When it comes to budgets

Gramm softer on state than Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas would fare better under Gramm-Rudman than under the budget that President Reagan has proposed, according to state analysts who don't expect to have a detailed analysis of the fiscal 1987 administration proposal until next week.

"But based on our first look at it, it's clear that it is a very tough budget, to meet a very tough standard," John Hanson, director of the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations, said Wednesday. "It is very austere on the domestic side, and that's in order to protect the growth in the defense buildup.

"The result for Texas — we don't have specific numbers yet — but it's clear that at a time when the state's budget itself is extremely tight, it is going to put a great deal of pressure on state resources," he said.

Gramm-Rudman, the new law sponsored by Republican Texas Sen. Phil Gramm and two other senators, would mandate across-the-board cuts if Congress cannot pass a budget that meets a prescribed deficit reduction target. For fiscal year 1987, the figure is $144 billion.

Under the automatic cuts, if they are triggered, Texas would lose an estimated $40 million in FY 1986 and an estimated $300 million in FY 1987.

But Gramm-Rudman would include cuts in the defense budget. Reagan proposed cutting welfare rather than defense, and some of those welfare programs would be immune under Gramm-Rudman.

"That's one of the trade-offs we're going to see over the summer" as Congress grapples with the budget, Hanson said.

Elaine Furlow, one of the analysts in the state office, said localities are going to be hit hard because they will lose money right away for such projects as wastewater treatment. She said there is no state money to take up the slack and the bond market is frozen while Reagan's tax reform plan is pending.

Cities and counties are "kind of left in limbo," she said.

Traditionally, the president's budget has been considered an interesting policy statement, but its figures not taken that seriously since it rarely resembles the budget eventually passed by Congress. Hanson said that has changed this year, the first year of Gramm-Rudman.

"This is the opening volley, in the classic sense, in a summer-long battle. The bottom line is the 144 (billion-dollar deficit ceiling) set by Gramm-Rudman," Hanson said. "This (budget) is unlikely to pass in its current state, but we have to follow more closely than ever the response to this, because they may not get to 144 this way, but they're going to get to 144."

Four twisters rip across east Texas

TOMBALL, Texas (AP) — One person was killed and at least 44 injured when four tornadoes ripped through eastern Texas, leaving behind a trail of fallen power lines and tattered houses and buildings.

Some of the heaviest damage Wednesday occurred in Tomball, where Police Chief Derwood Kennedy said residents in the town 35 miles northwest of Houston were ankle-deep in hail.

"We've had so many houses hit that we don't know how many. We've got injuries, houses down, trees down and it's bad," Kennedy said.

"We've had four or five (tornadoes) touch down, and the damage is quite extensive," the police chief said. "Power lines are down by the hundreds, and the hail was so severe it's ankle deep in some places."

Twisters hit two apartment houses, several homes and a doctor's office in Tomball about 4:15 p.m., and about 90 percent of the houses in town suffered some damage, Kennedy said.

Forecasters said the twisters were spawned by fast-moving thunderstorms that brought along heavy winds and golf-ball sized hail.

Judge rules Barrett-Fisher must pay

Barrett-Fisher Co. of Hereford has been ordered by Federal Judge Mary Lou Robinson to pay $24,750 in a class action suit filed by migrant workers in 1980, the year of the onion strike in Hereford.

Combined with an earlier payment, the company has paid $27,350, according to the Texas Rural Legal Aid who represented the workers.

Last summer, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the company was indeed under jurisdiction of the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act.

Approximately 90 workers will be receiving a share of the damage award, including 10 workers who were added to the class after a determination that the defendants had unfairly gotten them out of the lawsuit, said a TRLA press release.

One tornado dipped down near Talco and moved on to nearby Mount Vernon, where it shredded a barn roof. Another twister touched down in Harris County near Katy, causing undetermined damage to a brick manufacturer, but no injuries, said police dispatcher Robin Smith.

The storms produced golf ball-sized hail in eastern Hopkins County in northeastern Texas, officials said.

High winds cut power to about 15,000 homes and businesses in the Tomball-Katy area, said Geri Konigsberg, a Houston Lighting & Power spokeswoman.

One person was killed when the storm struck a trailer park in northwestern Harris County, said County Sheriff's Cpl. Joe Hughes. He had

'Imported' terrorism blamed

PARIS (AP) — France's top police official today blamed three bombings on "imported" terrorism but would not confirm reports the bombers were trying to pressure France in negotiations to free four French hostages in Lebanon.

The third bombing in 48 hours aimed at crowded Paris shopping areas tore through a popular sporting goods store Wednesday evening, injuring nine people and increasing fears of a terror campaign originating in the Middle East.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the latest blast.

A 27-year-old Frenchman injured in the latest blast had his left leg amputated during the night. Five other victims remained in serious condition suffering from burns, cuts and lung problems from the blast.

For bombings in France

Speaking in television interviews today, Interior Minister Pierre Joxe said: "For France, terrorism is above all an imported phenomenon ... We get the fallout of other people's problems."

He contrasted the Paris bombings with the "domestic" terrorism of the Basques in Spain, the Italian Red Brigades and the West German Red Army Faction.

He refused to say whether explosives found on the Eiffel Tower Monday night were similar to those used to bomb the French Embassy in Kuwait two years ago.

Joxe said guards will be posted in train stations — about 600,000 vacationers are leaving Paris this weekend for the annual winter school holiday — and in trains and airports.

Sixty people have been injured in five blasts, 39 of them in the Dec. 7 bombings of two department stores.

Eight people were injured Monday night at a shopping arcade blast on the Champs Elysees and four people were hurt Tuesday night at a popular Latin Quarter bookstore. Police also defused a bomb Monday night at the Eiffel Tower.

The daily newspaper Le Monde said Wednesday: "A single thread links the four attacks ... Origin: Middle East and, more specifically, the Lebanese theater of shadows where other threads, Syrian and Iranian, are mingled."

"Motive: To put pressure on the French government in the negotiations to free the four French hostages held in Lebanon," Le Monde said.

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem group loyal to Iran, has demanded an exchange of prisoners for hostages, notably asking for the return of five people being held for the July 1980 attack on former Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar.

But Lebanese-born French Dr. Razah Raad, who has been involved in the Beirut negotiations for the French government, said on television he personally doubted the theory.

'N-reach' goal may revamp basketball

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

A Hereford company just may be revolutionizing the game of basketball.

Poarch Brothers, Inc., has begun production of a new kind of basketball goal that will grow with your children. Poarch Bros. is calling the adjustable goal "N-Reach."

The idea for N-Reach came from Ken Walsler, president of Poarch Bros, as he was trying to come up with a way to provide a basketball goal for his daughter. Walsler felt that the 10-foot goals were just too hard for the smaller children to hit.

The concept of the adjustable goal, instead of an adjustable pole, makes it easier for the children to adjust the height of the goal.

The goal can be placed anywhere between 6'8" to the standard 10 feet. "We made this so even the little bitty guys could do it," said Poarch salesman John Chance. The company's slogan is "Kids are our goal."

Poarch Brothers feel that with the adjustable height feature, children who can reach the goal at its lowest setting will be great shooters by the time they can play on the regulation level.

The N-Reach system can be adjusted with just the turn of a crank. The only movable parts are the two bars that attach the backboard to the standard. One of the two bars attached to the backboard is also attached to the crank, the other bar is attached to the pole. The design will keep the backboard the same distance from the pole and also will keep the backboard level.

Poarch Brothers plans to market this product through catalogs and direct mail marketing plans, plus have representatives throughout the country who to sell and install the goals.

The first steps in marketing the product will be taken next Tuesday when Poarch Brothers will set up a booth at the National Home and Garden Show in Ft. Worth. There, the Hereford company hopes the product will gain exposure from retailers and distributors.

Man commandeers flight

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — An "emotionally distraught" man, holding a penknife to a steward's throat, commandeered a Delta Air Lines jumbo jet and the 232 people aboard before FBI agents wrestled him to the floor nearly two hours later, officials say.

No one was hurt during the standoff that ended at 8:44 p.m. Wednesday at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, and authorities said early today they still didn't know what precipitated it.

The man — identified as Ralph A. Hughes II, 34, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. — made no clear demands after he grabbed the steward as the plane taxied to the Delta terminal, FBI Agent Bob Gillham said.

Gillham described Hughes as emotionally distraught, and airport spokesman Joe Dealey Jr. said Hughes "appeared to be and sounded disturbed. Perhaps he was suffering illness. He just appeared to be mentally disturbed."

Hughes, who released all the passengers shortly after police began negotiating with him, had no hope of hijacking the plane because the captain had sealed off the Lockheed L-1011's cockpit, Gillham said.

He said Hughes was to be held overnight by the Texas Department of Public Safety airport police and that he would be charged under federal statutes covering a crime aboard aircraft and assault of a crew member.

Expert speaks out on AIDS hysteria

BOSTON (AP) — Now that doctors have clear evidence AIDS isn't caught through casual contact, they should play a more active part in "quelling the hysteria" over transmission of the deadly disease, a physician says.

"The picture is ... clear," Dr. Merle A. Sande wrote in an editorial in today's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine. "The AIDS virus is spread sexually, by the injection of contaminated blood and vertically from mother to fetus. Other modes of transmission are extremely rare."

The latest evidence supporting this view is contained in a study also published in the journal. Doctors surveyed 101 family members who lived with AIDS patients, both before and after they got sick. None caught the disease.

Dr. Gerald H. Friedland, the study's chief author, said, "We conclude that the risk of transmission of the virus during close, long-term contact has to be extremely, extremely small, approaching zero. That is very reassuring."

Sande, chief of medical services at San Francisco General Hospital, said that even though scientists have learned much about the AIDS virus, the new knowledge has often produced more public concern than relief.

"It is now time for members of the medical profession, armed with this knowledge, to take a more active and influential role in quelling the hysteria over casual transmission of AIDS," he wrote.

