland, and Franklin Roosevelt, villified all, served multiple terms. History records them among our best presidents.

Jackson even survived committing the unforgivable no-no of campaigning. When a mother pushed her filthy, snot-nosed infant offspring into his arms, the campaigner effusively admired the infant, then handed it to his aide, John Eaton, soon to become his cabinet member. "Kiss him, Eaton," he said and walked on.

Now for the quiz answers. A score of two or more correct entitles you to a dozen rotten eggs or an engraving of Baron Roorback.

1. George Washington. He seemed to bow a lot because he stooped getting his 6-foot-4 frame through doorways.
2. Thomas Jefferson.
3. John Quincy Adams, one-time minister to Russia. The "gambling furniture" was a pool table he bought with his own money.
4. Andrew Jackson.
5. Martin Van Buren.
6. Zachary Taylor.
7. Franklin Pierce.
8. James A. Garfield.
9. Horace Greeley.
10. James G. Blaine.
11. Grover Cleveland.
12. William Jennings Bryan.
13. Alton B. Parker, Democrat, 1904.
14. Teddy Roosevelt on William Howard Taft.
15. Columnist Walter Lippmann re Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1932.
16. Interior Secretary Harold Ickes on the candidacy of youthful Thomas E. Dewey, 1944.
17. Richard Nixon on Adlai Stevenson and vice versa on charges he was too witty, 1952.
18. Ronald Reagan.
19. Teddy Roosevelt again, this time on Republican Charles Evans Hughes, 1916.
20. An editorial about Teddy Roosevelt, 1904.
21. Harold Ickes on Wendell Willkie, 1940.
22. George Smathers, addressing backwoods crackers in Florida re Sen. Claude Pepper.
23. John Randolph re Edward Livingston, an infamous slur from an early 1800s congressional campaign.
24. Adlai Stevenson.
25. George Wallace's advice to his running mate, Curtis LeMay, after the retired general had spoken unpolitically.
26. Gen. Lewis Cass, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination, 1852. His oratorical skills were such that he was also known as "Gen. Cass."

It well behooves aspirants for the White House, in the face of incoming mud, to grin and bear it. To do less invites the barb Mark Twain launched against Gen. Benjamin Butler, 1884 candidate of the Greenback Party: "When he smiles, it is like the breaking up of a hard winter."

cylinder engine. Color of the car also would have been basic black.

When White gets through with the '38 Chevrolet, the car will look pretty much like the original.

"I've 'chopped' it three inches," White said about the vehicle. What he means is, he's lowered the car's roof by taking three inches out, all the way around, just below the top.

Not only is the car not as tall as it was, but the windshield is not as high and there is less window in the doors.

White does all the work on the cars himself, except cut glass, he said. He has "lots of help," too, from friends and fellow street-rodders if he runs into a problem.

The Chevy, just as the Ford does, will have an all-new interior. Seats from another make and model car are being revamped and cut-down to fit in the 1938 vehicle.

Karen White helps her husband with his car projects and, though she isn't looking forward to her next job, she does anticipate the fun she'll have driving the Chevy.

"She's going to sand the primer down for the final painting," Wayne said, as his wife grimaced.

"It's a big job because it has to be done by hand," said Karen. The final paint of the car depends on the primer finish, said White.

Driving the vehicle when it's finished should be like driving a new car. White has installed a turbo 350 automatic transmission and other modern mechanical parts in his latest street rod.

Karen White enjoys her husband's hobby for a number of reasons, one being the people at the meets they go to.

"We meet people from all walks of life," she said. "They are fascinating people."

She also sees the car hobby in another light, observing, "It's a way of preserving history."

The Whites take pride in the accomplishments of an area-wide organization that every year stages a benefit car show.

"The Panhandle Council of Car Clubs was organized for the purpose of sponsoring the Make-a-Wish Foundation's annual car show," said White. Seventeen car clubs, of all kinds, work on the show.

"Last year, we had 254 cars entered for judging and six just for display," said White. A low entry fee of $10 per vehicle and admissions generate funds for Make-a-Wish to answer desires of terminally ill children.

"This year's show in late February brought in $41,000 for the foundation," said White.

Wayne and Karen White won't be in Hereford when the Great American Race passes through town. They will be looking at cars of another kind in Pueblo.

Hereford's quest for new industry got a boost this week with the announcement that the community is under consideration as the site for a cheese processing plant. Associated Milk Producers, Inc. (AMPI) is planning to build the $35-million plant and, in fact, the company's board this week formally authorized its officers to start negotiations for the site. Local industrial development leaders will start work Monday on preparing a more specific proposal for the plant.

Since AMPI just got the go-ahead on the project, the preliminary discussions are over and the specific questions have to be answered. The local group appears to be a step ahead in the selection process, but it should be made perfectly clear that Hereford has not been selected for the site. Members of the group are optimistic, but if it were compared to a baseball game, I'd say we reached first base. Now, we have to try and advance the runner around to home plate.

Lynn Brisendine, Brownfield publisher and former Hereford native, had this to say about two recent riots that have made national headlines:

"Los Angeles burned for three days in May, and rioters used the excuse that the verdict in the Rodney King beating incident was a matter of racial injustice. At least these folks had a symbolic reason, as flimsy and ridiculous as it was. But what happened in Chicago is absolutely out of order.

"The Chicago Bulls, a professional basketball team, won the championship and many of their so-called fans took to the streets to celebrate the victory. The celebrants felt so good they decided to break glass windows, burn buildings and overturn taxi cabs.

"One wonders how much worse the riot would have been had the Bulls lost the series.

"If we allow rioters to use any excuse to go on a rampage, then the stupidity is ours. The Chicago victory riot serves notice that many demonstrations can become forums for robbery, vandalism, even murder. They are the result of greed, hate and thuggery. Race, creed, religion or any bias has nothing to do with these riots."

Summit gives Bush extra mileage

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - At the summit, a campaigning president plays the perfect stage, displaying the diplomatic powers he alone commands, where no political rival can tread.

So it was for President Bush - two days at the top, with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, settling on the sharpest strategic weapons cuts of the nuclear age, the centerpiece in an array of economic, scientific and defense cooperation agreements.

Bush gained political mileage as he heads into the convention summer of his re-election campaign against two rivals, Democrat Bill Clinton and the potent independent challenge of Ross Perot.

The summit provided a needed boost after months of sagging poll ratings and reports of campaign disarray. But this is June; the election is Nov. 3. This is foreign policy; the campaign agenda has been domestic.

And the route from any summit is, by definition, downhill.

In the polls, Bush gets his highest approval ratings on foreign policy, his lowest on the economy. The Democrats have argued, with some impact, that he's paid too little attention to problems at home because he prefers foreign affairs.

That political problem hasn't gone away, despite Bush's insistence that he has a strong, workable economic and domestic agenda and is being blocked by a Democratic-controlled Congress.

Congressional Democrats did agree Wednesday on a compromise big-city aid program, trimmed by more than $1 billion to avoid a Bush veto threat.

With that impasse broken, Bush may be able to gain action on a bill to provide U.S. loan guarantees, technical assistance and other backing for a $24 billion international effort to aid Russia and the other states of the dismantled Soviet Union. Democrats have said American cities should come first.

"Very candidly, so the people of Russia will understand ... there is some sentiment here that we should concentrate all our efforts in terms of spending domestically," Bush said at his joint White House news conference with Yeltsin. But he said the bill will pass; he'd wanted it done before Yeltsin came to town. "We are in an election year here and the people of Russia have to understand it's a little strange out there and things work differently."

Indeed, while Bush and Yeltsin were meeting, Boston Mayor Ray Flynn grumbled that American mayors couldn't get his attention, and might do better pretending to be from Moscow or Kiev.

Yeltsin's surprise disclosure that his reform government has found Communist-era records of American servicemen from Vietnam and other wars held prisoner in the old Soviet Union - and that some might still be alive - may be a problem in Congress and the campaign too.

To congressional suggestions that the POW question be answered before aid is approved, the Russian said candor shouldn't be penalized. A U.S.-Russian team is to investigate.

That question could become a presidential campaign topic because Perot has said for years that he had evidence Americans were captive in Vietnam, and has accused the government of failing to act on his findings. His spokesman said Yeltsin's information squared with information Perot had gathered.

Whatever the problems, the assets of campaign-year summitry have been proven before.

Twenty years ago, Richard Nixon went to Beijing in February, and to the Soviet Union in May, for summit meetings that reopened U.S. contacts with China and, for the first time, sent an American president to Moscow. He came back with a strategic arms limitation agreement and foreign policy helped boost his standing toward landslide re-election.

Constitutional crisis

Most professional political pundits predicted that the third-party candidacy of H. Ross Perot would fade away by Memorial Day. Recent polls by major news organizations dispel that conventional wisdom.

By using the error factors in each poll to find the maximum and minimum support levels for each candidate, it looks as if the electorate is about evenly split between Perot, President Bush and Democratic candidate Bill Clinton. Each gets the nod from 27 to 37 percent of the voters polled.

Though polls taken before the national party conventions have very little meaning, the results have driven campaign managers to dust off rarely used parts of the U.S. Constitution and begin a game of "what if?" The question to be answered is "what if" no candidate receives a majority of the electoral votes in November.

Our Constitution is very clear on how we elect a President. The 12th Amendment, ratified in 1804, spells out the procedure.

When the Presidential election is held, each state is allotted a number of votes in the Electoral College equal to that state's members of Congress--the number of representatives to the House plus two senators. In most states, all the electoral votes go to the candidate who has the most popular votes--a winner take all situation.

In theory--and most of the time in practice--the Electors vote for the Presidential candidate who won the vote. That is the first flaw in the process. The Electors are not bound to vote for any candidate.

Once the Electors have cast their ballots, they are sent to the Senate and the sitting vice-President opens the ballots. Then the results are tallied. If one candidate for President has a majority of the votes, then he becomes the next President. If no candidate has a majority, the trail to the Presidency becomes less clear.

The three individuals who receive the most votes in the Electoral College balloting are certified as candidates and presented to the House for a vote. The quirk here is that each state has only one vote in the balloting.

Many states, after redistricting, have split delegations. That is there are as many Republicans as Democrats. Conceivably, there could be a tie vote of the representatives and thus no vote in the House. Another twist is that the Constitution does not spell out how the state delegations arrive at their one vote for the Presidency.

To further confuse matters, only the votes of 26 state delegations are necessary to produce a President. A coalition of the small Eastern states could conceivably elect a president.

In any case, the House has until Jan. 20 following the election to make a decision on the Presidency. If they do not, then the Vice President, chosen by the Senate in the same manner as the President, becomes the new President.

Talk about a Constitutional crisis! The Constitution is very vague on the process of selecting a President at this point. It is basically left to Congress.

The Perot candidacy has cast doubts on the present political party system. If played fully through the Constitutional process, it could result in a major upheaval in our form of government.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

CATERPILLAR STANDS FIRM

by Dr. Richard L. Leshar, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON -- The United Auto Workers called off a bitter five-month strike against Caterpillar Inc. after the company began advertising to hire replacement workers.

Predictably, the UAW accused Caterpillar of "union busting" and is now demanding that Congress outlaw hiring of permanent replacement workers in a strike. In reality, Caterpillar is guilty of nothing more or less than trying to remain competitive in the world marketplace, and such a law would make that virtually impossible.

However, that is a reality unions refuse to deal with. The core issue in the UAW strike against Caterpillar was the union's determination to preserve "pattern bargaining" in which different companies of a given industry are expected to agree to the same level of pay, benefits and work rules. In this case, the UAW demanded Caterpillar sign an agreement identical to the one inked by Deere and Company.

