Quayle did 'great', Bentsen 'enjoyed' debate

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Michael Dukakis and George Bush, picking up where their understudies left off, are arguing about the fitness of their running mates for the nation's highest office after a vice presidential debate that focused on doubts about Dan Quayle's background and qualifications.

Democrats hoped the debate has dramatized their contention that Quayle was too inexperienced to step into the presidency on a moment's notice and they drew cheer from the first flash poll suggesting much of the public was going along with that view.

In the only debate scheduled between the two of them, Quayle and Lloyd Bentsen clashed over protecting the environment, Social Security, Contra aid, taxes and campaign reform.

An ABC News poll rated Bentsen the clear winner. Six debate judges who scored the encounter for The Associated Press also picked Bentsen unanimously as the victor.

Nevertheless, Republican Quayle said he did "great" in his prime-time encounter with Bentsen. Democrat Bentsen said, "I think I did fine and I enjoyed it. I had fun."

In a 90-minute meeting where neither candidate made any big mistakes, the most electric moment came when the boyish-looking, 41-year-old Quayle was defending his qualifications and said he had as much experience as John F. Kennedy when he sought the presidency. It was a comparison he has made often.

Bentsen shot back, "Senator, I served with Jack Kennedy, I knew Jack Kennedy, Jack Kennedy was a friend of mine. Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

With an icy stare, Quayle interrupted to say, "That was really uncalled for, senator," Bentsen replied,

"You are the one that was making the comparison, senator ... and I'm the one who knew him well."

Underscoring the sensitivity of the exchange, Bush's campaign chief, James A. Baker III, acknowledged later that it might have been the most riveting part of the debate. However, he added, "The American people will not judge the debate on one response or rebuttal or remark. That's not what, in my opinion, is going to determine who won or who lost."

Afterward, Dukakis seized on the question of competence, telling a Boston rally, "The most important qualification for the vice president is that he's ready at a moment's notice to assume the presidency of the United States. Tonight Lloyd Bentsen demonstrated that he was the only one on that stage who's ready."

In Fort Worth, Texas, Vice President Bush said Quayle hit a "home run" right from the start of the debate and wasn't fazed by the questions about his fitness.

Bush said that Quayle "under tremendous pressure ... came through with flying colors. Now people can see what I've seen all along."

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., called Bentsen's remark "vicious" and "a cheap shot," adding: "That was very unbecoming of Lloyd Bentsen." Sen.

Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said he was "embarrassed" for Quayle.

In a presidential race that is virtually a tossup at this point, polls indicate that Quayle is costing Bush support, with many voters uneasy about his readiness for high office.

It was the first question put to Quayle on Wednesday night, and he replied, "I have more experience than others that have sought the office of vice president." He said that on national security and arms control, education and jobs and the deficit, "I have more experience than does the governor of Massachusetts."

The 67-year-old Bentsen was never challenged on his qualifications, but he pointed out that he had served in combat, was a businessman and a farmer as well as a senator.

When Bentsen was asked about his policy differences with Dukakis on Contra aid, gun control and the death penalty, the Texas senator glossed over the question, saying he and his running mate agreed on many things.

"As you notice," Quayle observed, "Senator Bentsen didn't tell you very much about what Governor Dukakis would do ... If I had to defend the liberal policies of Governor Michael Dukakis, I wouldn't talk about it either."

Bentsen accused the Republicans of attempting to slash Social Security and said Quayle voted eight times to cut benefits. Quayle accused him of distorting the record and said the Democrats were trying "to scare the older people of this country."

Bentsen said the Reagan administration had appointed environmental officials who were the equivalent of Bonnie and Clyde. Quayle said Dukakis had allowed a major environmental problem to fester in Boston Harbor, and had campaigned against ocean dumping in New Jersey even though he had applied for a license to dump Massachusetts sewage waste off the New Jersey coastline.

Quayle criticized Bentsen, the chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, for setting up a breakfast club for lobbyists willing to pay $10,000 in campaign contributions.

Water is an issue

Democratic state senate candidate Mel Phillips shows off one of his "Stop Salt In Lake Meredith" bumper stickers during a campaign stop in Hereford on Thursday.

Phillips said he is concerned not only with the quality of drinking water from the lake, but with worries that Meredith "could become another Buffalo Lake."

Phillips pushes water, health

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Democratic state senate candidate Mel Phillips said Wednesday that persons in the Panhandle and other rural areas of the state are being discriminated against when it comes to health care.

Phillips, in the midst of a swing throughout the 31st state senatorial district, said the situation has already become a crisis, pointing out that the Berger hospital closed in late September.

"The state is threatening to adopt the same position as the federal Medicare and Medicaid system," Phillips said during an interview at the Brand. "In the big city hospitals, they get $1 for every $1 of health care they provide. In rural hospitals, they provide $1 worth of health care and get 65 cents in return."

"There's no difference in the quality of care provided in rural or urban hospitals. It would be different if they came to us and said, 'If you live in the city, you pay $1 in taxes, but if you live in a rural area, you're going to pay 65 cents in taxes,' but it doesn't work that way."

"That's one of the messages we're going to take to Austin, that we should get the same whether it's an urban hospital or a rural hospital. If we can't get legislative relief, then we can take it to the courts, file a suit that says it's not fair, and seek judicial relief."

"The buzzword is 'formula.' If you hear the word 'formula,' then you can translate that into someone getting ready to hurt rural Texas."

Phillips said he would be able to counteract the flow of money into and tailoring of programs for urban areas by forming coalitions, and pointed to his work with the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

Phillips said that while he was on the TAC board, rural areas received $2.3 million for airport improvement projects, including $86,250 to Hereford in 1985 and a total of $156,412 in two separate years. (See PHILLIPS, Page 2)

Amistad gets $850 K from FmHA

By ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

The Amistad Housing Development Corporation has been awarded an $850,170 loan fund from the U.S. Farmers Home Administration to build a 30-unit apartment complex for low-income domestic farm workers.

"We're glad that we got the money approved, but I don't think it will be enough to build the facility," said Amistad president Charlie Ruiz. "We originally asked for $2.4 million, but that obviously got cut down."

Ruiz started his dream of building low-income housing for farm laborers about five years ago because he said the San Jose Labor

Camp doesn't serve its intended purpose.

