Injured man helped by graduate of local trauma care program

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Since February, employees of local companies have been trained in basic trauma care by the WorkSmart program of Hereford Regional Medical Center.

More than 150 people representing more than 100 companies have been instructed in what to do in case of a traumatic injury or other medical emergency in the workplace.

On Wednesday, that training paid off for the first time when an industrial accident occurred at Panhandle Milling north of Dawn.

A man working for Robinson Construction, which is a subcontractor on a warehouse expansion project at Panhandle Milling, was injured.

Paramedic Terry Hazlett, one of the three-member crew that responded to the 12:49 p.m. emergency, said it appeared the victim "was operating a piece of machinery of some sort that got away from him."

The man, whose name was not available, was thrown into a concrete form studded with rebar and that was waiting for concrete to be poured on top.

A piece of rebar was jammed through the man's leg.

Jerry O'Connor, a Panhandle Milling employee and graduate of the WorkSmart program, was one of the first on the scene after the accident.

He said construction company workers had already cut the piece of rebar loose from its mounting.

"There wasn't a lot we could do," O'Connor said. "There probably wasn't three drops of blood lost."

O'Connor said his training taught him not to try and remove the piece of metal, which had passed through the man's left leg at the calf and stretching the skin about one inch on the opposite side of his leg.

"We covered the wound with a sterile blanket," O'Connor said and worked to keep the victim from going into shock while they waited for the ambulance.

All members of the ambulance crew that responded to the scene praised workers for their efforts on behalf of the victim.

Stuart Jackson, an EMT-P on the crew, noted that the "overall scene looked good. A lot of cooperation. Not a lot of people trying to help out."

Once they were traveling toward the scene, the ambulance crew used a cellular phone and called Panhandle Milling for an update on the condition of the patient.

When it became apparent that his injury was severe, they contacted a local doctor, who cleared them to call for the Medivac helicopter to be sent from Amarillo.

The chopper had been placed on alert status when the call came in, but requires local physician approval before a patient is transported.

Hazlett said the chopper arrived at the scene moments after they did.

"We were in route at 12:51 p.m. We got on the scene at 1:10 p.m. Medivac was put in the air at 1:05 p.m., they were on the ground at 1:16 p.m.," she said.

After that, it was simply a matter of checking the patient, stabilizing him and driving him across the road to the waiting helicopter.

He was at Northwest Texas Hospital at 1:40 p.m. -- 51 minutes after the initial call came through -- where he underwent surgery to remove the rebar.

"Our goal is to get him to definitive care within one hour," said Hereford EMS paramedic Tom Jackson. "They call it the 'golden hour' in trauma care."

Tom Jackson said O'Connor's efforts at the scene were beneficial.

Chris Flores, another EMT-P on Wednesday's crew -- and instructor of the WorkSmart trauma classes -- said getting the rebar cut before the ambulance arrived saved lots of time.

Tom Jackson said training like that offered by WorkSmart will help paramedics and EMTs, because trained employees can clean and dry wounds, stop bleeding and treat shock.

"It all adds up," he said, adding

18 hurt in attack Sniper kills soldier at Fort Bragg

By ESTES THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) - A sniper opened fire today on hundreds of soldiers exercising in the pre-dawn fog at Fort Bragg, killing one and wounding 18 others. A soldier stationed at the fort was arrested.

The shooting happened near the entrance to Towle Stadium, where members of the elite 82nd Airborne Division routinely do their calisthenics before starting work.

"I heard some shots. It was unusual because we're not near a range," said Pfc. Michael Miller.

The suspect was being questioned this morning by the Army's Criminal Investigation Division, said Spc. Kerry Deatherage. His name was not being released.

By late morning, the Army said 19 soldiers were hit - one was killed and 18 were wounded, some critically.

Of the wounded, one was treated and released. The others had various injuries, primarily to the abdomen, chest or lower extremities, said Margaret Tippy, a spokeswoman at Womack Army Hospital. She said some were critical.

One of the wounded was taken by ambulance to Duke University Medical Center, where a spokesman said he had a neck wound but was stable, alert and talking.

All the soldiers who were shot were from a task force attached to the 2nd Brigade of the 82nd Airborne, said Maj. Rivers Johnson, a spokesman for the 82nd.

Some 1,300 brigade members, clad in gray shorts and sweats, were getting ready for a four-mile run in foggy conditions about 6:30 a.m., Johnson said.

By 10 a.m., the area was empty except for a few guards and a group of 82nd Airborne troops in maroon berets forming across the street.

About a half-dozen investigators combed a pine-wooded area behind the stadium.

Court holds session here

Prison sentences were imposed on three defendants during a session of 222nd District Court Thursday.

Concurrent 8-year terms in Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division were given James R. Gunter, 23, on pleas of guilty to a pair of charges, forgery and theft over $750 but under $20,000.

Judge David Wesley Gulley also revoked probation of Gilbert Cano, 20, originally sentenced to five years for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and eight years for burglary of a habitation.

Cano was ordered to serve a four-year sentence on the vehicle offense and seven years for burglary.

Cano also entered a guilty plea on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, a state jail felony. He was sentenced to two years, probated for five years.

Probation of Francisco Saucedo Jr., also was revoked, and he was sentenced to seven years in TDCJ-ID. Saucedo previously was convicted of burglary and aggravated assault and assessed an eight-year probated sentence.

Senate nearing final vote on budget package

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate edged toward passage today of watershed Republican plans for constricting social spending, cutting taxes and balancing the budget, a day after a jubilant GOP muscled a similar package through the House.

With assurances of victory by Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Senate slogged through a pile of amendments to the measure, which promises to erase federal deficits by 2002 while reversing decades of ever-expanding reach by the government.

In one early vote, the Senate refused to delete requirements that under the new Medicaid system Republicans would craft, states continue to guarantee coverage to pregnant women, children under 12 and the disabled. The amendment by presidential candidate Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, was rebuffed by 77-22.

The overall GOP package would revamp Medicare, Medicaid and a mountain of other programs, trim projected federal spending by about $1 trillion over seven years and lop $245 billion off the tax bills of many families and businesses.

The legislation embodies the chief pledges the GOP made in its dramatic election victory last year, when it lambasted Democrats for letting government grow too large and intrusive.

"For 60 years, the ship of state has sailed consistently in the wrong direction, to the left," said House Majority Leader Richard Armey, R-Texas, just before his chamber approved the package Thursday by 227-203. "With this vote today, we'll crank this ship around. We'll turn this ship around to the right."

Voting yes were 223 Republicans and four Democrats; 192 Democrats and 10 Republicans were opposed.

President Clinton, who says the legislation's cuts are too harsh, will veto it when House-Senate bargainers send him a finished version, perhaps next month. That will set the table for bargaining between the two sides that will decide whether the year ends with a compromise deficit-reduction measure or partisan finger-pointing.

For now, partisan finger-pointing is in vogue.

Senate Democrats launched a series of amendments at what they considered the bill's soft spots, seeking to shrink GOP cuts in Medicare, Medicaid, education and the earned income tax credit for low-wage workers. They were turned back in every instance, but not before Democrats sought political points.

"Republicans have overreached," declared Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "They've been caught red-handed. Their cuts in Medicare are too harsh and extreme."

Some GOP amendments were successful. One by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., approved 99-0, restored $5.9 billion in reductions in student loans. That was part of a deal Dole reached with Republican moderates that also eased cuts in Medicaid and Medicare. The leader also agreed to restore most nursing home standards for Medicaid patients, which the original version would have killed.

