County proposes 2-cent tax raise for new budget

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A deficit budget, by $187,000, for the 1995-1996 fiscal year was adopted by Deaf Smith County Commissioners Monday even though a two-cent tax rate increase probably will be assessed.

During a three-hour session, commissioners took another whack at paring expenditures before adopting a general fund budget of $3,540,644. Road and bridge expenditures for all four precincts total $874,200.

County Auditor Alex Schroeter told commissioners that a 52-cent tax rate will raise revenue estimated at $2,594,500.

The portion of tax revenues designated for the general fund, $2,278,135, plus other revenue of $1,075,450, totals $3,353,585, or $187,059 less than projected expenditures.

Road and bridge revenues and expenditures are equal, at $874,200 each.

Commissioners' Court is required by law to conduct a public hearing on the proposal to raise the tax rate.

The rate for the last fiscal year was 50 cents per $100 valuation. However, an increase in the county total values causes the effective tax rate to drop to 48.29 cents per $100.

Taxable values, certified by the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, are pegged at $498,896,788, compared with $476 million last year.

The complicated formula for determining tax defines the effective tax rate as the rate that would raise the same amount of revenue as the rate used the previous year.

Entities may raise the rate by three percent without conducting a public hearing. If an amount more than three percent is proposed, a hearing is required.

Schroeter reported a rate of 49.74 cents would result from a three percent increase. A rate of eight percent, or higher, triggers the possibility of a rollback election.

If the rate remains at 50 cents per $100 of value, Schroeter pointed out, the deficit would rise by an additional $100,000.

To make ends meet, the county would have to tap reserve funds. Schroeter estimated that the total of all reserves will amount to approximately $1 million at the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30.

During discussion, Judge Tom Simons said he believes "it wouldn't be prudent to do less than 52 cents" on the tax rate.

Commissioner Johnny Latham of Precinct 4, who made the motion to adopt the budget, observed that "we don't have any choice."

Latham said he thinks that all the cuts possible have been made.

Simons noted that the proposed budget makes no provision for salary raises for county employees.

Seconding the motion, Commissioner Lupe Chavez, said, "We have to do something."

The vote for the budget was unanimous with Commissioners Troy Don Moore of Precinct 3 and Tony Castillo of Precinct 1 agreeing.

Chavez warned that the county will have to "face reality" on the tax rate and if the increase is not voted now, "we could be in a worse situation later on."

Chavez said he believes "we've done everything we can" on budget expenses.

The two-cent increase would mean an additional $10 per year for the owner of a $50,000 home.

Commissioners set the tax rate hearing for 7 p.m. on Aug. 24.

4-H group questions policies, pay of agents

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Policies, operations and salaries of the Deaf Smith County Extension Service were called into question Monday by a group of residents interested in the county's 4-H program.

Spokesperson for the group, Linda Weaver, addressed Deaf Smith Commissioners' Court during the regular meeting.

She asked commissioners for improvements in some areas, specifically listing use of a county-owned pickup and salary differences of agents.

"The 4-H program is one that helps keep kids out of trouble," she declared. "Deaf Smith County has been recognized statewide and much is due to Beverly Harder."

Harder is the extension agent for family and community education and works extensively with 4-H.

Weaver suggested that "Beverly Harder has been dissatisfied and there has been tension in the office."

She said parents had "visited with the district extension office" about perceived problems.

A pickup provided by the county should be parked at the courthouse, Weaver said her group believes, so that the three agents in the office have equal access.

Another item she asked the commission to address is the discrepancy in the county portion of salaries for agents.

And, she wondered if the quarters now occupied by the Cowgirl Hall of Fame could be acquired for extension use. "If it becomes available, would you look at it?" she asked.

County Agent for Agriculture Dennis Newton was present for the commission meeting and reminded that "when I was hired in 1983, I was told I would be furnished a pickup."

He said he has never refused another agent's request to use the pickup.

"I can't read minds," he declared. "If they don't tell me they need it, I don't know it."

"I'm the county administrator. I

Flood of refugees stream across former Yugoslavia

SREMSKA RACA, Yugoslavia (AP)--Serb, Croat and Muslim refugees streamed across the former Yugoslavia on Monday, an exodus driven by nationalists seeking to create ethnically homogeneous lands.

As tens of thousands of Serb, Croatian and Muslim refugees trekked across Croatia, Bosnia and Serbia, artillery duels raged around the Croatian port of Dubrovnik, on the Adriatic Sea. Croatian troops there tried to push across the nearby border with Bosnia to silence rebel Serb guns bombarding the medieval walled port.

No significant progress was reported in the Croatian drive. Battle lines also did not change in central Bosnia, where Bosnian government troops were attacking the Serb-held town of Donji Vakuf, U.N. officials said.

The flow of refugees has swollen dramatically this month with the Croatian recapture of most of its rebel Serb-held land, reprisal expulsions by Bosnian Serbs, and the Serb seizure of the U.N. "safe areas" of Srebrenica and Zepa in eastern Bosnia.

Serbian police, apparently overwhelmed by more than 100,000 Croatian Serbs arriving in Serbia, abandoned attempts Monday to turn back men of fighting age.

On Sunday, huge traffic lines formed as police attempted to turn back potential soldiers. Their sisters, mothers, wives and children refused to leave Bosnia unless the men came too.

On Monday, police gave nothing more than a cursory glance at each sad vehicle limping into Serbia. Many of the battered cars had stalled on the journey for lack of fuel.

From the Bosnian Serb stronghold of Banja Luka, some 600 Croats driven from their homes in an apparently organized effort to rid the town of non-Serbs crossed into nearby Croatia.

Croatian Foreign Minister Mate Granic said Monday that at least 1,000 Croats have been forced out of Banja Luka. The city's population has swollen with Serbs fleeing Croatia.

Felix nips Bermuda, hurtles toward U.S.

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP)--Hurricane Felix spared Bermuda the brunt of its wrath and hurtled past the island at full force en route to the United States today. Authorities ordered two North Carolina islands evacuated.

