City wants more from phone users

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company will find an increased charge on their bills, probably in October, after action by the Hereford City Commission Monday night.

The franchise fee charged the phone company by the city and passed on to the customer will rise from the current 26 cents per month to 65 cents per month next fall.

The increase is comparable to a tax hike of about 2.75 cents per $100 of value in the City of Hereford. Based on current values, a tax of one-cent raises approximately $23,372.

In other business, the commission authorized employment of an architectural firm to work on a stage/pavillion for Dameron Park, approved participation in a July 4th celebration and made appointments to two boards.

With the increase in the fee passed on to telephone customers, the city will benefit significantly. Currently, the phone company pays the franchise fee on the basis of about two percent of revenues from Hereford customers, excluding long distance.

The new pass-through will figure to about four percent of revenues.

Cash to the city will climb from the $19,335 paid for 1991 to about $64,000 in the first year of the contract and $76,000 for each of the next four years.

After hearing a brief presentation by Bell officials, the City Commission approved on first reading an ordinance that will be in effect for five years. After the first year of the contract, the pass-through charge to customers will increase to 78 cents per month.

DIALING FOR TAX DOLLARS

IF YOU'RE A PHONE USER IN THE CITY OF HEREFORD, THE CITY WILL CHARGE YOU MORE IN A SPECIAL TAX OVER THE NEXT FIVE YEARS. YOU CURRENTLY PAY 19 CENTS. NEXT FALL, IF THE NEW CITY LAW IS APPROVED, YOU WILL PAY 65 CENTS A MONTH. NEXT YEAR, YOU'LL BE PAYING 78 CENTS A MONTH. IT IS THE SAME AS A TAX INCREASE OF 2.75 CENTS PER $100 VALUATION., BASED ON CURRENT VALUES AND THE CITY'S RATE OF 42 CENTS PER $100.

Gary Stevens, area manager for external affairs for the phone company, said similar ordinances have been negotiated and approved in more than 150 communities in Texas, including large cities, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio.

He said the new formulas approved by cities establish a "parity" across the state.

The telephone company is allowed to assess the fee charged by cities on customers' bills.

Under previous terms of the ordinance affecting telephone service, the pass-through was remitted annually to the city. The new agreement specifies that the fees should be paid in four installments each year.

Selection of an architect for proposed improvements at Dameron Park was approved unanimously by commissioners. Cost of the project will be financed from the voluntary park fund established a year ago.

The fund has grown to approximately $48,000, paid in by utility customers at $1 per month, if they wish. Participation is estimated at 73 percent of the city's customers.

The Dameron Park improvements being planned are construction of a stage and restroom facilities.

Commissioners spent 10 minutes in executive session to consider personnel for appointments to the golf advisory board and the Hereford Area Tax Abatement Board.

On returning to open session, the commission named Bill Brown, representing the men's golf association; Marcy Hughes, women's golf association; Evelyn Walterscheid and James Salinas, at-large, and James McDowell, city commissioner, to the golf course advisory board.

Mayor Tom LeGate and Commissioner Carey Black were appointed to the abatement board.

A request for $2,500 to help finance the Fourth of July fireworks display was approved by commissioners. The commission also authorized preparation of specifications for a 1993 Suburban for the fire department.

EnCoRe begins new beautification effort

Deaf Smith County residents interested in what organizers call "a grassroots alliance to keep Deaf Smith County beautiful" may sign up before July 4th at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office.

Membership is open to groups, businesses and individuals who are interested in beautification and related civic improvement projects. The alliance will charge an annual membership fee of $10 for groups and $5 for individuals. Group memberships will include businesses, clubs, youth groups and churches.

Each group joining the alliance will be asked to name a representative who will serve on the board of directors. Board size may be limited, although organizers expect it to be large to represent the community's diverse sectors. Individuals will be represented by a set number of at-large seats on the board.

An advisory board of elected officials will represent the county, city, schools districts and hospital board.

The alliance is being formed so groups and individuals can coordinate their efforts at beautification and civic improvement. The alliance also wants to plans community development goals and share responsibility for reaching the goals.

The beautification group will be concerned with landscaping, cleanup, property maintenance, weed control, recycling and conservation, solid waste management and reduction of littering and vandalism.

The group's first meeting will be at noon July 10 at the Hereford Community Center, and interested persons may also call EnCoRe members Pat Reily, 364-6995, or Kerrie Steiert, 364-1855. EnCoRe is the local affiliate of Keep Texas Beautiful.

Ford, Perot had a close alliance

LANSING, Mich. (AP) - Texas billionaire Ross Perot offered to help evacuate orphans from Vietnam and sought the Ford administration's help in getting two Vietnamese military officers out of the country, documents show.

Papers from the Gerald R. Ford Library in Ann Arbor, Mich., show Perot contacted the administration several times on Vietnam issues, as he had the Nixon administration before it.

The man who portrays himself as a political outsider as he readies an independent bid for the presidency felt close enough to White House officials to sign his letters to them simply, "Ross." The replies were addressed, "Dear Ross," as well.

A list of written questions about Perot's dealing with the Ford administration were submitted to Perot spokeswoman Sharon Holman at her request. She did not immediately respond or return telephone calls seeking comment.

His contacts with the White House include a telephone call to Anne Armstrong, counselor to President Ford, in which Perot offered to help fly orphans and others out of Vietnam. The draft of a reply said there were ample flights for people leaving Saigon but suggested Perot might be able to help refugees.

A memo to Brent Scowcroft, then-deputy national security adviser, from Dick Cheney, then-deputy assistant to the president, said Perot had called Armstrong on April 4, 1975. The two discussed "ways to mobilize public opinion to support Vietnam and get additional aid out of the Congress for the Vietnamese."

The memo quoted Perot as saying he wanted to "bring out the children as well as some adults 'who can tell the story of North Vietnamese aggression.'"

Perot proposed in a May 14, 1975, meeting with James Cannon, assistant to the president for domestic affairs, that Ford enlist churches to sponsor refugee families, pay for their transportation and find housing, jobs and educational programs for them.

"With the principal financing coming from the private sector, and the utilization of the wide range of voluntary services (including the Salvation Army), the unpleasant political overtones now placed on our efforts would be greatly diminished," Cannon wrote.