Another amendment by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., would require states to provide Medicaid coverage for disabled people as defined by the federal government. The provision, approved 60-39, was opposed by Dole and GOP governors, who wanted to let states decide who qualifies as disabled.

The Senate voted on 20 amendments Thursday in a session that stretched past midnight, and planned votes on dozens of others today.

"This is not a good day to be absent, nor will tomorrow be a good day to be absent," Dole joked.

There was little joking as Democrats said separate comments made Tuesday

Justice Dept. announces newsprint price hike probe

WASHINGTON (AP) - Prompted by complaints from newspaper publishers, the Justice Department is examining companies that sell newsprint to see if rising costs might be caused by illegal price fixing.

Agency spokeswoman Gina Talamona announced the opening of the probe by Justice antitrust investigators, but she declined to release details, including the names of companies or individuals who might be the targets.

The investigation began after complaints from newspaper publishers, according to the Justice Department.

Rising newsprint costs have been cited in the shutdown of some papers recently, including The Houston Post, and in staff reductions at others.

After price increases of more than 40 percent this year, newsprint producers say they are preparing for a new round of increases in early 1996.

Newsprint typically accounts for about 20 percent of a newspaper's expenses. Publishers have been taking steps to reduce their consumption of it by trimming page size and eliminating distribution far from home bases.

Three companies this month told U.S. customers they will be raising list prices by as much as 9.7 percent starting in February.

Stone Container Corp.'s paper affiliate, Stone Consolidated Corp. of Montreal; Weyerhaeuser Co. of Tacoma, Wash.; and Fletcher Challenge Canada Ltd., based in Vancouver, British Columbia, have announced planned price increases.

The training, Tom Jackson said, adds up.

O'Connor said he got a call Wednesday night from the Medivac pilot, who is a friend of his, who said everything was done well in handling the accident.

50-year-old letter turns up, but recipient ill in hospital

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) - A letter that Pvt. Stephen L. Neal wrote to his wife from a hospital bed 50 years ago has finally arrived, sadly, in another hospital room.

Neal wrote countless letters from Europe back home to Eva, the love of his life. He kept writing when, in 1945, appendicitis returned him stateside to a Michigan hospital. All but one of the letters made it into her hands.

Postal officials delivered the straggler Wednesday, still sealed in the yellowed envelope discovered earlier in the week inside a wall of the demolished Percy Jones Hospital in Battle Creek, Mich.

The only person allowed to read the missive will be Mrs. Neal, but she is now the one in the hospital, recovering from triple-bypass surgery in the intensive care unit of a Wichita Falls hospital.

Driver says she didn't hear warning

Investigators trying to determine reason for tragic accident

By JAMES WEBB
Associated Press Writer
FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. (AP) -

A school bus driver told investigators she faced a red light and heard no warning on a railroad crossing before a commuter train slammed into her bus and killed seven students.

Investigators are trying to determine why the bus carrying 35 students sat at the traffic light Wednesday with about 3-1/2 feet of its rear in the path of the train that barreled through at up to 60 mph.

The driver, Patricia Catencamp, told investigators the traffic light at the crossing never turned green, she didn't hear any warnings from students, and never saw or heard the train.

"There was a lot of chaos on the bus," National Transportation Safety Board member John Goglia said Thursday night as the on-scene investigation wrapped up. "She did not hear a horn."

Five students died Wednesday, and two more died Thursday after they were taken off life support. Eight other students remained hospitalized, one in critical condition.

Goglia said regardless of whether the driver saw the train, she would have had little time to react.

The NTSB said approaching trains trip sensors embedded in the tracks that prompt warning gates to lower, lights to flash and bells to ring. At the same moment, the traffic signal begins to change, eventually turning green to allow vehicles to clear out of the way.

Goglia said tests indicate the light would turn green 18 seconds after the train hit the sensor. Trains traveling the route in the last two days typically have taken 20 to 25 seconds from the time they trip the sensor to the time they reach the crossing, Goglia said.

That would leave just two to seven seconds after the light turned green for the driver to get the bus in gear and move off the track before the train hit.

The train's engineer saw the bus enter the intersection and stop with the end of the bus protruding onto the tracks, Goglia said. The engineer said he blew his horn and used an emergency brake but couldn't stop.

Moments before the collision, the police chief and an engineer arrived to investigate several public complaints about the signal. But state Transportation Department spokesman Dick Adorjan said the signal was working properly just before the crash.

Nonetheless, village president Bill Yocius said residents have been complaining for several months about the poor coordination between the gates and signals at the crossing and the stop light at the intersection just beyond. Other residents said the lights have been a problem for at least a year.

"Every day you take your life in your hands when you cross a track like that," said resident Steve Gnek, who often travels the road. "It's not the bus driver's fault."

Truck driver Charlie Ward said he was caught in a dangerous squeeze at the same intersection only a half hour earlier.

"You do not get a green light to clear the intersection before the railroad signals and gates come down," Ward said. "You got to wait until something big happens to get these ding-dongs out here to get something done."

The Chicago-bound express train was traveling between 50 and 60 mph, well below the 70 mph limit, when it hit the brakes. The impact sheared the body of the bus off the chassis, spinning it around 180 degrees. Nobody on the train was injured.

At the 1,400-student Cary-Grove High School in Cary, near this bedroom community about 40 miles northwest of Chicago, students pinned white paper to their shirts with the names of the dead on them. Many held hands. Boys and girls wept together.

Dozens of bouquets and mementos were placed Thursday against the crossing gates.

Teacher retirement fund puts bet on growth industry, casino stock

AUSTIN (AP) - The Teacher Retirement System of Texas is investing millions in casino company stocks that, for the most part, have proved to be good bets.

The $45 billion pension fund has invested about $13 million in Harrah's Entertainment Inc. stocks, $5 million in Showboat Inc. and $1 million in Hilton Hotels Corp., TRS chief investment officer John Young told the Morris News Service.

He said that as of Oct. 6, the Harrah's stock has produced about $4 million for the fund and the Showboat stock about $2 million. The Hilton Hotels investment has been "flat," but TRS employees closely monitor all stocks, he said.

"Our goal is to make as much money as we can for teachers. We'll look at whatever in public stock looks good," Young said.

Young, however, said casino investments are a minuscule part of a portfolio that includes almost 1,000 stocks.

"It's almost meaningless. If Harrah's went out of business tomorrow, you wouldn't notice it because of the size of the portfolio," he said.

TRS manages the fourth-largest public pension fund in the nation, he said.

The system was blasted by state leaders last year after it had lost more than $200 million investing in foreclosed real estate loans. Officials also were criticized for spending money on expensive furnishings, artwork and an exercise center at system headquarters.

TRS board member Jim Simms of Amarillo said the investment doesn't mean the board endorses gambling.

"An investment is an investment. If it's a good investment ... I'm not going to get into moral judgments," Simms said.

Ron Steinhart, board chairman, said the panel's responsibility involves investment performance.

"I don't think it's the proper arena to get involved in social causes," he said.

The California Public Employees' Retirement System, the largest government pension fund in the United States at $91 billion, has about $81 million invested in casino companies, said spokeswoman Pat Macht.

"We don't discriminate in our investments," she said.

Jury deals life term to convicted killer

By MICHELLE KOIDIN

Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The convicted murderer of Tejano singing star Selena will be behind bars at least until the year 2025.

A jury handed Yolanda Saldivar a life sentence Thursday. She will be eligible for parole in 30 years.

One juror said he held out for a less severe sentence during nine hours of deliberations over two days but ultimately was swayed.