"A labor camp should be facilities where farm labor people can live and not just any kind of laborers," Ruiz said. "All that property out there is privately owned, so there's nothing that can be done to only allow farm laborers to live there."

The proposed complex of two-, three- and four-bedroom apartments will house a manager whose income comes mostly from farm labor. This manager will then screen all applicants and for those who comply, the rent will be based on 30 percent of the applicant's income.

Amistad originally applied for a 50-unit complex, but FmHA rejected it for the 30-unit plan which, even then, was cost prohibitive at $2.4 million.

"The initial cost was way in excess of other similar projects such as the Azteca Complex in Dimmitt," said Philip Madeley, assistant district director for FmHA. "We contracted a licensed appraiser to appraise the Amistad proposal and that ($850,170) was the figure he came up with. It's a little lower than I expected, but the market value was considered in there, and that's what lowered it."

The apartment complex will be at Norton Street and South Texas Avenue and will include a laundry, day care facilities, a ball park and parking for farm trucks.

"We've got our fingers crossed that we can start construction by December," said Ruiz.

Madeley said the December start-up date may be premature.

"I've got this thick pile of papers on my desk right now that have to be approved by not only the district office but the state office as well," said Madeley. "We have yet to approve the budget, management plan, loan conditions and advertise for bids for construction, and there's no telling how long that will take. When things are this subsidized, it gets really complicated."

Savings bailout bill up to $50 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress are moving to give federal regulators more money to rescue ailing savings institutions and contain the industry crisis, which one government official said may cost as much as $50 billion to resolve.

A sharply divided House Banking Committee voted 29-22 on Wednesday to expand the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's borrowing limit from $10.8 billion in bonds to $15.8 billion. The move is opposed by the industry, which pays an assessment to retire the 30-year bonds.

Committee Chairman Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., said the measure could come before the full House as early as today.

The House also planned to vote today on a bill creating a special study commission to advise the next administration on the best way to solve the savings industry crisis. The Senate passed a similar bill last week.

St Germain said the Senate would be "hard put" to oppose an expansion of the bank board's borrowing limit, since last summer, when Congress authorized $10.8 billion in borrowing over three years, the Senate pushed for a higher limit of $15 billion.

The bank board already has issued $3.75 billion in bonds. The Banking Committee bill would permit the bank board to float the remaining amount as soon as needed rather than spreading it over the next two years.

Also on Wednesday, bank board chairman M. Danny Wall increased by more than a third his agency's estimate of the cost of cleaning up the savings industry.

Wall, who three months ago boosted the price tag from $22 billion to $31 billion, told the Senate Budget Committee it now ranges between $45 billion and $50 billion. Some private analysts put the cost as high as $100 billion.

The bank board already has committed $20 billion this year to close or merge 122 troubled thrifts.

Wall said his agency's resources could cover the newly estimated cost, but only by placing "an exceedingly heavy burden" on the industry. Thrift institutions currently pay more than twice as much as their competitors, commercial banks, for deposit insurance and Wall said that differential would have to continue over 30 years if his agency did not get help.

The head of the industry's largest trade group, the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, said extending the differential for 30 years "would be an intolerable burden."

"The special assessment has made the difference between profit and loss for 69 solvent savings institutions so far this year. In other words, in the process of removing 122 insolvents, (regulators) have been driving another 69 which are now healthy closer to becoming problem cases," league Chairman Theo H. Pitt Jr. said.

Wall said taxpayers would not necessarily have to pay the bill for boosting the bank board's resources. He listed alternatives, without endorsing any, that included: requiring institutions to place 1 percent of their deposits into the S&L insurance fund, borrowing from the insurance fund for commercial banks or from the Federal Reserve, and charging borrowers a fee for mortgages provided by S&Ls.

Pitt also opposed expanding the industry-funded bond borrowing, arguing that Congress should wait until it hears from the special study commission being created.

Rep. John LaFalce, D-N.Y., the sponsor, said the bill was intended to give the bank board a way to raise more money without resorting to promissory notes which count toward the federal budget deficit and ultimately could have to be paid off by taxpayers.

Assaults reported

The Hereford Police Department reported that a man who was jogging at the Hereford High School football field in the 300 block of Stadium Drive was assaulted Wednesday.

The man said in police reports that as he was leaving the field, two people jumped him, hit him in the face and left the scene on foot.

Another assault (family violence) was reported in the 500 block of Irving Street, but no charges were filed.

A baby stroller worth $89 was stolen in the 600 block of Avenue I and forgery was reported in the 600 block of Avenue I.

A 30-year-old man was charged with having no liability insurance (second offense) and an 18-year-old man was charged with disorderly conduct and public intoxication.

Eleven citations were issued and a minor accident was reported.

Man charged with burglary

The Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office transported Refugio "Rufus" Pesina, 35, from the Amarillo Correctional Center Wednesday and charged him with burglary of a habitation.

Pesina is accused of participating in more than 10 county burglaries earlier this year.

He is now in the Deaf Smith County Jail.

Sheriff's deputies also arrested a married couple Wednesday on burglary warrants from Hall County.

Daniel DeLeon, 24, was charged with burglary of a motor vehicle and Maria DeLeon, 17, was charged with burglary of a habitation.

Deputies recovered a .22-caliber handgun, clothing, a knife and a calculator in the couple's car.

They are now in Deaf Smith County Jail awaiting transportation to Memphis, Texas.

A 25-year-old woman was charged with bail jumping and failure to appear and a woman, 43, was charged with a theft by check warrant from the county.

School out early

All Hereford public schools will dismiss one hour early Friday due to the football game being in Levelland.

The early dismissal will allow buses to run their routes before being used for transportation to the game, and to allow all students the opportunity to go home before going to the game.

Rain, fog possible

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a low of 45. East wind will be 10-15 mph. Friday will have another round of early morning fog, then mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers. The high will be 65, with east winds 10-15 mph. This morning's low at KPAN was 46 after a high Wednesday of 78. KPAN recorded a trace of moisture in the 24 hours ending at 7 a.m. today.

Protests rage at Atlanta abortion clinic

ATLANTA (AP) — Helmeted police officers stood guard at an abortion clinic as patients inside huddled and employees went about their business while "Siege of Atlanta" protesters outside shouted Bible verses.

The Feminist Women's Health Center is one of the city's seven clinics targeted by Operation Rescue, the New York-based anti-abortion group that has staged demonstrations here this week.