What the UAW fails to grasp is that pattern bargaining is an obsolete concept. Deere sells farm machinery mainly in this country; Caterpillar sells 60 percent of its products outside the U.S. Caterpillar's primary competitor is Komatsu of Japan, not Deere. A contract that is perfectly satisfactory to Deere could be catastrophic to Caterpillar. To survive in the world marketplace, Caterpillar must be able to compete with foreign manufacturers.

Meanwhile, the UAW and other unions are trying to win from Congress what they cannot achieve through collective bargaining. The House has already passed, and the Senate will soon consider, a bill to destroy the right of employers to offer permanent status to replacement workers hired during a strike over economic issues. The prohibition would apply even in cases where the employer bargained in good faith, and even if the strikers' demands were unreasonable.

Were this the law of the land now, the UAW's strike against Caterpillar would probably continue until the firm either went bankrupt, or agreed to the pattern bargaining demand, which would eventually have the same result. The proposed law strikes at our country's industrial heart, and would fatally compromise our quest for competitiveness.

In some areas, particularly the campaign for product quality, the UAW has demonstrated progressive leadership. It has worked with the auto makers to abolish restrictive work rules, and cooperated in joint labor-management efforts to raise productivity and efficiency. But its effort to hold Caterpillar to pattern bargaining was foolish, and the striker replacement act the union wants so badly would amount to a labor-management suicide pact imposed by government. The Senate needs to squelch this terrible bill, and the UAW needs to rethink its agenda. It will avail union workers little if they achieve short-term gains only to undermine their employers' competitiveness, and drive them out of business.

Coneway, Moore wed in garden ceremony

During a garden wedding ceremony Saturday morning, June 13, at the home of Stephen and Nan Coneway of Hereford, Amy Carole Coneway, their daughter, married Shaun D. Moore, son of Troy Don and Kathy Moore of Hereford.

The Rev. Lanny Wheeler officiated at the marriage.

The gazebo was flanked by two wrought iron baskets holding large bouquets of alstroemeria lilies, snapdragons, irises, solidaster bauvardia and monta casino. Deck railings were draped by English ivy and baskets of alstroemeria lilies, monta casino and greenery accented with white satin bows. The fence was adorned with white satin bows and yard lights and mail box were draped with English ivy and white satin bows. There was also a white wedding carpet. The registry table was centered with a basket of alstroemeria lilies and monta casino.

Jennifer Colvard of Austin was maid of honor and Steven Sims was best man.

Escorting guests were the bride's brother, Joshua Coneway, and the groom's brother, Jay Moore.

The aisle carpet was rolled by the bride's cousins, Matthew and Blake Moore of Amarillo. Distributing birdseed were the bride's cousins, Lisa and Holly Coneway, and the groom's cousins, Joanna Estes of Plainview and Katie and Coley Williams of Austin.

Vocalists were Don Summersgill, James Maclaskey and Joe D. Rogers, and Tim Money of Amarillo was featured on the keyboard. Money provided original compositions as the family was seated. The maid of honor processed to "A Place Called Home" written by Spencer Brewer and performed by Money.

Money also performed "A Touch of Promise" written by Spencer Brewer as the bride's processional, and Summersgill, Maclaskey and Rogers sang acapella selections, "In My Life" by the Beatles and "Annie's Song" by John Denver. Trumpet Voluntaire, performed by Maclaskey, was the recessional.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a designer's gown fashioned of embossed white antique sateen. It was styled with a round neckline, tulip poufed sleeves, fitted waistline, a deep V-shape back neckline with covered buttons and a large bow train extending to the hem of a full pleated skirt.

In her hair, the bride wore alstroemeria lilies and baby's breath. She carried a cascading arrangement of all white roses, alstroemeria lilies, dendrobium orchids, and agapanthus with cascading runners of English ivy and caspia.

The bride also wore her mother's pearl earrings and her great-grandmother Coneway's pearl strand necklace. She carried her great-grandmother Murphy's linen and lace handkerchief.

The maid of honor wore an original design sleeveless dress of silk and rayon fabric of navy with white and green floral print. It was fashioned with a high round neckline, empire bodice and full pleated skirt. She carried a cascading bouquet of mixed tones of alstroemeria lilies, agapanthus, English ivy and caspia.

The mother of the bride wore a corsage of alstroemeria lilies and the groom's mother wore a wristlet of alstroemeria lilies. The bridal couple's grandmothers wore corsages of alstroemerias.

Jennifer Germann of Austin invited guests to register at the reception held in the garden area of the home.

Cake, punch and coffee were served by Susan Bell of Lubbock and Jeanette Tice. Almond tea was poured by Jayme Moore, the groom's sister.

Fresh cascading spring flowers decorated the double chocolate wedding cake. When sliced, the cake revealed layers of both white and milk chocolate pound cake. A grapevine design of white chocolate surrounded each layer. A silver urn service was also used at the reception. It belonged to the bride's great-grandparents Hitz who used the service at their 25th wedding anniversary celebration.

The food tables were decorated with tiers of fresh fruits with sculptured dolphins from fresh honeydew melons. Meats, cheeses and breads were also served to wedding guests.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Colorado, Utah and Lake Tahoe, Nev., the bride wore burgundy city shorts featuring a golf theme.

The couple will make their home in Santa Clara, Calif.

The bride is a 1992 graduate of the University of Texas in Austin and plans to work for Hewlett Packard as a financial accountant.

The groom, also a 1992 UT graduate, will attend law school in the fall.

Special wedding guests included the bride's grandparents, Ruth Neal of Amarillo and Irene and Paul Coneway of Hereford. Also, present were the groom's grandparents, Lois Moore and Ruby and Jay Boston of Hereford.

Other towns represented included Amarillo, Clarendon, Plainview, Austin, Breckenridge, Dallas, Alexandria, Va., Rio Rancho, N.M., Redondo Beach, Calif. and Clines Corners, N.M.

The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Hereford Country Club.

A Few Stolen Moments With Dad

No matter how old we get, it seems like the times spent with Dad are unique and special. There is something about Fathers — an instinctive something — that breeds a bonding unlike any other we experience in our lives. With Dad we share a certain pride in our accomplishments — from the short distance with no training wheels through the years' journey to graduation. Just as though it was yesterday, we can remember walks with him laughing all the way to the fishing hole, crying all the way to the altar.

On this Father's Day, First National Bank extends to you our wishes for a memorable day and a few stolen moments with the man you call Dad.

New hoop tournament will prepare future Herd

Practicing for the big tournament

The youth of today is the Herd of tomorrow.

That's one of the reasons parents of Hereford pre-teen athletes are organizing the Cuby Kitchens Classic Boys' and Girls' Basketball Tournament. The AAU event will be played this weekend in Hereford, featuring several teams from Hereford and from other Panhandle towns. The tournament is named after the former HHS boys' basketball coach who still lives in Hereford.

Part of the inspiration for the tournament came from the success of several area high schools' basketball programs and how youth programs contribute to that success.

Steve Wright, one of the organizers of the Kitchens tournament, gave as an example the girls' program at Canyon High. The Lady Eagles won the state 3A championship this year and have had a strong program for years. Perhaps not coincidentally, Babs Lombard, the wife of CHS girls' coach Joe Lombard, coaches a team of Canyon girls in AAU tournaments, Wright said.

"Some of these teams, the girls have been together since first grade," Wright said. "We're going to have to play summer basketball to compete."

"AAU" stands for Amateur Athletic Union. It is a national organization which promotes amateur sports in the summer, particularly basketball. Wright said there are AAU basketball tournaments in this area every weekend. In fact, teams from Hereford are playing in a tournament in Lubbock today.

Hereford's AAU teams are getting serious about basketball. They're learning the full-court press, trapping defenses and several different offenses at an early age, and that will give them a head-start for high school.

"We just try to teach them the fundamentals," said Jackie Mercer, who coaches a boys' team and a girls' team.

"Gym time is important for these kids," Mercer said. "The AAU program has access to (Whiteface) gym all week. The boys practice two times a week, and the girls practice two times a week."

The Kitchens Classic will be played Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Hereford Junior High. There will be 18 teams, Wright said--the girls' brackets are full, and Wright hopes to fill the remaining boys' slots in Lubbock. Tickets are $3 for adults, $1.50 for students. Game-times will be available later this week.

The Double Couple Golf Tournament, a four-person modified scramble, will be July 11-12. The tournament, which is for teams made up of two couples, is a joint venture the Hereford Men's Golf Association and the Hereford Women's Golf Association.

The tournament will have shotgun starts both days at 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. In addition to the tournament, there will be a putting contest and prizes for long drive and closest-to-the-pin. Valet parking will be available from members of the Key Club and Keywannettes, and a car wash will be held. Saturday's play will be capped off with a luau.

The deadline for entry is July 6. The fee of $150 per couple includes cart and green fees. Proceeds benefit the Hereford Outreach Office of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center.

Fleming wins 10th for Ms

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Seattle Mariners are hardly ever on network television, so most people never have seen Dave Fleming pitch live.

There is one place where he always shows up, however - the late-night TV highlights shows.

Fleming made another appearance Friday evening after he became the AL's first 10-winner as Seattle stopped the Minnesota Twins 1-0, the Mariners' fifth straight victory.

Fleming (10-2) held the top-hitting team in the major leagues to four singles. The 22-year-old rookie left-hander struck out six and walked two in his second shutout of the season. He tied Atlanta's Tom Glavine for the most victories in the majors.

"He looks like a veteran out there," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "He reminds me of Frank Tanana. He doesn't throw hard and he doesn't throw many strikes, but he gets you to swing at them."

Greg Briley led off the game with a homer against Kevin Tapani (6-5) for the only run at the Metrodome.

In other games, Texas beat Boston 4-1, Detroit downed Chicago 8-3 in 13 innings, Oakland outlasted California 12-8, Baltimore defeated New York 10-7, Kansas City beat Toronto 11-4 and Cleveland downed Milwaukee 5-3.

Rangers 4, Red Sox 1

Juan Gonzalez tied a team record with his 10th home run of the month and Rafael Palmeiro also homered as Texas beat Boston at home.

Gonzalez has 17 homers this season, including 10 in his last 15 games, and 12 of his last 23 hits have been home runs.

Rafael Palmeiro hit a two-run homer, his first since May 13, for a 3-1 lead in the fifth inning. His seventh home run of the season came against Mike Gardiner (3-7), who lost his sixth straight decision.

Bobby Witt (8-5) won for the fifth time in six games. He gave up five hits in seven innings and Jeff Russell got his 18th save.

Tigers 8, White Sox 3

Rob Deer homered twice, including a three-run drive that capped a five-run 13th inning at Comiskey Park as Detroit sent Chicago to its sixth straight loss.

Athletics 12, Angels 8

Dave Stewart won his third straight start as Oakland built a 12-2 lead in the eighth inning and won for the 12th time in 14 games at Anaheim Stadium.

Royals 11, Blue Jays 4

Gregg Jefferies tied his career best by driving in five runs and Kansas City took advantage of four errors to beat visiting Toronto.

Orioles 10, Yankees 7

Mike Devereaux hit his second grand slam of the season and Cal Ripken and Randy Milligan hit solo home runs that led Baltimore past New York.

The Orioles, who lost four of their last five on a seven-game road trip, are 20-10 at Camden Yards for the best home record in the AL.

Indians 5, Brewers 3

Albert Belle hit a three-run homer that capped a five-run third inning that lifted Cleveland over Milwaukee.

It was payback time for Gary Sheffield at Candlestick Park. Sheffield, slightly injured in a brawl with San Francisco 24 hours earlier, came back Friday night with a solo homer in the 10th inning as the San Diego Padres beat the slumping Giants 3-2.

