Much of government 'running on empty'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much of the federal government was running on empty today and Congress plans to adjourn for the year were in shambles after the House rejected an omnibus, $370 billion spending bill that would have restored the flow of money.

Conservatives upset with the overall size of the measure, liberals angry at increases included for the Pentagon, and other legislators concerned about a possible future pay raise for members of Congress joined to kill the measure on a 239-170 vote shortly before midnight Monday.

"It's never wise to keep the House in after 11 (p.m.)," said Rep. Lynn

Martin, R-Ill. "It's like managing a nursery school without a nap."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., angrily warned that rejection of the money bill could keep Congress meeting right up to Christmas.

"We have enough work to carry us until (next) Monday or Tuesday," O'Neill said.

With the end of the first session of the 99th Congress nowhere in sight, President Reagan sought a resurrection in the House of his tax overhaul plan that was buried last week by near-unanimous Republican defections.

Congress' chaotic year-end lurch also included possible action on:

—Massive farm legislation touching everything from food stamps to agricultural research and providing about $52 billion over five years for price and income support programs.

—A federal guarantee of the troubled Farm Credit System.

—Legislation promised in the budget adopted last August to force about $80 billion in deficit-reduction action over the next three years.

Government workers were told to report to work as usual today although the spending authority of many federal agencies technically ended at 6 p.m. Monday with the expiration of a stopgap measure Congress enacted last week.

Action was expected today in the House and Senate on a short-term measure to keep affected agencies operating at current levels through the end of the week. The bill that was rejected in the House would have carried the agencies without a regular appropriation through the remainder of the fiscal year, which ends next Sept. 30.

The measure is necessary because seven of the 13 regular annual appropriations bills for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 have yet to either gain final congressional action or be signed into law.

Edwin L. Dale Jr., spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget, said late Monday, "All workers will come to work tomorrow morning (today) and they will get the word then as to whether they will go into a shutdown mode or not."

An early Tuesday car fire totally destroyed this vehicle belonging to Timeotheo Leal. According to the Hereford Fire Department, the fire started in the engine area. The fire occurred seven miles west of Hereford on Highway 60.

Reagan's reform to get second chance in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's effort to rewrite the federal income tax, kept alive by his high-stakes lobbying of reluctant Republicans, is getting a second chance in the House with no assurance it can pass.

As the House struggled toward adjournment for the year, Democratic leaders accepted a Republican agreement that could lead to a final vote on the measure today. Reagan promised that at least 50 of the 182 Republicans would support the bill, and the GOP was given some concessions that were little more than face-saving devices.

cleared the way for consideration today of the Democratic bill and a Republican substitute.

When the Democratic plan of tax overhaul, the president's No. 1 legislative goal of his second term, was called up last week, all but 14 Republicans sided against the measure and, on a 223-202 vote, the House refused even to consider it.

Rising population, commerce prompts request for light

Due to rising population and commerce in the city of Hereford, the city commission decided Monday night to ask the state to install a traffic light at the intersection of Highway 385 and 15th Street. The decision to petition the state for the light came during the commission's regular meeting held in City Hall.

Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher stated that the city was badly in need of a light at that intersection because of the building of new stores, and the anticipated building of housing units planned in the area.

According to City Attorney Earnest Langley, the city first must officially approve a motion to place the light at an intersection, then the city must ask the state to install it. The city must pay for the light, installation and maintenance.

If the state decides to approve the light, the city will not see the installation until mid-1986 at the soonest.

In other action the city commended the Hereford Independent School District on its efforts in developing city-school playgrounds. The playgrounds will be constructed at Aikmen, Tierra Blanca and Northwest Elementary school. The city agreed to keep the grass around the equipment mowed during the summer months.

The city commission also authorized an estimated $125,000 to be spent on a test well for the city. The city felt that there is a possibility of utilizing the Santa Rosa water within the system. Recently a very successful Santa Rosa well was completed by Champion Feed Yards which encouraged the possibility that the city would be successful in installing a test well.

The water that is hoped to be provided, can be used in the peak water using months.

The city also authorized the release of easements at Sugarland Mall. Current easements lie under the building. The commission approved a motion to relocate the easements in order to provide for future building that is scheduled for the mall.

The city also authorized the purchase of new trash containers for the city. The city will be purchasing 25 new containers to be placed in the northwest section of the city.

The city also adopted an ordinance that will provide for a slight reduction in residential electric rates. The original base rate for electrical use was over $40 million. In Monday night's meeting, the base rate was dropped to $28 million due to an overestimation by Southwest Public Service.

Kidnapped baby returned after FBI tipped in Florida

COPPELL, Texas (AP) — As a jubilant Jennifer Lynn Sutton returned from Florida with her baby girl cradled in her arms, a 39-year-old Houston-area woman was charged with kidnapping the child one month ago.

"At times I wanted to give up," Ms. Sutton said as she waited to board a Dallas-bound flight Monday. "I just kept praying and praying. And the investigators kept telling me it was just a matter of time."

Police arrested Susan Oglesby Miller of Seabrook early Monday in a College Station hotel and taken to a Dallas-area jail late Monday night.

She faces up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine if convicted on the kidnapping charge.

Ms. Sutton and her mother, Glenda Sutton, identified Ms. Miller in a photo lineup Monday night as "Bernice Kelly," the woman who answered their newspaper advertisement for a baby sitter, police said.

Authorities said they believe Ms. Miller wanted to raise the 3-month-old child herself, but refused to release further details of the case, saying they feared further information hinder their investigation.

"There may be others involved," Coppel police Lt. Jack Foley said.

FBI agents found Mallory Elizabeth Sutton early Saturday in the home of a Tampa, Fla., couple, who police say were the unsuspecting parents of Ms. Miller's former husband who brought the baby from Houston to Tampa.

Earlier Monday in Tampa, Ms. Sutton beamed as she cuddled her baby and described her reunion with the blue-eyed infant.

"I was kind of afraid to pick up her at first. I just looked at her, then I turned her over and it was her. It was a big shock. She had grown so much," the 20-year-old told reporters at an airport news conference before heading home.

"She started cooing ... She just seemed to melt in my arms..." Ms. Sutton said. "I had to pinch myself to make sure it was all real."

The baby was discovered missing from the Sutton duplex on Nov. 13 after a friendly, well-groomed woman in her late 30s or early 40s answered a classified newspaper ad for a governess, claimed she had six children of her own and "knew how to handle the baby," Ms. Sutton said.

Coppel Police Chief Tom Griffin said the sitter's name turned out to be false, and a telephone number she provided turned out to be that of an answering service in Houston.

Ms. Sutton said she never checked references the sitter provided.

Ms. Sutton talked of trips to a psychologist and nights of prayers during her anxious wait. She told of nightmares and how the ordeal changed her from a trusting person. And she said she would be skeptical

Three children need clothing

Caring and sharing is what the Christmas Stocking Fund is all about, and many of the recipients know the meaning of these words.