More demonstrations were promised for today, although the numbers of demonstrators have dwindled since Tuesday, when 343 people were arrested on misdemeanor charges.

Fourteen were arrested Wednesday, said City Solicitor Raines Carter said.

Three of them were charged with simple assault when a patient they tried to bar from Feminist Women's Health Center stumbled and fell.

Protest leaders who dubbed this week's protests the "Siege of Atlanta" said they have prevented abortions with their demonstrations, which include attempting to blockade entrances.

Clinic officials disputed that, and said aside from some rescheduling of appointments, business has not been affected.

But a 21-year-old patient from Rome, Ga., said she was horrified by the severity of the protests as she arrived at the clinic Wednesday.

"You've got people throwing themselves on the ground trying to trip you up and make you fall, peeking under the umbrella and all that," she said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"I was in a lot of pain. I could have been hemorrhaging or bleeding to death, and here they are," she said. "Nobody should have to go through that kind of terrorism."

On Wednesday, the center, which serves 10 to 50 patients a day in a building near downtown, braced for a morning protest. Two police officers were stationed at the clinic's entrances.

Other police officers, several on horseback, deployed at metal curbside barricades. Employees and pro-choice volunteers gripped black umbrellas labeled "Choice" as they waited to escort patients into the facility.

The demonstrators arrived in midafternoon with drastically reduced ranks.

Most demonstrators said they limited their activities to praying and singing hymns.

As a patient approached the building surrounded by escorts, one male demonstrator shouted "Jesus said, 'Suffer little children that come unto me! Don't you hear your baby begging for his life?'"

Patients inside shied away from the clinic's windows and whispered among themselves. Employees occasionally stepped away from their duties to check on the demonstrators and talk with the policemen.

Center director Lynne Randall spent most of the day outside meeting with police officials and volunteers.

"It's just really been frantic, with all of this going on," she said. "It's had a big impact on the staff and the patients."

Ms. Randall, who was wearing a large button that read "I Survived Operation Rescue," said the demonstrators were "acting like thugs."

"We just want to make sure everything is going well," she said. Protesters began the demonstrations here July 19, during the Democratic National Convention.

Protest leaders frequently have likened their efforts to civil rights demonstrations and say they are following the non-violent teachings of such leaders as the late Martin Luther King Jr.

Protesters on Tuesday complained that police treated them with unnecessary harshness, twisting arms and fingers and using pressure-point holds just under the ears to force them into buses.

"I think what is happening in Atlanta right now is just terribly anti-American," said City Councilman Hosea Williams, a colleague of King's. "It hurts me so bad that we who were the leaders of the movement in the '50s, '60s and '70s, are now the political leaders, and we are doing the same things to demonstrators that George Wallace and Bull Connor and those did to us."

However, another King colleague, Rep. John Lewis, said that while there are similarities to methods he employed 20 years ago, the aims are different.

"Very rarely did we deliberately try to close down a business," the Georgia Democrat said. "We didn't want to interfere with the free flow of commerce."

Sandinista government OK's emergency law

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista party has pushed through a law that grants President Daniel Ortega sweeping powers to make arrests and silence news media during a state of emergency.

Also Wednesday, the government banned Nicaraguans from receiving any type of official U.S. aid.

The new Emergency Law went into effect immediately after it was approved by the leftist Sandinistas' 61-seat majority in the 96-seat National Assembly. It allows the president to declare a state of emergency and restrict civil liberties for reasons of war, economic crisis or national disasters.

In a statement, the opposition Popular Social Christian Party decried the law as "an unrestrained concentration of extraordinary powers" that could render Ortega "an absolute dictator."

A National State of Emergency decree was in effect from March 1982 until shortly after a Central American peace plan was signed by the region's presidents in August 1987.

Under the new law, the president can declare a state of emergency that permits the government to temporarily confiscate privately-owned businesses and vehicles. It empowers the executive to suspend broadcast and print media and communications services "when necessary to maintain public order."

It also gives the government sweeping powers of arrest and preventive detention of individuals deemed "dangerous persons" and requires all individuals traveling in war zones to carry identification documents.

Meanwhile, the External Cooperation Ministry announced a ban on "all cash or in-kind assistance connected with funds approved by the U.S. government," including humanitarian aid for victims of the seven-year civil war between the government and U.S.-backed rebels known as Contras.

Ortega also sent a bill to the Assembly that would make receipt of any official U.S. aid "crimes against the internal and external security of the state." The assembly will consider the legislation beginning Friday.

Lions' United Way check

Mark Andrews, left, Pacesetters division chairman for the 1988 campaign of United Way of Deaf Smith County, accepts a check for $2,500 from Boss Lion David Ruland of the Hereford Lions Club during Wednesday's club meeting. The United Way contribution was raised from the club's projects held during the year.

Quayle withstands tough test; fresh heat being laid on by Democrats

An AP News Analysis By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Quayle withstood his mid-term exam, but the Democrats aren't relenting in their campaign to flunk the Republican vice presidential nominee.

In 90 minutes of pressurized debate with Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, Quayle held his own. There were no significant blunders by either man in the running mate debate.

An ABC News poll immediately after the debate found 51 percent thought Bentsen had won, 27 percent said Quayle, and 22 percent thought it a tie. The margin of error in the survey of 637 people was 4.5 percentage points.

Republican Quayle faced the more difficult debate assignment because he is the candidate found by public opinion polls to be a drag on his ticket. He has come under constant campaign attack. And he faced the tougher set of sometimes repetitive debate questions.

Bentsen fills a more traditional No. 2 role. He isn't an issue. He is, rather, a bridge between Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis and his party's more conservative branch.

At the start of the Omaha, Neb., debate, Quayle was asked to defend his credentials and qualifications for the vice presidency and, if need be, the presidency itself. That meshed with the theme Bentsen came to stress — that the debate really dealt with the presidency itself, and whether he or Quayle is the better man to take on the job if necessary.

He and Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis argue every day that the answer on Quayle is no. And the debate had hardly ended before Dukakis repeated that theme, telling a Boston rally that Bentsen had proved again he could take over the presidency if he has to, while Quayle could not.

That points to a campaign theme that is sure to be part of the Democratic litany until Nov. 8. Post-debate comments, predictably, fit that pattern.

"Neither scored a knockout, but Lloyd Bentsen looked and sounded more presidential," said Democratic Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, a former candidate for his party's prize.