Perot suggested Vietnamese leaders could organize the refugees so they could be processed through the refugee centers faster, the memo said.

Perot also wrote to the White House proposing a Vietnam war memorial within sight of the White House, using funds raised by school children, that would be a reminder of the nation's split over the war.

"The theme of this memorial would be to emphasize the basic lesson of Vietnam - First, commit the nation, then commit the troops," Perot wrote.

The Ford files do not contain a reply to Perot's suggestions.

Flag Day was observed Sunday, but the special day slipped up on us and no mention was made in advance by The Brand.

Flag Day honors the adoption of "Old Glory" by the Continental Congress on June 14, 1777. Woodrow Wilson was the first president to honor the flag with a special day when he proclaimed June 14, 1916, as Flag Day. President Harry Truman officially signed Flag Day into law on Aug. 4, 1949.

The creation of Flag Day was the dream of Bernard J. Cigrand. In 1885, the 19-year-old teacher in Fredonia, Wis., celebrated the first Flag Day by placing a small flag in a bottle on his desk, teaching his students about the history of the flag, and reciting a ceremonial pledge. Cigrand's efforts over the next 31 years finally led to a national holiday to honor the flag.

That ceremonial pledge officially became the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag much later. We will celebrate the 100th birthday of the pledge on Columbus Day, Oct. 12. The national emblem is a symbol of our great country, our heritage, and our place in the world. We owe respect to our flag, as it represents the highest ideals of individual liberty, justice and equal opportunity for all.

Pantex treatment will be examined

The rap is on heavy metal in the sewage facility

AMARILLO (AP) - Environmental investigators will begin this month to survey an aging sewage treatment facility as well as drainage ditches at the Pantex nuclear weapons plant near Amarillo.

Pantex spokesman Tom Walton said the investigations are routine for the 50-year-old plant, which serves as America's final assembly and disassembly point for nuclear warheads.

Walton said the 40-year-old sewage treatment facility is no longer used. But sludge stored in the concrete and gravel lined pits may have collected heavy metals harmful to soil and ground water, he said.

"The investigation will determine if there is any heavy metals in the sludge," Walton said Monday. "It will also determine if there are any cracks in the cement holding ponds, and if so, it will determine if any offensive materials may have gotten into the soil."

The $650,000 contract to investigate the sludge-filled sewage pits has been awarded to Woodward Clyde, a Kansas City-based environmental firm.

Walton said about five playa lakes or drainage ponds with access to runoff from the plant during rainstorms will also be inspected.

"An investigation will determine if there are any hazardous materials in the lakes, and if we do find some, we will bore holes and find out how much there is, if a plume is involved and whether it has spread," Walton said.

A $5.4 million contract for field work on the playa lakes was awarded to Radian Corp. of Austin.

Walton said the investigations are simply a matter of maintenance.

"There is no public harm," Walton said. "It's just a part of our overall remedial investigation out here."

Political climate may hurt project

Super collider becomes focus of House fight

WASHINGTON (AP) - House members "spooked" by this year's odd political climate may be less inclined to support the $8.25 billion super collider, one of the project's most ardent backers acknowledges.

But Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, remains convinced he and other supporters can line up the necessary House votes this week to keep the project going.

"I don't see any scenario where we lose," he said Monday.

Four congressmen on the other side of the issue, however, are just as determined to prevail.

They are trying to introduce an amendment to strip $450 million from the $483.7 million approved last week by the House Appropriations Committee for fiscal 1993. The remaining $33.7 million would be used to shut down the super collider, which is being built south of Dallas.

The four - Democratic Reps. Dennis Eckart of Ohio, Jim Slattery of Kansas, Howard Wolpe of Michigan, and Republican Sherwood Boehlert of New York - want the House to consider their amendment Wednesday, when it votes on the energy and water development appropriations bill.

Eckart and Wolpe are retiring at the end of this year, so this is their last chance to kill a project they contend is a waste of taxpayer dollars in a period of ever-growing competition for federal funds.

Collider supporters note a similar amendment failed last year. But they are somewhat nervous because their project is part of the first appropriations package to come before the House since a balanced-budget constitutional amendment failed last week.

Death of the balanced budget measure is placing additional pressure on the House Democratic leadership to find other ways to rein in federal deficit spending.

"Obviously, a number of members want to position themselves as watchdogs of the public purse," one collider supporter said Monday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"We are deeply concerned," he said. "While I think we have confidence that we have the votes to sustain the project, we are working very, very hard."

The White House and Energy Department also are pulling out the stops to rally support for the project, he said.

"Through no fault of the super collider, the actual program is going to be a tougher vote this year because of the general climate," said Barton, in whose district the collider is being built.

"If we can focus people's attention on the actual performance, we are going to be fine," he said. "If they vote on some sort of outside political perception, then we've got a problem. People are spooked about a lot of things that are not at all related to the SSC."

Barton wasn't the only one who predicted victory in the House.

"We are cautiously optimistic that we will carry the vote," said Russ Wylie, a spokesman for the super collider laboratory in Dallas.

The Eckart-Slattery amendment "doesn't come as a surprise," he said.

Wylie declined to speculate what effect the current belt-tightening mood could have on the collider.

"Not being a political operative, all I can do is state the obvious facts that the federal support for basic civilian science is less than one percent of total federal expenditures," he said.

"Obviously, if one wants to balance the budget this is hardly a productive area in which to begin."

But Wylie acknowledged supporters are concerned that the super collider may become a symbol to House members eager to demonstrate to constituents that there is a new fiscal responsibility in Congress.

"This is the first appropriations bill after the balanced budget amendment debate," Wylie noted. "I think it invites debate."

Last week, the Appropriations Committee approved $483.7 million for the collider - $166.3 million shy of what President Bush was seeking for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Supporters say cutbacks will swell the price tag of the collider and delay its completion, currently expected in late 1999.

Persons interested in helping host a team or helping in other way may call the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce at 364-3333. Up to 100 pre-World War II cars will be in the race.

Decision won't escalate kidnapping

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's no shortage of terrorists and drug smugglers basking in foreign havens that U.S. prosecutors would love to put on trial in this country. And the two Libyans charged with bombing Pan Am Flight 103 probably top the list.

In addition, a senior Justice Department official familiar with Attorney General William P. Barr's thinking noted that several years ago - before the Pan Am indictments - Barr told Congress the most likely snatch target was "someone who blew an American airliner out of the skies, now basking in a safe haven."