The R family recently took three children into their home to provide them with love and care. Mr. R is 62 years old and draws disability payments monthly. The family places much importance on keeping the children in school and have no outside help.

Taking on the responsibility of three more children will make it even more difficult for them to maintain the household. They have asked for food and clothing for the children this Christmas.

The Christmas Stocking Fund (CSF) is a non-profit organization that attempts to help as many needy families as possible at Christmastime. This is accomplished by the generous contributions of citizens in the community.

The fund collected more than $7,300 last year to help the less-fortunate families, but donations have not been as high this year. The total to date is $4,520. A screening committee will determine the most needy families and use the funds as far as they go. There are no administrative costs for CSF, as all work is volunteer.

Contributions to CSF can be made to The Hereford Brand, Box 673, Hereford, 79045, or submitted to the newspaper office. Ben Childers serves as treasurer for the non-profit group.

Shultz arrives in Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived today for a day of talks expected to focus on communist Yugoslavia's non-aligned status and an expansion of U.S.-Yugoslav trade.

Shultz and his entourage flew to Belgrade from Budapest, Hungary. Yugoslavia is the last stop on an East European tour that also included Romania.

Shultz was met by Foreign Minister Raif Dizdarevic at Surcin Airport. "I'm happy to have the opportunity to visit Yugoslavia," the secretary of state said in a brief statement.

He said he was looking forward to

Counties benefit from registration hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas counties are benefiting along with the state from increased motor registration fees, according to the Texas Good Roads-Transportation Association.

Texans registered 13,966,188 motor vehicles in the year ending Aug. 31, an increase of 3.52 percent over the previous year.

However, as a result of an increase in motor vehicle fees voted by the 1984 special legislative session, net registration fees divided by the state and county are up 51.95 percent, the association said.

The state highway fund received $473,124,091 from registrations last year while county road and bridge funds received $73,203,874.

In addition to retaining a portion of the license fees, the counties received $27.8 million in fees for registering the vehicles, and 182 of the state's 254 counties also collected a $5 county registration fee.

The 1984 change made registration fees based on a vehicle's age, not weight. The fee on a new mid-sized car went from $25.50 to $46 and the fee for small cars under three years old went from $15.50 to $46.

The Good Roads Association said the counties with the most vehicles are Harris County with 1,992,122 and Dallas County with 1,698,563.

Tarrant had 945,300 registrations, Bexar 838,542, Travis 489,896, El Paso 355,952, Nueces 226,169, Jefferson 214,486, Hidalgo 190,633 and Lubbock 183,204.

A total of seven counties have more than 100,000 vehicles each.

Austin pondering smoking ban

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin City Council will hear public testimony this week on a proposed ordinance that would limit smoking in public buildings and private workplaces.

Supporters of the ordinance say passive exposure to tobacco smoke — breathing smoke from someone else's cigarette — is a hazard to nonsmokers.

Limiting smoking in offices, restaurants and other gathering places would follow action taken by Dallas and several other major cities, backers say.

"The ordinance operates under the basic premise that everyone has the right to breathe clean air," said Councilwoman Sally Shipman, who proposed the ordinance along with Mayor Frank Cooksey.

"I want to start the public hearing and get some reaction," she added. A public hearing has been scheduled for Thursday evening.

The plan submitted by Ms. Shipman and Cooksey would forbid smoking in all public buildings and private workplaces, except in areas designated for smoking.

The effort is supported by Friends of Austin Nonsmokers and other groups, including the local chapter of the American Lung Association.

Administration will pursue dumping case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige says the Reagan administration remains firm against what he says is heavy pressure from Japan to drop an unfair trading complaint against low-cost Japanese computer chips.

The complaint, alleging that Japan is "dumping" sophisticated memory chips in U.S. markets at below-production costs, will be filed formally later this week, Baldrige said Monday.

He disputed a published account that the White House was backing away from the investigation or that he had overstepped his authority in announcing the scope of the probe.

Baldrige said that since he announced the dumping case earlier this month, Japanese interests have been lobbying hard to get the president to renounce it.

Reputed mob boss shot down in street

NEW YORK (AP) — The daring rush-hour street shooting of the reputed boss of the nation's most powerful crime family and his bodyguard could "determine the future of organized crime in this country" and touch off a battle for control within the Mafia, authorities said.

Paul Castellano, the reputed mob boss, and Thomas Bilotti, a reputed captain in the Gambino crime family, were shot in the head and body by three men who walked up to their car, pulled automatic weapons from under trenchcoats and opened fire, said Chief of Detectives Richard Nicastro.

Both died where they fell Monday evening, lying face-up in pools of blood within feet of the black Lincoln sedan Bilotti had driven.

"It could be the beginning of a crime war. But only time will tell that," said FBI organized crime expert Thomas Sheer. "This undoubtedly will trigger some sort of reaction. It's a part of the changing of the guard that's been going on for the last 25 years."

Castellano, 73, and Bilotti, 45, were walking from the car when they were shot outside Sparks, a midtown steak house, Nicastro said.

The gunmen ran into the rush-hour crowd after the 5:26 p.m. shooting just blocks from Grand Central Terminal and drove off in a car parked a block away, said Nicastro. The street was littered with shell cases. No weapons were recovered.

"What we have here was the assassination of the head of the largest and most powerful organized crime family in the United States," Sheer said.

Police said many of the Gambinos' 200 to 250 members were increasingly involved in legitimate concerns in the food, entertainment and jewelry businesses as well as illegal pursuits.

Rubble of propane explosion searched

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Firefighters searched the smoldering rubble of a leveled two-story gas company today for a missing person after a propane tank explosion and fire that killed 11 people and injured 13.

Twenty-seven employees of the Rocky Mountain Natural Gas Co. in this west-central Colorado town were believed to be in the building when the explosion occurred Monday morning. Two people escaped injury.

A welding torch that was lit near an almost empty 1,000-gallon propane tank apparently triggered the blast in a garage where repairs were done, said Les Sitter, a company vice president at its Denver headquarters.

Fire still burned under the wreckage at nightfall. Company president Don Parsons refused to speculate on the cause of the blast, and said he would wait for an investigation. He confirmed that a propane tank on a flatbed trailer apparently was undergoing repairs. "I doubt if the tank was full, but I expect it had some propane in it," he said.

No natural gas was stored at the building in an industrial park at the western edge of this resort town of 5,000, police said.

The combination billing office-maintenance garage was reduced to rubble by the 9:16 a.m. explosion.

TAX

ted the president to go to the Capitol Monday, where he put his prestige on the line and pleaded his case. "The president was very nice, very conciliatory ... but he was not very convincing," Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn., told reporters.

Top GOP leaders offered little reason for optimism. Barring some changes in the bill itself, said Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, chairman of the Republican Conference, "I don't see the votes right now for the bill."