Quayle clearly had done his homework for the debate test. When the first questioner recited criticism of his military and academic records, and disparaging comments by Republicans, Quayle said the question behind it all was of his qualifications to be vice president "and in the case of tragedy, whether I'm qualified to be president."

The Indiana senator, 41, said it isn't a question of age but of accomplishments and experience, insisted that he has both, especially on national security, jobs and education, and the federal budget.

"On each one of those issues I have more experience than does the governor of Massachusetts," he said. And repeatedly, "I am prepared ... to lead this country" if the GOP ticket wins and that becomes necessary.

Quayle stuck to that line all night.

The panel of questioners, three television and one print journalist, went back to the topic repeatedly, three times by asking what first step Quayle would take if he ever became president. That's an unanswerable question, since no vice president could know what he'd do without knowing the circumstances of his succession. It was not asked of Bentsen.

Each time, Quayle went back to his formula, claiming strength on the big three issues.

But he varied it enough to trigger the debate's sharpest exchange, saying that he has as much experience now as John F. Kennedy had when he ran for president.

"Senator, I served with Jack Kennedy. I knew Jack Kennedy, Jack Kennedy was a friend of mine," said Bentsen. "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy." "That was really uncalled for, senator," an angry Quayle retorted.

Kennedy had served 14 years in Congress, eight in the Senate before he became president in 1960. Quayle has been a senator for eight years, and served four in the House.

Bentsen took a share of sharp questions, on his political fund-raising tactics and also about his differences with Dukakis on such topics as aid to the Nicaraguan Contras, the death penalty and gun control. The Texas senator favors the first two, opposes gun control. Dukakis holds opposite positions. Bentsen said they agree on most issues, then changed the subject.

Quayle tried to make make an issue of that, saying he wouldn't try to defend a liberal like Dukakis, either.

But he remained the focus. And he is certain to remain a prime target in the five weeks until election day.

The exchange of words

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Here are highlights from Wednesday night's vice presidential debate between Lloyd Bentsen and Dan Quayle.

QUAYLE QUALIFICATIONS

Quayle was asked four times about his qualifications for high office, and responded that he is "prepared to lead this country," if necessary. However, when he compared his experience with that of John F. Kennedy, Bentsen shot back that he had known Kennedy and "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

THE OTHER TARGETS

The debaters saved their best shots for the two presidential candidates, George Bush and Michael Dukakis. "George Bush has more qualifications than Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen combined," Quayle said.

Bentsen took aim at Bush's vote in favor of a plan to curtail Social Security cost-of-living increases. He said the Reagan administration had appointed high-level environmental officials who were the equivalent of Bonnie and Clyde.

BENTSEN-DUKAKIS DIFFERENCES

Bentsen was asked about his differences with Dukakis on such issues as aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, the death penalty and gun control. "We agree on so many things, on the vast majority of the issues," Bentsen replied. He said he and Dukakis agree on cutting the budget deficit and on a trade policy that will "stand tough for America."

SOCIAL SECURITY

Bentsen accused Quayle of voting eight times to cut benefits, and said Bush cast a tie-breaking vote against a Social Security cost-of-living increase. Quayle glancingly responded, "Senator Bentsen, you know that I did not vote to cut Social Security eight times." He said he had voted to delay cost-of-living adjustments and that Bentsen himself had voted that way twice.

CLOSING STATEMENTS

Quayle said "George Bush has the experience, and with me, the future," and that the Democrats would "take America backwards." He said "the road of George Bush is the road to the future and it comes to this: an America second to none, with visions of greatness, tough laws, tough judges, strong values, respect for flag and institutions." Bentsen said he and Dukakis believe the "best of America is yet to come," but that "putting the economy on automatic pilot will not be sufficient. ... The nation will fulfill its greatness but cannot afford to stand still."

Time capsule contents destroyed

DALLAS (AP) — The contents of a capsule buried 50 years ago to preserve events surrounding the founding of the annual State Fair of Texas have been swallowed by time.

All that remained of 300 front pages from Texas newspapers published in 1938 and other industry-related memorabilia in the time capsule was some decomposed paper at the bottom of a rusty iron box, officials said this week. Water had seeped inside.

"It was disappointing," said Lyndell Williams, executive vice president of the Texas Press Association in Austin. "It (the box) had rusted through."

The time capsule was installed on Oct. 8, 1938, at the base of a statue honoring the exposition's founders and acknowledging contributions made by the Texas news industry.

Williams said he was glad TPA oficials decided to examine contents of the crypt last month, about 30 days before the fair's scheduled opening on Friday.

"The governor was going to be there, and a Marine drum and bugle corps was going to be there. Also, members of the Dallas Historical Society were interesting in coming," said Williams.

"We thought that this could be embarrassing if we opened the crypt and nothing was in there. So we decided to look in advance."

TPA president Fred Lowe, director of member services Nick Voinis and Williams flew to Dallas, where Nancy Wiley, the fair's director of public relations, met them to inspect the site.

A gold-plated key to the crypt was presented each succeeding year, in closing ceremonies of the TPA annual summer convention, to the newly elected president by the outgoing president.

"We couldn't even get the key in the lock," said Williams. "The gold key did not work at all. We squirted WD-40 on it and it still did not work. The metal box was in it, but totally rusted through and the papers were rotted. If you picked them up, they would just disintegrate."

The years also were unkind to the statue, constructed by Dallas artist Jose Martin. Several deep cracks were visible throughout the crushed granite-and-sand monument.

TPA officials, who canceled the ceremony, said they plan to restore the monument and purchase a new time capsule for its base with funds raised by the association and its member publishers.

projects in Dimmitt. "We need someone who will make sure that our area gets its fair share," Phillips said. "I did that on the Texas Aeronautics Commission and I can do that in the Texas Senate."

Phillips said another big issue in parts of the 29-county district is the quality of the drinking water from Lake Meredith.

Several towns, including Amarillo,

Canyon, Plainview, Lubbock and Levelland, draw at least part of their water supplies from the lake, which is on the Canadian River near Borger.

"The salt level has become worse," Phillips said, pointing out that very little of the salt leaves the river between a brine aquifer about four miles east of Ute Dam in New Mexico to Sanford Dam.