'Garbage Patch Kids' are latest fad

NEW YORK (AP) — A spoof of Cabbage Patch Kids called "Garbage Pail Kids" is the latest fad in schools, and it's driving parents and teachers crazy.

Like Cabbage Patch Kids, the Garbage Pail Kids have round faces and pudgy bodies, but that is where the similarities end.

The Garbage Pail Kids are ugly and nasty.

There is Acne Amy, a pimple-plagued adolescent with braces; Mad Mike, a savage in a leopardskin wielding a sword and an ax; and Wacky Jackie, in a padlocked straitjacket.

There are many others, like Greaser Greg, a juvenile delinquent with his death's head T-shirt and a cigarette; Dead Fred, who has a bullet in his forehead; and Wrinkled Rita, a Miami matron who needs about a gallon of wrinkle cream.

The cards also offer citations for a variety of questionable, albeit humorous, behavior. For example, there is a "Bully License," and a permit which confers "full legal right to gorge yourself" on junk foods.

Robertson considering presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Pat Robertson, declaring, "I can't sit idly by," is winning cheers from conservative Christians when he links his name with the possibility of running for president.

Robertson, who has said he is praying for guidance on the question of seeking the 1988 Republican nomination, didn't even say he was considering it in his speech Wednesday night to 2,000 people at the concluding banquet of the annual convention of the National Religious Broadcasters.

But the Christian Broadcasting Network president, who is based in Virginia Beach, Va., got the message across anyway. And it won him his loudest and longest applause of the evening.

He held aloft what he said was a fund-raising letter from Democratic Party chairman Paul Kirk — a letter pointing to the threat of a Robertson presidency.

The letter concluded, Robertson said, by saying, "The price of failure is now too high."

Report given on illegal aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign workers who enter the country illegally are easily absorbed into the labor force and can sometimes make a positive contribution to the U.S. economy, President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers told Congress today.

"Illegal aliens can find it possible to evade some taxes, but they use fewer services (especially social security benefits) than do other groups," the report said.

The president's top economic advisers said that while they weren't condoning illegal immigration, they could find no evidence the employment of illegal aliens displaced native-born workers from jobs.

The report on aliens, which had become controversial even in advance of its release, was one of seven separate economic studies accompanying President Reagan's annual economic message to Congress.

Group to study shuttle explosion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The focus on the Challenger disaster is swinging from search ships in the Atlantic Ocean to the nation's capital, where a presidential commission will use thousands of photographs, tons of debris and miles of computer tape to try to tell the full story of history's worst space accident.

The 12-member commission, headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers and onetime astronaut Neil Armstrong, was to determine what caused the fireball that killed six astronauts and schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe on Jan. 28 in the first in-flight disaster in 56 U.S. manned space missions.

The panel, which must report back to President Reagan in four months, was meeting today for the first time in the huge auditorium of the National Academy of Sciences.

In Philippines

Military on alert, pollwatchers taking posts

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos put the armed forces on "red alert" today, the eve of the special presidential election. In a U.S. television interview, he accused opponent Corazon Aquino of saying his re-election could spark civil war.

Both Marcos and Mrs. Aquino were interviewed by ABC News "Nightline" for a program broadcast late Wednesday and early today in the United States. The interviews were not seen in the Philippines, where official campaigning ended Wednesday.

Speaking on "Nightline," Mrs. Aquino, 53, reiterated fears the Friday election may be rigged in favor of Marcos, who has held power for 20 years.

Marcos, speaking from the presidential palace, said any irregularities would come from Mrs. Aquino's supporters, and said, "I am so certain of victory that these declarations of my opponent — civil war, in this country — indicates how desperate they are."

Marcos, 68, called the election more than an year early to prove to critics he still can muster popular support. The campaign has attracted widespread attention abroad, and foreign pollwatchers were fanning out today across this archipelago of more than 7,000 tropical islands to observe the balloting.

An announcer on Philippine government radio, making public the decision to bring the military to its highest level of preparedness, said, "The armed forces are on red alert, starting at noon today.... This means that all military personnel will be on call for the next 24 hours. All leaves and furloughs are canceled."

Unless extended, the 24-hour alert would end three hours before polls close Friday.

Although the Filipino military is customarily put on alert for elections, today's announcement comes after a tough warning from Marcos that he would crack down on instigators of unrest.

An Aquino campaign spokesman, Raul Contreras, asked if the opposition saw anything worrisome in the alert, said alerts were customary for elections, but added: "Everything is ominous right now. The situation couldn't get any worse than what it is already."

Mrs. Aquino said on the ABC program that her defeat would outrage many Filipinos.

"I asked the people not to engage in any violence," she said. "If they think that they have been cheated out of any election, I'm afraid they may not listen to me anymore."

Referring to alleged cheating by Marcos' supporters that could cost her the election, Mrs. Aquino said, "He'd better watch out. I'm afraid he will have angry people."

White calls for spending slow-down

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he is working on specific plans to trim state spending to meet declining revenues and he wants state agencies to immediately look for places to cut.

"As I am sure you are aware, the precipitous drop in the price of oil and the deteriorating market have raised serious questions about the state's revenue picture," White said in a Wednesday letter to chairmen of state boards.

"We need to begin drawing plans immediately to lessen the obvious strain on our revenue base," he said. "I am putting all state agencies on notice to prepare now for additional budgetary constraints."

Comptroller Bob Bullock said Tuesday he would soon issue an updated revenue forecast based on declining oil prices. The current state budget is based on the assumption that oil and gas taxes will produce 14.5 percent of all state revenue.

White said he will "lay out specific plans to cut spending to the extent they are warranted" by Bullock's updated look.

Spot oil prices have dropped from a November peak of $31.70 a barrel to a $15.44 closing price on Tuesday, although they rose slightly on Wednesday. Oil sold on the spot market accounts for only about 10 percent of Texas oil sales, but can foreshadow falling contract prices.

White called on agencies to identify "steps you could take to slow down spending currently authorized" by the appropriations bill. He suggested that money could be saved through cuts in capital outlay, travel and "those areas least affecting delivery of the highest priority services."

"Furthermore, it is imperative that no new financial obligations be incurred or programs be initiated during the next several weeks until we receive and review the comptroller's assessment," White said.

Bullock said "the oil situation that has unfolded in the past three weeks has serious implications for Texas and its finances." He said he is working on a revised look at state finances, based on the lower oil prices.

White said Wednesday that Texas is "already operating under one of the tightest budgets in memory."

"We must, we can and we will live within our means," the governor said in the letter.

He said the federal budget proposal announced Wednesday by President Reagan "would place a significant strain on state resources at a time when our budget is especially tight."

"It is ironic that, in light of increased competition in the world marketplace, this administration proposed to cut financial support for education when Texas is investing more dollars in education to make Texas workers among the best trained in the world," said White.

Falling oil prices may halt growth

NEW YORK (AP) — The downward spiral in oil prices should ease inflation and boost economic growth, creating what one economist called "basically a $10 billion gift to the United States economy."

Sharply lower oil prices are a shock to the economy, but a good shock, allowing policymakers to lower interest rates and spur growth without fear of renewing inflation, some economists say.

The nation's savings on oil imports will be greater than $10 billion in 1986 if crude oil prices hang at their current levels, said John Hagens, a vice president of Chase Econometrics Inc., in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

On Wednesday, the price of oil in the open market rose from the seven-year lows of the previous day. Major grades of crude from the United States and the North Sea, which were falling toward $15 a barrel Tuesday, hovered around $16.

The fear of economists and bankers is that prices are falling too quickly, allowing too little time for the losers like the oil industry and banks that have lent heavily to oil concerns and oil-producing countries to cope.

Some economists also worry that cheap oil could lure importers like the United States into abandoning conservation measures, thus boosting demand and giving the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries a chance to reassert its power in a few years.

Despite such concerns, economists share the enthusiasm over oil prices that has pushed the stock and bond markets into strong rallies.

Ten to 15 people were taken to Cypress-Fairbanks Medical Center near Houston and two of the injured were admitted in stable condition, said spokeswoman Audrey Schwarting.

Wilma Jackson, director of administrative services at Tomball Community hospital, said 17 people were taken to the hospital for injuries. Four of the injured were admitted, two of whom were in critical condition she said.

Details of the injuries and other patients' conditions were not available, Ms. Jackson said.

Another 17 injured were taken to Northwest Medical Center in Houston, said spokeswoman Susan Bailey. Seven of the injured were admitted and their conditions ranged from good to serious, she said.

One of Northwest Medical's patients — a 17-year-old boy who suffered head injuries — was taken by helicopter to Houston's Hermann Hospital, where he was listed in serious condition.

"They're serious injuries," Ms. Bailey said. "Some of these people were in automobiles and got hit by flying debris."

Nearby David Wayne Hooks Memorial Airport also was heavily damaged by the twisters.

Dozens of airplanes were upside down on the air field, many of them sitting in ditches or under water. Crumpled aircraft littered the roadsides near the airport.

Power lines and trees at the airport were fallen and sections of hangars were strewn about, many of them wrapped around utility poles.

Crews with the Jersey Village Civil Air Patrol prepared to crawl through each of the wrecked planes to disconnect the plane's emergency transmitters, which automatically trigger distress signals if plane crashes, officials said.

Tax bill ruling due

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special three-judge federal court plans to rule Friday on the constitutionality of the Gramm-Rudman Act, which requires a balanced federal budget by 1991, it was announced today.

A court spokeswoman said the decision will be made public at noon. The court heard arguments in the case Jan. 10.

The measure was attacked as "Byzantine" and an abdication of Congress' responsibilities in a suit by a 12 members of Congress.

The law, passed in December, triggers automatic across-the-board cuts if Congress is unable to reduce the current deficit of around $200 billion — either through spending cuts or tax increases.