"I just wanted her to have a chance after 20 years to come out on parole and have a chance in life," said Charles Arnold, "because I don't think she's a menace to society."

Family, friends and co-workers of Ms. Saldivar, a registered nurse, testified during the punishment phase of her trial that she would be an asset to the community if given probation, one of seven options.

Defense attorneys argued that Ms. Saldivar, who went from Selena fan club founder to manager of her boutiques, had paid a heavy enough penalty with her murder conviction.

Prosecutors asked the panel for the maximum sentence of life in prison and a $10,000 fine. No fine was levied.

The jury's decision was cheered by dozens of Selena fans outside the courthouse. Passing drivers honked their horns.

"This is a time when you can scream in the middle of the street. Yeah!" said Natividad Rodriguez, 54.

Ms. Saldivar, wearing a white pants suit, sobbed upon hearing the jury's sentence. Her family, seated directly behind her, also wept.

There was no immediate reaction from members of Selena's family, seated at the other side of the courtroom.

Defense attorney Douglas Tinker promised an appeal.

"I was ready for the verdict. Yolanda was ready for the verdict," he said. "I kept telling her the fact that they're staying out a long time didn't mean it was going to be anything less than life."

"She's suffering mightily. She's scared to death she will be harmed where she goes."

Prosecutor Carlos Valdez praised the sentence.

"I think it's very strong message that people who are convicted of murder in Harris County face the most serious possible punishment under the law."

"This type of behavior will not be tolerated in organized society."

On Monday, the jury took two hours to convict Ms. Saldivar of shooting 23-year-old Selena Quintanilla Perez on March 31 at a motel in Corpus Christi.

Prosecutors contended Ms. Saldivar deliberately shot Selena because she was about to be fired for embezzling $30,000.

The defense had argued that the shooting was a tragic accident that happened when Ms. Saldivar's .38-caliber revolver went off mistakenly.

Ms. Saldivar did not face the death penalty because the crime contained none of the aggravating circumstances required under Texas law, such as a multiple murder or a murder committed during a robbery.

Club hears SPS plans for merger

Southwestern Public Service Company's plans to merge with Public Service Co. of Colorado were outlined when Homer Hamilton, SPS vice president, appeared as guest speaker for the Hereford Kiwanis Club Thursday.

Hamilton, a member of the merger transition team, said most customers will see no change after the merger. "SPS will continue to be the company that supplies electricity in this area, and there will be no immediate change in rates." The Public Utility Commission of Texas will still regulate rates.

In the future, Hamilton added, "rates will be lower than they would be otherwise." He said SPS rates have declined over the past 10 years, and the merger will help hold down future costs by savings created by efficiencies of operation.

With the merger, a new company will be created and become the parent company. But after the merger, SPS will remain a separate entity with operations out of Amarillo. Bill D. Helton, SPS chairman and CEO, will be the first chairman and CEO of the new company.

Officials of the companies are projecting an 8 percent reduction in the work forces of both utilities. That figure means a cut of 550 to 600 positions out of a total combined work force of about 7,000. To the extent possible, these reductions will be accomplished through a hiring freeze, normal attrition and early-retirement programs.

The merger is expected to result in savings of approximately $770 million over the first 10 years. The two companies can pool their resources to obtain lower prices for the fuel to run power plants; the work forces can be reduced, and the consolidation will result in savings through efficiencies.

Hamilton stresses that SPS and its employees will continue to participate in community activities, and will continue to support the region through economic-development efforts and other civic programs.

Ready for district meet

The Hereford girls' cross country team has a chance to do well at the District 1-4A Meet, which will be held starting at 9 a.m. in Amarillo's Thompson Park.

Hereford cross country teams go to district with confidence

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

With wins at two consecutive meets under their belts, the girls of the Hereford cross country team is going into Saturday's District 1-4A cross country meet with lots of confidence.

Unfortunately for Hereford, neither Canyon nor Randall were at those last two meets. Those two 1-4A teams have consistently beaten Hereford all year, and only the top two teams at the district advance to the regional meet.

The district meet is set for Saturday morning in Thompson Park in Amarillo.

Like the girls, the Hereford boys' team had a pretty good season. Also like the girls, the boys have consistently finished behind two teams from 1-4A: Canyon and Caprock.

Either Hereford team would need to run flawlessly to advance, but at

Herd rated as 22-point 'dogs

The Hereford football team will be a 22-point underdog when it meets the Borger Bulldogs at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Borger, according to the Harris Rating System.

While Hereford is ranked 97th in Class 4A by Harris with a rating of 182, Borger is ranked 12th at 204. Pampa is just ahead of Borger at No. 11, also with a rating of 204.

In the other two District 1-4A games scheduled for Friday, Pampa is favored by 20 over Randall in Pampa, and Canyon is a 12-point pick over Dumas in Canyon.

The Hereford Junior High volleyball teams closed the season with wins against two different schools Monday.

Hereford's seventh grade A team won 15-12, 1-15, 15-8, getting six service points from Kesha Thomas. They beat a team from Westover Park Junior High, a new school south of Amarillo which includes only sixth and seventh graders.

The eighth-graders from Valleyview Junior High lost to Hereford's eighth grade A team, 16-14, 15-10, as Crystal Mendiaz served for seven points.

Both of Hereford's A teams finished the season with 7-3 records.

The Hereford seventh grade B team lost 15-9, 15-9, but Bethany Williams served for five points. The eighth grade B team fell 15-11, 15-3. Shanda Northcutt served for three points.

Hereford, which is seeded fourth in the 14-team tournament, was to play again Friday afternoon, meeting the winner of a morning match between Snyder and El Paso Jefferson.

Borger holds off Herd JV

With the varsity football game remaining at 7:30 tonight in Borger, Hereford High School football teams are 0-1-1 against Borger teams so far this week.

The Hereford junior varsity lost to Borger's JV, 20-8, Thursday night in Whiteface Stadium, while in Borger, the Herd freshmen played to a 20-20 tie. The Hereford sophomores were open this week.

Borger scored first in the JV game, but Hereford answered in the second quarter. Borger muffed a punt, and Richard Sierra recovered the ball. Sierra then ran 24 yards to set up the touchdown: a diving catch by Josh Martinez for a 11-yard touchdown pass from Manuel Reyna. Hereford botched the extra point, and the score was tied at 6-6. Borger came back quickly with an 80-yard run for a touchdown, and they added another score in the second half on a 60-yard run and a pass fro two points.

Borger gave Hereford a safety in the second half, rather than punting from deep in its own end zone.

"The guys got after 'em and fought hard," Herd coach Chris Christopher said. "That was one of the toughest battles I seem them play. They want a victory real bad."

The Herd JV is winless in seven games.

In Borger, the Bulldog freshmen scored in the fourth quarter to tie the least its possible. "You throw out what you've done before," Hereford coach Martha Emerson said. "All that matters is how you run Saturday."

The powerful Canyon teams are expected to pace both the boys' and girls' fields.

"The Canyon teams are favored," Emerson said. "Their boys are ranked No. 1 in the state and their girls are ranked No. 2."

"The Caprock boys have too much experience for - they've been to state (last year) and we haven't," Emerson said. "Our boys will make a run at it. They feel confident about second place, and sometimes its all about what's in your head."

The girls probably hold Hereford's best chance to advance.

"I think we have a chance to beat Randall, and the girls feel they can beat Randall," Emerson said. "Randall has three girls who are good, but we feel our top five is better than their top five."

The Hereford girls won a meet in Sundown two weeks ago, then won last week in Levelland. While Canyon and Randall weren't in Levelland, the quality field did include District 1-4A's Borger and Class 5A Coronado.