Phillips brought in Lt. Gov. Bill

Hobby earlier in the week and had Hobby take a drink of lake water in front of reporters in Amarillo.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In 1963 I almost killed my husband with a "sure-fire method" to stop his snoring. "Elmer" was lying asleep on the floor, snoring to beat the band as usual. I was watching TV. A so-called expert said, "If you want relief from a snorer, this is a method that never fails. Simply clamp a clothespin on the snorer's nose."

Immediately, I ran and got a clothespin, clamped it on Elmer's nose and continued to watch TV in blissful silence.

A few minutes later I happened to glance at him and was horrified to see that his face was turning blue and his chest appeared to be caving in.

I immediately removed the clothespin and revived him with cold towels.

From then on I decided to put up with Elmer's snoring and count my blessings. I told myself, "At least he's not in another woman's bed and he's alive and well."

But I never gave up hoping that a magical cure would come along. A few days ago I stumbled on a miracle that I want to share with the world. I discovered ear plugs. They really work like magic. Please tell the world about this.—M.K. of Kailua

DEAR KAILUA: Much aloha for the suggestion. I've been told that your "great discovery" doesn't work for everybody but I'm glad it worked for you!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I thought you'd like to know how I have applied your good common sense advice to my business.

Often, a woman who is contemplating marriage writes to say she is worried because her fiancé treats her badly and may even slap her around. She asks, "Do you believe he will treat me better once we're married? He says he will." Your reply is, "No. He will treat you worse. Before marriage his best foot is forward. After marriage, you will see a less attractive side."

As a buyer, I am often called on by sales representatives who are trying to get my business on a steady basis. I listen to the pitch, and if it's good, I apply the Ann Landers Test: I give an assignment, such as obtaining specific detailed information from the factory. Some of these representatives fail to follow through, or do so half-heartedly. A few get back to me promptly with exactly what was requested and sometimes more.

I reason that if a sales representative doesn't follow through when he's trying to get my business, he sure won't do better once I'm signed up and "married" to him.—A.H.S., St. Louis

DEAR SAINT: Behavioral and character traits that one displays in personal relationships are bound to carry over in business situations. I'm glad I was helpful.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We need an unbiased party to decide this issue:

The boss's secretary hired an assistant last week. She is a non-nonsense type who has been around the track a time or two. Last week she put a sign on her desk that read as follows:

MY COW DIED LAST WEEK AND I DON'T NEED YOUR BULL.

I think the sign is funny. Others think it is inappropriate in this somewhat dignified office. The boss is out of town and hasn't seen it yet. What is your opinion?—D and H and L and J in Rochester.

DEAR ROCHESTER: I say you are both right. The sign is funny. It is also inappropriate for a somewhat dignified office.

Everyone does drugs, right? Wrong. And today, more and more people are aware of the dangers involved. If you want to be in the know, too, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send $3 plus a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope (45 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Grant from The Outfit to support society

The Outfit, an area wide organization dedicated to the preservation of the Western heritage of the Texas Panhandle has given a $1,500 grant to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society.

At the request of the benefactor the money will be used for the Francklyn Land and Cattle Company Collection and the Charles Goodnight Papers research projects.

This grant will provide needed staff time and supplies for the arrangement, inventory and indexing of these two major manuscript collections in the Museum's Research Center. The work on these collections will insure their preservation and make them accessible to future researchers.

These collections, which contain information on historical ranches in the Panhandle, are of special interest to the membership of The Outfit. This organization is actively involved in sponsoring ranch related activities such as Junior Livestock Shows, 4-H clubs, cutting horse events and rodeos.

The Francklyn Land and Cattle Company (later the White Deer Land Company) records consist of 50 cubic feet of correspondence, ledgers and documents. All of these relate to the operation of this large Texas Panhandle ranch, which covered portions of Carson, Gray, Hutchinson and Roberts Counties. These records date from 1882 to 1957.

After Charles Lindburgh made history with the first solo flight across the Atlantic, he came home by ship.

Former resident's book now available in paperback

Several years ago, The Brand ran a feature story on Linda West Eckhardt and the publication of her classical cookbook, "The Only Texas Cookbook." Now comes news that the book is available in paperback.

Mrs. Eckhardt was raised in Hereford, holds a degree in foods and nutrition from the University of Texas, and received her M.A. in creative writing from San Francisco State University. Her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Barnard, are longtime residents of Hereford. Her mother was the late Bessie Lee Wood of Hereford.

A news release from Texas Monthly Press reports, in part: "Her recipes for Cabrito al Pastor, Homemade Tortillas, Texas Best Barbecue, Aunt Zula's Potato Salad, Jalapeno Pie, and the mysteriously delicious Breaux Bridge Street Gumbo—along with the humorous anecdotes sprinkled throughout the book—artfully combine the best recipes Texas has to offer with a hearty dose of 'down-home' Texas wisdom and humor."

Mrs. Eckhardt now lives in Ashland, Ore., where she continues to cook and write.

SURVEY INDICATES CAMPUS REALISM

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent survey of some 500 college newspaper editors indicated that 80 percent would not change their career plans even if they won a million-dollar lottery prize.

The survey also found that 43 percent of those polled were more interested in "making a difference" than making money, with more than half expecting to earn only between $10,000 and $20,000 during their first full year in the work force.

Herd facing tough test at Levelland

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces will have to contend with both size and speed when they face the Levelland Lobos at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Levelland.

"Anyone who has only lost one of five games has to be pretty good," said Hereford coach Don Cumpston. Levelland opened 4-0 with wins over Lamesa, Snyder, Berger and Dumas before last week's 13-0 loss at Lubbock Estacado.

"They're huge on defense," Cumpston said. "On their defensive line they go 200, 212, 248 pounds. That's some good size."

"They run a multiple defense with lots of different looks. They run all kinds of variations of odd and even fronts, and they do a good job with all of them. As a player, you have to really concentrate so you don't miss an assignment."

"On offense, they do a lot of different things: the I, the one-back that spreads your defense all over the field. Their quarterback, Tim James, has made a lot of big plays for them. Jay Fortner is their tailback, and he's one of the fastest players in the district. He probably runs a 10.5 100 meters."

"Those two have made a lot of big plays, and we have to do a good job of containing the quarterback and the tailback."

"They are a run-oriented team, they prefer to run the ball. But they'll run and run and run and lull you to sleep and then pass the ball. James is not a bad thrower, so we have to watch for that."