No matter what Friday's decision says, an appeal to the Supreme Court for speedy review is expected.

President Reagan submitted a proposed federal budget Wednesday that envisions a $144 billion deficit for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The Gramm-Rudman Act would permit a deficit of that size for the 1986-87 fiscal year.

Abundant Life

DON'T NEGLECT SELF

By Bob Wear

ONE OF THE most hurtful things done by overly conscientious, well-meaning people is to neglect themselves. For whatever reason we may neglect ourselves, or in whatever way we do it; we will suffer loss. We also run the risk of becoming weary with life. We must be wholesomely and wisely interested in ourselves, and be doing what is best for us. Of course, we are not recommending a self-centered, selfish way of life. We can give the proper care to ourselves without being self-centered. In fact, doing right by ourselves is pre-requisite to the best possible interactions with other folk.

IT MAY NOT be easy to discover and maintain just exactly the best balance between interest in ourselves and in others, but this must be our continuing desire and we must never stop trying to do so. There will likely be some mistakes, but we must not be discouraged by them. There are times and situations when we should try to please others; and there are times when it is important that we please ourselves. We can usually know which way to go, when the need arises.

ONE FACT IS CERTAIN, we cannot please everybody; even if we try. This cannot be accomplished, and if we go too far in our efforts to try to please other people we will do ourselves irreparable damage. "A man who trims himself to suit everybody will soon whittle himself away."—Schwab.

THE PROPER REGARD of self requires a proper regard for self, and this means that we must never neglect self. By self, we mean body, soul and mind; with all justified needs and desires. We can best meet the legitimate requirements of life for ourselves and in our relationships with others by "looking well to self".

THERE IS NO justified reason for self-neglect.

Smoke damage can be removed from clothing

Studies on the removal of smoke damage from washable clothing indicate the best procedure may be washing them at home, says clothing specialist, Dr. Ann Beard.

Tests on cotton, polyester and cotton/polyester blend fabrics show that washing removes smoke damage more effectively than dry cleaning, says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Both visible smoke damage and odor may be successfully removed from washable fabrics using the following laundry procedures:

-Use the normal or regular cycle with warm wash and warm rinse. Keep the load small so fabrics have room to move easily in the water.

-Use a liquid laundry detergent, following the manufacturer's recommendations for amount. If you don't have liquid laundry detergent available, you a powdered detergent containing phosphates and liquid chlorine bleach. Use the amounts recommended on the label. Be aware that the bleach may cause some fading or other damage to the fabrics.

-Repeat the washing from three to five times until all smoke odor is gone. Avoid drying the fabrics between launderings if possible. If the fabrics must be dried, use no heat in the dryer since heat may inhibit the removal of smoke damage.

Defending overweight persons

DEAR ANN: I offer a triple-pronged rebuttal to "Bay Area Betty," "Knowledgeable in N.H." and "Young widow"? After those vicious attacks I can no longer remain silent.

I weigh 255 pounds and have been this weight most of my adult life. My mother weighs well over 300 pounds. Medical checkups have proved that we both have metabolic disorders.

Never, and I repeat never, have I or my mother broken a chair, cracked a toilet seat, caused floors to separate or needed to have a couch or chair reinforced. I drive a compact car and it does not drag on the ground when I turn corners, nor have I ever fallen through the floor and landed on the pavement.

Neither my mother nor I own custom-built furniture. We are middle-class working people and our furniture is of ordinary quality.

I am firmly convinced that "Betty," "Knowledgeable" and "Widow" are mean-spirited liars. They have used your column to vent their hostility toward fat people by their portrayal of us as oafish, glutinous, inconsiderate housewreckers.

I have slim friends and relatives who, during visits to my home, have torn the upholstery, spilled wine on carpeting, ruined finishes on furniture and broken china and glassware. I was annoyed at their clumsiness, but I certainly would not ban them because of these mishaps.

I am asking for equal time and an opportunity to defend ourselves. I know of no group in America that has been so maligned and despised as the overweight and it is high time someone gave us an audience. Will you be the one?—OVERABUSED AND UNDERPROTECTED

DEAR OVER AND UNDER: With

Honor students named

WTSU — Last semester, 716 West Texas State University students achieved grade-point averages high enough to qualify for the Dean's List or President's List.

To be named on the Dean's List, a student must have a course load of at least 12 semester hours and maintain a grade-point average of at least 3.25 (of a possible 4.0). For the President's List, a 3.85 average is re-

WTSU to host annual fair

West Texas State University will host its third annual Summer Camp Job Fair on Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 1-5 p.m. in the Houston Activities Center.

Young people at least 19 years of age (or with one year of college) may meet with representatives from 21 camps and recreational facilities to apply for summer positions.

The camps are looking for people lovers who have some skill to share with campers: story telling, music, counseling, athletics, first aid, nature study, arts and crafts, drama, dance, lifeguarding, food service, secretarial skills, or any other skill that could be useful in a camp setting. There are also a number of positions for working with handicapped children.

The Summer Camp Job Fair has no formal registration; interested persons may come and go as they please. Here's your letter—every word of it. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Help is needed before I lose my mind.

I have two little girls. I love them dearly. I've been engaged for over two years to a very demanding and rigid man. He is strict not only with me but with my daughters. The problem: He is unable to show the girls any warmth or caring. To be perfectly truthful, Ann, he treats them with complete indifference. When I ask him why he is so cold he says, "I am not an affectionate-type person. I will never be able to love your girls the way you want me to love them because they are not my natural children. You'd better get used to it."

My question is: Should I marry this man (he's been asking for a year) and hope in time he will change his attitude toward my girls? I would like to marry again and a decent husband is hard to find these days.—TORN UP IN PA.

DEAR T.U.: If you marry this man his indifference to your daughters will be a constant source of heartache. It will probably get worse as time goes on. NO husband is better than one who will bring you grief. And this is what I see written all over your letter.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. For a copy, send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Honor students from Hereford include Wanda E. Taylor, Jeffrey D. Shire, Jimmy C. Rowton, Joanne J. Bone, Joel M. Lytal, Robert D. Grace, Jeffrey T. Flippo, Kathleen O. Haney, Eric R. Alexander, Christy D. Duncan, Donna G. Stotts, Cindy L. Garth, Patricia J. Fisher, Cynthia S. Streun, Jill S. Pickens, Gary W. Rahlfs, Marcia D. Crowley and Cindy J. Morgan.

please. But WTSU's Placement Office will offer resume/application forms which may be given to the various camp representatives.

The fair is sponsored jointly by WTSU's Recreation Club, the residence halls, and the Career Planning and Placement Office.

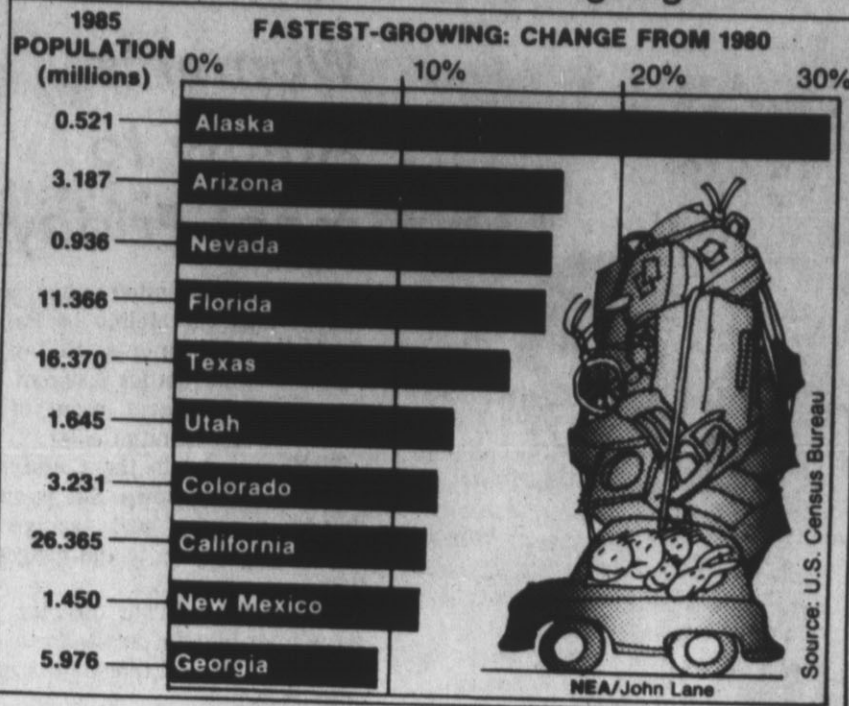

TURTLES
JAMESPORT, N.Y. (AP) — More than 15 endangered sea turtles landed on Long Island's North Shore recently, some 3,000 miles from their homes in the Gulf of Mexico.

The turtles suffered shock from the change in water temperature and only seven survived.

After being cared for by the New York Marine, Mammal and Sea Turtle Stranding Network, the seven turtles were flown to Florida. No one knows why the sea turtles traveled so far north, but currents and warm water eddies that spin off the Gulf Stream may provide some clues.

BOOMING STATES

Where Americans are going

While Southern and Western states added large numbers of new residents, the total U.S. population rose in the first half of the 1980s by 5.4 percent — to about 239 million. Losing population, meanwhile, were Michigan, Ohio, Iowa, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

In stereotype

Researchers notes changes

FORT WORTH — The stereotype of the unwed mother is changing, according to a researcher at Texas Christian University.

More middle class, educated, older women are making decisions to be single mothers, said Charlene Urwin, assistant professor of social work at TCU whose doctoral dissertation deals with single mothers.

"I wanted to look at their decision-making process—who was important to them and what factors influenced the decision to have the child," she said.

Urwin interviewed 22 women who had been single at the time their children were born. Intentionally, she did not interview people who were getting financial or professional help because she "did not want to reinforce the stereotype of the unwed mother as poor or having emotional problems."