Less than three hours later, Baker was emerging from the office of Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois with the announcement that O'Neill had been promised the 50 GOP votes. Republicans were assured:

—The House will vote on not only the GOP substitute but a Republican amendment to it that would keep present-law tax treatment of pensions. The Democratic bill would raise taxes on many pensions, including those received by millions of retired federal, state and local workers. But there is virtually no chance the GOP bill can pass, so the amendment would be meaningless. The Democratic pension provision would still stand.

—The president will write a letter promising to veto any final tax bill that has an individual tax rate over 35 percent (the present top rate is 50 percent); the Democrats' bill sets 38 percent, that imposes that rate on any taxable income under $70,000 (the Democrats' top rate hits single people whose taxable income is over $60,000) and that does not offer adequate tax incentives for business investment.

—If the House passes a tax bill, it will consider a resolution stating the House favors making most tax changes effective Jan. 1, 1987. The Democratic bill has several different effective dates.

During the closed caucus, Republicans took a signed secret-ballot straw vote on whether to support the bill. It was unclear whether the pessimistic assessments of GOP leaders actually reflected rank-and-file sentiment or whether Reagan had won votes with telephone lobbying after his 50-minute stay at the meeting.

Even with that agreement, Michel said, he could not vote for the Democratic bill. He and most other Republicans in the House say the bill would damage the economy by imposing an additional $140 billion in taxes on corporations over the next five years. That money would be used to cut individual taxes. The shift to corporations would total about $101 billion under the GOP bill.

In Hungary on Monday, Shultz suggested that Congress "at some point" consider dropping annual reviews of Hungarian human rights performance, currently a condition for special trading rights.

Shultz told a news conference that he conducted "exciting" talks with Hungarian Communist Party leader Janos Kadar, and the trade issue came up several times.

Hungary is seeking more trade with the United States to improve its economy and help maintain a market system relatively free of Soviet control. For that reason it wants its most favored nation trade status renewed for five-year periods, rather than annually.

Progress being made on problem teen-age pregnancy

AUSTIN (AP) — Community leaders in several Texas cities are making headway in helping girls and their parents learn about the problems of teen-age pregnancy, state officials said.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, said Monday that community leaders in Austin, El Paso, Houston, Dallas and other cities are getting involved in counseling programs for young women.

"There is a great deal of concern, a great deal of awareness and an increasing circle of involvement with both public and private sector effort," Ms. Delco said.

In Austin, for example, private companies and organizations have donated space, equipment and other aid to the Austin Teen Pregnancy Awareness Project, which already is helping about 40 young women, officials said.

Vera Jones, a project official, said the young women and their parents are counseled. Day care services also are available so the girls can return to school, she said.

"We've been successful in enrolling teen-age mothers back in school. Our hope is that they will become self-sufficient and independent and be able to function without the use of welfare at some point in their lives," she said.

Ms. Jones said adult volunteers are being recruited to serve as role models and counselors for young women who are pregnant.

REJECTED

The overnight lapse in spending authority was not expected to cause any disruption of government operations.

In the push toward adjournment, legislators have scrambled to use the urgently-needed spending bill as a vehicle for pet projects that otherwise would not be enacted.

In addition, House and Senate negotiators finishing work on the spending bill Monday voted to allow senators to earn an extra $7,510 a year in speaking fees and opened the door to a 1987 pay raise for all legislators.

Critics decried the increase in senators' speaking income when spending for many programs was being cut to reduce federal deficits.

"For us to sneak it in or for us to appear to have snuck it in does us a disservice," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

The provision would allow members of the Senate to earn as much as 40 percent above their $75,100 congressional pay in outside honoraria. The current limit is 30 percent, and the increase would lift the cap from slightly over $22,500 to a little more than $30,000 annually, effective Jan. 1.

The old 30 percent cap would remain in effect for House members unless they took a separate vote to change House rules.

Another section of the bill would require that both houses of Congress pass legislation to block any pay raise expected to be proposed in late 1986 by a federal pay commission.

The bill also would permit defense spending to rise to at least $282.5 billion next year while freezing or cutting many domestic programs.

According to the Texas Department of Human Resources, some 1,181 girls between 13 and 19 gave birth in Travis County in 1983, department spokeswoman Sally Griffin said.

"We feel like this is a community problem. We've got to have everybody involved in trying to make a difference. None of us can just sit by and let this continue to happen," she said.

Rep. Bob Richardson, R-Austin, said the combination of public and private help hopefully will help "break the cycle of poverty" into which many youths fall.

Many Texas families on welfare are headed by women who had their first children while still in their teens, he noted.

"This type of program combines the things I like to see, which are government assistance combined with donations and assistance from the private sector," he said.

Ann Landers Needs understanding woman

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 19-year-old male college sophomore with a problem that is causing me a lot of pain.

I'm not looking for sex, I just want a hug now and then. I received very little affection as a child and I treasure the few caresses I get from women. However, it is difficult for me to ask for a hug without sounding as if I am asking a woman to go to bed. The truth is that most women my age expect a guy to want sex.

I've considered talking to a counselor but I'm unable to open up to a man. I'm afraid he might think I was gay. A female counselor would probably think I was trying to get her in the sack.

I got to sleep at night hugging a pillow. I fantasize a great deal, not about sex but simply about being held in someone's arms. Most college students know very little about love, but they know quite a lot about sex, as a contact sport. No commitment, just get it off. I find this pretty awful. What can you suggest for a guy like me? --LONESOME AND MISUNDERSTOOD

What must it take? I've even offered to keep his checkbook for him. He says, "Don't worry about it. I can manage." Is this an indication of why my future will be like? I plan to marry him.—FORT WORTH

DEAR F.W.: Bouncing checks? How lovely. I'd say you've had a life-saving preview of the future. Before you marry this man you should insist that he permit you to take care of the bill-paying.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am living with my sister and her husband. This is not by choice. It is an economic necessity.

The problem is my brother-in-law. He is a gun nut with a large collection.

Recently my sister told me that he insists on bringing guns to bed with him because he claims it helps their sex life. She is frightened because the guns are loaded and sometimes he is loaded, too.

Sis has asked me to talk to him about this but I don't want to get involved in their problems. Yet I keep worrying that if something happens and I remained silent, it would be my fault. Please advise me.—OHIO WORRIER

DEAR O.W.: Your brother-in-law sounds like a kook—and there is nothing more dangerous than a kook who likes guns and drinks.

You are wise to stay out of it. Your sister should talk to her clergyman, her physician and a counselor. Her

Called meeting set tonight

Members of The Hereford Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, are reminded of a called meeting today at 7:30 p.m. in the Masonic Temple.

Scheduled on the business agenda is the initiation and appointment of members to the Rainbow Advisory Board.

Following the meeting, members will hold their annual Christmas party and prepare a box of Christmas gifts for members in the Eastern Star Home at Arlington.

