FM 1058 can be lonely road

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

If you want to find out how lonely a trip down Farm to Market Road 1058 from the Texas-New Mexico state line to Hereford can be, just have car trouble.

You can walk for 15 minutes without seeing another car, truck, human being or animal on a Sunday afternoon on the stretch from Bootleg to the state line.

Soon, the road won't be so desolate.

FM 1058 is the short-cut of choice for folks who want to fish, ski, or just have a good time at Ute or Conchas lakes in New Mexico. Give Mother Nature another month, and the road will take on the look of a well-traveled freeway, with various types of vehicles pulling various types of boats. If it's Friday or Saturday, the steady stream will be westbound, headed for the waters in eastern New Mexico. Come Sunday evening the stream is heading east, homeward bound.

The country between Hereford and the New Mexico line, a 37-mile stretch of highway with about 15 of those miles under reconstruction, changes drastically about 10 miles west of Hereford.

From where the road turns from West Park Avenue to the Harrison Highway on Hereford's western edge, the road bisects fairly good farm land with decent irrigation water available.

10 miles down the road, the landscape changes from furrowed farm rows and hot wire fences to grassland and three-strand-barbed-wire fencing.

In March, it's all cattle country. In years when there's been some moisture during the winter, the cattle graze the scattered wheat fields along the first 10 miles. This year, the grazing's a little short. Most of the cattle are in one of the three feedlots that are alongside 1058.

In the last 27 miles, the cattle graze year-around, munching on grass and gathering around stock tanks at the bases of the windmills.

Along the 37 miles, you count over 50 windmills, beacons of some sort of civilization. You know that where there's a windmill there's cattle, and you know that where there are cattle people are not too far away.

If you go about six miles west of Hereford, you are in Westway. Westway has its own Baptist Church, a requirement for most all small Texas communities, and you can stop at Stitch In Time, a store where you can get your seat covers redone while you fill up the gas tank.

At this station west of Hereford, you can fill up and get reupholstered in one stop

About ten miles west of town, the fence changes from an occasional hot wire to a steady barbed wire. If you dare open a gate, close it behind you. It's the law.

the birds, scared off the road by the car, take roost in the shade of Aermotor windmills.

Out at Bootleg, road equipment rests at the tree-lined county maintenance barn, where Bobby Hammock resides. The maintainers and other equipment are a necessary part of life.

Besides FM1058, there are only two or three other paved roads in the area, so Hammock and his crew are kept busy with hundreds of miles of caliche to keep smooth.

One of those patches of pavement heads north from 1058, up to the Walcott school, where most of the kids in the area get their first-through-eighth-grade educations, and on up to Simms and Adrian.

Roads going south head to Friona.

Heading west, you keep an eye out for those windmills. The next stop is New Mexico, and on a Sunday afternoon where most folks are enjoying some family time on an unusually good Sunday in March, the company on the road is a little short.

It's 37 miles, at times long miles, to the state line.

If you head west from Westway, the table-top landscape becomes a little more rolling. You've left the strong-water farmland and headed into ranchland.

If you drive long enough, you even spy the last remnant of the true cowboy: There was a feedlot cowboy trying to adjust a pen of steers out at Barrett-Crofoot, which lines about two miles on the south side of the road.

And then it's you, the scattered cattle, and the birds.

A bird-watcher wouldn't have a total field day, but last Sunday there was everything from sparrows to what looked like some baby quail to cow birds to some type that were large and black, feasting on some bit of carrion on the road.

Like most of the area, the only trees to be seen were the ones that had been planted by some man some time. In the absence of trees

Smith ends an era with retirement

By KAY PECK

Friday was the end of an era of sorts as Helen Smith worked her last day with First National Bank, ending a fulfilling 36-year career in banking.

During her years with First National, Mrs. Smith has seen many changes. When she went to work for the bank in 1952, total assets were only $6 million, and 12 employees were on staff. Today, First National's assets average around $90 million and 40 employees are needed to handle the workload.

Smith did not grow up expecting to become a banker. Even when she first went to work for First National, she had no idea that she was entering a life-long career.

"In the beginning... I don't guess I really thought about it," Smith said. "Of course, it was an enjoyable place to work."

Although she didn't actively plan on staying with First National, stay she did. She was a teller for about six years before she moved to the exchange and collection department. In 1962, she was named cashier.

She was still serving as cashier as well as executive vice-president.

"I've had a good relationship with this bank," Smith said.

Smith was born in Wellington and went to high school in Dimmitt. She met her husband, Wayland Smith, during World War II when he was a soldier at the prisoner of war camp near here.

Hereford became home for the couple as they raised their daughter, Suzanne. Suzanne, now Mrs. Dale Collier, lives in Euless, and the Smith's have two granddaughters, Gabi and Jeni.

Visiting the grandchildren is high on Mrs. Smith's list of retirement plans. In addition, she has already begun her spring garden, and she and her husband hope to pursue their hobby of shooting skeet.

Mr. Smith retired a little over a year ago after 42 years with Brown Sheet Metal and Vasck Service and Equipment, Inc.

"You can tell we moved around a lot," Mrs. Smith said, tongue in cheek, when referring to her and her husband's stable employment records.

Orders offer 'safe haven'

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

A safe haven for victims of domestic violence is being made possible by utilization of an often ignored state law, say local legal authorities.

The protective order was enacted by the Texas Legislature in 1979, but it has not been widely utilized, according to Sid Ham, an attorney with Witherspoon, Aikin and Langley.

As a member of the advisory board of the Hereford Outreach Center program of the Rape Crisis-Domestic Violence Center, Ham has become familiar with the beneficial uses of the protective order.

Authorities in Deaf Smith County have been innovative in their use of the law, Ham said. Many, if not most, of the legal officials from across the state have essentially ignored the protective order.

According to the provisions of the law, victims of domestic violence or those threatened with domestic violence may apply for a protective order. If the court issues an order, the person accused of the violent or threatening behavior is restricted in his or her contact with the person applying for the order.

The main provisions of a protective order include three specific instructions to the individual accused of threatening or violent behavior. That person is: 1) forbidden from committing violence, 2) prohibited from communicating with the individual applying for the order in a threatening manner and 3) forbidden from coming within a specified distance

There has been a physical improvement in The Brand which has not gone unnoticed by some of our readers. We recently converted to a "rub-proof" ink in the printing of the newspaper.

The change was very apparent here at the newspaper office, because our hands are not nearly as black after handling the pages. You can now rub a finger across the page without getting a smudge.

A few readers have also noticed the difference. The new ink is made with soybean oil to obtain the rub-proof quality. The ink is much more costly, but we believe the benefits to our readers and advertisers is worth the difference.

He is always trying to learn something new."--John Scofield in Front Rank.

REVOLTING

Seniors don't like new Medicare tax

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - With his bolo ties and legs bowed by knee troubles, Daniel Hawley has the look of an aging cowboy bent on kicking up one more ruckus. That's precisely what the 64-year-old retired pilot has in mind.

Hawley and his wife, Marsha, 51, have launched a petition drive aimed at a decision by Congress to fund a new catastrophic health insurance program for old people by taxing elderly retirees.

They've attracted 140,000 signatures from people irate about the new Medicare law, which will tack $800 or more onto the annual tax bills of Hawley and other affluent retirees. It's a grass-roots rebellion, fed by retirees' fears that if Congress can put a special tax bite on them to pay for these benefits, the lawmakers will do it again and again.

The outcries have caught lawmakers by surprise. They were trying to patch some of the cracks in Medicare that had spurred sales of high-cost, low-benefit "Medigap" insurance policies.

They also wanted to free the aged of the worry of being bankrupted by catastrophic medical bills without adding to the deficit or raising taxes. When then-President Reagan signed the legislation last July 1, he noted with pride that it "follows the same premise as all sound insurance programs: It will be paid for by those who are covered by its services."

"That's a change in attitude in this country," boasted Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

The new law divides the $33 billion, five-year cost of benefits among the 33 million Medicare beneficiaries - not equally, but according to ability to pay.

All but the poorest pay a $4-a-month premium that generates 37 percent of the money needed. The other 63 percent of the costs are picked up by a "supplemental premium," or surtax, on the 40 percent of Medicare beneficiaries with enough income to owe at least $150 in federal income taxes.

What seemed like fiscal prudence to Reagan and Bentsen smacked of tax tyranny to Dan Hawley and his loosely knit band of confederates.

He claims the new Medicare benefits are minuscule and the costs are steep, and he inveighs bitterly against the "dictators" who railroaded "this big caboodle" through Congress.

Each morning's mail brings another stack of letters, petitions and a few small checks for Hawley's cause.

"In Florida we are all hopping mad. Who was on the committee that passed this abomination?" wrote a Punta Gorda, Fla., man.

A Pottstown, Pa., retiree sent Hawley a copy of the note he now sends charities informing them that until the new Medicare act is repealed, "all of our funds previously available for good causes such as yours have been confiscated by the U.S. government."

Bentsen defends the legislation and argues that many of the critics are misinformed.

Medicare remains "the best buy in town" for its 33 million elderly or disabled beneficiaries, including the 1.6 million seniors who will be hit with the maximum tax, Bentsen insists.

Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., who co-authored the legislation as chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on health, said even "those who pay the highest conceivable premium are still getting a $1,500-plus tax-free subsidy from the federal government" on their Medicare benefits.

While 33 congressmen and one senator - Harry Reid, D-Nev. - are sponsoring bills to repeal the Medicare catastrophic law, few insiders expect Congress to retreat from the biggest expansion of Medicare in two decades and one of the few major pieces of social legislation passed in the Reagan era.

But the bickering and the backlash over the catastrophic act show the difficulty of finding ways to remedy social ills without adding to the deficit.

When Reagan first proposed expanding Medicare in 1987 to insure the elderly against catastrophic hospital bills, he proposed a flat $4.92-a-month premium. He also wanted to make Medicare beneficiaries pay a deductible, now $564, for each of their first two hospital admissions annually.

Congress added an expensive prescription drug benefit that starts in 1990, and made Medicare beneficiaries liable only for one $564 deductible for hospitalizations each year. But they agreed that the legislation could not add to the deficit.

Seniors with adjusted gross incomes above $43,000 for individuals or $85,000 for couples will pay the maximum surtax of $800. The surtax effectively raises their 15 percent marginal tax rate to 17.25 percent, and the 28 percent marginal rate to 32.2 percent.

Hawley won't disclose his retirement income, but "I will be hit by the maximum tax, as most pilots would be," he said.

Eight hundred dollars "isn't going to make me eat crackers instead of bread. It's the principle of the thing."

The Hawleys moved to Las Vegas in part to escape the burden of state income taxes.

They have a small pool in their back yard, but their house is mortgaged, and the 1979 Lincoln Continental in the driveway has traveled 116,000 miles.

Hawley rejects the argument that working people subsidize the benefits of all Medicare beneficiaries.

Medicare is "part of government. That's part of the cost of a democracy. You (must) never mean test the benefit," he said.

Hawley said he doesn't "go out looking for causes," but by his own telling, this Medicare fight is the latest in a series of lifelong battles with misguided management.

The proud son of a union printer who flew submarine patrols for the Navy in the Pacific during the war, Hawley was a pilots' elected representative during 28 of his years in the cockpit, and helped found the Allied Pilots Association in the 1960s when American pilots split from the Air Line Pilots Association.

For eight years, he was chairman of the Federal Aviation Administration's Air Traffic Procedures Advisory Committee, and he tells of locking horns with agency brass on safety issues.

Hawley's petition warns that the elderly could wind up footing the bill for "most of the medical costs of AIDS patients." With the AIDS medication AZT costing up to $10,000 a year per patient, Hawley fears that elderly people with big drug bills could get frozen out of the program.

The prescription drug benefit has a cap so that only those with the steepest drug bills are helped. Some 5.5 million beneficiaries - one in six - will get Medicare reimbursement for some of their drug costs.

But relatively few AIDS patients live long enough to get Medicare.

Some 10,000 AIDS patients receive Social Security disability payments, but only 900 have been on the disability rolls for the two years required to qualify for Medicare, according to Social Security spokesman Phil Gambino.

Despite its name, the Catastrophic Coverage Act makes only a small dent in the financial problems confronting families trying to pay for long-term nursing home care, which costs an average of $25,000 a year. The new Medicare law relaxes restrictions on the income and assets an elderly person can own when a spouse needs Medicaid to help pay nursing home bills.

The uproar may make lawmakers leery of ever attempting to cover long-term care costs under Medicare.

Hawley isn't saying when he will deliver his petitions to Congress. "Eisenhower didn't tell the Germans when he was going to land," the pilot said. "When the snowball is rolling down the mountain, you don't stop it halfway."

WANTED
JOHNNY ADAME is a 23-year-old Hispanic male, 6 feet tall, 160 pounds. Adame is wanted on three charges of delivery of marijuana in Hereford. Warrants have been issued for his arrest. If you know where he is, call 364-CLUE.

CRIME OF THE WEEK

A reward is being offered by Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons involved in the burglary of a Snap-On Tools bus on March 13, 1989 in Hereford.

The burglary occurred while the bus was parked at a business on West U.S. Highway 60. Items taken in the burglary included small, red, Snap-On floor jack; a large, red, Snap-On floor jack; a black satellite dish receiver; and a gray satellite dish receiver.

A reward of up to $300, to be decided by the Crimestoppers board, will be offered to persons offering information on the CLUE Line, 364-CLUE or 364-2583. If an officer is not available to talk to you, a recorder will accept your information. You may remain anonymous by using a code number. Rewards may be offered for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons involved in any felony crime in Deaf Smith County.

of the home, school or work place of the applicant.

Other provisions can be included in a protective order, but violation of the three listed above is a Class B misdemeanor.

"It really helps the enforceability for police," said Assistant District Attorney Mark Adams.

Before the protective order was enacted, police were very limited in what they could do when called to the scene of suspected domestic violence. Unless there was visible evidence of a physical attack, it was difficult for officers to find grounds for an arrest.

If a permanent protective order has been issued, the respondent (person accused of violence) has committed a crime simply by being present in or near the applicant's home. Officers are immediately able to remove the respondent from the scene.

"The basic position of the state is that we want to protect people from violence," Adams said.

Sid Ham sees the protective order as an alternative to divorce in many cases. Prior to enactment of the protective order, a victim was very limited in alternatives when seeking protection from violence.

Basically, an individual frequently had to file for divorce in order to seek the court's protection. In some instances, this was a permanent solution to a temporary problem. "The protective order proves to be a more appropriate vehicle (in some cases)," Ham said.

Not only is the protective order an alternative for divorce, but it is also useful when a victim is reluctant to file charges against a family member.

"A lot of wives will do a protective order because they don't want to file charges," Adams said.