Although most of the women had younger children, the study included some women whose children were born almost 20 years ago. Older mothers felt the stigma much more; they did not have the alternative decisions of the younger mothers and were less sure what to tell their children. Their decisions were more painful to make.

"At one time, people did not know other single-parent families," Urwin noted. "Now they do. It's a much different dynamic. Although times are easier now and single parenthood is more common, it appears to be harder to be pregnant and single than to be a single parent."

Women in the study showed strong feelings for family and home, said

Urwin. Their ages and sense of readiness were important factors in their decisions. They were established in their careers. In fact, the median income was $16,500, which was a high figure for female heads of households during 1982-83, when the study was conducted.

While most felt positive about their parenters, they didn't feel permanent about one man; yet they still wanted to have a family. They saw those decisions as separate.

"A lot of women talked about the need for a support system—whether it was family, friends or co-workers," the TCU sociologist explained. "While their decisions were largely independent ones, they benefitted from knowing others would be supportive. Friends and siblings seemed most helpful to them."

TRAVEL PLANS

ATLANTA (AP) — You may be wondering about taking a vacation if you have disabilities caused by a condition such as arthritis. But arthritis doesn't have to take the fun out of summer, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

It says the key to traveling successfully if you have disabilities is advance planning. Consult a travel agent for advice on hotels that are modified for people with physical handicaps.

Seasonless wardrobe means saving money

Although the stores may be filled with "spring" clothes, you can save money by thinking in terms of a seasonless wardrobe.

Seasonless wardrobe planning simply means buying items you can wear year-round, says clothing specialist Becky Saunders. This maximizes the wear you get from each item and expands your wardrobe.

A seasonless wardrobe is built on clothes made of fabrics appropriate for different climates, says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Lightweight wool, for example, is comfortable in spring and early summer as well as fall. Linen fabrics that were once worn in the summer only can also be used throughout the year.

Loose knit sweaters made from natural fibers can be worn by themselves in the summer and over other clothes during cool weather.

Loose knit sweaters made from natural fibers can be worn by themselves in the summer and over other clothes during cool weather. The specialist points out that "layering" light-to medium-weight clothes over one another and mixing different prints and textures are fashion trends that make it easier to develop a seasonless wardrobe.

"When shopping for year-round clothing it's important to avoid extremes and choose basic clothing in medium color tones, print sizes, fabric weights and textures for maximum wear," says Saunders. "You can always add a seasonal fashion touch with an inexpensive item or accessories."

It also pays to buy clothing you can mix and match with items already in your wardrobe, she adds.

Think about both your work and leisure clothing needs as well. "Typical wardrobe needs will vary seasonally for some special activities, such as sports, but for everyday activities most our clothing needs are remarkably similar year-round" says Saunders.

The Hospital Auxiliary Board met Monday in the Conference Room of the Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Attending were Bonnie Sublett, Phyllis Brown, Gwen London, Helen Brown, Grace Covington, Bertha P. Dettmann, Lupe cerda, Anna Stindt, Olga Harris, Karen Barela, Etoile Manning, and Theda Seivers.

Cattle ranchers feel pressure of Austin growth

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Beyond the construction cranes, the electronics plants and the sleek specialty retail centers stands Albert Landry.

Barely a half hour's drive from the glamour and glow of Austin, Landry goes about his business as he's done for 30 years. Tall, slim and erect, leathery skin.

There's nothing fancy about cattle ranching.

It is a world far apart from life on the go in the big city. But it is a world close enough to have reaped some benefits and borne some scars from the economic boom in the Austin metropolitan area that encompasses Travis, Williamson and Hays counties.

"Development is taking thousand of acres a year," said Landry, a man with a lonely job and of few words. "The fences have been coming down."

Creeping urbanization — some would say it has galloped in the 1980s — continues to change the face of the cattle industry in the Austin area.

Many of the large ranches, spreading thousands of acres, have been carved up and sold at rapidly appreciating prices for smaller enterprises or residential development.

Full-time ranching has been on the decline for years.

Ronald Leps, county extension agent in Williamson County, profiles the typical cattle operator that has emerged:

"They have 25 to 50 cows. They have a job in town, and they have the land out there which they enjoy. For some it's a hobby. For some it's a tax writeoff. For someone who's trying to make a living, it's got to be impossible."

"All through this area it's a pretty clear trend," he added.

Alongside these part timers are the people who divide their time between ranching and farming.

"Ranching probably represents one-third their income, and the other two-thirds is farming," Leps said.

Typical of that profile is the Holmstrom family, which has been farming and ranching near Georgetown for two generations. The Holmstroms run cattle on 1,700 acres they own or lease and raise corn, cotton, milo and wheat on another 2,200 acres.

"It's not what it used to be," said John Holmstrom, who is in business with his father and two brothers. "A lot of land west of the interstate was strictly ranchland 20 years ago. Now it is being cut up and developed or being sold to developers who are sitting on it and waiting to double their money."

Holmstrom quickly adds that his family, too, has "taken advantage of that and sold some ranchland."

Despite the development pressures, the cattle industry in Central Texas is holding on.

The heart of that industry in the area is called the cow-calf operation, in which a rancher maintains a cow herd for the production of calves. The calves are raised for 6 to 9 months, then sold to a stocker operator who grazes them for another six months before shipping them off to the feed lots in the Panhandle for fattening before slaughter.

Many ranchers, such as Landry, have cow-calf and stocker operations.

In terms of numbers, the cattle industry in the three-county, Austin metropolitan area is relatively small.

As of January 1985, there were 25,000 beef cows in Travis, 47,000 in Williamson and 19,000 in Hays, ac-ording to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. That represents less than 2 percent of the nearly 5.6 million breeding cows in the state.

But among 20 counties within a 75-mile radius of Austin, the beef-cow numbers soar to nearly 720,000, or about 13 percent of the state total.

"It's a very significant part of the state production and forms a significant income source for the counties," said Ed Uvacek, economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The economic ups and downs of Central Texas cattle ranchers have little to do with the factors that have driven and stalled, at least temporarily, the boom in the Austin area.

Down at the ranch, the talk is not of construction projects, the potential of the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., the blossoming of start-up companies and the influx of affluent new residents.

Nor is there the concern about high-priced, unsold houses in the suburbs, the glut of unleased office space, sharp increases in business foreclosures and job layoffs.

Landry and his colleagues worry mostly about beef prices. But they also hold their breath on what farm policies are coming out of Washington. They curse the drought and the pneumonia when it takes hold in the herd. And they grumble about broom weeds overrunning grazing areas.

"Trying to make a living you have to live pretty low on the hog sometimes," says Landry, who keeps about 125 mother cows and 180 steers on a 3,000-acre ranch he has leased 11 years west of Georgetown.

Landry's wife, Wilma; and sons Neal, a student at Baylor University; and Dustin, a senior at Liberty Hill High School, help with the chores when they can.

To supplement his income, Landry has started a liquid feed business and said he is "breaking horses" for some people who are training cutting horses.

No one has to tell a cattle rancher that beef prices declined over the past year, with retail prices at their lowest level in six years. It's been good news to the consumer but a tough pill for the ranchers.

"Profitability has been nil," Uvacek said. "As a result, the cattle herds have been cut back and will probably continue on through this year."

That should lead to a reduction in beef and higher prices in 1986 both for the producer and the consumer.

"Whether they will be high enough to stem the tide we are unable to predict," Uvacek said. "One reason is that every cattleman has his own set of costs."

Changing consumer tastes and lifestyles have also had a powerful effect on the industry.

"People are eating less beef than they used to," Holmstrom said.

"They're turning to chicken and fish and lettuce-and-tomato salads," adds Leps. "Beef has taken a whipping from the health industry that has been undeserved."

The latest farm legislation calls for farmers throughout the country to slaughter about 600,000 dairy cows over the next 18 months to cut milk production and save the government more than $1 billion.

That policy brings no cheers from Landry and other ranchers, who know that it means more beef will be marketed, which will lower their return on investment even further.

Cattle ranchers in Central Texas still talk about the drought of 1983-84 that took a heavy toll, forcing them to sell off many of their breeding cows because pastureland had turned to dust. Landry, for one, sold off a third of his herd and hasn't rebuilt it.

The drought and low beef prices led many part-time operators to liquidate, Leps said.

"They were just losing more money than they could afford," Leps said. "It was becoming too expensive a hobby."

To this day the liquidation continues, Leps said, and he still doesn't see ranchers replenishing their herds.

Still, Uvacek believes the part-time rancher "coming from the bedroom communities" is here to stay in Central Texas as long as land values keep appreciating.

And the shift away from the traditional cattle rancher will continue.

"He has been in the cattle business two or three generations," Uvacek said, "but is finally giving up."

Landry acknowledges he will see the day when ranching as he has known it will disappear in Williamson County. He makes his point by talking about the land he knows best — the sprawling, rocky terrain he has traversed untold times by horse and pickup in tending his herds over the past 11 years.

"They're not holding this land for me to ranch," he said of the owner. "It has got to be developed."

Says 33-year-old woman

'Age bias widespread'

WEST WINDSOR TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — When Patricia Moore went undercover in 1979 as an 85-year-old woman, she hoped to find out what it was like to be elderly in America.

She said she emerged from her gray wig and wrinkled makeup three years later, physically scarred, emotionally battered, incredulous at the way she was treated and determined to alter the way the country views its elderly.

Ms. Moore, 33, said the elderly are portrayed as "slow, poor, wrinkled, (with) snow on their rooftops, cranky, crotchety and doddering. They're lovable, adorable and bake chocolate chip cookies."

She wrote a book, "Disguised: A True Story," about her experience and carried her message Wednesday to the annual Eastern Regional Conference sponsored by the Gerontology Institute of New Jersey.

"This is a Darwinian society, survival of the fittest," said Ms. Moore. "If you are not fit, get out of the way."