Wellness Weekend slated

Well-Come Spring, a Weekend with Wellness, was inserted into the West Texas State University calendar last April as a special 75th anniversary event. The purpose was to give participants—whether individuals or corporations—the scientific knowledge to design and implement personalized programs for diet, exercise and relaxation.

The program had every chance for success. America is fast learning that wellness is not just for yuppies, granola eaters and six-figure-salaried athletes, it's important for almost everyone. But few people predicted the sort of enthusiasm that was actually generated by last April's wellness weekend.

Television's Dr. Red Duke spoke. So did gold-medal Olympian Peter Snell, aerobics expert Larry Gettman, Dr. Richard Keelor and other recognized authorities in fitness diet, flexibility, strength-building and stress reduction.

There were lectures, demonstrations, exhibits, exercise classes—even a 5-K run through the streets of Canyon. And when it was over, everyone said, "Let's do it again."

Well, Mary Hill, professor of health, physical education and recreation at WTSU, has announced just that. Well-Come Spring will do it again in 1986 on April 18 and 19.

Once again, nationally-recognized speakers will present a wide variety of workshops. Participants will again receive individual physical assessments. There will be swimming, aerobic dance, strength sessions, another 5-K run, nutritious meals, and time to get to know the experts on an informal basis. This time, wellness programs for the physically disadvantaged have been added to the program.

A number of support groups will cooperate to bring off this second annual wellness weekend. WTSU's department of health, physical education and recreation; WTSU's school of nursing; the Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness; the American Heart Association; the Texas Association of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance; the Texas Department of Health; WTSU's Recreation Club; WTSU student organizations; and the WTSU Alumni Association.

A complete list of special guests for this year's program will be released closer to the time of the event.

DEAR L. AND M.: You sound like a very decent fellow who needs to find an understanding woman.

I suggest that you don't ask for hugs. Let the relationship blossom and wait for the hug to happen.

If you are kind and considerate and there is some magic between you, the hug is sure to come. I suspect your anxiety and lack of confidence have created a problem where none exists. Write in a few months and let me know if my advice helped. I'll be rooting for you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What does one do with a man who refuses to balance his checkbook? Neither my pleading nor bounced checks makes any difference. His reply is, "Don't hug me. I have an idea what the balance is."

Snoring may be more than just annoying

Snoring may be a humorous topic in daylight, but raspy snort-like sounds are rarely welcome in the middle of the night. And from a health standpoint, snoring is no longer considered a trivial problem, says the Texas Medical Association.

Physicians are now finding that nightly snoring sometimes leads to high blood pressure and other serious health difficulties. Obstructive sleep apnea syndrome, a rare but potentially life-threatening condition in which the sufferer stops breathing for a short time, also may develop in snorers.

Repeated sleep interruptions, of which a snorer often is unaware, can prevent a good night's rest. Even mild snorers (those who snore lightly and intermittently) may awaken in the morning feeling tired, and their snoring can be a very real problem for other people whose sleep is disturbed.

Snoring is a common problem. Up to 45 percent of all American adults snore at times; about 10 percent snore nightly. The condition is twice as common in men as it is in women.

Self-help measures are often successful with mild snorers. If you fit in this category, try the following:

- Elevate the head of your bed six or eight inches.
- Avoid alcohol, tranquilizers, sleeping pills, and antihistamine drugs at bedtime.
- If you are overweight, reduce. Snoring is far more common in overweight people.
- Sleep on your side or stomach.
- If you snore only when lying on your back, sew a pocket containing a tennis ball onto the backside of your pajamas. It will serve as a gentle reminder to favor your side or stomach.

If self-help measures are not effective and if you snore loudly regardless of your sleeping position, you may need professional help. Your physician may refer you to an ear, nose, and throat specialist who can recommend one of several available treatments.

Carter serves as installing officer at luncheon Friday

New officers were installed by Gayle Carter when members of Cultural Extension Homemakers Club met Friday at noon in the Energas Flame Room for a covered dish luncheon.

Following a gift exchange, officers were installed. Nell Pope will serve as president; Edith Hunter, vice-president; Fannie Townsend, secretary; Jewell Hargrave, assistant secretary; Bertha Dettmann, treasurer; Vernis Parsons, council delegate; and Carrie Mae Doak, reporter.

Christmas readings were given by Hargrave and Pope and roll call was answered with "what we remember about our first Christmas."

The next meeting was scheduled at 2 p.m. Jan. 10, 1986 in the home of Mary Lou Spinhirne.

Spinhirne was hostess to Pope, Hunter, Hargrave, Doak, Raeline Smith, Parsons and Dettmann.

Recognized as special guests were Carter, John Hunter, Tom Hargrave, Johnny Spinhirne, Hank Wedell and Carla Smith.

Head of probe says answers may come slowly

GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — The chief investigator into the crash of a chartered DC-8 that killed 256 American soldiers and crew members says it may take year or more to determine the cause.

"A big problem is a large portion of the aircraft was consumed by fire and it's just not there," Peter Boag, the Canadian Aviation Safety Board's investigator-in-charge, told The Associated Press in an interview Monday night.

Earlier Monday, the first 20 bodies were flown to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware aboard two C-141 Starlifter military transports. The rest are to be shipped in seven flights today and Wednesday.

President and Mrs. Reagan attended a memorial ceremony for the dead soldiers at Fort Campbell, Ky., on Monday. For nearly an hour the president walked the aisles of a hangar, consoling the hundreds of relatives and friends who had gathered.

Boag, 32, said the 40-member investigating team will look closely over several months at the aircraft pieces, reams of documents and transcripts of interviews.

Once investigators finish their work, the safety board will hold public hearings. More investigation could follow, with the board finally announcing its findings — including the cause of the crash.

"A year is a reasonable period of time," Boag said, talking in his makeshift office in the VIP lounge of Gander International Airport, about half a mile north of the snowy crash site.

"People want to know why right away," Boag said. "You can't determine the why until you determine what happened."

The cause will emerge slowly, he said, "unless you're extremely lucky and get the golden nugget right away."

Speculation has focused on such possibilities as iced wings, weight problems or sudden reverse thrust by one of the engines.

"We're not focusing on any particular cause at this particular time," Boag said Monday morning.

Also at Monday's briefing, he disclosed that the plane's flight data recorder — or "black box" — had yielded important details of the speed and path of the Arrow Air charter's brief flight.

The plane achieved an adequate speed on takeoff — 190 mph — but suddenly veered 20 degrees to the right and steadily slowed down until it crashed just seconds after liftoff.

The New York Times, quoting sources close to the inquiry, said today that investigators examining the wreckage found that the right outboard engine's thrust reverser was in the deployed position.

Thrust reversers on the other three engines were properly stowed, the Times said. Thrust reversers extend over the rear of a jet engine upon landing and direct a jet's exhaust forward, slowing the craft.

