DSGH board won't raise 92-93 tax rate

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher
Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors Tuesday night voted to keep the tax rate at 22 cents for the coming year and approved a management contract renewal with Methodist Hospital of Lubbock.

The board also approved a contract with a physician in residency training, authorized the hospital administrator to negotiate a contract for a strategic plan, and approved a strategic plan for the nursing department at DSGH.

In other business, the board seated Dr. Stan Fry Jr. as a director to fill out the unexpired term of Raymond Schroeder, discussed the financial statements and operations report, heard reports from Dr. Jesse Perales, chief of staff; Renee Hammock, director of nursing; L. V. Watts, EMS director; and Steve Jolly, marketing. The board also approved a plan to take advantage of advance refunding on bonds if the situation arises. Fry was administered the oath of office by Judge Johnnie Turrentine.

Before setting the 1992-93 tax rate, directors discussed whether or not to go with an "effective" tax rate of 22.33 cents per $100 valuation or raise it to the limit allowed without a public hearing (23 cents).

Board chairman John Perrin suggested that the rate be left at the current 22 cents "as a means of indicating our appreciation to taxpayers for their vote of confidence in giving us a large increase last year." Perrin said he realized the district would be "giving up some dollars," because the effective rate of 22.33 cents would provide the same revenue as last year.

Director Mal Manchec said he hated not to go with the effective rate, "because you drop behind on revenues a year and we could wind up in a jam and need a big increase like we did last year." The one-third of a cent difference in the effective rate would mean approximately $16,000 in tax revenues for the year.

Administrator Ron Rives said he preferred going with the effective rate, "but the difference of $16,000 should not make or break us." On a motion by Fry and second by Paul Abalos, the board voted 4-3 to leave the rate at 22 cents.

The physician stipend agreement okayed by the board was the third such contract extended. The agreement with Dr. Glen Alford, currently in a residency program in Odessa, provides a stipend of $25,000 a year for the two years of residency and a guarantee of $120,000 during his first two years of medical practice in Hereford. The doctor will be required to maintain a practice here for four years, starting Aug. 1, 1995. Two other similar contracts were recently approved for doctors who still have three years of residency training to go. The contract provides that a doctor who does not fulfill his obligation will be required to reimburse the district for advance payments on a pro rata basis.

The first year's contract with Methodist Hospital expires Sept. 3, 1992, and directors discussed a renewal contract. Perrin said he thought the relationship "has been very good" and much progress has been made with Methodist's support. After a brief discussion, the board unanimously approved a one-year contract renewal.

A strategic plan for the hospital had been discussed before, and Rives expressed a desire to implement the program at the start of the next fiscal year. "But keep in mind that this is not just dollars we are considering, it must be an investment of time and effort by the hospital administration, medical staff, board and community," said Rives. "We must all buy into the plan so we can act, not just react."

"This is not just dollars we are considering, it must be an investment of time and effort by the hospital administration, medical staff, board and the community."
--Ron Rives

Cost of implementing the plan is estimated at about $30,000. Fry made a motion that the board pursue a contract agreement and put the plan in next year's budget. Directors voted unanimously in approval.

The operations report reflected a loss of $150,359 for July. With non-operating income added, a net revenue of $87,143 was shown. The state provided $217,743 in disproportionate share funds for Medicare.

The hospital has CD's and cash of $1,185,192 for the year to date, with $733,259 coming from the disproportionate share funding. Local tax revenue has provided $1,039,748 for the year (10 months).

GOP ready to nominate Bush; Barb gets her chance tonight

HOUSTON (AP) - Republicans nominate President Bush for a second term tonight, sending him and Dan Quayle on the comeback trail with a toast to family values and a prime-time convention boost from the president's No. 1 fan - his wife, Barbara.

In the best of GOP traditions - and campaign strategies - Republicans turned the night of Bush's renomination into a family affair, with speeches by Mrs. Bush and Marilyn Quayle.

Clouding the festivities was Bill Clinton's double-digit lead in the polls, but Republicans from Bush on down promised on Tuesday to fight back with fervor. "He's fired up," Jeb Bush said of his father. "He eats nails for breakfast."

Bush was working on his speech for Thursday's finale of the Republican National Convention, with intra-party feuds still brewing over how far to go in making new economic proposals. The new chief of the Bush White House and campaign, James A. Baker III, was arriving today to referee.

The president wasn't saying much - except to promise some new faces in his Cabinet if re-elected. "What I think you'll see, as in any second term, are a lot of changes," Bush said in a PBS interview.

Mrs. Bush was headlining today's convention focus on family values, a favorite Republican theme and the umbrella for attacks on Democrats for supporting abortion rights, gay rights and liberal welfare policies.

"I'm really feeling embarrassed about this," she said of advance hoopla. "This is not the world's great speech."

Democrat Clinton began the day - his 46th birthday - in Atlanta, where he and running mate Al Gore joined Jimmy Carter, the former president Republicans love to hate, for a volunteer housebuilding project.

Carter's name came up time and time again as Republicans worked from a familiar convention playbook.

From keynoter Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, Housing Secretary Jack Kemp and others there was a steady chorus of anti-Clinton and anti-Congress rhetoric, much of it borrowed from Republican campaigns past.

To hear them tell it, Clinton is a liberal, eager to raise taxes, unprepared to be commander-in-chief, captive to special interests and puppet to the Democratic leadership of Congress.

"It doesn't put people first, it puts government first," Kemp said of Clinton's plan. "It doesn't empower people, it empowers bureaucracy. It doesn't encourage investment and growth, it spends, and spends, and spends."

Democrats said Republicans sounded like a broken record, running the last campaign over again because they had nothing new to say. Still, they fired back, not only with harsh words but with biting television ads reminding voters of Bush's broken promise on taxes, and the slow crawl of the economy during the Bush years.

"They haven't had anything positive to say about themselves," Clinton said. "If I were the Republicans, I'd be more worried about what I could do for America than how I could bad-mouth Bill Clinton and Al Gore and Hillary Clinton and Tipper Gore."

Even Republican delegates complained that halfway into his convention, Bush had given no reason for four more years.

"He has to tell us where he wants to go," said Wisconsin GOP chairman Dave Optiz. "We'll get him there - he just has to tell us where."

While waiting for those directions, the delegates - and the national television audience - were repeatedly warned about where Clinton would take the country, at least according to the Republican map.

Gramm said that as governor Clinton had done little to lift up his poor state and that Clinton's new approach was really a retread.

VA will track desert vets

WASHINGTON (AP) - Medical centers in Los Angeles, Houston and here are being established as treatment facilities for Persian Gulf veterans suffering mysterious ailments believed related to the oil field fires in the war with Iraq.

"We are prepared to assist any gulf veteran who may be experiencing health problems right now," VA Secretary Edward J. Derwinski said Tuesday.

Some soldiers returning from the Middle East have complained of maladies including fatigue, depression, hair loss, aching joints, rashes and sore and bleeding gums.

The symptoms are believed to be related to environmental contaminants, including fumes from oil fields set on fire by fleeing Iraqi troops.

Derwinski said the three hospitals will have special referral centers for veterans whose evaluations at local VA medical centers have evaded diagnosis. More facilities may be added if "there is a definite pattern" demonstrating the problem is worse than believed, he said.

"This is precautionary," Derwinski said in a telephone interview from Houston. He described the steps Tuesday as an effort to avoid a repeat of the Agent

Orange debacle where veterans' complaints of medical problems went unresolved for years.

"We want to be ahead and on top of this, rather than behind... although we have not seen any unusual patterns yet," he said.