Barr was testifying in defense of his predecessor, Dick Thornburgh, supporting the legality of snatches that had grown in number during the Reagan administration. The FBI had asked Barr, then an assistant attorney general, to prepare the opinion because Thornburgh was rejecting further operations.

Barr already shows signs he may be more willing than Thornburgh to act. From vacation on Monday, he quickly issued a statement hailing the Supreme Court ruling as "an important victory in our ongoing efforts against terrorists and narco-traffickers."

With those two groups in mind, here are some other possible targets:

-Frank Terpil, convicted in absentia in 1981 of conspiring to sell machine guns to undercover agents and sentenced to 53 years in prison. Terpil, said by a defector to have operated from Cuba since 1984, also was charged with renegade CIA agent Ed Wilson with selling explosives to Libya's Moammar Gadhafi.

-Robert Vesco, who fled during the Nixon administration from charges of looting Investors Overseas Services of $224 million. He also was indicted for allegedly trying to buy his way back into the United States with a $200,000 contribution to Nixon's 1972 campaign committee.

Fidel Castro acknowledged Vesco has been living in Cuba since 1982.

In 1989, Vesco was indicted for allegedly persuading his hosts to allow cocaine-laden airplanes to fly over Cuba en route to the Bahamas.

-Khun Sa, the alias for Chang Chi-Fu, the international heroin trade's "Prince of Death." He was indicted March 15, 1990, for allegedly smuggling 3,500 pounds of heroin to the United States from his hideaway at the borders of Burma, Laos and Thailand.

-Marc Rich, indicted in 1983 on charges of tax evasion, racketeering and participating in illegal oil deals with Iran while U.S. hostages were held there. Rich appeared on NBC-TV's "Dateline NBC" in April from his headquarters in Zug, Switzerland.

Program offers self help for rural communities

In one Texas community, a rural social science program has helped turn a business idea into a reality.

"The problem was what to do with the unemployed dairy farmers and their workers--they needed jobs," said Rev. Mike Barron, minister of First Presbyterian Church in Sulphur Springs. "We had an idea, but really didn't know how to go about doing it."

Barron found that the Rural Social Science program developed by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service proved a useful guide in starting a wildflower business that sold fresh and dried flowers and herbs. The business, which began in January, provided jobs for a couple of farmers who had lost some land and equipment and nine other workers.

"We've lost a number of full-time farmers, some of whom were members of the church," Barron said. "This is a pilot project to show farmers that this type of business can help diversify agriculture. For example, fertilizer and hay that's needed for the business can be supplied by farmers in the area."

"One institution that exists in most areas is the church, which can help encourage people who understand the needs of their community to become leaders," said Dr. David Ruesink, program coordinator and former Extension sociologist.

"The rural social science program grew out of a need by rural ministers to learn more about the communities they serve. It especially helps those who have never studied rural social science or who are working in a rural community perhaps for the first time."

The program, which began in 1988, consists of two courses--"The Rural Church in America" and "Discover the Uniqueness of the Rural Community." Each 36-hour course is given to groups of six to 10 people on a schedule that the group determines is convenient. One person is trained beforehand by Extension to assist the group.

The Discover course focuses on how rural communities are changing and provides practical advice on how to work with the local power structure. The Rural Church course reviews how the church has made a difference in rural America by examining how it responds to social and demographic changes, crises and specific types of ministry.

"The part you see on Sunday morning is just the tip of the iceberg as far as the rural ministry is concerned," said Dean Boyd, Extension graduate assistant. "The minister, usually acting alone, wears many different hats."

Ruesink said the program provides participants with a better understanding of the community from three sources-- materials from a text, interaction with others, and by completing and sharing the findings of a research project on a practical problem.

Besides investigating whether a wildflower business was feasible, Rev. Barron also established a more accurate count of the hispanic population in Hopkins and Delta counties, a total almost three times the number reported by the Census Bureau.

This research helped the community apply for $200,000 in grants. Nearly $100,000 already has been donated to start the wildflower business and a woman's cooperative, which allows hispanic women to learn English, job skills and obtain high school diplomas. A day care center also was established, creating more jobs.

Although, the wildflower work crew is putting in long hours as the demand increases, the business is not yet turning a profit, Barron said. He predicts it will take at least two to three years before this happens. Right now, flowers are being sold to local florists, shops in Dallas and West Coast.

The rural social science program also encourages better relationships among organizations in the community, Ruesink said.

"For 40 years, I had noticed different clubs in my community, but didn't know anything about their origins or benefits until I participated in the program," said Joe Radford of Tyler, Extension Service agent for Smith County.

"The clubs had different aims and purposes, yet each wanted to do something to benefit the community. The program awakened my mind to the wholeness of the community, and I can now help newcomers find groups that they can relate to."

Community leadership may have nothing to do with occupation or social rank or status, Boyd said. Therefore, anyone who takes time to be an active leader may be a good target for this program.

"The people involved in these courses may not be the ones who can directly cause economic changes in the community, but they can encourage others through their understanding of economic development," Ruesink said. "So it's a seed-planting process."

Researchers hope to develop new drugs

The discovery of genes responsible for how drugs affect the body could someday lead to safer surgery according to scientists at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"Our findings could lead to the development of safer and more effective anesthetic drugs," said Dr. Glenn Kirsch, an associate professor of anesthesiology at Baylor. "Some of the current drugs, when combined in different forms, can be risky and can cause side effects."

Kirsch said although anesthetics are generally safe, he hopes that improved drugs will be developed that more accurately control pain.

The research team identified genes in rat brains that encode five types of ion channels responsible for brain impulses.

Ion channels are electrically sensitive proteins that are found on the surface of nerve and muscle cells. Much like an electrical current moving through wires, ions move across cell membranes through "channels", controlling thought processes, sensory perceptions and movement.

Kirsch and his colleagues found receptor sites where drugs "stick" to certain ion channels, giving the researchers new clues to the brain's response to anesthetics and many nerve drugs.

In collaboration with Baylor's Department of Molecular Physiology and Biophysics, the team is pinpointing parts of the channel that may control vital bodily functions, such as heart rate and brain activity.

