Kiwanis Talks Of Fireworks For Celebration

With no planned program for the Muleshoe Kiwanis Club Friday morning, the session was spent in discussion of the upcoming fireworks season.

The Muleshoe Kiwanis Fireworks Stand will be open each afternoon at 4 p.m. starting yesterday (Saturday), and will be open through July 4.

It will be located just west of the Muleshoe city limits on the Clovis Highway. All proceeds from the fire-

A truck carrying a tall piece of equipment created quite a commotion just northwest of Muleshoe on Highway 84 shortly after 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The truck's cargo hit a cable television line, snapping the line and throwing it across a highvoltage electrical line. In turn, the electrical line shorted out, causing the explosion of a cable transformer in the attic of the Ranch House Motel.

When the transformer blew, blew out televisions in the motel and set an electrical fire in the attic of the motel. Firemen responded after most area businesses and residents found themselves without electrical power or telephones.

City officer Wayne Holmes was requested by the Texas Department of Public Safety to guide traffic around the fallen power lines until THP units could reach the scene. One lane of the eastbound doublelane traffic was blocked until the lines could be removed.

quickly and started large reverse fans to pull smoke from the motel. Donning Scott Air Packs, firemen went into the attic to put out the fire. It was compared to a 'burr-pile' fire, in that it was a smoldering, rather than a blazing fire.

Workmen from Southwestern Public Service Co. and Muleshoe Antenna Co. worked on downed lines in an effort to remove snapped lines and get electrical service back to the areas residents.

Around 9 p.m., firemen had the stubborn fire extinguished, and motel guests, who had remained outside watching all the activity, started moving back to their rooms.

A California visitor at the motel said the visit was "much more interesting than most of her stays in a motel."

No injuries were reported. The motel remained open for business, with all services except television, which was replaced on Thursday

Little Replanting Noted For Cotton

There's good news and there's bad news in the crop picture for Bailey County residents this week

On the bad side, some crops had to be replanted due to heavy rains and hail which inundated an area south and west of Needmore two weeks ago.

Lester Howard replanted almost all his cotton at his home place and most cotton on the Kelly Joe Barnett farm at Baileyboro. Howard said most of his cotton was lost through washout or root damage from water standing too long in the fields. Howard said a little of his cotton could have been saved, but he replanted the entire crop.

Then some good news. North of Needmore, L.H. Davenport said he did not replant at his home farm and said the cotton was seeming to come out of the recent storm damage.

He did however, replant some of his land in sunflowers west and south of Needmore. It was in the heavy washout area near the Lester Howard farm.

Other cotton crops were replanted, and most farmers waited to see if their crops would recover from the storm damage. In some low areas, cotton was damaged by excessive water and replanting was

Record Falls Temperature Reaches 108

Whew! Did your evaporative air conditioner seem to fail somewhat Thursday? Regardless of what you did, did you a little warm?

You could have been right, you know, as the temperature got to an unofficial 108 degrees at 5:30 Thursday afternoon. At 9:15 p.m. it was still 95 and at 1 a.m. it was 85 degrees.

Then, blessings of all blessings, and thanks to living on the great South Plains, by morning, most residents were hunting light cover as rapid cooling followed early in the morning.

At the Muleshoe National Wildlife Refuge, 25 miles south of Muleshoe, the official temperature was 104. This was the highest temperature recorded on June 22 since records started being kept on weather there in

Temperatures recorded on June 22 during the years since 1967 were 1977, 79; 1976, 101; 1975, 97; 1974, 97; 1973, 91; 1972, 90; 1971, 92; 1970, 78; 1969, 102; 1968, 95 and 1967, Shirley Wilson, secretary at the refuge said the temperature at 2:30 p.m. Friday was 101, and if recent indications hold true, the temperature would rise more before the end of the day.

In the Baileyboro area, Howard said he had just gotten into the fields as they had been too wet to go in to consider replanting. It is now considered too late to plant cotton, but most farmers who planned to replant already have the new seed in the ground

According to reports, isolated locations will still be planted in sunflowers or in grain sorghum, to make quick crops.
VEGETABLES

By the end of June, all vegetable crops in the area are exapected to be up and growing, although there may be some fewer acres planted to vegetables than first predicted early this year. Moisture was good and in isolated locations, onions, potatoes, cabbage, tomatoes, carrots and other field vegetables are growing.