Age bias is widespread in the United States, she said, adding that only by a dramatic change in attitudes and the erosion of stereotypes can the elderly begin to be treated fairly. "We are a country built on image and label," she said.

Ms. Moore said she was working in a products design firm in New York City in 1979 when she became increasingly frustrated with the company's unwillingness to design products with the elderly in mind.

"We were literally putting things in our society that didn't work for old people," she said.

She chose a gray wig and makeup, plugged her ears, wore semi-opaque glasses, put splints on her legs to restrict her movement and wore clothing to create three elderly characters: a shopping-bag lady, a middle-income woman and a dowager.

Ms. Moore said she traveled to 14 states, walking the streets of more than 100 cities, eating at restaurants, living in motels and hotels and visiting convalescent homes.

Allentown mulls Mack pullout

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Jim and Deb Kratzer's house, a brick three-bedroom place with a refinished kitchen and a new patio, is for sale. For nine years they've lived there, less than a mile from the Mack Trucks assembly plant where Jim has worked, but now that's all changing.

"We feel we'll have to move out of the area if we want anything permanent," said Mrs. Kratzer, seated in her living room where a tabletop ashtray is decorated with the trademark Mack bulldog hood ornament.

About 1,800 people have jobs at the plant, where Kratzer was laid off in November. "Everybody wants to work for Mack Trucks. They had good benefits and good pay," he said.

Citing the United Auto Workers' unwillingness to give up enough of those benefits and wages, Mack is pulling up stakes for its assembly operation here. By mid-1987, Mack plans to have a new plant operating in South Carolina.

The decision leaves such families as the Kratzers, both 32 and natives of Allentown, mulling whether to move their three children to South Carolina or elsewhere from a community that is steadily moving away from manufacturing.

Mack Trucks Inc., the nation's No. 2 maker of heavy trucks, has been a part of this area for 80 years. It's so much a part that each year, Lehigh County's first dog license goes to a 5-foot model of the bulldog ornament at Mack headquarters.

A few hundred yards from the world headquarters is the 60-year-old factory known as 5-C, which for the last 20 years has produced a line of trucks that Mack plans to phase out for a new line next year.

Renovating the "outmoded and inefficient" factory would be too costly, the company says. To replace it, Mack plans an $80 million, "state-of-the-art" factory capable of producing 70 trucks a day with about 1,000 employees.

Journal carries report of McAuliffe's flight

DENVER (AP) — The January edition of the Colorado Education Association's journal carries a report that all went well on the space shuttle flight of teacher Christa McAuliffe, and the organization is sending letters of apology.

The practice of writing in the monthly Colorado School Journal about events before they occur "is something we will obviously talk about," CEA President Gordon Heaton said Wednesday.

The 16-page newsletter features a front-page photograph of McAuliffe, the New Hampshire teacher chosen to be the first private citizen in space, and says millions of children listened as she gave a lesson from space.

The tabloid already was in the mail when seven astronauts, including McAuliffe, died in the Jan. 28 explosion of the shuttle Challenger.

Christopher Columbus made four voyages to the New World, the last in 1502.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—All in all, last week wasn't a good one for Gov. Mark White, now an embattled figure fighting for reelection.

For months now, White's campaign has figured to skate past the Democratic primary small fries in May to take on the lone survivor of three tough GOP challengers in November.

But last week, as Texas was slapped with predicted gloom in the oil patch and dried-up federal revenues, White found:

—His reelection announcement staged in his mother's old Houston classroom was upstaged by an angry reaction from his once-staunch supporters, Texas teachers.

—One of his small fry Democratic opponents launched an offensive by depicting him as "Gov. Goldcard" and the "original nerd" of Texas high schools.

Zingers, Ouches

White did manage to throw some zingers which landed, particularly on the record of GOP nemesis Bill Clements.

Clements criticized White's lease-purchase plan for prison construction, and White responded that Clements one-time veto of $30 million for prison building made today's construction more necessary and more expensive.

Almost simultaneously, it was reported that Clements, who has really jumped White this year for seeking out-of-state funds, accepted some 120,000 such dollars when he beat John Hill in 1978. Clements had asserted that he had never accepted non-Texas funds.

Goldcard, Nerd

But White almost said out when he defended his lackluster high school record against an attack by opponent Don Crowder.

Crowder had circulated copies of White's senior yearbook page which listed no extracurricular activities for him. No wonder White wanted to punish extracurricular-minded students, Crowder crowed, dubbing White the original nerd of Texas.

For the first time, White got teary-eyed at a press conference, explaining that his father's ill health necessitated him taking two jobs after school.

Crowder took other opportunities to dub White "Gov. Goldcard" for his spending proclivities and tax hikes, and suddenly, White found himself bleeding politically from a political unknown in his own party primary.

Teachers Incensed

After he took television crews to his mother's old Houston classroom to stage his official reelection bid around his concern for excellence in education, the top two teachers associations called it hypocritical.

The head of the Association of Texas Professional Educators said teachers were incensed by it and White was clearly out of tune with the feelings of the teacher corps.

The Texas Classroom Teachers Association, one of White's pillar groups in '82, added their opposition to White's policies.

The week's fray caused one GOP opponent, Kent Hance, to quip in San Antonio, "Sure, the teachers are behind Mark White... but they're chasing him!"

Reforms Today

Part of White's problem is that some 30,000 Texas teachers began preparing last week for the controversial state tests March 10, and another 30,000 start this week.

Also, the Texas Education Agency applied the no-pass, no-play rule by forbidding several Dallas Highland Park football players from attending their annual football banquet because they failed a course. Additionally, the U.S. Census Bureau reported last week that Texas has the largest public school debt in the nation, $5.6 billion.

The heavy migration of students to Texas has caused the building of new buildings and incurring new debt.

More Bids

Three heavyweights who got lost in the White-Crowder-teachers melee were Attorney General Jim Mattox, Treasurer Ann Richards and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, all Democrats who filed for reelection.

Hightower will be opposed by a GOP farmer Charles Trompler of Malone.

Charles Ben Howell became the first GOP candidate for Texas Supreme Court, announcing against incumbent Sears McGee.

Allergy causes discoid lupus

DEAR DR. GOTT — I took a series of tests five years ago and found out an internal infection is causing me to have discoid lupus. The doctors did not find out what the infection is. I have a slight deficiency of iron and thyroid, so I take an iron capsule and 0.05 mg. of Synthroid daily. Are there foods I should not eat? Where can I get more information?

DEAR READER — Discoid lupus is ordinarily considered to be a skin disease due to a person's allergy to his own skin components. The generalized form of the disease, systemic lupus, is more serious and can be associated with anemia and thyroid disorders. Food usually doesn't play a role in the disease. You can obtain more information by writing The Lupus Foundation, 11673 Holly Springs Dr., St. Louis, MO 63141.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 34, female, 5 feet 2, 104 pounds, exercise three days a week and eat the right foods. I just found out I'm a mild diabetic (no medication necessary) and have mitral valve prolapse. There is a long history of diabetes, stroke and heart trouble on both sides of my family. I lost my mother (56), older sister (38) and only brother (24) to heart attacks within the last four years. I have chest discomfort off and on and numbness in my left arm, fingertips, feet and, on occasion, my face. This happens mostly around my time of the month or when I lift something too heavy. I have a lot of questions, but I guess they can be summed up as, "Is there anything I should or should not be doing to take care of myself?"

DEAR READER — Diabetes, even in its mild form, is associated with poor circulation, cataracts, heart disease and nerve disorders.

Ted Koppel says

South Africa press restrictions will haunt them

NEW YORK (AP) — Let's take an age-old riddle — "If a tree falls in the forest and nobody is there to hear it, does it make a sound?" — and give it a contemporary twist:

If demonstrations against apartheid in South Africa are not recorded by cameras and microphones, will they be heard?

Ted Koppel, anchor of ABC's "Nightline," says yes, emphatically. "Precisely because (the violence) has been hidden from view, when it boils over — and it will — there will be an even greater sense of shock," he said.

The South African restrictions, against video and audio coverage of demonstrations and violence in areas of unrest, were established Nov. 2. Government officials said the presence of reporters at demonstrations contributed to the violence. They said stories about unrest, and particularly film images from the black townships, helped destroy external financial confidence in South Africa's stability.

Of course, the government also knew the restrictions would keep such violent images off international television.

Koppel said the strategy is working "in the short-term, but not in the long-term. ... There is a misconception that because they took the story off the screen, it will go away. But the problems won't go away. They're in South Africa's backyard and they're festering." He said the banking community understands the current situation in South Africa, whether or not it's on TV.

Clearly, limiting the coverage of violence has reduced the number of South African stories on the networks' nightly newscasts. According to the networks, ABC, CBS and NBC had 150 stories from South Africa on their weeknight newscasts in August, September and October, but 91 since the ban, in November, December and January.

"The ban has been effective in that it's cut down on daily breaking news out of South Africa," said Rick Kaplan, "Nightline's" executive producer.

"If South Africa had waited and allowed the American media to cover to its heart's content, a certain amount of boredom would have set in," said Koppel. "Let's face it. The story is 8,000 miles away; it's not a backyard issue."

Except that "Nightline," with five extraordinary broadcasts from South Africa last March, had made it more understandable and important to Americans. It also produced more dialogue inside South Africa and even inspired the South African Broadcasting Corp. to start a "Nightline"-style program.

"Nightline's" series of reports from South Africa is among four finalists in the network category for tonight's Alfred I. du Pont-Columbia University Awards in Broadcast Journalism. The ceremony will be broadcast live on public television.

Other nominees are: the "CBS Evening News" for "Afghanistan: Operation Blackout," the NBC News documentary "The Real Star Wars — Defense in Space" and public television's series "The Brain."

"Nightline" is less beholden to video footage because of its Koppel-led dialogue format. In 1985, before the ban, the program devoted 18 programs to the story. Since the ban, "Nightline" has done three broadcasts on South Africa and is negotiating for a return visit there.