VA spokesman Terry Jemison said there have been a "few cases scattered across the VA." He said the agency is trying to "sensitize people to the Persian Gulf disease process" so that the cases receive high priority.

Derwinski last month sought legislative authority to give Gulf veterans special access to VA hospitals for thorough physical examinations and to enter their health-related data into a computerized tracking registry. Congress has yet to act on the proposal.

The three hospitals were selected because of their medical specialists and academic experts on lung, skin and nerve problems and infectious diseases. The focus will be on groups of symptoms that may be responses to smoke, contaminated food or drink, burning oil wells and other environmental conditions faced by the troops, Derwinski said.

"We're not talking about surgery but effective diagnosis and treatment," said Derwinski. "There shouldn't be any enormous new financial burden but a new, up-front available service to veterans."

Jemison said all VA facilities are looking for any unusual patterns of disease in the Gulf War veterans so that data can be collected and entered into a computerized tracking registry for long-term surveillance.

For example, the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Durham, N.C., is setting up a clinic to treat Gulf veterans. Dr. Thomas Newcomb, the hospital's chief of staff, said the facility has treated only five veterans for symptoms resembling those typical of petrochemical exposure, but he expects that number to grow.

Lottery unveils fourth game; $1 million drawings extended

AUSTIN (AP) - State lottery officials have unveiled a new scratch-off game called Lone Star Millionaire, and said the $1 million grand-prize drawings will continue at least through April.

The fourth scratch-off game offers cash prizes ranging from $2 to $5,000, or a free lottery ticket, or a ticket that makes the holder eligible for a $1 million drawing, officials said Tuesday.

The odds of winning are one in 4.67, with the vast majority of winning tickets either $2 or free-ticket cards.

Tickets with a single star will be eligible for new monthly $1 million drawings. The odds of finding a star are one in 125.

"We're going to continue the excitement of our million-dollar drawings," said Texas Lottery Director Nora Linares.

Currently, scratch-off tickets with the word "Entry" appearing three times are eligible for the $1 million drawing.

The next 140,000 "Entry" tickets received by Sept. 4 from Lone Star Millions and Texas Match Up games will be used to select the seven finalists for the remaining weekly $1 million drawings, Ms. Linares said.

"Entry" tickets received after Sept. 4, and all the tickets with a star on them from the new game will be eligible for the monthly drawings, she said.

She said that Lone Star Millionaire will be used as the "base game" in which the tickets and grand prize drawings will continue through April.

Dollars per person spent on the Texas Lottery through July 30

Randall County	$14.31/person
Deaf Smith County	$18.87 per person
Castro County	$17.25 per person
Oldham County	$37.09 per person
Potter County	$35.82 per person
Parmer County	$44.00 per person

Here are some of the per capita spending figures for the Texas Lottery. In Deaf Smith County, $361,500 has been spent on tickets. In Oldham County, it's been $84,500. In Randall County, it's $1.28 million. In Potter County, $3.5 million. In Parmer County, $434,000. In Castro County, $156,500.

Senior citizens may use the east door; all others should use the west entrance to the Bull Barn.

Medical fund for Martin girl

A medical assistance fund has been established at First National Bank for Taylor Paige Martin, the 10-month-old daughter of Philip and Deanna Martin of Hereford.

The infant will have open heart surgery on Sept. 8 in Lubbock. The fund has been established to help pay expenses for the surgery. Donations may be given to any teller at the bank.

Senior parents meet Thursday

Parents of Hereford High School seniors will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at the HHS auditorium.

All senior parents are urged to attend the meeting to help plan for the class supper and other activities this year.

News Digest

World/National

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration wants new emergency food being airlifted to Somalia sold through merchants rather than given directly to the poor as a way to combat chronic thefts thwarting relief efforts.

NEW YORK - Press-shy Woody Allen went public to deny molesting his children, and charged that the allegations were being used by his ex-lover, Mia Farrow, as a weapon against him in a child-custody dispute.

MONTPELIER, Vt. - Janice Blaisdell started getting sick a couple months after new carpet was installed in her office. Now her life is marked by shots twice a day and extreme nausea and headaches at the slightest whiff of cologne. Similar stories have been heard around the country, and the Environmental Protection Agency is hearing demands for tighter regulation of carpeting.

PHOENIX - When residents of a gang-ridden neighborhood invited the mayor to a meeting to ask for help, it was the gang members themselves who made the strongest argument: They sat in the back of the meeting room, carrying guns. Arizona is one of 25 states that allow people to carry firearms openly without a permit, and the "open carry" law has no age restrictions.

BOSTON - Back in the early 1980s, the phenomenal growth of Wang Laboratories Inc. was emblematic of a region aglow in an economic "miracle." But now Wang, in bankruptcy court and planning to lay off 38 percent of its workforce, reflects an economy simply struggling for solid ground.

Texas

HOUSTON - The Texas delegation applauded Sen. Phil Gramm's feisty keynote speech at the Republican National Convention, but acknowledged there was little new in the address outside of a confession to failing three grades as a youth.

HOUSTON - Sen. Phil Gramm's keynote speech at the Republican National Convention was open season on Democrats, and fueled grumblings about GOP frontrunners for the White House in 1996. President Bush received an honorary black belt and scarfed a mixed platter at his favorite barbecue pit, while other Republicans profiled and partied across town.

HOUSTON - The scenes on TV news are of hundreds of rabid anti-abortion protesters ranting at people they see as the devil's agents, abortion rights supporters standing in front of clinics. But behind the scenes, it's orchestrated street theater designed to grab the attention of 15,000 journalists in town for the Republican National Convention.

HOUSTON - Jack Kemp was in town well before most of the delegates but scoffed at the notion he was getting an early start on 1996. Patrick Buchanan isn't known for subtlety; the last four digits of his convention telephone number are 1-9-9-6. The next crop of presidential prospects is trying to make the most of George Bush's convention.

HOUSTON - President Bush starts a wave of speculation at the Republican National Convention with his prediction that "you'll see plenty of new faces" in his Cabinet if he wins a second term.

HOUSTON - When Maria Ortiz arrived in the United States two years ago from Mexico, she never expected to meet President Bush.

AUSTIN - The House Insurance Committee chairman says it's crucial that lawmakers and the insurance industry work together to solve problems that have put coverage out of some people's reach.

WACO - Forget global warming. Don't worry about the ozone layer. There's something far more important for Texans to worry about. The horned toads, ferocious-looking miniature dinosaurs that stalked red ants across the Central Texas landscape are vanishing.

LEANDER - Fences, locks, microchips and a watchdog couldn't stop thieves from carting away 52 emu chicks valued at $150,000 to $200,000, officials say in reporting that ostrich and emu thefts are rapidly increasing across Texas.

AUSTIN - State officials have accepted the resignation of the Texas High-Speed Rail Authority's executive director and cut the salary for the position. The action came less than two weeks after the release of an audit that alleged the rail authority wasted money on travel, plants, office furniture, bottled water, and legal fees.

LUBBOCK - Damage to the 1992 cotton crop and the resulting loss in wages to workers on the South Plains is significantly higher than originally believed, a state disaster official said Tuesday.

SAN ANTONIO - A San Antonio couple's emotional adoption battle has led a Texas Senate committee to question how social workers consider race and ethnicity when matching adoptive children with new families.

FORT WORTH - The escape of a Tarrant County prisoner wearing an electronic monitor has pointed out a flaw in the tracking system, law enforcement officials say.

LUBBOCK - A 60-year-old Oklahoma woman was spared a prison term for killing her young stepdaughter almost four decades ago because too many people rely on her, a Lubbock County district attorney says.

