Storms again roll in county

Forecast: fair weekend

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

For the third straight day, portions of Deaf Smith County encountered severe weather Wednesday in what's expected to be the last onslaught of heavy rain, hail and tornadoes at least through the weekend.

Some portions of the area received some damaging hail, and at least three funnel clouds were sighted in the county.

Wednesday's funnels, however, were "cold air funnels." Because of bitterly cold winds in upper layers of the atmosphere, cold air funnels are short-lived, have winds of only about 70 mph, and do little if any damage if they strike anything.

The cold air came from a low pressure area that was passing directly over the region, whipping in gusty northeasterly winds that clashed with warmer surface air to cause the severe storms to boil.

The thunderstorms struck the area earlier in the day than normal. The storms began building before noon, and by 2 p.m., menacing-looking clouds had already reached full strength in the western sections of the county and to the southwest of Hereford in Parmer County.

Weather spotters were concerned with several clouds in the western section of the county. Some of the menacing clouds to the west of Hereford ranged in color from white to gray to blue-green to black, and spotters kept an eye on the clouds as many of them showed definite rotation patterns, indicative of attempts to form tornadoes.

The storms produced pea-to-marble-sized hail to the southwest of Hereford with several reports of over an inch of rain, but by the time the storms reached Hereford, they contained only a little hail and brief but heavy rains.

Hereford, in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today, received .42 inch of rain at KPAN, the official National Weather Service reporting station for Hereford. Other reports from residential areas ranged up to an inch in the city.

Other reports around the area included .25 inch at the county barn at Bootleg; .20 at the J.E. McCabe's at Dawn; and an inch of rain at Northwest Grain at Milo Center.

The long-range forecast is calling for fair weather at least through Sunday.

on Wednesday. The cloud was a boiling mass of white, gray, blue-green and black, and had some tornado-type rotation.

Best safety during storm: take cover

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

If you live in the Texas Panhandle, chances are very good that somewhere, sometime, you are going to be threatened by a tornado.

This week, at least three different tornadoes have touched down in Deaf Smith County. Knowing what to do during a tornado may mean the difference between life and death for you and your family.

The drill is old habit for most long-time residents of the High Plains, but it is still a warning that bears repeating. Also, when a funnel cloud is twisting in the skies above, it is not the time for a newcomer to be learning how to protect himself.

--The ideal place to take cover during a tornado is in a cellar or basement.

--If a cellar or basement is not available, take cover in a windowless interior room or hallway.

--Try to cover yourself with a blanket or mattress to protect yourself from flying glass and debris.

--If you are in a car or truck and a tornado is approaching, leave your vehicle and take cover in a ditch or depression in the ground. The same is true if you are in a mobile home or trailer house. Most of the people who are killed by tornadoes are in automobiles or mobile homes when the storm strikes.

--At one time it was believed that doors and windows should be opened to prevent a "vacuum effect" which could cause a house to explode. Current policy has changed.

"Research has found that, when a tornado gets two or three hundred yards from your house, it opens the windows for you," said Steve McCauley, meteorologist with KVII-TV in Amarillo.

Flying debris will break the windows as a tornado approaches, allowing air pressure inside and outside to equalize. In addition, meteorologists are finding that the "vacuum effect" is not as dramatic as was once thought.

At one time, it was believed that the explosive destruction of buildings was caused by the abrupt equalization of air pressure. It is now believed that the destructive force of tornadoes tends to lift the roof from a structure.

"When you lose your roof, you lose your house," McCauley said.

Not only have scientists improved their understanding of how tornadoes work, but advanced warning systems have improved as well.

The Doppler Radar, which has been introduced in recent years, has distinct advantages in early tornado detection. Conventional radar could tell where a storm was and give an idea as to its intensity. In addition to all that, Doppler Radar (using the Doppler Effect) is able to detect direction and motion, including rotation, in a storm.

Using Doppler Radar, weathermen are frequently able to watch an embryo of a tornado form before it becomes visible; therefore, early warnings are possible, letting the public know that potential tornadoes have formed before one actually strikes.

Despite these technological improvements, there is still no replacement for the human observer.

"You can't totally depend on radar. You've got to have people out there looking," said Hereford Fire Marshall Jay Spain.

Hereford is lucky to have a qualified crew of volunteers who provide this vital weather watch. Whenever severe weather approaches, the Emergency Operation Center, located at the fire station, goes into action.

These volunteers work with the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office, the Hereford Police Department and the Texas Department of Public Safety to maintain a vigilant watch over potentially lethal weather systems.

Not only does participation involve a sacrifice of time and money for these volunteers, but they must frequently place themselves in harm's way. While most people either run or hide from severe weather, members of the weather watch rush to, not from, the hazard.

During Wednesday's thunderstorms, a pattern of circular turbulence moved toward Hereford. The weather watch team which