Sheffield's 13th homer came off reliever Rod Beck (0-2) and sent the Giants to their season-high seventh straight loss. The Padres have won three straight games.

"I didn't want to sit down at all," Sheffield said. "I thought, 'Well, if I can pick up a bat and swing it, I'm going to play.'"

Jose Melendez (5-3) pitched two innings in relief of Bruce Hurst for the win. Hurst worked eight innings, allowing two runs on five hits.

Dave Righetti started for San Francisco, his third since returning to the rotation after nine years as a reliever. He allowed two runs on five hits in six innings before leaving with the score tied at 2.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Atlanta 3, Cincinnati 2 in 10 innings; Chicago 5, Philadelphia 2; Montreal 2, Pittsburgh 1; New York 4, St. Louis 3; and Houston 2, Los Angeles 1 in 12 innings.

Braves 3, Reds 2

At Atlanta, Damon Berryhill's RBI pinch single with one out in the 10th inning lifted Atlanta over Cincinnati, snapping the Reds' seven-game winning streak.

Astros 2, Dodgers 1

At the Astrodome, Luis Gonzalez led off the bottom of the 12th inning with a home run to send last-place Los Angeles to its eighth straight loss.

Gonzalez hit a 1-2 pitch for his third homer of the season off loser Jim Gott (1-2). Joe Boever (2-3) pitched two innings for the victory.

Pete Harnisch allowed four hits and one run before he was lifted for pinch-hitter Eric Anthony, who hit his fifth homer against Tom Candiotti in the seventh inning.

Expos 2, Pirates 1

At Three Rivers Stadium, Ken Hill gave up one run in seven innings as Montreal beat Pittsburgh for the second straight game. It marked the first time this season the Pirates lost consecutive games to an NL East team.

Cubs 5, Phillies 2

At Veterans Stadium, rookie Derrick May hit two homers and drove in five runs and Danny Jackson (3-7) pitched 6 1-3 strong innings for his third straight victory. Chicago has won seven of its last eight games.

The Cubs snapped a 2-2 tie in the sixth against rookie starter Brad Brink (0-3). Ryne Sandberg doubled and advanced to third on a single by Andre Dawson. May followed with his second homer of the game.

Mets 4, Cardinals 3

At Shea Stadium, Vince Coleman, who hit a game-tying two-run homer in the fifth inning, singled home Dick Schofield in the bottom of the ninth.

Cubans live for baseball

Editor's note: Jose Palmeiro, the brother of Texas Rangers first baseman Rafael Palmeiro, recently visited the United States from Cuba for the first time. In his short time here, he said he has found that baseball truly is a universal language, something Associated Press sports writer Arnie Stapleton observed while covering the Pan American Games in Havana last summer.

By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON (AP) - One is living the American dream and the other dreams of living in America.

Jose Palmeiro, the 40-year-old brother of Texas Rangers first baseman Rafael Palmeiro, recently visited the United States for the first time.

When his parents and two brothers fled Cuba for Miami in 1971, Jose, then 19, was forced to stay behind because he was approaching military age.

What the government didn't know was that Jose was born with half a left arm, rendering him unable to fire a rifle. That kept him out of the military and should have allowed him to leave with his family.

But it was never mentioned in his paperwork, and so he stayed behind.

Finally, after 21 years, he was granted a permit to visit the United States, and he arrived in April. He will go back this week.

Jose says he is overwhelmed with America and would like to return with his family some day. But he is afraid to talk too much about those wishes. He has a pregnant wife and young son back in Havana, and a Communist country he must return to.

But he is at no loss for words when it comes to baseball.

Cuba used to stock the big leagues with heavy hitters like Tony Oliva, but now the best players on the island perform for the powerful national team that is the favorite to win the gold medal in Barcelona next month.

"Cubans feel our top national team could play major league baseball," says Jose. "From what I've seen here so far, that could not be a reality overnight."

Jose says the defensive skills of outfielders here are amazing, and what he's seen some pitchers do with a baseball is simply unbelievable.

"Infield is perhaps the only place where top Cuban players could compete with major league baseball,"

Jose says in Spanish. "I've seen some shortstops and second- and third-basemen who in fact could play here right now."

Guys like Omar Linares and German Mesa, Caribbean stars who would be household names like Cal Ripken Jr. and Carney Lansford if not for Fidel Castro.

Of course, Cubans use aluminum bats and Jose says he's not sure how well they'd adjust to wood.

Jose will be asked all about the major leaguers he has met when he returns to Cuba. He will be asked about Yankee Stadium and Nolan Ryan and Jose Canseco.

They will ask him for all his stories. What did he get to do? What did he get to see? What was it like meeting his 27-year-old brother and watching him play major league baseball? Was it as much fun as pitching a balled-up sock to a 6-year-old boy swinging a broom handle on the streets of the Mantilla section of Havana 21 years ago?

Does he miss him even more, now that he knows him? Will they ever see each other again?

And what did he like best about America?

"I will miss a lot of things," Jose says. "But ... but let's just keep talking baseball."

Take away the pain and politics that stand between Cuba and the United States and you're left with a man like Jose Palmeiro.

They do the wave in Cuba. They pack Havana's Latino Americano Stadium like it's Wrigley Field. Vendors roam the ballpark hawking caps and chips.

Cookies and coffee replace the peanuts and Cracker Jacks, and after a homer, fans throw the ball back even if it was hit by the home team.

But the rules and the passion are the same.

America got a glimpse of that last summer when Cuba was host to the Pan American Games and invited the world to come to the island so many have deserted.

And when the competition was over, when the medals were won and the luggage packed, a few lucky Americans jumped at the chance for a sandlot game with the locals.

Baseball, you see, is a universal language.

A stout 60-year-old man and a small young boy were the first to arrive at the grizzled baseball field in Havana's old town that morning of the game.

The boy, with a weathered glove and a yellowed baseball, was looking for somebody to play catch with.

The man spat his unlit cigar onto the moist infield sod.

"Very bad for you, this tobacco," he offered as he prepared to umpire a pickup game between a group of Cuban laborers and American journalists covering the Pan American Games.

"But you can't get these cigars very easily in America now, can you? That's a shame," he said. "Just like you can't see our best baseball players anymore."

Many of them played right there on that forgotten field, he said. Before Castro sailed his yacht from Mexico. Before the Bay of Pigs. Before the Soviet Union put missiles 90 miles from American soil, then blinked, as the man said, and took them away.

The man spends his days as a private baseball coach on this crumpled field, using old leather mitts he oils with tobacco juice.

Like most Cubans, he doesn't have much. But he does have baseball. It is inseparable from Cuban pride as it is from apple pie and hot dogs.

Watching the softball game from a crumbling concrete grandstand is a 12-year-old boy, who unlike most boys in Cuba, is lucky enough to have a baseball glove, given to him by his father.

His worn, soiled baseball appears to have lost its rawhide cover long ago. But when asked when the cover and its red stitchings came off the seamless, yellowed ball, he explains the baseball isn't really a baseball at all, but tightly wound strips of tape that started out as a marble until he got it just the right size and weight.

"I've had it since I was 6," he said. "I lost it twice."

It's a good thing he found it.

He said the only way he'd ever get any baseball equipment was if the government picked him to play on a Cuban national junior team.

"So I made this baseball so I can practice," he said. "Will you teach me how to throw a curve?"

It's kind of hard with a ball that has no stitches.

The boy said he and his father were among the 60,000 fans who packed into Latino Americano Stadium on a sweltering, tropical Sunday when the Cubans beat the United States 3-2 in the qualifying round.

"Did you see German?" the boy asked, rejoicing over shortstop German Mesa's spectacular eighth-inning dive and flip to second that saved two runs and the game for Cuba. "I wanted Cuba to play the United States for the gold, though."

The Americans, however, were upset 7-1 by Puerto Rico in the medals round. They settled for the bronze while the Cubans clobbered Puerto Rico for their sixth straight Pan Ams gold, and set their sights on Barcelona.

After Castro placed the medals around their necks, the Cuban players lingered outside the venerable stadium. Children rushed up to them.

There were no wild celebrations in the streets, no champagne in the locker room. "It stings the eyes anyway," joked Cuba coach Jorge Fuentes.

Such are the scenes that feed the dreams and fuel the fascinations of fans like these, two fans of a colorblind and universal game that knows no political boundaries.

After the softball game, the Cubans broke out a case of Tropicola, and they shared it with the Americans in the shade.

Somebody joked about a rematch someday, in America.

"I am sad to see you all leave because I feel like Americans are my brothers," the man told his visitors when they finally abandoned the field. "When will you be back?"

A couple of hours later, the man was still sitting in the shade, and the boy was still looking for somebody to play catch with.

He looked inside the bag from a tourist shop at the Habana Libre hotel, and his eyes grew wide as he pulled out a new, white baseball. One with stitches.

"Will you teach me," he asked, "how to throw a curve?"

In his first 1,000 major league games, "Wee Willie" Keeler chalked up a record 1,635 hits.

During his career, Honus Wagner played all four infield positions and also in the outfield.

Texan works hard to be Olympic high jumper

By KEN STEPHENS
The Dallas Morning News
SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) - A year ago, Charles Austin was a good but unproven high jumper. He wasn't ranked among the top 10 in the world. And certainly no one whispered. "There he is," when he walked into a post office or a grocery store in San Marcos.

Things change when you set an American record and win a world championship, as he did last summer. "As far as being able to support my family, it helps," said Austin, who for the first time has corporate sponsors - Mazda and Mizuno.

But one thing that hasn't changed much is Austin, who will be among 1,300 track and field athletes competing in the U.S. Olympic Trials, which begin Friday and run through June 28 in New Orleans.

What Austin was, and remains, said Sue Humphrey, his coach, is a bit shy and unassuming, polite to the point that he refused all last year to call her Sue and introduced her as "Miss Humphrey."

Austin, who turns 25 Friday, also is a dedicated student of his event. "He'll take the time to look at film and try to analyze it, sometimes too much so, and I have to say, 'Hey, just relax and don't think too much.'"

Austin's American record is 7-10 1/2, but this year his season best was 7-7 3/4 at an indoor meet in Munich early in the year.

Outdoors, he hasn't gone over 7-2 1/2 because he has withdrawn early from all three of his meets because of a case of "jumper's knee," or tendinitis in the patellar tendon of his left knee.

Austin thought it would be better to rest the knee early so that he would be ready to push it when it counted at the trials - where the competition would include former American record holder Hollis Conway and Rick Noji, the third U.S. high jumper at the '91 World Championships.

"Now that I'm getting ready for the trials, it feels better," Austin said. "I'm relaxed and confident that with the rest I can go to the trials and it will be normal."

While resting, Austin has spent perhaps a little more time than usual watching and analyzing tape of his jumps, usually with his 20-month-old son, Cameron, who practices his own high jump by running across the living room and back-flopping onto the couch.

"Say Daddy's going to set the world record and it's going to stand for 23 years until I break it," Austin kidded his son last week.

Snapping Cuban Javier Sotomayor's 8-foot world record is something Austin firmly believes he is capable of doing at some point.

"There's a lot more room for improvement," Austin said. "When I look at the tapes of my jumps at 8-0 1/2, I had some nice jumps, especially one I should have made. I know there's room for improvement if I put everything together."

A few years ago, Austin never would have expected to be attempting an 8-foot jump. As Austin freely admits, he wasn't always so dedicated.

Austin played basketball in high school and was drawn to track and field only as another excuse to hang out with his friends during their last semester at Van Vleck High School. At first, the coach wasn't sure he wanted Austin on the track team, but he finally agreed to take him if Austin could high jump six feet.