WASHINGTON - Medical centers in Los Angeles, Houston and here are being established as treatment facilities for Persian Gulf veterans suffering mysterious ailments believed related to the oil field fires in the war with Iraq.

Saddam given ultimatum by allies Iraq told to stop air attacks against Shiite Muslims

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - U.S.-led allies have drawn up an ultimatum for Saddam Hussein, threatening to shoot down Iraqi warplanes and helicopter gunships unless air attacks on Shiite Muslim rebels in the country's south are halted.

The warning by Britain, France and the United States, described by diplomatic sources on Tuesday, comes as tensions rise over difficulties Iraq has given U.N. weapons inspectors and reports of a stepped-up Iraqi campaign against the Shiite rebels.

A series of attacks on Westerners working in the safe haven established for ethnic Kurds in northern Iraq, including the wounding of a U.N. worker this week, has also angered the allies.

Citing reports of napalm attacks, Prime Minister John Major of Britain on Tuesday accused Saddam of "systematic murder" and "genocide" in his campaign against lightly armed Shiite rebels in the marshes of southern Iraq.

He said he supports setting up a safe haven such as the one established for the Kurds in northern Iraq by the nations that defeated Saddam's forces last year in the war over his seizure of Kuwait.

"We will instruct the Iraqis not to fly in that area," Major said in London. "They will be attacked if they fly in the area that is proscribed."

The action would enforce U.N. resolutions that ban most military air traffic in Iraq and the repression of civilians. Pro-Saddam forces crushed Kurd and Shiite uprisings after the war.

Late Tuesday, Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Abdul Amir-Anbari, called the planned allied action "political subversion rather than humanitarian assistance."

He said in an interview that if the allies are really worried about the Shiites they would lift the trade sanctions imposed on Iraq by the United Nations.

A U.N. source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the ultimatum could be delivered to al-Anbari or by American commanders during their weekly meeting with Iraqi commanders in Zakho, northern Iraq.

The source said scores of U.S. planes based in Saudi Arabia would enforce a safety zone for the Shiites in southern Iraq. The United States also has about 90 warplanes aboard the USS Independence in the Persian Gulf.

In London, a government official said Britain would contribute six aircraft to the allied force that would patrol southern Iraqi skies.

The prohibition would deprive Iraq of control of the skies over about half its territory.

The United States and its allies last year prohibited Iraq from using fixed-wing aircraft against the Kurds in northern Iraq, where the Kurds have established their own government.

U.N. Security Council resolutions that ended the Persian Gulf war also demand that Iraq end repression of ethnic groups.

About 200,000 Shiite rebels are living in nearly inaccessible marshes in southern Iraq, and Baghdad has been attacking the region for the past year. About 55 percent of Iraq's 17.5 million people belong to the Shia branch of Islam. Saddam and his ruling circle are Sunni Muslims.

Major denied that President Bush's re-election campaign had anything to do with the new get-tough attitude.

"I'm not just going into an election, and President Mitterrand (of France) is not going into an election, and we both feel very strongly about this issue," he said.

On Tuesday, the latest U.N. weapons inspection team left Iraq after a 10-day mission.

Gun-toting age limit pressed

PHOENIX (AP) - When residents of a gang-ridden neighborhood invited the mayor to a meeting to ask for help, it was gang members themselves who made the strongest argument: They sat in the back of the meeting room, carrying guns.

"These were 13-, 14-year-olds, wearing colors, with guns strapped to their hips," recalled Mayor Paul Johnson.

The mayor got his second shock when he found out the teen-agers weren't doing anything wrong.

Arizona is one of 25 states that allow people to carry firearms openly without a permit, and the "open carry" law has no age restrictions.

Johnson went on to push through an ordinance barring minors from carrying guns in the nation's ninth-largest city without their parents' permission.

The ordinance - part of national trend toward separating kids from their guns - has been imitated by at least one other Arizona community so far.

"It's good common sense," said the mayor, a Democrat. "If you tell someone he has to wait until he's 16 to get a driver's license, he can't vote, he can't buy a lottery ticket, but he can have a gun, something's wrong."

The National Rifle Association is threatening a court challenge to the ordinance.

Gun-control advocates are cheered by such measures.

"There's a definite national trend, on the state and local level, to restrict firearms from people of all ages, but especially from children," said David Weaver, who works with state legislatures for Handgun Control Inc.

Legislation is pending in 26 states to hold adults responsible for allowing a minor access to a firearm, according to the NRA.

Supporters of such measures cite a report in June in the Journal of the American Medical Association that found gunshot wounds were the second-leading cause of death among high school-age Americans. One-third of high school students have access to handguns and 6 percent bring them to school, according to the study.

Under the Phoenix measure, youngsters can be fined $50 fine and the weapon confiscated. Fewer than a dozen weapons have been seized since the ordinance took effect, and nobody has been fined, Sgt. Kevin Robinson said last week.

The NRA has offered to pay for any challenges to the ordinance based on the argument that the city lacks authority to be more restrictive than the state. The NRA's new president, Bob Corbin, is a former Arizona attorney general.

U.N. peacekeeper seeks pact on heavy weapons in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) - The chief of U.N. peacekeepers arrived in Sarajevo today to try to cement an agreement that would give his force supervision over all heavy weapons around the Bosnian capital.

Under the accord, signed Tuesday by Serb nationalists and leaders of Bosnia's Muslim-led government, the big guns would be concentrated in areas under U.N. supervision.

That would enable monitors to determine who is responsible for shelling and to pressure violators to stop.

In Sarajevo, the victims of shelling and sniper fire - are most often civilian supporters of the Bosnian government or refugees from the countryside. Among popular targets for gunners in the hills surrounding the capital have been hospitals and refugee hotels, one of which was hit late Monday by mortar fire that killed five people and set the building ablaze.

"If this agreement works, there will be no shelling in Sarajevo," Zaim Backovic, a deputy commander of the Bosnian forces, said Tuesday. U.N. spokesman Adnan Abd-elrazek said peacekeepers regard the agreement as "very good news" despite doubts about it being honored.

The accord followed heightened U.N. pressure to halt the 5-month-old civil war. International outrage has grown in recent weeks over conditions at Serb-run detention camps and the forced eviction of Muslims and Croats from their homes as part of a Serb policy of so-called "ethnic cleansing."

The plane that brought Gen. Satish Nambiar, an Indian who commands U.N. forces in the former Yugoslav federation, into Sarajevo today was one of just two to arrive by midday.

A steady stream of relief flights has brought food and medicine to the besieged capital since June 29.

But the airport, Sarajevo's main link to the outside world, was closed to relief flights Tuesday after radar locked onto a British transport plane as it took off. Locking on with radar can be a first step toward opening fire.

U.N. officials said they would reopen the airport when they determined it once again to be safe.

By conservative count, at least

8,000 people have been killed in Bosnia-Herzegovina and more than a million people displaced since the republic's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence on Feb. 29.

U.N. relief officials say they fear a radical rise in the death toll with the onset of winter, with cold and starvation killing more people than shells or bullets.

Sylvana Foa, spokeswoman of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said in Geneva on Tuesday that more than 2 million people are at risk because they have fled their homes or have no heat and no windows to keep out the cold.

The Yugoslav government today sent a dozen trucks carrying 70 tons of food and medicine toward Sarajevo and the besieged town of Gorazde, where up to 100,000 people, mostly Muslims, have been surrounded by Serb forces for nearly four months.

The move was first proposed by Yugoslav Premier Milan Panic as part of his effort to ease Western criticism of Serb-dominated Yugoslavia, which has supported Serb fighters in Bosnia.