Sales tax rebate higher

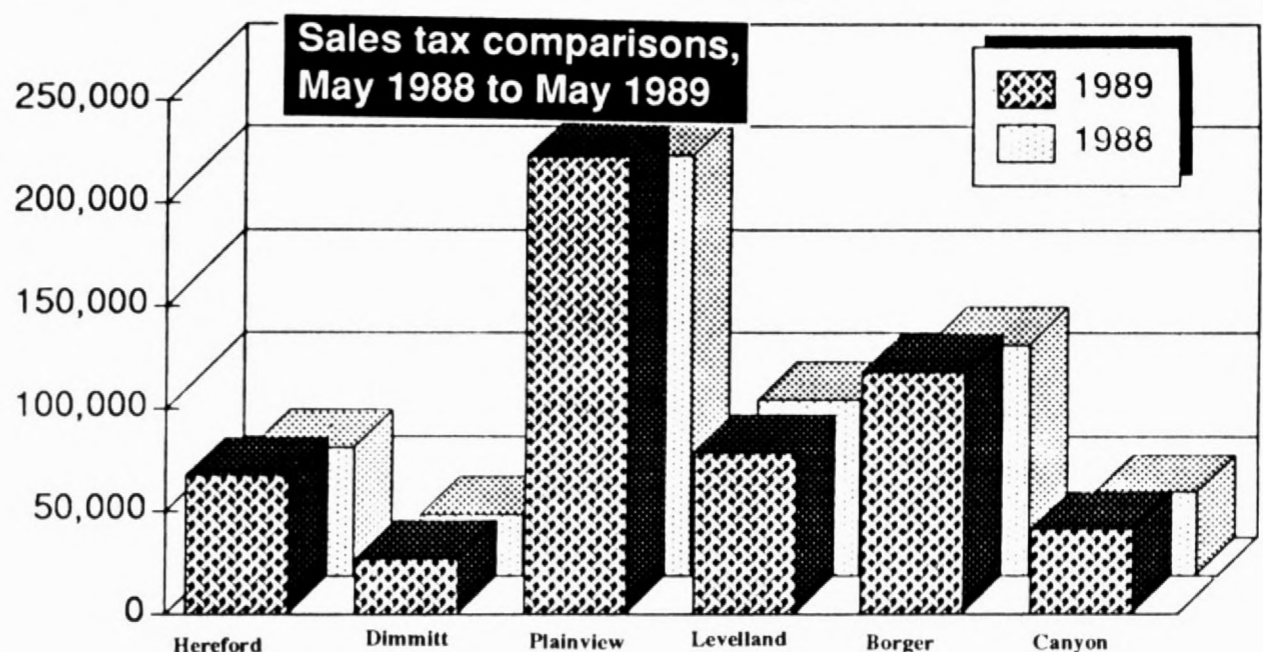

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Hereford will receive a sales tax rebate this month for $67,118, up almost $5,000 from the check last May.

For the year, Hereford has received $253,250, up from $247,373 for the first five months of 1988.

Sales tax rebates in many area cities were up slightly this May compared to last May. This month's checks represent taxes collected in March by business that file monthly and for businesses that file quarterly.

Other cities showing increases included Plainview, $22,238, up $18,000 from last May and, for the year, up 8.2 percent; Borger, $117,903, up from $112,679 last year, and up 15.5 percent for the year to $481,557; Canyon, $40,701, up $256 from last May's rebate, and $167,712 for the year, up from $155,196 for the first five months of 1988; Lubbock, $1.65 million this month, up 7.6 percent from last May, and, for year, $6.6 million, up from last year's $5.9 million for the first five months; and Amarillo, $1.4 million, up only .6% this month, and $5.5 million for the year, up six percent.

Some area cities showed a slight decrease.

Dimmitt's May check was for $26,434, down from last May's $29,483, but, for the year, $110,407, up from $83,151 for the first five months of 1988; Levelland, $78,784, down eight percent from last May, but, for the year, up 2.6 percent; and Pampa, $145,478, down from last May's $149,659, but up 8.2 percent for the year.

According to state comptroller Bob Bullock, sales tax rebates across the state have continued a healthy gain. "We've watched sales tax rebates across the state grow by more than 11 percent overall this year," Bullock said. "More money is being pumped into our economy, which is great for the state and for local governments."

Man arrested during protest

At least one Hereford-area person was arrested Wednesday as part of an abortion protest in Lubbock.

Randy Tooley, 41, of Dawn, was arrested for criminal trespassing. He was part of a group of about 65 persons that protested or participated in other ways outside the West Texas

Professional Building on Ninth Street in Lubbock.

Tooley was one of 29 persons arrested and booked into Lubbock County Jail during a mass arraignment by Justice of the Peace Bill Ross. His bond was set at $300.

The criminal trespassing charge, a

Class B misdemeanor, carries a penalty of up to 180 days in jail and/or a fine of up to $1,000.

The group called itself "Lubbock Rescue" and included persons from throughout the area. At least five other Hereford residents were there, most to help offer counseling to women who asked for counseling.

The group reached the building at about 9 a.m. Some blocked the building's main entrance, others were picketing and carrying signs protesting abortion, while others stood by to help with counseling.

The group is planning other protests.

Ag hearing scheduled Friday

By WENDY E. LANE

Agronomists, agriculture organization officials and farmers will testify Friday in Amarillo before congressional subcommittee members conducting the first of two hearings this week on drought conditions in the Farm Belt.

House Agriculture committee chairman Rep. Kiki de la Garza, D-Mission, and Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, are scheduled to attend the hearing sponsored by the House subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains. Subcommittee chairman Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kansas, also is expected to attend.

A second hearing will be held Saturday in Great Bend, Kan.

"Congress responded quickly and effectively last year to drought conditions across the country," said Sarpalius, a member of the subcommittee. "This year we have a drought that could be worse. Some counties in (Sarpalius' district) already have three-quarters of their wheat crop severely damaged or lost and the problems are just as bad in the other states."

Officials said witnesses will testify about drought conditions affecting their crops and are expected to ask for federal drought assistance funds from Congress. Sarpalius said testimony will help Congress decide what action is needed.

Among those scheduled to testify are Texas Farm Bureau president S.M. True, Texas Farm Union president Joe Rankin and representatives of the Texas Corn Growers Association, Texas Wheat Producers Association, National Grain Sorghum Producers Association and National Sugar Beet Growers Association.

Federal officials last week estimated that winter wheat farmers will be harvesting their smallest crop in 11 years, estimated at 1.43 billion bushels. A lingering drought in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and other wheat-producing states is being blamed for a scant harvest estimated to be 8 percent less than last year's.

Texas' winter wheat production is forecast at only 60 million bushels, down from a 10-year average of 140 million bushels. Meanwhile, experts in Kansas estimate that 202.4 million bushels will be harvested there, less than two-thirds of the state's 1988 production.

Although consumer prices aren't expected to be affected, farmers and agriculture trade association representatives are requesting federal assistance similar to that offered in the wake of 1988's devastating drought.

Congress last year passed a $3.9 billion emergency aid package to farmers left high and dry by the withering drought. This year, although Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter has announced assistance under existing disaster authority for livestock and livestock feed, the Bush administration has not addressed damage done to row crops.

Three bills have been introduced in the House that would extend the drought relief.

Lifestyles

Now You're Cooking

As Millie Barrett stands in her courtyard, she realizes that she has come a long way since the days when she worked in a grocery store for 10 cents an hour.

"I grew up in the country, then moved to town and put myself through high school," said the trim, active resident of 329 Douglas. "When I got the job at the grocery store, I stocked shelves, ran the cash register, did odd jobs. I was proud when I received a two-cent-an-hour raise."

A native of Emporia, Kans., she graduated from high school there and married Ed Barrett. "We were 19 when we married and had our first child at age 20. We now have four children and seven grandchildren; I live for the family." Their children are Bob, Jan Weishaar, Rodney, all of Hereford, and Brad, who is a student at Texas Tech University.

The Barretts had humble beginnings as he began as an electrician, became a vendor to small towns, selling such items as candy, pickles, and mayonnaise to small stores, then became an assistant manager of a feedlot. They left a large extended family to come to Texas and seek their fortune. "We lived in Lubbock for two years when Ed worked for the Crofoot's feedyard operation there. Then he built and sold a feedyard in Emporia and we moved to Hereford in August, 1975, when he became part owner of Barrett & Crofoot Feed Yard." Two of the Barretts' sons, Bob and Rodney, manage Barrett & Crofoot East and Barrett & Crofoot West, respectively.