It wasn't clear if or when Felix would make landfall along the U.S. East Coast, where the storm produced strong surf and closed some beaches as far north as New York.

A hurricane watch was issued along the mid-Atlantic coast from South Carolina to Delaware this morning, the National Hurricane Center in Miami said. A flood warning already was in effect for the North Carolina coast.

High waves from a raging sea pounded the south shores of Bermuda late Monday, knocking yachts loose from their moorings and battering oceanfront hotels.

Bermudians boarded up their oceanfront homes in driving rain and fled inland to wait out Felix, an especially wide hurricane with top wind speeds approaching 85 mph.

The storm washed out part of the causeway linking the island on which the international airport is located with the rest of Bermuda, police spokeswoman Sgt. Andrea Browne said.

Thousands of residents were without electricity. Only one of two local radio stations was operating, and cable television was knocked out for a short time.

"It's chaos!" said Evelyn Carreiro, front desk supervisor at the Hamilton Princess Hotel, where rooms quickly filled with coastal residents.

The hurricane jeopardized today's referendum on independence from Britain. Voting was not formally postponed, but elections officers at all 20 polling stations were expected to delay it at least until Wednesday.

While Felix's center was closest to Bermuda at 5 p.m. EDT Monday--about 75 miles south-southwest-- rough weather lasted into this morning. At 8 a.m. EDT today, Felix was about 500 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., and moving northwest near 14 mph. The hurricane was packing maximum sustained winds of 80 mph and little change in strength was expected during the day.

Riptides caused by Felix killed two people and left one missing in North Carolina, and one person drowned in rough surf in Virginia. Beaches from the Outer Banks to Long Island, New York, were closed to swimmers.

In Norfolk, Va., the Navy was preparing to send dozens of its ships out to sea to avoid damaging the base's piers if the storm hit.

Although it had been downgraded to a Category One hurricane from Category Three on a scale of one to five, Felix's size still presented a major threat, said Bill Frederick, a hurricane specialist

Audit of farm program 'vindictive,' claims Tech

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP)--The U.S. Department of Agriculture's investigation arm planned an unprecedented audit today of one of the nation's most respected farm mediation programs.

Texas Tech University said the audit was a vindictive waste of money and an attempt to breach confidentiality rules.

The dispute centers on the Texas Agricultural Mediation Program, a Texas Tech program designated seven years ago as the state's go-between for farmers with delinquent and distressed loans. The program aims to help borrowers and creditors resolve their disputes before they reach bankruptcy or litigation.

An audit--the first of its kind, according to the mediation coordinator in Washington, D.C.--was scheduled for today by the USDA's Office of the Inspector General in Temple.

"All I can tell you is we do have an audit scheduled," said John O. Leavy, regional inspector general for audits. "We wouldn't discuss it until the end."

"They have requested documents that we consider to be confidential," said Gary Condra, administrator of the Tech program. "They interpret the law differently than what we do."

Condra said Texas Tech asked the Texas Attorney General's Office to represent the university. He declined to comment further.

But The Associated Press obtained a copy of a July 19 letter Condra wrote in protest to U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

Condra wrote that the audit would compromise the mediation program's position as an impartial third party to about 100 disputed cases in Texas each year.

An audit by the USDA's inspection team would corrupt the process because one frequent party to the mediation is the USDA's lending agency, Condra wrote.

But Leavy pointed out that his auditors were independent from the Farmers Home Administration lenders.

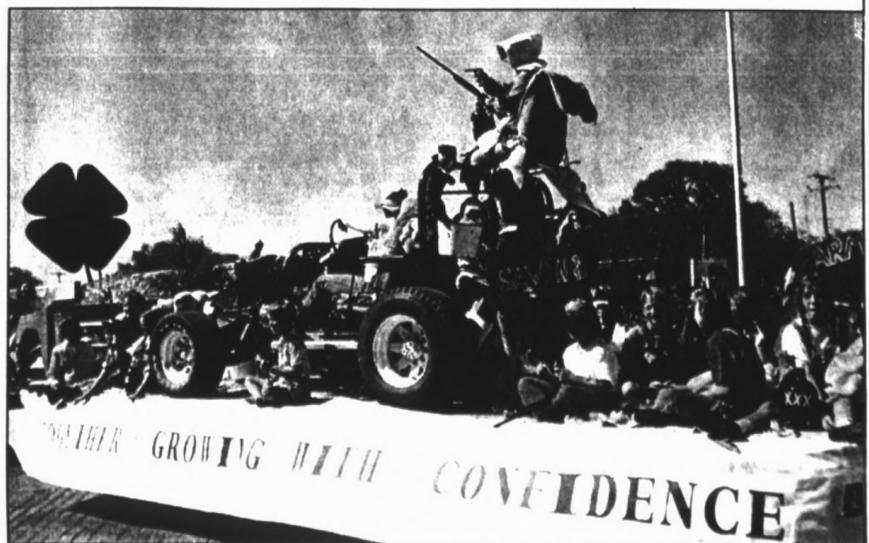

Condra's letter calls the audit a harassment of farmers and ranchers who have mediated their disputes.

Furthermore, Condra wrote, the audit puts his program in a cross-fire between political appointees and career employees in the USDA.

make the call on use."

Newton said that since a new vehicle was delivered about two months ago, the assistant agent, Vance Christie, "has driven it more than I have."

Responding to Newton's remarks on the 1983 agreement, Commissioner Troy Don Moore of Precinct 3 observed that "times change... none of us was on the commission then."

A suggestion was made that the policy should be reviewed.

Commissioner Johnny Latham of Precinct 4 said, "I think it's something that needs to be done."

And, Commissioner Tony Castillo of Precinct 1 added, "I agree."

Commissioner Lupe Chavez of Precinct 2 asked Newton if signs have been placed on the vehicle, clearly identifying it as county property.

Newton said he had placed an order for the sign but it had not been placed on the pickup.

Turning to the salary issue, County Judge Tom Simons asked commissioners, "Does anyone have any ideas on the salary situation?"