"Lubbock Coronado has been real good, and we hadn't beaten them all year," Emerson said. "(The meet at) Levelland gave us more of a boost then Sundown because of who was there. We were worried about Borger, but we beat Borger rather handily." Even if a Hereford team doesn't advance to regionals, an individual might make it, since the top five individuals advance regardless of which team they run for.

Hereford's Jamie Harrison is the top contender for the girls, with a win in Sundown and a third-place finish in Levelland. The boys' best hope is Inez Lopez.

District 1-4A will share Thompson Park with District 1-3A, which will give the 1-4A runners more time between races, Emerson said.

The junior varsity race for boys and girls starts at 9:30 a.m.; the varsity girls start at 10:10; and the varsity boys start at 11 a.m.

Indians prove Braves' Maddux can be beaten

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) - The Atlanta Braves must be wondering if the Cleveland Indians can figure out Greg Maddux, what will they do against Tom Glavine?
If the Tribe can be inspired by a brushback pitch, what indignity will they seize upon Saturday?
If this World Series isn't over by now, could it be possibly turn out like the last two the Braves were involved in?

The Braves had plenty of time to think about it on their flight back home after losing 5-4 in Game 5 on Thursday night. With everything set up perfectly for the coronation of Maddux as the hero and the Braves as the true best team in baseball, they couldn't come through.
"I think the pressure is on them because they definitely have something to lose and they've lost the last two World Series they've participated in," said Orel Hershisser, who threw eight innings and outpitched Maddux.

The series resumes Saturday night in Atlanta with Tom Glavine, the winner of Game 2, facing 40-year-old Dennis Martinez. Today will be a day for the Braves to ponder what went wrong.
The first thing was a high, inside pitch that Maddux threw to Eddie Murray in the first inning after Albert Belle homered for a quick 2-0 lead. Murray took a couple of steps toward Maddux before home plate umpire Frank Pulli stepped in front of him. Both benches cleared, the crowd got into it and the Indians seized upon it.
"Believe it or not, I think the confrontation between them was the key. It got us fired up and it got the fans fired up. It takes little things like that to get everybody excited," said Jim Thome, who drove in the go-ahead run in the sixth inning and added a mammoth home run to straightaway center in the eighth that ended up being the deciding run.

The Indians fared much better against Maddux than they did in Game 1, when he held them to a season-low two hits. They did so by making an adjustment, moving a step closer to the plate, going for opposite-field hits and swinging at several first-pitch strikes.
"Down there, we had 17 or 19 ground balls and he broke six bats, but I felt tonight after seeing him once we had a better approach of how we wanted to hit him. We decided we can move up on the plate and take the away balls away. That ball, if you move up on the plate, becomes a better ball to hit," hitting coach Charlie Manuel said.
Never was that more evident than during Thome's pivotal at-bat in the sixth. Maddux had an 0-2 count on Thome, and all he needed was one more strike to end the threat, maybe something on the inside portion of the plate like the first two strikes he got on Thome.

Instead, he aimed for the outside and left it knee-high over the plate. Thome, a pull hitter, shortened his swing and slapped it up the middle for the go-ahead run.
"Maddux was pounding Thome in and was doing a good job on it. The ball Thome hit was a breaking ball away that he did not get where he wanted, I thought. It was up, and he put wood on it," Manuel said.
The single scored Carlos Baerga, who led off the inning with a double to the opposite field. Manny Ramirez followed with another single to the opposite field, scoring Belle from third.
Thome then gave Cleveland a 5-2 lead in the eighth with a solo homer off Brad Clontz that cleared the 19-foot-high wall in dead center by at least 30 feet. The Indians ended up needing it because Ryan Klesko homered for the third straight game, hitting a two-run shot with two outs in the ninth off Jose Mesa. The next batter, Mark Lemke, struck out swinging to end the game.

"Everybody was picking us to lose in batting practice tonight, but we were very strong mentally. It was a big win for us because now we face Glavine and we've got the momentum on our side," Sandy Alomar said.
No team since the Kansas City Royals in 1985 has lost a World Series after taking a 3-1 lead, but the Braves are a team with a history of crushing defeats in October.
In 1991, they had a 3-2 lead over Minnesota, but lost the final two games. In 1992, they won the first game against Toronto and then proceeded to lose the next three.
"I feel good that we're going to be back in front of the home crowd. Things have gone as planned (winning one of the three in Cleveland) and when we get to Atlanta, we'll be all right," Chipper Jones said.

Maybe so. But the revised plan was to have Greg Maddux end it Thursday night. It didn't happen that way, and the Braves know it. You can bet they're thinking about it, too.

Selig: McLane shouldn't discuss move

HERNDON, Va. (AP) - Bud Selig, the acting commissioner of baseball, says Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane shouldn't be talking with a group intent on bringing baseball to northern Virginia.
McLane and the group led by telecommunications executive William Collins III have held talks about selling the team. Both McLane and Collins say no deal has yet been worked out.
But Selig, speaking to reporters before Game 5 of the World Series in Cleveland, said McLane has not gotten permission to even talk with Collins and his group, the Virginia Baseball Club.

"There are certain guidelines we cannot tolerate not following," Selig said. "This is one."
"A team hasn't moved in 24 years. Our policies are geared toward trying to keep a team where it is."
Despite Selig's pronouncement, Collins said Thursday he expected to make an announcement within a week to 10 days.
"Things work in funny ways. We think once the World Series is over and we have the opportunity to sit down, we think things might happen," Collins said.
Astros spokesman Tyler Barnes also said the team may have an announcement following the World Series.

Meanwhile, a stadium authority picking a site for a possible Virginia baseball stadium endorsed Collins' group as the best hope of bringing baseball to the Washington area.
The authority's chairman, George Barton IV, said he asked Collins' group whether the negotiation between the group and the Astros was serious.
"I was assured by the Virginia Baseball Club that it was," Barton said.
The Virginia group wants to bring a team to the Washington area as soon as next season. The new team would play for two years at Washington's RFK Stadium while a new 40,000-seat stadium is built in the Virginia suburbs.

Any deal would have to be approved by 10 of 14 National League owners and eight of 14 American League owners. Selig said McLane also would need permission from the ruling executive council for the deal.
The Greater Houston Partnership has launched a drive to sell 12,000 additional season tickets to help keep the Astros in town. Randall Onstead, who is heading the drive, said the figure could be adjusted to 14,000 if necessary.

Showalter walks away from Yankees

CLEVELAND (AP) - Part of the deal for managers of the New York Yankees is they leave when owner George Steinbrenner tells them to leave.
Before hiring Buck Showalter, Steinbrenner employed 12 different managers - and fired 11.
On Thursday, Showalter left the Yankees on his own terms. He called Steinbrenner from his home in Pensacola, Fla., and said he was rejecting a two-year, $1.05 million contract and will not return to the team next season.
The Yankees called the parting "amicable."
Showalter's four-year term is remarkable by Yankees standards, being the longest uninterrupted stretch of any of the 12 previous managers since Steinbrenner bought the team in 1973.
With his contract to expire Tuesday, Showalter met twice this week with Steinbrenner to discuss an extension.

Steinbrenner said he attempted to get Showalter to meet with him to discuss two issues - length of contract and coaching staff.
Steinbrenner said Showalter was satisfied with the contract offer, even "flattered" by it. The owner also said he offered to give the manager the right to select his coaching staff "almost in total," and to discuss the possibility of lengthening his contract.
"I was willing to talk about a third year, and willing to let him keep all his coaches but one," Steinbrenner told the New York Daily News. "I told him I was willing to talk about all those things. But it was obvious I couldn't budge him."
Steinbrenner told the News he would have relented on almost everything except the return of Rick Down. Steinbrenner did not want the hitting coach on Showalter's staff for reasons he said he "wouldn't make public."