The recent very hot weather is expected to be a big boost to growth for the field vegetables. CORN

Corn has taken off in the wet fields and combined with very hot temperatures, corn, which escaped the major part of the storm damage in the county earlier in the month, is expected to produce top yields.

WHEAT Wheat harvest is getting into full swing, although yields were down some in dry weather during wheat's winter growing season. However, wheat production in the county is expected to be nearly normal for this county, according to reports from elevators

Martin spoke briefly before officer installation and reminded members and guests that Rotary does a lot of good all over the world. He sais, "Rotary is a tremendous organization, you cannot go anywhere in the free world without meeting Rotarian Friends.

Martin told the group that Rotarians make friends, meet people, and above all, provide service to other people, partially by setting a good example in the community where they live.

He also said, "One of the responsibilities of a Rotarian is to work with older people," as he reminded the people present they would all be old someday even if, "That's something that happens to the other fellow. that man or woman across town, not to me.'

A portion of their studies include the study of ways to eliminate erosion and they actually implement erosion-control methods on the refuge to see just how that works.

Problem-solving is also another field left to the young people. They are given a specific environmental problem and asked how to solve it. And according to Mrs. Masten, they come up with amazingly good answers.

They will be completing their work at the refuge the last part of July.

Texas Tech Slates Classes On Camera

One of Texas Tech University's most popular short coursed, a 35mm camera training offering, will continue through this summer.

It is open to all residents of the South Plains, Commuters in the past have come as far as 90 miles one-way to participate in the series taught by John Mc-Kinney, former cover photographer and now a member of the Mass Communications faculty at Texas Tech.

The course in Beginning Photography will meet from 6:30 - 9:30 p. m., Thursday nights, for six weeks beginning July 20. McKinney said that if past patterns repeat, a second class will be set up for Tuesday nights to accommodate the applicant overflow.

The photo series comprised of Beginning Photography, Intermediate Photography and Agricultural Photography began in April, 1977. Fourteen classes have been graduated in 15 months from the short course fore major interest is placed on how to shoot good pictures, McKinney said. While special attention will be given to the camera, unnecessary technical instruction which may tend to discourage beginners will be by-passed, he said.

Emphasis will be on how to recognize and shoot better pictures, McKinney said. No darkroom procedures will be involved. Participants will use their own cameras and have their films processed commercially.

The sessions will treat the selection of worthy subjects. Students will hear critiques of slides of landscapes, national parks, children, sunsets, farm and ranch scenes, sports, travelogues, adult portraits, silhouettes, animals, close-ups and night effects. A portion of a collection of 1,000 slides will be projected at each session.

Common mistakes to avoid in composing, lighting, focusing, and timing will be covered. 'The most common error made by beginners," McKinney said, "is shooting too far from the

OSHA Dust Control Regulation Blasted

The decision by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) on the cotton dust standard is another example of excessive and inflationary regulation by big government, National Cotton Council President Lon Mann said today.

More Traffic On Highways

Major C.W. Bell, Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety, said, "Traffic speeds are up and more people are expected to be on Texas Highways this Fourth of July Holiday"

Causes 'Alert'

Operation Motorcide for the Fourth of July will be in effect beginning at 6 p.m. Friday, June 30 and ends at 11:59 p.m. on Tuesday, July 4. All deaths resulting from traffic accidents will be reported to the Austin Department of Public Safety Head quarters immediately through the various Texas Law Enforcement agencies.

Operation Motorcide will last 102 hours with every available Trooper on the road at all times. Drivers License, Motor Vehicle Inspection, and License and Weight Troopers will assist the Texas Highway Patrol in an all out effort to assist and aid the motorist in Texas.

The Texas Department of Public Safety will be on full alert on all highways in the area to control traffic, lower speeds and get the drinking driver from behind the wheel. It is anticipated that will all uniformed troopers on conspicuous patrol, that traffic violations will be greatly deterred throughout this Fourth of July holiday.

Major Bell urges each and every driver to do his part this holiday period, by not drinking and driving. Lets' all slow down and practice defensive driving to stay alive.

cotton producer and ginner, stated the standard raises strong doubts as to whether the Administration is serious about sident said. fighting inflation.

"The cotton dust standard will exact a high toll in increased consumer prices, loss of jobs, increased taxes, and elimination of many small businesses," Mann asserted.