NEW YORK (AP) - Sidney Lumet is still fuming over a threatened union work stoppage during last year's filming of "A Stranger Among Us," and says he won't make any more movies in the city for a while.

The filmmaker sent Mayor David Dinkins a letter on Thursday saying he was especially bothered given his long support of the city's film industry.

Lumet said members of Local 52 of the Motion Picture Studio Mechanics claimed their contract entitled them to 10 hours pay, even though the job required only four hours work.

Lumet said the crew went back to work after he said "I have a picture to do. I don't fight." But he said that did not rectify the "insulting" incident.

Rickman takes state HS goat tying championship

Chasity Rickman of Hereford won the state championship of goat tying over the weekend at the Texas High School Rodeo Association's State Finals in Abilene.

Rickman beat out 76 girls from all over Texas for the title and a saddle. She went into the short round trailing the leader by .15 seconds. Rickman's time of 8.439 seconds in the short round beat the leader by .4, and Rickman was left as the winner.

Samantha Winters, also of Hereford, competed at the state finals in goat tying and barrel racing but didn't make the short round in either.

Rickman made the short round in breakaway roping, but missed and didn't get a time. She didn't make the short round in barrel racing.

Rickman will tie goats in the national finals in Shawnee, Okla., July 19-26.

Feedyard Challenge winners

Tri-State captures Feedyard Challenge

The Tri-State Cattle Feeders team of Bob Sims, Glenn Deen, Chick Russell and B.J. Gilliland shot a 59 to win the "A" flight of the Third Annual Feedyard Challenge golf tournament Saturday.

The event was played at Pitman Municipal Golf Course as part of the Rhinestone Roundup. All proceeds go to benefit the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame.

The Tri-State team edged Barrett-Crofoot by one stroke. Barrett-Crofoot consisted of Ron Weishaar, James McDowell, Evelyn Walterscheid and Rodney Barrett.

The "B" flight was won by the Mc 6 Feedyard team of Virgil Marsh, Gary Gosdin, Kenneth Eastwood and John Sherrod. They shot a 64 to beat 7-X Cattle Feeders' 67. The 7-X team was Art Clark, Stan Isaacson, Monte Cochran and Charles Hoover.

Scott Keeling won a grand prize drawing for a set of irons.

Easy Rider

Rex Burke, riding near Westway, was the winner of the Wheelfolk bicycling club's time trials Saturday.

Cycling club holds race

The Hereford Wheelfolk, a recently formed bicycling club, held the first of a series of time trials Saturday. Riders rode a four-mile course west of Westway--two mile west, then back. The course was made difficult by uphill grades and a stiff headwind on the riders' way back.

Rex Burke had the best time: 10 minutes and 10 seconds, for an average of 23.6 miles per hour. Harold Brigrance was second in 11:09

(21.5 mph); Jake Northcutt was third in 11:39 (20.6); Donny Henson was fourth in 11:46 (20.4); and Max Borden was fifth in 12:32 (19.2).

The trials will be held all summer, every Saturday at 6:30 p.m. Each rider will have his five fastest times added together to determine the summer's fastest rider.

The trials are open to the public. There is no fee; only a bicycle and helmet are required.

Hereford split two games of a West Texas Summer Baseball League tripleheader Saturday at Caprock's field in Amarillo. In the second game, Hereford held off a Frenship rally to win 8-7 but then got pounded by Randall 17-3 in the third game.

The tripleheader was moved from Randall High School because of wet conditions. Results of the first game, between Randall and Frenship, were not available.

Against Frenship, Hereford was boosted by a three-run homer from Jerry Rincon. It came in the third inning after Rene Cano had doubled and Stacey Sanders had bunted for a single. Hereford coach Bill Watts called Rincon's homer a "mammoth shot."

"It not only cleared the fence, it cleared a four-lane street and went onto Caprock's practice field. That's where it stopped," Watts said.

Rincon also had driven in Hereford's first run, singling in Cano in the first. Cano had walked and stolen second base.

The home run put Hereford up 4-2, but Frenship came back to tie in the bottom of the third. The score stayed 4-4 until the sixth, when Hereford got three.

Ruben Ramos singled and Russ Watts reached on an error. Both scored on Ralph Holguin's triple, and J.J. Rico singled to drive Holguin home.

Hereford added an insurance run in the top of the seventh on back-to-back doubles by Cano and Sanders. That run became important when Frenship scored three runs in the bottom of the inning before being finished off.

Holguin started the game on the mound and pitched two innings. Ramos pitched the rest of the game.

In Hereford's other game, Randall scored eight runs in the second inning to take the game away early.

"Everything they hit had eyes," Watts said. "We didn't make errors; everything they hit was just off our fingers."

Pay Hastings started the game on the mound and Rincon relieved in the second.

Hereford didn't score until the fourth inning, when Cano singled and scored on Ramos' double. Hereford got two more in the fifth when Cano singled, went to second on Sanders' sacrifice bunt and scored on Ramos' single. Ramos scored on Russ Watts' single.

Hereford splits pair of baseball games

Hereford is to get another shot at Randall today at 6 at Raider Field.

Cano's 5-for-5 performance Saturday pushes his batting average in five summer league games to .688 (11-for-16). Cano, who serves as Hereford's leadoff hitter, has scored seven runs.

Speculation begins about third Bulls title

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - It came so soon that he hadn't had the chance to stare into the trophy and savor the picture of his own golden reflection smiling back.

Three-peat? "You guys," Michael Jordan said, tugging the bill of a baseball cap down to cover all of his face save the twisted grin. "You guys never give up."

Hardly ever, anyway. Anytime they come in a row, championship teams invite comparisons. With other teams that have repeated. With great teams of the past. With the team that won the first one.

"Last year was a honeymoon," said coach Phil Jackson, tackling one of those comparisons with typical candor after the Bulls had slapped the Portland Trail Blazers 97-93 in Game 6 on Sunday night to end the NBA Finals. "This year was an odyssey.

"These players did it themselves last year, but this season, we had to dig it out of them."

That is the progression these things generally follow. Repeating certain things, like championships, is supposed to be harder and this one was certainly no exception. With rising expectations came increased scrutiny and not all of it reflected well.

To no one's surprise, Jordan was as superhuman as ever on the court, leading the Bulls to a 67-15 regular-season mark, the third-best in NBA history, and winning his sixth straight scoring championship and second straight MVP award in the bargain.