"I have the highest regard for Beverly Harder," said Chavez. "It would be a loss for Deaf Smith County if she were to leave."

According to budget figures, the county portion of salaries for the extension agents is $12,943 for Newton, $10,809 for Harder, and $8,357 for Christie.

During pay discussion, Newton said salaries from Texas Agricultural Extension Service for county agents are based on specific levels.

He warned that if the county portion for Harder is raised, the state's contribution might be lowered by an equal amount.

"I'm not saying, 'don't give her a raise,' but I think you should check on it," he said.

Latham said, "It doesn't make sense to give her a raise and have the state take some back."

Judge Simons suggested that no action be considered until further information is available.

War's end brought Japanese to let goof two national myths

By SETH SUTEL
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP)--A half-century ago Tuesday, Japan painfully let go of two national myths: that its emperor was a god and that its armies were undefeatable.

Emperor Hirohito's radio address to his nation on Aug. 15, 1945, delivering the news of Japan's surrender and asking Japanese to "bear the unbearable," marked the first time ordinary citizens heard his voice.

It drove many to tears, some to commit ritual suicide, and all to reflect on the uncertain future of Japan.

"The emperor speaking to us in a human voice was beyond imagining in any reverie," Kenzaburo Oe, who won the Nobel prize for literature last year, recalled in a recent essay. "The emperor was a god, the authority of the nation, the organizing principle of reality."

Today, Japan once again finds itself letting go of myths. Many are questioning closely held national values and wondering about the price of the nation's material success.

For those who suffered at Japanese hands during the war, the concern is not that Japan needs to give more thought to its future, but more to its past.

Many Asians remain incensed by Japan's perceived refusal to acknowledge responsibility for its wartime actions. Critics inside and outside Japan feel that the Tokyo government missed an important opportunity this year to put a dark history to rest.

As in other years, Tuesday's ceremony was to concentrate on paying homage to the war's dead, not questioning war's causes.

Even the name of the holiday--"End of the War Day"--is a neutral one, giving no indication of Japan's capitulation after a failed and bloody attempt to conquer Asia.

Thousands of people who lost family members during the war were to attend a solemn memorial ceremony in Tokyo. Before a huge bank of flowers, Emperor Akihito was to pay his respects along with the empress.

The prayers for peace were to be held in the Budokan, a martial arts exhibition hall. And a statement of war remorse by Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama was to be issued separately from the memorial ceremony, probably to avoid giving offense to conservatives who believe Japan has nothing to apologize for.

A contingent of pacifists within the government had hoped to mark the 50th anniversary with a formal parliamentary statement of apology and other gestures of atonement.

Lawmakers' resolution ended up so watered-down after prolonged bickering that it offended many Asians.

A drive by Murayama to stage a separate ceremony on the 15th to honor non-Japanese killed in the war was similarly vetoed by conservatives.

Former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, in a commentary on Sunday for the national Yomiuri newspaper, recalled his sense of loss and dislocation on the day of the surrender.

"Tears welled in my eyes; I was overwhelmed by the painful sensation that we had left a smeared page in our nation's history," he wrote.

This is the time, he said, for Japan to make a fresh start.

"We must develop a new national vision and create a new force powerful enough to turn it into

Consumer group claims farm supports boosts prices

By CONNIE CASS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)--Because of farm price supports, each 5-pound bag of sugar costs an extra 60 cents, a jar of peanut butter is 33 cents higher, and a gallon of milk is inflated by 18 cents, a consumer advocacy group says.

Government programs that keep sugar, peanut and dairy prices artificially high cost consumers about $4.5 billion each year, according to an analysis by Public Voice for Food & Health Policy.

And most of that money goes to a limited pool of large growers, not to small family farms, the group said in a report released today.

"These programs are Robin Hood in reverse," said Allen Rosenfeld, senior vice president of Public Voice. "They pick every consumer's pocket, falling most heavily on the low-income, and put that money in the pockets of wealthy producers who don't need it."

Public Voice called on Congress to eliminate the federal sugar and peanut price support programs this year and gradually phase out dairy price supports.

But farm groups, struggling to keep the price support system set up in the 1930s, said Public Voice's estimates were too high. And they argued that savings created by ending price supports would be kept by food manufacturers, not passed on to consumers.

Price support programs ensure U.S. consumers a stable food supply and protect farmers from unfair foreign competition, the growers and dairies contend.

The programs, often criticized in the past, became more vulnerable when Republicans took control of Congress, intent on scaling back government. Many farm state lawmakers from both parties want to preserve the price supports, however.

Candy companies that use sugar, peanuts and milk have been lobbying to kill the price controls; growers and dairies are fighting to save them.

"It really basically is a battle between buyers and sellers," said Mitch Head, executive director of the Peanut Advisory Board, a farmers' group. "I don't know why this consumer group is siding with multi-billion dollar companies instead of American family farmers."

But Public Voice said that the support systems overwhelmingly benefit a few wealthy producers and sometimes work to the detriment of small farms.

For example, under the peanut program, only holders of government-issued "quotas" can sell peanuts domestically at the support price of 34 cents per pound, twice the average world price.

The top 8 percent of quota holders own almost 50 percent of the quotas, worth $141 million a year in benefits, Public Voice said.

The group's report contends that two-thirds of the peanut quota holders make money by renting their quotas to others, instead of growing the peanuts themselves.

The Peanut Advisory Board argues, however, that minimum wage laws, environmental regulations and higher quality peanuts--not the quota system--force U.S. peanut prices up.

Public Voice's calculations were based on estimates produced for Congress by the General Accounting Office. The growers dispute the GAO's figures.

Deaf Smith 4-H students capture honors at state record book contest

Three Deaf Smith County 4-Hers captured state record book wins.

Cady Auckerman in achievement, Erin Auckerman in family life and Karon Harder in food and nutrition were first place state winners.

These youth submitted record books for judging which listed leadership, community service, project participation and education. The record books were district winners and vied for the top placing among 14 districts in the state.