Once active in PTA and a member of Hereford Cattlewomen, Mrs. Barrett still supports the beef industry as she belongs to the National Cattlewomen's Association. "I enjoyed the local group but I had to make a choice between it and tennis, and tennis won out."

She took up the game in 1978 and has been a fanatic since. "I bought a $5 racquet at TG&Y and now play at least twice a week with other women. Ed and I sometimes play doubles and I've played in tournaments. He was surprised that I would even leave the bed unmade if I had a chance to play tennis, which is definitely my main interest."

Barrett collects Precious Moments' and Hummels' figurines, enjoys sewing, has done tole painting, and works out in the yard, but cooking is among her favorite activities. "I can vegetables, such as corn, and make my own chili sauce and hot sauce."

She admits that her cooking skills have come a long way since the early days. "I baked my first batch of biscuits after we married and thought they were a bit hard. Ed took one and said he bet it wouldn't break if he threw it across the floor--and it didn't. He's been good to eat my cooking mistakes, though."

She learned to cook through home economics classes in high school and through trial and error. "After I married and had a family, I baked pies, bread, or hot rolls every Saturday morning and I still keep cookies around. I also made a lot of mashed potatoes when the kids were growing up."

Since her family was spread out age-wise, (her youngest son was about to enter kindergarten when the first grandchild was born), Barrett has only now begun to experiment with her cooking. Among her new creations since her children moved out of the house are Parsley Steak rolls and Beef Bean Casserole, which follow with some more of her favorite recipes:

PARSLEY STEAK ROLLS

1 large round steak
1 (4 oz.) can mushrooms, drained
1 onion, finely chopped
3 tsp. parmesan cheese
salt and pepper to taste
Dry parsley flakes
1 tsp. cornstarch
1 (10 1/2 oz. can) beef broth

Place mushrooms, onions, cheese, salt, pepper, and parsley on round steak. Roll into large roll. Secure with toothpicks or heavy string, or cut into individual serving sizes, then roll and secure.

Brown in hot oil on all sides. Stir cornstarch into small amount of broth. Add to remaining broth. Pour over steak rolls, cover and cook at 350 degrees for one hour.

BEEF BEAN CASSEROLE

Brown and drain, then set aside:
7 slices bacon, fried crisp
1 lb. ground beef
1 c. chopped onions
Combine:
1/2 c. catsup
1 tsp. salt
3/4 c. brown sugar
2 Tbsp. vinegar
1/2 c. sugar
1 Tbsp. dry mustard
Combine this mixture with beef

mix. Add:
2 cans green lima beans, drained
2 cans red kidney beans, drained
2 cans pork & beans
Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes.

BEEF AND GREEN ONIONS

8 oz. beef, cut into strips
4 oz. green onions, sliced
4 Tbsp. cooking oil
1 1/2 tsp. soy sauce
sesame oil

Marinade

1 1/2 Tbsp. soy sauce
1 Tbsp. sherry
1 Tbsp. cornstarch
1/2 tsp. sugar
1/8 tsp. pepper

Combine marinade ingredients; add beef strips for at least 20 minutes. Heat the wok; add 1 Tbsp. of oil and green onions. Cook, stirring rapidly, for one minute. Remove onions from wok and wipe it with a paper towel.

Reheat wok; add 3 Tbsp. of oil, then the meat. Cook for 1-2 minutes, then add green onions, soy sauce and 1 or 2 drops of sesame oil. Serve immediately.

May be served over rice. Serves 2-3.

POTATO CASSEROLE

2 lb. frozen hash browns
1/2 c. melted oleo
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 pint sour cream
2 c. grated American or cheddar cheese
1/2 c. chopped onion or 2 Tbsp. dried minced onion
2 c. crushed cornflakes
1/4 c. oleo (melted)

Toss first 8 ingredients together. Top with a mixture of corn flakes and oleo. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour.

CINNAMON ROLLS

Mix together:
1 pkg. yellow cake mix (NOT the pudding kind)
1 tsp. salt
5 c. flour

Melt 3 pkgs yeast in 2 1/2 c. warm water. Mix with dry ingredients, knead well. Cover and let rise 1 1/2 hours or until double in size.

Divide into 3 parts. Roll out on floured board. Spread with melted butter and sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon. Let rise on greased cookie sheet.

Bake 350 degrees 12 to 15 minutes.

POTATO SLICES

Wash, do not peel potatoes. Slice about 1/2 inch thick. Lay on cookie sheet and season with butter, salt, and pepper.

Bake at 400 degrees under broiler with door closed. Turn when brown; takes about 20 minutes.

GRILLED STEAK (Ed's recipe)

Lay frozen U.S. Choice steaks cut 1 1/4 - 1 1/2 inches thick on hot grill. Season with garlic steak, onion powder, and pepper or seasonings of your choice. Sear on each side then turn as needed.

Cook approximately 20-25 minutes for medium rare.

Auxiliary meets for sewing bee

A sewing bee was conducted by members of the Hospital Auxiliary when they met Tuesday in the conference room of Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Members stuffed and sewed 48 care bears which will be given to children that are patients in the hospital. This project was begun in 1984 with Bonnie S. Blott serving as chairman. To date, 400 bears have been distributed.

Those present included Sadie Shaw, Grace Covington, Helen Brown, Theda Seiver, Olga Harris, Sublett, Alice Koenig and Irene Reinart. Jeanne Landers was recognized as a guest.

COLLEGE SUICIDE

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - Reports that link stress and suicide might make one think that college students face a higher than average risk.

However, college is one of the safer environments possible for men aged 18 to 30, says psychologist Allan J. Schwartz of the University of Rochester.

"Studies indicate college males are about half as likely to commit suicide as males the same age who are not in college," says Schwartz.

"Of course, some students do feel stress. But what appears to account for the lower suicide rates is the scarcity on campuses of two common means by which people take their lives: guns, and automobiles in enclosed garages."

Getting ready for sale

Red Cross volunteers Ruth King and Rose Mary Davila are sorting through hundreds of items that will be offered for sale during the Red Cross garage sale set Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. each day at the Little Bull Barn. The local Red Cross chapter requests that sellable items be donated to the Red Cross office at 224 S. Main or they can be taken to the Little Bull Barn on today, Friday, or Saturday. Proceeds will go toward the purchase of new CPR mannequins to be used in CPR classes.

Final preparations made for celebration

The Mid-Plains Pioneer Day Celebration officers and committee members met Monday at K-Bob's Steak House to complete preparations for the annual reunion at the Bull Barn. Registration will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, May 27. Dues are $3 per person. During this time, coffee and nuggets will be served until 11 a.m. The meeting will start at 11 a.m.

and dinner will be served at noon. All area residents planning to attend are asked to bring a covered dish of vegetables, salads and/or desserts.

