Ancient Tortoise.

A specimen of a tortoise that lived on this continent about 35 million years ago, is on display in the collection of fossil animals in the Ernest B. Graham hall in the Field museum. The shell and skeleton of the animal which is 48 inches long, were found in a sandy bluff along the North Platte river in western Nebraska and the specimen was reconstructed in the museum laboratories.

LIST ROGUES' GALLERY OF BIRDS AND ANIMALS

The skylark is a "bithe spirit" in English spirit, but in American agriculture it is an undesirable alien and is to be excluded from the United States, according to instructions recently issued to customs officials.

Based on a declaration by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, the instructions, issued by Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, include the skylark in a list of birds and mammals "injurious to agriculture and horticulture." Their importation is "absolutely prohibited and permits for their importation will not be issued under any circumstances."

Other birds designated as injurious are the common or house myna, created or Chinese myna or starling, European bullfinch, European yellowhammer, greenfinch and chaffinch. Mammals denied entry to the United States are the black or house rat, roof or Alexandrian rat, common or brown rat, European rabbit, European hare, all species of fruit bats or flying foxes and all species of mongoose, sometimes known as lechneumon or Pharaoh's rat.

The Lacey Act of 1900, which is administered by the United States Biological Survey, prohibits the importation of injurious birds and mammals and provides that no person shall import any form of wild animal or bird except under special permit of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Simpson of Amarillo spent last week in the home of her mother, Mrs. E. W. Harrison.

DIPHTHERIA YIELDS TO IMMUNIZATION

With sporadic cases of diphtheria being reported from various communities in Texas, Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer, has issued another warning to citizens to be on guard. The importance, the value, and the effectiveness of diphtheria immunization of children, he said, is a well established fact to the medical profession of today and it is possible to say, without reservation, that diphtheria is a preventable disease.

"Since diphtheria immunization is now a procedure of proved value," Dr. Brown said, "it places the control of diphtheria in our hands, but the greatest obstruction to elimination of diphtheria is delay."

"Mass immunization in schools and clinics has demonstrated that the people of a community may control the number of cases of this preventable disease and that immunization is a simple and harmless procedure. However, the fact that 134 cases of diphtheria were reported to the State Health Department for the month of October shows that diphtheria is on the increase. The first week of October showed 27 new cases reported to the department, the second week showed 17, the third week 27, and the fourth or last week the alarming number of 63 new cases.

"The fact that diphtheria is most dangerous to the very young children makes immunization not only a school problem, but a pre-school problem. Parents who fail to observe a precaution which may prevent a fatal illness are taking a heavy responsibility. This immunizing agent is absolutely safe to administer. There is only a slight local reaction, and practically no constitutional or troublesome after effects. It confers a life-time immunity in the majority of cases.

"It is hoped that every community, if it has not already done so, will commence to wage a campaign to have all pre-school and school children immunized against diphtheria."

Saves Over Seven Millions.

Texas farmers who have refinanced their debts through the Federal Land Bank at Houston will profit by a gross interest saving of more than $7,250,000 for 1936, a statement today from A. C. Williams, president of the bank, revealed. As nearly as can be estimated, says Mr. Williams, this benefit will be divided among the owners of 83,075 farms.

"Who's been here?" Mrs. Greeding demanded. "Who's been upstairs? It couldn't just fall; and even if it did, it wouldn't break all to bits like that! That statuette was valuable, Ruth. If you did it, you might as well tell the truth."

"I didn't, Mrs. Greeding," the woman insisted stiffly.

And Mrs. Greeding said apologetically, "Of course not. I didn't mean to seem to doubt you. But who else has been upstairs?"

"Only Miss Greeding, and the Doctor," Ruth returned.

Then Doctor Greeding opened the door between the two rooms. "Hello, Myra," he said casually. "What's the trouble?"

Mrs. Greeding turned toward him. She was a large, fair woman with hair a little too insistently yellow.

"Ned!" she cried. "Some one's broken my statuette! See!"

"Probably fell off the stand," he suggested.

"Nonsense!" she cried indignantly. "A fall might have cracked it; but it's just ground to bits. Look!"

"It must have been an accident, Myra," he urged impatiently. "Never mind that now. You can get another. I want to talk to you!"

He looked toward Ruth, and the woman grimly disappeared.

"Another?" Mrs. Greeding cried indignantly. "Another, indeed! Ned, don't you realize that works of art don't come by the dozen! That statuette was unique! It was one of Payson's things, and he's practically my discovery, and that would have been priceless when he became known. Another! Ned, sometimes you're the most irritating man!"

Doctor Greeding fought to keep his voice under control. The affair of the statuette was disquieting enough, certainly, but there were other matters better worth discussing. He managed a smile.