The winning state youth will be recognized at an honors banquet at the State Fair of Texas in late September and will also be honored with an educational trip to Washington, D.C. in late November.

Also placing with high honors in state judging were Robin Bell with a second place housing and home environment book and Amber Brumley with a citizenship book.

The record book is a summary/history of the youth's work in designated project areas and places emphasis on leadership and community service.

Senior level youth receiving second place honors at district in late July included Karis Blain, consumer education; Ted Peabody, sheep; and Cindy Harder, fashion revue.

Other youth participating in senior district competition included Jaime Steiert, home economics achievement; Amanda Sims, clothing; Rhonda Tooley, swine; and Joanna Brumley, leadership.

Junior level youth receiving first place included Anne Weaver, public speaking; Justin and Jerod Johnson, beef; Dawn and Kylee Auckerman, food and nutrition and horticulture; Eddie Trotter, beef; Betsy Weaver, home economic achievement; Brent Carlson, beef; Amy Perrin, horse; Amy Bell, companion animal; and Craig Campbell, agriculture achievement.

Receiving second and third place awards were Meredith McGowan, horse; and Jessica Nusler, horse.

Leaders participating in the district judging included Janice Brumley, Shirley Carlson and summer Extension assistant Angela Brumley.

Reports from special events of the Town and Country Jubilee

Cowboy rodeo action concluded the Town and Country Jubilee Saturday night at Hereford Riders Arena.

Nine teams competed in cutting, doctoring, branding, mugging and sort and load to provide the crowd with some idea of what working cowboys do.

The Southwest Feedyard team worked together successfully to take first place in four of the five events and win the all around title.

Team members were Valerie Smith, Dan Law, Mark Northcutt, Kevin Burleson, Joe Stefanatos and Boyd Smith.

The team from XCL Feedyard, consisting of Jerry McConnell, Steve McConnell, Shawn McConnell, Tom Fellhauer, J.W. Meyer and Michelle Meyer, took the other first place in the branding event.

Each of the events was centered around actual duties performed by working cowboys.

prepared the barbecue. Connie Walker and the Texas Drifters again provided music prior to the sermon by Boyce Evans.

The ladies of First Baptist Church provided desserts and the youth assisted in cleaning up the park after each of the services.

Billie Brock of Kingston, Okla., was the winner of the quilt given away by Hereford Senior Citizens during the Town and Country Jubilee.

Numerous other quilts were exhibited during the quilt show which was held at Inkahoots, owned by Brian and Twyla Jones.

Judges for the show were Gladys Flood, Reba Raef and Frances Geber.

The winning entry for oldest quilt was submitted by Benny Womble and was an unknown floral design.

The most beautiful quilt was a fan design by Betty Volkman.

The quilt judged as showing the most work was an iris and vines design by Viola Stovall.

Estelle Ware submitted the quilt voted as the judges' choice in the double wedding ring design.

Diabetic Support Group organizes in Hereford

The Diabetic Support Group held its organizational meeting Aug. 10 at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

In the absence of Margie Daniels, director of Hereford Senior Citizens, Peggy Maxwell, activities director, welcomed the group.

The agenda for the initial meeting was distributed to those attending. Renee Hammock, RN, and Charlotte R. Clark, RD/LD, defined the purpose, process of organizing, and details concerning participation and meetings. Detailed information from the American Diabetes Association on development of the Support Group was reviewed.

Individuals present were encouraged to express their ideas.

The next meeting has been scheduled for Sept. 12 at 7 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center.

The Support Group is an opportunity for people with diabetes, family members, friends, caretakers and anyone interested in the group. An invitation is extended to all diabetics to come together to share concerns, problems, successes and coping strategies regarding life with diabetes.

Facilitators and the interim group leaders who are licensed health professionals and members of the American Diabetes Association will be present to assist in any way and monitor the meetings for ADA.

Facilitators at the initial meeting were health professionals Renee Hammock, RN; Rosa Marquez, RN; Rhonda Wilkins, RN; and Charlotte R. Clark, RD/LD, who are associated with Hereford Home Health Care, Inc. Clark also serves as nutrition consultant for Hereford Senior Citizens and Hereford Regional Medical Center.

4-H Parents to hold meeting

A called meeting of the 4-H Parents Association has been announced for Aug. 22 at 7 p.m. at the game room of the Hereford Community Center.

Agenda items will cover the 4-H Achievement Banquet to be held Aug. 27, enrollment procedures, leaders for clubs for 1995-96, nominations of Friends of 4-H and other business to begin the new 4-H year.

All parents of 4-Hers are asked to be present.

Hints from Heloise

MAILBOX HELPER

Dear Heloise: I keep a pencil inside my mailbox so that if I receive mail that is not for my residence I can just draw a line through the address and put the mail right back into the mailbox for pickup.

This saves me from having to make a special trip into my house in search of a pen or pencil. —Marilyn Niccum, Tempe, Ariz.

EXPERI-HINTS

Dear Heloise: When you do a word puzzle where you have to find the hidden word, take a highlighting marker when you find the word you're looking for and go over it. I do this with all the words.

This helps older people since the line you draw doesn't have to be perfect and one can overlap the other line when it has to. —Lillian Johnson, Rensselaer, N.Y.

Herd scores with big plays New 5-2 defense looks good at times

Hereford High School football players lined up against each other for a scrimmage Monday night.

They learned that their new 5-2 defense was capable of pushing a team back, and they learned that their offense was capable of making some big plays against that defense.

Early on, the defense played mostly in the offensive backfield, harrasing quarterback Todd Dudley.

"Our new defense looked extremely good as far as forcing the offense," Heach Coach Danny Haney said. "(The offense) was moving backwards. As the scrimmage went on, we corrected our mistakes and were able to make the plays."

Big plays were just about the only way the offense got in the end zone. Tailback Marquise Brown scored on a 68-yard run and a 70-yard play on a screen pass. Tailback Dwayne Thomas scored on a 70-yard run and a 60-yard screen pass. Both of those screen passes were from Todd Dudley, who also scrambled for a 70-yard touchdown run. Another quarterback, Joseph Artho, hit wide-open tight end Raymond Gonzalez for a 63-yard TD.

to Ronald Torres on fourth-and-11.