The Hereford Chamber Singers will provide entertainment and members of the Draper Extension Homemakers Club will be in charge of decorations led by chairman, Mary Beth Messer.

Meeting for reunions will be the Hereford High School graduating classes of 1937, 1939, 1944, and 1974.

Those attending the planning committee were Tom and Argen Draper, Alex Schroeter, Byrdie D. Fellers, Bartley Dowell, Grace Covington, Bill Bradley, Wilma Clark, Cawthon and Doris Bryant, Jerry Jackson, Benny and Joan Womble, Vesta Mac Nunley, Betty Bagley and visitors, Mary Beth Messer and Hank.

FFA members attend area convention held in Amarillo

Several Hereford FFA members attended the Area 1 convention in Amarillo last weekend and returned as winners.

Toby Fulton represented Hereford and the Littlefield District as Area 1 Sentinel for 1988-89. He, along with Jill Johnson, Cindy Meiwes, and Cami Struve, earned the Lone Star Farmer degree and will receive the award at the State FFA convention planned in Houston in July.

Jill Johnson competed for Area 1 Star Lone Star Farmer at the area level.

Greg Urbanczyk competed at area for the Star Chapter Farmer honor and won at this level.

Struve also competed for the Star Lone Star Agribusinessman at this level and won, while Dennis Paetzold won the Star American Agribusinessman honor. Urbanczyk, Struve, and Paetzold will compete at the state level in Austin on June 7, 8, and 9.

Paetzold will receive his American Farmer Degree at the national convention set in November.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: I am newly married and from time to time have noticed that others have asked questions that seem simple but you always are kind enough to answer with useful information.

I am hoping that you will do the same for me. My question is on eggs: What, if any, is the difference between white and brown eggs?

If there isn't a difference, as my mother-in-law states, then why is there a price difference? — New Wife, Roswell, N.M.

I posed your question to our friends at the American Egg Board and they shared the following information.

Egg shell and yolk color may vary, but color has nothing to do with quality nor nutritive value of an egg.

The color comes from pigments in the outer layer of the shell and may range in various breeds from white to deep brown. The breed of hen determines the color of the shell. White breeds lay white eggs; brown or reddish-brown breeds lay brown eggs.

White eggs are most in demand among American buyers. In some parts of the country, however, particularly in New England, brown shells are preferred. The Rhode Island Red, New Hampshire and Plymouth Rock are breeds that lay brown eggs.

Generally the reason for the price difference is that the breeds that lay the brown eggs are larger and require more feed, thus resulting in the brown eggs costing a little more at the markets. So, it doesn't matter what's on the outside, just what's on the inside! — Hugs, Heloise

CRACKER CONTAINER

Dear Heloise: I like the tiny soup and oyster crackers. My problem with them is the plastic bags they are packaged in. Once the bag is opened, it always tips and spills and they go stale.

So I rinsed and dried a plastic, half-gallon milk jug and carefully put the crackers in it and solved the problem, plus I can shake out the exact amount I want. One-quart jugs can also be used. — Jim Jones,

PORTLAND, MAINE

HANDY COASTERS

Dear Heloise: I found that the plastic lids from potato chip cans can be made into handy coasters. After the chip can is empty, I cut a colorful picture and cover it with clear adhesive-backed plastic and push it into the lid.

I have a set and they serve their purpose well. Best of all, though, they are free and easy to make! — Betty Smith, Alexandria, La.

WHIPPED TOPPINGS

Dear Heloise: Why don't they make whipped toppings with oils other than coconut and palm oils?

Cardiac patients are forbidden to eat even small amounts of these oils, so many otherwise acceptable recipes can't be used. Soybean oil is acceptable and it does not have to be imported, thus its use would support the struggling American farmer! — A Reader, Neosha, Mo.

One of the reasons these oils are used in whipped toppings is because these saturated fats make them more stable and helps them stay whipped longer.

Cholesterol is a major health focus and I'm sure companies which prepare whipped topping are testing new ingredients to eventually limit or eliminate cholesterol altogether in their products.

For a low-calorie, no-cholesterol whipped topping, whip a couple of egg whites until stiff, add a drop of vanilla and sugar to taste and whip until foamy. It's a wonderful substitute. — Heloise

HEALTH CHECKS FOR WOMEN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Government studies show American women are increasingly using regular blood pressure tests to guard against hypertension, but there is a need for more preventive care against breast and cervical cancers.

Women participants in a preventive medicine program at the NewHealth Centers are given a complete gynecological examination, including mammogram and pap smear, with results of the tests being provided the same day.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS; My mother had a stroke six months ago. It left her paralyzed on one side. She needs constant care.

Mom is in her late 60s and could live another 10 or 15 years. I am the only daughter in the family, which means I'm stuck with all the work. I have an 8-to-5 job, so I hired a nurse to stay with Mom during the day. I go to Mom's house right after work and spend the night there. I haven't slept in my own home or with my husband for six months. Our marriage is beginning to feel the strain. Our children are in their teens and I should be home for them, but I feel that Mom needs me more.

I have three brothers who refuse to do anything to help me. They drop in for an hour a week and tell Mom how busy their lives are. Not once have they offered to stay with her so I could spend some time with my family in my own home. They say they can't do much for Mom because they can't give her a bath or take her to the bathroom.

The weekends are the worst. I'm at Mom's from Friday evening until I leave for work on Monday. That's 60 hours straight. My back, arms, shoulders and neck ache from lifting her in and out of her wheelchair. I would like to hire someone to stay with Mom weekends so I could get some relief, but every time I mention it she cries.

I love my mother and feel guilty that I'm angry about this, but I'm afraid it's going to cost me my home and family. I don't have anyone to talk to, Ann. My husband is furious with me for not telling my brothers off. The people I work with don't want to hear about my problems. They have their own. Any advice?—Exhausted and Resentful familiar one. No matter how many children there are in the family, one always ends up where you are.

Your husband must be a saint to put up with your living at your mother's house for six months. Your first responsibility is to him and the children.

I see two options:
1. Find someone who can stay with your mother from 5 p.m. until the nurse comes on duty in the morning.

2. Put your mother in a nursing home, the cost of which should be shared by you and your brothers.

Please discuss this with your mother's doctor. He or she can help. Can your church (or your mother's) provide volunteer relief? Also, talk to a social worker about counseling for yourself. You sound as if you are running on empty, dear. At the rate you are going, your mother could outlive you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You did a number on the fashion industry awhile back. Now will you kindly say something about the current hair styles for women?