But to almost everyone's surprise, he was revealed to have a number of human failings off the court, most of them, incredibly enough, growing out of his passion for playing golf. On one occasion, Jordan snubbed the president's traditional Rose Garden photo-op party to tee it up, and then several months later, was found to have been teeing it up with assorted gamblers and con men.

Pippen was plagued by a meteoric rise in his reputation - an Olympic team berth and shoe and soda commercials - followed by a concomitant drop in his stock because of an inconsistent performance throughout the playoffs.

Last year, the Bulls were a pleasant surprise, a team with a great player. This year, amid rising expectations after Pippen stepped forward, and Horace Grant and John Paxson followed to a lesser degree, they were supposed to be a great team.

Did they measure up? "I'll let other people decide that," said general manager Jerry Krause, harangued long and hard in the past for failing to provide Jordan with an appropriate supporting cast. "We just put it together."

The team they put together was without argument a successful one, considering that besides its glowing regular-season record, the Bulls became only the fourth franchise ever to repeat. But how far a rung up the ladder, really, should that earn them?

The Lakers team that finished with the best regular-season record of all time was the 1971-72 edition (69-13) that featured Jerry West, Gail Goodrich and Wilt Chamberlain, as its fourth-leading scorer. By the same token, their championship run was ended the next season by a New York team that carried a defensive specialist named Phil Jackson.

The Philadelphia team that put together the second-best regular-season mark (68-13) won the championship in 1967 featuring the same Wilt Chamberlain, flanked by Chet Walker and Hal Greer and Billy Cunningham. That squad ended an eight-year run at the top by the Boston Celtics, but it, too, enjoyed a championship string of exactly one title.

You could probably muster votes as well for the 1983 Philadelphia team (65-17 regular season) of Julius Erving, Maurice Cheeks, Bobby Jones and the inimitable Moses Malone, whose prophecy of how Philadelphia would mow down playoff opponents - "Four, four, four" - was nearly perfect (the 76ers lost one game in 13).

And you could go almost anywhere down the line of that aforementioned Celtics dynasty (1959-66) that at various times paired Bob Cousy and Bill Russell, Sam and K.C. Jones, Tommy Heinsohn and John Havlicek and make a good argument for that team.

There are other factors to be considered as well. The chore of repeating in the NBA seems easier in recent years, if only because both of the Bulls' immediate predecessors as champions - the Lakers and the Detroit Pistons - turned the trick. And in a sporting year where there already have been an unusually high number of repeats - Duke as NCAA champion, the Pittsburgh Penguins in the Stanley Cup - this might not seem as grand a feat as it likely is.

Violence follows game in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) - For the third straight year, the final NBA game of the season has been followed by looting and violence.

Psychologists and other experts said the arson and looting that followed the Chicago Bulls' second NBA title and similar violence elsewhere is becoming an expected part of the victory party.

"Fans become overly identified with their teams, especially during hard economic times," said Dr. Jim Taylor, associate psychology professor at Nova University in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who has studied sports-related violence. "When the team wins, that boosts them unbelievably."

"And people will just follow along - you look around to see how everyone else reacts, and if no one else is calling the police, it's not really an emergency."

Revelry turned riotous Sunday night and early Monday morning after the Bulls beat the Portland Trail Blazers 97-93 in Chicago to clinch their second consecutive title.

More than 1,000 people were arrested. Two people were burned after looters set fire to a South Side store where the two were trying to hide, authorities said. Two police officers were shot, but not seriously wounded, and more than 90 other officers suffered minor injuries, police said. About 100 other people were injured.

Cindy Schanstra, 23, is in fair condition at the University of Chicago hospitals suffering from smoke inhalation and burns on 5 percent of her body. Khalid Ali-Risagee, 33, is in serious condition with burns over 15 percent of his body and smoke inhalation.

The pair were trapped in a South Side food and liquor store by looters who set the shop ablaze.

Schanstra, in an interview, said police did not respond to four calls for help.

Twenty-five businesses were looted on the West Side, 11 stores were damaged on ritzy Michigan Avenue and scores of other businesses elsewhere were raided by revelers.

The police bomb and arson unit reported eight fires were set in shops and abandoned buildings. Vandals damaged 61 police vehicles, 52 buses and 68 subway cars.

Thousands of celebrants poured into the streets from a strip of nightclubs in the Rush Street district and some jumped atop two unoccupied taxis, flattening and flipping them.

It was only the latest in a series of post-championship celebrations in the United States that turned violent.

After the Bulls won their first NBA championship in 1991 over the Lakers in Los Angeles, more than 100 people were arrested during celebrations in Chicago. Two teen-agers were injured in 1991, though not seriously, and stores were looted at scattered sites.

In Detroit, seven people died and widespread looting erupted in the 1990 celebrations after the Pistons beat the Portland Trail Blazers to take their second NBA title in a row. In 1984, 100,000 poured into the streets after the Detroit Tigers won the World Series; one person died.

"When you celebrate something in America, you break a window and grab something. When people have an excuse to loot, they loot," Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley said at a news conference Monday.

Psychologists said sports celebrations turn violent the same way as riots sparked by other causes: citizens set a different standard of acceptable behavior during the event and use the anonymity a mob presents.

"After a victory like that, people deserve a celebration. But people set the boundaries at different places, and only after it gets really out of control do people think this is wrong. By then it's too late," said Dr. Dan Landers, former president of the American Psychological Association's division of exercise and sport psychology.

SWC basketball teams doing well in Australia

DALLAS (AP) - All-star teams comprised of Southwest Conference men's and women's basketball players are coming out about even against Australia's best in a tour of the land Down Under.

The men's team, which has a 2-1 record halfway through the tour, suffered a 93-88 loss Monday to the Australian Olympic team.

The women's team (1-1), which had its tour-opening game with Illawara cancelled, defeated the Sydney Comets 91-89 Sunday on a buzzer-beating layup by Texas Tech's Krista Kirkland.

The women all-stars were defeated 100-86 Monday by the Australian Olympic Development team.

The SWC men erased a 47-37 halftime deficit against the Australian Olympic Team, featuring former U.S. college players Andrew Gaze (Seton Hall), Andrew Vlahov (Stanford) and Luc Longley (New Mexico).