State law limits the term of a protective order to one year. Both the applicant and the respondent are expected to seek some means of solving the conflict during that period.

"We don't give one year divorces," Adams said.

Although the protective order is proving to be an effective tool, it can also be abused. Since the district attorney's office is able to file for a protective order, in some instances, victims may be tempted to use this means to get an offender "out of the house" without having to retain a private attorney.

In an attempt to help prevent this form of abuse, state law forbids anyone from applying for a protective order if the couple involved has already filed for divorce.

Local authorities usually refer protective order candidates to the local Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center for counseling prior to filing for that order. This helps to eliminate potential abuse of the law.

The protective order is intended for those individuals "who are truly at risk of being a victim of future violence," Adams said.

Apparently, the protective order is doing what it is intended to do in Deaf Smith County. Domestic disturbance related complaints are not reappearing in the district attorney's office in most cases where protective orders are issued.

"If it hadn't worked, I'd be hearing about it," Adams said.

The protective order appears to be an effective reminder to violent individuals that they are responsible for their actions.

"It tells the aggressive person that the county and state have had notice of what they're doing," Adams said.

Of course, issuance of a protective order is no absolute guarantee of safety. Those who are committing or threatening violence are already breaking the law. The protective order is simply a specific reminder that the law applies to the individual.

"It's already against the law to assault your wife," Adams said.

The lack of wide-spread use of the protective order by private attorneys may be economically motivated, Ham believes. A married couple which might otherwise opt for divorce proceedings may be able to work out their problems during the term of a protective order.

Some attorneys may feel that the protective order is "stealing business" from them, Ham said.

Rose campaign set

The Deaf Smith County Historical Society is sponsoring a Mother's Day Rose Campaign that will beautify the E.B. Black House gardens while commemorating loved ones. For the price of $10, a rose will be designated in the name of a loved one and that name will be inscribed on a plaque located on the east side of the Black House. Planting of the roses must be done in April, so memorials should be requested by contacting Deaf Smith County Museum at Box 1007, Hereford, or calling 364-4338 by May 1. Although the rose campaign is held in conjunction with Mother's Day, the person commemorated does not have to be a mother but can be any loved one. Getting ready to plant a rose bush in the gardens are, from left, Betty Kriehauser and Mary Zinser. Both women are members of the Society, which is responsible for the upkeep of the gardens.

Serve broccoli with blue cheese

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Freezing makes some cheeses crumbly, but that's no problem with blue cheese because you usually crumble it before using it. So wrap leftover blue cheese in moisture- and vaporproof wrapping and store it in the freezer for up to six months.

BROCCOLI WITH BLUE CHEESE

10-ounce package frozen cut broccoli
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
Dash salt
1/2 cup milk
1-3rd cup crumbled blue cheese
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
Cook broccoli according to package directions; drain well. In small saucepan, melt butter; stir in flour and salt. Add milk all at once. Cook and stir until bubbly. Continue 1 to 2 minutes more. Stir in cheese and mustard. Stir in broccoli; heat through. Makes 4 servings.

Woman's Health

INFERTILITY IN MEN By Robert C. Park, M.D., College Of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

When a couple tries to have a baby, and the woman does not become pregnant, the man and woman may secretly wonder whose "fault" it is. The first thing an infertility counselor will tell them is that it's not anyone's fault, but that infertility is a medical condition.

A couple is considered infertile if the woman has not become pregnant during one year of intercourse using no contraception. If this is the case, an infertility specialist will want to test both partners to find the cause of the problem.

The man may be tested by the infertility doctor or by a urologist. The doctor's first step is to obtain a medical and lifestyle history. This is to eliminate any obvious medical conditions or health habits such as heavy drinking or a recent or childhood illness that might have caused infertility. Five percent of infertility cases can be traced to problems with sexual techniques so the history taken will include questions about a couple's sex life.

If a health and medical history do not reveal anything that might be the cause of infertility in the man, he will then be asked to provide some sperm samples. For a pregnancy to occur, the man must have an adequate number of sperm that are healthy and able to swim successfully through the woman's cervical mucus. The most common cause of poor sperm is a condition called varicocele--varicose veins in the scrotum. More than three-quarters of varicocele can be corrected with surgery.

If the amount of semen produced is low, but otherwise healthy, artificial insemination with the man's sperm may result in pregnancy. Fertility drugs also can help some cases of low sperm counts.

Previous infections or congenital defects can cause blockage in the testes. These problems sometimes can be corrected by surgery. Generally, if no sperm are found in the semen regardless of the cause, a process called donor insemination is the only alternative for the couple. In this process, sperm from an anonymous donor is used to inseminate the woman artificially.

The first step to infertility testing is to find a doctor who you and your partner can work with and trust. If you choose an ob/gyn, he or she can help find and coordinate treatment with male infertility specialists. The second and perhaps most important step is to make sure you keep the lines of communication open.

Girls invited to rush info tea

Information concerning sorority rush will be presented during today's (Sunday) tea for area senior girls who are college-bound.

The annual tea will begin at 3 p.m. in First Baptist Church parlor and will be hosted by Hereford Panhellenic Association. Members and prospective members of HPA will meet at 2:30 p.m. in the parlor prior to the tea.

Girls and their mothers are cordially invited to attend the tea and may ask any questions concerning the rush process. Attending the tea does not obligate a girl to join any sorority; the purpose of the tea is to provide information concerning sorority life. For more information, call Gaye Reily at 364-1830.

Resident's grandson named Main Title Winner recently

Justin Anthony Porto, two-and-a-half-year-old son of Andy and Catherine Porto of Los Alamos, N.M. and grandson of Martha Emerson of Hereford, was named "Main Title Winner" in the Petite Star Division of the Tiny Stars American State Pageant held at the Clarion-Four Seasons in Albuquerque, N.M. March 11.

The pageant was comprised of entrants from around the state. Contestants for the pageant were judged and scored on physical appearance, personality and disposition.

Justin is now granted the opportunity to represent the state of New Mexico and compete for the National Main Title in the Petite Star Main Division in August at the Westchester Marriott-greater NY area.

At the national event, agents will be on hand for judging and arranging of auditions for national bookings. Each National Main Title Winner will be promoted to be placed in a paid National TV

Hints from Heloise

CLEANING EYEGLASSES

Dear Heloise: If you wear eyeglasses you probably know that to clean them you should use soap and water and a cloth to wipe them dry. Very little soap is needed to do this job. Here's my hint to make this task easy.

The next time you empty a plastic bottle of dishwashing detergent, don't throw it away. Instead, fill it with water. The detergent remaining in that otherwise empty bottle mixed with all that water will give you a solution that is quite powerful enough to clean your eyeglasses but will still rinse off much more readily than full-strength soap or detergent. — Bill Preston, Santa Ana, Calif.

IF CHILD OUT OF BALANCE

Whenever your child's body is thrown out of balance, his posture suffers and so does his back and other parts of his body.

The bad habit of slouching in a chair to read or watch television may cause this. So can carrying heavy loads of books to school. When this results in poor posture, backsache or other symptoms of physical distortion, treatment may be needed to set things right again.

Backpacks for books are recommended because they help distribute the weight evenly. So is good posture -- standing erect, walking at a good pace and keeping the stomach in. If your child's body is out of balance, however, sooner or later you can expect him to complain of persistent aches in his back or other parts of his body. This may suggest a possible spinal or pelvic problem that needs correction. Pain-killing drugs can reduce this discomfort, but they won't cure the cause. What may be needed is treatment to properly align the spine and sacroiliac and instruction in how to maintain good posture and good health.

Silent consent

Not too long ago, I saw a re-run of the classic movie, "Gone With the Wind." I still remember the public reaction and the howls of protest when the film was first shown. The film makers had the audacity to allow Clark Gable to utter the word "damn" in one scene!

We've come a long way from that point in society's character Sadly, the trip has been downhill as far as public and private conduct is concerned. In fact, it may be difficult for students at Hereford High School to perceive what our society was like just 25 years ago.

Gutter language was not acceptable in plays and movies, nor in mixed company.

Obscene and pornographic literature was not publicly available on the newstands, and nudity was a no-no for movies. Co-ed dorms at colleges was unthinkable.

The word "drugs" applied to prescribed medicines and marijuana was used by just a few people.

How did we get away from the principles of decency and strong moral beliefs? For one thing, too many citizens didn't want to get involved—they tolerated these changes without voicing their strong objections. A Swiss author, Henri Frederic Amiel, explained it well with this phrase: "Truth is violated by falsehood, but it is outraged by silence."

The silence of good people may have been more of a contributing factor to this nation's moral decay than the greedy people who use our freedom of expression laws to promote such conduct. As a wise man once said, "On any scale wherever a person perceives right and wrong, silence turns out to be a vote for wrong."

The process can be reversed only if enough citizens of moral conviction have the initiative and courage to stand up and be counted.

Small-town life

Wanta know what I like about a small town... and Lamesa in particular? Lots of things, but most of all the opportunity to have a Saturday morning breakfast out with friends, to walk by a booth and watch the maneuvering for a cuppa coffee ticket between two other friends.

To watch a fellow pause at a booth and visit with his friends while the other edges toward the cash register to pay out... the resulting kidding and laughing on how it all happened.

I like the opportunity a small town allows for a person to know almost everyone else--although I'll admit in recent years you see more and more unrecognizable faces in public places.

But, in a small town you're not a number amongst a number. You are an individual, you can hear a good joke, laugh with a friend, stop and visit with a host of folks on the way into an eating establishment and then visit with an entirely new circle of folks on the way out.

Only in a small town in America does one have such privileges and opportunities to work, to laugh, to visit, to enjoy the warm fellowship of good friends, good people, fun people to be around, wonderful people to the very core of their souls.

I'm sure it's like that in many small towns throughout the land. But, when you can have a ton of visiting, fellowship, laughs, a hearty breakfast and go to work without stopping at 25 traffic lights among thousands of cars--you fully appreciate what we have in Lamesa.

We've got a few old soreheads--and in due time I may be one of them(although I hope not)--but, on the whole we have a small town made up of a large amount of good folks who are grateful for their lot in life, for friendships that are deep and meaningful, for acquaintances that are solid, and by a large measure they enjoy each other.

Maybe that's the secret of living in a small town. You have to basically enjoy people from all walks of life. You have to enjoy the pace. You have to like the isolation from the maddening large metroplex.

You've got to accept what you have, like what you see, enjoy what life has dished up.

I don't know about you, but I like it and I cherish the rich friendships developed over the past 48 years.

And yes, I feel for those who don't feel this way or live in surroundings that aren't conducive to this way of life.

I'm grateful for the fact I can live in Lamesa, be a citizen of the United States, and enjoy a Saturday morning breakfast with my wife and friends, waited upon by a waitress who is friendly, courteous, very efficient--and on the way out I can watch the best of America passing before me... and it's a good America, one that I like.

Editorial opinion from around Texas

Eliminate the Back-biting

Republicans in the U.S. House of Representatives have sent out a message: No more Mister Nice Guy. By choosing Georgia bulldog Newt Gingrich as minority whip, the vastly outnumbered Republican members turned away from traditional, moderate leadership and towards confrontational politics.

Gingrich - replacing Dick Cheney of Wyoming, who left Congress to become secretary of defense - has a well-deserved reputation as a partisan fighter. In addition, there is no love lost between Gingrich and House Speaker Jim Wright. But there is too much work ahead for all the members to allow rancor and back-biting to dominate this session. Gingrich will best serve his party, his colleagues and his country, by keeping this in mind.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

Earlier this week I was quoted in The Brand in regard to my thoughts about the Texas prison system and the recent quota system they have instituted.

The quote was accurate as printed in the paper and correctly expressed my frustration and feelings about the quota system.

If the quote or comment offended anyone I am sincerely sorry.

While I'm sorry about my choice of words the Texas Department of Corrections and the Legislature should apologize to the people of Texas for their failure to address the prison overcrowding.

I would like for our residents to know that unless steps are taken by the legislature, Deaf Smith county (and all other counties) are going to have to pay millions of dollars to house state prisoners. Deaf Smith County's cost could be an additional $1 million per year, not to mention additional jail space in the very near future.

If you are concerned about the jail problem contact your legislators immediately and express that concern. They need to hear from you.

Sincerely,
Tom Simons

Letters to Editor

Dear Editor:
When Joe Citizen looks at the forest and the trees of the jungle called Congress, is it any wonder that he is confused about which side Congress is on?

Recently, George Mitchell, Senate majority leader, made this comment: "When Americans believe that public office is a way to private enrichment, or that elective office is available only to the wealthy or well-connected, then the essential element of trust between the people and their government is lost and with it government's authority."

Why does Joe Citizen have reasons to mistrust Congress? There may be many reasons, but here are a few:

- *The INF Treaty and the Summit Agreements made in conjunction with it have given the Soviet Union help and prestige at a time when its slaves are restless and the USSR economy is in shambles. Soviet influence in American education along with US-USSR political, cultural and economic cooperation as a result of the agreements will help keep the slaves of the communists in subjection while Americans move ever close to slavery.

- *The Tax Reform Act of 1986 has aptly been described by Louis Rukheyser as an act of war by Congress against the American people.

- *A multitude of "social legislation acts" without Constitutional authority has bound business and Joe Citizen with paper chains of tyranny.

- *The betrayals of Vietnam, Ethiopia, Nicaragua, El Salvador and dozens of other countries into Communist terror will be a blot on our honor for decades to come.

All Americans of whatever race, creed or color mistrust Congress because the men in dark suits with red ties continue to destroy the rights to life, liberty and property while they smile at the cameras and strengthen Joe Citizen's enemies with credits and talk of merger.

Restore the Constitution! Obey it! Bind Congress with the chains of the Constitution! That will restore trust.

Sincerely,
M.H. Hays,
Amarillo

The Penultimate Word

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

The morning paper jarred me awake. Now potatoes and bananas are going to kill me. Last month it was apples--can you imagine apples being bad for us? All of my life I have been told that eating an apple a day would almost guarantee immortality.

Then it was grapes from Chili. And the apples and the grapes joined a long line of things that are going to kill us all.

And if the food doesn't get me, then just let them cut down one more tree in the Amazon Rain Forest and the whole environment will be gone.

If they don't cut down that one more tree, then the hole in the ozone layer is growing and one day someone will squirt one too many squirts of hair spray and it will all be over.

I liked it better in the old days when the only one trying to scare me into radical change was the preacher with his charts about the second coming. His charts didn't work much. The current reports about food will not do much either.

I know all of this is serious. I know we should be concerned, but I am tired. I just can't get as excited as I should any more. There are just too many causes and too many crises. Enough is enough.

Every once in a while I want to say, "Hey folks, the leading cause of death is life." We ain't going to live forever, and I have a feeling death ain't the end of it all, and therefore death ain't the worse thing that could happen to us, so cool out a little.