Such a reversal of power would be consistent with the veering and speed loss experienced by the Arrow Air DC-8. But investigators cautioned that the impact of a crash had deployed thrusters in previous accidents, and that other possible reasons for the crash would have to be thoroughly investigated, the Times said.

The recorder was damaged in the crash, explosion and fire, and analysts have not yet been able to determine the plane's altitude during the flight, Boag said.

Also, the unit installed in the DC-8 does not record as much detail as recent models, so there is no information on such things as the position of the pilot's controls at different times.

In Ottawa, investigators will take the DC-8's four engines apart, looking for signs of a failure that could have left the aircraft without enough power to stay aloft.

The team also plans to find out what the flight crew did during its 17-hour rest stop in Frankfurt, West Germany, while another crew was going to Cairo, Egypt, to pick up the soldiers from the 101st Airborne Division.

"You want to know the activities of the crew in the previous few days," Boag said. "It's normal investigating procedure to investigate those kinds of things."

DR. GOTT

Allergies have many symptoms

DEAR DR. GOTT — My 4-year-old had asthma really bad and was on two different medicines. I started experimenting with her food and found that if she eats anything with citric acid, she gets grumpy and nasty. I also took away her medicines one at a time. She's been off them for five-and-a-half months and hasn't had an attack since I started all this. What do you think?

DEAR READER — I think you have done your 4-year-old child a real service. Food allergies are an unappreciated and underdiagnosed entity. Clearly, they are at the root of many ailments, and I hope as doctors begin to recognize that such allergies are real, more research will be devoted to this fascinating problem. Food allergies can cause a bewildering array of illnesses, including asthma, rashes, lung inflammations, intestinal disorders, and (as many readers wrote) ear infections in children.

Be sure to tell your pediatrician of your successful "experiment." Your intelligence and motivation are to your credit.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Doctors and my dentist can't believe how healthy my kids are, and they ask me what I do, because the other kids they see are so messed up. I tell them: (1) I keep fruits and vegetables in the house, not junk food; (2) I let them have milk or water, not pop; (3) I buy a lot of toothpaste and tell them that whenever their teeth feel ugly, brush. Maybe some of your other readers would like to try this with their kids. I must be doing something right — the proof lives with me.

DEAR READER — OK, I'll go for that. Thanks for sharing.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is there anything you can get from chewing tobacco?

DEAR READER — Bad breath, stained teeth, nicotine addiction, indigestion and cancer of the mouth.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My 12-year-old daughter has scoliosis. Both doctors say it's not my fault and nothing can be done until her spine curves 32 degrees (it's now 12 degrees). If I drank more milk and took calcium before she was born, would she have this problem now? What about giving her calcium now? Why does her back have to be so bad before anything can be done?

DEAR READER — Questions about spinal curvature (scoliosis) are among the most numerous queries I receive. This is a very special disorder of children, and each case must be individualized. Press her doctors for answers regarding her specific treatment.

As far as I know, a child's scoliosis is not caused by her mother not drinking milk during the pregnancy. The mother herself may dip into her own calcium bone stores, because the fetus will absorb whatever it needs and the mother's bones may suffer.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Mountains offer choice view of Halley's comet

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) — The McDonald Observatory offers a choice view of Halley's comet, which is drawing an emotional response from many who haven't seen the astral phenomenon in 75 years.

Recently an elderly, ailing man arrived at the observatory perched in the Davis Mountains, clutching a portable oxygen bottle and asking to look through a telescope at the comet.

The man claimed to have seen the comet during its last visit, in 1910, observatory staff member Robert Schepler said.

After seeing it for the second time, he announced he was ready to die.

It's that kind of emotion that has accompanied Halley's return visit, Schepler says. Its next pass won't be for another 76 years, in the year 2061, and in Schepler's analysis people are looking at the comet as a "common denominator" for all humans, past and future.

"In a period of time when people pooh-pooh historical values, it raises the hair on the back of my neck to think that in theory there is one experience everybody who ever lived can share, and that is looking at Halley's comet," Schepler told The Dallas Morning News.

comet's prime viewing period. So are the chancellors and regents of the University of Texas at Austin.

Routine visitors to the observatory are allowed to see the comet through an 8-inch telescope, which makes the comet look like a small fuzball among the distant stars.

Groups of more than 100 visitors appear regularly at the observatory's thrice-weekly "star parties," with the largest crowds yet to come. Area motels are booked solid for the prime-time viewing period in March and April.

Astronomers said people can get a good view of Halley's brush with Earth simply with binoculars if they are not in an area glowing with light.

With the naked eye, some people already can see the comet, which appears like a fuzzy star. Binoculars and small telescopes bring out the comet's faint light, but astronomers say viewers shouldn't expect to see the comet moving.

Multinationals must do more to end apartheid

AUSTIN (AP) — Multinational corporations must do more to help end racial discrimination in South Africa, says former congresswoman Barbara Jordan.

"We, the United States, ought to do more to bring about an end to this (apartheid)," Ms. Jordan said in remarks made public Monday.

Ms. Jordan, a professor at the University of Texas' Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, was the only American to serve on a United Nations committee that examined the impact of multinational corporations doing business in South Africa and Namibia.

The panel, chaired by former Australian prime minister Malcolm Fraser, held hearings in September and is making recommendations to the international body. An interview with her about the proceedings was released by the UT public relations office.

"I am hopeful that it (the current South African situation) will be resolved peacefully. The country probably is not quite a hair-trigger away from a bloodbath, but it is moving in that direction," Ms. Jordan said.

"If you are not hopeful that peaceful resolution is possible, then you are saying that bloody revolution is what is going to occur. I think that would be bad, not only for the people of South Africa but for the people of the international community," she said. Ms. Jordan said the U.N. Commission on Transnational Corporations learned that the United States has the largest number of companies doing business in South Africa.

Because of that, she said, "The United States can influence developments very strongly in South Africa, if it desires."

While acknowledging that there are two sides to the issue, she said employment of blacks by the U.S. companies hasn't done enough to change the South African government's policy of official racial discrimination.

"When a corporation is doing business there, it does try to improve the lives of its employees in the workplace — but that's not in the country," she said.

"That is not attacking the invidious system of apartheid which runs through all of the political, social and economic life of the country."

"It doesn't attack the major problem which is the system which pervades the whole country."

Corporate hands aren't clean, she said, even though some companies have desegregated the workplace.

"If you are present in the country, then you have a responsibility, you have an obligation. If you do believe that this is a rotten system and wrong, you've got an obligation to do more than just merely enough, and you can't be there surrounded by that kind of totally devastating system and then think your hands are clean," she said.

While it wouldn't be proper for multinational corporations to become involved in the internal government affairs of South Africa, Ms. Jordan said, "We would like to see the transnationals which are there bringing additional pressure to bear on the government of South Africa, and they're in a position to do it because the economy is what they can impact."