"I'm sorry, Myra. Perhaps if you subsidize Payson sufficiently he'll do you a copy. I expect he will be glad of the commission."

"But he can't, Ned! Works of art—"

Doctor Greeding said sharply: "Tosh, Myra! Drop it, can't you?"

"But it looks as though some one had just pounded it and pounded it!" she urged, in an increasing mystification. "It could not possibly break all up that way just by falling."

He said irascibly: "Will you be still! Forget the fool thing. It isn't worth all this talk, surely."

She stared at him shrewdly. "Ned, you've been drinking!" she cried. "I can always tell. Your eyes are red. Whatever has happened to upset you? It isn't like you to come home and get drunk and—"

He cried in a deep exasperation: "Stop it, Myra!"

She was suddenly pale. "Why, of course, Ned," she said placatingly. "I didn't mean—"

She seemed puzzled, incredulous. She came to him, kissed him. "I'm sorry, Ned. I didn't mean to bother you. Had a hard day?"

"No!" he barked. "Then you're worrying about one of your patients."

He shook his head, patted her shoulder roughly. "Not at all," he insisted. "I'm a little tired, nothing more." He released her and she turned back to the dressing table. "We must dress now," she said. "We're dining at the Jordans', you know."

"Ruth told me," he assented. She began to undress. "You'd better hurry if you'll be late," she said.

He hesitated, but the time was in fact short; and in such matters he was punctilious. He went to his own room, to the shower. But presently, sitting his studs, he came to the door between their rooms again, and saw that she was brushing her hair; he asked in a tone carefully casual:

"Nancy going with us?"

"No," Mrs. Greeding told him. "She's going somewhere with Judith."

His collar pinched his neck as he fumbled with the button; he made a wry face. "Not alone, surely," he protested. His tone was light, amused. "I don't suppose two girls as pretty as Nancy and Judith are likely to go anywhere alone."

"I don't know," she admitted. "I didn't ask! Ford Minick, likely, or Ethan, or Pete Masters, or some of that crowd."

"Nancy doesn't seem particularly interested in any special young man," he remarked. "Or at least if she is, she conceals the fact from the paternal eye."

"Probably there will be, by and by," his wife agreed. "Nancy'll tell us when she's ready."

The Doctor was conscious of a reservation in her words.

"How about Dan Carlisle?" he asked bluntly.

"Oh, Dan hasn't the money to play with their crowd," she said, after a moment. "Of course, Nancy knows him."

"I've seen him here once or twice," he assented scornfully. "He seems a pleasant youngster; but I can't imagine any man worth his salt deliberately taking to teaching as a profession."

"I've heard Professor Carlisle lecture," she commented. "He's a charming old man."

"No doubt," the Doctor agreed in a dry tone; but he said then roughly, impatient of indirection: "Yet the Professor's charm does not justify Nancy's imagining herself in love with Dan."

He saw her eyes widen, and recognized that she had known about Dan, and had wished him not to know; and his face congested with anger at the thought! She saw his countenance in the mirror and turned pale; but said nothing.

"You knew he was," he said in a low voice, accusingly.

"Nancy's never spoked to me about it, Ned," she urged defensively. "I—I've only guessed. I've seen no more than you. It's only that I'm perhaps a little closer to Nancy—understand her better—"

"Closer?" he ejaculated in a rising wrath.

"She's afraid of you, I think, Ned," she confessed. "You do act sometimes as though you owned her, you know."

"Afraid of me?" His cheek was purple. "Why should any daughter be afraid of me? I'm no ogre!"

"No, you're not," she assented honestly. "You've been generous with Nancy, given her everything, and you're always calm and kind."

But—you've always had your own way. I've worried, sometimes, about what you might be like if—things didn't go to suit you."

is still perfectly ready-to-go.

Now these days you read on every side, how poorly-oiled starting causes most engine wear, and how fast a Winter oil ought to flow. But you cannot have even a doubt of sure starting-lubrication, when it is always UP IN ADVANCE. That's Oil-Plating . . . a plain, straight, economic reason for changing to your correct free-flowing Winter grade of Conoco Germ Processed oil—patented. Costs no more than changing by hunch.

Central School Has Exhibits

Central School put on their yearly exhibit last week. It was the Colonial Art Exhibit from Oklahoma. This consisted of 225 masterpiece pictures, all in full color. The pictures were large and well hung; and were from old masters down to the modern. Each picture had the name of the picture and the name of the artist printed at the bottom of it. About $55 was taken in. This money will go to buy six new pictures for the building. The room which sold the most tickets gets first choice. This was Miss Pitman's first grade room. Second choice goes to Miss Rutherford's room.
The children were taken through the exhibit by rooms, while the teachers explained to them the meaning and importance of the pictures. It was found that the children like the old picture paintings as well as the new and modern ones.