Live a little. Eat an apple.

Warm Fuzzies,

An AP News Analysis

GOP faces long odds in House fight

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - The good news, according to the million-dollar campaign manager, is that Republicans are at rock-bottom strength with the 174 House seats the party now holds. In the era of nearly invincible incumbents, that also is their bad news.

While that means Republican strength probably won't go much lower, it also means the odds are prohibitive against any swift comeback from 34 years without a House majority.

Ed Rollins, who was a White House political adviser to Ronald Reagan and managed his landslide re-election campaign in 1984, is the man assigned to find the way back. It involves the political equivalent of heavy lifting, but it pays well - $250,000 a year.

That price tag was not popular, stirring resentment among some of its presumed beneficiaries, since House members are earning $89,500 and didn't dare to vote themselves a raise this year.

Rollins is the new co-chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, the party's House campaign organization. He says his goal is to make Republicans competitive for the 218 seats that make up a House majority, which they haven't had since the 1954 elections. According to Rollins, that would put the GOP in position to reclaim the majority in the mid-1990s.

They start at what Rollins calls a low point, 174 out of 435 seats. That's down from 192 after Ronald Reagan's election in 1980. Rollins figures there are 160 safe GOP seats, in districts so securely Republican that they'd stay that way even if the national campaign organization shut down and did nothing to help.

But seats that look safe come with no nas demonstrated Tuesday when the Republicans lost the Indiana House seat once held by Vice President Dan Quayle. Democrat Jill Long took over a seat that had been Republican since 1976. That gives the Democrats 259 House seats, with two vacancies awaiting special elections.

Republicans are trying return the favor next week in Alabama, where a special election will fill the seat left vacant by the death of Rep. Bill Nichols, the longtime Democratic incumbent.

That overall margin probably insulates the Republicans against significant House losses in 1990. The party holding the White House usually has suffered House setbacks in mid-term elections, because the president's party normally gained swing seats on his coattails in the previous election. But President Bush had no such coattails - the GOP lost three House seats in 1988.

So there is no realignment pending in 1990, in either direction. But the sheer size of the Democratic margin and the better than 9 out of 10 likelihood that an incumbent will be re-elected confront Rollins and the Republicans with a mountain to be scaled on the way to anything approaching House control.

Rollins already has started Republican groundwork for the reapportionment that will follow the 1990 census, which is expected to shift 18 House seats out of the Northeast and parts of the Midwest, most of them to the southern and southwestern states that have become Republican territory.

But there will be restricting to reflect population shifts even in states that do not lose or gain seats. Rollins says Republicans will have the technical and legal know-how, and the political message to take advantage of the changes.

There's no way to guess the outcome, but the last time a reapportioned House was elected along with a president, in 1972, Republicans won nearly two-thirds of the open seats.

Rollins talks of emerging from the next two elections with net GOP gains of 30 seats, saying that would put a re-elected President Bush within range of a House majority for administration programs during a second term. He said it would be a philosophical majority, like the coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats that gave Reagan his early House victories.

If Rollins can deliver that kind of progress, he'll not only earn his money, he probably should put in for a bonus.

He advocates a strategy based on confrontation rather than compromise, telling reporters that Republican House leaders always should think in campaign terms. "We are in combat," he says. That hard line fits the style of Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater and Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, newly-elected as the No. 2 man in the minority leadership.

It doesn't mesh with President Bush's ideas about bipartisanship in administration dealings with the Democratic Congress. But Rollins doesn't argue; he says whatever works to keep the president popular works to the advantage of GOP candidates.

Rollins says confrontation be part of a two-track strategy, with Republicans going after Democrats back home in their House districts even while the Bush administration seeks bipartisan support for its proposals in Washington.

But when Bush needs Democratic votes there is going to have to be some political bargaining.

And if that leads to a call from the White House asking GOP political operators to lay off Democrats who may side with the administration?

"I hope Mr. Atwater is the one who gets that call," said Rollins.

Hagar inducted

Kelby Hagar has been inducted into a national honor society for freshmen at Angelo State University. Eligibility for Alpha Lambda Delta is restricted to those students who have completed 15-45 hours of coursework with a 3.5 or better grade point average.

Hagar and other initiates will be honored with an initiation ceremony and banquet set at 1 p.m. April 15 at Zentner's Daughter Steakhouse in San Angelo.

Hagar is the son of Kenney and Shannon Hagar of Hereford and is the grandson of Paul and Mary Kay Hagar and Reba Watson, all of Hereford.

Currently a freshman government major at ASU, Hagar graduated from Hereford High School in 1988.

On average, a woman's heart beats faster than a man's.

Museum adds to collection

The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum has recently acquired a painting by the early Texas artist Hermann Lungkwitz (1813-1891). The 14x20 oil on canvass, "Untitled (Texas Landscape)," dated circa 1865, was purchased at auction with funds provided by an anonymous source.

Born in Germany and trained as an artist in Dresden, Carl Hermann Frederick Lungkwitz first came to Texas in the early 1850s with his brother-in-law, the artist Richard Petri. They settled in New Braunfels, and later in Fredericksburg, where Lungkwitz painted landscapes of the Pedernales River country.

The Museum's newly acquired work was probably painted at that time. In 1866 Lungkwitz moved to San Antonio and set up a photography studio and later became a land office photographer in Austin. Only some 75 paintings are definitely attributed to Lungkwitz.

The Museum calls the Lungkwitz a significant addition to the Texas art collection. Curator of Art Michael Grauer said, "We have decided to focus our collecting activities on historical art of the American West generally, and the Southwest and Texas more specifically."

BABBLING BROOKS

By John Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

I never saw Pete Rose play baseball in person, but I saw him play on television a few thousand times.

Pete Rose was not a spectacular player. If you were to get a baseball for every home run he hit, you couldn't fill a bushel basket. He wasn't a particularly spectacular fielder, but he played an adequate second base, third base, first base and outfield.

But he could hit the ball. It has been said that hitting a baseball is the hardest single thing to do in sports. To hit a straight pitch thrown from 60 feet, 6 inches away is hard enough, but you have to deal with balls that curve either toward you or away from you, balls that rise or sink suddenly, and balls that float hither and yon by ways both legal and illegal according to the rules of the game.

Sometimes the ball is coming at you at almost 100 miles per hour while it's dipping and diving and curving and sailing. Sometimes it appears the ball is going to come at you at 100 mph, but is only going 70 mph.

It is up to the batter to determine what the ball is going to do; decide whether or not to swing at the pitch, and decide where to swing the bat to hit the pitch. All of these decisions must be made in less than one second.

Pete Rose hit more pitches, 4,256, for hits than anyone else who ever played baseball. Fittingly, he began his major league career the same year that the man who held the record for six decades, Ty Cobb, died.

Never in the history of the Baseball Hall of Fame has there been a unanimous selection. Not Babe Ruth or Ty Cobb or Mickey Mantle or Willie Mays or Hank Aaron or anyone else.

Pete Rose had a bona fide chance to be a unanimous selection to the Hall of Fame.

Until all of this gambling stuff came up. Even if Rose didn't gamble on baseball, he is probably going to be suspended for a year if it's proven that he bet on basketball or football or other sports.

If he only gambled on other sports, Pete won't be a unanimous selection for the Hall of Fame. There are enough good-thinking people that make such selections that Pete will probably get in, but it could be close the first year he is eligible in 1992.

If it is proven that Pete Rose gambled on baseball, he will probably be banned for baseball for life. He still might get into the Hall of Fame. That selection would be based on his playing career, and based solely on his playing career he should go into the Hall of Fame.

But if Pete Rose gambled on his own team, whether he bet them to win or lose, Pete Rose should never go into the Hall.

70 years ago, the Cincinnati Reds won their first-ever World Series from the Chicago White Sox. The White Sox were superior to the Reds, but things happened.

In 1920, after the season had started, the dam broke. The Reds won because the White Sox wanted them to win.

There's a movie about the White Sox, called "Eight Men Out," that tells some of the story.

There were players on that team, particularly Shoeless Joe Jackson, that were a heckuva lot better baseball players than Pete Rose. Jackson has better career stats than many of the people enshrined in the hall.

But Jackson, on purpose, didn't bear down. He was banned from baseball. And if you want a sure bet, you can bet Joe Jackson's plaque will never go up in Cooperstown, N.Y.

And if Pete Rose gambled on his own team, then his plaque shouldn't go up there, either.

Bush doesn't have to prove baseball interest

WASHINGTON (AP) - When President Bush steps to the mound and throws out the first baseball in Monday's major league opener in Baltimore, don't be surprised if he packs the old glove he wore for three seasons at Yale.

The first baseman's mitt, well-oiled and nearly black after 50 years of care, stays in a drawer in the Oval Office. The "McQuinn Trapper" has been rewebbed and is ready for use for any occasion, including games of catch with a grandchild on the White House lawn.

And as the 64-year-old chief executive recalled in an interview with Washington Post sports columnist

Thomas Boswell, there was at least one time he could have used the "claw."

That was an old-timers game eight years ago in Denver, when Bush was playing first after being "drafted" by Bill Dickey and Warren Spahn.

"When Tony Oliva came up, the second baseman kept yelling at me, 'Get back,'" Bush said in the interview, published today. "I said, 'Back? I'm on the damned grass. Whaddya want?' But the second baseman said, 'Back. This guy can still hit.' And damn if Oliva didn't pull one right down the line."

Bush, soft-pedaling his well-documented prowess with the glove, said he knocked down the ball when he should have had a clean catch. "My excuse on this part is I had a brand new mitt," he said.

Still, the crowd rose to its feet when Bush dived to his left, backhanded the Oliva smash and flipped the ball to Milt Pappas for the out.

Boswell described Bush as "the real thing" in an era when presidents must prove their attachment to baseball. Bush never missed a game during his three seasons at Yale, which played "a higher level" of ball than any team in the "postwar golden age of baseball talent," Boswell wrote.

Teammate Dick Tuttlebach, who went on to the New York Yankees and Washington Senators, compared Bush's defensive abilities at first base to those of Keith Hernandez, the first baseman for the New York Mets known for his glove work. "Absolutely superb, a real fancy Dan," he said.

Bush called himself a mediocre batter - his average at Yale was .264 - and once said he would have "floundered somewhere down in the minors" had he pursued the game professionally.

Instead, he's mixing statecraft and sport, taking Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak along for Monday's game between the Boston Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles.

Coaches: brink or pinnacle

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) - Last year, the student senate at Seton Hall University, weary of seeing the school's basketball team bring up the rear of the Big East Conference, passed a resolution calling for - what else? - the dismissal of coach P.J. Carlesimo.

It had been six years, one more than the traditional five-year plan, and the Pirates were not making much progress. Enough, the senators said. Get rid of the coach. And they were not alone. Other campus factions were after P.J.'s scalp, too.

Carlesimo survived the crisis only because the Seton Hall administration did not have a particularly itchy trigger finger at the time. And, a year later, he became the toast of South Orange, N.J., after leading his team into the Final Four.

Funny business, this coaching. In the three weeks since seedings were announced for the NCAA tournament, well over a dozen coaches were either fired or resigned. And that doesn't include Bill Frieder, who left Michigan for Arizona State two days before his team opened the tournament. The Wolverines shook off that shock by also making it to the Final Four.

Jud Heathcote, coach at Michigan State and president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, said the rash of dismissals had given his colleagues plenty to chew over at their convention this weekend.

"In this business, we have to live with a certain amount of insecurity and a certain amount of mobility and a certain amount of uncertainty," Heathcote said. "But the uncertainty takes over when a Don Donoher and a Don DeVoe, established coaches, get fired."

"After a period of time, one or two bad seasons shouldn't mean a firing. How much time?"

Twenty-five years? That's how long Donoher was at Dayton.

Eighteen years? That's how long DeVoe has been in coaching at Virginia Tech, Wyoming and Tennessee.

Eleven years? That's how long Bob Donewald was at Illinois State.

All three have winning records for their careers, something P.J. Carlesimo still does not boast. All three also were fired within days of each other after their seasons ended.

This could not have happened if they were faculty members instead of hired guns for their athletic departments, equipped with whistles instead of grade books. Professors don't hang around campuses for 25 years or 18 years or 11 years without tenure protection.

"What happened to the 'Three Ds,' (Donoher, DeVoe and Donewald) is the wrong message," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "It's hypocrisy and a sad commentary on our educational system. The presidents should step in if a coach is successful and knows how to coach. We need tenure and we should give up some of our perks for it."

Some heavyweight coaches like Bobby Knight at Indiana and John Thompson at Georgetown are inherently safe because of who they are.

Others, though, seem permanently on the edge. At Syracuse, Jim Boheim won his 300th game in his 13th season, reaching that plateau faster than anyone except Denny Crum at Louisville and Everett Case at North Carolina State. Still, the whispers follow him, even in the wake of a 30-win season when his team reached the round of eight before losing by three points to Illinois.

"If I win 3,000 games here and we lose a couple, there will be people who'll want to see me fired," Boheim said. "People remember the losses."

Knight called the rash of firings - he is particularly close to Donoher, DeVoe and Donewald - "a sick thing."

Some coaches move before they are moved. Vagabond Larry Brown has bounced back and forth between pro and college jobs, never fired, always moving on his own timetable.

That was what Frieder did at Michigan. Frequently under fire in Ann Arbor, he chose to accept the job at Arizona State on the eve of the NCAA tournament. When that happened, AD Bo Schembcher barred him from coaching through the tournament, turning the team over instead to assistant Steve Fisher, who had no prior head coaching experience.

Should Frieder have been on Michigan's bench the last three weeks? Smith thinks so.

"Professors can sign with another school but you know they'll finish the semester," he said. "Bill Frieder should have been coaching the Michigan team in the tournament. What he did was a decision he made for Bill Frieder."

And Heathcote understood that, even if he didn't exactly endorse it.

"He abdicated his obligation to the team," Heathcote said. "Ethically, we question that."

Then he remembered 'The Three Ds,' and 10 straight winning seasons for Donewald at Illinois State, Donoher's .614 winning percentage for 25 years at Dayton, and the 19-11 record and NCAA bid DeVoe took Tennessee to this season. schools give to coaches, though," he said, "and you wonder if coaches may not have to look out first for No. 1."

Rangers will be Strangers in '89

ARLINGTON (AP) - The Texas Rangers will be strangers on opening day. Bring your program.

There will be new owners, new players and former Dallas Cowboys' coach Tom Landry throwing out the first ball when Texas meets the Detroit Tigers on April 4.

Who are all these people out there at Arlington Stadium?

A group headed by George W. Bush, son of the president, and Dallas businessman Edward "Rusty" Rose became the fourth owner of the franchise on March 18.

The sale awaits approval from major league baseball but that's not an expected hurdle, considering that commissioner Peter Ueberroth put the buyers together.