SOUND ADVICE

NEW YORK (AP) — Experts agree that the ideal voice should project warmth, joy, concern, color and authority that's lovingly assertive but not aggressive, according to Feeling Great magazine.

The human voice is observed as a mirror of how we feel and who we are, says Lillian Glass, a speech pathologist. "People who misuse their voices are judged to be less intelligent, less sexually attractive, less friendly, and less capable of doing a good job," she says.

Oilers' Glanville remains optimistic despite defeat

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers interim coach Jerry Glanville seeks no sympathy for the precarious nature of his first head coaching assignment.

"If I don't get the job next year, there won't be any tearful goodbye speeches," Glanville said Monday following a 28-21 loss to Cleveland in his first game since replacing Hugh Campbell.

"In our first meeting, I told the players not to go out and win one for the coach. I told them to win for themselves."

Oiler General Manager Ladd Herzog fired Campbell last Monday and said the permanent job would be Glanville's if the Oilers won their last two games.

Glanville remained optimistic Monday despite his 0-1 start. "I've got one of the best coach's wives in the business, a great son and a dog that still hunts," Glanville said. "I've got a car that's down to 36 more payments and I belong to a helluva church."

"So I'm better than most of the people in Houston even if I don't get the job."

He may even rate an asterisk in the Oiler record book as the coach with the shortest tenure in the team's history.

The Oilers fire head coaches at the rate of every two years and former interim coach Chuck Studley had the previous record of 10 games.

The Oilers, 5-10, close out their season Sunday at Indianapolis. Glanville missed chances in 1977 and 1984 for head coaching assignments at Detroit and was passed over at the last minute to become head coach of the United States Football League Philadelphia Stars in 1983.

Although his chance with the Oilers came under almost impossible circumstances, Glanville jumped at it and says he's not looking back.

"I don't worry about that because I'm just worried about making this a good football team," Glanville said.

Asked if Herzog had any comments to him following the game, Glanville said "He said it was a good job. But Ladd is no different from anyone. A good job can only be judged if you win the football game."

Glanville had only six days to prepare for his first game as a head coach and there were certain adjustments. Glanville, as a veteran defensive coordinator had spent most Sundays in the press box calling defensive signals.

He also was unfamiliar with the Oilers' offensive terminology and relied on offensive coordinator Joe Faragalli to make the calls.

"If I wanted Warren Moon to hit Drew Hill deep, I'd say to Joe, 'throw the ball to Drew deep' and it wasn't that hard to figure out," Glanville said. "Joe would turn and say go with a 989."

The Oilers, who have been outscored 119-24 in the first quarter this season, went into the fourth quarter trailing the Browns 28-7 but scored two touchdowns and had a chance to win in the closing minutes.

As an NFL quarterback

Pelluer now has claim to fame

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Steve Pelluer's biggest claim to National Football League fame until last Sunday was the fact that his brother, Scott, plays linebacker for the New Orleans Saints.

No more. Pelluer is firmly entrenched in Dallas Cowboys' lore now as the third-string quarterback who brought Dallas a division-clinching 28-21 victory over the New York Giants.

The 1984 fifth-round draft pick from the Washington Huskies had never taken an NFL snap until Sunday. But he drove Dallas 72 yards for the game-winning touchdown in the

Dolphins get past Patriots, 30-27 Monday

MIAMI (AP) — Miami's bend-but-don't-break defense could have snapped, but Glenn Blackwood would have none of it against New England. With Monday night's National Football League game between the Dolphins and Patriots on the line, Blackwood came up with his second interception of Tony Eason to preserve a 30-27 triumph that carried Miami a step closer to claiming its third straight AFC Eastern Division title.

"The ball was just a little overthrown," the veteran safety said of the last-minute pass intended for New England tight end Derrick Ramsey. "It wasn't really a great play, just a good play at a great time."

There haven't been many like it for the Miami defense this season. While the unit has started to jell during the team's current six-game winning streak, it's been a Dan Marino-led offense that's repeatedly bailed the club out of tough situations.

Marino did his job again Monday night, directing a fourth-quarter drive leading to Fuad Reveziz' 47-yard game-winning field goal after New England scored two touchdowns in 15 seconds to erase a 14-point deficit.

But in the end, it was inspired defense that prevented New England, 10-5, from clinching its first AFC East title since 1978 and extended the Patriots' losing streak in the Orange Bowl to 18 games.

"When we had to come through we did," said Marino, who completed 17 of 33 passes for 192 yards to become the second quarterback in NFL history to throw for more than 4,000 yards in a season twice.

Rookie fullback Ron Davenport also scored touchdowns on a pair of 1-yard runs set up by Marino's passing.

"It was a tough loss for us and a heckuva win for the Dolphins," said Patriots Coach Raymond Berry.

A victory over Buffalo in their regular-season finale would give the 11-4 Dolphins the AFC East crown for the 13th time in 16 years.

The defending conference champions have not yet clinched a playoff berth, however, although the triumph over New England virtually assures them a spot.

The Miami defense, ranked 24th when the night began, was dominating at times. New England fought back from a 17-7 halftime deficit with help from a 72-yard touchdown drive that set the stage for an exciting finish.

Mosi Tatupu's 1-yard TD plunge sliced the Dolphins' lead to 27-20 with 7:37 remaining. The Patriots tied it 15 seconds later when Cedric Jones picked up a Joe Carter fumble on the ensuing kickoff and ran 16 yards for another score.

fourth period.

"Pelluer never changed expression when I sent him in," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He's worse than I am."

Pelluer said, "I really didn't have time to think about it, which is nice."

Pelluer was needed after starting quarterback Danny White had been sidelined with a shoulder bruise and Gary Hogeboom had suffered a concussion.

With Dallas leading 21-14, Pelluer took the Cowboys on a 72-yard touchdown drive highlighted by a 28-yard pass to rookie Karl Powe on third and 15. The completion to the Giants' 24 set up Timmy Newsome's one-yard scoring run.

"This probably surpasses anything I've ever done," said Pelluer. "I had some close games in college, but this has to be one of my biggest thrills."

As a sophomore at Washington, Pelluer led the Huskies to the PAC-10 title and a 28-0 victory over Iowa in the Rose Bowl.

"I had a big game once when we (The Huskies) came back in the final 20 seconds to beat Michigan and that was a big thrill," said Pelluer.

Pelluer said "I didn't feel like all the pressure was on me. I just went into the huddle and told everybody to do their job."

"It's just an unbelievable feeling."

Dallas running back Tony Dorsett said the completion to Powe "was the biggest play of the game. That enabled us to go down and score our last touchdown."

Pelluer didn't even practice with the first team during the week. He was busy impersonating Giants' quarterback Phil Simms on the scout team.

Pelluer could see some more action in San Francisco on Sunday.

White said Sunday he doubted he would play.

"It's a painful injury and I'd like to sit out for awhile and rest," said White.

Hogeboom has a slight concussion, but was expected to recover for the 49ers.

