

First Series title since 1967

Cardinals win deciding 7th game, 6-3

By HAL BROCK
AP sports writer
ST LOUIS AP - Baseball's world championship flag flies over St. Louis, a tribute to the meticulous planning and execution of Manager Whitey Herzog.

The Cardinals captured the title Wednesday night with a come-from-behind 6-3 victory over Milwaukee in the seventh game of the World Series that was typical of their brand of baseball.

They won with speed and defense and custom designed by Herzog for roomy Busch Stadium with its artificial surface. Home runs held no fascination for the Cards, who had the puniest homer attack in the majors in 1982 with just 67 of them.

They preferred to single and double the opposition to death and if they took a lead into the eighth inning, Herzog handed the ball to Bruce Sutter, perhaps the best relief pitcher in baseball.

After that, it was usually game, set, match.

That's precisely how they finished off Milwaukee's muscular Brewers, who led the majors with 216 homers but came out second best in this championship showdown.

The formula was right out of Herzog's textbook. He got seven strong innings from starter Joaquin Andujar and with a 4-3 lead, it was Sutter time.

"We have the best relief pitcher in baseball and we pay him a lot of money, so I figured I'd better use him," said Herzog.

Sutter delivered six straight outs and the Cards tacked on a couple of insurance runs in their last swing to clinch their ninth world championship - the most for any National League team.

But it wasn't all that easy.

St. Louis kept wasting early chances and left six men on base in the first three innings against Milwaukee starter Pete Vuckovich.

"I was thinking about all the men we left on base," said Herzog.

"We had seven hits in a hurry and Vuckovich just kept pitching out of jams."

In the fourth, St. Louis stratched out a run with singles by Eille McGee, Tommy Herr and Lonnie Smith. It was typical Cardinal baseball. It took Milwaukee one home run swing by Ben Oglivie to get it back in the top of the fifth. It was a typical Brewer baseball.

In the sixth, Milwaukee took the lead with a rally that came right out of the St. Louis playbook. Jim Gantner opened with a double. Paul Molitor bunted for a hit and when Andujar threw the ball away for an error, Gantner scored.

Then Robin Yount beat out an infield single for his 12th hit of the Series - one shy of the record - but the only one he managed in the last two games. Cecil Cooper's sacrifice fly scored Molitor and made it 3-1.

Even though they had fallen behind, there was no panic on the Cardinal bench.

"We weren't afraid," said Darrell Porter, who was named the Series' Most Valuable Player. "We've got some people who can play and we had four innings left."

St. Louis decided not to wait for the final three. The Cards went right to work. With one out, Ozzie Smith singled to left and scooted to third on a double by Lonnie Smith. That finished Vuckovich and Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn brought in a left-hander Bob McClure.

Herzog playing the strategy game, pinch hit rightily-swinging Gene Tenace for Ken Oberkfell and McClure walked him, loading the bases.

That brought up Keith Hernandez, a 0-for-15 bust with two errors in the first four games of the series, who had snapped out of his slump with three hits in Game Five and two more in Game Six.

Hernandez was celebrating his 29th birthday and gave himself a lovely gift, drilling a two-run single that tied the score.

"Some of the guys kept me loose during the slump," he said. "They got on me. Things like 'Did that gold glow turn to steel?' or 'Did that silver bat turn to Swiss cheese?'"

Now the Cardinals were even. But a moment later St. Louis had the lead then George Hendrick ripped another single to right.

Andujar, nursing a sore knee injured when he was struck by a batted ball in Game Three, retired the Brewers in the seventh. Coming off the mound, he exchanged words with Gantner and seemed ready to hand-to-hand combat with the Brewers second baseman. Home plate umpire Lee Weyer bear-hugged the angry pitcher and steered him toward the Cardinal dugout.

"There were some pretty bad words," said Andujar, and when he repeated them, the only two useable here were hot dog. "I think he did this just because I was playing so hard. He's a smart player and I think he was just trying to make me mad because he knows when I get mad, I get wild. He knew that could get me out of the game."

But Herzog had decided that Andujar was already out of the game, the Gantner incident notwithstanding. The gospel according to Whitey is with a lead in the eighth inning you give the baseball to Sutter. He takes care of the rest.

"We had 92 victories in the season and Sutter had 36 saves and nine wins," the manager said. "That's half our victories. Anytime we got to the eighth and needed help, I sent for Sutter."