Eddie Chiles, 78, sold out his 58 percent interest so he could pay off some bills and enjoy the upcoming season in peace. He will still hold the title of chairman of the board.

Bush promised him a spot in the locker room drinking champagne should the longshot-odds Rangers get into their first World Series.

The ownership change upstaged the Rangers' off-season trades that brought .300 hitters Julio Franco and Rafael Palmeiro into the lineup along with strikeout king Nolan Ryan, 42. He was snapped up by general manager Tom Grieve for $1.2 million when the Houston Astros decided not to sign him.

The trades, coupled with spring training in which the Rangers won nine straight games - the longest winning streak in club history, exhibition or regular season - have enthusiasm among Texas fans at an all-time high.

The club, which has been in Arlington since 1972 and never won even a division pennant, sold a record 6,500 season tickets.

Bush said the season will begin with the old Rangers' front office in place.

"So far our impression has been very positive," Bush said. "And one of the things professional business people don't do is cause major disruption in an organization that appears to be functioning well right now."

Which means general manager Tom Grieve, manager Bobby Valentine, and vice president Mike Stone are safe for the time being. Contracts for both Grieve and Stone run out this year.

Valentine's contract lasts through the 1992 season.

Rangers' third baseman Steve Buechele said the new Rangers on the field have made a big impact.

"All of the new guys are good positive guys to have," Buechele said. "They have blended in, creating a good chemistry. But I also think the singles, doubles and homers they are hitting makes for good chemistry, too."

Palmeiro, obtained from the Chicago Cubs along with pitchers

Jaime Moyer, and Drew Hall, has been moved to first base.

Former Rangers Oddibe McDowell, Pete O'Brien and Jerry Brown will be starting in centerfield, first base, and second base for the Cleveland Indians, respectively. They were all dealt away in the Franco trade.

Palmeiro, known mostly as a line drive singles and doubles hitter, showed surprising power in the spring, hitting a grand slam homer in one game.

Franco cements a troublesome spot at second base. He led Cleveland in hitting with a .303 average, 186 hits, and 88 runs.

"I was upset at first about the trade but now I feel at home," Franco said. "I think we could have a very good team."

"You've got to feel good when you see two .300 hitters like those guys in the lineup," said pitcher Charlie Hough. "We've got some pitching help, too. Nolan will be a great help to the young guys and he can still go out there and do a job. He's a marvel."

Hough, who will start for Texas in its opener against Detroit, has 111 victories in the last seven seasons for the Rangers, second best in the majors behind Jack Morris' 116.

Ryan, who has 273 major league victories, will make his Rangers debut on April 6 against the Tigers if his troublesome pulled leg muscles stay healthy.

"I'm pretty close to being on schedule," Ryan said. "I could have pitched a few more innings. I probably won't go more than seven innings in the opener."

Grieve said the Rangers should be vastly improved.

"We are in a good division but maybe the off-season moves we made will get us into the thick of the pennant fight in September," Grieve said.

Ticket office: 817-273-5222, Arlington Stadium, Dallas-Fort Worth Turnpike at Highway 360.

Ticket prices: $10 for reserved, $4 bleachers. Season ticket $810 per person. Parking $3.

Game time: 7:35 p.m. for night games (except for special occasions). 2 p.m. for day games.

Concessions: Soft drinks, hot dogs, hamburgers, nachos, from $1-4.

Astros: familiar pattern for '89

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Astros are in the same old holding pattern as they begin the 1989 season - loaded with pitchers and looking for a few more hits.

They have a new manager in Art Howe and a pair of new faces in the starting rotation, but there's still no big stick to help first baseman Glenn Davis.

The Astros fell to fifth place in the National League West last season and unless they can increase their run production, another second-division finish is not out of the question.

But there is no shortage of optimism.

"We're out to show people that we're a good club," second baseman Bill Doran said. "We're not the team that was out there last year, we're better than that."

Houston tied for 22nd in the major leagues with a .244 team batting average. The Astros drove in 617 runs and hit only 96 home runs, 24th among the 26 major league teams.

General Manager Bill Wood spent the off-season trying to get help for Davis, but talks failed to wrench Wade Boggs from Boston, Dale Murphy from Atlanta, or Danny Tartabull from Kansas City.

The Astros are depending on pitching and good defense to provide a better game plan than last season when they cratered in the final month for the second straight year.

The past two seasons, Houston has finished the season 11-20 and 11-18.

"We have six or seven strong starting pitchers and not many teams can claim that," said Rick Rhoden, slated as the Astros' No. 4 starter. "As long as you have pitching and defense, you have a chance."

Rhoden, obtained from the New York Yankees for three minor leaguers, and Jim Clancy, who signed as a free agent from Toronto, will replace departed Nolan Ryan in the starting rotation.

Ryan signed a guaranteed $2 million deal with the Texas Rangers following a contract dispute with the Astros.

Rhoden and Clancy join returning starters Mike Scott, Bob Knepper and Jim Deshaies in the rotation.

Third baseman Ken Caminiti will be the only new face in the starting infield that will include Davis at first base, Doran at second and Rafael Ramirez at shortstop.

Alan Ashby and Alex Trevino will share catching duties with Billy Hatcher in left field, Gerald Young in center and Kevin Bass in right.

The relievers include Juan Agosto, who set club records with 75 appearances and 10 consecutive victories last season, and stopper Dave Smith.

"It will be hard to repeat 10 victories, but I feel good about the season so we'll see what happens," Agosto said.

Danny Darwin, Bob Forsch and Larry Andersen round out the bullpen.

"We feel good about the starting five, they have the capability to be as good a five as we've ever had," Wood said.

"We've got a guy out there every day that's giving us a chance to win."

Howe may not be able to have a set batting order. He has experimented with Davis' supporting cast.

Bill Russell and K.C. Jones played on the 1956 American basketball gold medal winner in the Olympics in Melbourne and both later became stars and coaches for the Boston Celtics.

The 1936 National Football League championship game between the Green Bay Packers and Boston Redskins was played on a neutral field, the Polo Grounds in New York. Green Bay won the game, 21-0.

Three of basketball's all-time greats, Oscar Robertson, Larry Bird and John Havlicek failed to win MVP honors in the NCAA post-season tournament.

"I would like to have a set lineup," Howe said. "I know when I played here there were times I didn't know where I'd be playing. The bottom line was if I was in the lineup I didn't care."

Without Davis, the Astros' offense would be much more dismal.

Davis ranked second in the National League last season, hitting 30 home runs while playing in the spacious Astrodome.

He led NL first basemen in fielding and his 99 runs batted in ranked fifth in the league.

Bibb Falk: from Chisox to UT fame

By BILL LITTLE
University of Texas

Editor's Note: The following is taken from a story written by Bill Little, director of the sports information office at the University of Texas at Austin. Little is co-author of the book "Kings of the Diamond" on Texas Longhorn baseball, announces the team's games and has known former Texas baseball coach Bibb Falk for years.

AUSTIN (AP) - Former University of Texas baseball coach Bibb Falk, who turned 90 this year, is the only survivor of the 1920 Chicago White Sox, where he took Shoeless Joe Jackson's place in left field after the 1919 World Series scandal.

Falk had hit over .400 for Texas in 1918-20, and was undefeated as a pitcher. In the summer after his senior year, he signed a contract with Chicago.

Sox Manager Bill Gleason offered to let Falk go to the minor leagues, where he would have a chance to play, but Falk chose to stay with the big club.

"I said, 'Naw, I had just as soon stay up here and watch these guys the rest of the season,'" Falk recalls.

Rumors had started that Chicago's loss to Cincinnati in the 1919 World Series had been fixed, and Falk said he asked pitcher Ed Cicotte, "What's this all about that ball game? And he said, 'Well, that's a lot of bull.'"

After Cicotte, Jackson and others were exposed as having taken money to throw the Series, Falk said, "I never saw those guys again. They were screwed up in the courts after that."

Rookie Falk replaced Jackson, playing errorless ball in seven games and batting .294.

"We had to rebuild the club," Falk said. "Otherwise, I would have been down in the bush league trying to work myself up from Wheeling (W.Va.)."

Falk would spend 12 years in the major leagues, finishing with a career average of .314 in 1,354 games.

In 1924, he hit .352, finishing second to Babe Ruth for the American League batting title, and in 1926 he batted .345, with 43 doubles, eight home runs and 108 runs batted in.

"Ruth and I played the same position, and in those days you left your gloves in the field when you came in," Falk said. "I would get his glove and stuff the fingers with a dead bird or something, and when he would pick it up, I would see him cussing me."

"They called me 'Jockey,' because I would ride certain players on the other teams that I knew," Falk said.

Still, despite the jockeying with Ruth, the two respected each other. In his autobiography, Ruth maintains that Falk, a 967 lifetime fielder, made one of the three greatest catches he ever saw. Falk says Ruth is the greatest player he ever saw.

Falk was traded from Chicago to Cleveland in 1929. He left there after hitting .304 in 1931 to become player-coach at Toledo in the American Association, where he batted .321 in his last year in professional baseball.

Falk had made his off-season home in Austin, where he grew up, and in 1940 his old college coach, Billy Disch, got sick and asked Falk to help him coach the Texas Longhorns. After Disch's health forced him to give up coaching, Falk was named to succeed him.

In 25 years of college coaching, his overall record was 478-176. His teams won 20 Southwest Conference titles and two national championships - in 1949 and 1950, finished second in 1953 and third in 1947, 1962 and 1963.

He retired in 1967 and was replaced by a former pupil, Cliff Gustafson, who now has the best winning percentage in college baseball.

The Longhorn baseball stadium, Disch-Falk Field, carries his name, and he is a member of the Longhorn Hall of Honor, Texas Baseball Hall of Fame, Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame and Texas Sports Hall of Fame.

One honor he hasn't received is the national Baseball Hall of Fame, but Falk says, "I didn't deserve it. Yeah, I hit .314, but there were a lot of guys who played a lot longer who hit .350, and they aren't in it."

Although Falk at 90 uses a walking cane, he is in remarkable shape, mentally and physically.

His weekdays seldom vary: a morning call to his stockbroker, coffee with a friend at 12:30 p.m., a rubdown and steam at mid-afternoon and, on a warm day, a Longhorn baseball game.

"When you get old and retired like me, hellfire, it would run you crazy staying at home 24 hours a day ... Nobody to talk to you but yourself, and he won't answer," Falk said.

It was Gustafson, the current Texas coach, who offers one of the better stories about Falk, an event that occurred years ago as the two men watched the major league Texas Rangers work out for an exhibition game with the Longhorns.

"You know, the game must have really changed from the big league days we all think about," Gustafson told Falk.

"Now there are pitchers who throw the ball 100 miles per hour, they play night ball, they have rugged travel schedules ... that's got to take its toll. Coach, you were a lifetime .314 hitter in the big time. What do you think you'd hit, say, in today's major leagues?"

Falk thought a minute. "Oh, about .270 or .280," he replied.

"There's that much difference?" said a surprised Gustafson.

"Hell no," said Falk. "But I'm 75 years old."

YMCA to offer Red Raider Day soccer

The Hereford and Vicinity YMCA will offer a youth soccer league to begin April 29.

Registration is underway through April 20 at the YMCA. The fee for soccer is $9, and league participants must be members of the YMCA. Youths age 13 and under may join the YMCA for $20 a year, and scholarships are available for youngsters unable to afford the fees.

League formation will depend upon enrollment, but officials hop to have divisions for students in grades 1-3 and 4-6, with separate leagues for boys and girls if there is sufficient interest. If necessary, the YMCA will combine boys and girls.

The YMCA also needs volunteer coaches during the upcoming season. Jerry Brock of the YMCA said knowledge of the game is not particularly important, and aids will be available to help coaches.

The annual Red Raider Day party for Hereford has been scheduled for April 25, it was announced Friday by Dave Hopper, chairman of the local Red Raider Club chapter.

All Texas Tech ex-students as well as interested Raider fans are invited to participate in the event, said Hopper.

The event includes a golf tourney beginning at 1:30 p.m. and a social hour and dinner at Hereford Country Club starting at 6 p.m.

The Red Raider Cup Matches will use a "Florida scramble" format. Golf chairman David Workman said a Raider coach or Tech representative will be placed with as many foursomes as possible. Grid boss Spike Dykes and basketball coach Gerald Myers are expected to lead the Tech delegation.

A fee of $35 will cover the green fee, cart rental, social hour and dinner. Golfers can telephone their entry to Mike Horton at Pitman Municipal Golf Course, or mail the entry to Dave Hopper, Box 150, Hereford. Sign-in time on April 25 will be 1 p.m.

Non-golfers, men and women, are welcome and encouraged to attend the social hour and dinner, noted Hopper. Price is $15. Others on the planning committee are Tom LeGate, Cal Mitts and Speedy Nieman.

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Giants and Yankees made baseball history in the World Series of 1921 and 1922.

Not only were they the first subway World Series but all the games were played in one park, the Polo Grounds in upper Manhattan. The Yankees did not open Yankee Stadium until 1923, when they again played the Giants and defeated them for the first time, four games to two.

The Giants won the 1921 series, five games to three. It was the last series to go eight games. In 1922, the Giants whipped the Yanks, four victories to none, with a fifth game ending in a tie.

Two men, Ty Cobb and Rogers Hornsby, have hit .400 or better in back-to-back seasons. Cobb did it for Detroit in 1911 and 1912 and Hornsby for the Cardinals in 1924 and 1925.

Perennial corn discovery could be big help

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor
 GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) - Rafael Guzman stepped gingerly down a narrow, twisting dirt path through tall, dense shrubs in the verdant Sierra de Manatlan Mountains southwest of Guadalajara.

In a clearing stood a thicket of tangled, golden corn stalks 8 feet tall. Instead of the usual ears, the stalks bore tiny seed husks not much bigger than pea pods, each filled with eight or 10 misshapen brown kernels.

"This is the thing that has caused all the controversy," Guzman said, reaching up to split a husk and let its kernels fall.

The discovery a decade ago of this distant relative of corn, called Zea diploperennis, ranks as one of the botanical finds of the century.

Zea diploperennis, part of a family of wild corn plants called teosinte, has three genetic properties that excite plant breeders: it is a perennial, meaning it grows back every year without replanting; each stalk produces multiple ears of corn, unlike single-eared U.S. grain belt corn, and it is resistant to more than a half dozen plant diseases.

Scientists hope they can use Zea diploperennis to breed perennial commercial corn. That could mean billions of dollars for farmers who would no longer have to replant each spring.

Perennial corn is probably decades away, scientists said at a meeting in Guadalajara last December to mark the 10th anniversary of the discovery. But commercial breeders could harness Zea diploperennis's disease resistance within five to 10 years, they said.