Reviewing details of the standard. Mann said modification of OSHA's original proposal and the extension of compliance time will be helpful. "However, both the Administration's top economic advisors and the cotton industry have pointed out options that would provide worker protection at far less cost," he said.

The Council president added, "In ignoring these options, the Administration has continued to decide in favor of unreasonable regulations and inflation.'

Mann pointed out that the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability raised questions on the standard's inflationary impact. It stated at least another $125 million in annual costs could be saved through medical surveillance and work practices with apparently little loss in health protection.

"OSHA contends the final standard has already been modified from its original $2.7 billion capital cost to a $625

He explained that OSHA's contractor, Research Triangle Institues, had found capital costs of more than $1 billion to reach a o.2 mg/m3 exposure limit in yarn production areas only.

"The estimate cost was expressed in 1974 dollars. If you adjust for the more than 30 percent increase in machinery prices since then and include estimated costs for sectors other than yarn manufacturing, it is evident that the true cost of the standard approximates $1.7 billion," Mann stated. "This is three times the figure OSHA cites for the standard's cost."

He said the industry had made recommendations which, if followed, would protect workers at about one-sixth of the cost of OSHA's final standard. He added the industry approach embodies the principles of the President's Executive Order directing regulatory agencies to consider inflationary impact in its rule-making.

Tracing the industry's concern about the standard's inflationary potential, Mann said the Council filed a statement in June, 1977, stressing OSHA was irresponsible in stating on opening day of the hearings that it would ignore costs or inflationary impact.

In its post-hearing comments (July 15, 1977), the Council stated the proposed standard would be inflationary, Mann stated. He added the industry's concern also was stressed in letters and meetings with Administration officials during recent weeks. Mann explained that finding a solution to the cotton dust problem has been a top priority of the industry since 1971. He said the industry is cooperating with NIOSH in research to see if the problem exists in gins, oil mills, and other sectors. At the same time, he explained, other research has been greatly expanded. "Between 1971 and 1976 Cotton Incorporated has spent more than $5 million on research to find answers, and its current budget is over $1.6 million." Mann said

"I want to emphasize that the cotton industry fully supports the need to protect worker safety and health," the Council president stated.

"At the same time, the industry is appealing for a regulatory approach that will protect workers yet avoid excessive inflation and allow an essential industry to survive," Mann said.

Economists Look At Beef Situation

recent increases in the price of beef at the supermarket, need to look closely at the situation facing cattlemen before cheering government proposals to import more beef and force retail meat prices down, economists and marketing specialists at Texas A&M University cau-

"Short-term action to hold down beef prices now would result in less domestic beef being available during the 1980's," the TAMU economists warn in a position paper analyzing the present cattle situation.

The paper looks at the domestic and international situation, the outlook through 1980, the relative positions of consumers around the world, the effects of inflation, the demand for beef, and the effects of supply upon producer income. It was prepared by Dr. John A Hopkin (cq), head of the department of agricultural economics: Dr. Donald E. Farris, professor of agricultural economins, and

On Wall Street By Bob Hill

The U.S. dollar slumped overseas to the lowest level in modern history. This tends to worry Americans because it sounds bad. It is bad. The problem has not been solved nor will it be solved in the near

The dollar rebounded sharply in April against foreign currencies as a result of the Federal Reserve tightening the screws on interest rates. They have gone up very quickly. Since the beginning of April the dollar has recovered about onethird of the 5 percent it had lost against other currencies.

But while our interest rates were going up, the interest rates of other countries were going down. This encouraged a huge inflow of foreign dollars into the U.S., which experts estimate to total $6 billion to $7 billion over the past six weeks. Over $1 billion went into the stock market. Our trade deficit continues to be high but it has been more than offset by this large flow of capital. Thus, the dollar has gone up in value.....

But there has been a dramatic shift also in the way foreign buyers of U.S. goods pay for these goods. If they believe that the dollar will decline in value, to U.S. exporters in order to take advantage of favorable exchange rates. This can be highly profitable to the foreign buyer of U.S. goods. But when they feel the dollar will begin to strengthen against their own currencies, they will accelerate their payments for U.S. goods and services.