Showalter said there was no mention of negotiation.
According to the owner, Showalter said he "didn't want to get into a negotiating thing."
"We tried, but we were unable to dissuade Buck," Steinbrenner said. "I have nothing but praise for Buck and the job he did for us, and I told him I am very upset by his leaving. I wish Buck and his fine little family nothing but the best. There will be no criticism in any way from me."
Showalter's service is the longest uninterrupted stretch for a Yankees manager since Ralph Houk's seven straight seasons (1967-73). Houk was the only other manager under Steinbrenner to leave voluntarily.
Showalter had the Yankees in first place in 1994 before the strike ended the season. This year, the team qualified for the American League playoffs as a wild card and was eliminated in five games by Seattle after winning the first two games in the best-of-5 playoff.

Hereford never trailed in the game. Thomas Suarez opened the scoring with a 65-yard run, then Chris Torres passed to Cory Marsh for two points. Then Borger tied it at 8-8.
Torres scored on an 18-yard run in the second quarter, and the try for two failed. Again Borger tied it, at 14-14.
Leo Balderas ran two yards in the third quarter for Hereford's final touchdown, but the pass for two failed.
In the fourth quarter, a Hereford fumble set up Borger at the Herd 15-yard line, and Borger soon scored on a pass. The run for two failed, leaving the game tied.

Deion debuts in Georgia Dome

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

Deion Sanders is heading back to the place he had to leave. The ballyhooed return of Sanders to the NFL will occur Sunday in the building he once called home, the Georgia Dome. Sanders, recovered from ankle surgery performed at the end of his baseball season with the San Francisco Giants, arrives along with the Dallas Cowboys, his latest team.

"I'm healthy enough to go out there and play football like I'm accustomed to playing," Sanders said. "I'd like to just go out there and be successful. I don't really care about individual accomplishment Sunday. I just want to go out there and have a good sound game and win the game."

Sanders will be at cornerback and might see some action on offense against the Falcons, with whom he broke into the NFL. Last year, he signed as a free agent with the 49ers and won a Super Bowl. This year, it's the Cowboys (6-1) who won the bidding war.

The Falcons? They were out of it from the beginning last year, and didn't get back in it this time, either. "They never offered me a dime," Sanders said. "They were not at the same level I wanted to be on. I wanted to win the Super Bowl. So, I had to move on."

But the Falcons (5-2) have moved up a bit, and are tied with the 49ers and St. Louis Rams atop the NFC West. They'll test Sanders with their run-and-shoot attack.

"Deion is going to get a bunch of boos," said Kevin Smith, the other Cowboys cornerback. "But he can quiet all that down with one big play."

That play probably will have to come on defense, according to coach Barry Switzer.

"He's trying to shake off the rust, the cobwebs," Switzer said. "At some point and time, he will return kicks. He's not ready for the total package yet. He hasn't had enough time to get ready for all three phases."

Elsewhere Sunday, it's Jacksonville at Pittsburgh, the New York Jets at Indianapolis, Cleveland at Cincinnati, St. Louis at Philadelphia, Carolina at New England, Green Bay at Detroit, Buffalo at Miami, Seattle at Arizona, New Orleans at San Francisco, Tampa Bay at Houston and the New York Giants at Washington.

On Monday night, Chicago visits Minnesota.

Off this week are Denver, Kansas City, Oakland and San Diego.

Also returning to action Sunday is Dan Marino, who hopes to rescue Miami from a two-game slump against two of the league's worst teams, the Saints and Jets. He'll lead the Dolphins (4-3) against an undermanned Bills team that is without offensive stars Andre Reed and Thurman Thomas, plus coach Marv Levy, who is recovering from prostate cancer surgery.

"Anytime you bring anybody back, it's a shot in the arm," Marino said. "Hopefully I can provide that."

The teams will meet with first place in the AFC East at stake, as usual. Buffalo (5-2) has won 15 of the past 18 games in the rivalry, including eight of nine at Joe Robbie Stadium.

"It's usually between us and them for the AFC East, so we have to play good," Jim Kelly said. "Plus, we love the weather down there."

The last time the Bills visited Miami, they scored 35 points in the second half to win 42-31.

"It seems maybe the Bills are a little too comfortable coming into our place," Marino said. "We'll just have to turn that around."

Another team looking for a turnaround is Seattle, which will switch from Rick Mirer to John Friesz at quarterback while visiting Arizona, an opponent the Seahawks never have beaten.

Mirer's problems: He has thrown eight of his league-high 12 interceptions during Seattle's three-game losing streak. He got the hook during last week's 35-25 loss to San Diego, when he threw three interceptions and fumbled a snap, which the Chargers recovered for a touchdown.

"There's a lot of other people involved in what's been going on the last three weeks," said Erickson, who still calls Mirer his quarterback of the future. "I just felt Rick needed to step back."

Foster changes mind about Bengals

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Barry Foster's agent says the three-time Pro Bowl running back doesn't ever need to play another down of football "to get by."

Foster has returned to his suburban Dallas home after giving up on a two-day, $1 million experiment with the Cincinnati Bengals, leaving agent Jordan Woy to explain the motives of the mercurial player.

"Financially the guy is definitely set," said Woy, whose client was to conduct a news conference this morning at Woy's Dallas-area office. "From that standpoint it gives him the luxury to do this at age 26."

Nevertheless, for a man who's grown accustomed to more than $2.5 million a year in salary, Woy acknowledged, "you're definitely still passing a lot up."

Foster arrived on the Bengals' practice field Tuesday, two months' removed from being cut by the expansion Carolina Panthers.

Foster complained that he felt like "a 60-year-old running back" after his first workout in pads with the Bengals on Wednesday.

He told Bengals coach Dave Shula on Thursday morning that he had lost his desire to play in the NFL. He returned his reported $300,000 signing bonus check to the Bengals, checked out of his hotel room and departed for Texas.

"He told Dave he had changed his mind, that he'd decided football was over for him," said Bengals president Mike Brown, who had been Foster's biggest booster on the team. "From our standpoint, it's disappointing to work through something like this and then have it end so abruptly."

Even Woy isn't sure what lies ahead for Foster, an Arkansas product who burst onto the scene from a part-time role in 1992 with 1,690 rushing yards.

"I don't know if he's talking about hanging it up for good," Woy said. "I get the feeling that he's going to hang it up. The only thing he told me (Wednesday) night was his heart wasn't into it."

His erstwhile Bengal teammates said Foster's cameo appearance on their roster won't affect preparations for Sunday's game against Cleveland, which could be for sole possession of first place in the AFC Central.

"Taking nothing away from Barry, but if he wasn't here we'd be doing fine, and we'll still be doing fine," said fullback Jeff Cothran. "He may have been able to help us. But we didn't get to see it. Just like with Ki-Jana (Carter's knee injury)."

The Bengals had been considering using Foster in limited action against the Browns.

"The way I feel, I'd be more damaging to the team than I would help, that's for sure," Foster said after Wednesday's workout. "I'll play if they want me to, but I don't think that would be the best thing to do."

Carter, the Bengals' No. 1 draft in April, suffered a season-ending knee injury after signing a seven-year, $19.2 million contract.