"They have a new coach (Buster Leaf, who replaced Gene Mayfield) over there, and they're playing with a lot of enthusiasm. The town's fired up and they've had some great crowds. I hope our people will turn out en masse to offset their crowd. Our crowd may be a big factor for us."

Another big factor will be how hard the Whitefaces will work this week to prepare for the game, and the team's attitude on the field Friday night.

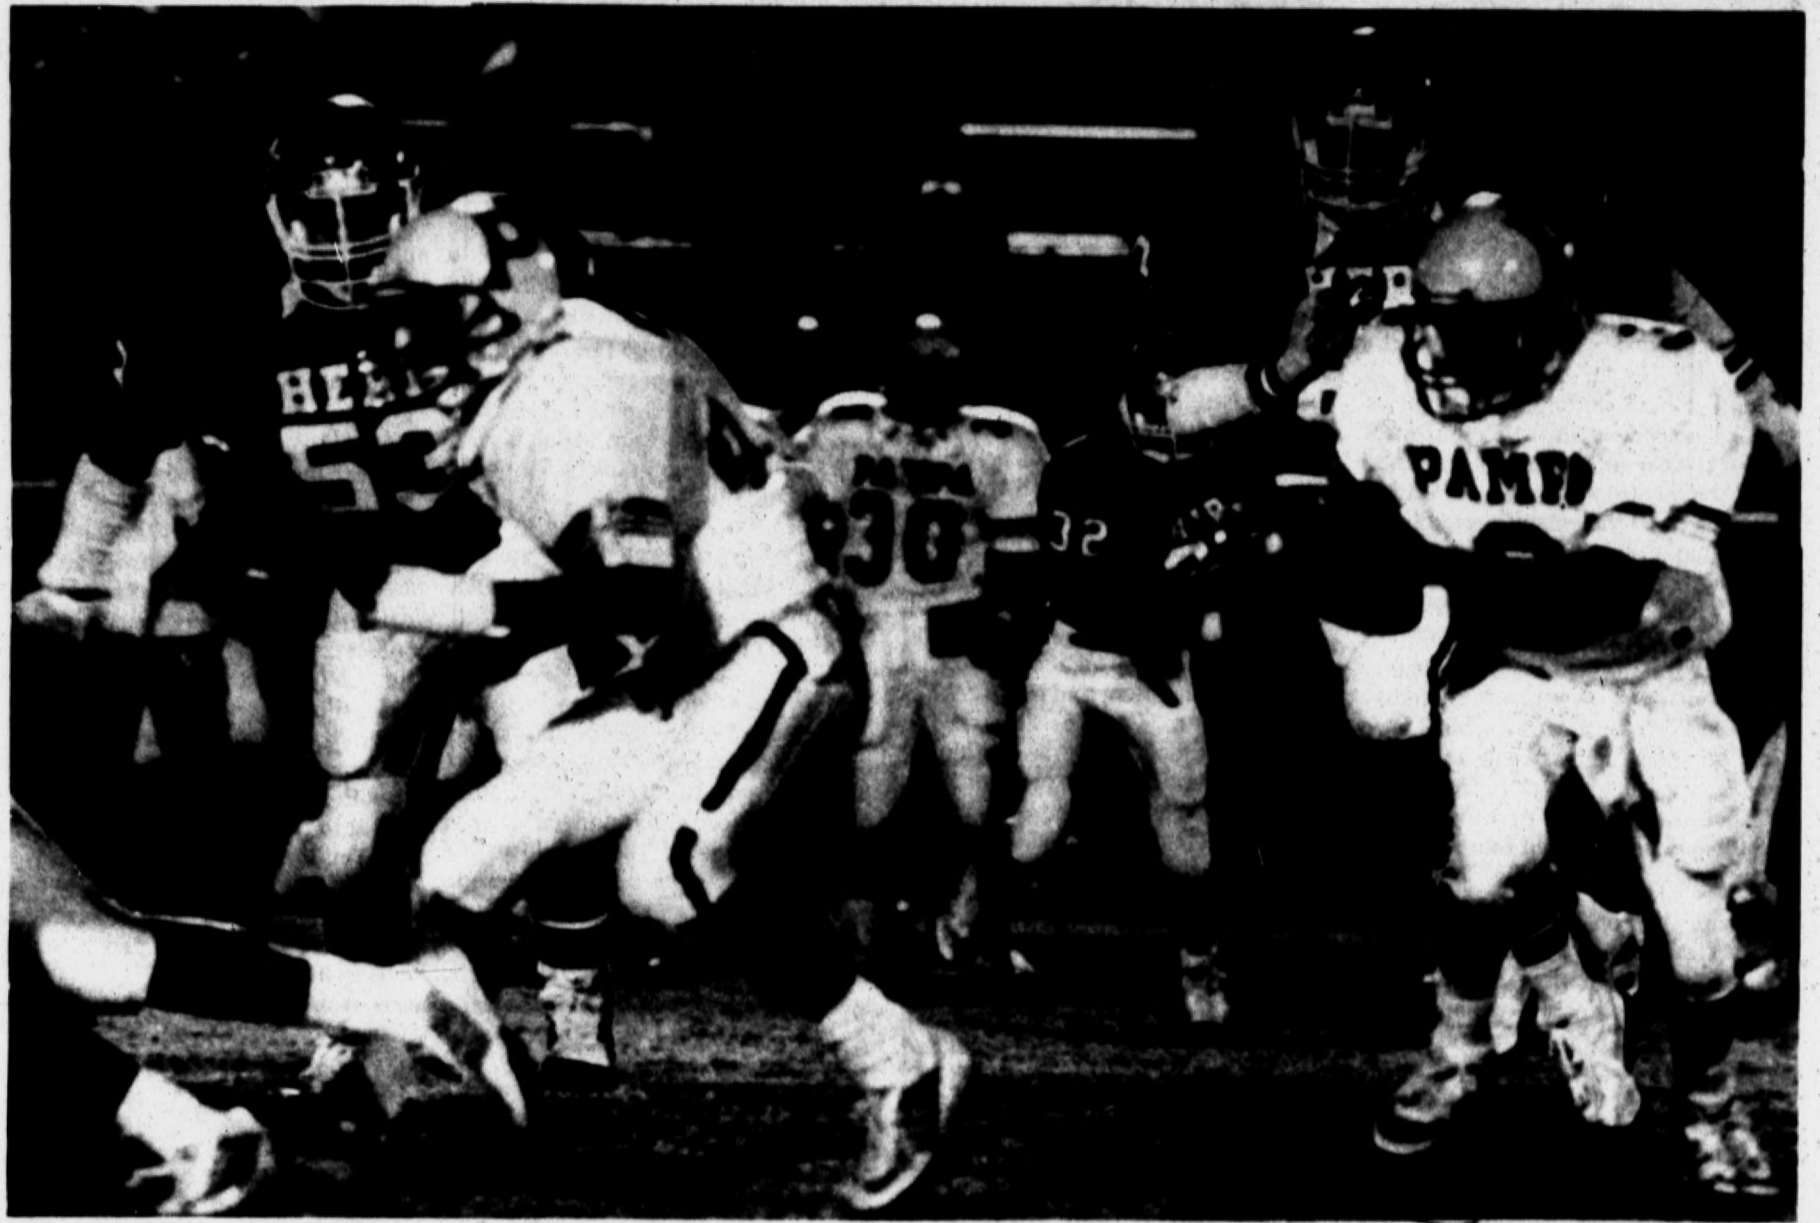

"All of the different things they do won't be a problem as long as we concentrate on what we have to do," Cumpston said. "That comes with preparing yourself mentally to play the game."

"We also have to handle a big win like last week's (41-0 over Pampa) properly. You can't get complacent. In football, you have to constantly work on getting better. There is no plateau: you're either going uphill or downhill, you're either continuing to improve or you're getting worse. I think our kids understand that, and I think they know that our preparation is critical."

Cumpston would like to see more offensive shows like last week, with 370 yards gained by the Whitefaces.

"We forced lots of turnovers and good situations, and, for the first time this year, we took advantage of all of them," Cumpston said. "If we can continue to do that, and execute our game plan like we did last week, we'll be pretty good."

"The experience that some of our other kids gained last week will definitely help somewhere. If we have an injury, or need a certain player to help us somewhere, that game experience will help our team."

Defensive convergence

Hereford defenders Darren Nikkel (53), Stuart Mitts (32) and Brad Smith (80) have the right side secured as they converge on Pampa quarterback James Bybee

(3), who is following the block of his fullback, Brandon McDonald. The Herd's defense will be tested by Levelland tailback Jay Fortner in Friday's game.

OU counting on young players

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Most of No. 10 Oklahoma's players have been around for the past three years of Sooner dominance over Texas, but few have played.

"That's a hell of a difference," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday at his weekly luncheon with sports writers and sportscasters. "The players that are playing this game have sat and watched it; they didn't go make it happen. You can be on the team, but you didn't win the ball game."

Switzer said he's counting on the younger players — seven of the 11 defensive players who started last week were freshmen or sophomores — to step forward.

"The young players are the ones who are going to have to prove themselves," Switzer said. "I think they can. I'm betting on them."

The Sooners have not lost to Texas in the past four years, and they have convincingly won the past two games, scoring more than 40 points in both games.

Switzer admitted that both teams have "slipped a little bit" since previous years when they were ranked higher. This is only the seventh time since 1945 that both teams have lost at least once prior to the game.

"It's still the great classic it will always be," he said.

Missing at Oklahoma, however, are some of the lead characters, whose bashing comments of Texas have livened up the series.

"Kind of boring, isn't it?" Switzer said. "This doesn't feel like OU-Texas."