But the SWC all-stars could not overcome the shooting of Gaze, who led all scorers with 29 points.

The game was played before a packed house of 4,400 people. Mike Wilson of SMU led SWC scorers with 21 points.

Baylor's Willie Sublett added 16 points while Texas Tech's Will Flemons had 14 and Houston's Charles Outlaw scored 10.

Texas A&M's Damon Johnson scored 26 points and led six players in double figures in the SWC all-stars' 144-69 victory Sunday over Manly Warringah.

Rice's Torrey Andrews chipped in 25 points, and Wilson added 17 as the SWC players raced to an imposing 72-20 halftime lead.

Five SWC players scored in double figures in the men's tour-opening 122-107 victory against Illawara on Saturday.

Flemons led the SWC all-stars with 24 points and 11 rebounds. Sublett added 23 points and six rebounds.

The women all-stars overcame a 9-point deficit midway through the second half against Australia's Olympic development squad. But the SWC women, led by Fey Meeks of Texas with 22 points, could not hold on.

Houston's Sharon Bennett added 16 points, 12 in the second half. Kirkland sank a layup at the buzzer to give the SWC women's team its victory over the Sydney Comets.

Texas A&M's Beth Burket paced the SWC women's all-stars with 23 points and 10 rebounds while Baylor's Kristin Mayberry chipped in 15 points. Bennett added 11.

The SWC men's team has three games remaining on its tour schedule while the women have two games left.

New Look

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The Los Angeles Coliseum will have a new look when the 1994 football season begins.

The Coliseum, home to both college and pro teams, will undergo extensive renovations after the 1992 NFL season ends. The renovations are scheduled to be completed in time for the 1994 campaign.

The new configuration will create nearly twice as many seats between the goal lines, about 40,000 as compared to the current 22,000. The face lift is expected to cost about $150 million and will be privately financed.

Reardon saves No. 342

By The Associated Press

Jeff Reardon did what he always has done. George Brett did what he always used to do.

Reardon set the all-time record for saves Monday night, retiring the New York Yankees in the ninth inning of a 1-0 Boston Red Sox victory. Reardon's 342nd save broke Hall of Famer Rollie Fingers' mark.

"My heart was pumping from the fourth inning on. I was really nervous in the bullpen," Reardon said. "I wanted to get it over with. I wanted to get it" at home.

"I really believe it's a big thing," added Reardon, 37. "Rollie Fingers was probably one of the best pitchers ever and, I believe, the greatest relief pitcher. It's nice to be up there with him."

Brett paced Kansas City's 7-0 rout of Minnesota with three hits and an RBI. That's nothing special for Brett.

What was different was his first appearance at third base since May 15, 1987. With Gregg Jefferies injured, manager Hal McRae opted for Brett at third.

"I don't think that at 39 I can play third or first every day," Brett said. "We have two good players at the only positions I can play. When I'm needed, I'll fill in accordingly for a day or two."

Red Sox 1, Yankees 0

At Boston, John Doherty (3-2), who missed nearly two full seasons with elbow problems before his first start this season on May 17, was headed for his first shutout in 67 career starts before being removed for Reardon to start the ninth.

New York's Scott Sanderson also was impressive, allowing three hits and a run on Phil Plantier's fourth homer of the year leading off the fifth.

Royals 7, Twins 0

At Minneapolis, Brett supplied plenty of offense and a satisfactory defense.

"I expected them to bunt on me. I'm not stupid," said Brett.

That bunt came in the first inning, by Chuck Knoblauch.

"If I had a little speed and could bunt and I knew they had a guy at third who hadn't been there in five years, I'd bunt, too," said Brett. "Fortunately for me, he bunted to the pitcher."

Mike Magnante, Rusty Meacham and Jeff Montgomery combined for the shutout.

Rangers 5, Angels 2

At Anaheim, Juan Gonzalez continued his power surge with his 15th homer, his sixth in seven games. That gave Texas a 3-0 lead in the first inning and the Angels never caught up.

Jim Abbott (2-9) allowed 13 hits and five runs.

Todd Burns, invited to spring training by the Rangers as a non-roster player, did not allow an earned run in his second start since coming out of the bullpen. Burns recorded his first victory as a starter since Sept. 29, 1990, when he beat the Rangers for Oakland.

Jeff Russell worked the ninth for his 17th save.

Athletics 3, Brewers 2

At Oakland, the A's light hitters won the game. Jerry Browne's bases-loaded single with none out in the 10th did the job after Mike Bordick walked to open the inning, Walt Weiss followed with an infield single and Lance Blankenship walked.

Dennis Eckersley (2-0), the fourth Oakland pitcher, threw two scoreless innings for the victory.

Orioles 6, Indians 5

At Cleveland, Rick Sutcliffe became the fifth major leaguer to fail to get his 10th victory this season. Randy Milligan's game-winning homer in the ninth came too late for Sutcliffe (9-4), who lasted 6 1-3 innings.

Boston's Roger Clemens, Texas' Kevin Brown, Atlanta's Tom Glavine and Seattle's Dave Fleming also failed in their attempts for victory No. 10.

Mariners 4, White Sox 1

At Seattle, Jay Buhner had a big game in the field and at bat.

Buhner broke a tie with a two-run single in a four-run sixth inning. He made an outstanding catch in right field to save two runs to end the top of the sixth. With runners at first and second, Steve Sax hit a sinking fly ball into the corner. Buhner made a lunging catch that carried him into the wall.

Avery outduels Hershiser

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The last time Orel Hershiser lost to Atlanta, the Braves had a starting rotation of Doyle Alexander, Charlie Puleo, David Palmer, Zane Smith and Rick Mahler, and it looked like they might never catch up to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

That was on Aug. 8, 1987, four days before the Braves traded Alexander to Detroit for minor leaguer John Smoltz, nine days before Tom Glavine made his major league debut and about a month before Steve Avery started his senior year in high school.

Things sure have changed since then, huh?

On Monday night, Avery outduelled Hershiser and the streaking Braves shut out Los Angeles 2-0, the fifth straight loss for the visiting Dodgers. Atlanta won its fifth in a row and its 14th in 16 games.

Avery (5-5) pitched a five-hitter for his second shutout of the season. He is 7-1 lifetime against Los Angeles, including a 2-1 victory five days earlier at Dodger Stadium.