Torres was responsible for stopping another drive; playing cornerback, he intercepted a pass at the two-yard line. Hector Cavazos also grabbed an interception, and tackle Michael Kriegshauser recovered a couple of fumbles on defense.

Haney said that the players made their share of mistakes in the first scrimmage, but overall he seemed pleased.

"The scrimmage was an intense session, and the players did a good job executing what we've been teaching them through offseason and two-a-days," he said.

Griffith aces Pitman's No. 6

Hereford's Justin Griffith aces the 165-yard No. 6 hole Monday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

Griffith used a 6-iron for his first-ever hole-in-one.

Witnesses were Anthony Gale, Scott McGinty, Keith Riley and John Stevens.

Hereford kids among winners in 3-on-3 tourney

The Town and Country Jubilee 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament, played Saturday, drew more than 70 kids from all around the Panhandle plus 44 kids from Hereford.

Of the seven divisions, three had champions which included Hereford kids. Listed below are the first and second place teams in each division, with the names of Hereford players in parentheses:

6th grade girls--Champions: Stars, Hereford/Amarillo (Sarah Griffin). 2nd: Metro.

7th grade girls--Champs: Canes, Canyon. 2nd: Team Black, Dalhart.

8th grade girls--Champs: Queens of the Court, Earth/Muleshoe. 2nd: 4 of a Kind, Nazareth.

9th grade girls--Champs: Above the Rim, Hereford/Friona (Aja Albiar, Misty Tice). 2nd: Outlaws, Hereford (Lyndi Carlile, Makesha Rives, Crystal Bailey and Tori Walker).

6th grade boys--Champs: Black Magic, Muleshoe. 2nd: Team Marsh, Hereford (Cody Marsh, Stewart Carr, Russell Carr and Tyson Yosten).

7th grade boys--Division didn't make.

8th grade boys--Champs: Bad Company, Hereford/Friona (Eric McNutt, James Miller). 2nd: Above the Rim, Hereford (Steven Northern, Nick Whatley, L.J. Vallejo and Eddie Ruiz).

9th grade boys--Champs: Hot Shots, Stratford. 2nd: B.K.'s, Hereford (Cory Marsh, Mitch Wagner and Jason Foster).

Matt Millen, a linebacker, won Super Bowl championship rings with three teams, the Redskins, Raiders and 49ers.

Each member of the Washington Redskins, the 1992 Super Bowl champions, received $64,000.

Mantle was regular guy with extraordinary talent

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON - One fall, late in his storied career with the New York Yankees, Mickey Mantle drove with a friend to Fort Worth to watch a football game between the University of Texas and TCU.

After the game, the friend suggested they stop by the Texas locker room and say hello to Darrell Royal. When the Texas coach shook his hand and said how pleased he was to meet him, Mantle grinned and ducked his head and said, "Darrell, we've met before."

The embarrassed Royal said: "We have? When was that?"

"I was a senior in high school," came the reply, "and Bud Wilkinson tried to recruit me as a halfback to play football for Oklahoma. You were the starting quarterback, and coach Wilkinson picked you to show me around the campus."

"Oh, well," said Royal, with a smile of relief, "you weren't Mickey Mantle then."

Looking back - from Sunday's sad vantage point - at the ending of a famous life, we know what Darrell meant. After baseball, being Mickey Mantle was just about the only job he had. He was a coach for the Yankees one season under Ralph Houk, but he knew he wasn't cut out for it when Bobby Murcer walked to lead off an inning, turned to Mantle and asked, "What's the sign?"

"I don't know about yours," Mick said, "but I'm a Libra."

Volleyball results are not available

Robert Laminack and Jill McCracken teamed up to win the co-ed doubles division of the Town and Country Jubilee Volleyball Tournament.

Complete results of the tournament are unavailable. Records of full names of the players were not kept, so the names of the winners of the men's doubles and six-player co-ed divisions are not known.

He spent one season as a coach and another as a TV analyst on NBC, and he quit them both because he felt as if he was stealing their money. And Mickey Charles Mantle never cheated anyone in his life, with the possible exception of his self.

He was not treated as a celebrity, and certainly not an icon, twice in his 63 years. For the first 18, he was mostly Mutt Mantle's boy. He grew up dirt poor but lucky, because his father saw baseball as his son's ticket out of the zinc mines.

The other time was more recent. When Mantle checked himself into the Betty Ford Clinic to deal with his addiction to alcohol, his identity didn't matter. He was simply the "fellow in Room 202." The adjustment was no walk in the park, but it was pleasant for a change not to be Mickey Mantle.

"We had jobs," he said. "One of mine was to get up at 5:45 and wake up everyone else in my dormitory. Later, I cleared the dishes after lunch. I kind of enjoyed that."

There is no record of how many baseball players have gone from the Hall of Fame to working as a busboy, but for Mantle there was no contradiction. Until his final plague of ailments, the liver transplant and the cancer that raced through his body, he had a freshness about him, and a modesty that can't be faked. And even as the lines deepened and the flesh began to sag, the face was sunny, the kind you can see on any Little League field in America. The freckled, blue-eyed southwestern face had become a type.

He was so much a man-child himself, it was all the more unsettling when he was rude or sulky with kids.

Cowboys get Williams back

AUSTIN (AP) - The Big E's back. That was the battle cry at Dallas Cowboys training camp Monday as former All-Pro offensive tackle Erik Williams worked out with the team for the first time since an October car accident.

Williams, donning a brace on his right knee, participated in one-on-one blocking drills. He sat out of the more intensive seven-on-seven drills and left practice early, refusing to talk with the media.

But he was back, and that's all that mattered to his coaches and teammates.

Offensive line coach Hudson Houck said, "It's one of your family members coming back into the fold."