"Nightline's" key demand is greater access. Jailed opposition leader Nelson Mandela, who wasn't made available last year, is on the top of ABC's wish list again. Last March, "Nightline" talked to Mandela's wife, Winnie, and other black leaders, as well as government officials, including President P.W. Botha.

Twelve U.S. vice presidents have become presidents.

Irish lose; OU defeats OSU

By The Associated Press

In this case, the "how" wasn't as important as the "what."

Wednesday night, Dayton built a 37-34 halftime lead, then hung on to beat 14th-ranked Notre Dame 67-65 on the clutch free-throw shooting of freshman guard Migele Knight.

Dayton Coach Don Donohue said "the executing of our offense was very, very good" in the first half, "but starting in the second half we got a little quick on the trigger."

"I don't know how, but we got the lead and somehow we managed to score. But we didn't look very fluid."

Dayton hit eight straight free throws, including six by Knight, in the final minute to keep Notre Dame at arm's length. Ed Young led the Flyers, 13-8, with 20 points, and freshman guard Mark Stevenson had a career-high 23 for the Irish, 14-4.

Other Top Twenty results: No. 5 Oklahoma 106, Oklahoma State 84; No. 6 Kansas 100, Colorado 64; No. 8 Syracuse 84, Seton Hall 61; No. 11 Georgetown 80, Connecticut 63; No. 12 Kentucky 73, Vanderbilt 65, and No. 20 Alabama 57, Georgia 54.

"Wherever Notre Dame goes, it's a big game," Donohue said of the homecourt victory. "In our case, it's a really big game. It means a lot to us and the Dayton community."

Notre Dame outscored Dayton 12-6 to start the second half and take a 46-43 lead. But Dayton scored the next eight points, four by Young, to take a 48-46 lead it never relinquished.

No. 5 Oklahoma 106, Oklahoma St. 84 Tim McCalister led six players in double figures with 24 points, and Oklahoma ran off to a 65-39 lead over Oklahoma State early in the second half en route to its 46th consecutive homecourt victory. The Sooners are 21-1 and 6-1 in the Big Eight.

No. 6 Kansas 100, Colorado 64

Danny Manning scored 14 of his 20 points in the first six minutes as Kansas routed Colorado and set a record for consecutive victories at Allen Fieldhouse. The victory was the 29th in a row for the Jayhawks at their 30-year-old home.

Colorado has lost 20 straight Big Eight road games.

Kansas, 21-3 and 6-1 in the conference, led by no less than 25 points in the second half. Cedric Hunter had seven assists for 175 on the season, five more than the team record by Darnell Valentine in 1978-79.

No. 8 Syracuse 84, Seton Hall 61

Dwayne "Pearl" Washington scored nine of his season-high 28 points to key an 11-point run late in the second half as Syracuse rallied for a Big East Conference victory at Seton Hall. The Pirates led 49-47 with 9:58 to play before Washington started the run with a three-point play.

Washington had another three-point play in the run and added a steal and an assist as the Orangemen ran their record to 18-2, 9-1 in the conference.

No. 11 Georgetown 80, Connecticut 63

Georgetown rolled to its seventh straight victory, getting 22 points from David Wingate to beat Connecticut in the Big East. Georgetown has won six in a row in the conference.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — A judge opened the way today for a hearing to decide whether Michigan State basketball star Scott Skiles' probation on a drug conviction should be revoked.

Marshall Circuit Court Judge Michael D. Cook dismissed without comment a motion to stop the prosecution effort to have the probation revoked.

The ruling clears the way for a Feb. 21 court hearing at which prosecutors will attempt to show Skiles violated the terms of his probation, court officials said. The probation was imposed after Skiles pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of possession of marijuana.

GENERAL

CHICAGO (AP) — Seventy-five percent of the profits from the sale of the "Super Bowl Shuffle" records and videocassettes will go to charity as required by law, officials say.

Dick Meyer, producer of the "Super Bowl Shuffle" on Red Label records and Deputy Attorney General Jill Wine-Banks said Illinois law on charitable solicitations will be followed to distribute the funds. This was after Meyer had said last week he would challenge the law with regard to the recording.

A fly ball which clears the fence is judged fair or foul by its position when it leaves the playing field.

raising its record to 18-3 and 8-2.

Earl Kelley paced Connecticut with 22 points.

No. 12 Kentucky 73, Vanderbilt 65

James Blackmon scored a career-high 22 points and led Kentucky over Vanderbilt with two key baskets in the final five minutes of the Southeastern Conference game. Kentucky improved to 19-3 and an SEC-leading 10-1.

Darrell Dulaney led Vanderbilt with 19 points.

No. 20 Alabama 57, Georgia 54

Buck Johnson hit a 13-foot hook shot with 24 seconds left to put Alabama ahead by five points, then blocked a shot by Georgia's Joe Ward that could have pulled the Bulldogs within one on the last play of the SEC game. Johnson, returning from a four-game layoff with a bruised thigh, had 14 points, and Terry Coner had 15.

Alabama, 16-4 and 9-2 in the SEC, has won 19 in a row at home.

NBA all-star events are showcase of individual skills

By BARRY WILNER

AP Sports Writer

As All-Star games go, the National Basketball Association presentation is one of the most entertaining. It's a chance for the players to show off their individual skills, which are considerable, as well as try some things they only wish they could do during the season.

A three-point shot from 25 feet by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar? A behind-the-back dribble by Moses Malone? A slam dunk by Spud Webb?

Wait a minute. Sure Kareem could probably throw one down from 25, most likely with a sky hook. And Moses has enough dexterity to show off with the dribble. But the 5-foot-7 Webb, a rookie with the Atlanta Hawks, jamming?

Come on!

Actually, Webb is not an All-Star, so you won't see him live on CBS this Sunday from Dallas. But he is one of the competitors in the slam dunk championship, which will be held Saturday in Reunion Arena and televised during a two-hour "NBA All-Star Saturday" show on Turner Broadcasting.

Also on view from Dallas will be the league's top long-range shooters — Larry Bird, Trent Tucker, Norm Nixon and Dale Ellis, for instance — who will go at it in the long distance shootout. And an oldtimers game will feature Bob Cousy, John Havlicek, Oscar Robertson, Elvin Hayes, Walt Frazier, Nate Thurmond and many other past greats in a 40-minute game.

TBS' show will air at 10:05 p.m. EST. The proceedings will occur during the afternoon, allowing producer Skip Ellison and his crew plenty of time to weave the elements into a tight, two-hour show.

Skip Carey and Boston Celtics President Red Auerbach will handle commentary of the oldtimers game. Bill Russell, usually one of TBS's announcers, will coach one of the teams and Johnny Kerr will coach the other. Both of them will be wearing microphones.

Who are the wham-bam-slam-jammers to watch this year?

"Dominique Wilkins is the defending champion," says Ellison. "Some of the lesser-known guys are Jerome Kersey of Portland, Paul Pressey of Milwaukee and Roy Hinson of Cleveland."

And Spud Webb, who will be competing in his hometown.

"It's exciting to go back to Dallas," Webb said. "There will be a lot of people there who supported me when I was younger. There will also be some people there who thought I'd never make it in basketball. That will make me feel good, to be competing against the best dunkers in the game when people said I'd never make it."

Rollie Fingers invited to Reds spring training

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds have invited Rollie Fingers, the all-time career saves leader, to spring training, but he'll have to shave off his handlebar mustache.

"I don't know if it's going to work out," Reds General Manager Bill Bergesch said Wednesday, "but they initiated it. If I believe Jerry Kapstein (Fingers' agent), and I do believe him, he's interested in us."

Fingers, who has saved a record 341 games in his 18-year major-league career, was released Nov. 14 by the Milwaukee Brewers.

Kapstein first contacted Bergesch several weeks ago and spoke to Reds Vice President Sheldon "Chief" Bender as recently as Friday. The Reds have offered to bring the 39-year-old Fingers to camp as a non-roster player, which would obligate them only in the event he makes the team.

Reds pitchers and catchers report to spring training on Feb. 20.

Fingers, the American League's Most Valuable Player and Cy Young Award winner in 1981, helped pitch the Brewers to the American League East title in 1982 but missed their drive to the World Series because of a torn muscle suffered in September.

He did not pitch again until 1984, after a bone spur was removed from his right elbow, but rebounded with a 23-save season and a 1.96 earned run average. Last season, Fingers saved 17 games for Milwaukee with a 1-6 record and a 5.04 earned run average.

Tommy Holmes, who held the National League modern consecutive game hitting record until it was broken by Pete Rose, was a star at punching the light bag as a youngster and wor contests in that specialty.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, then with the Milwaukee Bucks, played 345 minutes in a seven-game playoff series against Boston in 1974 to set an NBA record.

Four close games played in SWC

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The second-division teams couldn't buy a break and Texas Christian, Texas Tech, Texas, and Southern Methodist escaped with their scalps after a severe case of sweaty palms in a series of Southwest Conference basketball cliffhangers.

TCU went to double overtime to beat Arkansas 73-71 in Fayetteville Wednesday in the Horned Frogs' first victory there since 1972.

Texas Tech, the defending champions who had lost four games in a row, outlasted Houston 92-91 also in double overtime.

SMU came from eight points down to subdue the fiery Baylor Bears 61-57 and Texas had to struggle to beat Rice 62-56.

The idle league-leading Texas Aggies got the night off and it was probably a good time to be away from the action.

They lead with an 8-1 record but TCU and Texas are just a half-game behind with 8-2 ledgers.

SMU is in third place with a 7-3 mark while Tech is now 5-4.

Houston is 4-6 followed by Arkansas 2-9 and Baylor and Rice who have one victory each in 10 games.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said Baylor is definitely back. He joined Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf in praising Coach Gene Iba's crew.