The pressure to have out-of-this-world, crazy, wild hair these days has driven women to do the zaniest things. They look like savages. I have seen some gorgeous heads of hair tortured, frizzed, crinkled, crunched and fussed out so that no comb could possibly get through it.

Why do women go for this nonsense? Please ask them.—Vexed in Va.

DEAR VA: I did ask them and this is what I was told: the "savage" look requires very little care and it's "different." It's also a way to say, "I'm doing my own thing."

Do I think it's becoming? No.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Lyles gives program on silk scarves

Jean Lyles gave a program focusing on silk scarves when Hereford Fine Arts Association met May 9 in the Community Center.

A local well-known artist, teacher, and business woman, Lyles demonstrated painting on silk and told of its origin. She noted that the art is being revived in this country and displayed several examples of her work.

Plans for the annual Jubilee of Arts, sponsored by HFAA, were discussed. The event will be held in August.

It was decided that the club would give three scholarships to graduating seniors this spring.

Recipient of the dinner-out gift certificate was Bobbie Wilson. Hostesses serving refreshments for the evening were Mary Garza and Lyles.

Present for the meeting were Linda Minchew, Vinita Wear, Jolene Bledsoe, Bobbie Wilson, Mary Garza, and Jean Lyles. Euman Lyles was a guest of the club.

Herd meets Panthers Friday

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

It took a three-team playoff, but the Hereford Whitefaces (22-2-1), ranked second in the state by the Houston Chronicle, finally have an area playoff opponent in the Fort Stockton Panthers (14-9).

The two teams will play a one-game playoff at 7 p.m. Friday at Moffett Field in Snyder. To get to the ballpark, take the Big Spring exit off U.S. Highway 84. Go south on College Avenue, the main north-south street in Snyder, to the south side of town. Turn right (west) onto Towle Park Road (near Wal-Mart) and go west to Moffett Field (see map).

The Panthers finished the season tied with Snyder and Andrews at 10-4 for the 4-4A lead. After drawing a bye through the first round of the district playoff, the Cats fell 4-2 to Andrews.

The Mustangs are trailing one game to none in their area series with Lubbock Estacado after the Matadors took Tuesday's game 7-6. Game two of that series will start at 5 p.m. Friday at Angel Stadium in Midland.

Herd head coach T.R. Sartor described Fort Stockton as a controlled team that plays sound fundamental baseball.

"They're a real good fielding team that doesn't make many mistakes," Sartor said. "We'll have to play some ball to beat them."

First-year Panther coach Fernando Hernandez said while his team may not be overly blessed with physical tools, it has played with consistency.

"We're a contact hitting team," Hernandez said. "We don't have much power but our team batting average is right around .300. We don't have anybody hitting in the low .200 range but we don't have anybody hitting .400. They're all right around .300."

The Panthers are expected to start senior Aaron Ramirez (6-3 with a 1.65 ERA) on the mound Friday.

"Aaron is mainly a breaking ball pitcher," Hernandez said. "He can get his fastball in their but he's not going to blow anybody away with it. He has good control of all his pitches and can hit his spots."

Ramirez, who took the loss in the Andrews game, replaced third baseman Joaquin Banda as the number one pitcher after Banda suffered an injury to his pitching arm.

"He (Banda) either strained or tore a muscle in his forearm," Hernandez said, "and just hasn't been able to snap his pitches off since. He can still throw hard but there's pain whenever he throws off the mound. If we needed him, he could pitch a couple of innings."

The other pitcher likely to see duty is sophomore Flo Garcia (3-0 in district).

"Flo's been a real pleasant surprise for us this year, being a sophomore," Hernandez said. "He really came on for us after Joaquin went down."

Offensively, the Panthers are sparked by second baseman Josue Villa, who is leading the team in batting at .372 and RBI with 13. Other leading hitters are shortstop Pete Martinez at .347 and 13 RBI, first baseman Craig Borrego at .364 and rightfielder Dave Borrego at .354 and 10 RBI.

"The thing that impresses me about this team," Hernandez said, "is its experience. Even though this is my first year here, the team's been together for awhile. The entire starting infield, including the pitcher and catcher, are seniors and the three starting outfielders are all juniors."

As for Friday's gameplan, Hernandez does not see any change from the Panthers normal style of play.

"We're just going to stay with what we've been doing," he said. "We aren't very big and we're not very fast, but we'll try to peck away at the plate. We don't have any power hitters like (Herd first baseman Roger) McCracken or any base-stealing threats like (rightfielder Keith) Brown, but we'll pick up a few singles and might get a double or triple in there."

Tackle wants shot at Tyson

NEW YORK (AP) - Lou Duva is so enthused about Tony Mandarich's knock out of a punching bag that he thinks the 315-pound offensive tackle is ready to take on Mike Tyson ... for $10 million.

Mandarich's agent agrees and says it's not a negotiating ploy.

Tom Braatz, who is trying to sign Mandarich for the Green Bay Packers, laughs and talks about negotiating ploys he's seen in the past.

And Tyson's camp says the talk is just that; that the chances of a Mandarich-Tyson heavyweight title bout are about as good as ... oh, say Duva-Tyson.

All this came to a head Wednesday following a two-hour workout Tuesday in a Los Angeles gym by Mandarich, the No. 2 pick overall in the NFL draft. He was so green when he started that Duva had to show him how to lace on his gloves and shoes.

Then, according to Duva, Mandarich took a swing at an unfortunate punching bag and it was like something out of "The Natural" - lightning bolts, thunder, explosions!

"When he hit the bag, I thought the roof was going to cave in," Duva said. "This guy's a fighter. He's not jacking on a dancer like Muhammad Ali. Tyson comes straight at you. If the fight with Tyson was in a bodybuilding school, bet on Tony. If it was held in a bar, bet on Tony."

Mandarich was equally enthusiastic. Vern Sharbaugh, his agent, said the Canadian-born Michigan State product was ready to take on Tyson, bank his $10 million and then join the Packers next year.

"He felt, 'Eh, if I land one, who knows?'" Sharbaugh said.

"This is a man-on-man challenge," Sharbaugh added. "When you talk about Tyson, you're talking about one of the tough guys in the country. Well, Tony believes he's one of the tough guys in the country, too."

But several impediments remain, most notably Tyson and his current advisor-manager-matchmaker Don King.

"He'll have to get in line," King's spokesman Murray Goodman said of Mandarich. "This isn't like the old days. There are rules. You have to be a ranked contender to fight for a title. This guy hasn't fought anyone. We don't have exhibitions for heavyweights."

There are a few precedents, although the last amateur to fight for the heavyweight title was Pete Rademacher, the 1956 Olympic heavyweight champion, who was knocked out in the sixth round by heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson in his first pro fight in 1957.