At that meeting, researchers also tackled the troublesome question of who should pay the bill to preserve Zea diploperennis.

So far, Mexicans have borne the cost. Their fear is that American seed companies will get the profits.

The plant's seeds are now stored in seed banks all over the world. There is no longer any danger it will become extinct.

But much of its value will be lost if it isn't maintained in the wild where it must continually develop resistance to new insects and diseases, scientists said.

The Sierra de Manatlan Biosphere Reserve is one of only three places in the world where Zea diploperennis is found. All are in Mexico.

The University of Guadalajara is spending $300,000 a year to maintain the reserve and operate its Las Joyas laboratory there.

"For accepting that challenge they deserve to be congratulated," said Garrison Wilkes of the University of Massachusetts in Boston, an authority on teosinte. "The world community is dependent on Mexico."

"Companies should pay and governments should pay," said Guzman, now at the University of Wisconsin but until recently the laboratory's director.

"Maybe it can be done through scientific cooperation between the United States and Mexico," he said, suggesting contributions of money, textbooks and equipment as well as exchanges of students and scientists.

His argument holds particular force in Mexico because of its foreign debt of $104 billion, the second largest in the developing world after Brazil.

Guzman and Hugh Iltis, a botanist at the University of Wisconsin, discovered Zea diploperennis long after it was thought to be extinct.

The story began in 1977 when Iltis sent Guzman a Christmas card with a drawing of Zea diploperennis on the front.

Botanists believed the plant, which had evolved in Mexico a million years ago, had become extinct early in the 20th century as Mexico's growing population converted wilderness to farmland.

The Christmas card gave Guzman, then a student at the University of Guadalajara, an idea. He took the drawing into the hills above Guadalajara and began to ask local farmers, the campesinos, whether they had ever seen anything like it.

"One campesino took an interest," Guzman recalled. "He said he knew this plant" and he led Guzman to it.

But Guzman wasn't convinced. He dug up the plant and took it to a university greenhouse. There Iltis and Guzman made the definitive identification. The discovery was announced in a scientific journal in 1979.

A short time later, Guzman and Iltis were on a seed collecting expedition in the Sierra de Manatlan Mountains when they stepped over a ridge into a valley of overgrown pastures broken by clumps of trees where the laboratory now stands.

They stopped. Zea diploperennis was growing all over the hillside.

"No botanist had ever been here before," said Iltis. "Can you imagine how we felt? We just stared at each other in disbelief."

Seed explorers face perils

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer
 MADISON, Wis. (AP) - Guatemalan militiamen brandished machine guns and ordered Hugh Iltis out of his jeep. Iltis, determined to protect his precious hoard, brandished right back.

"I showed anger - arrogance, if you like," the 63-year-old scientist recalled. "I flashed out my documents. They backed off. They let me go on."

This Indiana Jones-style encounter involved neither gold nor gems but, rather, a humble looking, weedy plant.

Iltis, an intense, burly, Czech-born botanist at the University of Wisconsin, is one of the world's foremost collectors of rare plant species. The precious cargo he was protecting from the Guatemalans several years ago was a genetic cousin of corn called teosinte. Because its genes may carry resistance to certain viruses, this scraggly plant may someday prove more valuable to mankind than gold.

As such plant-rich parts of the globe as the Amazon jungle are stripped and despoiled, scientists and governments are racing time to gather rare plant species and preserve them before they are lost forever.

Iltis has braved harsh climates and tropical sickness and says he has occasionally given "gifts" at customs posts to ensure the safe passage of himself and his botanical booty across borders. And he said plant hunters sometimes face tough practical and ethical choices.

Increasingly, Third World nations see the germplasm issue as just another instance of the United States stealing their resources. The last thing American botanists want to be accused of is plundering such nations.

Iltis said that in Mexico, Brazil and other countries that have placed "impossibly difficult" and time-consuming restrictions on plant exploration, U.S. scientists look for quiet ways around the regulations.

"You're supposed to collect with the permission of Mexico," said Iltis. "I never have, but I always share."

Iltis says he makes up for his intrusions by religiously sending back duplicates of any samples to Mexican scientists. He has also sent valuable plant reference books to colleagues in Nicaragua and other Central American nations he has explored.

Interviews with several plant hunters revealed that conservation, rather than profit, is most often their prime motivator. Some, like Iltis, join the hunt for purely scientific reasons that have nothing to do with improving agriculture.

"There is nothing in the world so thrilling to a taxonomist than to walk into an entirely new flora," he told a recent visitor to his university herbarium where row after row of special movable file cabinets house hundreds of rare species of corn and other trophies of more than two decades of expeditions to Mexico, Central America and the Soviet Union.

"For anyone studying natural history, life can never be long enough," he said.

Slowly, governments, including our own, have begun sponsoring and funding plant expeditions because rare species may contain genetic information that plant breeders and geneticists can someday use to help protect crops from viruses, drought or other life-threatening blights or hazards.

Yet despite the limitless potential of this genetic resource called "germplasm" and the high importance scientists attach to its preservation, the Department of Agriculture has financed an average of only four expeditions a year since 1956, according to USDA figures.

In the fiscal year 1989, a relatively flush year for germplasm exploration, the government is still spending only $150,000 to finance about a dozen missions.

Nevertheless, that is more than the mere $40,000 spent by the government as recently as 1986, according to Calvin Sperling, head of the USDA's plant exploration office, who has been on three expeditions to South America and the Middle East and plans to go to Turkey this spring to gather wild lentils, chick peas and pistachios.

Government-sponsored trips tend to be less hazardous than those undertaken by private scientists, said David Spooner, a USDA botanist who spends 2-3 months a year on plant expeditions for the government, mostly hunting potato species. Such trips usually involve sharing the fruits of the search with scientists from the host country.

But prior to his stint as a USDA explorer, Spooner recalls, he knew all too well the dangers of attempting the same thing on nothing more than a passport and plane ticket.

"I traveled throughout Latin America and I was hassled constantly," he said. In Mexico, police stopped him and asked for money, he said. In Honduras, police stopped him "every 50 kilometers" and challenged him to produce credentials.

"What do you do if authorities ask for bribes?" mused William Albersson, a University of Wisconsin plant research associate who has explored for plants in Colombia and other South American countries. "You pay it."

Study compares difference in U.S., Brazil soybean farms

WASHINGTON (AP) - A study by the Agriculture Department says that Brazil and the United States both have some cost advantages in the production of soybeans, but that the expenses vary greatly from region to region in each country.

Brazil is the chief competitor of American farmers in the lucrative world soybean market and is expected to harvest a record crop this year. Argentina also has been expanding production.

The United States has a big lead in global soybean output, producing 41.9 million metric tons of the world's 93.4 million tons forecast for the 1988-89 harvest. Brazil's harvest is currently indicated at 21 million tons, and Argentina's 8.5 million.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of soybeans.

Questions have been raised about costs of production and whether American farmers can continue to compete with the growing output in the Southern Hemisphere countries, particularly Brazil.

The study by the department's Economic Research Service offered no final answer to the debate but did pinpoint a number of regional cost differences in each country.

For example, the study showed that American farmers generally have an edge with lower "variable" costs of production, which includes expenses for fertilizer, weedkillers, seeds and labor. But "fixed" costs are higher than in Brazil. Those include general farm overhead, taxes, insurance and interest payments.

In the United States, using 1986 figures, the soybean regions with the lowest variable costs are the Corn Belt, Lake States and Northern Plains regions, with production costs averaging in a range $50 to $60 per ton. Those areas account for about 70 percent of the U.S. soybean area.

But when the Southeast and Delta regions are included, the average variable cost jumps sharply to $110 per ton.

"Given the substantial portion of U.S. soybean area outside the Corn Belt-Lake States region, use of data from this region alone may be inappropriate for making comparisons with Brazil and Argentina," the report said.

Looking at Brazil, the analysts noted that the traditional soybean area is in the south, including the states of Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catarina, Parana and Sao Paulo. These states accounted for about 92 percent of Brazil's soybean area in 1977 - but less than 64 percent in 1986.

"Therefore, it is no more correct to talk of the traditional region as typical of Brazilian production than it is to talk of the Corn Belt-Lake States region as typical of U.S. production," the report said.

Variable costs of production range from $102 per ton in Sao Paulo to $203 in Bahia, one of the regions of soybean expansion.

"In absolute terms," the report said, "these cost figures indicate that Brazil's cash expenses are high relative to the United States and that Brazil's soybean expansion has occurred despite high variable costs of production."

The report added: "One obvious hypothesis is that the low cost of land is driving the expansion of soybeans in Brazil."

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought 550,000 metric tons of U.S. corn for delivery in the 1988-89 marketing year that began on Sept. 1, the first in almost three months.

Although Moscow has been buying U.S. wheat regularly under an export subsidy program, it was the first significant corn purchase since Jan. 4, officials said Tuesday.

Farm price index rebounds

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department's index of prices paid to farmers bounced back in March from a dip in February and is at a record high level, on the average.

A preliminary report said Thursday that prices for raw farm products rose 0.7 percent from February to March, averaging 15 percent more than a year ago.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said that higher prices for eggs, broilers, wheat and potatoes were mostly responsible for the increase from the February average.

Lower prices for tomatoes, oranges, milk and strawberries partly offset the rise for the other commodities.

The overall index of prices paid to farmers in March averaged 149 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison.

John Buche of the department's National Agricultural Statistics Service said the index has been averaging at record monthly levels since it climbed to 149 percent in January from 145 in December. It dipped to 148 in February before gaining again in March, according to the preliminary figures.

Buche said the previous high for the "current series" of price statistics going back to 1965 was 146 percent in January 1984.

"Market egg prices were at their highest level since April 1984, while the average broiler price increased moderately from February," the report said. "Feed grain and soybean prices also increased from a month earlier, and the all-wheat price was at the highest level since February of 1981."

The preliminary wheat price for March was $4.16 per bushel, up from $4.03 in February. That was the highest wheat price in any month since it was $4.17 more than eight years ago.

Egg prices at the farm, reflecting massive cutbacks last year in the nation's laying hen flock, averaged more than 80 cents a dozen, up 20 cents from February and almost 30 cents from a year ago.

Most fruit and vegetable prices were down from February, and cattle and hogs also were down slightly.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Thousands of volunteers are needed again this year to help farmers comply with new federal conservation requirements, according to Agriculture Department officials.

A record 8,222 volunteers helped the department's Soil Conservation Service in the 1988 fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30, almost a fourfold increase from 2,223 the previous year.

Wilson Scaling, chief of the agency, said Monday the unpaid helpers will be recognized during National Volunteer Week, April 9-15.

"We're in the midst of one of the biggest conservation efforts in history, and volunteers are playing a key role," he said.

According to the preliminary March price figures, based mostly on midmonth averages, the index for livestock and livestock products as a group rose 1.3 percent from the February average and was up 8.1 percent from a year ago.

The department's all-crops price index for March was down 0.7 percent from February but averaged 23 percent above a year ago.

No new price figures for farm production costs were included in the February report. Those have been confined to quarterly averages because of budget cutbacks.

Although the projections are subject to change, USDA economists say that net cash income of farmers may be in the range of $48 billion to $52 billion this year, compared with a near-record of $57 billion in 1988. That is the difference between cash receipts and cash expenses during the calendar year.

Department economists say cash expenses are expected to rise moderately in 1989 with expanded crop acreages and costlier production inputs.

Food prices in 1988 rose an average of 4.1 percent, and USDA analysts say another increase of 3 percent to 5 percent is likely in 1989.

Land values in Texas High Plains going up

Land values in the Texas high plains have begun to rally after five years of decline, and experts observe land values increasing across the board after two years of good crops and high prices.

These findings are detailed by Dr. Charles E. Gilliland, assistant research economist with the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University, in his latest report, Rural Land Values in the Southwest: Second Half, 1988.

"Thirty-four percent of rural land was purchased for recreational use, rural homesites or subdivision of larger tracts, which underscores the state-wide market's reliance on a strong urban economy," said Gilliland. "Other motives were the bottomed-out market, reduced land prices, agricultural production or expansion and investment and speculation."

Texas panelists reported an average irrigated cropland price of $725 per acre with a median of $625. Observers forecast an average 2 percent increase in irrigated cropland values statewide. Nonirrigated cropland estimated values averaged $684 per acre with a median of $525 per acre, and are expected to remain stable during 1989.

AGRICULTURAL MILESTONES

UNTIL ABOUT 1930, sorghum was grown in Texas mostly as feed for livestock, including work animals, and occupied vast acreages. Moderately tall varieties were favored because they were said to produce more feed.

But in the late '20s, farm tractors became widely available and Texas farmers were quick to see their advantage. About this same time, combines began to replace binders in harvesting wheat.

It became apparent to a lot of people that a good, short-statured sorghum could be harvested with a combine. However, the best available varieties such as Wheatland, released by the Kansas Station, were susceptible to Periconia root rot which invaded Texas in the late 1930s.

Farmers were seeking more suitable combine-type varieties until World War II when Martin, Caprock, Plainsman, Combine 7078, Combine Kafir-60, Westland, Resistant Wheatland, and Midland appeared to meet the need for suitable combine-type varieties, for sorghum-producing areas from Texas to Nebraska.

These shorter and earlier-maturing varieties did not increase yields but did make the crop suitable for mechanical harvest. Station plant breeders had discovered that four dwarfing genes exist in sorghum; the above listed varieties and most hybrids in use today are the three-dwarf height.

Between 1930 and 1940, the number of horses and mules in Texas decreased by 600,000 head, which freed a huge acreage that had been devoted to feeding them. The beginning of the disappearance of such numbers of work animals and the advent of combine varieties changed sorghum from a feed for local consumption to a cash crop with many uses as a feed grain, or for industrial use or export.

During this same period, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station intensified research on sorghums to improve varieties, control harmful insects and diseases, and develop better production systems. Success in these areas of research, coupled with the development of hybrids in the mid-1950's, resulted in large gains in productivity.

It also made it possible for Texas to convert its livestock industry into a value-added product, with the tremendous expansion of feedlots and meat packing plants. The last half of this century has been a time of fantastic growth in both size and value of our Texas livestock industry.

De la Garza wants 10-year diet study

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Kika de la Garza is proposing a 10-year assessment of the health and dietary requirements of the U.S. population, with a special emphasis on the nutrition needs of the elderly, pregnant women, infants and children, and the homeless.

The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, de la Garza said his "Comprehensive National Nutrition Monitoring System Act" is designed to strengthen existing federal nutrition monitoring by coordinating the efforts of various agencies.

The legislation, co-sponsored by Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., also requires the secretary of agriculture to catalog all nutrition education programs and activities conducted by federal agencies, and seeks an assessment of nutrition education in U.S. medical schools.