There was little warning of Foster's change of heart. He told a news conference Tuesday, when his signing was announced, that he was glad to be back in the NFL, was impressed with what he saw of the Bengals in their 27-9 televised victory over Pittsburgh last week and wanted to be a part of Cincinnati's offense.

Two games could decide Big 8 champ

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer

The Big Four of the Big Eight are playing each other Saturday.

Kansas will play at Kansas State for more than just state pride, while Nebraska and Colorado, the only conference champions in the last seven years, play in Boulder, Colo.

The balance of power in the Big Eight hasn't shifted completely, but it is tilting a little toward Kansas. A team other than Nebraska or Colorado can win the conference title for the first time since 1987, and the Kansas schools have the best chance to break the hold.

Sixth-ranked Kansas is 7-0 for the first time in 27 years, and 3-0 in the conference. No. 14 Kansas State, which finished 1-10 only six seasons ago, is 6-1 and 2-1 in the conference after last week's 49-25 loss to Nebraska.

Kansas State coach Bill Snyder and Kansas coach Glen Mason met for the first time in 1989, when the teams were a combined 5-17.

"I can think of the first time that Glen and I played and it was very competitive," Snyder said. "We both took it as serious as anyone could. All of us were excited about the ballgame. We wanted to play it and play it as hard as we could."

In addition to defending its national championship, second-ranked Nebraska (7-0, 3-0) is looking for its fourth straight undisputed Big Eight title and 21st consecutive victory - the nation's longest streak. The Huskers take the second-highest scoring offense in the nation (54 points) against the seventh-ranked Buffaloes (6-1, 2-1), a team they have beaten the last three times.

In a game that has major Rose Bowl implications, No. 13 Southern California and No. 17 Washington play Saturday in Seattle. Both teams are undefeated in the Pac-10, and the winner will have the inside track on playing in Pasadena, Calif., in January.

The Trojans (6-1, 4-0) are coming off a 38-10 loss at Notre Dame last week, a defeat that shattered their national title hopes.

Egyptian Christians keep faith alive in squalor of Cairo

Coptic priest credited with bringing water, literacy, hospital, school to community

EDITOR'S NOTE - Amid the squalor of the city known as the "Mother of the World," a glimmer of light shines from the top of a hill. Its rays of hope fall upon the zabbaleen, the poorest of Cairo's poor. They credit a modern miracle-worker, a priest. And they recall an ancient legend.

By ANTHONY SHADID
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - Tucked away in Cairo's rich medieval lore is an obscure, 1,000-year-old Christian legend. It tells of a Muslim caliph, a Christian bishop and a barren hill.

The hill still looms over Muslim Cairo. What Christians find there today keeps the legend alive.

As the ancient story has it, the caliph demands that the bishop move a mountain as a test of faith. If he fails, he must convert to Islam or face exile or death. Terrified, the bishop prays and fasts for three days. Then he has a vision of a humble, one-eyed Christian carrying a jug of water.

He finds the man, a tanner. They pray at the foot of the hill. An earthquake rumbles and the hill moves three times "so that the sun would be seen from under it." His mission over, the tanner known as St. Samaan disappears, and the awe-struck caliph admits Christianity is a true faith.

Today, atop the barren expanse of the hill, known as Moqattam, stands one of the most unusual features of the modern city: a complex of amphitheaters, churches and offices built for Egypt's beleaguered Christians, who make up 10 percent of the country's 60 million people.

It's a five-minute walk up Moqattam from a wretched, gamy labyrinth of alleys, shanties and piles of trash meshed into the most miserable of Cairo's slums, the settlement of Manshiet Nasr. Its 20,000 Christian inhabitants, known as the zabbaleen, collect Cairo's garbage. They are Egypt's untouchables.

The church and the settlement are rare instances of hope in a city of smashed dreams where Cairo's centuries-old nickname, "Mother of the World," mocks the crushing poverty that makes everyday life here a Sisyphean struggle to survive.

Together, they revive the old legend - and tell the story of the Rev. Samaan Ibrahim.

The priest is a burly man with an unruly gray beard falling to his chest. Over 20 patient years he has brought water, literacy, a hospital and a school to the zabbaleen. He has attracted a following of thousands of Christians, poor from the area and rich from elsewhere. They come every Thursday to the vast amphitheater he built atop the hill.

The Coptic Orthodox Church, to which Ibrahim belongs, is often characterized as tradition-bound, slow to respond to modern needs. But even some critics praise the 53-year-old priest's maverick ways. He is known as a headstrong iconoclast who looks more Hell's Angel than Mother Teresa.

"That man, more than any other man, is the real dynamo behind anything and everything that has happened in the settlement."

"That man, more than any other man, is the real dynamo behind anything and everything that has happened in the settlement," said Laila Kamel, a prominent social worker in Manshiet Nasr.

The Moqattam hill traditionally marked the barrier between the Nile's fertile valley and the desert. The zabbaleen arrived there 30 or so years ago, their donkey carts and pickup trucks bringing garbage from Cairo's wealthy. They sort out and sell the scrap paper, plastic, metal and glass for a few Egyptian pounds.

Outside their tin homes, trash piles up in doorways, at street corners and along the road. Pigs root among fetid banana peels and rotting vegetables. Barefoot children with matted hair play nearby.

Ibrahim arrived in 1974 with a social and religious mission - a calling almost unheard of among Egypt's conservative Coptic Orthodox priests who consider their work solely spiritual.

"Father Samaan was able to bypass or overcome the Orthodox rituals and became more realistic," said Marlyn Tadros, a human rights activist who worked in Manshiet Nasr. "He crossed the line and started communicating with the people."

On a typical morning, the phone in his simple office rings every three minutes. He grabs a receiver in each hand, barking like a drill sergeant. "What?" he shouts into one. "Why?" he bellows into the other.

He meets a delegation from the Finnish Embassy, which financed a school for 500 children and a hospital that performs 270 operations a year. He scolds an employee for not buying cheese, eggs and bread for the church office. Every so often, a villager comes to ask advice.

"Everything has changed," said Ibrahim proudly.

"There wasn't water; now there is water. There wasn't electricity; now there is electricity. There wasn't education, and now there is education."

As for the garbage collectors, "God changed them," Ibrahim said. "When their heart changes, their lives change. If you change what's inside, you change what's outside."

Some social workers complain that Ibrahim's ministry is too hierarchical, that it refuses to put decisions in the hands of the zabbaleen. It treats them as a flock rather than as a community.

Others complain that not all the money that rich Christians donate to Ibrahim's church trickles down to the poorest. "They don't give any money to us," said Kamal Marzouq, 38, a neighborhood resident.

But in the bleak alleys of Manshiet Nasr, where villagers believe in Ibrahim's power to heal or purge demons blamed for bad luck, adoration of the priest is nearly universal.

"Father Samaan is Manshiet Nasr," Said Gundufli, a 26-year-old butcher, says as he hacks at meat in his shop.

Around the corner, next to piles of newspapers and plastic bags, an old woman from southern Egypt sits, her face furrowed with age. "He's the best one," she says. "He's a shepherd."

The priest was an active Coptic layman long before he arrived in Manshiet Nasr. A trash collector in Ibrahim's neighborhood of Shubra pleaded in vain for two years for him to visit the settlement.

Finally, Ibrahim says, he heard a voice telling him to go. When he arrived in 1974, he prayed atop the Moqattam hill every Sunday for three weeks.

He recalls that in the final week a gust of wind deposited a torn page from the Bible at his feet. It was Acts 18:9, 10.

"Do not be afraid; keep on speaking, do not be silent," the passage read. "For I am with you and no one is going to attack and harm you because I have many people in this city."