HONOR AWARDED

In assembly December 24, Mr. Hudson made a presentation of a ten dollar check to Mildred Hacker and a plaque to the president of the Student-Faculty Association.

Miss Hacker entered a contest concerning old relics. She described and drew several pictures of an old wedding ring brought her from Germany by her grandmother. Miss Hacker was given third prize, which was $10. Consequently the school to which she belongs was presented a plaque.
The president of the Student-Faculty Association, Virginia Lee Hussey, accepted the plaque, and in her acceptance stated how proud Hereford High School is to have students like Miss Hacker, who are willing to work and bring honor to themselves and their school.

GIRLS' H-Y IS ORGANIZED

A group of 33 girls of Hereford High School met in the study hall Monday, November 16, to discuss the organization of a Girls' H-Y club. Mr. Hudson, sponsor of the boys' H-Y met with the girls and explained to them the problems of organizing and problems that would arise after organization.

A nominating committee, Virginia Lee Hussey as chairman from the Senior Class; Mary Tiefel, Junior class; Mary Louise Dean, Sophomore class, and Annie Jo Owen, Freshman class, was appointed to nominate several girls for temporary chairman of the club and a program director, who are to be voted upon in the next meeting, Monday, November 23. The time of meeting also is to be decided at the next meeting as some of the girls did not favor meeting at night. As the afternoons of the school week are filled, Sunday afternoon seems to be the only other suitable time.

The girls who join the club must be willing to give up many of their pleasures and some of their time in order to make the club a success. They must be willing to do some work and sacrificing for the club to live up to the slogan which is, "Clean Speech, Clean Athletics, Clean Scholarship, Clean Living," and the purpose, which is "To create, maintain and extend, throughout the school and community, high standards of Christian living and Christian character."

Mr. Dillehay Returns

Mr. C. H. Dillehay returned Sunday, November 22, after attending a State Board of Education meeting at Austin, which was held from November 19 to the 22. He went for the purpose of selling refunding bonds for Hereford school district. "The bonds that bore 4 per cent," said Mr. Dillehay, "were substituted for 5 per cent bonds making the total interest saving $17,000 for the remaining 28 years. The bonds to be replaced were issued on the Central School, the old high school, and the present high school building."

The State Board of Education has agreed to buy bonds for the permanent school fund as soon as the legal papers have been approved by the Attorney General. The bonds will then be printed and the exchange will be made.

While away, Mr. Dillehay saw several former students of Hereford High School, namely: Nancy Conkright, Bill McLean and Jim Kirby; also he saw Miss Gladys Hicks, a former teacher of Hereford.

Among the guests of honor were Governor Allred, five ex-governors of Texas, representatives of both houses of Congress, and representative of all the colleges in the state.

Pep Club Votes To Help Council

The Pep Club met November 19 at the home of their president, Mary Ann Baird.

There were 20 members present, and sponsor, Miss Neville Wienn.

The club voted to help the Student Council gather and reconstruct toys for a charity Christmas box.

After all business was attended to, a social hour began. Interesting games were played and a lovely time was had by all.

The three co-hostesses, Mary Ann Baird, Virginia Nix and Melvina Stewart, served lovely refreshments of punch and cookies.

Mr. Wilson: What is LXXX? Bernadine Phillips: Love and kisses.

churches which we have in our town," said Reverend Thorns.

"So, this Thanksgiving pause for a moment or two and think of what you have to be thankful for and offer a prayer of thankfulness to your God."

A good word of advice, fellow schoolmates; may we follow it.

Mr. Thorns Talks

Reverend John C. Thorns, pastor of the Presbyterian church, spoke to the student body Tuesday, November 24, at activity period. His subject dealt with "The Origin of Thanksgiving, and Why Thanksgiving Should be Observed."

Until only a few years ago Thanksgiving was observed by no country except the United States and there is no calendar day really designated as the holiday in the United States. The Reverend Thorns told of his first Thanksgiving and how he still yearns for a piece of pie which he could not eat at that time.

The Reverend Thorns also told of the circumstances of the first Thanksgiving, how the small band had been cut to about 50 because of death, how very little grain had been raised, and they did not have the large feasts which we have today, and yet they had something to be thankful for.

"Today when we have thousand-fold more to be thankful for we have lost the real spirit and thought of Thanksgiving and think only of it as a day for Texas University to host A. & M., or some other big football game. "We are too wrapped up in our troubles to see what we have to be thankful for."

"We can be thankful for our school, teachers, and, yes—even detention hall; also for the