At the moment, with political opposition increasing against the Fed's money tightening moves, foreign buyers are beginning to lag on their payments in anticipation of a weak-ening dollar. Thus it will become more difficult to finance or offset our balance of payments deficit with an inflow of capital from overseas. The political opposition to the tightening of money (higher interest rates) is prompted by fears that higher interest rates in the U.S. will cause a slowdown in the President Carter's move to relax the beef import quota as a means of helping control inflation came as a surprise "to many who have watched the beef industry suffer a four-year worldwide depression," TAMU economists said.

Recent increases in retail beef prices "were a market reaction to a complex set of forces: but mainly the result of a four-year reduction in cattle herds caused by adverse economic and weather conditions," the economists stated.

"Retail beef supplies and prices in the U.S. have been regulated by market forces with relatively little government control. If the rules of the impersonal market are to apply in periods of burdensome supplies as occurred in 1974-77, then it follows that they should be allowed to apply when supplies are shorter and prices are higher," the economists stated

Because of the time required to breed and fatten cattle for slaughter, and the effects of prices which encourage or discourage herd expansion, beef production runs in cycles averaging just over 11 years. When prices, weather or other conditions make cattle raising unprofitable, beef becomes less avail-

It is difficult, the TAMU economists said, to accurately project future availability because cattle production is very sensitive to the availability and price of feed grains, as well as other factors.

Even with such fluctuations, which are not limited to the U.S., the American consumer spends less of his after-tax income on red meat than most other consumers around the world, the economists said. And the American consumer gets higher quality and greater convenience for his dollar, they

Noting that the recovery of the cattle industry from "its worst depression since the 1930's will be reflected in a rising Consumer Price Index," the economists said that "the basic cause of inflation obviously is in other sectors of the economy." The share of disposable income spent for beef in the U.S. in 1977 was only 2.13 percent, the lowest in more than 20 years, they explained.

The demand for beef, the TAMU economists said, "depends mainly on personal inpower." They cited studies in Texas and California which showed that with each 10 percent increase in income, the average American increased beef consumption by about 10 percent, but that a 10 percent increase in beef prices caused only a six or seven percent decrease in beef consumption.

The average consumption of red meat by each American was 195 pounds in 1974, the economists noted. This was more than any other country except Australia, New Zealand and Argentina. In addition, the average U.S. consumer ate 50 pounds of Surveys taken in capital cities of the world Nov. 2, 1977 and March 1, 1978 showed that only Mexico City, Ottawa, Canberra, Brasilia and Buenos Aires paid less for beef in the retail store. Last November, for example, a pound of chuch roast which sold in Washington for $1.09, cost $1.58 in London, $2.11 in Rome, $7.87 Tokyo, and 43 cents in Buenos Aires, one of the major beef exporters.

"U.S. Consumers get one of the world's best beef bargains," the TAMU economists said. "An important part of this bargain, however, represents a 'subsidy' of American beef consumers by cattle ranchers and farmers, who have had chronically low income for two and a half decades except for 1972 and

In an open market, the economists explained, prices fluctuate in response to changes in supplies. When cattle reach the proper maturity and weight and are sold, supplies are heavy and prices are low. For the next several years prices are higher Texas Tech Seminar

In 1973, cattlemen experienced sharp increases in grain and feed prices and a simultaneous worldwide drop in beef prices. Since then, the econoindustry has been in its worst financial condition since World War II.

With little or no profit incentive from 1974-77, there was an unusually high slaughter of cows in an attempt to cut losses.

"As prices advance in 1978, there is no need for producers to sell productive heifers or cows, if they have feed," the paper noted. Thus, the available sup-ply of beef for hamburger or manufacturing is sharply reduc-

It is characteristic of the cattle cycle that beef marketings must be reduced for two to four years while the production capacity is being rebuilt," the three economists said.

of cutting "waste and inefficiency out of government, thus saving millions of tax dollars each year."

Price said, "It is one thing to discuss vague programs to lower taxes, but it is another thing have a definite proposal which would implement such an idea. As a U.S. Congressman for eight years, I worked to reduce government spending so that we could reduce taxes at the federal level. As your state senator, I know that we can save the average taxpayer money by simply reducing the waste and inefficiency which exists in Texas government and bureaucracy.