That was February 1986. Austin cleared six feet to make the team. With less than two months of coaching, he was jumping 6-11. Though gifted, he also was inconsistent. At regionals, he jumped only 6-3 and didn't qualify for the state meet. Nonetheless, Southwest Texas State coach Rocky Light thought he may have found a diamond in the rough and offered Austin a scholarship.

During his first two years in San Marcos, Austin improved, but only to 7-1 3/4.

"I wasn't really training, trying to do anything," Austin said. "Then Coach Light and I sat down and talked, and he said if I wasn't going to try, there wasn't any point in being there. I was not doing well in school, either. I thought, 'Whoa. Leave. I don't want to do that.'"

"I was hearing the same thing from my parents and my brothers and sisters, too."

That same year, Gordon McKee, a long jumper, transferred to Southwest Texas from Blinn Community College. McKee and Austin became good friends and roommates, and when McKee qualified for the NCAA Championships, Austin felt left out.

"I really didn't get on him," McKee said, "but I saw he had the potential to be better than he was, and I gave him some incentive. I told him, 'I know you can do better than you're doing.' I even beat him in the high jump once. In fact, I almost beat him in a meet. He said I'd never do that again, and he got better."

During his junior year, Austin improved his personal best to 7-5 1/4 and finished second at the NCAA Outdoor Championships. In his senior year, he moved up to 7-8 1/2 in winning the Southland Conference Championships, then won the 1990 NCAA title in 7-7 3/4.

Austin stayed in San Marcos to finish his degree the next year, but in the spring, he began driving 30 miles north to Austin several days a week to train with Humphrey, who also coaches Austin's friend, Yolanda Henry, the top-ranked female high jumper in the United States.

"He's very coachable," Humphrey said. "That was nice because sometimes when you have a male athlete and a female coach, you have to go through a certain amount of, 'Do you really know what you're talking about?' ... He's not hung up. There was none of that at all with him."

Working with Humphrey, Austin soon raised his best practice jump from 7-5 to 7-7, and at the end of May in Granada, Spain, he jumped 7-7 3/4 to beat world record holder Javier Sotomayor of Cuba for the first time.

The next month, Austin had to drop out in the midst of the TAC Outdoor Championships because of tendinitis. Luckily, he had already cleared 7-6, which was good for a second-place tie and a spot on the U.S. team for the World Championships in Tokyo.

When he finally competed again more than four weeks later, he hardly looked world class with jumps of only 7-2 1/2 at the New York Games on July 20 and the World University Games on July 25.

"The height was there, it was just little technical things," Austin said. "I was going over the bar too close."

He came home, cleaned up the technical defects and went back to Europe for the Weltklasses meet in Zurich. There, on Aug. 7, he surprised everyone by beating Conway and jumping an American record 7-10 1/2.

"I knew if I could get everything on track, it could happen if I could just get some jumps in," he said. "I just had to be patient. So I settled down in Zurich, and it happened. I even had some good attempts at a world record, 8-0 1/2."

At the World Championships, Sotomayor was the first of four jumpers to clear 7-8 3/4. Austin then took the lead when he cleared 7-9 3/4 on his second attempt. Conway and Dalton Grant of Great Britain missed their three attempts, while Sotomayor, already assured of the silver medal, waited for the bar to be raised to 7-10 1/2. But after one attempt at that height, Sotomayor, who was suffering from an injured ankle, withdrew, conceding the victory to Austin.

Back in San Marcos, Austin's gold medal, mounted in a frame with a

A few more people recognize him now. And when he sneaks into the gym for a game of basketball, his friends usually remind him that he's not supposed to be there risking an injury.

Being a bit of a celebrity around San Marcos was a distraction for Austin for a while, Humphrey said.

"But it's not like he believes his press clippings," she said. "He's handled it well ... Basically, he's the same guy as a year ago."

Only this year - an Olympic year - the stakes are a lot higher.

YOUR EYES

Macular Degeneration

The macula is the central part of the retina, a tiny area composed of millions of light receptor cells. As we age, those cells slowly weaken, and by age 60, nearly one-third of adults show some signs of macular degeneration.

The first sign is sometimes a "floater," a small spot that's always in the line of vision, no matter where you look. In time, as the condition worsens, the floater seems to enlarge until there is a noticeable area of decreased central vision. The condition does not cause total blindness, because peripheral vision is not affected. Still, this is the fastest growing cause of legal blindness among adults in the United States.

In some cases, the degeneration is caused by "leaky" blood vessels and can be corrected with laser beams. In most cases, though, central vision slowly fades. Low-vision aids are available to enhance what vision remains.

Bryan woman discovers sport of racewalking

By CHAREAN WILLIAMS
Bryan-College Station Eagle
BRYAN (AP) - Dana Yarbrough draws more than her share of interested stares on most evenings at the Bryan High School track. Yarbrough might attract even more attention if the truth be told about her racewalking career.

Yarbrough became an avid racewalker less than four months ago and competed in her first meet on March 14. She stunned everyone - including herself - by qualifying for the U.S. Olympic Trials.

"It does amaze me," Yarbrough said. "The people listed in the top 10 (in the U.S.) have been racewalking for 10 years, and it's taken them that long to get that far."

To say Yarbrough is an overnight sensation might be an understatement.

"To make the Trials is just incredible," said her coach Frank Thomas, who is a senior lecturer in the Texas A&M physical education department. "When you think about it, here's a person who's been training for three months and is going to the Olympic Trials. That's unheard of."

Yarbrough, 25, began racewalking almost by accident.

After feeling the strain of running in the Dallas White Rock Marathon in December and the Houston Ten-neco Marathon in January, Yarbrough decided to give racewalking a try.

"I did it for fun last year in the Bill Tomlinson Run just to see what it was like," Yarbrough said. "After running back-to-back marathons, I knew there was a high risk of injury. I started trying racewalking because it is injury free."

In her first racewalk, Yarbrough won the Republic of Texas in Austin. She followed that up by winning $100 two weekends later at a racewalk in Dallas. The third meet was a charm as Yarbrough became the first woman in Texas to racewalk a mile in under eight minutes.

"After that, I was told I should get a coach and try to go further with it," Yarbrough said.

In the only 10 kilometer racewalk of her career, Yarbrough qualified for the Olympic Trials. She went 49 minutes, 48 seconds at the Gulf Coast Qualifying meet in Houston in mid-May.

"In that race, the person behind her was a mile back," Thomas said. "She's phenomenal. She knows only one speed and that's to go as hard as she possibly can."

The Burleson High School graduate, who moved to Bryan with her husband Sam 5 1/2 years ago to help open her sister-in-law's Blue Ribbon Bakery, has been going non-stop since qualifying for the Trials.

Yarbrough is doing between 35-40 miles of racewalking a week, with another 3 or 4 miles of running on Sundays. She also has done tens of thousands of situps.

"You have to have a straight back, so you need a strong stomach," Yarbrough said.

Racewalking is obviously different from running. The hip drops in racewalking, creating a funny wiggle, while the arms swing back and forth in a jerky manner. Racewalking works the shins more than the upper legs.

"It's like when you were a kid at the pool and the lifeguard said, 'Don't run, so you walk real fast,'" Thomas said. "That's basically racewalking."

But what prevents a racewalker from running?

"There are racewalking judges on the course, and they're looking for two things," Yarbrough said. "You have to have a straight knee at all times, where when you're running your knee tends to bend under you. You also have to have one foot planted on the ground at all times."

Race "walker" might be a misnomer.

Yarbrough moves pretty quick, passing joggers daily at the Bryan track. She is down to a 7:11 mile and is shooting for a 47:40 in the 10K at the Trials on Monday (June 22) in New Orleans.

The fastest American is racewalking a 10K in 45 minutes, while the world's best are around 42 minutes.

"They're smoking," Thomas said. The 22 racewalkers invited to New Orleans will be pored to three, with those earning a ticket to Barcelona, Spain, for the Olympic Games in late July.

Once you get to the Trials, it's hard to say what's going to happen," Thomas said. "Probably where she is the weakest is that she has no experience against people who are as fast as she is. She's never been in a big race before. But a lot of times youth and enthusiasm will overcome that. When the gun goes off, it's anybody's game."

If Yarbrough continues her training for four more years, the Texas A&M speech communication major could discover racewalking is her game in '96.

"Her future is in front of her," Thomas said. "We're going there with the thought of getting her seen. I'm not really a racewalking coach. We want to get her a coach and get her invited to the Olympic Training Center. Then in '96, she won't be looking just at making the Olympic team but at getting a medal."

The 'Iceman'

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) - Few jockeys had the patience and skill that George Woolf, known as "The Iceman," had during his career. Woolf rarely made his move until the field turned for home.

Woolf was killed in a fall at Santa Anita in 1946, and his memory is honored each year when a trophy is presented to a rider at the course.

His most famous ride was aboard Seabiscuit when the colt humbled War Admiral in a two-horse race in the Pimlico Special in 1938. Oddly enough, Woolf and the Biscuit were in front all the way.

Rural fire protection help to be recognized at event

A special event in Hereford next Friday afternoon will recognize the Texas Forest Service for the state agency's involvement in rural fire protection.

By state law, TFS is the responsible Texas entity for assisting rural fire departments with developing fire protection plans and by providing training and equipment.

Ernest Brown, who has worked with TFS officials on several projects, reported that about five representatives of the Texas Forest Service fire control department will be present for the reception at 2 p.m. Friday in the Hereford Fire Station.

Brown said one of the purposes of the event is to provide information to communities about the involvement of TFS in fire protection.

Assistance for rural fire departments comes in a variety of ways, such as trucks, slip-on units, communications equipment, protective clothing, support equipment and training.

The Panhandle Regional Planning Commission's Courtney Sharp, local government services coordinator, said the Rural Cooperative Fire Protection Program, fostered by TFS, has been successful in providing support to several rural fire departments in the Panhandle.

Among those receiving special assistance were Wayside Emergency Team, Muleshoe Volunteer Fire Department, Skellytown VFD, Sunnyside VFD, Wellington VFD and Bootleg VFD in Deaf Smith County.

Elected officials, fire department representatives and individuals interested in rural fire protection are invited to attend the reception Friday.

Equipment that has been supplied by the TFS will be on display along with information about the forest service program.

Brown and Sharp encourage attendance at the reception to express appreciation to the personnel responsible for the rural fire protection program.

Rain hampering wheat harvest

A combine cut through a wheatfield south of Hereford early in the week as farmers began reaping a bounty crop. Although untimely hail, heavy rain and high winds knocked down the crop in some regions, most wheat around here escaped injury. Test weights have ranged from 55 to 61 pounds per bushel with many dryland yields reported at more than 30 bushels per acre. Most of the area's wheat should be out of the field, weather permitting, by next weekend. Harvest was slowed Thursday by rains.

Radar identifies burial grounds

WASHINGTON (AP) - How do you determine the size of an ancient, unmarked Indian burial ground without disturbing it?

That was the problem that faced conservationists in northwestern Vermont as they worked to protect the 2,000-year-old remains of American Indians buried on an eroding bank of the Missisquoi River.

Their solution was a ground-penetrating radar system developed by the Agriculture Department to analyze soil.

The device rests in a wooden sled that can be pulled by a car or a truck along the ground. As the device is dragged, the radar shoots out short bursts of electromagnetic energy 70 feet to 100 feet into the soil.

A printer in the vehicle shows any underground items that are in the path of the radar beam, differentiating between soil, rock, water, air and human remains.

Scientists can review the printed images on the spot without laboriously testing soil samples and waiting for results.

Using the radar system, USDA Soil Conservation Service staff and officials from Vermont's Division of Historic Preservation were able to minimize any disturbance of the Abenaki Indian Tribe's ancient burial ground.