Hershiser (6-4) had won 12 consecutive decisions against Atlanta in the past five seasons. He has a 19-7 career mark vs. the Braves.

"I guess I was due," Hershiser said. "Maybe Avery will be due in about two years. I've had my streak, and maybe he'll have his."

In other games, Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh 4-1, Cincinnati defeated San Francisco 7-5, Montreal downed New York 4-1, San Diego beat Houston 7-1 and Chicago defeated St. Louis 7-1.

Avery struck out three and walked one in his third straight victory. He threw 110 pitches and estimated that 40 to 45 were changeups.

Hershiser gave up four hits in seven innings, including a solo home run by Deion Sanders in the seventh. The Braves got their first run in the second inning on a single by Avery, a walk to Sanders, a hit by pitch and David Justice's RBI grounder.

Padres 7, Astros 1

Craig Lefferts, trying for the first complete game of his career, pitched seven shutout innings before tiring in the eighth at the Astrodome.

Lefferts (8-4) allowed seven hits and left after a double by Eric Anthony and an RBI single by Scott Servais with two outs in the eighth.

Dan Walters' two-run single highlighted a four-run first inning against Butch Henry (1-6). Fred McGriff hit a two-run single in the second.

Phillies 4, Pirates 1

Terry Mulholland, facing a lineup at Pittsburgh missing the injured Barry Bonds, stopped Pittsburgh on five hits.

Lloyd McClendon, subbing for Bonds, hit an RBI single. He also misplayed a carom in left field, allowing a run to score.

Zane Smith (5-5) gave up RBI doubles in the top of the first inning to John Kruk and Mariano Duncan and an eighth-inning solo homer to Dave Hollins.

Reds 7, Giants 5

Chris Sabo's two-run double rallied Cincinnati.

Sabo doubled during a four-run fifth inning as the host Reds overcame a 4-1 deficit. Hal Morris hit a two-run double in the seventh.

Tom Browning (5-4) won despite giving up four runs on eight hits in five innings. Mike Jackson (2-2) was the loser.

Norm Charlton went two innings and got his 15th save.

Expos 4, Mets 1

Mark Gardner and John Wetteland teamed on a three-hitter at Shea Stadium.

Gardner (5-5) gave up two hits in seven innings and Wetteland closed for his 10th save.

Anthony Young (2-5) lost his fifth consecutive decision. Gardner tripled in the fifth inning, scored the tying run on Delino DeShields' single and Moises Alou hit a sacrifice fly. Marquis Grissom hit a two-run double in the ninth.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 1

In the fastest NL game of the season, Chicago needed only 2:01 to win its fifth in a row.

Greg Maddux (7-6) pitched a four-hitter. He struck out five and walked one.

Maddux also drove in two runs at Wrigley Field.

Bob Tewksbury (6-2) pitched six innings and gave up five runs, four of them earned, on nine hits, including Hector Villanueva's three-run homer.

'Boss' may not return too soon

NEW YORK (AP) — Suddenly, George Steinbrenner's return to baseball is no sure thing.

Commissioner Fay Vincent, who was expected to announce Monday that Steinbrenner could resume control of the New York Yankees next season, instead said a decision had been deferred indefinitely.

Vincent did not say what the snag was, but apparently his office is looking into reports that Steinbrenner may have had some forbidden involvement with the American League team in the last two years.

"In the last few days, new information has come to light that requires a review by the commissioner's office," said a statement released by Vincent's office Monday. "The information relates to Mr. Steinbrenner's conduct under his July 30, 1990, agreement with the commissioner. Pending further consideration of the quality and reliability of that information, the commissioner will not take any action concerning Mr. Steinbrenner's request."

Sparkle this summer with accessories

Be they bags, belts, bangles or other baubles, well-chosen accessories can punch up your summer wardrobe without KO'ing your wallet. And this season, accessories offer witty takes on Americana, ethnic prints and animal magnetism.

Besides fitting your budget, they never fail to fit the body and the times. And they tally in among the biggest sellers season after season: Accessories magazine estimates consumers spent about $17 billion for them in 1991.

"You can really update your wardrobe without putting a big dent in your pocketbook by introducing accessories like jewelry, a handbag, scarf or hat," says Steven Hedaya, New York-based president of Capezio handbags.

Take the handbag - literally. The trendiest ones are meant to be toted around by little top handles and are structured, geometrically shaped and no bigger than a school lunch box.

Many of these palm-sized purses are brightly colored, closely mirroring the palette of summer shoes in fuchsia, lemon, lime and orange. Capezio offers Kelly bags in seven vivid colors, $48 each.

Stir up the ethnic mood with faux ivory wide bangles, copper bracelets, wooden beaded necklaces, turbans in colorful native prints and banded straw hats.

"The native-ethnic look in accessories is especially appealing with the season's madras shorts and printed bra tops," says Karlene Lukovitz, executive editor of Accessories magazine in New York.

Then take a walk on the wild side with animal prints.

You'll find them charging out in full force on everything from jewelry to scarves, hair accessories, belts and handbags, says Lukovitz. "You name it, there's an animal print on it - and just wait till the trend really explodes this fall," Lukovitz says.

Echo Design Group offers a collection of safari-inspired scarves, including bold zebra prints and a map pattern with African nation postage stamps. A 36-by-36 silk square is $55.

Norma Kamali, who introduced her first accessories collection in May, has zebra print sunglasses in black and white or multicolors. About $90, they're sold at the OMO Norma Kamali boutique in New York and Bloomingdale's.

For more animal magnetism, try Susan Cummings' sterling silver button covers. Choose a lion, lioness with cub, elephant, gorilla or giraffe, $25 each at Saks Fifth Avenue. Wear them individually, as cuff links or by the zoolful.

Closer to home, cowboy and American Indian influences are riding high. Paying tribute to home on the range are straw cowboy hats, gingham-covered earrings in fruity colors, silver and turquoise jewelry, fringed handbags, denim headbands and bandannas.

Kokin offers a straw cowboy hat in red, blue or black, studded with metallic stars, $64 at Saks Fifth Avenue. Red bandanna print nylon togs, $8 at Contempo, fairly shout cowgirl chic.