"Baylor is a good ball club and we're glad we don't have to play them again," said Bliss. "This was a fortunate win for us. Baylor played just a super ball game but we did the things we had to do down the stretch to salvage the game."

He added "I don't think we took Baylor lightly. They just played good."

Kevin Lewis led SMU with 22 points while Michael Williams was high for Baylor with 18 points.

Bryan Stinchcomb hit a 12-foot jumper with six seconds left for TCU. He had not scored in nine previous Southwest Conference games.

The Red Raiders' Sean Gay sank two free throws with 21 seconds to go in the second overtime and Tobin Doda hit 19 second-half points to lead Texas Tech.

In Austin, Karl Willock hit two key baskets and two free throws for the Longhorns.

Boston has 13-game winning streak

Walton winning with Celtics

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

Many years and several injuries ago, Bill Walton had a ball helping UCLA win 88 consecutive basketball games.

Now, in his 12th National Basketball Association season, the 6-foot-11 redhead is enjoying winning as a backup center and forward with the Boston Celtics.

"I love to win," Walton said Wednesday night after sparking the Celtics to their 13th consecutive victory, a 103-88 decision over the Washington Bullets.

"I hope it never ends," Walton said of the streak. "It certainly is not the time to stop now. Basketball is a lot of work and nothing is worse than working hard and losing a game."

The Philadelphia 76ers routed the New Jersey Nets 142-107 in the only other NBA game.

Larry Bird scored 26 points and grabbed 16 rebounds in 41 minutes to lead the Celtics. Robert Parish hit for 25 points and had eight rebounds playing against 7-foot-6 Manute Bol.

But in just 28 minutes, Walton scored 13 points, grabbed a season high 17 rebounds, earned three assists, blocked one shot and had one steal.

"Bill is comfortable with the team now," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said of the veteran acquired last September in a deal which sent Cedric Maxwell, a No. 1 draft pick and cash to the Los Angeles Clippers. "He's no longer strange to the system and is giving us top quality minutes."

While extending their longest winning streak since an 18-0 run in February and March, 1982, the Celtics hiked their home record for the season to 22-1 with their fourth consecutive victory over Washington.

Philadelphia rolled to a 26-point lead in the first period and went on to hand New Jersey its worst loss of the season.

The 76ers hit 16 of their 19 shots in the first quarter and led 40-14 before settling for a 42-18 advantage at the end of the period. Their largest lead was 127-86 in the final quarter.

Moses Malone had 29 points and 17 rebounds and Julius Erving 28 points to lead Philadelphia. Mickey Johnson had 18 points and 10 rebounds for the Nets.

SATELLITE TELEVISION IS ALIVE AND WELL...AND GROWING!!!

'Color Purple,' 'Out of Africa' top nominees, Spielberg snubbed

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Steven Spielberg, maker of Hollywood dreams, failed to have his own come true as "The Color Purple" received 11 Academy Award nominations, but none for Spielberg as best director.

"Out of Africa," a lush, romantic movie about a Danish writer also received 11 nominations for the 58th annual Academy Awards, to be presented March 24. Nominees were announced Wednesday.

"Out of Africa" and "The Color Purple," both adapted from novels written by women, were joined as best picture nominees by "Prizzi's Honor," a black comedy about a lovesick Mafia hit man, and "Witness," the adventures of a Philadelphia cop in Amish country. Also nominated was "Kiss of the Spider Woman," about a revolutionary and a transvestite who become friends in jail.

The academy's 4,200 voters virtually ignored 1985's two biggest moneymakers. "Back to the Future" earned only song and writing nominations and two for sound, and "Rambo — First Blood, Part II" was nominated only for sound effects editing.

"The Color Purple," adapted from Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, is about a black woman's struggle for independence in the rural South.

Spielberg broke away from his usual science fiction and fantasy mold to direct the drama, widely considered his bid for peer acceptance as a director of substance.

But the academy turned away the director of "Jaws," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," the "Indiana Jones" adventures and the all-time movie moneymaker "E.T. — the Extra-Terrestrial." Spielberg has yet to win an Oscar.

A Warner Bros. statement said the studio was pleased with "The Color Purple" nominations, but was "shocked and dismayed that the movie's primary creative force, Steven Spielberg, was not recognized."

At Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment, a secretary said the director was out of town and unavailable for comment.

"Many people go through life without recognition, and I'm sorry Spielberg didn't get nominated," said Hector Babenco, himself nominated as best director for "Kiss of the Spider Woman."

Other director nominees included John Huston, 79, for "Prizzi's Honor;" the Japanese master Akira Kurosawa, 75, for "Ran;" Australian Peter Weir for "Witness" and American Sydney Pollack for "Out of Africa."

Some American Indians believed only twins could see elves.

But with the success she's had, Mrs. Hornberger doesn't worry when an apparent misplaced chip makes a figurine cross-eyed or older-looking than she had envisioned.

"They say I'm supposed to have better control, but you can't decide what personality something is going to have," Mrs. Hornberger said.

"I like the more primitive style, but not to the point where you can't figure out what it is," Mrs. Hornberger said, adding that black figures interest her most.

Since she had to work when she was young, Mrs. Hornberger, now 35, decided 11 years ago when she married that she wanted to stay at home, spending her days sewing, making dolls or working with wood.

She never thought much about selling her work and only occasionally sought out a craft show to get rid of some of her projects so she could do more.

Five years ago, she started selling her work at a flea market in West Columbia, which led her to open an antique shop and studio there.

Two years later she was taking her work to antique shows in Fredericksburg, Austin and Rosenberg.

"It seems like all of a sudden it just started selling," Mrs. Hornberger said, noting that she now considers her work a profession to which she dedicates regular hours and a professional standard of quality.

Her family supports her trade by helping around the house, bringing her an occasional drink or making her a sandwich. Some days Mrs. Hornberger spends 14 hours working on a piece.

The first step in creating a piece is to draw figures on paper, from which she transfers the design. Working primarily with redwood, which gives her the "look" she wants, Mrs. Hornberger cuts out a silhouette with a band saw.

She then uses a power tool to shape the figure and a knife to define facial features or give detail to clothing. Before she went to the power tool, her hands would be covered with blisters after a day wielding the carving knife.

The secret of sculpting, according to an artist's adage, involves bringing out the form that already exists within the medium. Mrs. Hornberger agrees, with the modification that the artist has to see the figure.

In fact, the Pasadena native has shelved more than one piece she has started because she cannot see the form within the wood.

Putting price tags on her work is sheer agony for Mrs. Hornberger, who still feels complimented when someone buys a piece. Customers often help her determine when a price is too low and also give her feedback on design and style.

"My customers have given me the confidence to ask the prices I do," she said. Customers also relate personally to Mrs. Hornberger's figures, calling them by name and reporting on the well-being of a carved chicken or old "Aunt Nettie."

Conway had sold the completed fiddle to a friend in 1936. After he was 90 years old, friends found the fiddle, broken into pieces, in the attic of an old house being torn down in Childress. The fiddle was returned and Conway repaired it to its present condition.

The fiddle's neck had been broken beyond repair, so Conway went out to his back yard, cut a piece of cherry wood from a tree and carved another one. The first neck had been fashioned like a lady's slipper, but the new one is the more traditional curved design.

His fiddle-playing career began when he was 14 years old, Conway remembers. He walked into the house one Sunday afternoon while the rest of his family was gone. He picked up one of his father's fiddle (his dad was a fiddle player, too) and could tell it had been cross tuned to play "Cotton-eyed Joe."

"I took it up and sawed on it a bit," he recalls. "By the time they (his family) came in I was playin' it pretty good."

Conway grew up in a large family of four boys and four girls in Johnson County, between Cleburne and Fort Worth. He remembers driving a team of mules pulling a wagonload of watermelons to Fort Worth.

On one such trip, he and his father came face to face with Frank and Jesse James, sometime before the turn of the century. The notorious James boys had been involved in a fight in Dallas, and a man was killed. Standing in his father's wagon, Conway overheard a lawman come up to Frank James and attempt to arrest him. Frank said he'd better be left alone "because Jesse's in the crowd," Conway recalled.

Apparently the lawman decided to heed Frank's threat because he wasn't arrested.

Another of Conway's stories recalls an encounter with Indians near Anadarko, Okla. The Conway family had been camping out in a wagon when they suddenly found themselves surrounded by Indians. The Indians examined some saddles in the wagon closely before they finally decided to leave the family alone, he says. Conway believes now that the Indians may have thought that the saddles had been stolen from them.

In 1904, Conway, then 17, married Bertie Stamps, a Kentuckian whom he had met in Johnson County. They rode in a wagon from Cleburne to Dallas for the wedding. Their union was to last 63 years before she died. They had two daughters, Mrs. McMinn and Mrs. Harie Belt, both of Lefors, and a son, Raymond Conway of Childress, who has followed in his father's fiddle-making and fiddle-making footsteps.

After his marriage Conway continued playing the fiddle for dances and social events. "I needed the money," he explained, "and my wife didn't care."

"For a while I was a pretty good fiddler," he said. "I could play most anything for most anybody. I don't know nothin' about music, though. Just what I learned by ear."

Family members recall the grandchildren sitting around Conway as he played tunes on his fiddle and told them stories. "The kids loved to sit around and listen to him," McMinn says. "And he was comical!"

About the time Conway turned 26, he decided to make a fiddle.

Conway's first handmade fiddle was carved with a pocket knife and a broken piece of glass. He'd find thick pieces of hard wood, sometimes boards from the sides of a wagon, for the front and back, carving it out to the right size and shape with the pocket knife. Then he'd scrape the wood smooth with the broken glass. The cherry tree in the backyard provided the wood for the sides and neck of the instrument. He'd boil pieces of the cherry wood so he could bend it to fit the top and back of the fiddle. A slim, pliable branch of willow, from a tree growing along a nearby creek, lined the inner part of the instrument where the seams were joined.

