Strict Secrecy
The maneuvers, largest in the nation's naval history, will progress over 12,000,000 square miles for nearly six weeks. Last year's war genes, highlighted by the theoretical destruction of Honolulu, involved only 5,000,000 square miles.

The navy high command indicated that the newly-strengthened rules for secrecy on ship construction will be carried over into the maneuvers.

The "problem," or objective of the games, was not disclosed. Last spring, when the international relations were comparatively tranguil, neval officers talked more freely.

To back up the secrecy efforts, fleet commanders will have a ruling issued by Secretary Swanson last December, to the effect that "peepers" may be driven off with gunfire, or taken captive. Navy lawyers also have held that antialirersft guns may be fired, after due warning, at strange planes flying over the area without permission.

sistant and adviser in tax assessing, revenue collecting, and general search and seizure. It was the last assistance we wanted, but we had to have him, because of course he was a necessary official link with Saremba — and Mantucen's head spy. Now that the coast was safe this official arrived, complete with a staff, effects, and detinue, in four well manned bankongs.

A Cheery Firsts
I will say for Rentongen that I have never seen a more present-have never seen a more present-able Malay. Though not as tall as Mantusen himself, he was well above the average Malay height and carried himself with the balance, leisurely grace of the active fighter. In age he was probably 30, but his supple muscles were more like 18, and his face no more than 20. If I had not known Malays I 9:35 would have said that his face was 10:00

The first move of this cheery pl. 10:15 rate was to have all of his belong. 10:30 ings carried into the Rajah Clyde's 10:45 house. He didn't wait to be asked: 10:55 Rontongen was, as we were to 11:00 discover, strictly self inviting throughout. He inspected and passed Clyde's extension of the 12:00 longhouse, now nearly completed; 12:15 and dropped the remark that he 12:30 and his people would now have 12:45

As we went through the long ceremonious silences necessary to my uncle's first council with Rentongen, I know that Clyde 2:05 was trying to thing of a diplo- 2:30 matic way to get the rascal out of his house before he settled down to live there. But this question never came up, because other mat-ters much more serious appeared immediately.

We now learned that Clyde's concession as regarded the Hhab Bandar had been somewhat mis-understood and exaggerated whether by Rentongen or Mantusen himself we could not make out. What Rentongen understood was that he was now in full charge of all taxations, extortions, frame-ups, and port levies—even the principal trade burglaries, notably the monopolies on salt and gun-

From the revenue he collected he was to hold out the annuities for the Sultan of Saremba, the annuities for Mantusen, and a little something for himself and his people; the remainder was then to be turned over to Clyde to meet to be turned over to Clyde to meet Abilene were weekend guests of Mr. government expenses, with ac- and Mrs. B. In one stroke, if he gave in to all this, Clyde's rajabship was rethis, Clyde's rajabship was re-duced to a purely military liability. Even this, Rentongen suggested, the Shah Bandar would be happy to make easy for the Rajah Clyde. He would, if my uncle desired, take antire control of all fortifications, expeditions, intimidations, and mis-cellaneous ambushes, leaving the Rajah Clyde free to enjoy his title unimpeded, together with whateve profits might be left over when Rentongen had had his whack.

It was a grave situation, almost an insuperable one. It would be a long time before we could dare dely Saremba.

And now we had to explain to Rentongen that he was not collector of revenue either under or over Clyde. It was the duty of the Shah Bandar of Balingong to re-ocive the annuities that were due Mantusen and Saremba; these

Sen. Ashurst Remarks There Are Too Many Pending Laws, But He Says It In A Nice Way

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) Senator Henry Ashurst (D-Ariz), who likes nothing better than a well-turned phrase, looked over the calendar of his judiciary committee today and discovered that 44 proposals for constitutional amend-nents were pending.

About 270 bills also are awaiting ommittee action, Chairman Ashurst said, indicating by an inclu-sive wave of his hand that such a condition might suggest many laws soon will be passed.