Those whose tastes run more to the classic might opt for the wisdom of pearls. Invest in a couple of ropefuls and wear them in multiples for the newest look, says Beth Miller, New York fashion coordinator for Napier jewelry. A 16-inch two-strand pearl necklace by Napier is $37.50; an 18-inch three-strand necklace runs $55.

Costume jewelry lends a ladylike touch to soften pinstriped suits, flannel vests and other tailored men's wear styles currently in vogue, says Miller.

Apropos the dandy theme, look for haberdashery-style print ties and suspenders, ascots, cuff links, pocket watches and straw fedoras.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a single guy who makes $55,000 a year. I own my own home, am reasonably goodlooking, dress decently and have high morals and good character. Yet, I can't get a date.

The reason I have no woman in my life is that I live in an isolated northern Canadian town where single guys outnumber available women by about 25 to 1. The females up here literally have their pick.

I recently walked into a neighborhood pub with a pal of mine and his girlfriend. I counted 61 unescorted men in there. The only women were the barmaid and my friend's date. We played pool and had supper. The hunger in the eyes of the men there was pitiful. They were gawking as if they'd never seen a woman before.

On the other hand, I vacationed last year in a southern Canadian city that has been devastated by bad times. Jobs there are impossible to find, so the young men have left for greener pastures. Single women outnumber single men by about 20 to 1. I had no problem filling my date book.

When nice guys say they can't get a date, I understand. I know I'll never get married if I stay in Chetwynd. It is an isolated town of 5,000 and the climate is brutal. I'm talking 40 degrees below zero in the winter. There are lots of jobs but not many people want to settle here.

Some day when I get it together financially, I'll leave and find some sweet person and make her feel special. But until I'm able to move on, I'll be single, but not by choice. —D.E. in Chetwynd, British Columbia

DEAR D.E.: When your letter hits the papers you can be sure a lot of women are going to hunt up a map and find out where Chetwynd is.

They'll discover it's 700 miles north of Vancouver and about 400 miles northwest of Edmonton. Air Canada flies into Dawson Creek, the nearest city. It's a great place for a summer vacation, girls. Contact your travel agent and report back to me after you've made the trip and found Mr. Wonderful.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When does public nudity become indecent exposure?

A family in our apartment complex has six children who run around nude about eight months out of the year. The oldest boy is now 7. The other boys are 5, 3, 1. The girls are 4 and 2. When the family gets packed for an outing or a picnic, the preschoolers often get into the car naked.

I'm not particularly close to these neighbors, so I hardly think it's my place to say anything. The other parents in this complex seem indifferent, although no one else's children do this.

When I read stories in the papers about sexually active 10-year-olds, I wonder if this is how those kids got started.

Is this indecent exposure? Should I call the police and have them speak to the parents? Obviously the apartment manager isn't going to do anything since these children run all over the place and he certainly has seen them. What do you suggest, Ann?—Seen It All in Oklahoma City

DEAR SEEN IT: According to the Oklahoma City Police Department, nudity by itself is not considered indecent exposure.

You should speak to the parents, however, for a better reason. Naked children are prime targets of degenerates and child molesters. These youngsters should not be permitted to play outside unclothed no matter what the weather.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Recent study finds vasectomies safe

Scientists today offered what they said was reassuring evidence about the safety of vasectomies.

The study, based on the experiences of almost 30,000 men, found that those who have vasectomies appear to live just as long as those who do not.

Some earlier studies have hinted that men with vasectomies might run a higher risk of heart disease or cancer of the prostate gland or testicles. The new work found no sign of these problems.

The only area of concern raised by the new research was a discovery of an unexpectedly high rate of cancer in those who had vasectomies more than 20 years earlier. Even in this group, however, the extra cancer was offset by less heart disease, so their overall death rate was the same as men who never had vasectomies.

"Overall, this is a very reassuring study, but we will have to look more carefully at the long-term cancer effects," said Dr. Edward Giovannucci, the study's principal author. It was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Just how vasectomies could contribute to heart trouble or cancer is unclear. Many men develop antibodies to sperm after the procedure, and some theorize that this could somehow be hazardous.

Because vasectomies are so common, even a small increase in risk would be important. More than 15 percent of men over 40 have had the procedure.

"What is somewhat worrisome is an elevation in cancer mortality after 20 years," Giovannucci said. "We don't have a good explanation for this. As far as I know, this is the first time it's been seen in any study."

Giovannucci's work found that those who had undergone vasectomies at least two decades earlier were 44 percent more likely than other men to die of cancer. Lung cancer accounted for most of this increased risk, although those getting vasectomies were no more likely than other men to have smoked.

Among men who had their vasectomies more than 20 years earlier, 69 had died of cancer. Based on the comparison group of men without vasectomies, 48 cancer deaths would have been expected.

Lung cancer accounted for 30 of the cancer deaths. Fourteen such deaths would have been expected.

However, among these men with longtime vasectomies, the death rate from heart disease was 15 percent lower than in the other men.

The study was based on 29,214 men, half of whom had undergone vasectomies before 1976. The men were husbands of women who participated in the Nurses' Health Study, a research project at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Biking with kids

Taking a youngster along on your bicycle for a leisurely ride or a quick trip to the store can be more like child's play with a well-made child carrier seat and close adherence to these helpful hints:

—Children should always wear a bicycle helmet when carried on a bicycle. Adult cyclists should wear helmets also.

—Night riding with children should be avoided. If it's absolutely necessary, a rear reflector should be installed on the carrier.

—Choose the right carrier. The child's seat should be adjustable, include a harness, thickly padded grab bar, foot straps and should be suitable for children up to 40 pounds.

—The cyclist must be a strong and experienced rider.

—Riders approaching any dangerous road conditions such as gravel, sand, wet areas, potholes, ice or railroad tracks should stop and walk the bicycle.

—Two people should load the child into the seat: one to place the child in the seat and one to prevent the bicycle from falling.

NEW YORK (AP) - In "Naked Gun 2 1/2," Leslie Nielsen's character pushes a Barbara Bush look-a-like off a balcony, but the actor behaved himself when he met the first lady at a recent White House reception.

"Barbara was in the receiving line, and when she saw me, she rolled her eyes," Nielsen says in Sunday's Parade magazine.

Nielsen says a script is being written for a third installment of the "Naked Gun" series, in which he plays incompetent investigator Lt. Frank Drebin.