Oklahoma is a two-touchdown favorite. But Switzer said he was more surprised with the 33-point spread two years ago, and said this year's spread was evidence that Texas was closing the talent gap.

"This year's game is drawing a lot closer, not only in talent but in closeness of the game being played," Switzer said. "This year the game will be much, much closer because of the fact that Texas is an improved team and we're a younger, inexperienced team."

"I don't think there's that much difference between the two football teams. It comes down to a game of character."

Hereford vs. Levelland

WHEN, WHERE: 7:30 p.m., Levelland.

HISTORY: Levelland leads this series, 10-6-1. Hereford has won the last four games by the average, commanding margin of 22-7.

FACT: Levelland's football stadium was built by the WPA in the 1930's.

NEW COACH: Gene Mayfield is out as Levelland's head football coach. New head man is Buster Leaf, who had tons of success at McCamey.

CUMPTON'S KEYS TO THE GAME: 1. The Herd must handle last week's win over Pampa in the proper way, remembering you can still improve; 2. Dealing with multiple looks from Levelland's offense and defense.

BIG QUESTION: How will Levelland react to last week's closer-than-the-score-indicates 13-0 loss to Estacado? Find out Friday night.

Dodgers maul Mets, 6-3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With an assist from New York pitcher David Cone, the Los Angeles Dodgers finally found a way to beat the Mets, although what's happened so many times before almost happened again.

Cone is doing more than just pitch in the National League playoffs — he's writing a column for the New York Daily News. If his article in Wednesday's paper is any indication, he's got a lot to learn about tact.

His remarks concerning Tuesday night's opener of the playoffs, won by the Mets 3-2, found their way to Los Angeles and, understandably, infuriated the Dodgers.

They responded by scoring five runs in the first two innings off him Wednesday night before hanging on for a 6-3 victory to even the best-of-seven series at one game apiece.

In his column, Cone said Los Angeles reliever Jay Howell looked "like a high school pitcher" in the ninth inning of Game 1. Cone also said Dodgers starter Orel Hershiser had been "lucky" to shut out the Mets for eight innings.

Nobody was calling anybody lucky after Game 2.

"We have to give them (the Dodgers) credit," Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez said. "We could have put the hammer down with a win tonight. But he (Dodgers pitcher Tim Lincecum) threw a good game. Heck, give him credit."

After a day off for travel, the series shifts to Shea Stadium on Friday night for Game 3. Dodgers left-hander John Tudor, 10-8, will oppose Ron Darling, 17-9. Tudor skipped a start in Game 2 because of spasms in his right hip.

Tudor's replacement Wednesday night, rookie right-hander Belcher, was brilliant before tiring in the top of the ninth. That's when the Mets, who rallied for three runs in the ninth to win Tuesday night, threatened to make it two last-gasp victories in a row.

Finally, with the bases loaded and two outs, Gary Carter, the hero in the opener, stood in against Alejandro Pena representing the go-ahead run. But Carter flied harmlessly to right, and the Dodgers were winners.