The reliever who looks like a mountain man with his scraggly beard, trumped in to the game with his split fingered fastball and blew the Brewers away in the eighth. In the bottom half of the inning, the Cards added to their lead with a double by Lonnie Smith, and intentional walks and RBI-singles by Porter and Steve Braun.

The rally gave the Cards some breather room. It delayed the celebration but that was all right. Cardinal fans had waited for this 14 years, since 1967 when Bob Gibson led St. Louis to its last world title. They could wait one more inning.

Sutter didn't keep them in suspense long. He mowed down the last three hitters, finishing with a flair by striking out the final batter, Gorman Thomas.

As he clutched the last strike, Porter bounded out from behind the plate and leaped into the pitcher's arms, touching off a mad, mad celebration.

It was the second save of the Series for Sutter, who also was credited with one of the Cards' victories.

"It's hard to believe," the pitcher said. "I know it probably won't sink in for a while. I imagine I'll be hunting deer this winter and all of a sudden it will sink in and I will let out a great big yell."

This Series didn't start out in a very promising manner for the Cardinals. They were shut out 10-0 on Mike Caldwell's three-hitter in the opener. But they came back the next night to eke out a 5-4 victory with Sutter getting the victory in relief. Porter drilled a key two-run double in that game and the winning run scored when Braun drew a base-loaded walk in the bottom of the eighth inning.

The teams moved to Milwaukee and Andujar handcuffed the Brewers in Game Three, winning 6-2. Herzog needed Sutter to nail down that victory after Andujar was hurt and that affected the Cards in Game Four. Leading 5-1, they saw the lead evaporate in a six-run Brewer rally in the seventh inning while Sutter remained in the bullpen.

Winners, losers in Series' tv coverage

By LARRY SIDMONS
AP Sports Writer
Some winners - and losers - in NBC's coverage of the 79th World Series:

-Biggest winner: Harry Coyle. He's been the director for every Series game NBC has carried, since the first in 1947, and no one is better at conveying the intricacies and dynamics of baseball. In this fall's classic, one play underscored his reputation like no other.

It was Lonnie Smith's attempt to steal home in the third inning of Game 5 Tuesday night. Plate umpire Jim Evans called Smith out on a bang-bang play at the plate, but replays showed the St. Louis speedster clearly beat the tag. While it's not unheard of for a TV replay to reveal an officiating mistake, it was the way Coyle built up to the denouncement that deserves raves.

First, he gave us a ground-level, slow-motion shot of Smith jumping off third, with Milwaukee pitcher Don Sutton in the background just starting his motion.

Then came a series of elevated shots of the plate-first a slow-down version of the scene telecast live, then other shots from the third-base line and the outfield, and finally the clincher - the first-base shot that showed Smith safe by a forearm's length.

Give that sequence first place in the "Best single play" category. But it's just one example of Coyle's expertise. Other were the replays of the hard bouncer that felled Cardinals pitcher Joaquin Andujar in Game 3, the drama surrounding the Brewers' six-run rally in Game 4 and the 'Cardinals' sixth-inning comeback in 'Game 7.'

-Biggest loser: Tom Seaver. The veteran pitcher is a knowledgeable and articulate baseball analyst, but he became increasingly hidden as the Series moved on.

NBC used Seaver primarily for pregame interviews, and in the first two games had him explaining key plays and patterns with the help of his scorebook. By Game 6, however, Seaver had largely fallen silent during the game.

-Most crowded seating: The NBC announcers' booth. Seaver's fate may have been a case of too many people in one place. ABC long has been criticized for its three-member announcing team on National Football League telecasts. NBC tried to go that one better, sticking Dick Enberg, Joe Garagiola, Tony Kubek and Seaver behind the microphones.

They did a generally commendable job, especially after the first game in which their commentary was constantly colliding. But there were too many cliches, such as Enberg's home-run accompaniment of "he's going to touch them all!" And Kubek broke new ground when he revealed that an answer was "right on the top of my tongue."

Secret NFL player vote sought

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Russ Francis, the San Francisco 49ers tight end and a less-than-enthusiastic supporter of the National Football League players union, today called for a meeting of all 1,500 players and a secret ballot on whether the strike, now in its 31st day, should continue.