The project is expected to be complete this summer.

Snack food habits go abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) - America's between-meal eating habits are catching on abroad as the U.S. snack food industry pursues a booming overseas business in candy, salted peanuts and corn chips.

Sweets seem to be the world's favorite snack. Since 1986, U.S. exports of candy, cakes and cookies grew nearly fourfold, from $116 million to $454 million in 1991, according to the June issue of the Agriculture Department's AgExporter magazine.

International tastes for potato chips, pretzels, peanuts and popcorn also are growing rapidly. The $20.4 million spent on such treats in the last quarter of 1991 is a 23 percent increase over the same months a year earlier, said the magazine.

Foreign Agricultural Service analysts predict that snack food is catching on so fast worldwide that it could be a billion-dollar export industry for the United States by mid-decade.

Canada is the best customer, followed by Mexico, Japan and South Korea.

Companies are experimenting with new flavors, product themes and brighter packaging to appeal to the tastes of various cultures.

They're also pushing traditionally American snacking holidays on other countries.

Think what it would mean for U.S.

snack manufacturers if Halloween caught on across the globe. "AgExporter" says American snack companies have influenced the Japanese to pick up on it.

FFA conference participants

Members of the Hereford FFA chapter attended the 11th Annual Area I FFA Leadership Conference June 15-17 at Clarendon College. Participants included Brittney Binder and Stephanie Wilson (front); Lori Urbanczyk (middle); and Brek Binder and Robyn Watts (back). The three-day motivational leadership development training conference was attended by 200 students from 55 high schools throughout the Panhandle and South Plains.

Walcott School subject of comptroller's program

The Walcott School District is one of 51 Texas school districts selected for an audit to determine if state education funds are being used efficiently, it was announced this week by the state auditor's office.

The management audits were requested by the Legislative Audit Committee. State Comptroller John Sharp had included the audit issue in his campaign for office.

Bill McLaughlin, Walcott superintendent, said his district operates efficiently, especially when compared to other small districts of similar size. He said the district, which has about 65 students in kindergarten through sixth grade, has a budget of about $450,000, or about $6,500 per student, including transportation costs.

"With a 300 square-mile district, we have a lot of mileage on bus routes. I know another small school district in the Panhandle that has a budget of $850,000, spending more than $12,000 per student," he added.

McLaughlin said the prospects of being studied does not concern him. "If they can figure out some ways for us to cut corners and be more efficient, we're all for it."

The Spur school district in Dickens County is another district that has been selected for the audit. The Spur superintendent also said he was "looking forward" to the audit. Spur has about 418 students.

Susan Rain, an audit supervisor, said the studies will not start until after July 7 and probably will take about a week to complete. She said auditors will look for opportunities for cost savings in each district, as well as to verify the accuracy of financial reports to the state. She said auditors will seek local school officials' cost-saving ideas that can be shared with other districts around the state.

According to the Legislative Budget Office, state spending to public education in Texas has grown from $3.5 billion to $6.9 billion in the past 10 years.

"There's a widespread perception out there that there's a lot of wasted dollars in school districts," said an audit office spokesman. "The thing the audit committee wants to find out is if that's true."

Roads 'built to order' for race

Workers built an emergency road last summer in the Great Smoky Mountains for the 1991 Great American Race after a huge storm flooded other highways. This year's Greatrace will come through Hereford on July 30 and stop at Hereford Buick as the 100 antiques travel 4,475 miles from Charleston, SC to Costa Mesa, Calif. Persons interested in helping with local arrangements or hosting a team at the pit stop here may call the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce at 364-3333.

Life!

Between the Covers

BY JOE WEAVER

I was going to get on one of my soapboxes today, but in observance of Father's Day, it'll have to wait. Father's Day sort of takes a back seat to Mother's Day and that's really how us father's want it, I guess. From Mom we learn how to live...sharing with others, appreciation of beauty, patience. From Dad, though, we learn the mechanics of life...the value of work, how to write a check, competition. Thanks, Dad, for everything.

We selected our books this week with fathers in mind:

Rookie Dad: Adventures In Fatherhood is the kind of book you

Military Muster

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Eduardo Govea, whose wife, Linda, is the daughter of Willie and Terry Rodriguez of 812 Avenue K is currently in the western Pacific aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Okinawa, homeported in San Diego and is mid-way through a six-month deployment.

Govea is participating in various operations and training exercises with the Amphibious ready Group (ARG) comprised of five ships and the 13th Marine Expeditionary Unit (Special Operations Capable).

The ARG's first stop was in pearl Harbor, HI, and was followed by a visit to Subic Bay, Republic of the Philippines for Exercise Valiant Usher '92. In Subic, many crewmembers volunteered for Operation Handclasp by donating school books and skateboards to the children in the Bataan Province Municipality of Pilar and the Orion School District.

After leaving the Philippines, the ARG headed toward the Persian Gulf for Exercise Nautical Mantis and Exercise Eager Mace. The ships hosted several Kuwaiti Sailors and Marines, and many of the U.S. servicemembers enjoyed liberty in the city of Dubai. He also visited Mombasa, Kenya for Exercise Edged Mallet, which was a joint training exercise with the Kenyan government. Here, too, sailors and marines helped out by painting a nursery school and raising funds for the Anonga Marga Mission.

Finally, the ARG stopped at Perth, Australia, where crewmembers participated in an historic parade during ANZAC Day ceremonies, a remembrance of fallen war heroes.

Govea will visit more ports as the deployment continues. He joined the Navy Reserves in may 1976.

King Louis XIV of France was born in 1638.

can judge by its cover-family life as seen by a novice father. Rick Epstein's style is reminiscent of Cosby and Barry, though not quite as funny (in my opinion) as either. Every dad can relate to some of these stories and there's always some comfort in knowing that someone else has been there, too.

Men are usually more attracted to scenes of violence and destruction, so this week we'll introduce Fire: At War With the Devil, essentially a picture book of fires and the men and women who fight them. Fascinating photographs and readable text by Thomas K. Wanstall.

Band of Brothers for you WWII buffs, is the story of E. Company, 506th Regiment, 101st Airborne-from Normandy to Hitler's Eagle Nest. Stephen Ambrose tells the story of this remarkable company of men who went hungry, froze and died for each other...where the Purple Heart was not a medal, but a badge of office.

It Dad is looking for a little improvement, self or otherwise, we have Weight Training, Roofs and Siding, Finish Carpentry Basics and Brickwork for Beginners!

We even tried to keep Pop in mind as we selected this week's fiction. Nightstalker is a "techno-thriller" and imaginative multi-national adventure to reveal Clancy and Koontz. The novel, set in 1984, presents a harrowing "what-if" scenario leading up to "glasnost" and the demise of the Soviet Union. Author Timothy Rizzi is one of the world's foremost experts on stealth technology and gives here the most complete portrait of the B-2 Stealth bomber ever seen in fact or fiction.

Readers of the off-beat mystery will enjoy The Sharpest Sight. Cole McCurtain and Mundo Morales separately investigate the apparent suicide of Cole's Vietnam vet brother. Living characters and dead move naturally between dreams or visions and the "normal" world as the protagonists, while solving the mystery, discover something about themselves. Author Louis Owen, of Choctaw and Irish descent, winds up the book with the necessity of a reconciliation with the Earth through a return to older ways.

Other father-related items from the library's shelves: In My Father's House by Corrie ten Boom (life in pre-WWII Holland with Corrie's godly father);

Father Does Know Best by Lauren Chapin (the biography of "Kitten" from the TV series "Father Knows Best");

Straight Talk To Men by James Dobson (get serious about being a husband and father);

Fatherhood by Bill Cosby (humorous tales from the entertainer's experiences);

Fathers: A Celebration In Prose, Poetry and Photography (what it says);

Jenny 'n' Dad by Gordon Baxter (an older father and his daughter); and Daddy's Home by Mike Clary (memoirs of a "househusband").

ValuCare Program designed to assist older residents

Hereford and area older residents, particularly those on fixed incomes, need to get the most for their money. That's why the ValuCare program is being sponsored by Deaf Smith General Hospital.

The program is designed to provide Medicare-eligible individuals with a wide range of savings on an array of goods and services. ValuCare was originated by Methodist Hospital in Lubbock and was developed in response to interviews with more than 200 senior citizens.

Membership in the program provides participants with a variety of discounts and savings designed to help reduce their health care costs and make any stay in the hospital a little easier. ValuCare members receive a card that not only identifies them and entitles them to discounts, but it also contains their medical history on microfilm.

The program also provides quick admission and personal contact once a patient arrives at the hospital. They are pre-admitted, escorted to their rooms, and their luggage is handled for them.

An inpatient billing discount is one of the highlights of the program. Patients who have approved supplemental insurance along with Medicare coverage will not have to put down a deposit at the hospital, and their bills will be considered paid in full. Those who do not have Medicare supplemental insurance receive a 50 percent discount on their deductible and co-insurance.

The ValuCare program provides benefits when members are not in the hospital. They receive discounts on prescriptions at pharmacies throughout the area that participate in the program. In addition, 23 local merchants have registered to become ValuCare "preferred providers."

Keeping people healthy is another primary focus of the ValuCare program. Deaf Smith General Hospital is conducting periodic health screenings and seminars for ValuCare members.

For more information on the program, or if you want to sign up, contact Elizabeth Fowler at the hospital, 364-2141.

Low-fat ground beef holds promise for beef industry

Low-fat ground beef technology grew from consumer demand for low-fat beef products. Between 1987 and 1988, beef producers invested more than $373,000 for development of low-fat ground beef technology.

Five research organizations were funded with beef checkoff dollars. Two methods emerged first. Auburn University, Auburn, Ala., uses carrageenan. Webb Technical Group, Raleigh, N.C., uses oat bran and oat fiber. Both methods improve juiciness and texture and produce great-tasting low-fat ground beef products.

In November 1990, McDonald's Corp. announced the test marketing of a new low-fat ground beef sandwich, the McLean Deluxe. Developed from Auburn University research, the McLean Deluxe was first introduced into 57 McDonald's restaurants in the Harrisburg, Pa., test market area. Consumer response was so positive that the company introduced it into four additional markets. national introduction took place in March 1991.

In February, 1991, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced that six states including Texas would participate in a three-month pilot test program for low-fat ground beef. It ran from March to June 1991. Response from school children and school foodservice personnel was so favorable that USDA decided to add low-fat ground beef into the School Lunch Program beginning at the end of September 1991.

Other foodservice operations offering low-fat ground beef include Sizzler, Canteen Corp., Morrison's Custom Management, Kraft Foodservice, and Disney's Theme Parks.

In September 1991, Webb Technical Group, Raleigh, N.C., Quaker Oats Co., Chicago, and Heller Seasonings and Ingredients, Inc., Bedford Park, Ill., announced "LeanMaker," which incorporates oat bran/oat fiber into the low-fat ground beef formulation.

The beef industry continues working with processors and retailers to bring low-fat ground beef to as many consumers as possible. More than 8,500 retail stores nationwide now offer low-fat ground beef with 10 percent or less fat. The product is also available at supermarkets across the U.S. and Texas. (See attached list for Texas stores.)

BY BEVERLY HARDER

You just left work, picked up one child at day care and another from after-school care. Now you must take care of some shopping needs on your way home. You are tired. The children are fussy and hungry. You can just see it...when you're shopping, they're grabbing things and crying, "I want it!"

You're thinking, do I lock them in the car while I shop a few minutes? Do I belt them into shopping carts so they can't reach anything and just hope I get through before tantrums emerge? What choices do I really have?

Consider these choices which could produce more positive results for you and your children. You have a shopping task to do, but you can make it an opportunity to build positive relationships with your children. It can also be your best classroom for teaching them consumer and money management life skills.