The 6-foot-6, 322-pound Williams has been sidelined since Oct. 24, when he tore the ligaments in his right knee in a one-car accident. He underwent reconstructive surgery Oct. 31 and has been working his way back since.

Braves win with sub for Maddux

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer
No Greg Maddux, no problem. Despite losing their three-time Cy Young Award winner to illness Monday night, the Atlanta Braves

MANTLE

The drinking, and the pain in his knees, made him cranky and impatient.

"I can remember 10 or 12 times, pushing away kids who wanted autographs," he said. "Then I'd get on a plane, order a drink, and feel guilty the rest of the flight."

This was a pattern familiar to his friends. He tried to get around it by signing a stack of cards with his picture and stats, and he kept these in his coat pocket to pass out when he was rushing through an airport or trying to leave a restaurant.

But he made a lot of phone calls for strangers who knew a little boy who was gravely ill, and he could floor you with glimpses of a sweet innocence that bordered on the naive.

When he sat in a car for more than 15 minutes, his legs sometimes stiffened and he needed help getting out. He hated for anyone to see him like that, but he was not the kind of athlete who studied himself in a mirror, looking to protect his image.

Once he paid a visit to Disneyland and posed for photographs with several of the familiar Disney characters, Mickey and Minnie and the gang. They lined him up in the middle of the shot. The photographer looked up from his camera and with a motion of his hand said, "Goofy, move a little to the right." So Mantle leaned his head and body a few inches over.

"Uh, I didn't mean you, Mr. Mantle," the photographer said. "I was talking to the guy behind you."

Mick looked up, and there was Goofy, eight feet tall with long, furry ears.

Asked if he really thought some joker with a camera was really likely to address him as "Goofy," Mantle shrugged and said, "I've been called worse."

Forgive me if this gets a little personal. I worked with Mantle on a book about his World Series years, "All My Octobers," and I saw the physical pain and the emotional. He regretted that he had not been a better husband, a better father, a better example. His oldest son, Mickey Jr., is a fine golfer who once thought about turning pro. With the right encouragement, he might have made it in baseball.

"If my father had been his father," said Mick, with no hesitation, "he would have been a big-leaguer."

He retired from baseball after the 1968 season, and for the last five years he had topped the $100,000 mark. He recalled with amusement - although it was funny then - how the Yankees tried to cut his salary when he did not duplicate his Triple Crown numbers of 1956. But part of his charm was the fact that he always seemed awed by where he was, how much he was paid, how people reacted to him.

He had a broad back, and you saw the power in the swing as the No. 7 twisted in his uniform shirt. When he took it off for the last time, he went through a period of feeling lost, and in an important way he was. He thought he had found a cause he could embrace: promoting the organ donor program, speaking out against drugs and alcohol.

"Talk about a role model," he said, in his last news conference. He jabbed a thumb at himself. "This is a role model. Don't be like me."

There were no ninth-inning heroics this time. But don't cry for Mickey Mantle. He never cried for himself.

turned another late-inning deficit into another comeback victory.

David Justice hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning to give the Braves a 4-3 victory over Florida and end the Marlins' winning streak at six games.

The win was Atlanta's 21st victory - and its 14th since July 4 - in its last at-bat. The visiting Marlins lost for only the third time in 17 games.

"There's nothing ho-hum about this," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "You'd rather have them wrapped up early, but without good pitching, we don't come back."

Maddux fell ill with flu-like symptoms before the game, and rookie Matt Murray made his first major league start.

"We couldn't consider it a breather because we didn't have to face Maddux," Marlins manager Rene Lachemann said. "We're not a good enough team to say that just because one guy is not pitching, we're going to win the game."

Murray gave up two runs on three hits and four walks in 4 2-3 innings.

In other National League games, Cincinnati blanked Colorado 4-0, Chicago clipped Los Angeles 5-4 in 11 innings, San Diego nipped Pittsburgh 6-5, Montreal beat Philadelphia 5-1 and San Francisco defeated St. Louis 4-1.

Reds 4, Rockies 0
Dave Burba and two relievers held Colorado's slumping lineup to eight singles as Cincinnati ended its four-game losing streak.

The Rockies have fallen out of first place in the NL West by losing six of seven on their road trip and nine of 13 overall. The Rockies are just 6-for-45 (.133) with runners in scoring position during the road trip. Burba (7-2) extended the Rockies' history of poor play at Riverfront Stadium, where they're 2-13.

Kevin Ritz (9-8) lost his third consecutive start.

Red Sox put down Yankees

By The Associated Press
Boston's nine-game AL East lead and 11-game winning streak going into its series with the second-place New York Yankees had Fenway Park tingling with excitement, and the Red Sox did nothing to diminish it.

Homers by Mo Vaughn and Tim Lincecum put Boston ahead 6-2 after five innings, and the Red Sox cruised to a 9-3 victory - their 12th straight - Monday night.

In other AL games, it was Cleveland over Baltimore 9-6, Seattle over Minnesota 6-2, Milwaukee over Detroit 3-2, California over Chicago 11-10 and Oakland over Kansas City 13-5.

About the only excitement in the Boston-New York game came when Yankees starter Scott Kamieniecki (3-4) hit Luis Alicea on the wrist with a pitch. Kamieniecki was immediately ejected, but Alicea headed towards the mound and both dugouts emptied. No fight erupted, though.

"You get mad and you want to (retaliate)," Alicea said. "But the way (Erik) Hanson's throwing and the way this team's playing, we don't want to get in a fight, get guy's hurt. Then we have more to lose."

Hanson retired 14 consecutive batters between the first and the sixth innings. He allowed eight hits and walked two before being lifted with one out in the ninth.

New York made it 2-0 in the first on Paul O'Neill's sacrifice fly and Darryl Strawberry's RBI single. But Boston tied it when John Valentin singled and Vaughn hit Kamieniecki's first pitch into the left-field screen for his career-high 30th homer.

"The tone for the game was set in the first inning," Yankees manager Buck Showalter said. "Whatever momentum we gained, we gave it right back."