Belcher had allowed only three hits and two runs while walking three and striking out a career-high 10 entering the ninth. He left after a double by Len Dykstra, an infield out and a run-scoring single by Hernandez.

Jesse Orosco, a former Met, relieved Belcher and gave up a single by Darryl Strawberry. Pena then came on and got Kevin McReynolds on a popout before walking Howard Johnson to load the bases. Carter hit the first pitch in the air to right and the game was over.

Belcher said Cone's story fired up his teammates.

Beef for modern lifestyles is trimmer

During World War II, a young congressman from a large Northeastern city stood on the floor of the House of Representatives and made an impassioned speech.

As the story goes, he had heard that ranchers were using cattle guards. It was a shame, said he, that able-bodied men were sitting in a pasture during a war instead of fighting for their country.

Of course, he felt ridiculous once informed that cattle guards are not armed men, but metal or concrete bars set into the ground to prevent cattle from leaving a pasture. But the story is simply an illustration of how vast the lack of understanding between city folks and agriculture actually is.

It's not a one-way street though. Ranchers found out in recent decades that they did not know as much about the needs and desires of city folks as they once thought. It took the beef industry a while to understand that consumers want convenient food. They want healthy food. They want food that tastes good. What they do not want is fat.

For the nation's beef producers, this new understanding of consumers' tastes has challenged them to modify their product through revolutionary breeding and product changes over the past few decades. Many more changes are still in the works.

But recent results have shown that the industry has been successful in its initial efforts. A Texas A&M University System study, called the Market Basket Survey, showed that today's beef has 27 percent less fat than the same cuts of beef had two years ago. In addition, the fat content of ground beef, which accounts for approximately 50 percent of all beef consumed, is down 10 percent.

The chain begins with seedstock or purebred breeders—the beef industry's instigators of change. Purebred herds today represent a vast gene pool produced from America's traditional breeds, more muscular cattle that were introduced from Europe beginning in the late 1960s, and more environmentally adaptable cattle from India.

"We have introduced new cattle breeds that provide more red meat with less fat," said Bruce Lowrie, a registered cattle breeder in Fort Worth. "By computerizing our records we have adopted a battery of new tools that take the guesswork out of whether breeding Bull A to Cow B will produce a calf with desirable characteristics. Every improvement we have made over the past quarter of a century has been made to meet the needs of the American consumer."

"The producer began looking at his product with a critical eye in the 1960s," John Merrill of Crowley said. "First came selection of cattle for specific traits, including more muscling. Then came performance testing, which favored longer and leaner animals. In the 1970s came introduction of more muscular breeds from Europe, breeds which we call exotics."

"These new breeds, along with our older established breeds, have made a major difference in what cattlemen are producing today compared to what we were producing years ago."

The next link in the cattle production chain is the feedyard. Calves go on feed when they reach about 750 pounds. The feedlot is presented the challenge of producing cattle that marbled within the muscle for flavor but don't have large quantities of fat outside the muscle. The trick is to feed the cattle to a specific point without overfeeding them.

"The average feeding period is about 120 days, which has been dropped from about 150 days," said feedlot operator Walter Lasley of Stratford, Texas.

"We feed them to the condition that the packer buyer wants. The packer buyer knows what the chain store wants. And I'm sure the chain store is the same way. Some consumers may want lean beef, and some others may not like it so well. But we provide each of them with what they want."

After reaching the right weight, the steers are contracted to a packer, a segment of the cattle industry that is dominated by companies like Con Agra, Iowa Beef Packers, and Excel. Until the beef industry can produce leaner beef across the spectrum of breeds, the task of giving consumers what they want falls largely upon these companies.

The packers have initiated trim programs that put into action the 1985 National Consumer Retail Beef Study that showed consumers want no more than 1/4-inch of external fat. Today, for instance, Excel provides beef that has been trimmed to an average of 1/8 of an inch external fat trim.

The final stop before the cut reaches the consumer is the retail meat counter. Supermarkets have banded together to declare war on unwanted fat. Using the findings of the National Consumer Retail Beef Study, retailers sell no beef with more than 1/4-inch fat. In many cases, cuts are being sold with no external fat.

The moves made by the beef industry to provide Americans with leaner beef have been acclaimed by observers in all aspects of society. The highly regarded National Academy of Sciences recently proclaimed that beef producers "have taken important steps" in providing leaner meat.

TEXAS BRISKET

1 trimmed 8 to 9 pound brisket
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon celery salt
1 bottle liquid smoke

1. Lightly sprinkle brisket with salt, pepper and celery salt. Pour on bottle of liquid smoke. Place in large roasting pan and cover with foil. (Be sure to use a large pan because there will be a large amount of grease cooking out of the brisket.)

2. Cook slowly at 250 degrees for 10 to 12 hours. Pour out grease, cover with barbecue sauce and return to oven for one hour (uncovered).

Each 3 oz. serving contains:
Calories 205
Fat 0.9 gm.
Sat. Fat 3.9 gm.
Cholesterol 79.1 mg.
Sodium 107 mg.

BARBECUE SAUCE

1 stick margarine
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 small bottle Worcestershire sauce
1 small bottle ketchup

1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
dash pepper
2 tablespoons vinegar
3 tablespoons sugar
Combine ingredients in a 1-quart saucepan and simmer—don't boil. Makes 2 cups.

Each 2 tablespoons contain approximately:
Calories: 80
Cholesterol: 0 mg.
Fat: 6 gm.
Sodium: 334 mg.

BARBECUE SAUCE (Revised)

2 tablespoons corn oil margarine, in a tub
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons white vinegar
1 6-ounce can tomato paste
3/4 cup frozen apple juice concentrate, undiluted
2 teaspoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon onion powder
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Combine ingredients in a 1-quart sauce pan. Simmer very slowly, uncovered, for 40 minutes. Makes 1 and two-thirds cups. Each 2 tablespoons contains approximately:
Calories: 60
Cholesterol: 0 mg.
Fat: 2 gm.
Sodium: 183 mg.

Tender cut of beef

To a great extent, the beef industry has been built on the taste appeal of the cooked product. However, as issues of diet/health, especially those related to fat, increase in importance, the role of taste in determining acceptability of specific beef products becomes uncertain. One type of beef that has overall acceptance is brisket when served with barbecue sauce on the side. The nutritious dish is not only tasty but also contains very little fat.