-Talk with your children while you shop. This keeps their minds busy and focuses their attention on you rather than on products on the shelves.

-If you need to think about what you are buying, share your thinking with your children. "We have to buy X, which is bigger? Which has the most pink, lean meat? Which one has the lowest price? Which is the freshest? Children three and older can be involved in learning clues to better buys.

-Use the opportunity to teach non-shopping skills, too. What color is it? What shape is the box or can? In what state was the product packaged? What did we buy that was made closest to where we live and what was made the greatest distance from where we live? How much does the box or can hold?

-If the store has unit prices on the shelf, teach your children how to know which box or can has the best price per ounce, pound, slice or piece.

-If your children are school age, tell them how much you have to spend and let them count down as you buy to practice subtraction and know how much is left to buy with what is still on the list.

-Make shopping a game if time permits. If you are looking for something you can't find, ask the children where they think it is in the store. Check where each one guesses and give a little prize to the one who guessed right. Ask children to choose between two options for the same item, which is taller, shorter, fresher, less expensive, etc. Keep score and let the winner choose some item to get that is his or her favorite.

-Until children are old enough to have their own allowance, give each child a set amount as you go into the store that is theirs to spend during the shopping trip.

-Let children take as many responsibilities and make as many decisions as they can.

-Let children collect coupons for things they want and things you plan to buy. Make it their job to find these products when you are in that part of the store. Teach them to compare and see if the coupon really saves money each time. Let them spend the money they save, and give them a nickel if they realize that the coupon was not a savings.

Other ways to make high stress shopping less stressful are:

-Organize shopping to be as efficient as possible, both driving from store to store and to get what you need once inside the store.

-Reinforce positive behavior. Complement children on their help, their good consumer choices, their ideas for nutritious snacks for the day, their good behavior in the store.

-Be aware of your shopping behavior. Give you children positive examples of honest, courteous, informed and responsible consumers.

If children become disruptive, remember that an adult yelling and threatening is reinforcing their disruptive behavior. They need a calming, redirecting model. Divert their attention to something else. Take along their shopping bag that has things you can use to redirect their energy and attention without having to buy something unplanned. If children are tantrum throwers, ignore their behavior unless it becomes disruptive. Say, "I will listen if you will talk to me, but I will not listen to screaming." Sometimes a quiet, caring touch or hug is what they want, something that says, "I know you are here and need me, I'm glad you are with me."

The author of a parent education program, Setting Limits Without Waging War, recommends the following strategy for children eight and older who have developed a pattern of becoming disruptive shoppers. Make

NEW YORK (AP) - As a director, Penny Marshall has to have an eye for acting talent. But she also had to consider fielding and batting ability to cast her new movie, "A League of Their Own."

The movie is about a women's baseball league during World War II. "We looked at anyone who could play ball, then we read them," Marshall said in the July issue of Lear's magazine. "Then we had to go for some actresses who looked like they could be trained."

Everyone was scrutinized by baseball coaches, Marshall said.

MRS. RICKY BACKUS
...nee Crystal Kitten

Kitten, Backus wed Saturday afternoon

Crystal Kitten of Slaton and Ricky Backus of Hereford were united in marriage Saturday afternoon in Holy Family Catholic Church in Nazareth.

Officiating for the marriage were Rev. Marvin Kitten, S.J. director of vocations of New Orleans Province, and Rev. Neal Dee, concelebrant of the Holy Family Catholic Church of Nazareth.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kitten of Slaton and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Backus of Nazareth.

The church was decorated by two spiral candelabra trimmed in greenery, an array of white silk flowers and assorted greenery. Pews were marked by white bows accented with black baby's breath and black ribbons.

Shannon Gaither served as maid of honor and the groom's brother, Lester Backus, was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sisters, Angela Hammond and Karla Kitten, and Missy Brockman and Gina Heinrich.

Groomsmen were the groom's brother, Ron Backus; the bride's brother, Kelly Kitten; Mark Kleman and Chris Gerber.

Flower girl was Lana Kitten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Kitten, and ring bearer was Aaron Kitten, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Kitten.

Candles were lit by Angel and Amber Hammond.

Greg and Glenda Birkenfeld, accompanied by Marcia Hoelting, sang "Waiting For You," "Ice Castles" and "On Eagles Wings."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore wedding gown of white satin and schiffli lace designed with the fitted bodice heavily encrusted with sequins and pearls. It was also fashioned with a Sabrina neckline, Renaissance sleeves and an elongated waistline. The V-shape back was highlighted with a bow at the waist and the sheath skirt was adorned with beaded lace motifs and featured a detachable train.

The three-tiered waist-length silk bridal illusion veil formed a pouf at the back of a beaded headband accented with lily-of-the-valley sprays on the sides.

She carried a bouquet of white silk flowers, strands of beads and a pearl rosary entwined with delicate flowers.

Her jewelry consisted of pearl and rhinestone earrings.

Bridal attendants were attired in straight fitted knee-length black sparkle satin dresses which featured tailored sleeves made of white sparkle satin accented with black trimming. Each carried a single long stem white silk flower.

Karen Backus invited guests to register at the reception held in the Nazareth Community Hall.

Tables were covered with white cloths and accented with black bows with white baby's breath. The bride's three-tiered white cake was adorned with white silk flowers and greenery.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Antonio, the bride wore a pastel sundress. The couple will make their home in Hereford.

If the child becomes disruptive, tell him or her that they have a choice, to be a quiet shopper or to be picked up by your friend who will take them home with them until you are finished shopping. The bride is the daughter of Barry and Becky Smith of Route 5, Hereford, and the bridegroom is the son of Diana Gerk of Holyoke, Colo. and Sheldon White of Hereford.

Floral decorations for the church and reception were created by the bride's grandmother, Janet Lovvorn.

Jennifer Smith served her sister as maid of honor and Brad Mason was best man.

Bridesmaids were the bride's aunt, Kim Wilcox; the groom's sister, Tessa White; and Robin Clements.

Groomsmen were the groom's cousins, Brett Bingham, Brady Wilson and Cody Wilson.

Guests were escorted by the bride's uncle, Tony Wilcox, and Jeff Stowers, Chris Soloman and Alex Cadellago.

Cynthia Streun accompanied Tessa White as she sang "Forever As Far As I'll Go" and "The Wedding Song." Johnny Street and Janice Hughes, the bride's cousins, sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white designer's gown of imported bridal satin. The shoulder-length veil was attached to a white satin hat covered with lace and pearl droplets. In addition to her bridal bouquet, she carried a Bible belonging to her grandfather Travis Lovvorn. In keeping with bridal tradition, she wore a blue garter made and designed by her grandmother, Janet Lovvorn. To complete her ensemble, she wore pearl earrings given to her from the groom.

Shambryn Wilson and Shea Bingham invited guests to register at the reception held in the church fellowship hall.

Cake and refreshments were served by the groom's cousins, Shambryn Wilson and Shea Bingham, and Patricia Martinez, Regina Lewis and Cindy Bell.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Estes Park in Colorado. They are at home in Holyoke, Colo.

The bride, a 1991 Hereford High School graduate, attended South Plains College in Lubbock where she studied child psychology. She is a former employee of King's Manor Day Care.

The groom, a 1990 graduate of HHS, attended Texas Tech University for two years where he studied animal production. He is a former employee of Dollar Western Wear in Lubbock.

Out of town guests included Ila Shuping, the bride's great-grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Street, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Durham and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Dale Street and children, all of Kress; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hughes and children, Anja Lea and Jessica Carlise, all of Dumas; Mr. and Mrs. Mike Hughes and children of Wellington; Mr. and Mrs. Glynn Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. Sonnie Bookout, all of Stratford; Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Shuping, Mrs. Foy Lovvorn, Kelly Lovvorn and children, all of Amarillo; and Darlene and Shae and Brett Bingham, all of Gelgore. ## NOSTALGIC EXTERIOR APPEAL

Rustic Home With Front Porch Means Relaxation

The dazzling modern interior of this plan is loaded with popular features. The great room is expansive and impressive in that the arrangement is wide open to the dining room, breakfast room and foyer, yet confined to definite room separation by a partial wall a corner column and an offset kitchen and breakfast room.

The master bedroom suite is dazzling too. The bedroom features a vaulted ceiling and the private master bath features a separate garden tub, shower and commode area. Two walk in closets are from this area.

The breakfast and kitchen are open to the great room but confined to a definite area. A unique open bar sink has an excellent view of the great room, corner fireplace and sun deck and the sun deck is accessible either from the great room or the breakfast room.

There are two additional bedrooms at the opposite end of the plan, serviced by a central bath. This bath also services daytime use. Notice that there is almost no hall space but in the little hall shown an attic fan and a disappearing stair to attic storage is included.

Laundry facilities and basement stairs are in the same vicinity and are located adjacent to the double garage.

The country exterior includes a full front porch with turned wood columns and rail. The roof style is gable with a shed roof over the porch and the exterior is constructed of horizontal wood siding.

The plan is Number 980. It includes 1,956 square feet of heated area. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. ## MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

THE END OF THE RAINBOW

I watched them stream out of the seminar by the scores. Their faces displayed the gamut of emotions. Some were elated; they held the secrets of success in their hands. The wealth of the world would soon be theirs.

Others were disappointed; they had been believers right up until the very end. Wealth was within their grasp too, until the presenter announced the price of the miracle books and tapes at the end of the seminar. Alas, the $899 price was too high. They didn't have it and couldn't get it. The disappointment was plain on their faces.

Still others in the crowd remained unconvinced. They were skeptical of the claims of "instant riches," though they wanted to believe. In the end, their common sense prevailed. Perhaps a previous stinging allowed them to escape the salesperson's close unscathed. Everyday millions of Americans are bombarded by get-rich-quick schemes. Seminars like the one I saw last month are held all over the country. Thirty-minute TV programs - actually commercials disguised as talk shows - fill the airways. Radio spots and print advertisements announce the "all you gotta do is" message.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands are getting rich. Yes, it is true. People are making millions of dollars. Unfortunately, it is the sellers of these programs - not the buyers - who are accumulating wealth. The Pot of Gold

There is a pot of gold for those who are willing to take from the poor, so they can be rich. They lure hundreds of thousands of honest, hardworking folks into these get-rich-quick traps every year. The seller wins, the buyer loses. At least they are the short-term losers in money game. They give up hard earned cash to buy a dream. They are searching for the pot of gold. They are short-term losers because they give up their money, not because they have compromised their character.

Those who use false promises to gain wealth are the long-term losers. Euripides in 413 B.C. said, "Wealth stays with us a little moment if at all; only our characters are steadfast, not our gold." A person's wealth is dispersed on his or her death, but the character of the soul lives forever.

The Rainbow's End
The true end of the rainbow in this life, is our character. What possessions we acquire are of little importance. What we own, is no matter. What we are and what we become, is critical.

Alexander Pope said, "We may see the small value God has for riches by the people he gives them to," I suspect Mr. Pope had his tongue firmly implanted in his cheek when he made that statement. However, there is more than a gain of truth in it.

There are many unhappy rich people in the world today. Money brings only a temporary euphoria. We soon tire of possessions and unhappiness returns. Riches and happiness seldom walk hand-in-hand.

Thomas Jefferson made the point well in a letter he wrote in 1753. Jefferson said, "It is neither wealth nor splendor, but tranquility and occupation, which give happiness." A wise person once wrote that happiness is having something to do, someone to love and something to look forward to. I thank God daily that I am fortunate enough to have all three.