Nachring added a three-run shot, his seventh, to make it 6-2 in the fifth.

Indians 9, Orioles 6
Manny Ramirez singled in the go-ahead run in Cleveland's three-run ninth inning as Baltimore lost its fifth straight.

with a single off Armando Benitez (1-4) and stole second. With two outs, Ramirez grounded a single inside third base, and Paul Sorrento followed with a two-run double off Jesse Orosco at Camden Yards.

Mariners 6, Twins 2
Mike Blowers is one hitter pitchers don't want to face with the bases loaded.

He hit his second grand slam of the season to cap a five-run seventh as Seattle won at Minnesota. This season, Blowers is 6-for-11 with two homers and 17 RBIs in bases-loaded situations.

Angels 11, White Sox 10
Greg Myers' home run in the 10th inning lifted California over Chicago at Comiskey Park.

The homer off Kirk McCaskill (4-4), the sixth White Sox pitcher, made a winner of Mike James (3-0), who pitched 2 2-3 innings of scoreless relief.

Athletics 13, Royals 5
Rookie George Williams hit a grand slam, helping another rookie, Steve Wojciechowski, get his first major league win for Oakland.

Wojciechowski (1-1) went five innings, giving up five runs on six hits and four walks.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am the eldest of four girls. Our father passed away 21 years ago. We were 12, 11 and 1 at the time, and Mom was pregnant with my youngest sister, "Amy." We all love Amy a lot.

Here's the problem. Amy will be marrying in a few weeks. We will all be attendants in the wedding along with some of our children. Amy wants my mom to carry a bouquet in my father's memory. We feel this is a wonderful idea, but she wants to carry this gesture further.

Following the wedding, Amy wants all of us to go to the cemetery to witness her placing the bridal bouquet at my dad's headstone and have a picture taken.

I think this is morbid. Our father is missed dearly, but if Amy wants to do this, she should do so in private, after the wedding.

I have not said anything to Amy, but this bothers me. Am I neurotic, dwelling on my grief at a time when we should all be happy, or is Amy going too far? -- Howell, Mich.

DEAR MICH.: If Amy wants to go to the cemetery and place a bouquet on her father's grave and have a photo taken, she should certainly do so. To ask the family to accompany her is, in my opinion, excessive. It would be a downer for the others -- especially your mother. I hope Amy will abandon the idea of the entourage.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband, "Jim," and I are in our mid-50s, in good health and very happily married. A year ago, we moved his parents, who are in poor health, to our town. I took early retirement in order to care for them, as well as help my own mother, an Alzheimer's patient who lives in a nearby assisted care facility. It is tiring for me to try to run my own home and take good care of the three parents, but I do not consider it a burden because I love them.

Our real problem is that between us, my husband and I have eight siblings who have grown children and grandchildren. They come to visit our parents and stay for anywhere from two nights to two weeks. They look upon our house as the family headquarters and feel it is our duty to put them up and feed them. They always say, "Oh, don't go to any trouble for us -- we just want to visit with Mom (or Mom and Dad)." In the past year, we have played host on 27 occasions and are about to cave in from exhaustion.

We have decided to write to all family members explaining that to preserve our health and sanity, we can no longer accommodate them. We will offer, however, to make hotel reservations if they phone ahead. Some will understand, but others will be hurt or indignant. Are we being unreasonable? -- Totally Anonymous Please

DEAR TOTALLY: Unreasonable? No way. Self-preservation is the first law of survival. I say it's about time. You're going to love your newfound freedom. Hallelujah!

DEAR READERS: Interested in a fabulous read? I just finished a book about love, scientific research, family fights, duplicity, compassion, courage and pain. It is brilliantly written by one of the principal characters of this real-life drama. You'll be riveted. The title: "Mapping Fate" by Alice Wexler. Publisher: Times Books. Price $23. You won't be able to put it down. I guarantee it.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Tex-PREP awards

Stephanie Taylor of Hereford receives a Texas Instruments calculator from Kirby Hoffman, Tex-PREP professor, during the program's awards ceremony recently. Taylor was among 11 Hereford students to attend the pre-engineering program in Amarillo this summer.

Adult literacy training will be held at library

Persons interested in helping an adult learn to read are encouraged to attend the literacy training workshop to be held at the Deaf Smith County Library on August 18 and 19.

Trainees will learn how to assist students using the Computer Curriculum Lab and will be certified as a CCC Lab Instructor upon completion of the workshop.

The Curriculum Computer does the testing, recommends the level of course study, creates a series of lessons, and tracks the student's progress as the instructor assists.

No previous computer training or teaching experience is required.

The workshop is sponsored by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

To enroll in the training session, or for more details, pick up an information sheet and registration form at the Library--211 E. 4th--or call Rebecca Walls at 364-1206.

HJH student in horse show

Amanda Schumacher, an upcoming seventh grader at Hereford Junior High, recently participated in The State 4-H Horse Show held in Abilene.

She is a member of the Castro County 4-H Horse Club.

Other members attending were Kodie Bagley, Kori Ellis, Rusty McDaniel and Chris Reynolds.

Results are as follows:
Kodie Bagley - 10th in 3-year-old stock horse.

Kodie Bagley and Rusty McDaniel - 2nd in team pinning.

Rusty McDaniel - 2nd in Halter-grade gelding, 8th in team roping.

Blankenship is ACU graduate

Jason Blankenship of Hereford participated in commencement exercises in August at Abilene Christian University.

Blankenship graduated with a bachelor's degree in secondary education.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Blankenship.

To take what there is, and use it, without waiting forever in vain for the preconceived--to dig deep into the actual and get something out of that--this doubtless is the right way to live.

Students participate in summer program

Eleven Hereford students were among those who graduated recently from the Texas Prefreshmen Engineering Program held at Amarillo College.

The students participated for eight weeks in the sessions, which stressed abstract reasoning, problem solving, computer science, physics, trigonometry and an investigation of career opportunities.

Those participating from Hereford High School were: Charles Hubner, Eddie Montoya, Daniel Cortez, Pablo Galan, Maximino (Tony) Garcia, Damian Esquivel and Sara Perez.