Under the bill unveiled Wednesday, the secretaries of agriculture and health and human services would be required to prepare and implement a 10-year plan to assess the dietary and nutritional status of the U.S. population.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Human Services would be required to publish dietary guidelines by January 1990 and at least every five years thereafter.

An Agriculture Committee staffer said there is currently no law requiring that either agency publish dietary guidelines, although such guidelines are issued. The last guidelines were issued in 1985, and they are in the process of being updated.

The bill seeks an annual report on how the agencies are monitoring the nutrition status of the U.S. population and what their findings are, the staffer said.

"We in the Congress have a responsibility to see that every American has the opportunity to have an adequate diet," said de la Garza, a Mission Democrat. "Implementation of the program called for in this bill would for the first time give us the type of information the Congress needs to meet that responsibility."

COMPUTERS FOR KIDS

FREE

Together we can help our schools strengthen the skills of our kids.

Open Letter To All Area Residents:

Computers are a major part of our children's education today. They provide valuable "hands-on" experience that textbooks alone can't teach. Students who are fortunate to receive a basic computer education will have a distinct advantage in the work-place over those who have no computer skills. However, the reality is that computers are costly educational tools, making only a limited number available to students.

Moore's Jack & Jill and Nash Finch Company want to help change that and are pleased to announce its "Computers for Kids" program. The program itself is very simple. Jack & Jill shoppers need only save their cash register tapes, designate which school they would like to receive credit for them and then mail their accumulated receipt tapes to the respective school. When each school has collected $100,000 in receipt tapes, Jack & Jill will donate an Apple IIGS computer system - at no cost to the school. The "Computers for Kids" program will run from April 3, 1989 to December 31, 1989.

We welcome all area public and parochial schools to participate in this program.

See Moore's Jack & Jill Food Center for complete details.

Excited about pageant

Laci Black, daughter of Carey and Cindy Black, accompanies her mother to the Chamber of Commerce office to fill out the registration form to enter the 1989 Little Miss Hereford Pageant set for Saturday, April 15, in the Hereford High School auditorium. Deadline to enter the annual event, sponsored by the Women's Division, is Friday, April 7. Entry fee is $5 per girl.

Scholarship to be given by American Legion Auxiliary

A Hereford High School graduating senior girl will be awarded a $250 from the American Legion Auxiliary. The presentation will be made during the HHS Annual Awards Assembly in May.

To be considered for the scholarship, the applicant must be the daughter of a veteran of World War II or the Korean or Vietnam Wars. On the application form, dates of the parents' military service must be given including the date of entry and date of discharge. Also, the applicant must give her grade average for the last seven semesters as well as naming the college or university of her choice and its location.

Applications may be obtained from Willie Braddy at HHS or by calling Troyce Hanna at 364-1932 or Argen Draper at 276-5663.

Deadline to turn in forms is April 14.

Forms available for Little Miss Pageant

Entry forms for the 1989 Little Miss Hereford Pageant are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main St.

The pageant is planned Saturday, April 15, in the Hereford High School auditorium. The event, sponsored by the DSC Chamber of Commerce Women's Division, will be staged in two segments: all Cutest Miss division contestants will be judged at 5 p.m. that day and the remaining three division contestants will compete beginning at 7 p.m.

The entry fee is $5 per girl and the deadline to turn in forms is 5 p.m. Friday, April 7.

Tickets are priced at $2 per person and may be purchased at the C of C office or at the door the night of the pageant.

This year's theme will be Fantasy Land, according to the pageant's co-chairmen, Karen Keeling and Karen Bankston. Others assisting the women are Little Miss Hereford Pageant committee members: Eileen Alley, Sandy Stagner, Debbie Tardy, Betty Gilbert, Sue Malamen, Peggie Fox, Shelly Moss, Lacy Driver, Nell Rhoton, Jan Carroll and Jackie Murphey.

The pageant is divided into four divisions: Cutest Miss, pre-school and kindergarten; Miss Petite, first through third grades; Little Princess, fourth through sixth grades; and Junior Miss, seventh through ninth grades.

During the festivities, the 1988 Little Miss winners will be presented to the audience and will also distribute trophies to the 1989 winners. Last year's winners include Regina Lewis, Junior Miss; Barbara Banner, Little Princess; Cassie Abney, Miss Petite; and Michelle Leigh Weston, Cutest Miss. Two of the 1988 winners have moved and will be replaced by runners-up: Gabriela Gamez, Little Princess; and Toni Eicke, Cutest

Miss. All rules and regulations, including rehearsal times, are attached to each entry sheet. Co-chairmen emphasized that no mothers will be allowed at rehearsals. Also, all girls must be at rehearsals unless they have written excuses from their physicians.

Among those scheduled to perform at the pageant is the reigning Miss Hereford Deanne Hobbs.

For additional information call Karen Keeling at 364-5224, Shelly Moss at 364-2699 or Karen Bankston at 364-7318.

Women's Division to meet

The Hereford Country Club will be the setting of Thursday's 7 p.m. quarterly meeting of the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

President Donna West will conduct the business meeting when committee reports will be presented. A special program will also be presented.

A salad and dessert dinner will be served at a cost of $5 per person. Guests are invited to attend the event.

Reservations for the event are required and can be made by calling the Chamber office at 364-3333. Deadline for reservations is Wednesday at noon.

Hobbs cites opportunities as Miss Hereford

By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

Listening to Deanna Hobbs today, you wouldn't believe she was ever painfully shy and non-talkative.

"I was so shy I wouldn't even call in a food order. Now I call my college professors and chat with them regularly."

Hobbs, a bubbly, vivacious, 18-year-old, is the current Miss Hereford and is the daughter of Roy and Trudie Hobbs of 618 Ave. I. Her family really noticed the dramatic personality change in the brown-eyed brunette as they attended pageants she entered.

"My older sister was extremely quiet and shy. Mom laughingly told me, 'Calm down and be more like your sister--you cost too much!'"

Indeed, Hobbs was quite involved in high school activities, including drill team. Participating in pageants caught her attention when she was a seventh grader, and she attributes her loss of timidity to the local pageants.

"I was extremely nervous when I competed for the Miss Junior High title," Hobbs said. "I had to reach up to hold the arm of a very tall escort, causing my dress to raise so I kept clenching it. I was scared to death and thought I was going to die!"

When she survived the experience and claimed the first runner-up spot in the contest, she progressed to the Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant.

"I was attracted to the Miss Hereford Pageant because of the scholarship money; I wanted to go to college and knew the money would help." Hobbs entered the pageant while a junior at HHS and was amazed at how much fun it was.

"It was a great way to meet people and make new friends. Sometimes rehearsal got tough but we kept each other motivated. Most of all, it was my idea to enter the pageant--no one pushed me into it."

Yet there was a glitch in Hobbs' otherwise enjoyable pageant experience; she didn't like her entry in the talent phase of the contest. "My dance routine wasn't working and I knew I had to do something drastic. On the night before the pageant, I thought about doing a comedy sketch and asked Jennifer King to help me with it."

King was skeptical that Hobbs could pull it off on such short notice. Yet Hobbs memorized a comedic skit that she and King created based on the Oscar Mayer wiener song and Lily Tomlin's infamous Edith Ann character. It was then that the mischievous 'Sally Jean' was born and was Hobbs' talent entry in both pageants.

Hobbs' biggest fear during the comedy routine was that no one would laugh. "I was nervous during practice, but when I performed at the pageant, I couldn't see anyone because of the bright lights. And when the people laughed, it relaxed me."

Hobbs was chosen second runner-up at the 1987 Miss Hereford pageant but claimed the 1988 title. Through her pageant experience, she learned a hard lesson. "The most negative aspect I found was the fact that all the girls are so nice at first, but if you place in the contest, some of them turn on you."

As Miss Hereford 1988, Hobbs has taken an active role in community affairs, promoting the city while appearing at banquets, Fun Breakfasts, Women's Division meetings, and parades. Among her duties was participation in the Miss Wheatheart of the Nation Pageant held in Perryton.

The swimsuit competition and on-stage interview required at the Miss Wheatheart pageant proved challenging to Hobbs. "We had to practice in our swimsuits, which I thought was bad enough. It was more embarrassing at the pageant, though, when I looked out in the audience and there was a row of guys on the front. Now that was really embarrassing."

"During the evening gown competition, the judges asked each contestant various questions, such as 'What have you learned from your parents' or 'What have they learned from you.' I felt confident until they asked me a political question--I looked up at the ceiling and wondered, 'Why me?'" said Hobbs, whose forte is math and science.

Only 17 years old at the time, Hobbs was named fourth runner-up and received $500 in scholarship money for her efforts. That money, coupled with the $1,500 in scholarship money she collected from the two Miss Hereford pageants, is helping Hobbs attend South Plains Junior College in Levelland.

While Hobbs has become involved in the college's modeling club and 'Bleacher Bums', a group supporting athletics, she misses Hereford and dreads relinquishing her title during the upcoming April 22 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant. "I'll be sad to give up the title and I'll probably cry, but I'll always have very special memories of the experience," she said.

"I owe so much to the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, local merchants, and Hereford residents like Jay and Donna West, who are like a second set of parents to me. Donna helped me with such details as what dress or swimsuit to wear and she calmed me down more than once!"

Hobbs returned to Hereford during her spring break recently and attended the Coke party for Miss Hereford contestants. "Be in the pageant for yourself, not for someone else," she advised the teens. "Be confident and don't be fake because the judges can see through an act immediately."

The spunky teenager with a bright smile admits that she has learned a great deal from pageant competition. "I love to watch Miss America and Miss USA pageants on TV. I find myself critiquing the contestants while trying to determine the winners."

Although her past pageant experiences have had a positive impact on her life, Hobbs is enthusiastic about facing her future and whatever it holds. The freshman physical therapy major hopes to eventually practice the profession in a large city while delaying marriage plans for about 10 years.

Regardless, Hereford residents can be confident that Hobbs will never again suffer qualms in ordering food over the telephone; her newly found confidence surely won't let her starve.

Miss Hereford Pageant April 22

The 1989 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, April 22 in the Hereford High School auditorium.

"The Times of Your Life" will be the theme of the annual event. Tickets are priced at $2 per person and will be available at the door.

Sponsored by the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, the pageant is open to girls age 16-20.

Entry forms are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main and must be returned to that office by Friday, April 7.

Each contestant will participate in an interview by judges, talent competition, and evening gown competition. Co-chairmen are Lanette Leasure and Betty Drake.

For more information, contact Leasure at 364-5045 or Drake at 364-3263.

MISS HEREFORD 1988

Deanna Hobbs with some of the memorabilia collected during her reign. She will relinquish her crown to the winner of the 1989 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant to be held Saturday, April 22 at 7 p.m. in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Red Cross Update

BY BETTY HENSON

Special thanks is given to the volunteers working at the Red Cross office Thursday. Those helping were Nell Culpepper, Ruth King, Joan Mondragon, Rosemary Davila, Mildred Brown, Audine Dettman, Leta Eubanks, Alice Gilleland, Bert Brown and Karl King.

Congratulations to Mrs. Sharp's sixth grade class for completing an adult CPR class this past week. The class was held at West Central School.

Extra special thanks goes to Rosemary and Denise Davila for their work on the Red Cross Chapter's scrapbook. The book will cover newspaper clippings over the last 20 years. The scrapbook was displayed at the Volunteer Brunch Saturday at the Red Cross office.

Rosemary Davila and Benny Womble were announced as the Volunteers of the Year during the brunch. Davila has helped with all of the chapter's projects for several years and has given several hundred hours of volunteer service to the chapter. Womble repaired at least 18 bicycles, six tricycles and other wheeled toys this past year. He repaired bicycles the year before for the Christmas toys program. There is no way to estimate the number of hours he and his employees spent working on this project. Womble also helped to deliver the toys.

I would like to name all of our volunteers Volunteer of the Year each year. Without the more than 200 volunteers doing service, ranging from work in the clothing room through teaching safety classes and taking disaster preparedness classes, we wouldn't have a local chapter.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

Art Show, Sale scheduled

The High Plains Epilepsy Association will hold its fourth annual Benefit Art Show and Sale on Saturday, April 8, and Sunday, April 9, at the Sheraton Hotel in Amarillo.

The show and sale will feature the works of 10 noted Southwest artists, among them Pampa sculptor Gerald Sanders, Dumas watercolorist Manuel Franco, and Amarillo painters James Haney and Amy Gormley. The remaining six exhibitors from Taos, Santa Fe, Dallas and Colorado will show works ranging from jewelry, limited

All proceeds from the show and sale are used to provide medical and educational services for clients of the High Plains Epilepsy Assoc.

The show and sale is open to the public between the hours of 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Saturday and from noon until 5 p.m. on Sunday. There is no admission charge.

Persons wishing to attend the buffet and auction on Saturday night may obtain ticket information by calling Mr. or Mrs. Russel Robinson at (806) 353-2607 in Amarillo or Betty Brown, HPEA Executive Director, at (806) 665-8366 in Pampa.

YOUR EYES

GLASSES FOR CHILDREN

Optometrists examine children in a meaningful way. After a thorough examination, they may:

- Prescribe no glasses.
- Prescribe COMPENSATORY lenses that make up for deficiencies in the mechanical function of the eye such as nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism or crossed-eyes. These lenses will not change the way the eye functions when the glasses are taken off.
- Prescribe REMEDIAL lenses that encourage corrective changes in the eye itself. These glasses may be worn only for a short period.
- Prescribe DEVELOPMENTAL lenses to help children develop immature visual skills. For example, they can encourage right/left perception rather than right/left confusion. Eventually the eyes can do this without the lenses.
- Prescribe PREVENTIVE lenses to prevent the loss of visual skills or acuity sometimes caused by long periods of close work or visual strain.

Caudle, Perry vows spoken in California

Former Hereford resident, Linda K. Caudle of Turlock, Calif. and Howard O. Perry of Denair, Calif. exchanged wedding vows during an afternoon ceremony March 11 in the Evangelical Free Church in Turlock.

The marriage was officiated by Dr. John Stensether, pastor, and the Rev. Ed White, pastor of Denair Friends Church.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Miles Caudle of Route 5, Hereford, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Francis Perry of Denair, Calif.

Lavender and peach floral arrangements adorned the front of the church and the candelabra. The church was also decorated with grapevine wreaths trimmed with lavender and peach flowers made by the bride, groom and matron of honor.

Debbie St. Louis of Turlock was matron of honor and Dan White of Whittier, Calif. was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's cousin, Charlotte Caudle of Turlock, Lauri Gooch of Lubbock and Lynn Parry of Manhattan, Kan.

Serving as ushers and groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Richard Perry of Turlock and John Perry of Kennewick, Wash.; and David Rice of East Petersburg, Pa. Guests were also escorted by the bride's brother, 2nd Lt. Mike Caudle of Clovis, N.M.