My advice to each reader who would be rich is simply this. Concentrate on being a better person tomorrow than you were today. Work hard to gain knowledge, not wealth. Above all, ignore the get-rich-quick merchants and their messages. They cannot sell to you what they do not have themselves. Character and knowledge have great value, but no price.

RED STEAGALL

Annual Red Steagall Cowboy Gathering set

Cowboys are gathering, chuck wagons are circling up, and the stage is set for the second annual Red Steagall's Cowboy Gathering at Lake Meredith June 27 and 28.

The gathering will include a concert Friday evening, chuck wagon cookoff that will feed the public Saturday afternoon and a western dance Saturday evening.

Last year folks who never sat a saddle, as well as many who have, turned out in droves to be entertained by songs and stories normally told and sung 'round the campfire—and to eat authentic cowboy grub cooked over a camp fire.

Located smack, dab in the middle of Texas ranch country, Lake Meredith is going to again be the scene of Red Steagall's cowboy gathering June 27 and 28. Born and raised just a mile from Lake Meredith, Red's roots go deep into the area, although his work in country music, songwriting and producing have taken him to the Ft. Worth area.

Performing in Lake Meredith's outdoor amphitheater with a backdrop of cool, clear water, Red Steagall, Buck Ramsey and Curt Kraigbaum will be presenting a cowboy concert Friday evening, June 27.

Perched on a lookout over Fritch Fortress above the amphitheater, ten or twelve authentic chuck wagons will be cookin' the best western cowboy grub this side of heaven. After the judging Saturday afternoon the public

NEW YORK (AP) - Melissa Gilbert, who starred in TV's "Little House on the Prairie," says her real home in California is more like "Wild Kingdom."

"We have seven dogs and three cats, and two rabbits that just had five babies, and two cockatoos and a pony," Gilbert, 28, says in Sunday's Parade magazine.

The actress is married to Bo Brinkman, an actor and writer. They have a 3-year-old son, Dakota.

Brinkman underwent treatment for a drinking problem several years ago. Gilbert says "everything's OK now."

will have the opportunity to enjoy a chuck wagon meal before the Red Steagall and Coleman County Cowboys outdoor dance that evening.

Steagall is known as a cowboy's cowboy. He was named the official Texas Cowboy poet last year by the 72nd legislature. He entertained foreign dignitaries for President Reagan and has performed all over the world as an ambassador for the State Department. He averages 200 performances a year.

Both Ramsey and Kraigbaum excel in putting cowboy lore to rollicking rhyme, but they also sing the ballads and cowboy songs heard 'round the campfires in years' gone by.

While working as a rough stock rider and cowhand on the Alibates division of the Coldwater Cattle Company, Ramsey got in a tangle with a horse bigger than he was and he now gets around in a wheelchair. He is a favorite, not only with his ol' cowboy buddies, but with the public as he sings and recites his stories set to rhyme.

Kraigbaum is foreman for the Sneed Ranch north of Lake Meredith. He has been playing guitar since he was 10. Although he has changed professions a couple of times since he grew up in Arizona, he says, "the thought of not being able to get up and saddle a horse to go to work scares me." Audiences recognize his humble spirit, while enjoying his professional style of cowboy music.

Area Chambers of Commerce are sponsoring the Red Steagall Cowboy Gathering at Lake Meredith. So whether you are ranch born and bred or a city due at heart, you are invited to kick up your heels and be part of Red's Cowboy Gathering as they celebrate the pioneer spirit of this great land.

Tickets for Friday's concert are $5, the chuck wagon dinner will be served from 6 to 8 with $10 tickets for adults, $5 for children 6 to 12, and the dance tickets are $10.

For more information on where to buy tickets, contact The Eagle Press, Box 1659, Fritch, Tx. 79036, (806) 857-2123 or the Fritch Chamber of Commerce.

Local students named to Tech's academic honors list

Eleven Hereford students were among more than 2,800 Texas Tech University students who qualified for the academic honors lists at the end of the 1992 spring semester.

Students on the President's List earned a perfect 4.0 grade point average while enrolled in 12 or more semester hours of classwork. Students finishing 12 or more hours with a grade point average of 3.5 to 3.9 qualified for the Dean's List.

Local students making the Dean's List were Susan Renee Bell, majoring in exercise and sports sciences;

Donna Nicole Grotegut, agricultural economics; Jessie Joe Guerrero, biochemistry; Stacy Lea Lesly, geography; Donald Peyton Ramey, management information systems; Amanda Ann Samuels, English; Kent Patrick Simmacher, agricultural economics; and Kelly Don Vinton, accounting.

Those on the President's List were Monica Diane Grotegut, accounting; John George Malouf, zoology; and Brienna Gail Townsend, exercise and sports sciences.

Alternative treatment for herniated disks

A medical treatment first developed in a laboratory some 30 years ago is gaining new recognition as a safe alternative to back surgery in many cases.

In the early 1960s, Dr. Lyman Smith, an orthopaedic surgeon from Illinois, began investigating the ability of chymopapain, a natural enzyme derived from the papaya plant, to relieve the back and leg pain (sciatica) caused by a slipped or herniated disc. When the enzyme was injected into the nucleus of the disc, Smith found, it broke down and partially liquefied the jelly like material that was exerting painful pressure on the nerve root.

More heat than light from NBC's 'Home Fires'

Home Fires is a new NBC comedy featuring (left to right) Jarrad Paul, Kate Burton, Alice Hirson, Nicole Eggert and Michael Brandon. Other cast members include Norman Lloyd as a family therapist and Tyagi Schwartz as Eggert's boyfriend. Previewing on Wednesday and Thursday, the series officially debuts on Saturday.

Quirky drama or serious comedy?

By Suzanne Gill

Householder Teddy Kramer (Michael Brandon) spends most of one television half-hour preparing to kindle the "first fire of the season" in his living-room hearth. The meaning of this ritual is lost on his family, who inform him that it's still too warm for a fire. But he's a man with a mission, and besides, he's trying to avoid washing the dogs.

So far, Home Fires, the first half-hour comedy from the creative team behind St. Elsewhere, sounds like familiar domestic territory. For the most part, it is.

Appearing in viewers' homes beginning Wednesday, June 24, Home Fires trades heavily on the reputation for upscale quirkiness cultivated by its executive producers, Bruce Paltrow, Tom Fontana and John Tinker during their days at MTM, where Paltrow worked on The White Shadow and Tattinger's as well as St. Elsewhere.

But what works in a professional setting is not always desirable at home. Perhaps that's why this family is in counseling, which is where we find them as each episode opens.

Therapist Frederick Marcus (played by Norman Lloyd, an Elsewhere holdover), listens, sometimes visibly scandalized by the things he hears. Besides fire-builder Teddy, his patients include mother-figure Anne (Kate Burton) and their children: Libby (Nicole Eggert), a college freshman; and Jesse (Jarrad Paul), a hormonally active 14-year-old. Extended family and friends include Anne's mother, Nana (Alice Hirson), and Libby's boyfriend, Mike (Tyagi Schwartz). Most of the action takes place in the Kramer home, a museum-like structure distinguished by its interior glass walls (a visual comment on emotional stone-throwing, one presumes).

Each episode of Home Fires begins with a visit to the family therapist, played by Norman Lloyd.

Although Home Fires has been looking for a time slot since January and no fewer than three installments air during the first week, NBC has made no episodes available for advance viewing. Columbia Television, the show's production studio, was able to provide one half-hour preview tape, but even this is not a sufficient basis on which to form an opinion of the series.

"Madonna and Child Reunion," the episode Columbia released, is scheduled to air Thursday, June 25. (The series' regular time slot is on Saturday; NBC terms the Wednesday and Thursday airings "previews.") The main plot concerns Jesse, who's trying to speak the language of love to his beautiful classmate Shauna, who's tutoring him in French. With bad advice and sometimes cruel prodding from Mom, Libby and Mike, and Dad off doing the Jack London thing, Jesse makes the wrong move with Shauna and faces the teen death sentence: social humiliation. This is pretty familiar ground, even if there are some bits of dialogue that must have burned the censors' ears. On the whole, Teddy and Jesse are more appealing than the womenfolk, who seem fretful and overwound.

NBC describes Home Fires as a comedy about "a '90s family facing conflicts that arise in the absence of the traditional generation gap." In keeping with its sophisticated atmosphere, Home Fires has no laugh track, a device often used to give viewers a sense of a show's direction. In this case, the silence betrays the faint cry of a drama trapped in the creative attic.

Riley ill; Sheila's in L.A.

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: What happened to Larry Riley, who plays Frank on Knots Landing? Several of us at work have been discussing how bad he had looked in the last several episodes this season. He has lost a lot of weight and really looks ill. Can you fill us in? —Valerie Sumter, Pryor, Oklahoma.

Dear Reader: It has been reported that Riley suffered from kidney failure resulting from high blood pressure that was complicated by a liquid diet.

Dear Candace: I am so glad to see that Sheila is off of The Young and the Restless. I thought the actress that played her did a great job, but I really got tired of the story line. I don't understand why writers always drag the stories out. Don't they know they lose viewers from boredom?

What is the actress who played Sheila going to do now? Will she be back as another character on Y&R? —D.P., Ariz.

Dear Reader: Kimberlin Brown's character has crossed over to The Bold and the Beautiful (she's the first in the history of the two soaps to do so). Sheila is now involved with the Forrester clan in Los Angeles. She is very interested in wealthy Eric Forrester and his baby son, Eric Jr.

Bill Bell, creator of both soaps, had originally decided to let Brown go because there was no way to turn the character around. But in the end he moved Sheila to B&B to let her wreak havoc on the Forresters for a while.

Several of you have sent letters concerning the departure of All My Children's Scott Thompson Baker. He has definitely left the show and is heading to Los Angeles to look for work there. He was surprised by his hasty dismissal from AMC and says he was told there was nothing more the writers could do with the character.

You may have noticed that Ridge looks a little different; that is because Lane Davies (who played Mason on Santa Barbara) is filling in for Ron Moss while Moss is in Italy shooting the miniseries The Baron.

Blake on Guiding Light may look a little different, too. Sherry Stringfield left the show to pursue other projects, and Liz Keifer has taken over the role. Kimberly Simms is also leaving the show, but for personal reasons. The role is to be recast at a later date.

Corey Parker (left) and Angus McFadyen star in The Lost Language of Cranes, a production of Great Performances, debuting Wednesday on most PBS stations. Brian Cox and Eileen Atkins also star in the drama.

PBS' 'Lost Language' speaks with grace

Author Leavitt pleased with uncompromising film

By Steven Alan McGaw
When David Leavitt's first novel, The Lost Language of Cranes, was published in 1986, the book received the kind of praise writers dream about. One critic stated, "Leavitt possesses a direct line to the heart."
Now, Great Performances brings Leavitt's compelling story to the screen, debuting Wednesday, June 24, on most PBS stations.

The story concerns Philip, a young Londoner who has long concealed the fact that he is gay from his conservative parents, Rose and Owen. When he confronts them with the truth, his mother is upset and concerned about her son's future.

His father's reaction, however, is far more intense, for it makes inevitable the very thing he has so long sought to avoid: the admission of his own homosexuality.

Brian Cox (Manhunter, A&E's recent Acting in Tragedy) is moving as Owen, a middle-aged man facing himself for the first time. Eileen Atkins is equally effective as Rose, whose entire world seems in flux. Angus McFadyen is engaging, if a bit mild, as Philip.

The strong supporting cast includes Corey Parker (thirtysomething) as Elliot, the rich American with whom Philip is involved, and film director John Schlesinger (Midnight Cowboy) as Derek, an eccentric children's author. Rene Auberjonois plays Geoffrey, Derek's companion.

Leavitt says he's "quite happy" with the film and scriptwriter Sean Mathias' adaptation, which relocates the action from New York to London. "The spirit of the book is there," Leavitt adds.