There was also talk during the 1960s of bouts between Ali and football's Jim Brown and basketball's Wilt Chamberlain. They never came off.

Then there was Ed "Too Tall" Jones, the Dallas defensive end, who took off the 1979 season to become a boxer, won all six of his bouts unimpressively and returned to the Cowboys in 1980.

Sharbaugh, who is believed to be seeking nearly $2 million a year from the Packers, said he believed before the workout there was a 5 percent chance Mandarich might choose boxing over football. "Now it's a little better than that."

Braatz, director of football operations for Green Bay, simply recalled when he was with Atlanta, negotiating with another top pick, Bill Fralic, now an All-Pro guard.

"Fralic was going to be a wrestler. He had a promoter, too," Braatz said.

Bennett working on national drug policy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Drug czar William J. Bennett engaged in a little give-and-take during a meeting with commissioners and player representatives of several professional sports, but he indicated he may take a stronger stand when the group meets again this summer.

Bennett, who is devising a national drug policy, said he spent much of Wednesday's 90-minute meeting exchanging ideas with sports officials on methods to improve anti-drug standards for the country and for professional athletes. He was politely given several reasons why pro sports leagues could not devise a uniform drug program, and didn't even suggest that athletes be subject to random testing.

"Surprisingly, he was not in there mandating that we have random testing," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association. "That was music to my ears."

Upshaw and his fellow sports officials, however, may just have to face the music in the next few months, when the group gets together again.

"We didn't talk about random testing today, but we might talk about that next time," Bennett said. "We'll get into specifics at the next meeting."

Bennett gave the sports officials something to think about when he pointed out that professional athletes adhere to less-stringent rules than he has prescribed for high schools.

"I told them that professional sports has to be part of the solution," Bennett said. "The question I put to the group is, 'While we are pressing very hard on schools and others to have tough policies, it seems only right that professional sports have those kind of standards.'"

Two picked for Greenbelt

Two Hereford High School football players have been selected to participate in the 1989 Greenbelt Bowl to be played Aug. 11 in Childress, according to HHS Athletic Director Don Cumpton.

Seniors Joe Medrano and Bryan Watts were chosen to play for the West squad in the annual high school all-star matchup, Cumpton said. Both served as team captains for the 1988 regional finalists.

Medrano was the Herd's leading tackler with 108 and earned All-District 1-4A honors from his middle linebacker position.

Watts, an offensive guard, gained recognition on the all-district and All-South Plains teams as well

Reception scheduled for new coaches

A reception to welcome Hereford High School's two new basketball coaches will be held Sunday from 2-4 p.m. in the Friendship Room at the Hereford State Bank.

The reception will introduce boys' coach Jimmy Thomas and his family and girls' coach Dickie Faught and his family. It will be hosted by the Hereford Whiteface Booster Club, and refreshments will be served.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

Reuschel almost perfect against Phillies on birthday

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

Instead of a perfect birthday present, Rick Reuschel got a very good one.

The San Francisco pitcher had a perfect game going against Philadelphia until Tom Herr singled with two outs in the seventh inning Wednesday night.

Herr was thrown out trying to stretch the hit into a double and Reuschel pitched a hitless eighth inning before reliever Jeff Brantley completed the Giants' 6-0 victory.

Reuschel, who turned 40 on Tuesday, won his 200th game last week. But none of the victories have been no-hitters.

"You don't think about perfect games or no-hitters at my age," he said. "But when you get in that neighborhood, it's nice."

Reuschel, now 7-2, asked Manager Roger Craig to take him out after eight innings.

"He told me he was getting tired and didn't want to pitch the ninth," Craig said. "He's a rare breed. He once told me he didn't care about complete games or shutouts. He just wanted to win."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Cincinnati 5, Pittsburgh 4 in 10 innings; San Diego 6, Montreal 5; Chicago 4, Atlanta 0; Los Angeles 4, New York 3 in 10 innings; and Houston 3, St. Louis 2.

Reds 5, Pirates 4
Bill Landrum, 0-1, walked Bo Diaz with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning to force in the winning run.

Padres 6, Expos 5
Rob Nelson's three-run homer snapped a sixth-inning tie as San Diego swept the three-game series. Mark Grant, 1-1, pitched four shutout innings in relief of Bruce Hurst for the victory. Montreal starter Pascual Perez, 0-6, struck out 10 in six innings but was hurt by four unearned runs.

Cubs 4, Braves 0
Jeff Pico, 2-0, pitched seven shutout innings in his first start of the season as the Cubs swept the Braves at Wrigley Field for the first time since 1984.

Dodgers 4, Mets 3
Rick Dempsey drew a bases-loaded walk from New York pitcher Rick Aguilera, 1-1, with two outs in the 10th inning to give the Dodgers their third straight victory. Alejandro Pena, 2-0, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory and Jay Howell worked the 10th for his fifth save.

Royals' Farr, Tigers' Hernandez miss saves

By The Associated Press

Ten times Steve Farr accepted the assignment and came through. Guillermo Hernandez met the challenge seven times.

Wednesday night, they both failed. Farr, the ace of the Kansas City bullpen, and Detroit reliever Hernandez failed in save situations for the first time this season. Minnesota rallied for a 4-3, 10-inning victory over the Royals. Chicago scored five times in the ninth inning to beat Hernandez and the Tigers 10-7.

Charlie Leibrandt carried a three-hitter and a 3-1 lead into the ninth when Kirby Puckett singled with one out. Farr came in and immediately yielded Gary Gatti's game-tying home run.

"He's been perfect all year," Manager John Wathan said. "It would be hard not to go to him in that situation, and I'll do it again. What hurt him was getting behind (to Gatti) in the count. But again, he's been perfect all year and it was bound to happen sometime." At Detroit, the Tigers led 7-5 and the White Sox had one out when Harold Baines singled and went to third on Ron Kittle's double. Ivan Calderon was given an intentional walk to load the bases. Pinch-hitter Carlos Martinez doubled off the left field wall for two runs. Steve Lyons was walked intentionally, loading the bases for Manrique, who doubled off the center field wall to make it 10-7. "Willie (Hernandez) made a good pitch, but he has to give me credit," Manrique said.

Elsewhere, California beat Boston 5-0 as rookie Jim Abbott pitched a four-hitter for his first major league shutout. Also, it was Cleveland 6, Toronto 3; Baltimore 8, Texas 2; Oakland 8, New York 3; and Milwaukee 9, Seattle 6.

Angels 5, Red Sox 0
While Abbott was allowing four singles and getting solid defensive help in the form of four double plays, Roger Clemens lasted only two innings in his shortest outing of the year. Abbott, 3-3, who was born without a right hand, struck out four and walked two. The shutout was the Angels' ninth this season - they had nine all of last year. Clemens dropped to 5-2.