From then on, he began tramping through the settlement with a loudspeaker, singing hymns and inviting people to prayer meetings at a garbage collector's house. They sat on cardboard, smelling the overwhelming stench of a pigsty outside.

Then came the church, a tin building with a roof of reeds. Its first service attracted nine people.

Twenty years later, overlooking Cairo's most prominent mosque and within earshot of the Muslim call to prayer, stands the sprawling complex built since that first meeting.

Five churches are spread across the plateau, a short walk up a dirt path from the original church. Most impressive is an amphitheater, built below a ridge, that seats thousands.

A huge screen hangs over the stage, showing scenes of lighthouses and flowers or the words to hymns. During the Thursday sermons, Ibrahim himself is pictured on the screen.

His sermon - mixing real life with Scripture - drifts from booming threats to a growl to a whisper, then back again.

He throws his hands up, takes off his glasses, waves his cross and points his finger. When the audience chatter gets too loud, he abruptly

Uncertainty in Mexico affects peso

McALLEN, Texas (AP) - Peso exchange along this part of the Texas-Mexico border has slowed to a trickle in the wake of political and economic uncertainty by investors.

Only a handful of customers were changing pesos for dollars Thursday at the Texas Money Exchange. Jose Barreto, an employee, said many money exchange houses were not buying pesos at all.

"It's just an indication of the risk," said David Caldwell, a local investment consultant. "It just isn't worth the risk to invest in Mexico. That's what the market is telling Mexico. Now they will have to raise interest rates to compensate for the currency loss."

The peso closed at 7.235 to the dollar on Thursday - a fall of about 6.2 percent from Wednesday's close of 6.785 to the dollar.

Officials said it was the peso's lowest level since it closed at 7.45 on March 9, preceding the announcement of a $50 billion U.S.-led international rescue package.

Also, Mexican stocks were among the losers as the U.S. stock market fell to its lowest level since Sept. 8.

The drop in peso value is bad news for anybody trying to market goods to Mexican nationals, said Randy McLelland, chief executive officer of Texas Commerce Banks for the Rio Grande Valley.

"It will probably have a positive impact on those exporting goods from Mexico," McLelland told The McAllen Monitor. "It can't be good for merchants here."

Mike Allen, president and chief executive officer of the McAllen Economic Development Corporation, agreed.

Mummy Museum in Mexico big attraction to very curious

By CLARA G. HERRERA
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
GUANAJUATO, Mexico - If you're inclined to laugh at the face of death, here is one of the few places where it might appear to laugh back.

The mummified remains of 107 men, women and children on display at the Mummy Museum create all kinds of visions in the minds of visitors who quench their curiosity by paying the $1 admission to view them.

These mummies aren't the remnants of some ancient culture discovered by an archaeologist. One wears boxer shorts. Another wears black stockings that sag to her ankles and her hair remains in one long braid. Some of them lived as recently as 18 years ago.

Limited space in the city cemetery led to a system where people stay buried for only five years unless their living relatives pay a tax for the grave site. When workers started exhuming bodies, they discovered that the minerals in the soil had preserved those people who now sit, stand and lie on red carpet behind glass in the museum.

In Guanajuato, 58 miles west of San Miguel de Allende, it's not considered strange to pay the price to see the mummies. Slews of vendors sit outside selling candy shaped like the mummies, skull mugs, T-shirts and coffin key chains.

But, for some people who think mummies are beyond their threshold, there are other things to see in the city. That same soil rich in mineral that preserved these people also made Guanajuato's Valenciana mine one of the leading silver producers in history.

The mine has operated since the 17th century and still daily produces 150 grams of silver and one gram of gold from the 150 tons of rock taken from the shaft.

It costs less than 50 cents to tour the mine. The price is at least worth it to snap a photo of the makeshift altar built to the Virgin Mary. It stands on a coal car filled with a variety of mineral rocks, cemented down so they can't be pilfered. This stands on a railroad track.

Near the mine is the Baroque-styled Church of La Valenciana, built by the mine's owner for his workers in the 18th century. It's one of the richer churches in Mexico, with 24-karat gold reaped from the mine covering the altar. Outside the church are tables of vendors selling souvenirs. Take advantage of Guanajuato's cheaply priced silver jewelry.

Both the mummies and the mine are on the outskirts of the city. Within the city is the birthplace of muralist Diego Rivera, which is now a museum named for him. Admission is $1. Rivera, who was the husband of artist Frida Kahlo, is one of Mexico's most famous artists.

Rivera only lived in the home a short time where he and his twin brother were born. (His twin died at age 3.) But the home contains beds, furniture and photos of him and his family. There are at least four rooms that display a variety of Rivera's smaller pieces in pencil and oil.

Art is also found in the architecture around the city. Guanajuato has its share of churches - each with a unique style.

The Church of the Virgin of Peace is almost blinding inside. It is completely painted lemon yellow and trimmed in gold. Its Spanish/European influence is evident in the flowers and swirls painted on the ceiling, and in the huge pipe organ.

It is the exact opposite of the Church of the Compania de Jesus, built in 1747 a part of the city's university. The year it was built lends a major clue to the mixture of Spanish with pre-Columbian overtones within the church.

A sculpture of the Virgin Mary dressed in white is surrounded by angels. At their feet is a menacing black and red demonic mask with bared fangs. In another corner in glass is a life-sized statue of Christ on his knees carrying the burden of the cross. Yet a closer look shows a grotesque view of bloodied ribs and burned flesh.

It is definitely a mixed medium of beauty and the macabre - just like the city.

After seeing all of this, then maybe visitors will gain the courage to visit the Mummy Museum. (No visit to Guanajuato is complete without it.)

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please print this for all those folks who have vacationed at a friend's or relative's house. Specifically, I'm talking about the ones to whom we gave our guest room with the private bath. The ones we fixed all those meals for -- we set the food in from of them, then removed their empty plates and washed and dried the dishes while they watched. The ones we took sightseeing. The ones who watched as we fed parking meters, paid for lunch and left the tip. The ones we dropped off at the airport.

They did say, "Thanks -- can't wait to come back next year for another vacation." Ann, please tell them to stay home. -- No Name, No City, USA

DEAR NO NAME: I can't tell them anything because I don't know who these people are -- but you do. I suggest that you clip this column and have it handy when you hear from the freeloaders announcing that they are coming again. Time has a way of dimming the memory.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The essay, "Ten Cannots" was wrongly attributed to Abraham Lincoln for years. In 1970, Morris Kominsky revealed the truth in his book, "The Hoaxers." Kominsky said "Ten Cannots" was widely distributed among employers who wished to indoctrinate their employees. Since then, it has been used by right-wingers.

While on the subject of hoaxes, Kominsky also had one about you. It seems one of your readers heard from a friend that you had been in jail. He wanted to know if this was true or false -- your readers had the right to know.

You replied as follows: "Your friend is right. I was in jail in February 1959. I spoke to several hundred inmates of the Cook County jail and am delighted to report it was one of the most attentive audiences I've ever had. Not a soul walked out."

DEAR JEAN: I plead guilty, as charged. The story is completely accurate. It was an unforgettable experience and extremely rewarding.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: An average of three children a day -- approximately 1,100 children under the age of 15 -- die each year in house fires. About 3,600 children are injured in house fires each year. In fact, fire is the No. 2 cause of accidental deaths among children under age 5, placing them at double the risk of dying in a home fire as the rest of the population.

The most startling aspect of these tragic statistics is that 90 percent of fire deaths involving children occur in homes without working smoke detectors. The most troubling -- and the most common -- evidence found in the rubble of a home fire is a smoke detector with an old battery or no battery at all.