Director Nigel Finch has taken an unflinching approach to the subject matter, and some viewers may be put off by this. That's fine with Leavitt, who says he creates his sensitive, densely woven stories for an open-minded audience.

"I write — and read," Leavitt says, "on the assumption that other people's lives are very interesting ... especially lives different from mine."

'True Colors' dad dead?; Pauly has a buhh-dy

By Taylor Michaels

Q: What happened to the first husband on Fox's True Colors? Did he die? Cleavon Little took his place. I'm so concerned. —Inis Jones, Gary, Ind.

A: No, actor Frankie Faison, who played patriarch Ron Freeman, hasn't died. The show's press contact offers little in the way of explanation for Faison's departure, which is generally the case in situations like this, other than to say "Mr. Faison has gone on to other endeavors."

Q: I was wondering if you could give me the address of David Lascher, who plays Ted on Nickelodeon's Hey Dude. —Jennifer Compton, Walnut Ridge, Ark.

A: You may write to Lascher in care of Hey Dude, Nickelodeon, 1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10036.

Q: At least 15 years ago, I watched a TV show on a Sunday evening — I don't know if it was movie or a documentary. It was about the first Olympic Games in which a United States team participated. The athletes traveled by boat, were late and were not expected to win in any events but ended up winning several. I enjoyed it very much and would like to see it again.

Can you shed any light on the name of the program and if it is available on video? No one else I've talked to seems to have seen it, and I am beginning to wonder if it does exist. —Carol Demert, Janesville, Minn.

A: First, the bad news: The movie you mention, The First Olympics: Athens, 1896, is not available on home video.

The good news is that, if you or someone you know subscribes to The Disney Channel, you will be able to catch the 1984 miniseries in the channel's two-part showing on the evenings of Wednesday, July 22, and Thursday, July 23. The movie, starring Angela Lansbury and Louis Jourdan, is guaranteed to whet the appetites of all the red-blooded, flag-waving sports patriots across the country, who, like yourself, can't wait for this year's Barcelona Games to begin a few days later. Set your VCR.

Q: I am a Totally Pauly fan, and I love Pauly Shore! Please send any information about him; it would be very much appreciated. —Mandy Place, Tualatin, Ore.

A: Pauly Shore is the offbeat offspring of mother Mitzi Shore, who owns and operates Comedy Store nightclubs in San Diego, Las Vegas and Hollywood; and father Sammy Shore, a comedian who often was Elvis Presley's opening act. It's no wonder, with his detailed exposure to stand-up, that Pauly refers to himself as a "comedy sponge."

Other than hosting MTV's Totally Pauly series, Shore has a deal to put together four comedy albums and is co-starring in the summer movie Encino Man. You may write him in care of MTV, 1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10036.

Send your questions to Let's Talk, Features Dept., P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009. Please do not send return envelopes; questions will be answered within this column.

Heavenly days: Open at Pebble Beach

By Steve Paschal
The U.S. Open Golf Championship has seen many dramatic finishes over its 95-year history. But on Sunday, June 21, when ABC Sports televises this year's final round from Pebble Beach, Calif., it's doubtful that anything will happen to top Payne Stewart's playoff victory one year ago.

Stewart went to last year's Open looking to exorcise the ghost of 1986, when he blew a five-shot lead on the final day. He did just that, storming from behind to force and win a Monday playoff round. At the same time, he gave Scott Simpson a ghost of his own with which to contend.

Coincidentally, Simpson's demise came at Hazeltine's 16th hole, which had been the scene of tragedy four days earlier when one spectator was killed and four others were injured by lightning. It was there that Stewart drained a 20-foot birdie putt and Simpson blew a four-footer for bogey that eventually cost the 1987 Open champion over $118,000 in prize money. Rattled, Simpson sent his tee shot at No. 17 into a small lake, and Stewart played for a conservative par to take a one-stroke lead. Simpson sealed his own fate at 18 with a go-for-broke bogey.

This is the 27th consecutive year that ABC Sports has broadcast live, final round coverage of the Open. Jim McKay anchors a team of commentators that includes Brent Musburger.

From Genesis to 'The Crypt'

By Dan Rice

Bless the beasts and the media. Late night on Wednesday, June 24, The Discovery Channel airs the Sixth Annual Genesis Awards, recognizing outstanding work in movies, television and print that has increased public awareness of animal issues. Loretta Swit and William Shatner are hosts of the one-hour special, and award recipients include ABC's Dinosaurs for TV Family Series; TBS' Captain Planet and the Planetacs for TV Animated Series; and City Slickers for Comedy Feature Film.

The Crypt creaks open. On Saturday, June 27, HBO's horror anthology Tales From the Crypt kicks off its fourth season with a trilogy of stories designed to get your heart racing. Tom Hanks makes his directorial debut with the segment "None But the Lonely Heart," starring Treat Williams, Frances Sternhagen, Henry Gibson and boxer Sugar Ray Leonard. "This'll Kill Ya" stars Cleavon Little, Sonia Braga, and Dylan McDermott, and "On a Dead Man's Chest," directed by William Friedkin (The Exorcist), features Yul Vasquez, Paul Hipp, Sherrie Rose, Tia Carrere, rocker Greg Allman and rapper Heavy D.

Still shining brightly, a screen star from Hollywood's old school is honored this week when The Disney Channel begins its tribute to Katharine Hepburn with Stage Door on Monday, June 22.

The Legend of Tom Dooley ★★ A soldier robs a stagecoach and becomes wanted for murder. Michael Landon, Jo Morrow 2:00. (1959) June 25 12:05pm.

Lifeguard ★★ An aging California lifeguard contemplates a career change. Sam Elliott, Anne Archer PG Profanity, Adult Themes. 2:00. (1976) June 23 11:30pm.

Little Miss Broadway ★★ An orphan girl finds a new life among a group of vaudevillians. Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante 1:10. (1938) June 27 12:30pm.

Little Women ★★ Four sisters reach maturity during the Civil War. Katharine Hepburn, Joan Bennett 1:55. (1933) June 23 8:00pm; 24 2:30am.

The Lone Prairie ★★ Outlaws have their way until they meet opposition from the law. Russell Hayden, Bob Wills 1:15. (1942) June 25 11:00am.

New markets for stuffed bears, stuffed shirts

Still cuddly after all these years, former Mouseketeer and beach movie girl-nexi-door Annette Funicello launches her own line of collectible teddy bears this Saturday, June 27, on the shop-at-home QVC Network. The stuffed toys are being designed by a group of award-winning American bear artists.

"I first fell in love with teddy bears," Funicello explains, "when my family was relocating from Utica, N.Y., to Hollywood for my dad's business. I had chicken pox and couldn't go into any restaurants to eat with my family. That's when my parents bought me a cuddly little brown bear to keep me company. I've loved and collected them ever since."

Though not quite as cuddly, Muhammad Ali is also entering the merchandising ring. The three-time world heavyweight champion boxer has signed a long-term agreement with ABC Sports and Nutmeg Mills to create a line of sportswear featuring Ali's likeness and familiar quotes such as "I Am the Greatest." The collection of shirts, caps, sweaters and jackets will be hitting the stores this fall.

Annette Funicello

ABC Sports veep Robert Apter says "At a time when the world seems in short supply of heroes, Ali stands out as a figure respected by sports fans."

Charles, Prince of Wales, will see his best-selling children's story, The Old Man of Lochnagar adapted for an ABC Weekend Special to air next spring. Prince Charles himself will appear in live-action wraparounds for the animated production, which is being made in English, Gaelic and Welsh versions.

The story of a cave-dwelling Scotsman who encounters flower-making Gorms was originally told by the prince to amuse his younger brothers. Royalties earned from sales of the book go to his Charities Trust, which supports a variety of children's causes.

You could call it twenty-to-sixty-something, but the producers are using the working title Middle Ages for a new ensemble series set to join CBS' schedule sometime this summer. The one-hour program, which has begun production in Chicago and Los Angeles, mixes comedy and drama in the stories of people of various ages "trying to make sense out of the '90s." The cast includes Peter Riegert, William Russ, James Gammon, Ashley Crow, Kyle Secor, Amy Brenneman and Ruby Dee in a recurring role as a spiritual advisor and housekeeper.

'Mad Math' doesn't compute

By Suzanne Gill

Here's a quick story problem: If an educational show has a cast of three, how many fashion outlets are necessary to provide them with one costume per episode? If your answer is one, you're a smart shopper. If you say three, you cherish individualism. But if the answer is 12, you have your priorities confused.

Fashion overkill (the credits list a dozen providers) is just one of the problems with Mad Math, a series airing Saturday mornings on The Learning Channel. In a rumpus-room setting, its three young characters, all alarmingly stereotyped, gather to eat and watch TV — a practice child experts discourage.

Geeky, bespectacled Geraldo, who obviously reads his lines from cue cards, uses his remote control to punch up video math lessons for dumb jock Mike, while Geraldo's big sister Bianca flirts with their guest. (It doesn't take a feminist to disapprove of Bianca's role as bimbo-in-the-making.)

The video segments, often introduced with a rude "Now get this!" are technically plain, but often confusing in their arrangement. Rather than teaching concepts, Mad Math offers problem-solving tricks that will only perpetuate the crippling syndrome of knowing it for the test and forgetting it a week later.

For a truly educational and lively math series, try Square One TV on PBS.

Michael Uribe and Jessica Montalvo are featured in The Learning Channel's Mad Math on Saturdays.

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

HOUSESITTER: Starring Steve Martin and Goldie Hawn. Watching Housesitter is like eating cotton candy. It's sort of fun but makes you feel silly. So, if you are ready for a light-headed couple of hours of forgettable summer diversion, you'll like the film. Goldie Hawn, better than she's been in years, is a psychopathic liar who has a one-night fling with frustrated, unappreciated, emotionally-stunted, Boston architect Steve Martin. When she discovers he has a brand new, unoccupied, unfurnished house in a picture-perfect Connecticut village, she hops a bus to never-never land, moves into the house, convincing everyone (the tradespeople, his mother and father, and his ex-girlfriend) that she is his wife. Yep, he finds out and, to try to win his girlfriend back, he goes along. Soon they are on an I-can't-stand-you, we're-going-to-fall-in-love relationship in which she convinces him that fantasy in motion can make for an enduring life together. The rest of the cast is mostly a selection of cookie-cutter goofs from Hollywood's stable of eccentric characters. Goldie and Steve, if you like their brand of comedy, perform with admirable cuteness. They don't miss a mug, a pratfall, or any one of their many comic mannerisms. It's a pretty movie. Connecticut, Boston and Steven's dream home (a modification of House Beautiful magazine's Best Small House Design for 1990) all look just great. Rated PG. You could take the family now or wait for the video release. Two and a Half Boxes

FOR THE BOYS: (1991) Starring Bette Midler and James Caan. Bette Midler is Dixie Leonard, a U.S.O. entertainer, and as a producer of the movie, Ms. Midler made sure that if nothing else, the role made full use of her on-stage charisma. Mark Rydell's film begins at the outset of World War II and follows Dixie as she performs for the troops overseas for the next fifty years (and also becomes a TV star.) After the show, though, Dixie shrinks into a scrappy character always at odds with her partner, Eddie Sparks (James Caan). The lack of an intimate relationship between the two leaves a big vacuum, but Dixie seems to work better in a big tableau than in intimate settings. However, there are not enough of the tableaux and far too few scenes with Bette Midler doing what she does best - taking center stage. When she does, though, this film takes off like it's never going to land. But land it does, right at the lead feet of miscast James Caan. Rent if for Midler, and for the terrific music score. Forget the rest.