Athletics 8, Yankees 3
Oakland had 15 hits, including four by Terry Steinbach and Mark McGwire's long two-run homer. Oakland relievers held New York hitless the final four innings, with Dennis Eckersley getting his AL-leading 12th save.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 3
At Toronto, Joe Carter's three-run homer climaxed Cleveland's six-run third inning as the Indians handed Toronto its first loss since Cito Gaston took over as Blue Jays manager Monday.

Brewers 9, Mariners 6
At Seattle, Jim Gantner sparked a four-run third inning with a two-run double and Terry Francona, Charlie O'Brien and Paul Molitor homered for the Brewers.

Writer decides against releasing report on Rose

NEW YORK (AP) - After getting a copy of baseball's confidential report on Pete Rose's gambling - followed by threats of lawsuits - a free-lance writer has opted to put the document in his memorabilia collection instead of up for sale.

"I have been advised by my attorneys not to sell the report," David D. Shumacher said on Wednesday. "I don't need the money, and the aggravation isn't worth it. I just want to wash my hands of it."

Shumacher's decision ended day-long speculation which began when USA Today revealed he had tried to sell them the report, setting off a steady stream of calls from the media and several attorneys to the writer.

Asked if he had been threatened with legal action over the possible sale, Shumacher laughed and replied, "Legal action is not the word. It's been unreal."

Despite his decision not to sell, Shumacher steadfastly refused to say how he got the report, who had bid for it or how much was offered. He confirmed there had been a $20,000 offer.

Baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti, speaking in Washington after a meeting with federal drug czar William Bennett, said he had heard rumors that a copy existed. The report, compiled by investigator John M. Dowd, deals with allegations about Rose's gambling.

"I know of no release of any document. ... I cannot believe it came from either side, frankly," Giamatti said. "It certainly didn't come from mine, and I'm not saying Pete or his attorney would."

"Theft is always a possibility, but I have no reason to think that would happen," he said.

Rose's lawyer, Reuven J. Katz, received a copy of the 225-page report last Thursday along with a letter from Giamatti saying the contents should not be disclosed or copied. The attorney said Wednesday he had no idea how Shumacher could have gotten the report.

"I've taken extraordinary measures to protect access to that report," said Roger Makley, one of two principal attorneys representing Rose.

Dowd, asked about Shumacher's claim, replied, "I know nothing about it." Asked if there was any way Shumacher could have obtained a copy from Dowd's office, the investigator flatly said, "No sir."

Earlier, Shumacher said he was considering "a moral question" as to whether an early release of the report would be prejudicial to the Cincinnati Reds manager, who has been the center of allegations involving sports betting since the start of the season.

The report will now become the centerpiece of Shumacher's baseball memorabilia collection, the writer said.

Despite the maneuvering for the report, Shumacher did not produce it for editors at two newspapers where the report was shopped and he said it was not with him in California.

Giamatti, who received the report on May 10, said Rose's scheduled May 25 hearing would not be moved up if the report is published. Deputy Commissioner Francis T. Vincent Jr. declined to comment on the possibility of legal action if Shumacher's claim turns out to be true.

Offers to buy the report were declined by USA Today, the Los Angeles Times and the Cincinnati Post.

Earlier this year, Shumacher wrote a two-part story for Penthouse based on his interviews with Margo Adams, the former lover of Boston Red Sox third baseman Wade Boggs.

Shockers win tourney

The Beef'n More Shockers swept undefeated through the 5th Annual Rocky Flores Memorial Tournament, held Friday through Sunday, on their way to their third straight tournament title.

The Shockers beat the Clovis Knights 9-6 in the championship game. They also beat the Knights 3-2 in the first round of the tournament.

After drawing a bye through the second round, they beat Clovis Budweiser 7-2 and then dropped the Hereford A's 12-2 in the semifinals. Tournament Co-MVPs were Benny (Bam-Bam) Gonzales and Jackie Mercer. Gonzales was also the Home Run King for the event.

Edward Martinez led the team in hitting with a .900 batting average for the weekend.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

There are "art" films and then there are films that are just pure fun. Criminal Law, for all its posturing, falls into the latter category.

"CRIMINAL LAW": Starring Gary Oldman and Kevin Bacon is loaded with invigorating, scary fun. It opens rather pompously with a quote from Nietzsche, the German philosopher who believed that man can perfect himself through forcible self-assertion. Because the film does not identify Nietzsche or explain his philosophy, or its connection to Criminal Law, this bit of pseudo-intellectualism fails. But what-the-heck, it's still a wonderfully frightening and well-acted film. It's supposed to be a psychological thriller. Psychological? Perhaps. A thriller? Oh, absolutely! There's a thrill a minute in this overly directed film full of excesses. In Criminal Law it doesn't just rain - it floods. Players don't bleed - they gush blood; they are not just startled by turns of events, they are sent into cardiac arrest; they don't slip in mud, they wallow in giant bogs of goo, and it is simply terrific to watch. There is little mystery about the people or what happens to them in the movie but, because Criminal Law is so fast-paced and interestingly played, you will stay riveted to your seat.

Gary Oldman plays a Defense Attorney who gets a murder acquittal for his very guilty client, Kevin Bacon. When Kevin Bacon continues to murder young and seemingly innocent women, Gary Oldman is (this is the only place in the film where you have to stifle a laugh) SURPRISED. Gary Oldman then sets off to do what the movie would have you believe no lawyer has ever done before, violate his professional ethics in order to stop his client from killing again.

The writers and the director want badly to create a film that will call forth debates about lawyers and their ethics. What they have done instead is to give us a genuine, semi-horror film, full of grisly anticipation; tense enough to make us jump a little in just the right places. The script preaches some and slows down often to make sure that we don't miss the sermon-on-the-mount; but it does have literate, believable dialogue and is not predictable at all.

The casting also contributes to the success of the film. In Criminal Law you have a truly bad character who looks like a hero, and a hero who looks like the personification of evil - powerful casting against type that works.

It's R rated with good reason. If you enjoy gore and gristle dripping over good acting, this is a film for you. Three Boxes.

RENTAL MOVIES

If you like this "women-in-danger" theme, then rent...

"SEE NO EVIL": (1971) Starring Mia Farrow. See No Evil is a chilling, well-made suspenseful British yarn about a blind woman, played by Mia Farrow, who slowly discovers that her uncle's entire family has been murdered. When she realizes that the ruthless, bloody killer is also stalking her, she desperately tries to escape his clutches. This terror is played out on a quiet country farm. Mia Farrow is very convincing as the maniac's next target and there are enough shocks along the way to please even the most demanding horror fan. You might find this excellent film under its British title, Blind Terror. Rated PG. Three Boxes.