Serving as flower girl was Tammy McCoy, daughter of Corinne McCoy, and ring bearer was the groom's nephew, Daniel Morse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Morse.

Candles were lit by Mary Kremer and Diane Parks.

Mary Gail Cripe was organist and the groom's sister, Ellen Morse, was pianist. Vocalists were the groom's brother, Richard Perry; the groom's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Stan Morse; and Christopher Seibert and Marlene Bergstrom. Wedding selections included "I've Waited a Lifetime", "Cherish the Treasure", "I Could Never Promise You" and "Household of Faith."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown designed and made by the groom's sister, Susan Hill of Roseburg, Ore. The formal-length white taffeta gown was fashioned with a lace bodice, Sabrina neckline and long, pleated lace sleeves.

The bridal illusion veil was attached to a white floral headpiece which was made by the bride. She carried an arm bouquet of white iris accented with peach and lavender rosebuds.

She wore a blue topaz necklace given to her by the groom.

The reception, which was held in the church fellowship hall, was hosted by the bride's cousins, r. and Mrs. Burdette Caudle, and Mr. and Mrs. George Beech. Guests were registered by the bride's sister-in-law, Jennifer Caudle, and Robin Carroll.

Maggie Sutton and Karen Dwight served cake and punch was ladled by Kathy Hibma and Chalice Clark. Coffee was poured by Nancy Main and Lynn Paden.

Wedding gifts were recorded by Bambi Beachler, Charlotte Erlanson and the bride's cousin, Shari Caudle.

The bride wore a teal pleated dress with white lace collar as she and her husband left for a wedding trip along the California coastline. They are making their home at 3936 E. Barnhart in Denair, Calif.

The bride graduated from Texas Tech University and is a former lifestyles editor at The Hereford Brand. She is currently employed by Turlock Irrigation District.

The groom, a graduate of George Fox College in Newberg, Ore., is currently employed by Raley's Superstores in Turlock.

Among family members attending the wedding were the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Caudle of Hereford, and the bride's brother and sister-in-law, 2nd Lt. and Mrs. Mike Caudle of Clovis, N.M.

Toastmasters meeting held

"Irony" was the speech given by Bob Lohr during the Hereford Toastmaster's meeting held Thursday morning in the Ranch House Restaurant.

Lohr's speech chronicled his life since his arrival in Hereford in the early '60s. During the speech he announced his plan to move to El Paso. Joe Weaver gave the invocation and Lynn Cook, president, conducted the meeting. Members were reminded that dues are now payable.

Grammarian was Chuck Danley and table topic master was Cook. Rocky Lee served as general evaluator, Joe Don Cummings was toastmaster, and timer was Joe Walters.

M.C. Adams spoke on "The Aging Eye." This advanced manual speech was about the eye from birth to death.

Table topics included "Drugs" by Cook; "World Terrorism" by Cummings; "Deficit" by Danley; "Environment" by Lee; and "Ethics in Government" by Weaver.

Chosen best program speaker was Lohr and best evaluator was Weaver. There was a three-way tie for best table topics speaker.

Members present were Adams, Cook, Cummings, Danley, Lee, Lohr, Walters, and Weaver.

The highest number with a name is the centillion, which is 10 with 600 zeroes.

Harder to present course

"A Change of Heart" nutrition and health course will be taught by Beverly Harder, county extension agent, each Monday in April. There will be a morning session from 9:30-11:30 and an evening session from 7-9 p.m. at the Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room.

Those wishing to attend should chose one session as material will be the same at the morning and evening classes. The four-week course will focus on the nutritional issues and practices that affect health and give main focus to the health of the heart. Improving nutrition, diet and health is a major concern in Texas. The four-week series of lessons are designed to help individuals develop healthy eating habits, gain knowledge on exercise and flexibility and develop the consumer skills needed to buy food for maximum health.

If interested in attending, call the extension office at 364-3573 Monday morning.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Become one of the first in our community to own a copy of this magnificent atlas.

Wool gabardine now popular

Wool gabardine is gaining prominence in most spring wardrobes. Yet, many people do not understand exactly what wool gabardine is.

According to Pendleton Woolen Mills, what makes wool gabardine different from other wools is the type of yarn and the spinning process used in making the thread.

Wool gabardine comes from a worsted yarn which is smoothly surfaced and evenly combed. The yarn is then made into a tightly woven fabric, most widely recognized as gabardine.

By contrast, woolen yarn is soft and furry. When made into fabric, the twisting is uneven and the surface fuzzy.

Because of the tight twist of the worsted yarn and the compact weave of the fabric, wool gabardine is lightweight and durable.

It tailors well and is comfortable in wide variety of climates, including spring and summer. In addition, wool gabardine resists wrinkling, making it ideal for travel.

A DANGER TO KIDS

ORADELL, N. J. (AP) - Bleaches, household cleansers and drugs are the most common substances accidentally ingested by preschoolers and are potentially toxic.

But the telltale symptoms of nausea, vomiting and abdominal pain don't always indicate serious injury, says Contemporary Pediatrics magazine. What's swallowed is usually small and water or milk can be given to the child to dilute it.

G.E.D. Testing

For adult residents of Texas, 17 years of age and up. Parent's permission for 17-year-olds required. I.D. required. Satisfactory scores qualify for Texas Education Agency Certificates of High School Equivalency. $25.00 Fee. Next test April 4th and 5th, 1989 at 6:00 p.m. at Hereford High School, Room 123. Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: Today I am recommending one of the most useful books I have read in a long time. This book was written to help people with low self-esteem accept themselves and stop feeling like losers.

These chapter titles will give you an idea of what you can expect to find between the covers of "Who Do You Think You Are?" by Joel Wells.

- Put Downs: Their Care and Feeding
- The Killing Field of Adolescence
- Body Self-Image
- A Woman's Place Is --
- The Senior Citizen and Self-Esteem
- Self-Esteem for the Widowed and Divorced
- Dealing with Imposed Expectations
- Positive Steps for Building Self-Esteem

"Trying to live up to parental and family expectations," the author writes, "has made millions of people miserable. Too often, men and women find themselves in jobs they hate and they hate themselves for staying in those jobs. They put themselves through misery and suffer from boredom as they dutifully follow family rituals because they feel they must.

"We all are programmed to please those we care about and those who care about us. But the plain truth is that we do not have to do or be what others expect us to be. Most of us can get closer to our real selves if we sort out and dispose of the outdated and unrealistic expectations that others have imposed on us. The more baggage we are able to shed, the more completely will we become our own person."

Too often we let what we perceive to be our flaws and inadequacies limit our potential for fulfillment and contentment. This book tells us how to free ourselves from such negative thinking.

Actor Rod Steiger said, "The most important thing is to be whatever you are without shame. It is not a question of whether you can be somebody. You are somebody."

If your bookstore doesn't have "Who Do You Think You Are?" by Joel Wells, send a check or money order for $7.95 (plus $1.05 for postage and handling) to: Thomas More Press, 205 W. Monroe St., 6th Floor, Chicago, Ill. 60606.

Dear Ann Landers: A while back you had a wonderful column about the fashion industry and how difficult it is to get decent garments that are well-made and fit properly. The woman who complained said she was hanging on to her old clothes because she couldn't find anything new that she wanted to buy. I'm in her corner.

When, if ever, will looking weird go out of style? Today we see people wearing faded denim, torn pants and overalls everywhere -- even to church. I see folks on the street with jackets turned inside out, backwards and tied around their hips. Young girls take over their father's shirts and their brother's shorts. They wear jogging shoes with formals and gym socks with satin dresses.

What happened to looking nice? Why don't teenage girls comb their hair anymore? It seems the messier they look, the better they like it. Have I lived too long? -- GRAND RAPIDS READER

DEAR GRAND: Don't despair. Everything goes in cycles. One of these years weird will be out and neat will be in. It can't happen soon enough as far as I'm concerned.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $3 plus a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope (45 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Social Security

NO NEED TO PAY FOR SOCIAL SECURITY SERVICES

People in the Amarillo area have been receiving direct mail solicitations asking that they pay $7 to join an organization that says it will provide many services related to Social Security. Jim Talbot, Social Security manager in Amarillo, Tx, said recently.

First, Talbot said, there is no need to pay money to any firm to obtain any of the services provided by Social Security.

In return for the $7 payment, this firm offers to provide a statement of a person's earnings covered by Social Security, a plastic Social Security card, and a guide to Social Security.

Like Boston, New Jersey had a "tea party" during the mounting friction between the colonies and Great Britain. At Greenwich, near Delaware Bay, men in Indian costumes burned a shipload of tea from England in 1774.

Any person can obtain a statement of Social Security covered earnings without paying a fee. All a person has to do is call any Social Security office and ask for a request for statement of earnings form. After completing the form and mailing it, the person will receive the statement in a few weeks. This firm can do no more.

In addition, there is no need for a plastic Social Security card, Talbot said. It is of no use for Social Security purposes. The Social Security number card issued by the Social Security Administration is the only official card and should be used whenever a Social Security card is needed.

People can obtain many publications about Social Security free at any Social Security office. Just call any office and ask, Talbot said.

Free information about Social Security and free Social Security cards can be obtained at the Amarillo Social Security office. Just call (806) 376-2241 for more information.

LAUREN BETH MONTI, BRYAN DOUGLAS PEELER

Engagement announced

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Monti of Houston announce the engagement of their daughter, Lauren Beth, to Bryan Douglas Peeler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Peeler of Hereford.

The couple plans to exchange nuptials June 3 at the St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Houston.

Miss Monti and Peeler will receive their medical degrees from Texas Tech School of Medicine May 27. They reside in Dallas where they both will be entering their residency training.

Greenawalt addresses Pilot Club at Tuesday's meeting

Charles Greenawalt, superintendent of Hereford schools, spoke to the Pilot Club during their breakfast meeting held Tuesday morning in the Community Center.

Greenawalt highlighted some of the changes that have taken place in the local schools, summarizing new programs implemented. He mentioned the lowered drop-out rate and listed plans for new programs.

Following the club's recitation of the pledge to the U.S. flag, Linda Minchew conducted the meeting in the absence of President Wanda Cobb.

Minchew will be installed as president on Aug. 31 along with other officers: Peggie Fox, president-elect;

Sue Hyer, recording secretary; Mary Harris, corresponding secretary; Anna Solomon, treasurer; Lou Ann LaFever, new director; Kim Leonard, holdover director; and Cobb, past president and director.

New members welcomed were Dora Medrano, Terri Johnson, and Dorothy Ott. Members terminating membership were Margie Waddell, Mildred Fuhrmann, Juliann Thompson, and Robin Roth.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Hereford sent a thank-you note to the club for the donation of $365, making the club a Friendship Sponsor. In other matters, Marline Watson was recognized for her program on dyslexia.

It was noted that final figures for the recent Mexican Stack Supper are still being tabulated and will be announced at a later date.

The district convention for the state of Texas will be held in Austin on May 5-7.

ICED TEA POT AND OTHER NEW PRODUCTS

NEW YORK (AP) - The Iced Tea Pot, new from Mr. Coffee, uses tea bags or loose tea to brew and chill 2 quarts of iced tea, generally in less time than it takes to boil water.

Ice cubes are placed in the pitcher, the machine is filled with water, and a filter and six to eight tea bags are placed in the steeper. With a press of a button, freshly-brewed iced tea is ready to drink in less than 10 minutes. The covered pitcher can be stored in the refrigerator, and fits easily upside down over the tea maker when not in use.

Also new from Mr. Coffee: Brewmates, a twin coffee maker designed to brew decaffeinated and caffeinated coffee, or different flavored coffees and teas, at the same time; and Caffe Ristorante, which makes one cup of espresso or cappuccino at a time.

Conair has introduced its new Two-Slice Toaster, which has all the features of larger toasters, but takes up less counter space. Also new: the Conair Cuisine Digital Timer.

Jeans still fashionable

By The Associated Press
It's no longer enough that jeans just fit, and last.

Manufacturers now promote jeans that have been acid-washed, white-washed, stone-washed, rinsed, bleached, or over-dyed. Last spring's favored look was acid-washed. This spring, says Roy Schiefner, manager of product development for jeans manufacturer Levi Strauss, "light-colored, lived-in denim" will be popular.

He says the style may also turn to narrower, slimmed-down styles, which translates as tighter-fitting.

"My husband didn't want to think about it."

"That's the statement of many women who have thought things through about pre-arranged funeral planning. But sometimes, although husbands have agreed that pre-arrangement made good sense, they put off making a decision because it seemed there was no reason to hurry."

In my case, I decided I would go ahead and pre-arrange my funeral service. Actually, it was very simple after the folks at Rix explained how it works. I felt relieved that I had made a decision to alleviate some of the emotional and financial burdens which were sure to arise. I think that probably my peace of mind encouraged my husband, Bill, to arrange his pre-need plan. And I am grateful that he became convinced that it was better to make the choice he did a few months ago rather than making me assume that responsibility now. It has made my burden lighter."

Abundant Life

A CLEAR VIEW OF TODAY

By Bob Wear

Our difficulty is not in our inability to see into the future, but in our self-imposed blindness to the present. It is probably best that we cannot see the future clearly. We can, however, know all we need to know about it.

There is something we can see. We can see the present clearly, and which many people throw away, but which nevertheless will make at the end of the day no small deduction from the life of a person. "Colton. This true observation emphasizes the need of a 'clear view of today'; not of some distant future, but today.

It is a tragedy for us to think and act so that the present opportunities are hidden from us. It is even worse to surround ourselves with the curtains which separate us from all the joys and happiness which today offers. A clear view of today, enabling us to use it well, is our most productive use of life and time for both 'present' and 'future'.

some future day; which may or may never be our day. This 'fog' spoils our view. Instead of a 'clear view of today', and making it a good day; we lose today and are very poorly prepared for tomorrow, if there is a tomorrow.

"Much may be done in those little shreds and patches of time, which every day produces, and which many people throw away, but which nevertheless will make at the end of the day no small deduction from the life of a person."-Colton. This true observation emphasizes the need of a 'clear view of today'; not of some distant future, but today.

It is a tragedy for us to think and act so that the present opportunities are hidden from us. It is even worse to surround ourselves with the curtains which separate us from all the joys and happiness which today offers.

A clear view of today, enabling us to use it well, is our most productive use of life and time for both 'present' and 'future'.

Christian Academy to host dinner theatre

The Nazarene Christian Academy will be hosting a dinner theatre April 7-9 at the Hereford Community Center. Proceeds will be used to support the school.

Performances will be staged and dinner served at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday and dessert only will be featured during Sunday's performance at 2 p.m.

Price of admission is $10 for the evening performances and $5 for Sunday's event. Tickets, which need to be purchased in advance, are available from any Nazarene Christian Academy student. They may also be bought at the school office, Thames Pharmacy and Ouida's.