To end these needless deaths and injuries, the International Association of Fire Chiefs is teaming up with Energizer brand batteries to urge parents and kids nationwide to adopt a simple, potentially lifesaving habit: changing the batteries in their smoke detectors when they change their clocks back to standard time in October.

This simple act is the most effective way I know to help Americans make their homes a little bit safer each year.

Ann, please help us save lives by reminding your readers to change their smoke detector batteries when they turn their clocks back one hour this weekend. -- Dave Paulison, first vice president, International Association of Fire Chiefs, Metropolitan Dade County Fire Department chief

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of 11Chronicles Chap. 24 and 11Kings Chap.12 consolidated

ZECHARIAH - A YOUNG BOY

FROM THE TIME THAT KING JOASH IS PLACED UPON THE THRONE OF JUDAH, AS A YOUNG BOY, HE RELIES ON THE HIGH PRIEST, JEHOIADA, TO GUIDE HIM - BUT, WITH THE DEATH OF JEHOIADA, THINGS CHANGE....

JOASH HAS DONE MANY WORTHY THINGS ON THE ADVICE OF THE PRIEST, INCLUDING THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE IN JERUSALEM....

...HOWEVER, THE POLITICALLY MINDED PRINCES OF JUDAH NOW GAIN HIS CONFIDENCE....

...BECAUSE THE PRINCES SAY IT IS POLITICALLY EXPEDIENT....

WHEN WE HONOR THE GODS OF NEIGHBORING KINGS, WE SHALL HAVE THEM AS FRIENDS AND ALLIES IN TIME OF WAR!

...THESE PRINCES ARE ONLY CONCERNED WITH THEIR OWN COMFORT AND SAFETY....

...BUT THERE IS STILL ONE MAN IN JERUSALEM WHO IS ADAMANT IN HIS BELIEF THAT JUDAH MUST NOT TURN AWAY FROM THE LORD, MUST LOOK TO GOD, ONLY, FOR SAFETY AND NOT TO POLITICAL ALLIANCES! THIS IS ZECHARIAH, SON OF JEHOIADA, AND COUSIN TO KING JOASH - AND NOW HE WAITS AT THE KING'S DOOR TO SPEAK IN SORROWFUL ANGER!

New 'Golden Age of TV' here, according to three magazines

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Revealed: TV-watching doesn't have to be harmful!
 That conclusion is independently drawn in no fewer than three recent magazine articles, each heralding a new Golden Age of Television (and no, they don't mean fool's gold).
 Nobody is saying that most TV programming shouldn't come with a warning label: "Caution: Don't You Have Anything Better To Do?"
 Nonetheless, TV, according to Time magazine, is even better today than during its vaunted Golden Age of the 1950s.
 According to Entertainment Weekly, TV is better than movies.
 According to the New York Times Magazine, TV beats theater and can even rival books.
 Curiously enough, this trilateral vote of confidence comes as the nation's viewers greet the fall season with a resounding ho-hum.

 Among the record 42 new series, none has emerged as a clearcut hit. The most critically acclaimed, "Murder One," is being murdered in the ratings by its gurney-whizzing adversary, "ER." The four major networks' combined prime-time ratings during the first four weeks slid by 7 percent from the same period last fall, according to Nielsen Media Research.
 But despite, or maybe because of, this inauspicious start, a trio of articles have sprung to TV's defense.
 A couple of weeks ago, Entertainment Weekly's cover boasted "10 Reasons TV is Better than the Movies."
 Shows winning the magazine's favor included "NYPD Blue," "The X-Files," "Frasier," "Roseanne," "Murder One," "Homicide," "The Larry Sanders Show," "Law & Order" and even - for sheer entertainment as compared to most movies out there - the cheesy "Melrose Place."

 "While the season's movies fall flat," EW crowed, "the small screen flies high."
 Time magazine is no less bullish in its current issue, headlining the article that TV's "Real Golden Age Is Now."
 To the above honor roll Time adds "The Simpsons" and "Seinfeld," "ER" and "Mad About You," "Friends" and "NewsRadio," and such poorly attended newcomers "American Gothic," "Ned and Stacey" and "The Bonnie Hunt Show," which Time calls "all odd and worth watching before they get canceled."
 While generally immune to the sitcom's charms, Charles McGrath is partial to many of the dramas listed above, and adds to the roster "Picket Fences," "Chicago Hope" and last season's "My So-Called Life."
 In his cover story for this week's New York Times Magazine - titled "Want Literature? Stay Tuned" - McGrath, editor of the Times Book Review, hails TV's best dramatic series as "prime-time novels."
 While the prime-time novel, he cautions, will never replace the kind that comes printed in black type on white pages, he considers the dialogue on TV's dramas "good enough to be in a book," and calls TV more of a writer's medium than either movies or Broadway - or even many books and magazines.
 There are several reasons why TV's story-telling currently glows. Most of all, it has to do with the very thing that often serves as television's curse: time, time and more time to fill.
 But with the right people in charge - a Steven Bochco, a David E. Kelley - TV can work wonders with that time. Week after week, the story can unfold and the audience get hooked.

By JANE JESCHKE
San Angelo Standard-Times
WINTERS, Texas - The Rev. Jim Hanson believes that helping terminally ill patients have some control of their lives, however long those lives may be, is one of the most important aspects of hospice care.

And bringing this "dignity for the dying" care to the rural community of Winters, has earned Hanson the 1995 Texas Rural Minister of the Year award.

Hanson, of St. John's Lutheran Church, received the award Oct. 2 during the 50th Annual Town and Country Church Conference at Texas A&M University in College Station. Sponsors of the award are Progressive Farmer Magazine, the Texas Agriculture Extension Service and A&M. The recognition program provides a showcase of the outstanding work done by nominees in small towns and rural communities.

"One institution that's been fairly constant in a community - the first to come and the last to leave is the church, and the people in the extension service focus on that," Hanson said.

"In small towns, the church still has a voice and the clergy person has leadership abilities. You use that on a broader base and the community welcomes that. The church and the state cooperate and its been a healthy relationship."

Hanson first wanted to bring hospice care to Winters in 1992, a year after he arrived at the church.

He had earlier become involved in hospice work while serving at churches in Minnesota and Odessa and had seen firsthand the difficulties and expenses for rural people to trek to larger cities for hospice care.

In Winters, he discovered four women who had received hospice training, but he also learned that larger cities were reluctant to extend their services to smaller towns because of their own extensive commitments within their communities.

Hanson then chaired a committee that convinced Hospice of Abilene to bring its program to Winters.

Through a series of newspaper articles and civic speaking engagements, Hanson stirred up interest in the program.

At the first training session, 32 volunteers from throughout the community showed up, Hanson said, adding that this was one of the largest classes Hospice of Abilene had ever trained at one time.

"Volunteers went through 20 hours of training," Hanson explained. "They teach you such things as how to come into a room with a terminal patient, what to say and what not to say, and grief counseling."

"Also the physical part of it, such as what body fluids are dangerous." Volunteers may also run errands for the patients, take them to the hairdresser, or simply sit with them.

Hanson's care for the terminally ill also extends to Coleman, where he is the Hospice Chaplain. His wife, Ramona, is also a hospice volunteer there.

"This is a renewing thing," Hanson said of his work with hospice. "It's a way that many of us can be little Mother Teresas. It's dignity for the dying."

Of the 41 years Hanson has spent in the ministry, all but six of those have been in rural ministry.

The worst jolt most of us ever get is when we fall back on our own resources.