If you have any nails left and want more, check out...

"SOMEONE TO WATCH OVER ME": (1987) Starring Tom Berenger and Mimi Rogers. Someone To Watch Over Me is a first-rate romantic thriller that greatly benefits from director Ridley Scott's stylishly visual dynamics. (His best work to date.) Someone To Watch Over Me has an intelligent script that makes even the most implausible moments acceptable. Mimi Rogers, an ultrarich stunner, witnesses a horrible murder and barely escapes with her life. Tom Berenger is the down-home cop from the Bronx assigned to protect her from the killer. Not to anyone's surprise the married Bronx cop and the beautiful lady have an affair; the painful results convincingly demonstrate how people can mess up their lives without intending to do so. It's a solid, compassionately told tale. Rated R for language, nudity and violence. Three Boxes.

And one of my all-time, old-time, "women-in-danger" films... "SORRY, WRONG NUMBER": (1948) A black-and-white film starring Barbara Stanwyck and Burt Lancaster that is a slick cinema adaptation by Lucille Fletcher of her famed radio drama of the same name. Barbara Stanwyck is superb as an invalid who, due to crossed telephone wires (this was before the "Our computer is down" era), overhears two men plotting the murder of a woman. Gradually Stanwyck realizes that she is the target. She's just marvelous as the victim and Burt Lancaster is fine as the spineless husband. The bulk of the story takes place via imaginative flashbacks so you will have to pay attention in this one. Sorry, Wrong Number has one of filmdom's finest finale scenes. Barbara Stanwyck received a much deserved Oscar nomination for her performance. Not rated but would be a PG. Four Boxes.

Appliances provide easy food preparation

Hot and cold may be opposites, but when it comes to your microwave and freezer, it's a case of opposites attracting. Without them what would the American family do for convenient food preparation?

Home freezers have been an accepted household appliance for decades and now 60 percent of American households do at least some cooking with a microwave oven. The two appliances go hand in hand to give consumers good nutrition in minutes.

Research has shown there is little difference in nutritional content of microwaved versus conventionally cooked foods. In many cases, short microwaving times, actually preserved the nutrient content.

A study at Cornell University, as reported in the American Institute for Cancer Research Newsletter, showed 75 percent of all cases of cooking fruits and vegetables in the microwave yielded a significantly higher vitamin C content than those same foods conventionally cooked. Because little water is used when microwave cooking, vitamin C is not readily lost in the cooking water or destroyed by prolonged cooking. In addition, microwave cooking requires no fat to prevent sticking.

The frozen food industry, sensitive to consumer demand for time-saving products, now offers an array of foods ideal for microwave preparation. Frozen dinners, which originally required substantial time in a conventional oven, now can be cooked in the microwave, for example.

These frozen dinners can bring not only convenience, but also good food to the table. In a special report by the Tufts University Diet & Nutrition Letter in March, 1988, 451 frozen meals were judged for weight, calories, protein, fat and sodium content. Based on these criteria, 44 meals were "highly recommended" if enjoyed as part of a well-balanced diet.

Microwave cooking and frozen meals, created and improved by technology, bring America the best of both worlds: good foods and convenience.

The importance of gold to California is indicated by some of its official symbols: it's nicknamed the Golden State; its colors are blue and gold; the state mineral is native gold; the state fish, the golden trout; and the flower, golden poppy.

Woman's Health

WORKING DURING PREGNANCY
By Robert C. Park, M.D.
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Although some women do not want to keep working after they become pregnant, a doctor usually hears the issue in a different way: "How long can I keep working now that I'm pregnant?" For that answer, your own physical state, your medical condition, and the nature of your job will help provide the answer.

During the early months of pregnancy, your body goes through many changes, and the physical demands of your pregnancy alone may mean that you don't want to work. If you're strong, your energy level can see you through many months of work during your pregnancy.

On the other hand, you might have problems with weight control, swelling and water retention, in addition to suffering fatigue. In that case you need to focus more on your health--and your baby's--instead of trying to stick with the job.

The kind of work you do is important. Obviously, being a trapeze artist is no job for an expectant mother even if she has lots of energy. There are other jobs like those in factory assembly lines or in retail stores that are nearly as hard on a mother-to-be. certain jobs involving exposure to chemicals or X-rays may be hazardous and should be discussed with your doctor.

If you feel comfortable with the physical activity involved in your job, then it's usually all right to continue as long as the exertion does not become too much at home or on the job. Also, you don't want to be active to the point that your heart and lungs work so hard that they have difficulty supplying the fetus with all the blood and oxygen it needs. Remember that the key to all physical activity in pregnancy is moderation.

Finally, if you enjoy your job, it gives you satisfaction, and you can handle the physical demands, you might work far into your pregnancy. After your sixth month, keep in touch with your physician to make sure everything's progressing well. And follow these tips.

Get plenty of rest. If you're on your feet, you'll need a good pair of shoes. Elastic stockings might be necessary if you start developing varicose veins. Walk around a bit, especially if you have a desk job. It will help your circulation.

The first flying trapeze act was performed by Jules Leotard at the Cirque Napoleon in Paris in 1859. He was immortalized as "That Daring Young Man On His Flying Trapeze."

Club meets for tours

Members of the Cultural Extension Homemakers Club met for a luncheon recently in the home of Edith Hunter.

Following the meal, the group toured The Hereford Brand with John Brooks, managing editor, explaining how the newspaper operates on a daily basis. The women were then given a tour of KPAN Radio Station led by Chip Formby. He asked the club members for suggestions on how the radio station can better serve the public.

A short business meeting was conducted before the close of the meeting.

There were two guests and 10 members present.

Rebekahs prepare for meeting

Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 met Tuesday evening with 15 members present.

Noble Grand Marie Harris presided over the business meeting as reports were made on sick members and friends. Twenty-one visits, 28 cheer cards and five flowers were recorded.

Practice was held on balloting in preparation for a District V meeting to be held May 22 in Friona.

Lodge men served refreshments to Harris, Stella Hershey, Shirley Brown, Rosalie Northcutt, Susie Curtsinger, Erma Loving, Leona Sowell, Sadie Shaw, Irene Merritt, Anna Conklin, Peggy Lemons, Ursalee Jacobsen, Gene Bishop, Tony Irlbeck, Jim Loving and Ben Conklin.

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) - A survey by NPD, a market research firm, says the ham sandwich is the No. 1 main dish served in American homes. A glass of milk is the most popular beverage. NPD conducts research through its Home Testing Institute, which calls upon a panel of 200,000 households nationwide.