The play, under the direction of Jeff Love, is entitled "Family Outings." It centers around a middle-class family struggling to hold together and the victory they finally achieve. Written by Paul McCusker, author of "Catacombs" and "Vantage Point", the nine member cast consists of Mary Jo Hamman, Jim Lewis, Ronnie Lance, Steve Johnson, David Fanning, Eugene and Michelle McMorris and Michael and Priscilla Power.

DENISE BRORMAN, CLINT GOULDY

Couple to wed

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brorman of the Ford Community, Hereford, announce the engagement of their daughter, Denise, to Clint Gouldy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Gouldy of Wildorado.

The couple plans to be married June 2 in Immaculate Conception Church in Vega.

The bride-elect is a 1986 graduate of Vega High School. She is a senior nursing student at Amarillo College and will graduate in May with an associate degree in nursing.

The prospective bridegroom is a 1984 graduate of VHS and is currently engaged in livestock management.

Notes from Golden Plains Care Center

By RHONDA LEE
Activity and Social Service Director

We at Golden Plains Care Center would like to thank everyone who helped us in March.

We would especially like to thank the Mexican Baptist Church and Rev. Ruben Flores. Because of this church, we had a wonderful St. Patrick's Day Party, a very happy March birthday party, and a special Easter service.

It is said that April showers bring May flowers and we at Golden Plains hope it is true since we will complete our spring planting this month. The staff and residents will be assisting with landscaping in order to make our facility a place that is as enjoyable outside as it is inside. If anyone has anything they would like to donate, such as flower bulbs, flower seeds, grass seeds, flower boxes, or gardening tools we would put them to good use.

Our church of the month is Westway Baptist Church. Rev. James Peach will assist with Family Night set Monday, April 10 at 7 p.m. He will also conduct a special spring church service. Please come out to Golden Plains and support him and his church.

Golden Plains would like to welcome new residents: Mrs. Lucille Patterson, Mrs. Fannie Wells, Mrs. Mary Bell Knighten, and Mrs. Minnie Prowell.

The monthly birthday party will be held Tuesday, April 18 at 3 p.m. as the following celebrate birthdays: Dora Thomas, April 4; Clifford Smith, April 8; Callie Vandever, April 9; Amzie Peterson, April 19; Ines Davila, April 20; and Eva Peacock, April 26.

Four staff members were recognized for their hard work at the Center. March's Employee of the Month was Twila Ortiz, an LVN. Linda Kub and Mari Gonzales will attend med-aid classes in Friona and we wish them the best of luck. Wilson "Bud" Ansley is welcomed to our staff as the new maintenance man.

Anyone wishing to become a volunteer or needing information on Golden Plains may call me (Rhonda) at 346-3817.

The world's largest lake is the Caspian Sea with an area of 143,244 square miles.

Fixing floorboards can be done fairly easily

By READER'S DIGEST
For AP Newsfeatures

If scrapes and scratches mar your wood floors, you can usually correct the problem without a complete refinishing job. Floorboards that are badly damaged can be fixed by removing the old section of flooring and replacing it.

You can remove most stains from wood floors without sanding off the finish. First, try commercial furniture cleaners. If these don't work, pour some cigarette lighter fluid onto a clean, soft cloth and rub the stains with it.

For water spots that resist these methods, try rubbing them with cigarette ashes and lemon juice. Or, rub with a mixture of rottenstone (a powder used for polishing metals) and light oil.

You should be able to remove minor cigarette burns with rottenstone.

Hairline scratches can be camouflaged with a wax-like, tinted touch-up stick available at hardware stores. On dark-colored surfaces, dip an India ink pen in iodine and apply to the scratches to conceal them.

To fix a deeper gouge, clean out the damaged area and fill the cavity with color-matched wood putty. Apply shellac, polyurethane or varnish over the putty to match the existing finish.

To replace a floorboard, drill a series of large holes across the center and against the grain of the damaged board. Avoid drilling too far into the subflooring. If there is no subflooring, try to center the holes over a joist to give support to the replacement.

You can also remove the board by splitting it down the center and along the grain with a chisel.

Floorboards fit together with a tongue and groove joint. Use a sharp chisel to cut off the tongue of the board being replaced, then remove the board. Alternately, use a chisel to split the board along its grain, then pry out the pieces. Cut a replacement board to size for a snug fit and carefully test it against the opening.

Turn the replacement board over and chisel off the lower half of its groove so that it will fit over the tongue of the adjoining board. Coat the tongue and groove with glue. Insert the tongue of the replacement board into the groove of the old flooring, then drive the board into the opening with a wood block and mallet.

Drill pilot holes for nails at each end and along the side of the new board. Make holes smaller than the nail you'll be using. Drive in glue-coated nails and sink the nailheads. Fill the nail holes and the joints with color-matched wood putty.

To refinish the new floorboard to match the rest, sand carefully and vacuum the dust. Apply clear sealer or a stain to match the adjoining flooring. (Some stains come combined with a sealer.) When dry, buff with fine steel wool. Remove dust and apply polyurethane, shellac or varnish.

Allow to dry at least two days, then buff with steel wool again. Apply two coats of paste wax, followed by a buffing with lamb's wool. Some polyurethanes do not need to be waxed. Check the label.

Wherever space is at a premium, pocket doors are making a comeback. Pocket doors - those that slide out of sight into the walls when not in use - were a charming feature of upper- and middle-class homes until about 1918.

They were popular because a door of comparable size needed a considerable amount of space for opening, space not readily available in most Victorian parlors. The door also stayed "put" when partially closed, reducing heat loss without completely cutting off the flow of air to a room.

The pocket door began to lose popularity when more efficient heating systems made obsolete the "closed room" heat-conserving routine of the fireplace era. Also, living rooms, as they were called in new houses, often had no doors at all, but broad archways that connected one room to another.

And in existing homes, pocket doors were often removed in the process of remodeling to make way for in-the-wall heating ducts and water pipes. Add to that the fact that hardware rusted and squeaked when not oiled regularly.

Today, pocket doors run smoothly on modern hardware, with aluminum jump-proof tracks, nylon-wheeled hangers, self-adjusting floor anchors and lightweight door materials that resist warping. And they retain the big asset of the old days - the better use of space. In a bathroom, for instance, a swinging door often blocks a towel bar, a sink or a cabinet door. In any room, reclaiming the 10 square feet of space committed to a conventional door's clearance means space for another plant, bookcase, chair or lamp.

Steve Johnson, vice president of L.E. Johnson Products, a maker of pocket-door kits, says modern hardware "is virtually foolproof, so much so that lifetime guarantees are offered." He says there even is a return to the practice of retiring behind gliding doors "for a brief, confidential tete-a-tete or an uninterrupted snooze."

Pocket doors now are being made of lightweight steel, fiberglass and laminated wood. They no longer warp and get stuck in their wall pockets.

It's usually a good idea to buy the pocket-door kit before you begin any work on the wall where it will be installed. In that way, you can make the door opening to match the size of the door. The most important part of the installation is to be certain that everything is plumb and level. Be sure you have a good level, since so many things you do around the house require the use of a level. A level that is too small or of poor quality will not be a help to you and, in some cases, can spoil what otherwise would be a good job.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Here's the answer

Q. - We want to build a fence on our property. The lot adjoins that of our neighbor. Do we have to get permission to erect the fence?

A. - First of all, the fact you are asking the question raises the possibility you are not on good terms with the neighbor who will be affected by the fence. But if that supposition is wrong, by all means contact him and see whether you can agree on the kind and height of the fence. But that is by no means the last word on the subject. Nearly all communities have regulations on all matters affecting fences even if the one you contemplate will be completely on your own property. You must get a permit after the authorities are certain you intend to conform to the local codes. Whatever your reason for putting up the fence, make sure it adds attractiveness to your property. An eyesore isn't going to do anybody any good.

Q. - I intend to put up a fiberglass roof on our back patio. I know fiberglass panels are attached to the wood framing in one of several ways. What I do not know is whether the fiberglass can be drilled for pilot holes or will it split? My idea is to glue the panels and then nail them with fasteners that have leakproof washers.

A. - Your attachment plan is fine. If you nail right into the material you are using for the roof, it may be all right or it may chip a bit, depending on how careful you are and how much experience you have had in this kind of work. You are better off doing what you apparently contemplate - drilling pilot holes. No, the fiberglass will not split. Follow the manufacturer's directions on how far apart the fasteners should be. Ask your dealer to sell you the special flashings that make the joints waterproof.

Q. - We have a bedroom bureau that probably is more than 100 years old, although we aren't sure. The finish on it, which looks like varnish, seems to be in pretty good shape but is kind of dirty looking. I have been told the best way to clean such a finish is with turpentine. Is this true or will the turpentine act as a varnish remover? I hope to be able to avoid removing the old finish and putting on a new one, but neither do I want to spoil the finish that already is on it.

A. - You can clean the bureau with turpentine if you remember to rub it fairly gently and without too much turpentine on the rubbing cloth. If the piece is so old, the finish could be shellac, in which case the rub with turpentine also will be all right. You are wise to do something that will not require stripping off the old finish.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

Sure you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information.

Or you could nail down that new home the easy way by consulting an experienced real estate agent.

An agent can point out options you might have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to.

Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple listing service for homes that fit your needs--and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections, he or she will even be there at closing.

So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help for an expert. A real estate agent.

Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Every day, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And the Brand's Sunday housing section examines the latest market trends and housing opportunities.

With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.

Pinocchio to visit Hereford

The Broadway Marionettes will stage the production of 'Pinocchio' on Friday evening. The event will begin at 8 p.m. in the Hereford High School auditorium. Members of the Community Concert Association, which is sponsoring the production, are invited.

"Pinocchio" in concert April 7

More than 50 life-size marionettes will leap to life in the April 7 production of 'Pinocchio' set in the Hereford High School auditorium at 8 p.m.

The Community Concert Association will present M. Edelman's 'The Broadway Marionettes' production of Carol Colodis' 'Pinocchio.' The story focuses on a mischievous marionette who longs to be a real boy and learns the value of honesty, responsibility and loyalty.

The production will mark the return of the Broadway Marionettes to Hereford. Standing room only was the attendance record set by the Broadway Marionettes production of 'A Christmas Carol' when they performed locally at Christmas two years ago.

Artists working on this production include Paul Churchill, who is a graduate of the University of Kansas. He has designed, directed and executed the artwork for 'Pinocchio.'

Mark Edelman, a practicing attorney, is the general manager of the national tour of The Broadway Marionettes. He is a composer of popular songs and sketches including the French language version of 'Pinocchio.'

Jay Kingwell is production manager. His theatrical background includes general management of more than 30 Broadway and off-Broadway shows.

Tod Verhein is the director and is in his fifth season with the Broadway Marionettes. He began his puppet career in Chicago on touring production of 'Aladdin.'

Randy Winder, lighting designer, has served three years as resident lighting designer for Westport Playhouse. His concert designs range from Carol Channing to Sha-Na-Na.

Reviews from the Detroit Free Press call 'Pinocchio', "a lovely way to introduce youngsters to theater." According to the St. Louis Globe Democrat, the production is "exciting, beautiful and always magical, a world in which you never know what's coming next." The Chicago Daily News states, "The imaginative scenery and costumes give the show its air of fantasy."

The Friday night production featuring the classic storybook tale of 'Pinocchio' will be the last Community Concert of the season and ticketholders are invited.

FLIGHTS OF FANCY
BALTIMORE (AP) - The story about George Washington chopping down the cherry tree was probably invented by Mason Locke Weems (1759-1825).

Weems, an Episcopal minister who was also a bookseller, wrote a popular book about Washington in 1800 that included several fanciful tales about the first president.

Group pushes for movie ad disclosures

WASHINGTON (AP) - That beer your favorite movie star quaffed in his most recent film may be part of an "insidious" advertising scheme, according to an advocacy group that wants to require moviemakers to reveal when they're being paid to show commercial products.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest says the movie "Bull Durham" included 21 shots of Miller Lite beer, "Superman II" featured the Marlboro cigarette logo, and "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" prominently displayed Reese's Pieces and Coors beer.

While the center didn't know if money changed hands between filmmakers and manufacturers on all these movies, it said Philip Morris paid $42,500 to get its Marlboro logo into the Superman film.

On the coming James Bond movie, "Licensed to Kill," Philip Morris paid $350,000 to have Lark cigarettes shown on screen, center staff attorney Charles Mitchell said.

The center is asking state attorneys general to determine whether the undisclosed placement of commercial products in films constitutes deceptive advertising that violates state laws.

It also said broadcasting movies on television in which there are paid placements of cigarettes violates a 1971 law that prohibits advertising of cigarettes on TV.

Mitchell said the center urged states to require filmmakers to state at the beginning of a movie, for example: "Notice. This film contains paid advertising for Marlboro cigarettes."

The center also said it would ask state officials to determine whether the placement of alcoholic beverages and cigarettes in youth-oriented films should be prohibited because youths cannot legally buy such products.

The group said it was petitioning the Federal Communications Commission to rescind a rule that exempts theatrical films from the general requirement for television programs that paid product placements be disclosed.

"The paid placement of junk foods, alcoholic beverages and cigarettes in movies is one of the most insidious forms of advertising," said Michael Jacobson, the center's executive director. "Advertising in movies is blatantly unfair to audiences who go to be entertained, not advertised to."

Elizabeth Barnes, a spokeswoman for the Motion Picture Association of

McClure movie filmed in LA

MIDLAND (AP) - It's a movie about the dramatic rescue of toddler Jessica McClure from an abandoned well in the West Texas city of Midland.

But as the filming of the television movie starts, most of the scenes are not being shot in Texas.

Viewers around the nation will only see the hospital and city hall in Midland when they watch the ABC film "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure."

Toddler twins Laura and Jennie Loesch will take turns portraying Jessica. The underground shaft will be recreated in a Hollywood film studio.

"The production company has really gone all out to ensure every bit of authenticity. We have been in constant touch with Midland and have hired a Midland geologist (Will Murley) as a technical consultant," Bremer said.

Drilling equipment used as movie props has been provided by Flow Products of Midland, the company that donated equipment for the actual rescue, the Odessa American reported.

Filming of a movie detailing the rescue sparked controversy when two separate participating groups signed contracts with different film production companies.

Highland Communications in California signed one group and Interscope signed another. A community panel settled on Interscope, the Midland Reporter-Telegram said.

Although he was a rescue leader, Roberts said he has not been contacted about the movie.

"I really don't know anything about it," Roberts said. "Most of us (the rescue workers) just kept involved with the movie end of it in the hopes that it would be good for Midland."

The production company was the choice of the mayor's committee and Jessica's parents, he said.

"I just hope it sheds a favorable light on Midland," Roberts added.