Military Muster

FORT RICHARDSON, Anchorage, Alaska—Army Staff Sgt. Joe G. Fuentes Jr. has participated in exercise Cobra Gold '92, held in Korat, Thailand. Members of the exercise, a combined/joint air, land, maritime, amphibious, and special operations event involving U.S. Army, Air Force, Marine, Navy, and their Thailand counterparts, built and renovated structure, and redistributed water systems.

Fuentes, an infantryman, is the son of Joe G. and Amelia G. Fuentes of Hereford.

The sergeant is a 1978 graduate of Hereford High School.

Mark J. Proctor has completed a U.S. Air Force ROTC field training encampment at Fair Child Air Force Base, Spokane Wash.

The summer curriculum consists of orientation on jet aircraft, career opportunities, human relations education, and equal opportunity training. Physical fitness and survival training is also emphasized. The field training is normally attended by cadets between their second and third year of college.

The cadet is a student at Louisiana Tech University in Ruston.

Proctor is the son of Mitchell L. and Dixie L. Proctor of 1905 Venus Drive, Bossier City, La.

His wife, Andrea, is the daughter of J. Max and Bonnie J. Borden of 334 Centre, Hereford, Texas.

He graduated from Parkway High School in 1988.

Volunteers recognized

Dalene Burns and Albert Mitchell were presented appreciation certificates by the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross for their outstanding service to the organization. Burns has volunteered for all local Red Cross activities and has served as a first aid instructor, water safety instructor, CPR instructor and has worked as an after-hours service volunteer to the military and disaster committees. Mitchell has also assisted with numerous Red Cross activities and has served as a first aid instructor and CPR instructor.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Rocker Gregg Allman says he is now drug-free and wakes before dawn to get his body in shape.

"I work out on the bicycle and treadmill every morning," said the 44-year-old Allman. "I haven't seen any new biceps or muscles yet, but I feel a lot better."

Allman refused to say how long he has been drug-free. But he said he began his new regime in May, when his band started touring to promote its new album. The Allman Brothers perform here at the Meadowlands on Aug. 30.

He was arrested for drug possession in the 1970s and avoided prison by testifying against his road manager in a drug case.

Don't sacrifice your future good health for a little "fun in the sun." Sunlight is the primary source of ultraviolet (UV) radiation, and excessive sun exposure is the most common cause of skin cancer and premature skin aging. This year, over 600,000 Americans will be diagnosed with skin cancer and nearly 9,000 people will die from the condition.

Fortunately, much can be done to prevent skin cancer and, with early diagnosis and treatment, most cases can be cured. Pathologists and histology laboratory personnel who belong to the American Society of Clinical Pathologists (ASCP) are frequently involved in skin cancer diagnosis and believe it is important to educate people about this potentially deadly and disfiguring disease.

The three major types of skin cancer are basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma, and malignant melanoma. Malignant melanoma is the deadliest skin cancer because it may metastasize - spreading to the brain, lungs, bone, liver, lymph nodes, or spleen - making a cure much less likely. Unlike melanoma, basal and squamous cell carcinomas are usually slow-growing and have lower mortality rates, but they are much more common than melanoma.

Although anyone can get skin cancer, individuals living in sunny climates with red or blond hair, blue or light-colored eyes, and fair skin that freckles or burns rather than tans are most at risk. Also at greater risk are those who work outdoors, individuals with a personal or family history of skin cancer, and people born with very large moles - particularly those irregular in shape and color.

Any change on the skin can be a warning sign of skin cancer. Melanomas are signaled when a mole is asymmetrical in shape, has ragged or blurred borders, is uneven in color, or is changing size. Carcinomas can start as small, smooth, shiny, pale, or waxy lumps. Others show up as firm red lumps or flat red spots. The surface of a skin cancer may be scaly and crusty or smooth and shiny, and they may bleed.

The only sure way to diagnose skin cancer and determine how far it has progressed is with surgical removal of all or part of the suspicious-looking tissue and microscopic examination by a pathologist. Pathologists are physicians who specialize in the study of disease and experts in identifying cell abnormalities. They examine the tissue and select portions of it for microscopic study.

A histologic technician or histotechnologist, who is trained to process and stain tissue without destroying cell structures, processes these tissue portions and prepares the microscopic slides. The specimen is put in a small porous container for easy handling, immersed in a series of chemical solutions that preserves or fixes the structure of the cells, and then embedded in melted paraffin. Once the paraffin hardens, the tissue is sectioned into pieces the thickness of a single cell and mounted on glass slides.

Spikers start season by sweeping Canyon

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

The Lady Whitefaces recovered from a stumbling start and picked up their first win of the season in the first match of the season, 15-2, 15-8 over the Canyon Lady Eagles in Whiteface Gym.

Early on, it really looked like the first match of the season. Lady Whitefaces collided twice in the opening minutes of the first game, both times resulting in a sideout for Canyon.

"A lot of times scrimmages are used to correct mistakes like that," coach Brenda Reeh said. "These kids will have to get used to playing with each other and learn each others' habits."

After three rotations, Canyon led only 1-0. Then Hereford scored its first point on a Canyon hitting error, and the Lady Whitefaces mounted their first run. Tonya Castillo served for Hereford's first five points, including an ace on the fifth.

"That was unusual, because in the fourth rotation we put our setter in the front row," Reeh said. "Our first three rotations should be our strongest offensively because we've got three hitters up front."

The Herd put on another run with Erin Bullard serving, and they led 10-1. It was over soon after that.

"Our offense was very aggressive," Reeh said. "Our hitters came out swinging and never got cautious or timid."

In the second game, Canyon led 2-1 when Jill Robinson started serving for Hereford. When she was finished, Canyon trailed 10-2 after watching four aces fall. Canyon managed a couple of two-point rallies over several rotations, but they weren't enough. Hereford led 14-8 when it was Robinson's turn to serve again. Canyon couldn't return her serve, and the match was over.

Robinson led the Herd with seven kills and four aces on 15 good serves. Angie Jowell added four kills. Bullard and Castillo each had two aces--Bullard on eight good serves and Castillo on six.

The Herd will play in the Lubbock

Invitational this weekend, with three pool matches Friday. They start with Randall at 10 a.m., face Monterey at 4 p.m. and play Perryton at 8. All matches will be played at Coronado High School.

Hereford's junior varsity also swept Canyon 15-6, 15-4, in a match played before the varsity match. In the first game, Hereford jumped out to a 7-0 lead, then let Canyon come back to 7-5 before finishing them.

In the second game, Hereford led 8-1, but the scoring stalled for a while until Audrey Tijerina stepped to the service line and reeled off the final seven points.

Brooke Bryant served for nine points in the first game, including three aces.

The Hereford JV has a new coach: Royce Spies. She used to coach girls' junior high athletics and is back on the sidelines after two years of just teaching. She said she was pleased with the way the JV played.

"I was pleased with the progress they've made since we've only had one week of practice," she said.

Spies replaces Jill Harrison, who became a mother a few months ago.

Besides Spies, there will be some other new faces on the volleyball sidelines this year, and like Spies, two of the new faces may be familiar. Kristi Lytal is back coaching in Hereford after two years coaching in Perryton and Danbury (near Houston). She'll be coaching ninth grade girls' athletics, replacing Brett Stegall, who found a job coaching football in Seminole.

Jason Culpepper, a 1987 graduate of HHS, will coach girls' junior high athletics. He student-taught in Littlefield last year after graduating from Texas Tech in 1991. He'll join Jane Radford and Maria Eck.