Francis said there should be "a secret ballot, no raising of hands, no public scrutiny, the secret vote to be collectively counted by the teams' player representatives and two team members." The players would decide whether to stay on strike until a collective bargaining agreement is signed or resume playing while negotiations continue.

He said there was a proposal being put together (he didn't say by whom or how many fellow players he represented) to enable the players "to regain control of the situation and take an active role in the resolution of the dispute."

Francis pointed out that the owners would have to make a similar good-faith gesture, futile preseason strike because "the players have shown more solidarity than they did in 1974 ... also we have a mediator in place. What it boils down to is that neither side has anything to gain by the players remaining on strike. Therefore, we're proposing that we resume the season as a display of good faith."

Francis said there should be "a secret ballot, no raising of hands, no public scrutiny, the secret vote to be collectively counted by the teams' player representatives and two team members." The players would decide whether to stay on strike until a collective bargaining agreement is signed or resume playing while negotiations continue.

Fiery Billy Martin fired again

OAKLAND (AP) - The Oakland A's won't be playing "Billy Ball" any longer.

Fiery Billy Martin, who led the A's from fifth place to an American League West title in two years and helped rekindle fan interest with his daring brand of baseball, is back in the job market following his firing Wednesday.

Both the New York Yankees, the team Martin managed to two AL pennants and one World series title, and the Cleveland Indians, previously expressed interest in hiring the 54-year-old manager whose career has been punctuated by controversy and success.

Yankee Vice President Bill Bergesch said he had no idea if owner George Steinbrenner planned to enter into serious discussions with Martin.

"I know absolutely nothing. This is the first I've heard about Billy. George does all the hiring. I don't know if George has spoken to him."

"It's big news but I don't think it's going to affect our position. We'll just keep talking with him," said Indians General Manager Phil Seghi.

Both clubs earlier had received permission to talk to Martin. The contract of Indian Manager Dave Garcia has not been renewed while the status of Yankee pilot Clyde King has not been determined.

A's President Roy Eisenhardt and club executives Walter and Wally Haas, made their decision Tuesday after a three-hour discussion with Martin, who then went duck hunting.

"We were talking as friends," Eisenhardt told reports. "Each of us had compassion for the other's situation. It wasn't the first time we had discussed this."

But Martin and the A's ownership had been hotly feuding the past three months. At one point, according published reports, Martin punched holes in the wall of his office after being denied a request to renegotiate his contract.

Martin, who cried at a press conference when he quit the Yankees in 1978; left the A's dugout in tears during a game in Toronto last season.

Halloween's origin is program topic

"Halloween and Origin" was the program presented by Lucille Hughes when member of La Afflatus Estudio Club met recently in the home of Emily Suggs with Della Stagner serving as co-hostess.

The speaker noted that the holiday has been celebrated for over 2000 years and that it began on the evening before "All Saints Day", also known as "All Souls Day".

It was believed that all souls came back for one day each year. Ms. Hughes also explained how the jack-o-lantern became popular and how the public celebrates the holiday today.

Pett Ott, president, called the meeting to order and club collect was led by Alberta Higgins.

Roll call was answered with "A Thought for Today" and minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Committee reports were also given.

Those present included Madlene Bell, Opal Elliston, Allyne Johnson, Ms. Higgins, Lydia Hopson, Ms. Hughes and Ms. Ott, Jennie Terrill and Mary Williamson.

The next meeting is scheduled at 3 p.m. Nov. 2 in the home of Mrs. Ott with Irene Markham serving as co-hostess.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

Mothers everywhere are about to enter the second stage of their home-packed school lunch experience.

There are three cycles during a school year .. each reflecting a mother's care and concern for her young child's nutrition and well-being.

Cycle I is a short one running from the first day to late October. It is Super Mom's finest hour. During this period every lunch she packs contains the seven basic foods for strong bones and bodies. The bread is fresh and cut into shapes of little ducks with raisin eyes and carrot mouths.

The filling is chilled in a separate container to ward off botulism. Steam pours from the wide-mouth thermoses revealing the promise of fresh vegetables in homemade broth. There is a little plastic spoon, knife and fork.

Fruit is sectioned and cut for easy access and desserts are personally monogrammed. A napkin with a toothpick in it and a mint to leave a cool lasting taste complete the lunch. Daily, there is a note saying, "Mommy loves you. Hurry home" It is all gift-wrapped in a floral bag with the name printed in calligraphy.