Hereford Junior High students were: Stephanie Taylor, Myra Sanders, Tan Nguyen and Carey Lyles.

Included in the curriculum were individual projects where students engineered bridges. They researched construction, calculated and drafted designs and built their bridges.

In competition after the project, Taylor's bridge held 42 pounds and had the winning efficiency ratio. Lyles' bridge held the most weight at 148 pounds.

Lyles also was awarded the Most Outstanding Student honor for his student group. Lyles and Taylor received Texas Instruments calculators, while Lyles, Montoya, Garcia and Nguyen ended with an average of 97 or higher.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Donohue: How does one get arthritis? Is it passed on to children? Also, if it is temporal arteritis, what would the symptoms be? I was told I had it 20 years ago, and at the time they didn't know much about it. Mine was diagnosed after a biopsy. -- R.B.

ANSWER: I can't tell you why some people get arthritis (artery inflammation) and others escape, but it is not hereditary. You don't pass it on. Believe me, even the briefest review of arthritis would fill a book.

Arteritis. If you glance at the word hastily, you might mistake it for arthritis, with which is has no connection. Arthritis is joint inflammation. Now some temporal arteritis patients have a second condition -- polymyalgia rheumatica, a muscle inflammation problem -- a story I propose for another day.

Arteritis symptoms depend on the vessels involved and how extensively so. Because arteries are main blood conduits, inflammation of their linings has immense effect in diminished blood supply to organs, etc. Polyarteritis nodosa, for instance, involves kidney vessels, leading, if unchecked, to kidney failure.

Temporal arteritis affects cranial arteries, causing headache, fever and a general fatigue. I assume you had all that years back; but artery biopsy remains a chief means of confirming the vessel inflammation.

Cortisone has been the salient treatment for arteritis, particularly for temporal arteritis, which unchecked threatens vision.

Temporal arteritis occurs in older people. How old were you? Yes, varieties of artery inflammation seem infinite. Takayasu's, for example, strikes younger women, whose large arteries become inflamed and who consequently lack a wrist pulse. You may hear it referred to as the "pulseless" disease. Polymyalgia rheumatica often accompanies temporal arteritis, as I noted.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Someone wrote you about ringing in the ears. You gave good advice, but I would like to pass on my experience. I had just moved to St. Louis and established a good doctor relationship. His office referred me to an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist. He thought I had a jaw joint problem (mandible): I was a teeth clencher. He made an occlusal splint for it and the ringing in the ears stopped. I still use the splint at night and on the tennis court and piano bench, but my ears no longer ring. -- Mrs. J.L.V.

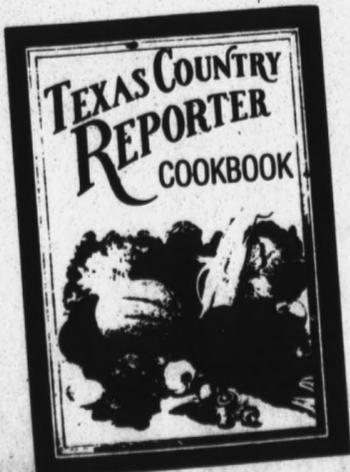

ANSWER: I have no doubt that misalignment of the mandible with the temporal bone of the skull can produce such ear ringing, and I thank you for passing on your experience. But I don't want all those ear ringing patients out there to storm physician phone systems, believing they have found a universal cure to their troubling ear phenomena. Perhaps a handful might find they have this jaw joint connection.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: In a recent column, you answered a letter about breast pain before menstruation. After years of coping with this problem, I finally realized that part of the solution was a bigger cup size for my bra. Sometimes, what should be the most obvious is the most easily overlooked. -- B.N.

ANSWER: Mrs. N, truer words have never been uttered. You have hit on a profound secret of medicine sometimes missed, even in medical schools. It's called common sense, and it probably has contributed to more "cures" than all of our scientific therapies.

From the people who brought you "The Roads Of Texas"....

Prosecution fails to shake testimony, jury is bored

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Confronted with confusing details from a 10-year-old murder, the O.J. Simpson jurors might be forgiven if they momentarily thought Simpson's ex-wife and her friend died of oleander poisoning.

For much of Monday, prosecutor Marcia Clark tried to show that defense expert Fredric Rieders mistakenly suggested in another case that the murder weapon was oleander, a poisonous shrub. Subsequent tests showed otherwise and charges were dropped.

Jurors, however, didn't appear impressed with Clark's lengthy inquiry into Rieders' background, taking no notes and looking generally bored. One alternate slumped in her chair and buried her chin in her chest. Another panelist sat with her head in her hand, her eyes half shut.

Last month, Rieders backed up the defense's police conspiracy theory by testifying that a preservative used in the police crime lab was present in blood found on a gate near the crime scene and a sock found in Simpson's bedroom.

Law professor Myrna Raeder of Southwestern University said Clark "lost momentum" by ignoring the jury's body language and revealing she had very little ammunition against the toxicologist.

"The prosecution has been very bound up in minutiae," Raeder said. "They have been very much more interested in just getting information to the jury rather than taking a thematic approach to help the jury understand."

Even Judge Lance Ito was impatient.

"Let's wind this up," he snapped at one point. "Let's try the Simpson case sometime today."

Police crime lab chief Michele Kestler was to return to the stand today for more cross-examination from the prosecution.

Other developments Monday: --The defense argued futilely for the chance to tell jurors about news leaks before the trial. The matter has arisen repeatedly in the past week, but Ito said it would be time-consuming and was "very slight to the point of irrelevance."

1995 Property Tax Rates in Hereford ISD

This notice concerns 1995 property tax rates for Hereford ISD school district. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the school district used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the school district can set before it must hold a rollback election. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes and state funds by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:

1995 Property Tax Rates in Walcott ISD

This notice concerns 1995 property tax rates for Walcott ISD school district. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the school district used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the school district can set before it must hold a rollback election. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes and state funds by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.