Loy Triana is the completely new face. From Muleshoe, he went to North Texas State University on a golf scholarship, then later transferred to Texas Tech, where he played two years and graduated in May. He'll coach ninth grade volleyball and be the assistant for basketball and golf.

Spikers win

Jill Robinson swings at a ball in the second game between Hereford and Canyon in Whiteface Gym. Robinson had seven kills and four aces and the Lady Whitefaces got the season off to a good start. Behind Robinson is Angie Jowell (10).

Larry Legend decides to retire

BOSTON (AP) - No more amazing no-look passes. No more reckless dives to save the ball. No more miraculous game-winning 3-pointers. No more Larry Bird playing basketball like no one else can.

The visions flow swiftly like a dream come true. Finally, the wakeup call came: Bird, seemingly superhuman in his best days, really is just a mere mortal.

For two seasons he tried to fight that reality, playing for the Boston Celtics with an aching back that caused him great agony. Increasingly, he couldn't. So it was no surprise that he gave in to the painful truth.

Bird retired Tuesday after a 13-year career that was one of the greatest in NBA history.

"It's something that had to be done," he said. "I've had enough (pain) to last me a lifetime and I can't shake it."

"I put my body through living hell for 17 years," said Bird, who starred at Indiana State.

He lacked great speed and leaping ability. But he was a creative genius, thinking several steps ahead of his opponents. And he was a tough-minded warrior who drooled at the prospect of competing with - and beating - the best.

"I played against some of the best basketball players in the world and I did pretty fair against them," Bird said.

One of them was Magic Johnson, his adversary in three NBA championship series and his teammate on the United States team that won the Olympic basketball gold medal 11 days ago.

"Larry was the only player in the league that I feared, and he was the smartest player I ever played against," Johnson said.

"Larry Bird has helped to define the way a generation of basketball fans has come to view and appreciate the NBA," NBA commissioner David Stern said.

Playing on opposite coasts, Bird and Johnson joined the NBA in 1979 and were instrumental as it grew to new heights of popularity throughout the world. Salaries and TV revenues also soared.

Few played better than the country boy from French Lick, Ind., whose hick-like manner and sometimes tangled syntax masked a strong will and a sharp mind.

He was the college player of the year in 1979 and the NBA rookie of the year in 1980. He won the first of his three NBA titles in 1981. He was the most valuable player in the 1982 All-Star Game. From 1984 through 1986, he won three straight regular-season MVP awards.

He added a new dimension to the forward position. At 6-foot-9, he was a peerless passer who made his teammates better.

He averaged 24.3 points, 10 rebounds and 6.3 assists per game. Only 10 players have more than his 21,791 points, and all had longer careers than his.

His started in 1979, one year after Boston drafted him on the first round after his junior season. The Celtics were 29-53 the season before he arrived and 61-21 in his rookie year.

"When the definitive history of basketball is written," Celtics chief executive officer Dave Gavitt said, Bird "will occupy a special place in the top five players ever to play this game."

"God may have not granted him an all-world body, but from the shoulders to the top of his head and from his wrist to his fingertips, he played the game better than anybody's ever played it and he played it with a heart five times as big as anybody else I ever saw."

That heart was full Tuesday as he barely managed to keep his composure throughout a 45-minute news conference at which it also was announced he would take an administrative position, advising Celtics management and making public appearances.

Quarterback Otto Graham played in a championship game each of his 10 seasons with the Cleveland Browns.

The Seattle Mariners' pennant hopes were over before spring turned to summer. Though they have the worst record in baseball, they're having fun trying to destroy some autumn dreams.

After taking two of three from Minnesota at home, the Mariners flew east and put a crimp in Baltimore's drive to catch Toronto in the AL East by beating the Orioles 8-3 Tuesday night.

"We're trying to make it as hard as we can for other teams," said Ken Griffey Jr., whose three-run homer in the ninth put the game away.

Unfortunately for the slumping Orioles, they ran into Seattle's best pitcher, rookie Dave Fleming, who allowed six hits and three runs in 7 1-3 innings before Jeff Nelson finished for his third save.

Like the rest of his teammates, Fleming is having fun trying to spoil everyone else's.

"It's definitely fun to play in front of a full house against a team that's in the pennant race," Fleming said.

Fleming (14-5) has accounted for 29 percent of the Mariners' 48 victories this season.

The Orioles held a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Tino Martinez singled and Jay Buhner hit his 19th homer.

It was the major league-high 28th home run off Ben McDonald, who is 12-8.

Indians 8, Twins 1

Catcher Junior Ortiz got the better of two home-plate collisions with former teammates as Cleveland twice cut down the potential tying run in the sixth inning and went on to beat visiting Minnesota.

Glenallen Hill homered and doubled for the Indians.

Trailing 2-1 in the sixth, Minnesota hit two doubles and a single off Jose Mesa (5-9) without scoring a run as Ortiz held on to the ball in a pair of collisions. Cleveland then put the game away in the bottom of the sixth MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) - Steve Howe's latest court battle is over, but whether he ever pitches in the major leagues again remains to be seen.

Howe, the first player permanently banned from baseball for drug and alcohol use, was placed on probation for three years Tuesday for trying to buy a gram of cocaine from an undercover agent last Dec. 19 in Kalispell, Mont.

After the New York Yankees reliever pleaded guilty on June 8, baseball commissioner Fay Vincent first handed him his seventh suspension, then later banned him permanently from the game.

The Major League Baseball Players Association appealed that ban and the case was heard by arbitrator George Nicolau, who has not indicated when he may issue a ruling.

In addition to the probated sentence, U.S. Magistrate Bart Erickson on Tuesday also fined Howe the minimum $1,000, ordered him to perform 100 hours of community service and imposed a series of standard conditions for the three-year period.

Braves stretch lead to 5 1/2

By The Associated Press

It seems there's no stopping the Atlanta Braves now.

Charlie Leibrandt pitched a four-hitter as the Braves beat the Montreal Expos 5-1 Tuesday night at Olympic Stadium for their 14th win in their last 17 games. The victory left the Braves with a 5 1/2-game lead over second-place Cincinnati in the NL West.

Leibrandt (10-4) struck out four and walked none for his third complete game. He is the fourth Atlanta pitcher to reach double figures in victories this season, joining Tom Glavine (18), John Smoltz (14) and Steve Avery (10).

"I was skeptical about pitching here because I haven't had much luck," Leibrandt said. "I was supposed to pitch against the Pirates on Monday, so I felt happy about not having to face Montreal. So this was a good test and things worked out OK."

Montreal starter Ken Hill (13-6) made two throwing errors which led to three Atlanta runs in the third inning. Hill gave up seven hits in six innings.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead in the second on Rafael Belliard's RBI grounder.

Hill gave up leadoff singles to Deion Sanders and Mark Lemke in the third before throwing Terry Pendleton's sacrifice past an uncovered third base.

Hill was unaware third baseman Tim Wallach was coming in for the bunt and threw the ball past third into left field, bringing home Sanders and Lemke.

Later in the inning, Hill tried to pick David Justice off second but the ball sailed into center field. Justice went to third and scored on Sid Bream's single through a drawn-in infield.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Cincinnati 6, Philadelphia 0 in the first game and Philadelphia 6, Cincinnati 1 in the nightcap; Pittsburgh 5, San Diego 1; Houston 7, St. Louis 6; Chicago 4, San Francisco 1; and Los Angeles 4, New York 0.