The Cowboys will meet the Los Angeles Rams either Jan. 4 or Jan. 5.

They must beat the 49ers on Sunday and the Rams must lose to the Los Angeles Raiders on Monday for the game to be played at Texas Stadium.

It was Dallas' first division title since 1981.

Dallas celebrated not with champagne but diet drinks.

"I threw Diet Coke on everyone except for Coach Landry," said defensive back Everson Walls.

Gattis edged La Plata in the ninth grade contest, 43-41, and doubled up La Plata in the seventh grade game, 24-12.

STUDY BASKETBALL

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Can you study basketball without being a player? You could at the 1985 spring semester at the University of Kentucky. A class on the "History of University of Kentucky Basketball" was taught by Professor Humbert Nelli.

Nelli said the basketball program influences Lexington's economic health and the state's social habits. Somebody brought up the question of field trips and the professor said it would be all right but not at Kentucky home games. "I don't have any tickets," he said.

La Plata's season records are: ninth grade 1-5, eighth grade 6-1, and seventh grade 3-4.

Three players scored four points each to help lead the La Plata eighth grade team to its 18-12 win over Gattis. Jessica Dearing, Stacy White and Poppy Richardson were those with four points each.

La Plata led 10-6 at halftime and 16-8 after three quarters of play.

The La Plata ninth grade girls saw a fourth quarter rally fall short and were edged by Gattis 43-41. Gattis led 34-26 at the end of the third quarter.

Leading scorers for La Plata were Susan Bell with 13 points, Susan Gage with nine points and Wisty Mars with eight points.

In the La Plata seventh grade team's 24-12 loss, Jennifer Betzen was the leading scorer with eight points.

—East Texas singer to debut in Carnegie Hall—

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — What do Carnegie Hall and East Texas have in common? Both sites may claim the presence of Lufkin's Paul Hartfield by early 1986.

The "local boy" will reach a great height as a professional opera singer with his debut concert in New York on Jan. 22.

Moving to Lufkin as a teen-ager, Hartfield has made singing and music his life ever since his earlier days in the area.

"I've always hoped I could be proud of my musical accomplishments," Hartfield said, and a Carnegie performance is definitely something a person can call a proud accomplishment.

The first step of the ladder was at Lufkin High School. Playing catch-up with junior high starting singers, Hartfield said choral director Buddy Fezell gave him a chance to learn, which was the beginning of his climb to professionalism. "He gave me the chance to prove myself."

Both parties seemed to have gained from the experience as Hartfield remembers Fezell's remark, "I would have been at a loss musically if Paul had not been there."

Hartfield attended Angelina College for one year and recalls music classes with Eunice Vickrey. "She was the perfect medicine for me at that time. I had a bad attitude when I first encountered Eunice.

"I thought I was the best singer and didn't have to study to improve myself. But Eunice disciplined me and made me realize the importance of studying. I'll be forever grateful to her."

Ms. Vickrey said she realized Hartfield's potential from the beginning.

"He was a very zealous boy whose only exposure at the time was gospel singing in a high school group and at church. He was a bit scared but I pushed him because I knew he had a great voice."

She's not surprised with the Carnegie debut. "I expected something this big from Paul."

Hartfield received bachelor's and master's degrees from Stephen F. Austin University. He paid his way through college by working as a singing waiter at Rossini's Warehouse Italian restaurant and club in Nacogdoches. Hartfield said Dr. David Jones of SFA owned the establishment and it was not unusual for music students to gain experience there.

"I've never asked my parents for money; I wanted to be able to say I did it on my own."

Lufkin insurance agent Charlotte Newman has been a good friend of Hartfield's and was a fellow student at both AC and SFA. She recalls those school days. "Besides Eunice's coaching, Paul had a fantastic talent and a determination that made it even greater."

"He knew what he wanted — a music degree and to perform the way he is doing now. Without a doubt, at graduation he had a milestone behind him. He was on his way to a master's degree and then there was no stopping him."

For two years, Hartfield studied for his doctorate in music at Kansas City Conservatory of Music. While working in the city's opera company, he lost his desire to teach, left the conservatory and decided to make a living by singing.

Winning the American Opera auditions in Cincinnati, Ohio was the turning point in his career. Hartfield was awarded a performance in the Gustave Holst's opera "The Wandering Scholar."

"This really opened the door for my career."

Later he sang in Mozart's "Impresario" with the Greater Miami Opera Co. and made a two-month tour with the Midwest Opera Theater. While with Midwest, a meeting with conductor Lee Schaenen led to his present position with the Lyric Opera Co. of Chicago where he is working with Dame Joan Sutherland in "Anna Bolena." The company previously did Verdi's "Otello" with Placido Domingo and Sherrill Milnes.

Hartfield plans to do "Faust" in English with Tulsa Opera Co. and Mozart's "Coronation Mass" and "Don Giovanni" with the Skylight Comic Opera in Milwaukee. Basically, Hartfield said he is booked through the beginning of 1987.

"Although it never gets boring, after a while you just begin to look at it like a job."

In 1985, Hartfield won the G.B. Dealey voice award of $1,500 in Dallas, and winning the Music Clubs of America voice competition awarded him with $1,000 and a promotion, sponsorship and financing of the New York recital.

On Jan. 22, he will sing an array of arias and art songs in various languages — Russian, Italian and French included. "I'm scared and excited. I've sung in large cities and have received good reviews but New York is the musical capital of America."

"I'm a big boy now though, so I should be able to knock heads with the big boys. I don't know if I'll ever become a household name. I just want to do the best I can to be proud of my accomplishments and to make a good living."

The Hartfield family lives in Lufkin. His mother, Betty, says she is very proud of her son.

"I never expected something this spectacular but I knew he would make something of himself. He's always been determined and has known what he wants and right now he's where he wants to be."

The ocean liner, "City of Benares" was torpedoed in the Atlantic in 1940, with 250 people losing their lives.