From late October to January, the second cycle begins to emerge. Bologna still has the rind on it, peanut butter becomes a staple and if you had three sandwiches for lunch, you'd get sick heels. Fruit is iffy and no one has seen the thermos since September. Every day for five weeks you get the same Christmas cookies with anise in them that no one will eat, including you. The cute bags are gone and you're reduced to plain brown ones.

By January and continuing through to the end of the school year, lunch is a challenge. You're down to cold chicken necks, a wedge of cheese that is late for its own funeral, a cold pork chop with a bite out of it and compressed squares of assorted oats and grain that 's supposed to fill you up until dinner, but doesn't.

If you have an 11 a.m. lunch period, the bread is still frozen. The seven basics have dwindled down to a bunch of carrots with the tops still on and a jar of maraschino cherries. The fried egg sandwich that smelled so great at breakfast now has all the appeal of an eye transplant.

The brown lunch bag has given way to a shopping bag that also hides dirty gym clothes.

No one knows why school lunches follow this cycle, but they're as predictable as the kid who doesn't eat any of them, but trades them for a baseball card and a Scratch 'n Sniff!

Public invited to attend Women's Forum luncheon

All women are invited to attend the Deaf Smith County's Women's Forum covered dish luncheon slated at noon Monday at Hereford Community Center. Hosting the event will be Garden Beautiful Club, Young Homemakers Club and Newcomers Club.

Each member is asked to bring a covered dish. There will be a brief board meeting at 11 a.m. and the food should be brought by 11:30 a.m.

A representative from Sandra's Arts and Crafts will present the program beginning at 1 p.m. on Christmas ideas and gift making decorating. A babysitter will be provided.

Any individual, whether a member of a club which is not a member of the Women's Forum, or a woman who is not a member of any club, may become a Forum member by paying the $1 a year dues.

Any club that would like to join may do so by paying $3 per year membership dues.

Public Responsibility group meeting in Amarillo today

The Public Responsibility Committee of the Amarillo Mental Health Mental Retardation Regional Center will hold its first meeting of fiscal year 1982-83 today at the Amarillo Psychiatric Pavilion, 7201 Evans Blvd.

Members of the Public Responsibility Committee are J.L. (Nick) Hammond and Paula Wester of Amarillo; Rev. Leonard Forsythe and Frank J. Smith of Borger; Rev. Joe Turner and Shirley Kucifer, Pampa; Loretta Wright and Rita Lowrie of Willington; Sharon Ellzey, Perryton; Sue Hobby, Canadian; Rev. Tod Taylor, Hereford, and Margie Brookmole of Dumas.

The Public Responsibility Committee receives and investigates complaints and makes recommendations for corrective action, investigates claims of denial of rights to clients in the 21-county area served by the Amarillo MHMR Regional Center and reports instances of alleged abuse or denial of rights to appropriate authorities.

The Public Responsibility Committee is designed to advocate for and protect the human and legal rights of clients of the Center(s) served, and members of the PRC are volunteers who are not in any way responsible to the administration of the facility they serve.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Oct. 21, the 294th day of 1982. There are 71 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 21, 1969, Willy Brandt became the first socialist chancellor in West Germany's history.

On this date:

In 1805, England's Lord Nelson defeated the Franco-Spanish fleet at Trafalgar but was mortally wounded.

In 1945, French women were allowed to vote for the first time.

In 1976, China announced the Communist Central Committee had shattered a power play by the "Gang of Four."

In 1979, the government of Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin was rocked by the resignation of foreign minister Moshe Dayan.

Ten years ago: North Vietnamese premier Pham Van Dong said his government was ready to accept a ceasefire as the first step toward settlement of the Vietnam War.

Five years ago: The American ambassador to South Africa was recalled to Washington for consultations on moves the United States should take in regard to a crackdown on South African black leaders.

One year ago: President Reagan sought to clarify American nuclear policy, saying talk that the U.S. was considering fighting a nuclear war with the Soviet Union was "an outright deception."

Today's birthday: Baseball Hall of Famer Whitey Ford is 54.

Thought for today: "To keep your character intact you cannot stoop to filthy acts. It makes it easier to stoop the next time" — actress Katharine Hepburn (born 1909).