Astros 7, Cardinals 6

At Busch Memorial Stadium, pinch-hitter Ernest Riles singled in the tying run and Craig Biggio followed with a two-run single in a four-run seventh inning as Houston overcame a season-high three home runs by St. Louis.

Luis Gonzalez led off Houston's seventh with a single off loser Omar Olivares (6-8), who hadn't allowed a hit since the Astros' first. With one out, Juan Guerrero singled and Riles followed with his game-tying hit.

Jimmy Jones (6-5) pitched six innings for the victory.

Dodgers 4, Mets 0

At Dodger Stadium, rookie Pedro Astacio outdueled major league strikeout leader David Cone with (13-6) his second shutout in only four career starts and Brett Butler scored three runs as Los Angeles beat New York.

Astacio (2-1) dealt the Mets their 11th loss in 12 games, allowing six hits.

Cubs 4, Giants 1

At Candlestick Park, Mike Morgan scattered 11 hits and Andre Dawson hit his 17th homer.

The Giants didn't score against Morgan until Greg Litton hit his third homer with two out in the ninth inning.

Dallas Cowboys. The Cowboys, who drafted Harris in the 12th round last spring, released him Monday after a three-week tryout.

Harris played for the Rangers from July 3-July 24, batting .143 in 11 games before the team optioned him back to Tulsa.

Before being promoted to the major leagues, he had hit .257 with 9 homers and 33 RBIs in 74 games this season with the Drillers.

Harris joins Tulsa Drillers

ARLINGTON (AP) - Donald Harris, who has bounced from baseball to football and back in the last month, has been reinstated to the Texas Rangers' Class AA affiliate in Tulsa.

The Rangers announced that Harris was expected to report to the Tulsa Drillers Tuesday night.

Harris, a former standout Texas Tech defensive back, was taken off the Drillers' roster on July 28 after signing a three-year contract with the

Chargers' Hendrickson switches to linebacker

By The Associated Press
William "Refrigerator" Perry gained fame by making the occasional switch from defensive lineman to running back, and defensive back Deion Sanders added to his aura by making a few cameo appearances at wide receiver.

Now the NFL may have another two-way player - San Diego Chargers third-year man Steve Hendrickson.

Hendrickson, a running back his first two seasons with San Diego, has moved to outside linebacker.

The switch doesn't preclude the 6-foot, 250-pounder from seeing occasional action on the other side of the ball, however. He also fits into the Chargers' plans as a goal-line rusher and a special teams leader.

"He's done a tremendous job," first-year Chargers coach Bobby Ross said. "He's made a good transition to defense and if push came to shove and we got in a crunch, we could still let him do some things at tight end. To me, he's an invaluable part of our program."

"I'll play anywhere they want me," Hendrickson said Tuesday.

"When I was coming out of college, someone said he wanted to play where it's warm, but I said I'd catch punts naked for Buffalo if I could play in the NFL."

Hendrickson started four of the 15 games he played at H-back last season. His only rushing touchdown of the year came on a 3-yard plunge that helped the Chargers beat the New Orleans Saints 24-21 on Nov. 17.

The fourth-year veteran also had a two-yard touchdown catch among his four receptions during the season.

At the same time, Hendrickson was noticed for his hard-hitting play on special teams.

"I've proved myself as a special teams player. I've proved myself as blocking fullback," he said. "Now I want to prove myself as a linebacker. The more you can do, the better off you're going to be."

Seahawks

Seattle and wide receiver Brian Blades are far apart on a new contract as the team completes the final week of training camp.

Blades, a 1988 draft choice from Miami who has had two 1,000-yard seasons, is asking for $1.2 million this season, while the Seahawks are reportedly offering $500,000.

Packers

Left tackle Ken Ruettgens resolved his contract disagreement and will take part in his first training camp practice today.

Patriots

Coach Dick MacPherson said he will continue to focus upon player evaluation in Saturday's game against Detroit, particularly the battle between third-year veteran Tom Hodson and second-year vet Scott Zolak for the backup quarterback's job behind starter Hugh Millen.

Giants

Bob Kratch is not too excited about being named New York's starting right guard in place of Eric Moore, a holdout.

"Eric can come in here in two days and maybe I'm not the starter anymore," said Kratch, who is entering his fourth season.

Redskins

Negotiations between Washington Redskins officials and agents for holdouts Desmond Howard and Jim Lachey broke off late Tuesday without a deal.

Bears

Chicago coach Mike Ditka is trying to scare running back Neal Anderson by threatening to bench him. But it won't work, Anderson says.

After rushing for 3.3 yards per carry in the first two exhibition games, Anderson finds himself having to prove he belongs in the starting lineup. And he doesn't like it.

Mark Green is averaging over eight yards per carry and Darren Lewis is averaging over six.

"That puts me third string," Anderson said. "But I'm not going into one game to prove that I belong. That's just a decision the coaches are going to have to make. ... Actually, it's kind of amusing."

Several Cowboys slowed by injuries

IRVING (AP) - Back problems slowed quarterbacks Troy Aikman and Steve Beuerlein, and leg problems hampered wide receivers Alvin Harper and Alex Wright in workouts of the Dallas Cowboys on Tuesday.

Coach Jimmy Johnson said Harper won't play in Saturday night's preseason game against the Denver Broncos.

Aikman left practice early because of back spasms, and Beuerlein didn't practice at all because of a sore back he hurt during last weekend's exhibition against the Houston Oilers.

"Troy's back tightened up on him just a little bit today. I think the cool weather and the rain probably had a little bit to do with it. I don't think it's serious," Johnson said.

"And of course, Wright and Harper are out with the hamstrings. I wouldn't want this to happen again. In fact, if we were close to a regular season game, I don't think you'd see a smile on my face," Johnson said.

AL

against Scott Erickson (8-10) when two runs scored on shortstop Greg Gagne's fielding error and another on Ortiz's RBI single.

Yankees 7, Athletics 3

Right fielder Mel Hall made a diving catch with the bases loaded and two outs in the eighth inning, preserving the victory.

Jose Canseco's two-run single in the eighth pulled the visiting Athletics within 4-3. Steve Farr relieved with the bases loaded and one out and retired major league home run leader Mark McGwire on a foul pop. Carney Lansford followed with a sinking liner and Hall raced in, dove and made a backhanded grab inches off the ground.

Blue Jays 12, Brewers 1

Dave Winfield triggered a five-run first inning with a bases-clearing double as visiting Toronto pounded Milwaukee.

Red Sox 8, Angels 0

Roger Clemens pitched a four-hitter for his 34th career shutout and took over the American League strikeout lead as Boston beat California at Fenway Park.

Clemens (15-7) struck out eight for a season total of 164, moving him past New York's Melido Perez, and lowered his AL-leading earned-run average to 2.10.

The Red Sox battered California's Mark Langston (11-11) for five runs, 11 hits and five walks in five-plus innings. Mo Vaughn added a three-run homer in the eighth.

White Sox 3, Rangers 0

Jack McDowell outduelled Kevin Brown by pitching a six-hitter as Chicago beat Texas to improve to 11-1 in its last 12 home games.

McDowell (16-7) joined Brown (16-8) as the top winners in the American League by pitching his first shutout of the season and his major league-leading 10th complete game. He walked one and struck out six.

Tim Lincecum had three of the nine hits off Brown and scored twice.

Tigers 5, Royals 1

Cecil Fielder had three hits and two RBIs, giving him 103 for the season, as visiting Detroit won.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am on vacation, but I have left behind some of my favorite columns that you may have missed the first time around. I hope you enjoy them.--Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Linked to a Kink" wrote you because her husband wanted her to tie his wrists together, also his ankles, as a sexual turn-on. I'll bet that letter produced a lot of "Get With it, Annie" mail.