Despite losing half his congregation, Weatherford pastor keeps pushing oil project near Dead Sea

DALLAS (AP) — Harold "Hayseed" Stephens, pastor of the Living Way Ministry near Weatherford, Texas, lost more than half of his congregation last year because of members' displeasure with his interest in drilling oil in Israel. But, according to Stephens, divine guidance played a major role in his decision to drill on the southwest bank of the Dead Sea, and he is busily trying to line up investors for a project that he said is guaranteed by the Bible to succeed. Stephens, 47, drove up to a north Dallas hotel last week in his white Cadillac, which bears on its front doors a company seal sporting oil derricks atop an open Bible. Removing his white cowboy hat, Stephens made his pitch to investors from whom he needs more than $1 million to continue drilling in Israel. "I believe because of the Scriptures we have found the place. I believe because of God's speaking we have found the place," Stephens said. His confidence comes in the face of historically little oil production by Israel, which produces less than 2,000 barrels of oil daily and imports about 185,000 barrels daily. Stephens is an evangelical Christian who believes the Bible will lead him to great reserves of crude in the Middle East. A similar believer is oilman Andy SoRelle of Houston, who uses a host of geologists and seismologists, and an abiding confidence in Deuteronomy, which says, "He (God) made him (Jacob) to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock." SoRelle and partners have spent $13 million in Israel without striking oil, The Dallas Morning News reported Monday. Others say they have dreams of exploring for holy crude in Israel, but have yet to sink a drill bit. Among them is the Ford Oil and Development Corp. Its prospectus warns investors that the company is "approaching the oil and gas business on a religious basis, which may increase the risk." "The Bible tells us there is oil there," Ford president Donald Ackerman said. Three years ago, Stephens said, he was invited to join other Christian businessmen in Israel for a meeting with then-Prime Minister Menachem Begin. He said he put his white cowboy hat on the table, and Begin spoke of the popularity in Israel of the television series "Dallas." "The Lord spoke to my spirit and said, 'Give him your hat,'" Stephens said. "I said, 'Lord, I just bought it.'" The Lord said, "Give him your hat." Stephens said he gave Begin the hat, and Begin remarked, "Maybe you'll be the one who'll come find oil for us." Stephens said he protested at the time that he had neither the money nor the desire to drill in Israel. However, about a year after that meeting, he said, "The Lord brought a man pledged, by Sunday or they will lose their drilling permit. The company's prospectus says the project's consulting geologist reports a 90 percent probability of discovering $600 million worth of oil. If so, Stephens said, he will give all his share, as he said God has instructed, to Israel. "It's just so awesome to be part of fulfilling things that have been prophesied 4,000 years ago," Stephens said. "We drilled to 5,454 feet and twisted off. We fished for 20 days and couldn't find it," Stephens said. After expenditures of more than $6 million, the project was temporarily abandoned. Now Stephens and his partners are trying to raise more money to continue the project. Stephens said they must come up with $2 million, of which about $600,000 has been

CAN A BABY BE BORN OF A VIRGIN? Zacharias stayed on at the Temple for the remaining days of his Temple duties and then returned home. Soon afterwards Elizabeth his wife became pregnant and went into seclusion for five months. "How kind the Lord is," she exclaimed, "to take away my disgrace of having no children!" The following month God sent the angel Gabriel to Nazareth, a village in Galilee, to a virgin, Mary, engaged to be married to a man named Joseph, a descendant of King David. Gabriel appeared to her and said, "Congratulations, favored lady! The Lord is with you!" Confused and disturbed, Mary tried to think what the angel could mean. "Don't be frightened, Mary," the angel told her, "for God has decided to wonderfully bless you! Very soon now, you will become pregnant and have a baby boy, and you are to name Him 'Jesus.' He shall be very great and shall be called the Son of God. And the Lord shall give Him the throne of His ancestor David. And He shall reign over Israel forever; His Kingdom shall never end!" Mary asked the angel, "But how can I have a baby? I am a virgin." The angel replied, "The Holy Spirit shall come upon you, and the power of God shall overshadow you; so the baby born to you will be utterly holy—the Son of God. Furthermore, six months ago your cousin Elizabeth—the barren one—'they called her—became pregnant in her old age! For every promise from God shall surely come true.'" Mary said, "I am the Lord's servant, and I am willing to do whatever He wants. May everything you said come true." And then the angel disappeared. Luke 1:23-38

Death row debate held on punishment for minors

WASHINGTON (AP) — It took less than an hour last September for a jury in Marion, Ark., to decide that a teen-ager should die for killing two elderly women and a 12-year-old boy. The judge, who later said he had not expected the jury to return such a harsh punishment, set an April 12 execution date. Relatives and even some jurors were in tears as seventh-grader Ronald Ward was sent off to death row. Ward, 15, joins 1,500 others waiting to die in the nation's prisons, and has become a member of a smaller, more select fraternity: One of 36 inmates facing death for crimes they committed while under the age of 18. Some experts argue that young people, more than other criminals, are amenable to rehabilitation; others, including the Reagan administration's leading expert on the subject, says the age of a convicted murderer should not excuse him from the punishment provided by law. The debate probably dates back to the first such executions in colonial America during the 1600s. It flared up anew in September with the execution of Charles Raumbaugh in Texas. Raumbaugh, 28, was put to death by poison injection for murdering a jeweler, a crime he committed at the age of 17. "He was awfully young and he had some tough breaks in life," said Tom Curtis, the former district attorney who prosecuted him. "But Chuckie is very violent, a really hardened killer and society has to protect itself." According to David Bruck, a South Carolina attorney who specializes in capital cases, the youngest person to be put to death this century was a black youth, George Junius Stinney, who was 14 on June 16, 1944, when he was electrocuted less than two months after being convicted of the murder of an 11-year-old white girl in Clarendon County, S.C. Of the approximately 13,000 legal executions in the nation's history, more than 200 involved offenders younger than 18. More than two-thirds of those youths were black, and only one-fourth were white, according to the American Bar Association. In 1983, the ABA went on record against capital punishment for minors. Of the 35 states that permit capital punishment, 14 have no age restrictions. "I'm against the death penalty for anybody. I'm especially against it for juveniles," said Bruck. "I think it's a sorry commentary that society can't think of anything to do with their children (other) than killing them." Richard Brody, director of a capital punishment project of the Legal Defense Fund of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, agrees with Bruck. Since the 1960s, the NAACP has argued against capital punishment, contending blacks are disproportionately represented on Death Row. In the Arkansas case, Ronald Ward is black; the jury which convicted him was all white. Brody, citing studies on capital punishment over the last 40 years, said that the threat of death does not deter juveniles. The death penalty, he says, is used only for "retribution and public safety." "People just want to feel safe in their home. The escalation of crime during the 1970s has made people more concerned. Since then there is a greater acceptance of violence in terms of the death penalty," he said. The ABA said sentencing a youth who has 50 to 60 years yet to live is unnecessary since the prospect of life imprisonment would provide the government with whatever leverage it needed in prosecuting young criminals. "Using capital punishment as leverage to encourage guilty pleas and confessions seems not only a questionable justification for this ultimate sanction but also unnecessary in a juvenile's case," the ABA said. However, Alfred Regnery, administrator for the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, says juveniles should be held accountable for their actions and the death penalty should not be ruled out. "If that law is there for adults, there's no reason why it's not for juveniles," Regnery said in an interview. Regnery dismisses the theory that juveniles are more malleable and therefore better candidates for rehabilitation. "Rehabilitation has been the premise of the juvenile court system throughout the 20th century, but it has failed miserably," Regnery wrote in an article for the conservative Heritage Foundation in September. Regnery also wrote that over the years, punishment for most young criminals "is limited to listening to the psychobabble of social workers and therapists." "Just because somebody can be rehabilitated doesn't mean you would oppose the death penalty — one does not exclude the other," he added.