"Texans should not have to wait one, two or three years for tax reform or tax reduction. Texans should be allowed to vote on such reduction in the next general election. Therefore, I am calling on Governor Dolph Briscoe to convene a special session of the Legislature so that a constitutional amendment may be written which can be voted on by the people of this State on Nov. 7, 1978. The amendment would reduce taxes on the average citizens of Texas and would place a ceiling on total taxes which are levied by both state and local governments." "In the last eight years, the budget expenditures of Texas have almost doubled...from 9 billion dollars to 16 billion dollars. If we are ever going to control big government and its ever expanding taxation, we must begin here at home. The recent vote in California has signaled a rebirth of freedom-freedom from 'big brother' government--freedom from the idea that the taxpayers' money is limitless and that bureaucrats can continuously rob the wage earners of the country. Certain programs are necessary but we have reached the point in this state and in this country where the government consumes more in tax money than it produces in benefits to the average taxpay-

"You, the people, are entitled to vote on this crucial issue and as your state senator, I pledge that I will work to force a vote. Congress is currently considering a proposal that would double the size of America's national part system by designating a sizeable chunk of Alaska as off-limits to developers. According to Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus, the legislation is "the most important land conservation program in the history of the country." Like other public debates on Alaska before it--such as the construction of the oil pipeline-the proposal has sparked a bitter controversy between conservationists and developers.

Wednesday, June 28, NOVA looks at the land and examines the values at stake in "Alaska: The Closing Frontier," at 8 p.m. on Channel 3 (PBS). The program will be repeated at 1 p.m., Saturday, July 1.

Under the bill currently before Congress, which has a selfimposed deadline of December 1978 for final action, one-fifth of Alaska's rugged outback would be preserved with an extensive system of national parks, mo-system of national parks, monuments, land preserves, wildlife refuges, scenic rivers and forests. Existing parks, already among the country's largest, would be expanded. But developers have cast an eye toward the same land and maintain it should remain open and accessible for oil exploration, for the timber industry, for mining and farming. They have

We believe Texans can best be served by laws made by texans". We have recommended for consideration by the next session of the Texas Legislature 17 areas of consumer concern which we feel will strengthen our industry and give the customer added protection. Brown praised EPA and the Department of Agriculture for cooperating with the cotton in-dustry and others in the effort. He reported the materials per-formed well, and there were no fish kills or other major problems. Some 2,350,000-acre treatments with the emergency ma-

Would you believe that the beginning of food preservation dates back to the early 1800's? In 1795, during the Napoleonic wars, the need for food became so great that the French government offered a reward of 12,000 francs to the person who could develop a satisfactory method of preserving foods for sea service and military stores. This award was won in 1809 by M. Nicholas Appert of Paris, who is now known as "The Father of Canning". Through the research of people such as Appert, the canning process has progressed tremendously and methods have been perfected.

Success in canning will depend to a great extent on the equipment. Before the canning season begins, make sure your equipment is in tip-top shape. Regardless of how your pressure canner performed last year, it should be tested again for accuracy.

One of the major reasons for spoilage of home canned foods is faulty or improper equipment.

Pressure canners should also be tested to be sure they are airtight to prevent loss of pressure and steam. Rubber gaskets that have hardened may need to be replaced. The gauge is a vital part since this registers the internal pressure and thus temperature. If the gauge is off two pounds, you should be aware of it and make adjustments accordingly. If the inaccuracy is more than two pounds, you need a new gauge if proper internal temperature is to be maintained. Accuracy in time and temperature should be your canning watchword.

Use only standard jars imprinted with the manufacturer's name. Canning jars are available in half pint, pint and quart sizes and with narrow or wide mouth openings.

Check tops of jars for cracks, chips and dents. Discard those with defects that would prevent an airtight seal.

Do not use mayonnaise, peanut butter or other commercial jars. These are not tempered and may not seal properly in home canning.

A two-piece, self seal lid is the most commonly used lid. It has a metal disk and a metal ring and is self sealing as the jar cools after processing. The top of the jar must have a smooth edge to make a seal. The metal disk can be used only once, but the ring can be used more than

New types of lids and lids manufactured by companies new to the business have entered the market. Lids should meet home canning requirements for sealing properly and holding a seal in handling and storage. Follow manufacturer's instructions to insure a proper seal. Cracks in lid seals and mildew on lids may result from improper storage. For mildew, wash lids in soapy water and boil 5 minutes. Lids with cracked sealing compound should be returned to the manufacturer.

Any large kettle with straight sides, a tight-fitting lid and a rack to keep the jars off the bottom of the kettle can be used for a water bath canner. It should be deep enough to hold the jars upright and permit the water to boil gently 1 or 2 inches over the top of them.