You seem to believe the "bondage game" is sadistic.

Practiced by mutual consent, with intelligent limits, it is one of the most exciting games two people can play.

The primary sex organ is the brain. New experiences open the mind to higher levels of enjoyment. This is what bondage practitioners attempt to accomplish. It adds a spark of variety to a very basic human experience.

If "Linked" were to join in her husband's fantasy, she might like it a great deal. It surely couldn't hurt. Then again, she might not enjoy it, but she should at least give it a try.

You were wrong to nix the idea. Please don't inhibit your readers, Ann. Help them get the most out of life.--Informed

DEAR IN: I have been neither anointed nor appointed to nix or put a stamp of approval on anything two people choose to do in the privacy of their bedroom. If it's all right with them, it's all right with me.

The woman wanted to know if it was "wrong." I told her no, not if it helped her husband's performance--which it did.

When she asked if it was "kinky," I said yes--which it is.

If she wants him to tie her up also, they will have to get a third party into the act to do the tying and untying--or maybe I am so dumb I can't figure the thing out. And any sex that involves more than two people is also kinky, so far as I am concerned.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I sent you a poem five years ago. I was only 13 then and so proud of myself because you let me contribute to your column. The reason I sent it was because my mother was a heavy smoker and when I asked her to quit for my sake she said, "I'll try but I can't promise." When my poem appeared in your column she quit. I think I might help a lot of people who may not have seen it when it ran in 1972 and perhaps many who saw it may have forgotten it by now. So, Ann, please run it again. It may be corny, but it makes sense. Thank you--ABC

DEAR ABC: Corny or not, it's still good I've taken off the husks and her it is again.

Style show, luncheon held

There were 154 guests present at the Women's Division's Back To School Happening Style Show and Luncheon held Thursday at the Hereford Country Club. New fall fashions, like the ensemble modeled by Beth Frye, were showcased by C.R. Anthony Co., Betty's Shoes, Boots and Saddle Western Wear, Etcetera, Little's, Pants Cage, Kids' Alley, The Vogue and Class Act.

Motivate your kids

Is a child's motivation level pre-determined by genetics or is it a learned personality trait that can be fostered and encouraged?

"Motivation can easily be encouraged in children," says Arnold Rincover, Ph.D., IOF Foresters parenting consultant and internationally renowned child psychologist. "Effective parenting can make a tremendous difference."

Rincover offers the following tips to help parents motivate their children.

Model your behavior. The fastest way to teach a child something is to model or demonstrate it for him. Modeling can be used to teach even elaborate and sophisticated skills.

Offer feedback. Feedback is essential for learning. It tells a child whether he is doing well or if he can do better. However, feedback should always be paired with praise.

Talk! Many everyday situations in family life provide opportunities for talking and learning. For example, shopping can turn into a fun, learning experience by discussing some of the ingredients on cereal boxes or where different kinds of vegetables come from.

Instill. Children do not genetically develop the desire to succeed. Children gradually learn the desire to achieve if parents make it an important part of life.

Vary praise and rewards. Try praise first. If nothing else seems to work, use rewards - but use them sparingly. Rewards are a powerful way to motivate a child.

Attitude is everything. Differences in children's attitudes about achievement do not come from differences in ability. They come from the parents' attitudes.

Train independence. Parental pressure to be self-reliant has been found to foster achievement motivation. Parents of highly motivated children expect their children to do well.

Interest your child in learning. Research has shown that immediate praise, feedback and other incentives have increased learning manyfold.

Offer your child a choice. This can take the sting out of an undesirable task. For example, if you have to go to the supermarket and your child hates to go - ask her if she wants to pick the cookies or the ice cream.

Never stop praising. This is the easiest yet most powerful way to help children. Look for opportunities to praise.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Director Luis Valdez says he's shelving his latest project because of criticism surrounding the casting of a non-Hispanic - Laura San Giacomo - in the role of the Mexican artist Frida Kahlo.

Valdez, whose other films include "La Bamba," said that "to suggest that I have been somehow selling Latinos short ... is to completely distort the situation."

Raul Julia, who is Hispanic, had been cast to play the artist Diego Rivera, Kahlo's husband. Miss San Giacomo appeared in "sex, lies and videotape."

If he made the movie now, Valdez said in Tuesday's Los Angeles Times, audiences would "see the casting rather than the story."

Military Muster

FORT RICHARDSON, Anchorage, Alaska - Army Staff Sgt. Joe G. Fuentes Jr. has participated in exercise Cobra Gold '92, held in Korat, Thailand. Members of the exercise, a combined joint air, land, maritime, amphibious, and special operations event involving U.S. Army, Air Force, Marine, Navy, and their Thailand counterparts, built and renovated structure, and redistributed water systems.

Fuentes, an infantryman, is the son of Joe G. and Amelia G. Fuentes of Hereford.

The sergeant is a 1978 graduate of Hereford High School.

Mark J. Proctor has completed a U.S. Air Force ROTC field training encampment at Fair Child Air Force Base, Spokane Wash.

The summer curriculum consists of orientation on jet aircraft, career opportunities, human relations education, and equal opportunity training. Physical fitness and survival training is also emphasized. The filed training is normally attended by cadets between their second and third year of college.

The cadet is a student at Louisiana Tech University in Ruston.

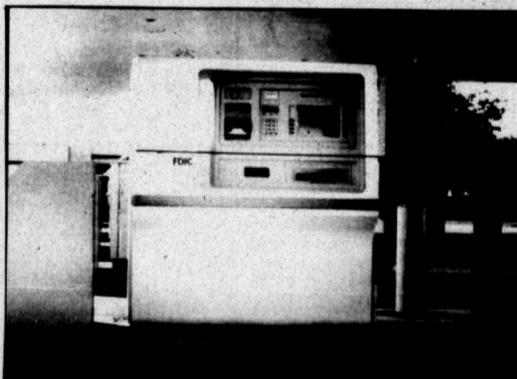

Proctor is the son of Mitchell L. and Dixie L. Proctor of 1905 Venus Drive, Bossier City, La.

His wife, Andrea, is the daughter of J. Max and Bonnie J. Borden of 334 Centre, Hereford, Texas.

He graduated from Parkway High School in 1988.

Hints from Heloise

Q. We recently acquired a very old cut-glass wine decanter which has a long, narrow neck. Can you suggest a method of cleaning that will remove the inner spots and cloudy appearance? — Mrs. Arthur Wertman, Palm Beach, Fla.

A. The stains may be removed by filling the decanter with hot water and dropping in a couple of denture tablets. Let set overnight, and in the morning vigorously brush the inside of the decanter with a bottle brush. Rinse well and let dry.

If the stains are stubborn, redo the process. If the stains remain, they may actually be etched in the glass and would be impossible to remove.

FAST FACTS
Here are five handy hints for basters.

- Use to inflate beach toys. Simply remove the bulb, place the small end into the toy and blow through the large hole.
- Use to add water to a steam iron.
- Use when filling ice-cube trays.
- Use to fill small water containers in pet cages.
- Use to add water to flower arrangements.

PET-PEEVE SOLUTION
Dear Heloise: You recently had a pet peeve about manufacturers requesting the original sales receipt when sending in for a rebate. The writer complained that many times she needed the same receipt for several offers.

Please tell this dear lady that all she has to do is ask the cashier to run each item separately and then she will have an original tape for each one.

HANDY REMINDER
Dear Heloise: During my hectic day sometimes I think of things I have to remember when I get home or think of something I want to take with me to work the next day.