Once, one of Conway's neighbors rode up on horseback to his Childress County farm and was met with what sounded like a big shindig. Walking around the corner of the farm house, the neighbor discovered Conway sitting with his shoes off, playing a guitar with his toes, a fiddle in his hands and French harp in his mouth — held up with a contraption made from a coat hanger. 'Ol Conway was playing the beat of the band — literally!

As he nears the century mark, Conway continues to live an active life. At 94 he drove his car to the nursing home in Childress and admitted himself. He's been a resident of the Coronado Nursing Center for the past three years and continues to handle his own business. He's a voracious reader, too, especially when it comes to his hometown paper and National Geographic magazine.

Conway's thick silver-white hair and relatively unlined face and hands belie his 98 years of living. He's growing a mustache now — for something different, he says — and jokingly tells the nursing home staff that he's going to grow it to his ears.

People often ask Conway how he's stayed so young, so long. His answer is quick and sure: "I don't worry."

Tulsa, Okla. naturally landlocked, became a seaport in 1971 with the opening of the Tulsa Port of Catoosa and a $1.2 billion water way that linked the city via the Arkansas River to the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte arrived at St. Helena, to which he had been banished.

In 1940, Germany announced a total blockade of Britain during World War II.

SWEENEY, Texas (AP) — As P.J. Hornberger takes her carving tools to a piece of wood, the figure she forms seemingly develops its own personality.

Innovation Center incubates business

By SUE MAJOR HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Jeffrey Nathanson doesn't believe in a community putting all of its jobs in one business.

"If 100 companies hire two people each, that's 200 new jobs," he said. "It equals a facility of 200 and now you have a diversified economy; you're not dependent on one industry."

Nathanson is executive director of the New Mexico Business Innovation Center, which provides an incubator in which fledgling businesses can develop and grow.

He believes New Mexico's future lies in a home grown economy, one not so dependent on oil, gas, mining and government jobs.

"A big concern across the country is employment — how do we employ our local populace? Employment and economic development go hand in hand," Nathanson said.

So-called incubation centers such as the one that opened last November in Albuquerque are designed to help small businesses grow past trouble spots, giving them solid footing to go out on their own. Centers provide facilities, business services and management assistance.

Hobbs and Los Alamos also have innovation centers. Las Vegas, Las Cruces and Roswell are looking to develop them.

Bob Hoffman, who has been involved in the state's development since serving as tourism and economic development secretary in the early 1980s, said New Mexico has depended too long on oil, gas and mining. Suddenly those industries are in trouble and New Mexico finds itself with fewer jobs and dwindling state coffers.

"The only way we're going to grow is develop our own corporate headquarters," Hoffman said.

"No one's getting up and saying what we can do to get out of trouble," he said. "It's time to get up and say what we can do to change our destiny."

New Mexico has been successful in attracting high-tech firms and jobs. But competition is increasing, making it harder to bring in new plants, Nathanson said. In addition, those locating in the state are secondary plants, the first to lay off workers in economic hard times, he said.

So communities are looking at home grown jobs. Innovation centers started in the nation's northeast and midwest, where economies were damaged by declines in the area's traditional employers, the steel and heavy manufacturing industries. The idea of incubating new businesses moved west as the employment base in mining and oil and gas dwindled.

The concept in Albuquerque arose from a series of economic development forums and informal meetings between financial and business leaders. It was created during a year of feasibility and operating studies and fund raising and opened Nov. 15.

In the past decade, 86.7 percent of the nation's new jobs have come in companies with 500 or fewer employees and 56 percent have come in businesses of under 20 employees.

However, small businesses also have a high failure rate. Eighty percent of those that start today won't be around five years from now, Nathanson said.

Small businesses disappear for a variety of reasons — cash flow problems, poor management, the death of the owner, the sale of the business, poor product, bad idea, he said.

"Yet they are the job creators," Nathanson said. "So what do you do?"

The private, non-profit Business Innovation Center takes a hard look at a company's chance of succeeding before it joins the center, he said.

"We're primarily looking at a business that's already hatched, that's been thought about ... that's operational," he said. "We're not looking for ideas in the embryo stage."

The primary standard is innovation.

"We're interested in innovative businesses," Nathanson said. "Not is it high tech, or low tech, or no tech, but is it innovative, new, different."

The center also looks at growth potential.

"We're interested in creating new jobs," Nathanson said.

A business wanting to join the center must fill out a thorough financial and business application, then go before a review committee, which asks tough questions, Nathanson said.

The center leases space to new businesses for up to 24 months. It also provides basic services — maintenance and security, reception and secretarial aid, business assistance, a conference room, health benefits for employees and copying, typing and bookkeeping.

More importantly, it provides management expertise, information on business resources and a way for entrepreneurs to get together and exchange ideas, Nathanson said.

A business is monitored and when it's time, "we'll kick them out of the nest," Nathanson said.

"When they're ready to fly, they're going to fly," he said. "And if they are going to die, we'll help them."

The center currently has four tenants, one of which Nathanson expects to move out on its own by the end of the year.

The center has 16,000 square feet of office, manufacturing and warehouse space to lease at about half the going rate for the city, Nathanson said. The facility is built with moveable partitions that allow the center to adjust to whatever configuration a business needs and to allow for growth, he added.

The center is a partnership between the private and public sectors, the director said. The city of Albuquerque has pledged $100,000 a year and the private sector is providing $50,000 a year for three years to start up the innovation center.

"By the fourth year, we hope with rents and services to be paying our own way," Nathanson said. "And if our businesses grow, we hope they remember where they started."

Biology, botany has been helpful

Prof ditches classes for toys

By SCOTT MILLER The Laredo News

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — For 33 years, he was a Laredo Junior College biology professor with a special interest in botany, but nowadays, Jorge C. Salazar's main interest is toy making.

Salazar left the biology laboratory for good after his retirement in 1981, and began to spend his spare moments in his garage woodwork shop constructing fabulous array of wooden playthings.

The college professor-turned-toymaker says his training as a biologist-botanist has been helpful in his new career. He attributes his enjoyment of his hobby to an appreciation of nature — wood in particular — that he developed as a botanist many years ago while conducting field research in South Texas.

Another habit acquired from his days as a scientist, is the tendency to embellish his speech with dry humor and technical terms.

"I've learned that sometimes my customers are very unusual. If I tell them that I'm going to spray a plastic varnish finish on a toy, they say 'Oh, no! Don't do that?' But if I say I'm going to spray a coat of polyurethane finish, well, then that's OK."

"Sometimes I feel like telling them that I don't sell toys made out of the best Ponderosa pine available, but that I use the finest quality North American xylem," he jokes.

The feisty and witty Salazar, who will turn 65 this year, picked up a wood carving knife long before he knew the difference between a "cotyledon" and a "petiole." His knack for the woodcraft, he says, came naturally.

"I've been playing with wood since I was about 7 years of age. I learned a lot from my brother, Jose," Salazar said.

Up until the last 15 years or so, Salazar preferred to use hand tools to carve his toys. But, alas, the lure of modern technology and the pains of old age became unbearable so he began outfitting his garage workshop with electric band saws and drills.

For Salazar, toymaking is not work, but a leisure-time activity.

"I can only play at this for maybe an hour or so, and then I have to rest. I get a lot of help from my wife and some friends who once in a while come by," he said.

Although woodworking has been more or less a lifelong hobby for Salazar, he didn't become serious about toymaking until he had children of his own. During the years when his children were young, many gifts under the Salazar family's Christmas tree were his own handiwork.

"They always thought Santa Claus had done it," he recalled with a chuckle.

When Salazar and his wife, Genevieve, display their woody wares on the front lawn of their residence, admiring passersby often stop to look. Often, the quality craftsmanship and beauty of the toys transform an admirer into a customer.

One of the most popular and sought-after items, especially during Christmas, are the Salazar rocking horses.

Crafted with meticulous attention to quality, these rocking horses are reminiscent of another era. Hewn of select, knot-free Ponderosa pine, Salazar eschews the use of nails in the construction of his rocking horses, opting for wooden dowels instead.

"On the rocking horse, it took me three years to come up with a design that satisfied me. It would either look like a dog or it would look like me — as if there was that much of a difference," he said.

Hundreds of wheeled cars, trucks, animals, clowns, also are available. All are original designs. For a few dollars extra, Mrs. Salazar will add a bright coat of non-toxic paint.

"My wife's the artist. I'm just the so-and-so," Salazar said.

He told the story of one customer who showed up at his doorway begging for a rocking horse. As it turned out the customer purchased the rocking horse, not for a young son or daughter, but for his parents who had always wanted one.

"It's like, 'I always wanted an electric train when I was a kid, and now I'm going to have one,' sort of thing," Salazar said with a laugh.

He is every bit the sentimental grandfatherly toymaker and his soothing Burl Ives-like voice adds to his image.

"The one thing that sort of, not gripes, but bothers me a little bit, is that when you sell a rocking horse to a parent or grandparent, you don't get to see the child's face when he first gets his gift," he said.

While toymaking remains his primary interest, the artisan has branched out a bit over the years. Salazar now makes key chains and other knickknacks designed for adults.

An accomplished furniture builder, Salazar requires a special request before he will produce a piece of furniture for a customer. Each customer must participate in a conference session with the craftsman to discuss the design and construction of the item.

Most of his furniture-crafting efforts, however, are reserved for relatives. One of his recent works, constructed for his daughter, was a beautiful corner table of varnished California redwood.

Salazar's creations are built to last, and many will not doubt have special meaning to his customers. That, he says, is what gives purpose to his work.

"It would make me proud, very proud to know that one of my pieces has become an heirloom for some family," he said.

TEAMWORK

TEAMWORK noun a joint action by a group of people in which each person subordinates his individual interests and opinions for the unity of the group.

When the word "teamwork" is mentioned, the most obvious thought is that of football or another sport. While it is true that a football team must have unity, teamwork also applies to business.