When I can, I call my own answering machine at home and leave myself a message. When I get home, it's there and I don't forget.

It's like having a personal secretary.—Peggy Spellman, Rockaway, N.J.

Four residents to vie for pageant crown

Four young women from Hereford will be competing in the Miss Top of Texas Area Scholarship Pageant planned at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 22, in the Stratford High School auditorium. This is a preliminary to the Miss America Scholarship Pageant, the largest scholarship pageant of this kind for women between the ages of 17-24.

Among the 12 young ladies from Hereford vying for the Top of Texas title and crown are Deanna Hobbs, Stacy Culpepper, Dusty Saul and Vanessa Gonzales.

The girls will be scored on interview with six judges, talent, swimwear and evening gown. The winner will represent this area next July in the Miss Texas Pageant, another preliminary to the Miss America Pageant.

The theme for the pageant is "A Place in This World."

New regulations cover trapping of wild swine

Hunters enjoying their sport on ranch leases often shoot feral (wild) swine as a secondary target to deer and other seasonal game. These feral hogs are actually domestic hogs that have escaped or were released, but with each generation, the hogs develop more traits needed for survival in the wild. Hunting these hogs has become so popular, some ranchers hire trappers to catch and transport the animals from other sites to keep their ranches stocked.

In late July, the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) put in effect new rules to help reduce the risk of feral swine spreading disease to domestic livestock or to humans. The TAHC is concerned about two diseases: the bacterial disease, brucellosis, and pseudorabies, a virus. Intensive national eradication programs are underway to wipe out these two diseases.

Brucellosis causes reproductive problems in infected swine and can be passed by the boar to sows. The disease also can be transmitted to humans through blood contact, a situation that can occur easily during butchering.

Pseudorabies poses no threat to humans, but swine can transmit it to other animals. Infected cattle, dogs, cats and other animals die but do not spread the disease. Infected adult swine typically develop only flu-like symptoms, but young pigs under a month old can have severe respiratory and digestive symptoms and may die within three or four days after contracting the disease. A survey of slaughter plant blood samples about a year ago indicated about a third of feral swine tested positive for pseudorabies.

The TAHC's new regulations are intended to prevent the spread of these diseases. Feral swine trapped on a premise are to be tested negative for brucellosis and pseudorabies within 30 days before they are moved to a game preserve or site where they will be maintained for hunting. An accredited veterinarian must draw the blood samples for the tests, at the owner's expense.

The tests prior to movement are not required if the swine are taken directly to a slaughter facility or to a livestock market for sale to slaughter. At the livestock market, the feral swine must be held in isolation, under quarantine, and be moved only to slaughter accompanied by a permit issued by the TAHC livestock market inspector.

In some cases, trappers prefer to domesticate the feral swine, keeping them for breeding or feeding purposes. To accomplish this, the TAHC requires that the feral swine be confined away from any infected or free-roaming swine for at least 60 days. An accredited veterinarian is to test the animals for both brucellosis and pseudorabies, at the owner's expense.

TAHC officials urge trappers and producers to practice preventive disease management by keeping wild swine away from domestic hogs during the 60-day confinement period. Otherwise, feral swine that are incubating infection could spread disease among the herd. Once these hogs complete their confinement period and are tested negative for swine brucellosis and pseudorabies, they may be sold or moved as domestic swine.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband is an alcoholic. He is 64 years old and recently retired. He drinks a pint or more of whiskey daily. His abdomen is quite large. He claims it's fat, but his arms and legs are not fat. He is large through his chest. I am concerned about his health. What are some of the effects of alcohol?

I don't drink any alcohol at all. We can't communicate; we just argue. I am emotionally drained and very depressed most of the time. I don't seem to have a good appetite and have lost weight. Why? My husband won't stop or can't stop drinking and won't go for treatment. Please give me some answers. I don't know how much longer I can stand this strain on my system.

DEAR READER: You may not be able to help your husband, but you can help yourself. Weight loss is a common symptom of a depression. You do need some emotional support, and I would suggest you seek professional counseling. Living with an alcoholic is not easy. You might also look in the Yellow Pages of a large city under "Alcoholism Information" and see if there is an Al-Anon chapter that could help you deal with the problem.

If I had your address, I would send you Special Report 84, Understanding Alcohol and its Effects. Those who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/84, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. It includes a detailed account of how alcohol damages a person's health.

Your husband's large abdomen is probably related to his alcohol consumption. He may have liver disease and may even have accumulated fluid in his abdomen as a result of that. He needs to understand that alcohol will cause premature senility by damage to the brain. Alcohol shrinks the brain. It also decreases a man's sexual capacity by decreasing testosterone production and because a damaged liver cannot break down estrogen.

Alcohol damages almost every system in the body, causing damage to skeletal muscle and heart muscle. It can cause heart failure and high blood pressure. It can damage peripheral nerves—a condition called alcoholic neuropathy. The excess use of alcohol is probably our greatest problem in drug abuse in the United States.

DEAR DR. LAMB: What can be done for alopecia? My 10-year-old granddaughter lost hair in patches in the forehead area. After washing her hair with pine tar soap and applying an ointment, new hair grew in, but after a short time, the hair is coming out again in patches. I do not remember the name of the ointment. There doesn't seem to be much known about this condition. Is there a danger of losing all her hair? No one on either side of the family has ever been so afflicted.

DEAR READER: The exact cause of alopecia areata is not known. It is thought the immune system may attack the hair follicles. Patches of hair loss occur, and there may be some changes of the scalp in that area. It is not an infection. Usually the hair does regrow in time. Irritants may help to stimulate new hair growth, which may have been why pine tar soap was used. High-potency corticosteroids applied locally are used. More recently, Rogaine, the medicine used to treat male pattern baldness, has also been used. The condition usually does not persist, but rarely a person may lose all the hair and even the hair over the body.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 30 years old and suspect I might have endometriosis. My periods have always been irregular, though normal in flow and very painful. When I went on the pill at age 20, I became regular and the cramps decreased. I was able to function as long as I took Anaprox.

I went off the pill a year ago and became irregular again. My cramps have gotten worse with each period, to the point where the pain is excruciating. Two periods ago, I took two Anaprox at the onset and it didn't touch the pain.

Now I am constipated with each period, which makes the pain worse. I have resorted to enemas which provide a little relief. My doctor put me on the pill again last month to relieve the cramping. I started my period 10 days ago and had four days of normal flow, but I am still in pain. I literally cannot take a step or sit down without feeling pain in the ovaries, uterus and rectum. I am deeply concerned about my fertility as I have not had any children yet and haven't tried to. Are my suspicions justified?

DEAR READER: Yes. Endometriosis is when the cells that line the uterus, the endometrium, are displaced outside the uterus. These cells can seed the abdomen, involve the tubes and ovaries and also invade the colon. It is not a malignancy, but is one of the most common causes of pelvic pain in women in the childbearing years. The pain usually occurs at the time of menstruation and is a major cause for infertility. The displaced tissue may block the tubes, preventing fertilization of the ovum.

You may need some special tests, such as a laparoscopy that involves looking inside the abdomen. Suspected tissue is removed and examined microscopically. The diagnosis of endometriosis cannot be made with certainty without such a procedure. For more information about endometriosis, read Special Report 111, Painful Periods, Including Endometriosis, which I'm sending you. Share it with your doctor if you wish. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/111, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

If you have endometriosis, there are several medical approaches that can be used. These can stop ovulation and prevent the enlargement of the endometrial tissue. Two are leuprolide and nafarelin. In severe cases, surgery may be used to remove the endometrial tissue.
